

Henrici Denzinger

Enchiridion symbolorum definitionum et declarationum
de rebus fidei et morum

Quod emendavit, auxit, et adiuvante Helmuto Hoping edidit
Petrus Hünemann

Editio XLIII

Ignatius Press San Francisco

Heinrich Denzinger

Compendium of Creeds, Definitions, and Declarations on Matters of Faith and Morals revised, enlarged, and, in collaboration with Helmut Hoping, edited by

Peter Hünemann
for the original bilingual edition and edited by

Robert Fastiggi
and Anne Englund Nash for the English edition

Forty-Third Edition

Ignatius Press San Francisco

Original German edition:

Kompendium der Glaubensbekenntnisse und kirchlichen Lehrentscheidungen

© 2010 by Verlag Herder GmbH, Freiburg im Breisgau

Cover design by Roxanne Mei Lum

© 2012 by Ignatius Press, San Francisco

All rights reserved

ISBN 978-0-89870-746-5

Library of Congress Control Number 99-75397

Printed in Italy ∞

CONTENTS

| Number | | Page |
|--------|--|--------|
| | Foreword (to the English Edition) | xxxv |
| | Foreword (to the Fortieth and Forty-Third German Editions) | xxxvii |
| | Introduction to the Thirty-Seventh Edition | 1 |
| | Suggestions for the Theological Use of “Denzinger” | 7 |
| | Reading the Critical Apparatus | 11 |

Part One

PROFESSIONS OF FAITH

SIMPLE PROFESSIONS

| | | |
|-----|---|----|
| 1 | Letter of the Apostles (Ethiopian Version) | 17 |
| 2 | Liturgical Papyrus Dêr-Balyzeh | 17 |
| 3–5 | Constitutions of the Egyptian Church, ca. 500 | 17 |
| 3 | a. Coptic Version: Baptismal Creed. | 18 |
| 4 | b. Ethiopian Version: Interrogatory Form | 18 |
| 5 | c. Ethiopian Version: Declaratory Form | 18 |
| 6 | Baptismal Creed (Short Version) of the Armenian Church. | 18 |

COMPOSITE PROFESSIONS

I. Tripartate Trinitarian Schema

A. WESTERN FORMULAS

THE APOSTLES' CREED

| | | |
|-------|--|----|
| 10 | Hippolytus of Rome: Traditio apostolica (Latin Version) | 19 |
| 11 | Psalter of King Aethelstan | 20 |
| 12 | Codex Laudianus | 20 |
| 13 | Ambrose, Bishop of Milan: Explanatio Symboli | 20 |
| 14 | Augustine: Sermon 213 (= Sermo Guelferbytanus 1) on the Handing on of the Creed | 21 |
| 15 | Peter Chrysologus: Sermons 57–62. | 21 |
| 16 | Tyrannius Rufinus: Expositio (or Commentarius) in symbolum | 22 |
| 17 | Florentine Missal and Sacramentary | 22 |
| 19 | Nicetas, Bishop of Remesiana: Explanation of the Creed | 22 |
| 21 | Augustine: Sermon 215 on the Recitation of the Creed | 23 |
| 22 | Pseudo-Augustine [Quodvultdeus of Carthage]: Sermons on the Creed. | 23 |
| 23 | Ildefonsus of Toledo: De cognitione baptismi | 23 |
| 25–26 | Fragments of an Older Gallican Creed | 24 |
| 27 | Old Gallican Missal: Sermon [9 of Caesarius of Arles] on the Creed. | 25 |
| 28 | Pirminius: Collection of Texts from All the Canonical Books | 25 |
| 29 | Bangor Antiphonal. | 26 |
| 30 | Roman Baptismal Ritual | 26 |

BRIEF FORMULAS OF BAPTISMAL CREEDS IN INTERROGATORY FORM

| | | |
|----|--------------------------------|----|
| 36 | Gelasian Sacramentary. | 27 |
|----|--------------------------------|----|

B. EASTERN FORMULAS

LOCAL CREEDS

| | | |
|-------|---|----|
| 40 | Eusebius, Bishop of Caesarea: Letter to His Diocese, 325 | 27 |
| 41 | Cyril, Bishop of Jerusalem: Catecheses VI–XVIII, ca. 348 | 28 |
| 42–45 | Epiphanius, Bishop of Salamis: Ancoratus , 374 | 28 |
| 42–43 | a. Shorter Form | 29 |
| 44–45 | b. Longer Form | 29 |
| 46–47 | [Pseudo?–] Athanasian Ἑρμηνεία εἰς τὸ σύμβολον | 30 |
| 48–49 | Great Creed of the Armenian Church | 31 |
| 50 | Antiochene Baptismal Creed (Fragments). | 33 |
| 51 | Theodore, Bishop of Mopsuestia: Catecheses I–X, between 381 and 392 | 34 |
| 55 | Apophthegmata of St. Macarius the Great. | 34 |

CREEDS CONTAINED IN COLLECTIONS OF EASTERN CANONS

| | | |
|-------|--|----|
| 60 | Constitutiones Apostolorum , ca. 380 | 35 |
| 61 | Testamentum Domini Nostri Jesu Christi | 36 |
| 62–63 | Constitutions of the Egyptian Church | 36 |
| 62 | a. Coptic Version: Post-Baptismal Profession of Faith | 36 |
| 63 | b. Ethiopian Version: Post-Baptismal Profession of Faith | 37 |
| 64 | Canones Hippolyti | 37 |

II. Bipartate Trinitarian-Christological Schema

| | | |
|-------|---|----|
| 71–72 | Formula Entitled Fides Damasi | 37 |
| 73–74 | The Clemens Trinitas Profession | 38 |
| 75–76 | The Pseudo-Athanasian Profession Quicumque | 39 |

Part Two

DOCUMENTS OF THE CHURCH’S MAGISTERIUM

CLEMENT I OF ROME: 92 (88?)–101 (97?)

| | | |
|---------|--|----|
| 101–102 | Letter Διὰ τὰς ἀφνιδίους to the Corinthians, ca. 96 (Church Order / Authority of the Roman See) | 43 |
|---------|--|----|

ZEPHYRINUS: 198 (199?)–217

| | | |
|-----|---|----|
| 105 | Dogmatic Declarations of Zephyrinus and Callistus (Incarnate Word) | 44 |
|-----|---|----|

CORNELIUS: March 251–June (September?) 253

| | | |
|-----|---|----|
| 108 | Letter Quantam sollicitudinem to Bishop Cyprian of Carthage, 251 (Monarchical Constitution of the Church) | 45 |
| 109 | Letter Ἴνα δὲ γνώξ to Bishop Fabius of Antioch, 251 (Ecclesiastical Hierarchy) | 45 |

STEPHEN I: May 12 (28?), 254–August 2, 257

| | | |
|-----|--|----|
| 110 | Letter (Fragment) to Cyprian of Carthage, 256 (Baptism of Heretics) | 46 |
| 111 | Letter (Fragment) to the Bishops of Asia Minor, 256 (Baptism of Heretics) | 46 |

DIONYSIUS: July 22, 259 (260?)–December 27 (26?), 268

| | | |
|---------|--|----|
| 112–115 | Letter (Fragment) to Dionysius, Bishop of Alexandria, 262 (Trinity / Incarnation of the Word) | 47 |
|---------|--|----|

MARCELLINUS: June 30, 295 (296?)–October 25 (January 15?), 304

| | | |
|---------|---|----|
| 117–121 | Synod of ELVIRA (Spain), 300–303? (Indissolubility of Marriage / Clerical Celibacy / Baptism and Confirmation) | 49 |
|---------|---|----|

SYLVESTER I: January 31, 314–December 31, 335

| | | |
|-----|--|----|
| 123 | First Synod of ARLES, begun August 1, 314 (Baptism of Heretics) | 50 |
|-----|--|----|

First Council of NICAEA (First Ecumenical): June 19–August 25, 325

| | | |
|---------|---|----|
| 125–126 | Nicene Creed, June 19, 325 | 50 |
| 127–129 | Canons (Baptism of Heretics / Castration / Viaticum for the Dying) | 51 |
| 130 | Synodal Letter Ἐπειδὴ τῆς to the Egyptians (Errors of Arius) | 53 |

JULIUS I: February 6, 337–April 12, 352

| | | |
|---------|---|----|
| 132 | Letter Ἀνέγγων τὰ γράμματα to the Antiochenes, 341 (Primacy of the Roman See) | 53 |
| 133–135 | Synod of SERDICA, ca. 343 (Order of the Churches / Primacy of the Roman See) | 54 |
| 136 | Letter of the Synod of Serdica Quod semper to Pope Julius I, ca. 343 (Primacy of the Roman See) | 56 |

LIBERIUS: May 17, 352–September 24, 366

| | | |
|---------|---|----|
| 138–143 | Acts of Pope Liberius on the Question of the Semiarians, 357 | 56 |
| 138 | a. Letter Studens paci to the Eastern Bishops, Spring 357 | 57 |
| 139–140 | b. First Profession of Faith of Sirmium (351), Subscribed to by Liberius in 357 | 57 |
| 141 | c. Letter Pro deifico to the Eastern Bishops, Spring 357 | 60 |
| 142 | d. Letter Quia scio to Ursacius, Valens, and Germinius, 357 | 61 |
| 143 | e. Letter Non doceo to Vincentius, 357 | 62 |

DAMASUS I: October 1, 366–December 11, 384

| | | |
|---------|--|----|
| 144–147 | Fragments of Letters to the Eastern Bishops, ca. 374 (Trinity / Incarnation of the Word, against the Apollinarists / Holy Spirit) | 62 |
| 148 | Letter Per filium meum to Bishop Paulinus of Antioch, 375 (Incarnation of the Word) | 64 |
| 149 | Letter Ὅτι τῆ ἀποστολικῆ καθέδρᾳ to the Eastern Bishops, ca. 378 (Condemnation of Apollinarianism) | 64 |

First Council of CONSTANTINOPLE (Second Ecumenical): May–July 30, 381

| | | |
|---------|--|----|
| 150 | The Constantinopolitan Creed | 65 |
| 151 | Canons, July 9, 381 (Condemnation of Diverse Heresies) | 66 |
| 152–180 | Synod of ROME, 382 | 67 |
| 152–177 | a. Tomus Damasi , or the Profession of Faith of Bishop Paulinus of Antioch (Trinity / Incarnation of the Word) | 67 |
| 178–180 | b. Decretum Damasi (Holy Spirit / Canon of Sacred Scripture) | 69 |

SIRICIUS: December 384 (January 12, 385?)–November 26, 399

| | | |
|---------|---|----|
| 181–185 | Letter Directa ad decessorem to Bishop Himerius of Tarragona, February 10, 385 (Primacy of the Bishop of Rome / Baptism of Heretics / Necessity of Baptism / Clerical Celibacy) . . . | 71 |
| 186 | Third Synod of CARTHAGE, August 28, 397 (Canon of Sacred Scripture) | 73 |

ANASTASIUS I: November 27, 399–402 (December 19, 401?)

| | | |
|---------|--|----|
| 187–208 | First Synod of TOLEDO, September 400 (405?) | 74 |
| 187 | a. Chapters (Consecration of Chrism) | 74 |
| 188–208 | b. Symbolum Toletanum I (400) and Its Longer Form, Called Libellus in modum symboli , of Bishop Pastor of Palencia (447) (Profession of Faith in Opposition to the Priscillianists) . . | 74 |
| 209 | Letter Dat mihi to Bishop Venerius of Milan, ca. 401 (Question of the Orthodoxy of Pope Liberius) | 77 |

INNOCENT I: December 21 (22?), 402 (401?)–March 12, 417

| | | |
|---------|---|----|
| 211 | Letter Etsi tibi to Bishop Victricius of Rouen, February 15, 404 (Baptism of Heretics) | 77 |
| 212–213 | Letter Consulenti tibi to Bishop Exsuperius of Toulouse, February 20, 405 (Reconciliation at the Point of Death / Canon of Sacred Scripture) | 77 |
| 214 | Letter Magna me gratulatio to Rufus and the Other Bishops of Macedonia, December 13, 414 (Baptismal Form) | 79 |
| 215–216 | Letter Si instituta ecclesiastica to Bishop Decentius of Gubbio, March 19, 416 (Minister of Confirmation / Anointing of the Sick) | 79 |
| 217 | Letter In requirendis to the Bishops of the Synod of Carthage, January 27, 417 (Primacy of the Roman See) | 80 |
| 218–219 | Letter Inter ceteras Ecclesiae Romanae to Silvanus and the Other Fathers of the Synod of Milevum, January 27, 417 (Primacy of the Roman See / Necessity of Baptism) | 80 |

ZOSIMUS: March 18, 417–December 26, 418

| | | |
|---------|---|----|
| 221 | Letter Quamvis Patrum to the Synod of Carthage, March 21, 418 (Doctrinal Authority of the Bishop of Rome) | 81 |
| 222–230 | Fifteenth (or Sixteenth) Synod of CARTHAGE, begun May 1, 418 (Original Sin / Grace) . | 82 |
| 231 | Epistula tractoria to the Eastern Churches, between June and August 418 (Original Sin) . . | 85 |

BONIFACE I: December 29, 418–September 4, 422

| | | |
|---------|---|----|
| 232 | Letter Retro maioribus to Bishop Rufus of Thessalonica, March 11, 422 (Primacy of the Roman See) | 85 |
| 233 | Letter Institutio to the Bishops of Thessalonica, March 11, 422 (Primacy of the Roman See) | 85 |
| 234–235 | Letter Manet beatum to Rufus and the Other Bishops of Macedonia, etc., March 11, 422 (Primacy of the Roman See) | 86 |

CELESTINE I: September 10, 422–July 27, 432

| | | |
|-----|---|----|
| 236 | Letter Cuperemus quidem to the Bishops of the Provinces of Vienne and Narbonne, July 26, 428 (Reconciliation at the Point of Death) | 87 |
|-----|---|----|

| | | |
|---------|--|----|
| 237 | Letter Apostolici verba to the Bishops of Gaul, May 431 (Authority of Augustine) | 87 |
| 238–249 | Pseudo-Celestine Chapters, or Indiculus (Grace) | 88 |

Council of EPHESUS (Third Ecumenical): June 22–September 431

| | | |
|-----------|--|----|
| 250–264 | Session 1 of the Supporters of Cyril, June 22, 431 | 93 |
| 250–251 | a. Second Letter of Cyril of Alexandria to Nestorius (Καταφλυαροῦσι μὲν) (Incarnation of the Son of God) | 93 |
| 251a–251e | b. Second Letter of Nestorius to Cyril (Τὰς μὲν καθ’ ἡμῶν ἕβρεις) (Union of the Natures in Christ) | 94 |
| 252–263 | c. Anathemas of Cyril of Alexandria Enclosed with the Letter of the Synod of Alexandria Τοῦ σωτήρος ἡμῶν to Nestorius (= Third Letter of Cyril to Nestorius) (Union of the Natures in Christ) | 97 |
| 264 | d. Judgment of the Council against Nestorius (Condemnation of Nestorianism) | 98 |
| 265–266 | Session 6 of the Supporters of Cyril, July 22, 431 (Nicene Creed) | 99 |
| 267–268 | Session 7 of the Supporters of Cyril, August 31 (?), 431: Synodal Letter (Condemnation of Pelagianism) | 99 |

XYSTUS (SIXTUS) III: July 31, 432–August 19 (18?), 440

| | | |
|---------|--|-----|
| 271–273 | Formula of the Union between Cyril of Alexandria and the Bishops of the Church of Antioch, Spring 433 (Natures in Christ) | 100 |
|---------|--|-----|

LEO I THE GREAT: September 29, 440–November 10, 461

| | | |
|---------|--|-----|
| 280–281 | Letter Ut nobis gratulationem to the Bishops of Campania, Picenum, and Tuscia, October 10, 443 (Usury) | 101 |
| 282 | Letter Quanta fraternitati to Bishop Anastasius of Thessalonica, 446 (?) (Hierarchy and Monarchy of the Church) | 101 |
| 283–286 | Letter Quam laudabiliter to Bishop Turribius of Astorga, July 21, 447 (Errors of the Priscillianists / Trinity / Nature of the Human Soul / Nature of the Devil) | 102 |
| 290–295 | Letter Lectis dilectionis tuae to Bishop Flavian of Constantinople (Tomus [I] Leonis), June 13, 449 (Incarnation of the Word) | 104 |
| 296–299 | Letter Licet per nostros to Julianus of Cos, June 13, 449 (Incarnation of the Word) | 106 |

Council of CHALCEDON (Fourth Ecumenical): October 8–early November 451

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 300–303 | Session 5, October 22, 451: The Chalcedonian Creed (Natures in Christ) | 108 |
| 304–305 | Session 7 (15): Canons (Simony / Mixed Marriage / Reception of Baptism in a Heretical Sect) | 110 |
| 306 | Synodal Letter Ἐπλήσθη χαρῶς to Pope Leo I, early November 451 (Primacy of the Roman See) | 110 |
| 308–310 | Letter Sollicitudinis quidem tuae to Bishop Theodore of Fréjus (Southern France), June 11, 452 (Sacrament of Penance) | 111 |
| 311–316 | Letter Regressus ad nos to Bishop Nicetas of Aquileia, March 21, 458 (Marriage / Baptism) | 112 |
| 317–318 | Letter Promisisse me meministi to Emperor Leo I, August 17, 458 (Natures in Christ) | 114 |
| 319–320 | Letter Frequenter quidem to Bishop Neo of Ravenna, October 24, 458 (Baptism of Heretics) | 115 |
| 321–322 | Letter Epistolae fraternitatis to Bishop Rusticus of Narbonne, 458 or 459 (Religious Vows) | 116 |

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 323 | Letter Magna indignatione to All the Bishops of Campania, etc., March 6, 459 (Secret Confession) | 116 |
| 325–329 | Statuta Ecclesiae Antiqua , mid-late fifth century (Examination of Faith for Episcopal Ordination / Ordination by Means of the Imposition of Hands) | 117 |

SIMPLICIUS: March 3, 468–March 10, 483

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 330–342 | Synod of ARLES, 473: Formula of Submission of the Priest Lucidus (Grace and Predestination). | 118 |
| 343 | Letter Quantum presbyterorum to Bishop Acacius of Constantinople, January 10, 476 (Authority of the Bishop of Rome and of Ecumenical Councils). | 120 |

FELIX II (III): March 13, 483–March 1, 492

| | | |
|-----|---|-----|
| 345 | Letter Quoniam pietas to Emperor Zenon, August 1, 484 (Liberty of the Church) | 121 |
|-----|---|-----|

GELASIUS I: March 1, 492–November 21, 496

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 347 | Letter Famuli vestrae pietatis to Emperor Anastasius I, 494 (Twofold Power on Earth). | 121 |
| 348 | Synod of ROME: Acts of the Absolution of Misenus, May 13, 495 (Power of the Church to Remit Sins). | 122 |
| 349 | Treatise Ne forte regarding the Bond of Anathema, 495 (Remission of Sins). | 123 |
| 350–354 | Decretum Gelasianum , or the Decretal Letter concerning Books Approved and Not Approved, date uncertain (Primacy of the Roman See / Authority of Ecumenical Councils / Books of Orthodox Believers and Those of Heretics) | 124 |
| 355 | Treatise Necessarium quoque against Eutyches and Nestorius, date uncertain (Natures in Christ) | 127 |

ANASTASIUS II: November 24, 496–November 17 (19?), 498

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 356 | Letter Exordium pontificatus mei to Emperor Anastasius I, late 496 (Administration of the Sacraments by Schismatics). | 127 |
| 357–359 | Letter In prolixitate epistolae to Bishop Laurence of Lignido (Illyria), 497 (Profession of Faith) | 127 |
| 360–361 | Letter Bonum atque iucundum to the Bishops of Gaul, August 23, 498 (Origin of Souls / Original Sin) | 129 |

SYMMACHUS: November 22, 498–July 19, 514

| | | |
|-----|--|-----|
| 362 | Letter Ad augustae memoriae to Emperor Anastasius I, between 506 and 512 (Twofold Power on Earth). | 130 |
|-----|--|-----|

HORMISDAS: July 20, 514–August 6, 523

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 363–365 | Libellus fidei of Pope Hormisdas, Sent to Constantinople, August 11, 515 (Profession of Faith against Christological Errors). | 131 |
| 366 | Letter Sicut ratione to the African Bishop Possessor, August 13, 520 (Authority in Questions of the Doctrine of Grace). | 132 |
| 367–369 | Letter Inter ea quae to Emperor Justinian, March 26, 521 (Trinity / Incarnation of the Word). | 132 |

FELIX III (IV): July 12, 526–September 22, 530

| | | |
|----------------|--|-----|
| 370–397 | Second Synod of ORANGE, begun July 3, 529 | 134 |
| 370 | a. Preface | 134 |
| 371–395 | b. Canons (Original Sin / Grace) | 134 |
| 396–397 | c. Conclusions Drawn up by Bishop Caesarius of Arles (Grace / Liberty / Predestination) | 139 |

BONIFACE II: September 22, 530–October 17, 532

| | | |
|----------------|--|-----|
| 398–400 | Letter Per filium nostrum to Bishop Caesarius of Arles, January 25, 531 (Confirmation of the Second Synod of Orange) | 140 |
|----------------|--|-----|

JOHN II: January 2, 533–May 8, 535

| | | |
|----------------|--|-----|
| 401–402 | Letter Olim quidem to the Senators of Constantinople, March 534 (Communication of Idioms / Summary of Christology) | 142 |
|----------------|--|-----|

VIGILIUS: November 11 (March 29), 537–June 7, 555

| | | |
|----------------|--|-----|
| 403–411 | Edict of Emperor Justinian to Patriarch Menas of Constantinople, Published at the Synod of Constantinople, 543 (Anathemas against Origen) | 143 |
| 412–415 | Letter Dum in sanctae to All the People of God, February 5, 552 (Profession of Faith of Pope Vigilius) | 145 |
| 416–420 | Constitution (I) Inter innumeras sollicitudines on the “Three Chapters” to Emperor Justinian, May 14, 553 (Errors of Nestorianism) | 146 |

Second Council of CONSTANTINOPLE (Fifth Ecumenical): May 5–June 2, 553

| | | |
|----------------|--|-----|
| 421–438 | Session 8, June 2, 553: Canons (Anathemas against the “Three Chapters”) | 147 |
|----------------|--|-----|

PELAGIUS I: April 16, 556–March 3 (4?), 561

| | | |
|----------------|--|-----|
| 441–443 | Letter Humani generis to King Childebert I, February 3, 557 (“ Fides Pelagii ”) | 153 |
| 444 | Encyclical Vas electionis to All the People of God, ca. 557 (Authority of Ecumenical Councils) | 155 |
| 445 | Letter Admonemus ut to Bishop Gaudentius of Volterra, between September 558 and February 2, 559 (Form of Baptism) | 156 |
| 446 | Letter Adeone te to Bishop [John], early 559 (Union with the Apostolic See) | 156 |
| 447 | Letter Relegentes autem to the Patrician Valerian, March or early April 559 (Pope as the Interpreter of Conciliar Decrees) | 157 |

JOHN III: July 17, 561–July 13, 574

| | | |
|----------------|--|-----|
| 451–464 | First Synod of BRAGA (Portugal), begun May 1, 561: Anathemas against the Priscillianists and Others (Trinity / Christ / Creation / Governance of the World) | 157 |
|----------------|--|-----|

PELAGIUS II: November 26, 579–February 7, 590

| | | |
|----------------|---|-----|
| 468–469 | Letter Dilectionis vestrae to the Schismatic Bishops of Istria, 585 or 586 (Union with the Roman See) | 159 |
|----------------|---|-----|

| | | |
|-----|--|-----|
| 470 | Third Synod of TOLEDO, begun May 8, 589: Profession of Faith of King Reccaredus (Trinity) | 160 |
|-----|--|-----|

GREGORY I THE GREAT: September 3, 590–March 12, 604

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 472 | Letter Consideranti mihi to the Patriarchs, February 591 (Authority of Ecumenical Councils) | 161 |
| 473 | Letter O quam bona to Bishop Virgilius of Arles, August 12, 595 (Simony) | 162 |
| 474–476 | Letter Sicut aqua to Patriarch Eulogius of Alexandria, August 600 (Knowledge of Christ) . . | 162 |
| 477 | Letter Litterarum tuarum primordia to Bishop Serenus of Marseille, October 600 (Veneration of Images of the Saints) | 164 |
| 478–479 | Letter Quia caritati nihil to the Bishops of Iberia (Georgia), ca. June 22, 601 (Baptism and Ordination of Heretics / Hypostatic Union) | 164 |
| 480 | Letter Qui sincera to Bishop Paschasius of Naples, November 602 (Tolerance) | 165 |

HONORIUS I: October 27, 625–October 12, 638

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 485–486 | Fourth Synod of TOLEDO, begun December 5, 633: Chapters (Trinitarian and Christological Creed / Apocalypse of John) | 166 |
| 487 | Letter Scripta fraternitatis to Patriarch Sergius of Constantinople, 634 (Two Wills and Operations in Christ) | 167 |
| 488 | Letter Scripta dilectissimi filii to Sergius of Constantinople, 634 (Two Operations in Christ) | 168 |
| 490–493 | Sixth Synod of TOLEDO, begun January 9, 638 (Trinity / Incarnation of the Word) | 169 |

JOHN IV: December 24, 640–October 12, 642

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 496–498 | Letter Dominus qui dixit to Emperor Constantine III (Defense of Pope Honorius), Spring 641 | 171 |
|---------|---|-----|

MARTIN I: July 5 (?), 649–June 17, 653 (September 16, 655)

| | | |
|---------|--|-----|
| 500–522 | LATERAN Synod, October 5–31, 649 | 172 |
| 500 | a. Profession of Faith (Two Wills and Operations in Christ) | 172 |
| 501–522 | b. Canons (Trinitarian-Christological Errors) | 173 |

ADEODATUS II: April 11, 672–June 17 (16?), 676

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 525–541 | Eleventh Synod of TOLEDO, begun November 7, 675: Profession of Faith (Trinity / Incarnation of the Word / Redemption / Destiny of Man after Death) | 181 |
|---------|---|-----|

AGATHO: June 27, 678–January 10, 681

| | | |
|---------|--|-----|
| 542–545 | Letter Consideranti mihi to the Emperors, March 27, 680 (Trinity / Incarnation of the Word) | 188 |
| 546–548 | Synod of ROME: Synodal Letter Omnium bonorum spes to the Emperors, March 27, 680 (Trinity / Incarnation of the Word) | 190 |

Third Council of CONSTANTINOPLE (Sixth Ecumenical): November 7, 680–September 16, 681

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 550–552 | Session 13, March 28, 681 (Condemnation of the Monothelites and of Pope Honorius I) . . . | 191 |
| 553–559 | Session 18, September 16, 681 (Definition of the Two Wills and Operations in Christ) | 192 |

LEO II: August 17, 682–July 3, 683

| | | |
|---------|--|-----|
| 561–563 | Letter Regi regum to Emperor Constantine IV, ca. August 682 (Confirmation of the Decisions of the Third Council of Constantinople) | 195 |
|---------|--|-----|

BENEDICT II: June 26, 684–May 8, 685

| | | |
|-----|--|-----|
| 564 | Fourteenth Synod of TOLEDO, November 14–20, 684 (Natures in Christ) | 196 |
|-----|--|-----|

SERGIUS I: December 15, 687–September 8, 701

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 566–567 | Fifteenth Synod of TOLEDO, begun May 11, 688: Apology of Julian (Trinity / Incarnation of the Word) | 197 |
| 568–575 | Sixteenth Synod of TOLEDO, begun May 2, 693: Profession of Faith (Trinity / Incarnation of the Word / Resurrection of the Dead / Church of Christ) | 198 |

GREGORY II: May 19, 715–February 11, 731

| | | |
|-----|--|-----|
| 580 | Letter Desiderabilem mihi to Boniface, November 22, 726 (Form and Minister of Baptism) | 202 |
| 581 | Letter Τὰ γράμματα to Emperor Leo III, between 726 and 730 (Veneration of Sacred Images) | 203 |

GREGORY III: March 18, 731–November 28 (29?), 741

| | | |
|---------|--|-----|
| 582–583 | Letter Magna nos habuit to Bishop Boniface, ca. 732 (Baptism / Sacrifice of the Mass for the Dead) | 203 |
|---------|--|-----|

ZACHARY: December 10 (3?), 741–March 22 (15?), 752

| | | |
|-----|--|-----|
| 586 | Letter Suscipientes sanctissimae fraternitatis to Archbishop Boniface of Mainz, November 5, 744 (Simony) | 204 |
| 587 | Synod of ROME, Session 3, October 25, 745 (Descent of Christ into Hell) | 204 |
| 588 | Letter Virgilius et Sedonius to Archbishop Boniface of Mainz, July 1, 746 (745?) (Intention and Form of Baptism) | 204 |
| 589 | Letter Sacris liminibus to Archbishop Boniface of Mainz, May 1, 748 (Intention and Form of Baptism) | 205 |

STEPHEN II (III): March 26, 752–April 26, 757

| | | |
|-----|---|-----|
| 592 | Responses from Quiercy (Oise), 754 (Form of Baptism) | 205 |
|-----|---|-----|

ADRIAN I: February 9, 772–December 25, 795

| | | |
|----------------|---|-----|
| 595–596 | Letter Institutio universalis to the Spanish Bishops, between 785 and 791 (Errors of the Adoptionists / Predestination) | 206 |
|----------------|---|-----|

Second Council of NICAIA (Seventh Ecumenical): September 24–October 23, 787

| | | |
|----------------|--|-----|
| 600–603 | Session 7, October 13, 787 (Definition concerning Sacred Images) | 207 |
| 604–609 | Session 8, October 23, 787 (Election into Holy Orders / Condemnations) | 208 |
| 610–611 | Letter Si tamen licet to the Bishops of Spain, between 793 and 794 (Error of Adoptionism) . . | 208 |
| 612–615 | Synod of FRANKFURT (Main), ca. June 794 | 210 |
| 612–614 | a. Synodal Letter of the Bishops of the Kingdom of the Franks to the Bishops of Spain (Refutation of Adoptionism) | 210 |
| 615 | b. Capitulary of the Synod (Condemnation of the Adoptionists) | 211 |

LEO III: December 27, 795–June 12, 816

| | | |
|----------------|--|-----|
| 616–619 | Synod of FRIULI, 796 or 797: Profession of Faith (Trinity / Christ as Son of God) | 211 |
|----------------|--|-----|

LEO IV: April 10, 847–July 17, 855

| | | |
|----------------|---|-----|
| 620 | Synod of PAVIA, 850 (Anointing of the Sick) | 212 |
| 621–624 | Synod of QUIERCY, May 853 (Freedom / Predestination) | 213 |
| 625–633 | Synod of VALENCE, January 8, 855 (Predestination) | 214 |

NICHOLAS I: April 24, 858–November 13, 867

| | | |
|----------------|--|-----|
| 635–637 | Synod of ROME, 862 (Errors of the Theopassionists / Efficacy of Baptism) | 218 |
| 638–642 | Letter Proposueramus quidem to Emperor Michael, September 28, 865 (Independence of the Church and of the Apostolic See) | 218 |
| 643–648 | Responses Ad consulta vestra to the Bulgarians, November 13, 866 (Form of Marriage / Form and Minister of Baptism / Liberty of Faith / Confession under Torture) | 221 |

ADRIAN II: December 14, 867–December 14, 872

Fourth Council of CONSTANTINOPLE (Eighth Ecumenical): October 5, 869–February 28, 870

| | | |
|----------------|---|-----|
| 650–664 | Session 10, February 28, 870: Canons (Tradition / Veneration of Sacred Images / Uniqueness of the Human Soul / Ecclesiastical Governance / Primacy of the Roman See) | 223 |
|----------------|---|-----|

JOHN VIII: December 14, 872–December 16, 882

| | | |
|------------|---|-----|
| 668 | Letter Unum est to the Princes of Sardinia, ca. September 873 (Slavery) | 228 |
|------------|---|-----|

STEPHEN V (VI): September 855–September 14, 891

| | | |
|------------|---|-----|
| 670 | Letter Consuluisti de infantibus to Archbishop Ludbert of Mainz, between 887 and 888 (Trials by Ordeal) | 229 |
|------------|---|-----|

JOHN XV: August 985–March 996

| | | |
|-----|--|-----|
| 675 | Encyclical Cum conventus esset to the Bishops and Abbots of France and Germany, February 3, 993 (Veneration of Saints) | 230 |
|-----|--|-----|

LEO IX: February 12, 1049–April 19, 1054

| | | |
|---------|--|-----|
| 680–686 | Letter Congratulamur vehementer to Peter, Patriarch of Antioch, April 13, 1053 (Profession of Faith) | 231 |
| 687–688 | Letter Ad splendidum nitentis to Peter Damian, 1054 (Sexual Deviations) | 233 |

NICHOLAS II: December 6, 1058–July 27, 1061

| | | |
|---------|--|-----|
| 690 | Synod of ROME, 1059 (Profession of Faith in the Eucharist: Berengar of Tours) | 234 |
| 691–694 | LATERAN Synod, April 1060 (Ordinations by Simoniacs) | 234 |

ALEXANDER II: October 1, 1061–April 21, 1073

| | | |
|-----|---|-----|
| 695 | Letter Super causas to Bishop Rainaldo of Como, 1063 (Trials by Ordeal) | 235 |
| 698 | Letter Licet ex to Prince Landolfo of Benevento, 1065 (Tolerance) | 236 |

GREGORY VII: April 22, 1073–May 25, 1085

| | | |
|-----|--|-----|
| 700 | Synod of ROME: Profession of Faith of Berengar of Tours, February 11, 1079 (Eucharistic Presence of Christ) | 236 |
|-----|--|-----|

URBAN II: March 12, 1088–July 29, 1099

| | | |
|-----|--|-----|
| 701 | Letter Debent subditi to Bishop Peter of Pistoia and Abbot Rusticus of Vallombrosa, 1088 (Simoniactal Ordinations) | 237 |
| 702 | Letter Gaudemus filii to Lanzo, Rudolf, and Others, February 1, 1091 (Simoniactal Ordinations) | 238 |
| 703 | Synod of BENEVENTO, begun March 18, 1091 (Sacramental Character of the Diaconate) | 238 |

PASCHAL II: August 14, 1099–January 21, 1118

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 704 | LATERAN Synod, Lent 1102 (Obedience toward the Church) | 238 |
| 705 | Synod of GUASTALLA, October 22, 1106 (Heretical and Simoniactal Ordinations) | 238 |
| 706–708 | LATERAN Synod, March 7, 1110 (Plundering of Shipwrecks / Simony) | 239 |

CALLISTUS II: February 2, 1119–December 13, 1124

First LATERAN Council (Ninth Ecumenical): March 18–27 (April 6 ?), 1123

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 710–712 | Canons, March 27, 1123 (Simony / Celibacy / Investiture) | 240 |
|---------|---|-----|

INNOCENT II: February 14, 1130–September 24, 1143

Second LATERAN Council (Tenth Ecumenical): begun April 4, 1139

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 715–718 | Canons (Simony / Usury / Sacraments) | 240 |
| 721–739 | Synod of SENS, begun June 2, 1140 (1141?) (Errors of Peter Abelard) | 242 |
| 741 | Letter Apostolicam sedem to the Bishop of Cremona, date uncertain (Baptism of Desire) | 243 |

EUGENE III: February 15, 1145–July 8, 1153

| | | |
|-----|---|-----|
| 745 | Synod of REIMS, begun March 21, 1148 (Trinity) | 244 |
|-----|---|-----|

ALEXANDER III: September 7, 1159–August 30, 1181

| | | |
|-----|--|-----|
| 747 | Synod of TOURS, begun May 19, 1163 (Usury) | 244 |
| 748 | Letter Ex litteris tuis to the Resident Sultan in Iconium, 1169 (Body of Mary) | 245 |
| 749 | Letter Cum in nostra to Archbishop William of Sens, May 28, 1170 (Error of Peter Lombard regarding the Humanity of Christ) | 245 |
| 750 | Letter Cum Christus to Archbishop William of Reims, February 18, 1177 (Error regarding the Humanity of Christ) | 246 |

Third LATERAN Council (Eleventh Ecumenical): March 5–19 (22?), 1179

| | | |
|---------|--|-----|
| 751 | Session 3, March 19 or 22: Chapter (Simony) | 246 |
| 753 | Letter In civitate tua to the Archbishop of Genoa, date uncertain (Illicit Sales Contract) | 246 |
| 754 | Letter Ex publico instrumento to the Bishop of Brescia, date uncertain (Bond of Matrimony) | 247 |
| 755–756 | Letter (Fragments) Verum post to the Archbishop of Salerno, date uncertain (Matrimonial Consent) | 247 |
| 757–758 | Letter (Fragments) to Bishop Pontius of Clermont (?), date uncertain (Form of Baptism) | 248 |

LUCIUS III: September 1, 1181–November 25, 1185

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 760–761 | Synod of VERONA, late October–early November 1184 (Errors of Lay Sects regarding the Power of the Hierarchy) | 248 |
| 762 | Letter Dilectae in Christo to Bishop Simon of Meaux, date uncertain (Castration) | 249 |

URBAN III: November 25, 1185–October 19/20, 1187

| | | |
|-----|---|-----|
| 764 | Letter Consuluit nos to a Priest of Brescia, date uncertain (Usury) | 249 |
|-----|---|-----|

INNOCENT III: January 8, 1198–July 16, 1216

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 766 | Letter Cum apud sedem to Archbishop Humbert of Arles, July 15, 1198 (Sacramental Form of Marriage) | 250 |
| 767 | Letter Sicut universitatis to Consul Acerbus of Florence, October 30, 1198 (Twofold Power on Earth) | 250 |
| 768–769 | Letter Quanto te magis to Bishop Ugo of Ferrara, May 1, 1199 (Bond of Marriage / Pauline Privilege) | 250 |

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 770–771 | Letter Cum ex iniuncto to the Inhabitants of Metz, July 12, 1199 (Interpretation of Holy Scripture / Magisterium of the Church) | 251 |
| 772–773 | Constitution Licet perfidia Iudaeorum , September 15, 1199 (Tolerance) | 253 |
| 774–775 | Letter Apostolicae Sedis primatus to the Patriarch of Constantinople, November 12, 1199 (Primacy of the Roman See) | 254 |
| 776 | Letter Ex parte tua to the Bishop of Modena, 1200 (Form of the Sacrament of Marriage) . . | 255 |
| 777–779 | Letter Gaudemus in Domino to the Bishop of Tiberius, early 1201 (Marriage of Pagans / Pauline Privilege) | 256 |
| 780–781 | Letter Maiores Ecclesiae causas to Archbishop Humbert of Arles, late 1201 (Effect of Baptism) | 257 |
| 782–784 | Letter Cum Marthae circa to Archbishop John of Lyon, November 29, 1202 (Sacramental Form of the Eucharist / Elements of the Eucharist / Water in Wine for the Mass) | 258 |
| 785 | Letter Cum venisset to Archbishop Basil of Tarnovo (Bulgaria), February 25, 1204 (Minister of Confirmation) | 260 |
| 786 | Letter Ex parte tua to Archbishop Andrew of Lund, January 12, 1206 (Dissolution of a Ratified Marriage by the Profession of Vows) | 260 |
| 787 | Letter Non ut apponeres to Archbishop Thorias of Trondheim (Norway), March 1, 1206 (Baptismal Matter) | 260 |
| 788 | Letter Debitum officii pontificalis to Bishop Berthold (or Bertrand) of Metz, August 28, 1206 (Minister of Baptism / Baptism of Desire) | 261 |
| 789 | Letter De homine qui to the Leaders of the Roman Fraternity, September 22, 1208 (Simulated Celebration of the Mass) | 261 |
| 790–797 | Letter Eius exemplo to the Archbishop of Tarragona, December 18, 1208 (Profession of Faith for the Waldensians) | 262 |
| 798 | Letter In quadam nostra to Bishop Ugo of Ferrara, March 5, 1209 (Water in Wine for the Mass) | 265 |
| 799 | Letter Licet apud to Bishop Henry of Strasbourg, January 9, 1212 (Trials by Ordeal) | 265 |

Fourth LATERAN Council (Twelfth Ecumenical): November 11–30, 1215

| | | |
|---------|--|-----|
| 800–802 | Chapter 1: The Catholic Faith (Definition against the Albigensians and the Cathars) | 265 |
| 803–808 | Chapter 2: The False Doctrine of Joachim of Fiore (Trinity) | 267 |
| 809 | Chapter 3: Concerning the Heretics [Waldensians] (Canonical Mission) | 269 |
| 810 | Chapter 4: The Insolence of the Greeks toward the Latins (Contempt for the Latin Rite) . . . | 270 |
| 811 | Chapter 5: The Dignity of the Patriarchs (Primacy of the Roman See) | 270 |
| 812–814 | Chapter 21: Obligation of Confession, the Secret Imposed on Priests, and the Reception of Communion during Easter Time | 271 |
| 815 | Chapter 22: The Sick Should Be More Concerned with the Soul than with the Body | 271 |
| 816 | Chapter 41: The Need for Good Faith in All Prescriptions | 272 |
| 817 | Chapter 51: The Prohibition of Clandestine Marriages | 272 |
| 818–819 | Chapter 62: The Relics of the Saints (Manner of Treating Relics / Abuse of Indulgences) . . | 272 |
| 820 | Chapter 63: Simony | 273 |

HONORIUS III: July 18, 1216–March 18, 1227

| | | |
|-----|--|-----|
| 822 | Letter Perniciosus valde to Archbishop Olaf of Uppsala, December 13, 1220 (Water in Wine for the Mass) | 273 |
|-----|--|-----|

GREGORY IX: March 19, 1227–August 22, 1241

| | | |
|-----|--|-----|
| 824 | Letter Ab Aegyptiis argentea to the Theologians of Paris, July 7, 1228 (Theological Terminology and Tradition) | 273 |
|-----|--|-----|

Contents

| | | |
|-----|---|-----|
| 825 | Letter Consultationi tuae to the Archbishop of Bari, November 12, 1231 (Sacramental Character through Ordination) | 275 |
| 826 | Letter Presbyter et diaconus to Bishop Olaf of Lund, December 9, 1232 (Matter and Form of Ordination) | 275 |
| 827 | Decree (in Fragments) Si condiciones , between 1227 and 1234 (Invalidity of a Conditional Marriage) | 275 |
| 828 | Letter Naviganti vel to Brother R., between 1227 and 1234 (Usury) | 275 |
| 829 | Letter Cum sicut ex to Archbishop Sigurd of Trondheim (Norway), July 8, 1241 (Matter of Baptism) | 276 |

INNOCENT IV: June 25, 1243–December 7, 1254

First Council of LYON (Thirteenth Ecumenical): June 28–July 17, 1245

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 830–839 | Letter Sub catholicae professione to the Bishop of Tusculum, the Legate of the Apostolic See among the Greeks, March 6, 1254 (Rites and Doctrine) | 276 |
|---------|---|-----|

ALEXANDER IV: December 12, 1254–May 25, 1261

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 840–844 | Constitution Romanus Pontifex de summi , October 5, 1256 (Errors of William of Saint-Amour) | 278 |
|---------|---|-----|

URBAN IV: August 29, 1261–October 2, 1264

| | | |
|---------|---|-----|
| 846–847 | Bull Transiturus de hoc mundo , August 11, 1264 (Eucharist as a Memorial of Christ and Food for the Soul) | 279 |
|---------|---|-----|

CLEMENT IV: February 5, 1265–November 29, 1268

| | | |
|-----|--|-----|
| 849 | Letter Quanto sincerius to Archbishop Maurinus of Narbonne, October 28, 1267 (Presence of Christ in the Eucharist) | 281 |
|-----|--|-----|

GREGORY X: September 1, 1271–January 10, 1276

Second Council of LYON (Fourteenth Ecumenical): May 7–July 17, 1274

| | | |
|---------|--|-----|
| 850 | Session 2, May 18, 1274: Constitution on the Most High Trinity and the Catholic Faith (Procession of the Holy Spirit) | 281 |
| 851–861 | Session 4, July 6, 1274: Letter of Emperor Michael to Pope Gregory (Profession of Faith) | 282 |

BONIFACE VIII: December 24, 1294–October 11, 1303

| | | |
|---------|--|-----|
| 866 | Bull Saepe sanctam Ecclesiam , August 1, 1296 (Errors of the “Brethren of the New Spirit”) | 284 |
| 868 | Bull Antiquorum habet , February 22, 1300 (Indulgences) | 285 |
| 870–875 | Bull Unam sanctam , November 18, 1302 (Unity and Power of the Church) | 285 |

BENEDICT XI: October 22, 1303–July 7, 1304

| | | |
|-----|--|-----|
| 880 | Constitution Inter cunctas sollicitudines , February 17, 1304 (Repetition of Confession) | 287 |
|-----|--|-----|

CLEMENT V: June 5, 1305–April 20, 1314Council of VIENNE (Fifteenth Ecumenical): October 16, 1311–May 6, 1312

| | | |
|----------------|--|-----|
| 891–908 | Session 3, May 6, 1312 | 288 |
| 891–899 | a. Constitution Ad nostrum qui (Errors of the Beghards and the Beguines) | 288 |
| 900–904 | b. Constitution Fidei catholicae (Errors Attributed to Peter John Olivi) | 289 |
| 906 | c. Constitution Ex gravi ad Nos (Usury) | 291 |
| 908 | d. Constitution Exivi de paradiso (Franciscan Vow of Poverty) | 291 |

JOHN XXII: August 7, 1316–December 4, 1334

| | | |
|----------------|--|-----|
| 910–916 | Constitution Gloriosam Ecclesiam , January 23, 1318 (Church and Sacraments, against the Fraticelli) | 292 |
| 921–924 | Constitution Vas electionis , July 24, 1321 (Errors of John de Polliaco) | 293 |
| 925–926 | Letter Nequaquam sine dolore to the Armenians, November 21, 1321 (Destiny of the Dead) | 294 |
| 930–931 | Constitution Cum inter nonnullos , November 12, 1323 (Error of the Spirituals on the Poverty of Christ) | 294 |
| 941–946 | Constitution Licet iuxta doctrinam to the Bishop of Worcester, October 23, 1327 (Errors of Marsilius of Padua) | 295 |
| 950–980 | Constitution In agro dominico , March 27, 1329 (Errors of Meister Eckhart) | 296 |
| 990–991 | Bull Ne super his , December 3, 1334 (Retraction of John XXII) | 301 |

BENEDICT XII: December 20, 1334–April 25, 1342

| | | |
|------------------|---|-----|
| 1000–1002 | Constitution Benedictus Deus , January 29, 1336 (Vision of God / Hell / General Judgment) | 302 |
| 1006–1020 | Libellus Cum dudum to the Armenians, August 1341 (Errors of the Armenians) | 303 |

CLEMENT VI: May 7, 1342–December 6, 1352

| | | |
|------------------|--|-----|
| 1025–1027 | Jubilee Bull Unigenitus Dei Filius , January 27, 1343 (Church's Treasury of Grace) | 306 |
| 1028–1049 | Retraction of Nicholas of Autrecourt, November 25, 1347 | 307 |
| 1050–1085 | Letter Super quisbusdam to Mekhithar (= Consolator), Catholicos of the Armenians, September 29, 1351 (Primacy of the Roman See / Purgatory / Matter and Minister of Confirmation / Doctrinal Differences with the Armenians) | 309 |

URBAN V: September 28, 1362–December 19, 1370

| | | |
|------------------|---|-----|
| 1087–1097 | Retraction Imposed on Denis Foulechat by the Constitution Ex supernae clementiae , December 23, 1368 | 313 |
| 1087–1094 | a. First Retraction (January 31, 1365) | 313 |
| 1095–1097 | b. Propositions Added to the Second Retraction (April 12, 1369) | 314 |

GREGORY XI: December 30, 1370–March 26/27, 1378

| | | |
|------------------|--|-----|
| 1101–1103 | Letter of the Cardinals of the Inquisition to the Archbishops of Tarragona and Saragossa, August 8, 1371 (Errors of Peter of Bonageta and John of Lato) | 315 |
| 1110–1116 | Bull Salvator humani generis to the Archbishop of Riga and His Suffragan Bishops, April 8, 1374 (Erroneous Legal Principles in the Speculum Saxonicum) | 315 |

| | | |
|------------------|--|-----|
| 1121–1139 | Errors of John Wycliffe, Condemned in the Letter Super periculosus to the Bishops of Canterbury and London, May 22, 1377. | 316 |
|------------------|--|-----|

BONIFACE IX: November 2, 1389–October 1, 1404

| | | |
|------------------|--|-----|
| 1145–1146 | Papal Bulls concerning the Privilege of the Monastery of St. Osyth in Essex to Confer Major Orders, 1400 and 1403. | 318 |
| 1145 | a. Bull Sacrae religionis , February 1, 1400. | 318 |
| 1146 | b. Bull Apostolicae Sedis , February 6, 1403 | 319 |

GREGORY XII: November 30, 1406–July 4, 1415

Council of CONSTANCE (Sixteenth Ecumenical): December 5, 1414–April 22, 1418

| | | |
|------------------|---|-----|
| 1151–1195 | Session 8, May 4, 1415: Decree Confirmed by Pope Martin V, February 22, 1418 (Errors of John Wycliffe) | 321 |
| 1198–1200 | Session 13, June 15, 1415: Decree Cum in nonnullis , Confirmed by Pope Martin V, September 1, 1425 (Communion under the Species of Bread) | 325 |
| 1201–1230 | Session 15, July 6, 1415: Decree Confirmed by Pope Martin V, February 22, 1418 (Errors of Jan Hus). | 326 |
| 1235 | Session 15, July 6, 1415: Decree Quilibet tyrannus (Tyrannicide) | 330 |

MARTIN V: November 11, 1417–February 20, 1431

| | | |
|------------------|--|-----|
| 1247–1279 | Bull Inter cunctas , February 22, 1418 (Questions Posed to the Followers of Wycliffe and Hus) | 331 |
| 1290 | Bull Gerentes ad vos to the Abbot of the Cistercian Monastery of Alzelle in Saxony, November 16, 1427 (Power of Ordaining Priests) | 334 |

EUGENE IV: March 3, 1431–February 23, 1447

Council of FLORENCE (Seventeenth Ecumenical): February 26, 1439–August (?) 1445

| | | |
|------------------|---|-----|
| 1300–1308 | Bull of Union with the Greeks Laetentur caeli , July 6, 1439 | 335 |
| 1309 | Decree Moyses vir Dei against the Council of Basel, September 4, 1439 (Dependence of a General Council on the Pope) | 337 |
| 1310–1328 | Bull of Union with the Armenians Exsultate Deo , November 22, 1439 | 338 |
| 1330–1353 | Bull of Union with the Copts and the Ethiopians Cantate Domino , February 4, 1442 | 343 |

CALLISTUS III: April 8, 1455–August 6, 1458

| | | |
|------------------|---|-----|
| 1355–1357 | Constitution Regimini universalis to the Bishop of Magdeburg, Naumburg, and Halberstadt, May 6, 1455 (Usury / Contracts). | 349 |
|------------------|---|-----|

PIUS II: August 19, 1458–August 14, 1464

| | | |
|------------------|--|-----|
| 1361–1369 | Propositions of Zaninus de Solcia Condemned in the Letter Cum sicut accepimus , November 14, 1459 | 351 |
|------------------|--|-----|

Contents

| | | |
|------|--|-----|
| 1375 | Bull Exsecrabilis , January 18, 1460 (Appeal from the Pope to a General Council) | 351 |
| 1385 | Bull Ineffabilis summi providentia Patris , August 1, 1464 (Blood of Christ) | 352 |

SIXTUS IV: August 9, 1471–August 12, 1484

| | | |
|-----------|---|-----|
| 1391–1396 | Propositions of Peter de Rivo Condemned in the Bull Ad Christi vicarii , January 3, 1474: Document of Retraction (Errors on the Truth of Future Events) | 352 |
| 1398 | Bull Salvator noster in Support of the Church of St. Peter at Saintes, August 3, 1476 (Indulgences for the Dead) | 353 |
| 1400 | Constitution Cum praeexcelsa , February 27, 1477 (Immaculate Conception of Mary) | 354 |
| 1405–1407 | Encyclical Romani Pontificis provida , November 27, 1477 (Intercession for the Dead) | 355 |
| 1411–1419 | Propositions of Peter of Osma Condemned in the Bull Licet ea quae de nostro mandato , August 9, 1479 (Sacramental Confession and Indulgences) | 356 |
| 1425–1426 | Constitution Grave nimis , September 4, 1483 (Immaculate Conception of Mary) | 357 |

INNOCENT VIII: August 29, 1484–July 25, 1492

| | | |
|------|---|-----|
| 1435 | Bull Exposcit tuae devotionis to Jean de Cirey, Abbot of the Monastery of Cîteaux, Diocese of Chalon-sur-Saône, April 9, 1489 (Extent of the Power of Ordination in a Priest) | 358 |
|------|---|-----|

JULIUS II: October 31, 1503–February 21, 1513

Fifth LATERAN Council (Eighteenth Ecumenical): May 3, 1512–March 16, 1517

LEO X: March 11, 1513–December 1, 1521

| | | |
|-----------|--|-----|
| 1440–1441 | Session 8, December 19, 1513: Bull Apostolici regiminis (Neo-Aristotelians: Pietro Pomponazzi) | 359 |
| 1442–1444 | Session 10, May 4, 1515: Bull Inter multiplices (Usury) | 360 |
| 1445 | Session 11, December 19, 1516: Bull Pastor aeternus gregem (Pope and Council) | 361 |
| 1447–1449 | Decree Cum postquam to the Papal Legate Cajetan de Vio, November 9, 1518 (Indulgences) | 362 |
| 1451–1492 | Bull Exsurge Domine , June 15, 1520 (Errors of Martin Luther) | 363 |

PAUL III: October 13, 1534–November 10, 1549

| | | |
|------|---|-----|
| 1495 | Brief Pastorale officium to the Archbishop of Toledo, May 29, 1537 (Freedom and Property) | 367 |
| 1497 | Constitution Altitudo divini consilii , June 1, 1537 (Privilegium fidei) | 368 |

Council of TRENT (Nineteenth Ecumenical): December 13, 1545–December 4, 1563

| | | |
|-----------|--|-----|
| 1500 | Session 3, February 4, 1546: Decree on the Profession of Faith | 369 |
| 1501–1508 | Session 4, April 8, 1546 | 369 |
| 1501–1505 | a. Decree on the Reception of the Sacred Books and Traditions | 369 |
| 1506–1508 | b. Decree on the Vulgate Edition of the Bible and on the Manner of Interpreting Sacred Scripture | 371 |
| 1510–1516 | Session 5, June 17, 1546: Decree on Original Sin | 371 |
| 1520–1583 | Session 6, January 13, 1547: Decree on Justification | 374 |
| 1600–1630 | Session 7, March 3, 1547: Decree on the Sacraments | 388 |

JULIUS III: February 7, 1550–March 23, 1555

| | | |
|------------------|--|-----|
| 1635–1661 | Session 13, October 11, 1551: Decree on the Sacrament of the Eucharist | 392 |
| 1667–1719 | Session 14, November 25, 1551 | 399 |
| 1667–1693 | a. Doctrine on the Sacrament of Penance | 399 |
| 1694–1700 | b. Doctrine on the Sacrament of Extreme Unction | 408 |
| 1701–1719 | c. Canons on Both Doctrines | 410 |

PIUS IV: December 25, 1559–December 9, 1565

| | | |
|------------------|--|-----|
| 1725–1734 | Session 21, July 16, 1562: Doctrine and Canons on Communion under Both Species and Communion of Young Children | 413 |
| 1738–1760 | Session 22, September 17, 1562 | 416 |
| 1738–1759 | a. Doctrine and Canons on the Sacrifice of the Mass | 416 |
| 1760 | b. Decree on the Request for the Granting of the Chalice | 421 |
| 1763–1778 | Session 23, July 15, 1563: Doctrine and Canons on the Sacrament of Orders | 421 |
| 1797–1816 | Session 24, November 11, 1563 | 425 |
| 1797–1812 | a. Doctrine and Canons on the Sacrament of Marriage | 425 |
| 1813–1816 | b. Canons on a Reform of Marriage: The Decree Tametsi | 427 |
| 1820–1835 | Session 25, December 3 and 4, 1563 | 428 |
| 1820 | a. Decree on Purgatory, December 3, 1563 | 428 |
| 1821–1825 | b. Decree on the Invocation, Veneration, and the Relics of the Saints and on Sacred Images, December 3, 1563 | 429 |
| 1830 | c. Decree on a General Reform, December 3, 1563 | 431 |
| 1835 | d. Decree on Indulgences, December 4, 1563 | 431 |
| 1847–1850 | Bull of Confirmation of the Council of Trent Benedictus Deus , January 26, 1564 | 431 |
| 1851–1861 | The “Tridentine Rules” for the Prohibition of Books, Confirmed in the Constitution Dominici gregis custodiae , March 24, 1564 | 433 |
| 1862–1870 | Bull Iniunctum nobis , November 13, 1564 (Tridentine Profession of Faith) | 435 |
| 1880 | Constitution Cum quorundam hominum , August 7, 1555 (Trinity / Incarnation of the Word) | 437 |

PIUS V: January 7, 1566–May 1, 1572

| | | |
|------------------|--|-----|
| 1901–1980 | Bull Ex omnibus afflictionibus , October 1, 1567 (Errors of Michael Baius) | 437 |
| 1981–1982 | Constitution In eam pro nostro , January 28, 1571 (Monetary Exchanges) | 447 |
| 1983 | Constitution Romani Pontificis , August 2, 1571 (Privilegium Fidei) | 448 |

GREGORY XIII: May 13, 1572–April 10, 1585

| | | |
|------------------|---|-----|
| 1985–1987 | Decree for the Greco-Russian Church, 1575 (Profession of Faith) | 448 |
| 1988 | Constitution Populis ac nationibus , January 25, 1585 (Pauline Privilege) | 449 |

CLEMENT VIII: January 30, 1592–March 3, 1605

| | | |
|------------------|---|-----|
| 1989 | Decree to All Religious Superiors, May 26, 1593 (Seal of Confession) | 450 |
| 1990–1992 | Instruction Presbyteri Graeci , August 30, 1595 (Chrism / Confirmation) | 450 |
| 1994 | Decree of the Holy Office, June 20, 1602 (Confession) | 451 |
| 1995 | Decree of the Holy Office, June 7, 1603 (Confession) | 452 |

PAUL V: May 16, 1605–January 28, 1621

| | | |
|--------------|---|-----|
| 1997 | Formula for Ending the Controversies on the Aids of Grace Sent to the General Superiors of the Order of Preachers and the Society of Jesus, September 5, 1607 | 453 |
| 1997a | Address to the Legate of King Philip III of Spain, July 26, 1611 (Liberty of Teaching in Questions concerning the Aids of Grace) | 453 |

URBAN VII: August 6, 1623–July 29, 1644

| | | |
|-------------|---|-----|
| 1998 | Decree of the Holy Office, July 23, 1639 (Baptism of Children) | 454 |
|-------------|---|-----|

INNOCENT X: September 15, 1644–January 7, 1655

| | | |
|------------------|--|-----|
| 1999 | Decree of the Holy Office, January 24, 1647 (Errors of Martin de Barcos on the Dual Head of the Church) | 455 |
| 2001–2007 | Constitution Cum occasione to All the Faithful, May 31, 1653 (Errors of Cornelius Jansen) | 455 |
| 2008 | Decree of the Holy Office, April 23, 1654 (Liberty of Teaching in Questions concerning the Aids of Grace) | 456 |

ALEXANDER VII: April 7, 1655–May 22, 1667

| | | |
|------------------|--|-----|
| 2010–2012 | Constitution Ad sanctam beati Petri sedem , October 16, 1656 (Meaning of the Words of Cornelius Jansen) | 457 |
| 2013 | Reply of the Holy Office, February 11, 1661 (Confession) | 458 |
| 2015–2017 | Brief Sollicitudo omnium ecclesiarum , December 8, 1661 (Immaculate Conception of Mary) | 458 |
| 2020 | Constitution Regiminis apostolici , February 15, 1665 (Formula of Submission for the Jansenists) | 459 |
| 2021–2065 | Forty-Five Propositions Condemned in the Decrees of the Holy Office, September 24, 1665, and March 18, 1666 (Errors of the “Laxists”) | 459 |
| 2021–2048 | a. Propositions 1–28 of the Decree of September 24, 1665 | 459 |
| 2049–2065 | b. Propositions 29–45 of the Decree of March 18, 1666 | 463 |
| 2070 | Decree of the Holy Office, May 5, 1667 (Liberty of Teaching with Regard to Attrition) | 464 |

INNOCENT XI: September 21, 1676–August 12, 1689

| | | |
|------------------|--|-----|
| 2090–2095 | Decree of the Sacred Congregation of the Council Cum ad aures , February 12, 1679 (Communion) | 465 |
| 2101–2167 | Sixty-Five Propositions Condemned in the Decree of the Holy Office, March 2, 1679 (Errors of the “Laxists”) | 466 |
| 2170–2171 | Decree of the Holy Office, November 23, 1679 (Omnipotence of God: Molinists) | 475 |
| 2175–2177 | Decree of the Holy Office, June 26, 1680 (Probabilism and Probabiliorism) | 475 |
| 2181–2192 | Draft for an Instruction of the Holy Office Drawn up by Cardinal Girolamo Casanate, ca. October 1682 (Errors of Quietism) | 476 |
| 2195 | Decree of the Holy Office, November 18, 1682 (Seal of Confession) | 478 |
| 2201–2269 | Sixty-Eight Propositions Condemned in the Decree of the Holy Office of August 28 and in the Constitution Caelestis Pastor of November 20, 1687 (Errors of Miguel de Molinos) | 479 |

ALEXANDER VIII: October 6, 1689–February 1, 1691

| | | |
|-----------|---|-----|
| 2281–2285 | Articles of the Gallican Clergy (March 19, 1682), Declared Invalid in the Constitution Inter multiplices , August 4, 1690 (Rights of the Popes) | 487 |
| 2290–2292 | Decree of the Holy Office, August 24, 1690 (Errors with Regard to the Moral Act) | 488 |
| 2301–2332 | Decree of the Holy Office, December 7, 1690 (Errors of the Jansenists) | 489 |

INNOCENT XII: July 12, 1691–September 27, 1700

| | | |
|-----------|---|-----|
| 2340 | Response of the Holy Office to Capuchin Missionaries, July 23, 1698 (Marriage as Contract and Sacrament) | 492 |
| 2351–2374 | Brief Cum alias ad apostolatus , March 12, 1699 (Errors of François de Fénelon) | 492 |

CLEMENT XI: November 23, 1700–March 19, 1721

| | | |
|-----------|---|-----|
| 2380 | Response of the Holy Office to the Bishop of Quebec, January 25, 1703 (Truths Necessary for Salvation) | 496 |
| 2381–2382 | Response of the Holy Office to the Bishop of Quebec, May 10, 1703 (Faith and Intention of the Recipient of the Sacraments) | 496 |
| 2390 | Constitution Vineam Domini Sabaoth , July 16, 1705 (Obediential Silence) | 497 |
| 2400–2502 | Constitution Unigenitus Dei Filius , September 8, 1713 (Errors of Pasquier Quesnel) | 497 |

CLEMENT XII: July 12, 1730–February 6, 1740

| | | |
|-----------|--|-----|
| 2509–2510 | Bull Apostolicae providentiae officio , October 2, 1733 (Liberty of Teaching with Regard to the Efficacy of Grace) | 506 |
| 2511–2513 | Apostolic Letter In eminenti apostolatus specula , April 28, 1738 (Freemasonry) | 507 |

BENEDICT XIV: August 17, 1740–May 3, 1758

| | | |
|-----------|---|-----|
| 2515–2520 | Declaration Matrimonia quae in locis , November 4, 1741 (Clandestine Marriages) | 508 |
| 2522–2524 | Constitution Etsi pastoralis for the Italo-Greeks, May 26, 1742 (Confirmation / Extreme Unction) | 510 |
| 2525–2540 | Constitution Nuper ad Nos , March 16, 1743 (Profession of Faith for the Orientals) | 511 |
| 2543–2544 | Brief Suprema omnium Ecclesiarum , July 7, 1745 (Confession) | 514 |
| 2546–2550 | Encyclical Vix pervenit to the Italian Bishops, November 1, 1745 (Usury) | 515 |
| 2552–2562 | Instruction Postremo mense , February 28, 1747 (Baptism of Infants) | 517 |
| 2564–2565 | Letter Dum praeterito to the Grand Inquisitor of Spain, July 31, 1748 (Liberty of Teaching in Questions concerning the Aids of Grace) | 520 |
| 2566–2570 | Letter Singulari nobis to Cardinal Henry, Duke of York, February 9, 1749 (Incorporation into the Church by Means of Baptism) | 520 |
| 2571–2575 | Constitution Detestabilem , November 10, 1752 (Errors concerning Dueling) | 521 |

CLEMENT XIII: July 6, 1758–February 2, 1769

| | | |
|-----------|--|-----|
| 2580–2585 | Response of the Holy Office to the Bishop of Cochin (India), August 1, 1759 (Pauline Privilege) | 522 |
|-----------|--|-----|

CLEMENT XIV: May 19, 1769–September 22, 1774

| | | |
|------|---|-----|
| 2588 | Instruction for a Priest Administering the Sacrament of Confirmation by Delegation from the Apostolic See, May 4, 1774. | 524 |
|------|---|-----|

PIUS VI: February 15, 1775–August 29, 1799

| | | |
|-----------|--|-----|
| 2590 | Letter Exsequendo nunc to the Bishops of Belgium, July 13, 1782 (Assistance of Parish Priests in Mixed Marriages) | 524 |
| 2592–2597 | Brief Super soliditate petrae , November 28, 1786 (Errors of Febronianism) | 525 |
| 2598 | Letter Deessemus nobis to the Bishop of Mottola, September 16, 1788 (Competence of the Church in the Area of Marriage) | 526 |
| 2600–2700 | Constitution Auctorem fidei to All the Faithful, August 28, 1794 (Errors of the Synod of Pistoia) | 527 |

PIUS VII: March 14, 1800–August 20, 1823

| | | |
|-----------|---|-----|
| 2705–2706 | Brief Etsi fraternitatis to the Archbishop of Mainz, October 8, 1803 (Attempted Dissolution of a Marriage) | 556 |
| 2710–2712 | Letter Magno et acerbo to the Archbishop of Moghila, September 3, 1816 (Translations of Sacred Scripture) | 557 |
| 2715 | Response of the Sacred Penitentiary, April 23, 1822 (Practice of Onanism within Marriage) | 558 |
| 2718 | Brief Adorabile Eucharistiae to the Patriarch of Antioch and the Greek-Melkite Bishops, May 8, 1822 (Epiclesis) | 558 |

LEO XII: September 28, 1823–February 10, 1829

| | | |
|------|--|-----|
| 2720 | Encyclical Ubi primum , May 5, 1824 (Indifferentism) | 559 |
|------|--|-----|

PIUS VIII: March 31, 1829–November 30, 1830

| | | |
|-----------|--|-----|
| 2722–2724 | Response of the Pope to the Bishop of Rennes, August 18, 1830 (Usury) | 559 |
|-----------|--|-----|

GREGORY XVI: February 2, 1831–June 1, 1846

| | | |
|-----------|---|-----|
| 2725–2727 | Response of the Sacred Penitentiary to the Archbishop of Besançon, July 5, 1831 (Authority of Alphonsus Liguori) | 560 |
| 2730–2732 | Encyclical Mirari vos arbitramur , August 15, 1832 (Indifferentism and Rationalism: F. de Lamennais) | 561 |
| 2738–2740 | Brief Dum acerbissimas , September 26, 1835 (Errors of Georg Hermes) | 562 |
| 2743 | Response of the Holy Office to the Bishop of Nice, January 17, 1838 (Usury) | 563 |
| 2745–2746 | Constitution In supremo apostolatus fastigio , December 3, 1839 (Slavery) | 563 |
| 2750 | Response of the Sacred Congregation of Indulgences, July 28, 1840 (Indulgence for a Privileged Altar) | 564 |
| 2751–2756 | Theses Subscribed to by Louis-Eugène Bautain by Order of His Bishop, November 18, 1835, and September 8, 1840 (Theses against Fideism) | 565 |
| 2758–2760 | Response of the Sacred Penitentiary, June 8, 1842 (Practice of Onanism within Marriage) . . | 566 |
| 2762–2763 | Response of the Holy Office, September 14, 1842 (Matter of Extreme Unction) | 567 |

| | | |
|-----------|--|-----|
| 2765–2769 | Theses Subscribed to by Louis-Eugène Bautain by Order of the Sacred Congregation of Bishops and Regulars, April 26, 1844 | 567 |
| 2771–2772 | Encyclical Inter praecipuas machinationes , May 8, 1844 (Translations of Sacred Scripture) | 568 |

PIUS IX: June 16, 1846–February 7, 1878

| | | |
|-----------|--|-----|
| 2775–2786 | Encyclical Qui pluribus , November 9, 1846 (Rationalism / Indifferentism / Infallibility of the Pope) | 569 |
| 2791–2793 | Decree of the Holy Office, May 21, 1851 (Practice of Onanism within Marriage) | 572 |
| 2795 | Response of the Holy Office, April 6 (19), 1853 (Practice of Onanism within Marriage) . . . | 573 |
| 2800–2804 | Bull Ineffabilis Deus , December 8, 1854 (Definition of the Immaculate Conception of Mary) | 573 |
| 2811–2814 | Decree of the Sacred Congregation of the Index, June 11 (15), 1855 (Theses against the Traditionalism of Augustin Bonnetty) | 575 |
| 2817–2820 | Instruction of the Holy Office to the Apostolic Vicar of Siam, July 4, 1855 (Pauline Privilege) | 575 |
| 2823–2825 | Encyclical of the Holy Office to the Bishops, August 4, 1856 (Misuse of Magnetism) | 576 |
| 2828–2831 | Brief Eximiam tuam to the Archbishop of Cologne, June 15, 1857 (Errors of Anton Günther) | 577 |
| 2833 | Apostolic Letter Dolore haud mediocri to the Bishop of Breslau, April 30, 1860 (Rational Soul as the Vital Principle of Man) | 578 |
| 2835–2839 | Instruction of the Holy Office to the Apostolic Vicar of Zhejiang, August 1 (3), 1860 (Disposition of the Subject of Baptism) | 579 |
| 2841–2847 | Decree of the Holy Office, September 18, 1861 (Errors of the Ontologists) | 580 |
| 2850–2861 | Letter Gravissimas inter to the Archbishop of Munich-Freising, December 11, 1862 (Errors of Jakob Frohschammer) | 581 |
| 2865–2867 | Encyclical Quanto conficiamur moerore to the Italian Bishops, August 10, 1863 (Indifferentism) | 584 |
| 2875–2880 | Letter Tuas libenter to the Archbishop of Munich-Freising, December 21, 1863 (Theology and the Magisterium: Johannes Joseph Ignaz von Döllinger) | 585 |
| 2885–2888 | Letter of the Holy Office to the Bishops of England, September 16, 1864 (Unicity of the Church / Branch Theory) | 587 |
| 2890–2896 | Encyclical Quanta cura , December 8, 1864 (Naturalism and Socialism / Independence of Ecclesiastical from Civil Authority) | 588 |
| 2901–2980 | Syllabus of Pius IX: A Collection of Errors Proscribed in Diverse Documents of Pius IX, Published December 8, 1864 (Pantheism / Naturalism / Rationalism / Indifferentism / Socialism / Communism / Liberalism) | 590 |
| 2990–2993 | Instruction of the Sacred Penitentiary, January 15, 1866 (Civil Marriage and the Sacrament of Marriage) | 598 |
| 2997–2999 | Apostolic Letter Iam vos omnes to All Protestants and Other Non-Catholics, September 13, 1868 (Necessity of the Church for Salvation) | 599 |

First VATICAN Council (Twentieth Ecumenical): December 8, 1869–October 20, 1870

| | | |
|-----------|--|-----|
| 3000–3045 | Session 3, April 24, 1870: Dogmatic Constitution Dei Filius on the Catholic Faith (God, Creator of All Things / Revelation / Faith / Faith and Reason) | 600 |
| 3050–3075 | Session 4, July 18, 1870: First Dogmatic Constitution Pastor aeternus on the Church of Christ (Institution of Apostolic Primacy / Continuation of Primacy in the Bishops of Rome / Nature and Significance of the Primacy of the Bishop of Rome / Infallible Teaching Authority of the Bishop of Rome) | 609 |

| | | |
|-----------|---|-----|
| 3100–3102 | Response of the Holy Office to the Apostolic Vicar of Central Oceania, December 18, 1872 (The Baptism of Methodists) | 616 |
| 3105–3109 | Instruction of the Sacred Congregation for the Propagation of the Faith, 1873 (Interest on a Loan) | 617 |
| 3112–3117 | Responses to the Circular Letter of Chancellor Bismarck on the Interpretation of the Constitution Pastor aeternus of the First Vatican Council, January–March 1875 (Jurisdiction of the Pope and the Bishops) | 618 |
| 3112–3116 | a. Collective Declaration of the German Bishops, January–February 1875 | 618 |
| 3117 | b. Apostolic Letter Mirabilis illa constantia to the Bishops of Germany, March 4, 1875 | 620 |
| 3121–3124 | Decree of the Holy Office, July 7, 1875 (Doctrine of Transubstantiation) | 621 |
| 3126 | Instruction of the Holy Office to the Bishop of Nesqually, January 24, 1877 (Faith and Intention of the Minister of the Sacraments) | 622 |

LEO XIII: February 20, 1878–July 20, 1903

| | | |
|-----------|--|-----|
| 3128 | Decree of the Holy Office, November 20, 1878 (Administration of Absolute and Conditional Baptism) | 623 |
| 3130–3133 | Encyclical Quod apostolici muneris , December 28, 1878 (Socialism) | 623 |
| 3135–3140 | Encyclical Aeterni Patris , August 4, 1879 (Thomism) | 624 |
| 3142–3146 | Encyclical Arcanum divinae sapientiae , February 10, 1880 (Christian Marriage) | 626 |
| 3148 | Response of the Sacred Penitentiary, June 16, 1880 (Observance of Non-fertile Times) | 629 |
| 3150–3152 | Encyclical Diuturnum illud , June 29, 1881 (Political Authority) | 629 |
| 3154–3155 | Decree of the Sacred Congregation of the Index, December 5 (30), 1881 (Works Whose Proceedings Have Been Dismissed: Antonio Rosmini-Serbatì) | 630 |
| 3156–3158 | Encyclical Humanum genus , April 20, 1884 (Freemasonry) | 631 |
| 3159–3160 | Instruction of the Holy Office Ad gravissima avertenda , May 10, 1884 (Freemasonry) | 631 |
| 3162 | Response of the Holy Office to the Bishop of Poitiers, May 31 (28), 1884 (Dueling) | 632 |
| 3165–3179 | Encyclical Immortale Dei , November 1, 1885 (Relationship of Church and State) | 632 |
| 3185–3187 | Response of the Sacred Penitentiary, March 10, 1886 (The Practice of Onanism within Marriage) | 636 |
| 3188 | Decree of the Holy Office, May 19, 1886 (Cremation) | 637 |
| 3190–3193 | Decree of the Holy Office, May 27, 1886 (Civil Divorce) | 637 |
| 3195–3196 | Decree of the Holy Office, December 15, 1886 (Cremation) | 638 |
| 3198 | Response of the Holy Office to the Bishop of Carcassone, May 8, 1887 (Wine for Mass) | 638 |
| 3201–3241 | Decree of the Holy Office Post obitum , December 14, 1887 (Errors of Antonio Rosmini-Serbatì) | 639 |
| 3245–3255 | Encyclical Libertas praestantissimum , June 20, 1888 (Human liberty) | 645 |
| 3258 | Response of the Holy Office to the Archbishop of Cambrai, August 14 (19), 1889 (Craniotomy) | 648 |
| 3260–3263 | Encyclical Quamquam pluries , August 15, 1889 (Role of St. Joseph in the Plan of Salvation) | 648 |
| 3264 | Response of the Holy Office to the Bishop of Marseille, July 30, 1890 (Wine for Mass) | 649 |
| 3265–3271 | Encyclical Rerum novarum , May 15, 1891 (Social Teaching of the Church) | 650 |
| 3272–3273 | Letter Pastoralis officii to the Bishops of Germany and Austria, September 12, 1891 (Dueling) | 652 |
| 3274–3275 | Encyclical Octobri mense , September 22, 1891 (Mary as Mother and Mediatrix of Grace) | 653 |
| 3276–3279 | Response of the Holy Office to the Archbishop of Freiburg, July 27, 1892 (Cremation) | 654 |
| 3280–3294 | Encyclical Providentissimus Deus , November 18, 1893 (Authorities in the Interpretation of Sacred Scripture / Inspiration / Inerrancy of Sacred Scripture) | 655 |
| 3296 | Response of the Holy Office to the Bishop of Krishnaghur (India), July 18, 1894 (Baptism of Children) | 659 |
| 3298 | Response of the Holy Office to the Archbishop of Cambrai, July 24, 1895 (Abortion) | 660 |

| | | |
|------------------|---|-----|
| 3300–3310 | Encyclical Satis cognitum , June 29, 1896 (Unity of the Church as the Mystical Body of Christ) | 660 |
| 3312 | Response of the Holy Office to a Bishop in Brazil, August 5, 1896 (Wine for Mass) | 664 |
| 3313 | Response of the Holy Office to the Archbishop of Tarragona, August 5, 1896 (Wine for Mass) | 665 |
| 3315–3319 | Apostolic Letter Apostolicae curae et caritatis , September 13, 1896 (Anglican Ordinations) | 665 |
| 3320–3321 | Encyclical Fidentem piumque , September 20, 1896 (Mary as Mediatrix of Grace) | 668 |
| 3323 | Response of the Holy Office, March 17, 1897 (Artificial Insemination) | 669 |
| 3325–3331 | Encyclical Divinum illud munus , May 9, 1897 (Trinity) | 669 |
| 3333–3335 | Response of the Holy Office, March 30, 1898 (Prerequisites for Baptism) | 673 |
| 3336–3338 | Response of the Holy Office to the Bishop of Sinaloa (Mexico), May 4, 1898 (Extraction of a Fetus) | 674 |
| 3339 | Encyclical Caritatis studium to the Bishops of Scotland, July 25, 1898 (Identity of the Sacrifice of the Cross with That of the Mass) | 674 |
| 3340–3346 | Letter Testem benevolentiae to the Archbishop of Baltimore, January 22, 1899 (I. T. Hecker / W. Elliot) | 675 |
| 3350–3353 | Encyclical Annum sacrum , May 25, 1899 (Sacred Heart of Jesus) | 677 |
| 3356 | Response of the Holy Office to the Archbishop of Utrecht, August 21, 1901 (Matter of Baptism) | 679 |
| 3358 | Response of the Holy Office to the Theological Faculty of the University of Montreal, March 5, 1902 (Extraction of a Fetus) | 679 |
| 3360–3364 | Encyclical Mirae caritatis , May 28, 1902 (Eucharist) | 680 |

PIUS X: August 4, 1903–August 20, 1914

| | | |
|------------------|---|-----|
| 3370 | Encyclical Ad diem illum , February 2, 1904 (Mary as the Mediatrix of Grace) | 682 |
| 3372 | Response of the Biblical Commission, February 13, 1905 (“ Implicit citations ” in Sacred Scripture) | 683 |
| 3373 | Response of the Biblical Commission, June 23, 1905 (Inspiration and Historical Truth of Sacred Scripture) | 683 |
| 3375–3383 | Decree Sacra Tridentina Synodus , December 16 (20), 1905 (Daily Communion) | 683 |
| 3385–3388 | Decree Provida sapientique cura , January 18, 1906 (Clandestine Marriage) | 685 |
| 3391 | Decree of the Holy Office, April 25, 1906 (Form of Extreme Unction) | 686 |
| 3394–3397 | Response of the Biblical Commission, June 27, 1906 (Authorship of the Pentateuch) | 687 |
| 3398–3400 | Response of the Biblical Commission, May 29, 1907 (The Gospel of John) | 688 |
| 3401–3466 | Decree of the Holy Office Lamentabili , July 3, 1907 (Errors of Modernism: Exegesis / Magisterium / Revelation and Dogma / Sacraments / Constitution of the Church / Immutability of Religious Truths) | 689 |
| 3468–3474 | Decree of the Sacred Congregation of the Council Ne temere , August 2, 1907 (Betrothal and Marriage) | 695 |
| 3475–3500 | Encyclical Pascendi dominici gregis , September 8, 1907 (Errors of Modernism: Philosophical Principles / Concept of Faith / Theological Dogmas / Principles of Historical and Critical Investigation / Apologetic Method) | 695 |
| 3503 | Motu Proprio Praestantia Scripturae , November 18, 1907 (Authority of the Biblical Commission) | 704 |
| 3505–3509 | Response of the Biblical Commission, June 29, 1908 (Book of Isaiah) | 704 |
| 3512–3519 | Response of the Biblical Commission, June 30, 1909 (First Chapters of Genesis) | 705 |
| 3521–3528 | Response of the Biblical Commission, May 1, 1910 (The Psalms) | 707 |
| 3530–3536 | Decree of the Sacred Congregation of the Sacraments Quam singulari , August 8, 1910 (Eucharistic Communion and Extreme Unction of Children) | 709 |
| 3537–3550 | Motu Proprio Sacrorum antistitum , September 1, 1910 (Oath against Modernism) | 710 |
| 3553–3556 | Letter Ex quo, nono to the Apostolic Legates in Byzantium, Greece, Egypt, Mesopotamia, etc., December 26, 1910 (Errors of the Orientals) | 712 |

Contents

| | | |
|-----------|--|-----|
| 3561–3567 | Response of the Biblical Commission, June 19, 1911 (Gospel of Matthew) | 713 |
| 3568–3578 | Response of the Biblical Commission, June 26, 1912 (Gospels of Mark and Luke / Synoptic Question) | 714 |
| 3581–3590 | Response of the Biblical Commission, June 12, 1913 (Acts of the Apostles / Pastoral Letters) | 717 |
| 3591–3593 | Response of the Biblical Commission, June 24, 1914 (Letter to the Hebrews) | 719 |
| 3601–3624 | Decree of the Sacred Congregation of Studies, July 27, 1914 (Thomism) | 720 |

BENEDICT XV: September 3, 1914–January 22, 1922

| | | |
|-----------|--|-----|
| 3625–3626 | Encyclical Ad beatissimi Apostolorum , November 1, 1914 (Liberty in the Teaching of Theology / Progress in Theology) | 724 |
| 3628–3630 | Response of the Biblical Commission, June 18, 1915 (Parousia in the Pauline Letters) . . . | 725 |
| 3632 | Decree of the Holy Office, March 29 (April 8), 1916 (Images of Mary) | 725 |
| 3634 | Response of the Sacred Penitentiary, April 3, 1916 (Practice of Onanism within Marriage) | 726 |
| 3635–3636 | Response of the Holy Office to the Ordinaries of Various Dioceses, May 17, 1916 (Sacraments of the Dying to Schismatics) | 726 |
| 3638–3640 | Response of the Sacred Penitentiary, June 3, 1916 (Practice of Onanism within Marriage) | 727 |
| 3642 | Response of the Holy Office, April 24, 1917 (Spiritism) | 727 |
| 3645–3647 | Decree of the Holy Office, June 5, 1918 (Knowledge of the Soul of Christ) | 728 |
| 3648 | Response of the Holy Office, July 16 (18), 1919 (Theosophy) | 728 |
| 3650–3654 | Encyclical Spiritus Paraclitus , September 15, 1920 (Inspiration and Inerrancy of Sacred Scripture) | 728 |

PIUS XI: February 6, 1922–February 10, 1939

| | | |
|-----------|---|-----|
| 3660–3662 | Decree of the Holy Office, November 22, 1922 (Partial Penetration) | 730 |
| 3665–3667 | Encyclical Studiorum ducem , June 29, 1923 (Thomism) | 731 |
| 3670 | Bull Infinita Dei misericordia , May 29, 1924 (Holy Year / Indulgence) | 732 |
| 3672 | Decree of the Sacred Congregation of the Council, June 13, 1925 (“ Bestimmungs-Mensuren ” / Duels of Inauguration) | 732 |
| 3675–3679 | Encyclical Quas primas , December 11, 1925 (Feast of Christ the King) | 732 |
| 3680 | Instruction of the Holy Office, June 19, 1926 (Cremation) | 735 |
| 3681–3682 | Declaration of the Holy Office, June 2, 1927 (Johannine Comma) | 735 |
| 3683 | Encyclical Mortalium animos , January 6, 1928 (Magisterium of the Church) | 736 |
| 3684 | Decree of the Holy Office, July 24 (August 2), 1929 (Masturbation) | 737 |
| 3685–3698 | Encyclical Divini illius magistri , December 31, 1929 (The Right and Duty of Education: Church, Family, Civil Society) | 737 |
| 3700–3724 | Encyclical Casti connubii , December 31, 1930 (Divine Institution and Nature of Marriage / Abortion / Sterilization) | 742 |
| 3725–3744 | Encyclical Quadragesimo anno , May 15, 1931 (Social Doctrine of the Church) | 752 |
| 3748 | Response of the Sacred Penitentiary, July 20, 1932 (Use of Non-fertile Times) | 759 |
| 3750–3751 | Response of the Biblical Commission, July 1, 1933 (Interpretation of Psalm 16:10f.; Matthew 16:26; Luke 9:25) | 760 |
| 3755–3758 | Encyclical Ad catholici sacerdotii , December 20, 1935 (Effects of Priestly Ordination / Liturgical Prayers) | 760 |
| 3760–3765 | Response of the Holy Office, August 11, 1936 (Sterilization) | 761 |
| 3771–3774 | Encyclical Divini Redemptoris , March 19, 1937 (Communism) | 762 |
| 3775–3776 | Encyclical Firmissimam constantiam to the Bishops of the United States of Mexico, March 28, 1937 (Resistance against the Abuses of Civil Power) | 764 |

PIUS XII: March 2, 1939–October 9, 1958

| | | |
|------------------|--|-----|
| 3780–3786 | Encyclical Summi pontificatus , October 20, 1939 (Natural Law / Rights of Nations / Rights of People) | 765 |
| 3788 | Decree of the Holy Office, February 21 (24), 1940 (Sterilization) | 767 |
| 3790 | Decree of the Holy Office, November 27 (December 2), 1940 (Euthanasia) | 767 |
| 3792–3796 | Letter of the Biblical Commission to the Italian Bishops, August 20, 1941 (Literal and Spiritual Sense of Scripture / Authority of the Vulgate) | 767 |
| 3800–3822 | Encyclical Mystici corporis , June 29, 1943 (Church as Mystical Body of Christ) | 770 |
| 3825–3831 | Encyclical Divino afflante Spiritu , September 30, 1943 (Authenticity of the Vulgate / Literal and Spiritual Sense of Scripture / Literary Genres / Freedom of Scientific Biblical Research) | 779 |
| 3832–3837 | Instruction of the Sacred Penitentiary, March 25, 1944 (General Absolution) | 783 |
| 3838 | Decree of the Holy Office, March 29 (April 1), 1944 (Ends of Marriage) | 784 |
| 3839 | Decree of the Holy Office, July 19 (21), 1944 (Millenarianism / Chiliasm) | 784 |
| 3840–3855 | Encyclical Mediator Dei , November 20, 1947 (Nature of the Liturgy) | 785 |
| 3857–3861 | Apostolic Constitution Sacramentum ordinis , November 30, 1947 (Matter and Form of the Sacrament of Orders) | 791 |
| 3862–3864 | Letter of the Secretary of the Biblical Commission to Cardinal Suhard, Archbishop of Paris, January 16, 1948 (Critical Questions on the Pentateuch) | 793 |
| 3865 | Decree of the Holy Office, June 28 (July 1), 1949 (Communism) | 795 |
| 3866–3873 | Letter of the Holy Office to the Archbishop of Boston, August 8, 1949 (Necessity of the Church for Salvation) | 795 |
| 3873a | Discourse to the Fourth International Congress of Catholic Physicians, September 29, 1949 (Artificial Insemination) | 798 |
| 3874 | Response of the Holy Office, December 28, 1949 (Intention of the Minister of the Sacraments) | 799 |
| 3875–3899 | Encyclical Humani generis , August 12, 1950 (Critique of Modern Theological Tendencies) | 799 |
| 3900–3904 | Apostolic Constitution Munificentissimus Deus , November 1, 1950 (Dogmatic Definition of the Assumption of Mary into Heaven) | 808 |
| 3905 | Encyclical Sempiternus Rex , September 8, 1951 (Hypostatic Union) | 809 |
| 3907 | Monitum of the Holy Office, June 30, 1952 (Sexual Intercourse while Avoiding Orgasm) | 810 |
| 3908–3910 | Encyclical Fulgens corona , September 8, 1953 (Redemption of Mary) | 810 |
| 3911–3912 | Encyclical Sacra virginitas , March 25, 1954 (Marriage and Virginity) | 811 |
| 3913–3917 | Encyclical Ad caeli Reginam , October 11, 1954 (Royal Dignity of Mary) | 812 |
| 3917a | Decree of the Holy Office, April 2, 1955 (Contraception) | 814 |
| 3918–3921 | Instruction of the Holy Office, February 2, 1956 (Situation Ethics) | 814 |
| 3922–3926 | Encyclical Haurietis aquas , May 15, 1956 (Sacred Heart of Jesus / Motherhood of Mary) | 816 |
| 3928 | Decree of the Holy Office, March 8 (May 23), 1957 (Concelebration) | 818 |

JOHN XXIII: October 28, 1958–June 3, 1963

| | | |
|------------------|---|-----|
| 3930 | Response of the Holy Office, March 25 (April 4), 1959 (Communism) | 818 |
| 3935–3953 | Encyclical Mater et Magistra , May 15, 1961 (Social Doctrine of the Church) | 818 |
| 3955–3997 | Encyclical Pacem in terris , April 11, 1963 (Human Rights) | 829 |

Second VATICAN Council (Twenty-First Ecumenical): October 11, 1962–December 8, 1965

PAUL VI: June 21, 1963–August 6, 1978

| | | |
|------------------|--|-----|
| 4001–4048 | Public Session 3, December 4, 1963: Constitution on the Sacred Liturgy Sacrosanctum concilium | 846 |
|------------------|--|-----|

| | | |
|---|--|------|
| 4101–4179 | Public Session 5, November 21, 1964: Dogmatic Constitution on the Church Lumen gentium | 860 |
| 4180–4183 | Public Session 5, November 21, 1964: Decree on the Eastern Catholic Churches Orientalium Ecclesiarum | 909 |
| 4185–4194 | Public Session 5, November 21, 1964: Decree on Ecumenism Unitatis redintegratio | 910 |
| 4195–4199 | Public Session 7, October 28, 1965: Declaration on the Relation of the Church to Non-Christian Religions Nostra aetate | 914 |
| 4201–4235 | Public Session 8, November 18, 1965: Dogmatic Constitution on Divine Revelation Dei Verbum | 918 |
| 4240–4245 | Public Session 9, December 7, 1965: Declaration on Religious Freedom Dignitatis humanae | 930 |
| 4301–4345 | Public Session 9, December 7, 1965: Pastoral Constitution on the Church in the Modern World Gaudium et spes | 932 |
| 4350–4359 | 123rd General Congregation, November 16, 1964, “Notifications” and “Preliminary Note of Explanation” | 968 |
| 4400 | Instruction of the Holy Office Piam et constantem , July 5, 1963 (Cremation) | 971 |
| 4402–4407 | Instruction of the Pontifical Biblical Commission Sancta mater ecclesia , April 21, 1964 (Historical Truth of the Gospels) | 972 |
| 4410–4413 | Encyclical Mysterium fidei , September 3, 1965 (Doctrine of Transubstantiation) | 976 |
| 4420–4425 | Discourse Au moment de prendre to the General Assembly of the United Nations in New York, October 4, 1965 (World Peace) | 977 |
| 4430–4435 | Joint Declaration Pénétrés de reconnaissance of Pope Paul VI and Patriarch Athenagoras I of Constantinople, December 7, 1965 (Annulment of the Mutual Excommunication of the Eastern and Western Churches) | 978 |
| 4440–4469 | Encyclical Populorum progressio , May 26, 1967 (Development and Peace) | 979 |
| 4470–4479 | Encyclical Humanae vitae , July 25, 1968 (Sexuality / Marriage / Family / Birth Control) | 988 |
| 4480–4496 | Documents of the Second General Assembly of the Latin American Bishops at Medellín (Colombia) Presencia de la Iglesia , September 6, 1968 (Justice / Peace / Youth / Poverty of the Church) | 991 |
| 4500–4512 | Apostolic Letter Octogesima adveniens to Cardinal Maurice Roy, May 14, 1971 (Social Doctrine of the Church) | 996 |
| 4520–4522 | Declaration of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith Mysterium filii Dei , February 21, 1972 (Recent Christological and Trinitarian Errors) | 1000 |
| 4530–4541 | Declaration of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith Mysterium ecclesiae , June 24, 1973 (Infallibility) | 1001 |
| 4550–4552 | Declaration of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith Quaestio de abortu procurato , November 18, 1974 | 1006 |
| 4560–4561 | Response of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith to the North American Bishops’ Conference Haec Sacra congregatio , March 13, 1975 (Sterilization) | 1007 |
| 4570–4579 | Apostolic Exhortation Evangelii nuntiandi , December 8, 1975 (Evangelization) | 1008 |
| 4580–4584 | Declaration of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith on Certain Questions concerning Sexual Ethics Persona humana , December 29, 1975 | 1011 |
| 4590–4606 | Declaration of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith Inter insigniores on the Question of the Admission of Women to Priestly Ministry, October 15, 1976 | 1014 |
| JOHN PAUL II: October 16, 1978–April 2, 2005 | | |
| 4610–4635 | Document of the Third General Assembly of the Latin American Bishops in Puebla (Mexico) La evangelización , February 13, 1979 (Evangelization / Option for the Poor) | 1019 |
| 4640–4645 | Encyclical Redemptor hominis , March 4, 1979 (Redemption of Man) | 1025 |
| 4650–4659 | Letter of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith to All Bishops Recentiores episcoporum synodi , May 17, 1979 (Questions on Eschatology) | 1027 |

| | | |
|-----------|--|------|
| 4660–4666 | Declaration of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith Iura et bona , May 5, 1980 (Euthanasia) | 1028 |
| 4670–4674 | Instruction of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith Pastoralis actio , October 20, 1980 (Baptism of Infants) | 1030 |
| 4680–4685 | Encyclical Dives in misericordia , November 30, 1980 (Mercy of God) | 1031 |
| 4690–4699 | Encyclical Laborem exercens , September 14, 1981 (Social Doctrine of the Church) | 1033 |
| 4700–4716 | Apostolic Exhortation Familiaris consortio , November 22, 1981 (Marriage and Family) | 1036 |
| 4720–4723 | Instruction of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith Sacerdotium ministeriale , August 6, 1983 (Sacrament of Holy Orders and the Eucharist) | 1040 |
| 4730–4741 | Instruction of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith Libertatis nuntius , August 6, 1984 (Liberation Theology) | 1042 |
| 4750–4776 | Instruction of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith Libertatis conscientia , March 22, 1986 (Freedom and Liberation) | 1045 |
| 4780–4781 | Encyclical Dominum et vivificantem , May 18, 1986 (Holy Spirit) | 1051 |
| 4790–4807 | Instruction of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith Donum vitae on Respect for Human Life in Its Origins and the Dignity of Procreation, February 22, 1987 (Artificial Insemination / In Vitro Fertilization / Embryo Transfer / Surrogate Motherhood) | 1052 |
| 4810–4819 | Encyclical Sollicitudo rei socialis , December 30, 1987 (Social Doctrine of the Church) | 1061 |
| 4820–4823 | Motu Proprio Ecclesia Dei , July 2, 1988 (Statement on the Excommunication of Marcel Lefebvre and His Schismatic Followers) | 1065 |
| 4830–4841 | Apostolic Letter Mulieris dignitatem , August 15, 1988 (Dignity and Vocation of Woman) | 1066 |
| 4850–4858 | Post-Synodal Apostolic Exhortation Christifideles laici , December 30, 1988 (Vocation and Mission of the Laity) | 1071 |
| 4860–4862 | Letter of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith Orationis formas , October 15, 1989 (Christian Meditation) | 1075 |
| 4870–4885 | Instruction of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith Donum veritatis , May 24, 1990 (Theology and the Church’s Magisterium) | 1076 |
| 4890–4896 | Encyclical Redemptoris missio , December 7, 1990 (Evangelization) | 1080 |
| 4900–4914 | Encyclical Centesimus annus , May 1, 1991 (Social Doctrine of the Church) | 1082 |
| 4920–4924 | Letter of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith Communio notio , May 28, 1992 (The Church as Mystery of Communion) | 1089 |
| 4930–4942 | Final Document of the Fourth General Assembly of Latin American Bishops in Santo Domingo Convocados por , October 12–18, 1992 (Evangelization and Culture / Rights of Indigenous People) | 1092 |
| 4950–4971 | Encyclical Veritatis splendor , August 6, 1993 (Catholic Moral Theology) | 1095 |
| 4980–4983 | Apostolic Letter Ordinatio sacerdotalis , May 22, 1994 (Reservation of Priestly Ordination to Men Alone) | 1100 |
| 4990–4998 | Encyclical Evangelium vitae , March 25, 1995 (Sanctity of Life / Abortion / Euthanasia) | 1102 |
| 5000–5012 | Encyclical Ut unum sint , May 25, 1995 (Ecumenism) | 1105 |
| 5020–5030 | Post-Synodal Apostolic Exhortation Ecclesia in Africa , September 14, 1995 (Church in Africa) | 1110 |
| 5040–5041 | Response of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, October 28, 1995 (Doctrinal Authority of Ordinatio sacerdotalis) | 1113 |
| 5050–5053 | Instruction of the Congregation for the Clergy and Seven Other Congregations or Councils De quibusdam quaestionibus circa fidelium laicorum cooperationem sacerdotum ministerium spectantem (Instruction for the Laity), August 15, 1997 | 1113 |
| 5060–5061 | Declaration of the Congregation for the Clergy together with the Congregation for Catholic Education De diaconatu permanenti , February 22, 1998 | 1117 |
| 5062–5063 | Congregation for Catholic Education, Ratio fundamentalis institutionis diaconorum permanentium , February 22, 1998 | 1119 |
| 5065–5066 | Motu Proprio Ad tuendam fidem , May 18, 1998 | 1121 |
| 5067–5068 | Motu Proprio Apostolos suos on the Theological and Juridical Nature of Bishops’ Conferences, May 21, 1998 | 1123 |

Contents

| | | |
|------------------|---|------|
| 5070–5072 | Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith: Professio Fidei and Doctrinal Commentary on the Concluding Formula of the Profession of Faith, June 29, 1998 | 1125 |
| 5073–5074 | Pontifical Council for Promoting Christian Unity and the Lutheran World Federation, Joint Declaration on the Doctrine of Justification , June 1998. | 1129 |
| 5075–5080 | Encyclical Fides et Ratio , September 14, 1998. | 1130 |
| 5081 | Pontifical Council for Promoting Christian Unity and the Lutheran World Federation, “Official Common Statement regarding the Joint Declaration on the Doctrine of Justification ” (*5073f.) with the Appendix (Annex) to the “Official Common Statement”, October 31, 1999 | 1136 |
| 5082–5083 | Post-Synodal Apostolic Exhortation Ecclesia in Asia , November 6, 1999 | 1137 |
| 5085–5089 | Declaration of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith on the Unicity and Salvific Universality of Jesus Christ and the Church Dominus Iesus , August 6, 2000. | 1138 |
| 5090 | Response of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, June 5, 2001 | 1145 |
| 5091 | Note of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith on the Force of the Doctrinal Decrees concerning the Thought and Work of Antonio Rosmini Serbati, July 1, 2001 | 1145 |
| 5092 | Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, Declaration, Preliminary Note, and Decree of Excommunication of Certain Women, August 5, 2002. | 1146 |
| 5093 | Doctrinal Note of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith on Some Questions regarding the Participation of Catholics in Political Life, November 24, 2002 | 1146 |
| 5094–5095 | Encyclical Ecclesia de Eucharistia , April 17, 2003 | 1147 |
| 5096 | Considerations by the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith regarding Proposals to Give Legal Recognition to Unions between Homosexual Persons, June 3, 2003. | 1150 |
| 5097 | Post-Synodal Apostolic Exhortation Pastores gregis , October 5, 2003 | 1150 |
| 5098 | Letter of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith on the Collaboration of Men and Women in the Church and in the World, May 31, 2004 | 1153 |
| 5099 | Notification of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith on the Book Jesus Symbol of God , by Father Roger Haight, S.J., December 13, 2004 | 1154 |

BENEDICT XVI: April 19, 2005–

| | | |
|------------------|--|------|
| 5100 | Instruction of the Congregation for Catholic Education concerning the Criteria for the Discernment of Vocations with Regard to Persons with Homosexual Tendencies in View of Their Admission to the Seminary and to Holy Orders, November 4, 2005. | 1154 |
| 5101–5105 | Encyclical Deus caritas est , December 25, 2005 | 1155 |
| 5106 | Pontifical Council for Promoting Christian Unity: Statement concerning the Suppression of the Title “Patriarch of the West” in Relation to the Pope, March 22, 2006. | 1162 |
| 5107 | Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, Notification on the Works of Father Jon Sobrino, S.J.: Jesucristo liberador: Lectura histórico-teológica de Jesús de Nazaret (Madrid, 1991) and La fe en Jesucristo: Ensayo desde las víctimas (San Salvador, 1999), November 26, 2006 | 1163 |
| 5108 | Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, Responses to Some Questions regarding Certain Aspects of the Doctrine on the Church, June 29, 2007 | 1167 |
| 5109 | Motu Proprio Summorum pontificum on the Use of the Roman Liturgy Prior to the Reform of 1970, July 7, 2007 | 1171 |
| 5110 | Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith, Responses to Certain Questions of the United States Conference of Catholic Bishops concerning Artificial Nutrition and Hydration, August 1, 2007. | 1172 |
| 5111–5115 | Encyclical Spe salvi , November 30, 2007 | 1172 |
| 5116–5118 | Instruction of the Congregation for the Doctrine of the Faith Dignitas personae on Certain Bioethical Questions, September 8, 2008 | 1178 |
| | Systematic Index | 1187 |
| | Index of Scripture References | 1344 |

Contents

| | |
|---|------|
| Index of Documents | 1351 |
| Index of Persons and Subjects | 1362 |
| Appendix: Concordance of the Marginal Numbers of the 1963 (32nd) Edition and the Earlier Editions | 1389 |
| List of Translators and Translations Used | 1394 |

FOREWORD TO THE ENGLISH EDITION

This English translation corresponds to the forty-third edition of Denzinger's Enchiridion symbolorum definitionum et declarationum de rebus fidei et morum, edited by Peter Hünemann, professor of dogmatic theology at the University of Tübingen. Much credit is owed to Father Joseph Fessio, S.J., the founder and editor of Ignatius Press, who was first asked to publish an English version of Denzinger-Hünemann by several graduate students in Rome (one of them now my colleague, Father Daniel Jones, S.T.D.).

This present volume represents the first English translation of the Enchiridion since Roy J. Deferrari's rendering of Denzinger-Rahner (30th ed.), published in 1957 as The Sources of Catholic Dogma. Since that thirtieth edition, the subsequent German editors, A. Schönmetzer, S.J. (editions 32 through 36), and P. Hünemann (editions 37 through 43), have provided many revisions and additions (with selections now going up to A.D. 2008).

A full list of translation sources can be found at the end of this volume. As can be seen, many translations are original, and others are taken from existing sources. Some translations of Deferrari have been retained in part or in full when appropriate. Other translations of his have been revised or abandoned according to the circumstances (cf. the review of Deferrari's translation by Paul F. Palmer, S.J., in Theological Studies 18 [1957]: 280–88). For entries from the time of Pope Leo XIII on (1878–2008), recourse has been made, when possible, to translations posted on the Vatican website. Minor changes have been made to most all the previously published translations to achieve greater stylistic consistency and accuracy and, when necessary, to supply omitted text.

The translations of the introductions, footnotes, and systematic index all relied upon the German of Denzinger-Hünemann as normative, since the German revises and expands the introductions and systematic index of Denzinger-Schönmetzer. Comparisons, though, were often made with the French and Italian editions and, when appropriate, with the earlier Latin introductions.

I am indebted to many people for assistance and support with this project. In addition to Father Fessio, I am grateful to Archbishop Allen H. Vigneron and Bishop Earl Boyea, who were the rector and dean of studies when I first joined the faculty of Sacred Heart Major Seminary in Detroit, Michigan. I am most thankful to all those who assisted in the translations, especially Father John Parsons of Canberra, Australia, and Fr. Patrick Brannan, S.J. Special mention should be made of Bro. Edmund Hunt, C.S.C., and Dr. Robert Edgeworth, who have sadly passed away since making their contributions.

I am immensely grateful to Dr. Anne Englund Nash, my co-editor, who undertook the enormous task of copyediting this volume. She also offered many fine suggestions for improvement based on her expert comparisons with the German and French editions. The present volume would not have been possible without her assistance. I am likewise indebted to Carolyn Lemon, the production editor of Ignatius Press, for her kindness, patience, and encouragement.

I hope this edition will help many students and teachers of Catholic doctrine throughout the English-speaking world. In gratitude for her spiritual support, I dedicate this volume to the Mother of the Church, the immaculate and ever-virgin Theotokos, Mary most holy, ut dignitas intercessoris suppleat inopiam nostram (F. Suárez, De Mysteriis Vitae Christi, 23, III, 4).

Robert Fastiggi, Ph.D.
Professor of Systematic Theology, Sacred Heart Major Seminary, Detroit, Michigan

FOREWORD TO THE FORTIETH GERMAN EDITION

The present fortieth edition of the bilingual “Denzinger-Hünemann”, in addition to prior texts, covers magisterial documents up to the year 2003.

Because of its exceptional theological significance, the Joint Declaration on the Doctrine of Justification of the Pontifical Council for Promoting Christian Unity and the Lutheran World Federation is included as well as the “Official Common Statement regarding the Joint Declaration on the Doctrine of Justification”, with the corresponding Annex. These texts are not published in the Acta Apostolicae Sedis, but they are to be found in the Information Service of the Pontifical Council for Promoting Christian Unity.

Extracts from the Decree on Ecumenism Unitatis redintegratio, DH 4193–4194, touching on the esteem for the Eastern Churches expressed by Vatican II, are included to highlight this point.¹

Besides the editions in Italian and French, Spanish and Croatian editions have subsequently appeared. A Chinese edition is in preparation.

I wish to thank Prof. Dr. Helmut Hoping, of Freiburg im Breisgau, for collaboration in editing; Matthias Bausenhart for collaboration in translation; and Dr. Elke Kirsten and Martin Kirschner for writing and copyediting. I am grateful to Dr. Suchla, editor at Verlag Herder, for the careful attention given to the new edition.

Peter Hünemann

FOREWORD TO THE FORTY-THIRD EDITION

The present forty-third edition of the bilingual Denzinger-Hünemann includes the magisterial documents from the pontificate of John Paul II and the early ones from the tenure of Benedict XVI up to 2008.

Editions in English, Korean, and Chinese translation will soon be added to the previous editions in Italian, French, Spanish, Portuguese, Hungarian, and Croatian. In 2009 a CD-ROM edition of the Latin-German version was published.

I would like to thank once again Matthias Bausenhart for his collaboration in translation, Dr. Elke Kirsten for writing and editing, and Dr. Suchla, editor at Verlag Herder, for the careful attention given to the new edition.

Peter Hünemann

¹ In the English edition, these extracts have been incorporated into the regular sequence of documents.

INTRODUCTION TO THE THIRTY-SEVENTH EDITION

1. The History of “Denzinger”¹

When Heinrich Denzinger (1819–1883) was called to a professorship in Würzburg, after studies in philology, mathematics, philosophy, and theology in Würzburg and Rome as well as three years of pastoral ministry, the idea occurred to him to revive a genuine theology as opposed to the theological rationalism of his time. Accordingly, he published for the first time in 1854 the Enchiridion symbolorum et definitionum quae de rebus fidei et morum a conciliis oecumenicis et summis pontificibus emanaverunt. In his introduction, Denzinger writes: “Of the many evils introduced by the unfavorable situation of Catholic educational institutions, the most harmful for theological studies is the fact that many either ignore or neglect the so-called positive documents of faith and morals that have been sealed by the authority of the Church and trust too much in their own reason.”

In the first edition of the Enchiridion, Denzinger gathered texts drawn from one hundred ecclesiastical documents: professions of faith, conciliar decisions, resolutions of provincial synods, and papal declarations and doctrinal decrees up to the pontificate of Pius IX. Through his documentation, Denzinger wanted to cover the essential stages in the development of the Church’s doctrine. On the basis of the Enchiridion, Matthias J. Scheeben presented an annotated overview of this doctrinal development in his treatise on theological knowledge.²

When Denzinger published his work, a series of older manuals already existed, but their selections no longer corresponded to what was needed at that time. Hitzfelder remarked in his review of “Denzinger” in the Tübinger Theologischen Quartalschrift that “it scarcely needs mentioning that this collection makes no claim to absolute comprehensiveness; but the author cannot be denied the highest praise for fulfilling very satisfactorily his promise to offer the most complete conspectus possible of Church doctrine with a special view to the needs of the present.”³

The first edition of “Denzinger” is already ordered chronologically and possesses a systematic index among other things. The positive reception to the work dedicated to Pius IX made it necessary for two additional editions within eighteen months of the initial publication. Marginal numbers were introduced, and a series of new texts were included in them. In this enlargement, Denzinger was guided by the theological and ecclesiastical interests of his time. Increasingly, texts were included that referred to the primacy of the bishop of Rome and concerned Christology, questions relating to marriage, and religious knowledge. The second edition was already expanded by one-third. The fourth edition of 1865 brought together such texts as lengthy excerpts from Pius IX’s encyclical Quanta cura and his “Syllabus”. The fifth edition of 1874—the last to which Denzinger himself contributed—included (albeit only in the foreword) decisive passages from the First Vatican Council. The texts of the Council of Trent had yet to be considered.

Ignaz Stahl, privatdozent and honorary professor at the University of Würzburg, was in charge of the sixth through ninth (1888–1900) editions of “Denzinger”. Stahl incorporated into the sixth edition the Tridentine texts and the constitutions of the First Vatican Council. For the seventh edition of 1895, he did a new comparison of many of the documents with the sources and added a series of emendations. It is noteworthy that a greater number of papal encyclicals were included following the First Vatican Council. The number of documents increased to 155. The eighth and ninth editions (1899 and 1900, respectively) show only minor changes and improvements over the seventh. After Ignaz Stahl’s death in 1905, the Herder publishing company took the project over from that of Oskar Stahel in Würzburg.

Starting with the tenth edition (1908), Clemens Bannwart, S.J., was in charge of “Denzinger”. His assistant was Johannes B. Umberg, S.J. Bannwart undertook a fundamental revision of “Denzinger”. The title now read: Enchiridion symbolorum, definitionum, et declarationum de rebus fidei et morum. The documents were not only organized in a more precise chronological order but were divided according to the pontificates. The historical titles were expanded by captions that summarized their content. Using “Denzinger” was made easier through the documentation of sources, display of Scripture citations, the location of corresponding evidence, references to other texts, and continuous running heads for each column. An index of persons and subjects, a list of bibliographical abbreviations, as well as historical commentary in the footnotes were also added.

¹ Cf. J. Schumacher, Der “Denzinger”: Geschichte und Bedeutung eines Buches in der Praxis der neueren Theologie, FThSt 114 (Freiburg, 1974).

² M. J. Scheeben, Handbuch der katholischen Dogmatik, vol. 1: Theologische Erkenntnislehre, ed. M. Grabmann, 3rd ed. (Freiburg, 1959), nos. 611–15.

³ ThQ 36 (1854): 518f. [Theologische Quartalschrift was the predecessor of the Tübinger Theologischen Quartalschrift].

Using the most recent research, Bannwart completely reworked the first half of “Denzinger”, which includes the creeds. His hand was still more evident in the second part, which bore the title “Documenta Romanorum Pontificum et conciliorum”. Because of the theological development after the First Vatican Council, papal statements took precedence for Bannwart over those of councils.

In his review, A. Bellesheim lauded the new “Denzinger” as a “flawless history of the Holy See from the standpoint of the doctrines concerning faith and morals”.⁴ Numerous newly added texts refer to the primacy and teaching authority of the pope. Another focal point is the debate with modernism. Thirty-four pages alone cover the documentation of the encyclical Pascendi dominici gregis. In addition, there are a series of historical documents that Bannwart interprets as a confirmation of the antimodernist theses.

Bannwart devoted special attention to the development of the systematic index. Whereas, for dogmatic theology, Denzinger started with three main sections (“On the Principles of Faith and Theology”, “On God, One and Triune, as He Is in Himself”, and “On God, Who Acts ad extra”),⁵ Bannwart divided dogmatic theology into ten treatises: revelation, the Church, the Roman pope, the one God, the Trinity, creation, exaltation and fall, restoration, justification, and fulfillment. Denzinger’s ordering was based upon Klee, Staudenmaier, Dieringer, and Berlage; Bannwart, on the other hand, based his order on the dogmatic works of Liebermann, Perrone, and Franzelin. Bannwart’s systematic index, which served as the basis for the next twenty-one editions, played a formative role in numerous handbooks of dogmatic theology up until the Second Vatican Council. It represented a type of theology that in the future would often be referred to as “Denzinger theology”.

The editions of 1911, 1913, and 1921 (eleventh through thirteenth) bring only minor emendations, for example, the antimodernist oath and the pronouncements of the Biblical Commission. From the fourteenth to the twenty-seventh edition, the name of Johannes B. Umberg, S.J., appears as editor. He had already contributed substantially to the thirteenth edition (1921) without having his name mentioned. The large number of editions between 1922 and 1951 can be explained by the custom of the publishing company to combine several editions in one printing. The size of the editions in most case ran to over 10,000 copies, apart from a few of the smaller editions in the period immediately following the war.

Umberg was constantly perfecting “Denzinger”. He expanded the contemporary texts and, from earlier periods, added doctrinal statements principally on the sacraments, his own area of specialty. As opposed to Bannwart, who had taken moral theology out of the systematic index, Umberg incorporated it back into the eighteenth through twentieth editions. Unlike Denzinger, he organized the section on moral theology, not according to the three areas of obligations, but according to the Decalogue. Umberg greatly expanded the person and subject index as well as the index of Scripture references. The systematic index was refined and made more specific. In addition, Umberg worked into “Denzinger” references to the 1917 edition of the Code of Canon Law.

The twenty-sixth edition of 1947 included in an appendix a collection of texts prepared by Karl Rahner, who signed his name as editor for the twenty-eighth (1952) to the thirty-first (1957) edition. The individual editions evidence only minor changes. In the twenty-eighth edition, Rahner asked for suggestions for a planned new revision of “Denzinger”. Because of this intention, the text of the next three editions was printed virtually unchanged.

With the thirty-second edition of 1963, Adolf Schönmetzer, S.J., presented a completely reworked “Denzinger”. Schönmetzer incorporated almost 150 new documents, abbreviated or expanded approximately one hundred other doctrinal texts, and eliminated all the papal addresses and a series of additional documents. In doing so, he based himself, on the one hand, on the opinions of specialists and, on the other, on new theological inquiries that shed a different light on earlier documents and texts. In general, Schönmetzer’s goal was to make the Enchiridion more useful not only for theological instruction but also for a broader theological science. At the same time, he departed from earlier principles of selection whereby texts would often not be incorporated because they might possibly present difficulties to theologians. Schönmetzer did not want to produce a book ad usum delphini.⁶

The following elements were emphasized in the thirty-second edition: a fundamentally new format for the part on the symbols of faith, short historical introductions to the individual documents, a change of headings, a new continuous numbering system, and a basic overhaul of the index whereby the systematic index was considerably expanded and headings derived from the biblical languages maintained. Ecclesiology was no longer treated in the part about doctrines concerning theological principles but appeared as a separate theological treatise. Morality was once again classified according to areas of obligation.

⁴ Katholik 88, no. 2 (1908): 234.

⁵ H. Denzinger, Enchiridion (1854), 367, 375, 378.

⁶ [Literally, “for the use of the dauphin”. The phrase originates in 1775 and refers to an edition of Latin classics prepared for the son of Louis XIV.]

With respect to the revisions in content, it is especially noteworthy that Schönmetzer removed Bannwart's exaggerated emphasis on the papacy and incorporated texts that had become important in the ecumenical discussion as well as documents that treated tolerance and human freedom and acted against slavery, torture, and trials by ordeal.

In his review in Materialdienst des konfessionskundlichen Instituts Bensheim, G. Maron criticized the fact that Schönmetzer had eliminated a series of texts that, with respect to ecumenism, might have been awkward because of their severity.⁷ The review of J. C. Fenton reproached Schönmetzer for having minimalized the infallibility of the Church's teaching authority and for having become a propagandist for a deplorable trend in theology.⁸ These isolated voices stood in opposition to a widespread approval, which was manifested not least in the rapid succession of the following editions (thirty-third edition in 1965, thirty-fourth in 1967) with their altogether 25,000 copies. The new additions to these volumes were excerpts from the encyclicals Mater et magistra and Pacem in terris of John XXIII and two documents of Paul VI.

The thirty-fifth and thirty-sixth editions did not introduce any new documents but contained only some emendations. In the thirty-fifth edition, Schönmetzer announced that he would soon publish the documents of the Second Vatican Council and more recent magisterial documents in a separate volume. Schönmetzer was not able to accomplish this goal.

2. On the Present Bilingual Edition of "Denzinger"

In 1981 the editor began to prepare a new, bilingual edition of "Denzinger". This undertaking was prompted by the concern that familiarity with the Church's magisterial tradition as a whole might suffer from the lack of such an edition because many readers and users today have difficulty with the Greek and Latin texts of "Denzinger". Another motive was the desire for an expansion of "Denzinger" with a selection of texts from the documents of the Second Vatican Council, more recent Roman doctrinal texts, and documents from the synods held since the last council.

Through conversations with the Herder publishing company, it quickly became apparent that a new typesetting of the whole book by the publisher would drive the retail price up to an untenable amount. So the work focused initially wholly on the translation that would be added to the text of the thirty-sixth edition. This concept was later abandoned. In the course of the work, my assistants in collaboration with the Center for Computer Programming at the University of Tübingen developed a typesetting program for the "Tübingen System of Word Processing Programs" (TUSTEP) for a new, bilingual edition of "Denzinger".

For this new edition, the introductions and headings, the column titles, and the footnotes were revised; the texts of documents, when doubtful, were checked and amended by means of critical editions; and the citations of sources and secondary literature were also brought up to date. For the period from 1963 to 1988, a new selection of magisterial documents was made. This made it necessary to redo the index.

After that, the collection of magisterial documents was neither abbreviated nor expanded in the thirty-fourth through thirty-sixth editions of "Denzinger". The editor was guided in this respect by the following considerations: reference to this collection should facilitate the resumption of the tradition of "Denzinger" that had been uninterrupted since 1967. The selection that Schönmetzer made at the time of the Second Vatican Council, along with the amendments of the thirty-third and thirty-fourth editions, still corresponds to a large degree to the demands of contemporary ecclesiastical and theological discussion. In the current state of theology, a new reconfiguration of the collection presupposes the collaboration of an international committee over a period spanning several years. For such a work, a bilingual edition would serve as the matrix, in which, because of TUSTEP's electronic typesetting program, it would be possible not only to add new documents or shorten or delete existing ones but also to combine the documents with other translations, for example, English or French. The editor thus intends, after consultation with various theological experts and societies, to form an international workgroup that would undertake the twofold task of reviewing the selection of documents in the thirty-sixth edition of "Denzinger" and collaborating in the publication of additional bilingual translations.

In selecting new texts to be included from the pontificates of recent times, certain procedures were followed: With the exception of the lengthy constitution Lumen gentium, didactic portions of the constitutions of the Second Vatican Council were included in their entirety; from the decrees and declarations, only the important statements pertaining to dogmatic and moral theology were included. This was also true for the postconciliar documents. Because of the transformed character of the literary genre of the encyclical during the pontificate of Pope John Paul II (i.e., a number of encyclicals have a meditative, hortatory quality), not all of the encyclicals were considered for selection.

⁷ Materialdienst des Konfessionskundlichen Instituts Bensheim 16 (1965): 99ff.

⁸ AmER 148 (1963): 337–45.

3. The Translation and the Adaptation of the Documents

The translation of the creeds and the documents from the Church's Magisterium was governed by the intention to have the vernacular text correspond to the original as precisely as possible. The goal was to create, not a smooth, easily readable vernacular text, but, rather, a translation that made the original text understandable and possible to interpret even for those with no in-depth knowledge of Greek and Latin. The user of the edition should be led back to the original text. For that reason, value was to be placed on a great consistency in terminology. The use of a variety of words in the vernacular in order to render textual nuances was as a rule to be avoided. Rather, words were to be sought that were etymologically close to the corresponding Latin and Greek words. Likewise, fidelity to the grammatical structure in the Latin and Greek was to be sought, insofar as the vernacular sentence structure allowed. A text should emerge that revealed at every turn its function of service to the original text and that reflected something of the foreign quality of the historical document. Consequently certain deviations from typical ecclesiastical usage in the vernacular were produced.

The new "Denzinger" contains not only Greek and Latin but also Spanish, English, German, Italian, and French texts. Where critical editions were available, the "Denzinger" texts were checked against them or else against textbook editions, and most certainly in all cases in which doubts arose about the text. All together there were about one thousand emendations.

The text of the documents from the thirty-fourth to the thirty-sixth edition show in a whole series of passages conjectures taken for the most part from Eduard Schwartz. A portion of these conjectures obviously served to circumvent linguistic and theological difficulties with the authentic texts. In place of these conjectures, the best attested version of the text has been taken. For this reason, the new "Denzinger" does not represent a critical edition, for such an edition would have required the citation of the most important variants. Yet it does offer a text that has been examined critically.

4. The Organization of the Documents

In the tradition of "Denzinger", the present thirty-seventh edition possesses two parts. The first part is comprised of the creeds of the ancient Church (*1–76); the second half, the documents of the Church's Magisterium (*101–4858). The texts of the second half follow a strictly chronological ordering, which unlike a systematic arrangement (cf. the remarks about the changing configuration of "Denzinger's" systematic index) offers incalculable advantages.⁹ The magisterial documents are in each case related to the pontificates of the bishops of Rome. The headings generally give the titles of the documents and their respective date of composition.

The marginal numbering system up to *3997 corresponds to those of the thirty-sixth edition. The documents Piam et constantem and Sancta mater ecclesia were placed after the texts of the Second Vatican Council so that they needed to be assigned new numbers: *4400 instead of *3998 and *4402–4407 instead of *3999–3999e. The appendix from the thirty-sixth edition was inserted into the regular text while preserving the supplementary numbers. The marginal notations on the inner margins of the pages from the editions prior to 1963 were removed in favor of a concordance in the appendix.

For clarity's sake, Schönmetzer marked the beginning of the more important documents with marginal numbers that are easy to remember. Continuing this tradition, the texts of the Second Vatican Council begin with *4001. This results in the following "framework":

- *125 First Council of Nicaea
- *150 First Council of Constantinople
- *250 Council of Ephesus
- *300 Council of Chalcedon
- *500 Lateran Synod against the Monothelites
- *550 Third Council of Constantinople

⁹ See the remarks above concerning the varying arrangements of "Denzinger's" systematic index.

- *600 Second Council of Nicaea
- *700 Berengar of Tour's Profession of Faith
- *800 Fourth Lateran Council
- *1000 Benedict XII's Constitution Benedictus Deus
- *1300 Council of Florence
- *1500 Council of Trent
- *2001 Constitution Cum occasione against Cornelius Jansen
- *2101 Decree against the errors of the Laxists
- *2301 Decree against the errors of the Jansenists
- *2600 Constitution Auctorem fidei against the errors of the Synod of Pistoia
- *2800 Bull Ineffabilis Deus about the Immaculate Conception of Mary
- *3000 First Vatican Council
- *3401 Decree Lamentabili against the errors of the modernists
- *3700 Encyclical Casti connubii on Christian marriage
- *3900 Constitution Munificentissimus Deus on Mary's Assumption into heaven
- *4001 Second Vatican Council

5. Preparation of the Apparatus

Schönmetzer is credited with the great service of having composed brief, historical introductions for the various documents of "Denzinger" that occasionally also provided helpful theological explanations. Although probably not intentional, such remarks made to some extent a certain apologetic interest noticeable. The texts of the introductions were revised, with regard to both language and content, as well as the column titles, the headings, and the footnotes. The citations of editions and secondary literature were checked and in many cases brought up to date. The newly incorporated texts were generally provided with corresponding introductory material.

The index was checked and expanded to reflect the newly incorporated documents. In the list of documents from the Church's Magisterium cited according to their opening words, there are also cited the opening words of documents that are merely mentioned. The index of persons and subjects includes key words in both Latin and the vernacular. With persons, the same principle was retained as before, that is, the names of only those persons who are of significance in the corresponding passage are included. The names of the addressees of letters from Cyprian or Augustine, for example, are not listed if they are of no further interest. As before, only certain places are mentioned: councils, synods, countries of origin, as well as the places of the creeds. For the most part, names were entered in their current vernacular form. The preparation of the systematic index required considerable work. All in all, every citation of a passage in the edition of Adolf Schönmetzer was taken into account. They were, however, inserted into new divisions. The section on ecclesiastical documents that contain contradictory statements was adopted unchanged. The systematic index had to be thoroughly reworked because of the new theological formulations introduced by the Second Vatican Council and the postconciliar documents. The existing conceptual divisions—for example, in ecclesiology—proved to be unusable with respect to essential pronouncements of the Second Vatican Council concerning, for example, the grounding of the Church in the mystery of the Trinity and the concept of the people of God.

Latin translations of Greek terms were retained only when, by virtue of their origin, they had their own significance, for example, in the texts of the Lateran Synod of 649.

The abbreviation of biblical books follows in the Greek and Latin texts the Stuttgart Vulgate,¹⁰ in all other cases, the biblical abbreviations correspond to the usage found in the Revised Standard Version, second Catholic edition. The numbering of the Psalms in the Greek and Latin texts corresponds to the numbering in the corresponding manuscripts. In the English text they correspond with the Hebrew manuscripts.

The official and authentic edition of the Acts of the Holy See has since 1904 been the ASS,¹¹ replaced shortly afterward by the AAS.¹² Citations in square brackets ([. . .]) refer to the original pagination in either the ASS or AAS. Editorial references to the 1917 edition of the Code of Canon Law were deleted. Immediately before the text of the documents, the editions and, if necessary, the register are cited.

¹⁰ Biblia sacra, iuxta Vulgata versionem, adiuvantibus B. Fischer, O.S.B., e.a., recensuit et brevi apparatu instruxit R. Weber, O.S.B., 3rd ed. (Stuttgart, 1983).

¹¹ ASS 37 (1904/1905).

¹² AAS 1 (1909).

If the headings of the texts are part of the authentic text of the documents (as, for example, is the case with the documents of the Council of Trent), they are generally given in the Latin original and in the translation.

Internal references to a text are made with the aid of the corresponding marginal number preceded by an asterisk (*). In the indices, the reference consists solely of the citation of the marginal number of the text to which reference is made. Footnotes refer to sources of the citations, paraphrases, and condemned propositions. In order to differentiate references to the text from those to the footnotes, the marginal numbers for the footnotes include an additional footnote number along with the asterisk.

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE THEOLOGICAL USE OF “DENZINGER”

The following remarks regarding the theological use of this “Compendium” will necessarily be of a summary and introductory nature. They cannot replace a thorough study of the doctrine of theological knowledge and dogmatic principles. Nevertheless, the following outline may be of use in reminding the user with a formation in theology of earlier studies and in protecting the layperson who reads this book from false ideas.

1. The Witness of the Church and Official Proclamation

The entire Church is entrusted by Jesus Christ with the continuation of his mission to bear witness to the gospel. Those who hold an office in the Church serve this task of proclamation, which they share with all believers. By safeguarding the gospel through preaching and instruction and by faithfully interpreting it, they prepare communities and individuals to grow in faith and carry out their own mission. The official teaching is thus part of the total witness of the Church.

Because the official attestation of faith in the name of Jesus Christ is given to the Church, it occurs authoritatively: “Whoever listens to you, listens to me” (Lk 10:16). Bishops, however, are not bearers of revelation; they are witnesses of the revelation handed over by Christ and the apostles and remain subservient to the Word of God. At the same time, the people of God, for whose edification the bishops are appointed, have already been granted the gift of God’s Word because they believe it. From this it follows that in the situation of proclamation a relationship between responsible persons prevails. The hearers of the proclaimed Word have in faith the right and duty to form a judgment about the official proclamation in the Church in order to receive it responsibly and conscientiously. At the time of the Fathers, the “Amen” said by the community in response to the prayer and homily of a bishop or priest was explicitly taken to be an affirmative judgment of the believing people.

Listening, the acceptance of revelation in faith, and the attestation of faith are made possible through the gift of the Holy Spirit. This Spirit, who mediates a community of life for believers through Christ with the Father, makes accessible to the Church ever anew the original declaration of this event of revelation and salvation as it was believed in the apostolic Church. Because the testimony of the entire Church as well as the official testimony of her ministers are related to the gospel, as Scripture and the apostolic tradition definitively attest, the witness of the Fathers, the words of bishops and popes, and the tradition of the Church in her prayer, her liturgy, and her faithful praxis constitute a secondary form of sources and criteria. The one gospel can in fact be transmitted only inasmuch as it is interpreted and delimited for the purpose of its preservation. But interpretation and a protective delimitation are documented precisely in the manifold forms that the attestation of faith assumes. Thus, an inner gradation of normativity is at work.

The various attestations of the gospel are fundamentally open to everyone in the Church in the same manner, that is, to the officeholder no less than to the theologian or layperson. It is on their basis that each concrete attestation of faith is measured, that of the official officeholders as well as that of the individual or the community. This measuring cannot be a simple process of monitoring with the yardstick of predetermined formulations. The gospel is the “word of life” (1 Jn 1:1) that frees us for a “new thinking” and a “new transformation”. The transmission of faith, which in a fundamental way is always also a propagation of a linguistic community, is therefore distinguished from “service to the letter”.

2. Authentic Teaching

The task of official proclamation is difficult and laden with responsibility. The basic truths of the faith for their part must each be translated into the everyday life of the individual and families, into social and cultural situations. With this concretization to be carried out each time in a new way, one-sided emphases, false conclusions, misrepresentations, and errors can very well result. Because God’s revelation in Jesus Christ is the dawn and not the completion of God’s kingdom, because with the Spirit only the pledge and down payment of future glory are given, the official proclamation, which is the translation of the gospel in different dimensions of life, is subject in a fundamental way to the conditions of finite, human knowing and limited human praxis. This means that the bishops have to rely upon every aid, protective mechanism, and proven institutional form that human finitude has developed for the promotion of its knowledge and praxis. On the other hand, the hearer as a responsible, adult Christian is challenged to distinguish the essential from the inessential in the proclamation, to separate the fundamental intention of the statement from what are just details, and to appropriate the proclamation by using his overall understanding of the faith. Intelligent listening is no less important than brilliant proclamation and teaching. The support promised to the Church is related to both of these things and is expressed, inter alia, in the appropriate use of human skills and capacities on the part of the ministers as well as the listening believers. Jesus Christ, who is present to the Church in his Spirit as the risen Lord, is the foundation for the fact that the Church dwells in the truth. This dwelling granted by God, however, is for its part communicated through the “folly of preaching”, through a concern for the correct interpretation of and listening to the gospel, and through conversion and renewal.

In the broad current of official attestation of faith, doctrinal decisions occupy a special place. In the life of the individual believer, in the praxis and understanding of a community, or in the regional or universal Church, abuses and threats to the faith can arise that require a clear judgment about whether or not the relevant idea or praxis is compatible with the gospel. The authority for such binding judgments on doctrinal questions is ascribed throughout the Church’s tradition to the pope and bishops as shepherds of the Church. Such authority relates to questions of faith and morals (fides et mores) because in the gospel it concerns real life in the grace of God. Up until the Council of Trent, “mores” was understood to refer to ecclesiastical customs and forms of life. In modern times, it generally is understood to be moral doctrine in the narrower sense of the term.

Doctrinal decisions are based on the normative evidence of faith summarized above and are of particular interest in elaborating an adequate understanding of the faith because, as a rule, they express deliberate judgments, made in view of acute and precise questions. The present collection consists in its second part of such documents. These doctrinal decisions ought not to be confused with the general proclamation of the gospel. Even in their entirety, they are meant, not to replace proclamation, but to complement it in specific respects. Precisely in this manner do they have their significance for a keener grasp of the gospel. Obviously, they are of varying importance and differing authority and binding force.

Authority and binding force are determined through a cluster of criteria. Authorship is a first criterion. A doctrinal pronouncement will carry different weight depending on whether it is made by a single bishop, the community of bishops, an ecumenical council, a particular synod or a bishops’ conference, the pope, or a congregation of the Roman curia. The more comprehensive the governing authority, the more important the doctrinal decision will be. The highest governing authority with respect to the Church as a whole lies with the pope and the community of bishops. A second criterion is determined by the audience to whom the doctrinal decision is addressed. The broader the range of the audience, the greater the significance of the doctrinal decision in question. A third criterion derives from the subject matter being treated. Central subjects pertaining to faith and morals need to be distinguished from largely peripheral or purely disciplinary affairs. Fourthly, the question of the source from which the doctrinal decision is derived is important. It can be a matter of a truth to which Scripture and tradition attest either expressly or implicitly. It can be a matter of a theological deduction or, for example, of the consequences of universally understood—and hence philosophical—moral principles. Finally, the doctrinal decision can be grounded in ecclesiastical tradition and long-standing practice. The form in which a doctrinal decision is set forth serves as a fifth criterion. The form manifests the manner in which teaching authority is brought into play. An instruction is to be appraised differently from a decree; an encyclical or a constitution, differently from an ecumenical council.

A determination of the significance of a doctrinal opinion requires a careful review that refers to the above criteria and considers the historical transformation in the forms of the exercise of authority as well as the classification or subordination of the different authorities. Among the rules employed in theological hermeneutics is the principle that specific binding force is ascribed neither to introductions, summaries, or individual arguments nor to explanations or citations but solely to the core of the statement.

Doctrinal decisions often include theological censures with which the condemnable nature of a doctrine is indicated. In addition, beginning in the late Middle Ages and especially in the course of modern times, one encounters theological qualifications that indicate the degree of certainty with which ecclesiastical doctrines can be accepted. Up until the high Middle Ages, the old judgments of orthodoxy and heresy were used. It should be noted that the condemnations (ἀναθεματίζομεν, damnamus) are not necessarily the strict opposite of revealed doctrine but also indicate offenses against the relationship to the Church. Not every condemned teaching is a heresy in the strict sense. Starting at the turn of the fourteenth century, a differentiation of censures was introduced. The increasing importance given to the question of absolute certainty in the realm of modern philosophy led to the elaboration of theological qualifications. The customary distinctions are: a doctrine is “of divine faith” (de fide divina) if it belongs either expressly or implicitly to revelation. A doctrine is “of divine and Catholic faith” (de fide divina et catholica) if in addition it has also been formally presented for belief by the Church’s Magisterium. A proposition that is “close to the faith” (fidei proximum) is, in the unanimous opinion of the theologians, to be regarded as revealed truth and is held by the Church but without being presented as revealed. Another important qualification pertains to truths that, while not formally included in revelation, remain so closely tied to it that they are presented by the Magisterium as definitive truths.

Traditionally, one speaks here of a “truth of ecclesiastical faith” (de fide ecclesiastica). In addition, there are theological opinions that are qualified differently. In its use of theological censures and qualifications, the Magisterium is guided by the theological linguistic usage of each respective epoch.

3. Infallible Teaching

Infallible teaching, ascribed to the pope and the community of bishops, is not something that is wholly different from and opposed to non-infallible proclamation and teaching. Rather both belong closely together and are rooted in the gift of the Holy Spirit to the entire Church, which keeps the Church in the truth and prevents the general sense of the faith among the people of God from straying from the truth. The general sense of faith among the people of God is therefore described as indefectibilis, that is, as indefectible or immune from error. The Magisterium also participates in its own way in this divine gift granted to the entire Church. Infallible teaching forms the implicit apex, as it were, of authentic or official teaching. Infallible teaching in the form of the ordinary Magisterium is present whenever the bishops scattered across the globe proclaim something unanimously as a truth of faith. Consensus forms both the foundation for establishing certainty and the reliability of the truth. The infallible teaching of the extraordinary Magisterium is distinct from this. The First Vatican Council justified the necessity for such authority by the fact that in questions of faith and morals, “dangers”, even “damage”, can arise that necessitate a reliable decision about whether the relevant idea or the praxis in question either is in line with the gospel or distorts it. The First and Second Vatican Council provided a summary of every source and criterion by which the pope (and also universal councils and the community of bishops in a nonconciliar but formally collegial act) can ascertain agreement or nonagreement with the faith. It was thereby taught that there is a possibility in the Church for establishing an ultimate certainty of faith, whereby the universal Church can be preserved as one and remain faithful to her foundation. The promise of the Holy Spirit’s assistance forms the foundation for this.

When it is said of infallible definitions that they are irreformable in themselves and not because of the consent of the Church, this means that the propositions of the pope do not require the retroactive assent of the episcopacy in order to be binding any more than the definitions of a legitimate council require the assent of any additional authority in order for them to be binding. They are the final authorities, so that one cannot appeal such a decision to another authority. Through infallible doctrinal decisions, individual believers and the Church as the people of God are not deceived or led into error with respect to the gospel. This qualification does not mean, however, that the definitions in each case represent ideal, that is, absolutely perfect answers to the problems of faith and morals that at a later date cannot be taken up again, clarified, and amended. It is of course the case that all definitions are in need of interpretation. Their meaning is to be construed through their being placed within the comprehensive understanding of the faith and in the context of the tradition of the faith.

This possibility thus characterized for establishing the certainty of the faith does not in any case hold absolutely but only with regard to the content of the faith that is capable of being defined and thereby clearly delimited and internally coherent. The Church’s Magisterium could not define the truth of revelation in its totality. Here, too, the exceptional character of this form of teaching once again becomes apparent.

4. Dangers in the Use of “Denzinger”

Yves Congar, in a famous article,¹³ called attention to a series of dangers that can arise in a superficial, naïve, and thoughtless use of “Denzinger”:

- The succession of texts that are in themselves of widely differing importance can give the impression that it is a question of paragraphs in a code of law, where all are more or less the same.
- The idea can be fostered that there might be for all believers “a kind of unique superbeing . . . , the Magisterium, that watches over them, treats them like children, corrects, and determines what opinions may and may not be held”.¹⁴ The fact that there are many ways in which the faith can be protected and interpreted is overlooked. Tradition cites the Fathers as well as the liturgy, the great theologians, and so on. Magisterial documents represent merely one of the forms of this interpretation by which the faith is protected.

¹³ Yves Congar, “Über den rechten Gebrauch des ‘Denzinger’”, in Situation und Aufgabe der Theologie heute (Paderborn, 1971), 125–50.

¹⁴ Ibid., 141.

- It is necessary to guard against the idea that individual theological terms possess exactly the same meaning in each document. The range of meaning of one and the same word often varies considerably from one period of time to another. The terms sacramentum and dogma, for example, undergo important shifts of meaning.
- The selection of texts in previous editions of “Denzinger” severely relegated to the background the magisterial witnesses of particular and provincial synods and of individual bishops in favor of papal doctrinal documents. This creates an erroneous image of the ordinary Magisterium in the fullness of its forms.
- Finally, it is necessary to consider the overall context in which all definitions and declarations of a magisterial sort appear. They are an expression of faithful living and should promote a religious, spirit-filled life. Such texts, therefore, will be correctly understood and appropriated only when they are received, not as externally imposed, so-called “juridical” commandments, but, on the contrary, as witnesses of faith.

The appropriate theological use of “Denzinger” precisely does not lead to a sterile “Denzinger theology”. The latter represents, rather, a misuse of this collection of texts. The rich profit of “Denzinger” about which Congar speaks begins to flow forth for the one who deals with this collection in a genuinely theological way.

READING THE CRITICAL APPARATUS

Presentation of Textual Variants

If, in the variant reading, the text is amplified, the addition is placed between brackets (in roman type); if necessary, the source of the textual variation is first indicated in italic.

Example (see *23): “huius” is added:

carnis [LOMoz: huius] resurrectionem

If, in the variant reading, text is omitted, the omitted text is printed in italic in the primary text followed by the sign [-!].

Example (see *15 and 22): “a mortuis” is omitted:

tertia die resurrexit a mortuis [-!]

If, in the variant reading, the text is different, the text of the primary reading will be printed in italic where there is the variation, and the different version will follow in roman type within brackets.

Example (see *30): instead of “inferna”, one reads “inferos”:

descendit ad inferna [Cat Brv: inferos]

If, in the variant reading, the word order is different, the words to be inverted are printed in italic and designated with superscript numbers; the same numbers are then found in inverted order within brackets.

Example (see *6): “confitemur” and “credimus” are inverted:

¹*Confitemur* et ²*credimus* [²⁻¹]

An example in which three of the cases explained above appear together (see *22):

sepultus [est], tertia die a mortuis [-!] resurrexit, assumptus est in caelos [in caelum ascendit] ... =

Principal text:

Sepultus, tertia die a mortuis resurrexit, assumptus est in caelos ...

Comparative text:

Sepultus est, tertia die resurrexit,
In caelum ascendit ...

Numbering and Signs

| | |
|-----------------------|--|
| *1000 | = number that, in a reference within a text, indicates another text within this collection |
| 2400° | = introductory note placed before a document |
| 3000 ^{oo} | = introduction to a collection of texts preceding the first introductory note |
| *1531 ¹ | = footnote to the text numbered 1531 |
| 1//I, 49 | = manner of citing works that are composed of more than one part published separately (for example, tome, volume, part, number). The number following the comma indicates the page if not noted otherwise. |
| 116 _{1,5-17} | = indication of page and lines |
| 12a, 15b | = indication of page and column (left or right) |
| 17C | = page or column with indication of section |
| 60f. | = page or number indicated and that which follows |
| fol. 4r | = folio 4 recto |
| fol. 6v | = folio 6 verso |
| [241] | = indication of the page of the official edition of documents of the Apostolic See (ASS from 37 [1904 / 1905] and AAS from 1 [1909]) |

General Abbreviations

| | | | |
|----------|---|--------|---|
| A.D. | = Anno Domini (year) | Gr. | = Greek |
| al. | = alii (others) | hom. | = homily (homilia) |
| apost. | = apostolic | ibid. | = ibidem (in the same place) |
| app. | = appendix | id. | = idem (the same) |
| art. | = article (articulus) | instr. | = instruction (instructio) |
| ass. | = assertion (assertio) | l. | = liber / line (linea) |
| a.v. | = aliis verbi (in other words) | L. | = Latin |
| bk. | = book (liber) | l.c. | = loco citato (in the place cited) |
| c. | = capitulum, caput (chapter) | LXX | = Septuagint |
| ca. | = circa (around) | n. | = footnote |
| can. | = canon | n.b. | = nota bene (note well) |
| cf. | = confer, compare (conferatur, confer) | n.s. | = new series |
| chap. | = chapter (capitulum, caput) | no. | = number |
| cit. | = citatus, -i, etc. | nt. | = nota, adnotatio (note) |
| col. | = column | p. | = page (pagina); pars (part) |
| coll. | = collection (collige, collectio) | par. | = paragraph, parallel |
| concl. | = conclusion (conclusio) | pp. | = pages |
| Congr. | = Congregation | prop. | = proposition (propositio) |
| Const. | = Constitution | ps. | = pseudo |
| controv. | = controversy (controversia) | pt. | = part (pars) |
| coroll. | = corollary (corollarium) | q. | = question (quaestio) |
| cs. | = cause (causa) | qc. | = quaestiuncula (minor question) |
| ctm. | = certatem (contest) | r. | = recto (front side of the page) |
| dec. | = decision (decisio) | reg. | = registrum, regesta (record, list) |
| diffic. | = difficulty (difficultas) | resol. | = resolution (resolutio) |
| disp. | = disputation (disputatio) | resp. | = response (responsio) |
| disq. | = disquisition, discussion (disquisitio) | s. | = sequens (following) |
| dist. | = distinction (distinctio) | scil. | = scilicet (certainly, namely, in other words) |
| doc. | = document (documentum) | sec. | = section (sectio) |
| dogmat. | = dogmatic | Sept. | = Septuagint (also LXX) |
| dub. | = dubium (doubt, uncertainty) | sess. | = session |
| Ed./ed. | = edition(s), editor(s) | St. | = Saint |
| e.g. | = exempli gratia (for example) | suppl. | = supplement |
| encycl. | = encyclical | sys. | = systematic |
| ep. | = epistle (epistola / epistula) | theol. | = theological |
| et. al. | = et alii (and others) | tit. | = titulum (title, heading, inscription) |
| etc. | = et cetera | tract. | = tract (tractatus) |
| expos. | = exposition (expositio) | v. | = verso (back of a page or folio) |
| f. | = following (page or year) | v.g. | = verbi gratia (for example) |
| fasc. | = fasciculus (bundle, fascicle) | vatic. | = Vatican |
| ff. | = following (pages or years) | viz. | = videlicet (namely, plainly) |
| fol. | = folio (leaf) | vol. | = volume |
| fundam. | = fundamentum (foundation) | | |

Bibliographical Abbreviations

| | |
|----------|---|
| AAS | = Acta Apostolicae Sedis (Rome, 1909ff.) |
| AbhBayAk | = Abhandlungen der Bayerischen Akademie der Wissenschaften, Philosophisch-philologische und historische Klasse (Munich, 1835ff.) |
| ACColon | = Acta et Decreta Concilii Provinciae Coloniensis ... a. Dni. MDCCCLX ... celebrati (Cologne, 1862) |

- ACoe = Acta Conciliorum Oecumenicorum, edited by E. Schwartz (Strasbourg, 1914; Berlin and Leipzig, 1922–1940); 2nd series (Berlin, 1988ff.)
- AmER = The American Ecclesiastical Review (New York and Cincinnati, 1889–1905; 1943ff.)
- AnBoll = Analecta Bollandiana (Paris and Brussels, 1882ff.)
- AnE = Analecta Ecclesiastica (Rome, 1893–1911)
- AnIP = Analecta Iuris Pontificii (Rome, 1855–1891)
- Apoll = Apollinaris: Commentarius Iuris Canonici (Vatican, 1928ff.)
- ArchFrPr = Archivum Fratrum Praedicatorum (Rome, 1931ff.)
- ArchHDLMA = Archives d'histoire doctrinale et littéraire du moyen-âge (Paris, 1926ff.)
- ArchKKR = Archiv für Katholisches Kirchenrecht (Mainz, 1857ff.)
- ArchLKGMA = Archiv für Literatur- und Kirchengeschichte des Mittelalters (Berlin, 1885–1900)
- ArchTGran = Archivo Teológico Granadino (Granada, 1938ff.)
- ASS = Acta Sanctae Sedis (Rome, 1865–1908)
- ASyll = Acta Sancti Domini Nostri Pii IX., ex Quibus Excerptus Est Syllabus (Rome, 1865)
- ASyn = Acta Synodalia Sacrosancti Concilii Oecumenici Vaticani Secundi (Vatican, 1970–1980)
- BarAE = Annales Ecclesiastici a Christo Nato ad Annum 1198, edited by C. Baronius, O. Raynaldus, and I. Laderchius (Lucca, 1738ff.); edited by A. Theiner (Barri-Ducis, 1864ff.)
- BeitrGPhThMA = Beiträge zur Geschichte der Philosophie und Theologie des Mittelalters (Münster, 1891ff.)
- BekSchELK = Die Bekenntnisschriften der Evangelisch-Lutherischen Kirche, 6th ed. (Göttingen, 1967)
- BltLE = Bulletin de littérature ecclésiastique (Toulouse, 1899ff.)
- BoeW = J. F. Boehmer and C. Will, Regesta Archiepiscoporum Maguntinensium (Innsbruck, 1877ff.)
- Bruns = H. T. Bruns, Canones Apostolorum et Conciliorum Saec. IV–VII (Berlin, 1839)
- BullCocq = Bullarum, Privilegiorum ac Diplomatum Romanorum Pontificum Amplissima Collectio, edited by C. Cocquelines (Rome, 1739ff.)
- BullFr = Bullarium Franciscanum: Romanorum Pontificum Constitutiones, Epistolas ac Diplomata Continens, edited by J. H. Sbaralea and K. Eubel (Rome, 1759–1904; 1929–1949)
- BullLux = Magnum Bullarium Romanum (Luxemburg, 1727ff.)
- BullOP = Bullarium Ordinis Praedicatorum, edited by T. Ripoll and A. Brémond (Rome, 1729–1740)
- BullRCt = Bullarii Romani Continuatio (continuation of BullCocq), edited by A. Barbèri and R. Segreti (Rome, 1835ff.)
- BullTau = Bullarum, Diplomatum et Privilegiorum Romanorum Pontificum Tauriensis Editio, edited by G. Tomassetti et al. (Turin, 1857–1872)
- CaANQ = C. P. Caspari, Alte und neue Quellen zur Geschichte des Taufsymbols und der Glaubensregel (Christiania, 1879)
- CaKA = C. P. Caspari, Ungedruckte, unbeachtete ... Quellen zur Geschichte des Taufsymbols und der Glaubensregel (Christiania, 1866ff.)
- CaUQ = [alternate abbreviation for CaKA]
- CCEO = Codex Canonum Ecclesiarum Orientalium (Rome, 1990)
- CdICF = Codicis Iuris Canonici Fontes, edited by P. Gasparri and I. Serédi (Rome, 1923–1939)
- CdLuc = El Codice Lucense de la Colección Canónica Hispana, edited by C. García Goldáraz, pt. 1: Reconstrucción (Rome, 1954)
- CIC = Codex Iuris Canonici (Rome, 1917; 1983)
- CivCatt = La Civiltà Cattolica (Rome, 1850ff.)
- CIPL = Clavis Patrum Latinorum, edited by E. Dekkers. Sacris Erudiri: Jaarboek voor Godsdienstwetenschappen 3 (Steenbrugge, 1951; 2nd ed., 1961)
- CoDeDe = Constitutiones, Decreta, Declarationes, edited by the General Secretariat of the Second Vatican Council (Vatican, 1966)
- COeD = Conciliorum Oecumenicorum Decreta, edited by the Centro di Documentazione, Istituto per le Scienze Religiose, Bologna (Barcelona, Freiburg, and Rome, 2nd ed., 1962; 3rd ed., 1973)
- CollLac = Acta et Decreta Sacrorum Conciliorum Recentiorum: Collectio Lacensis (Freiburg, 1870–1890)
- CollPF = Collectanea S. Congregationis de Propaganda Fide, 2nd ed. (Rome, 1907)
- CouE = Epistolae Romanorum Pontificum a S. Clemente Usque ad Innocentium III, edited by P. Coustant (not completed; Paris, 1721)

| | |
|-----------|--|
| CpChL | = Corpus Christianorum, Series Latina (Turnholt, 1953ff.) |
| CpChL.CM | = Corpus Christianorum, Continuatio Medievalis (Turnholt, 1966ff.) |
| CpRef | = Corpus Reformatorum (Berlin, 1834ff.) |
| CSEL | = Corpus Scriptorum Ecclesiasticorum Latinorum (Vienna, 1866ff.) |
| CVis | = Concilios Visigóticos e Hispano-Romanos , edited by J. Vives (Barcelona and Madrid, 1963) |
| DALtg | = Dictionnaire d'archéologie chrétienne et liturgie (Paris, 1907–1953) |
| DenCh | = H. Denifle and E. Chatelain, Chartularium Universitatis Parisiensis (Paris, 1889ff.) |
| DivThomPl | = Divus Thomas: Commentarium de Philosophia et Theologia (Piacenza, 1880ff.) |
| DThC | = Dictionnaire de théologie catholique (Paris, 1903ff.) |
| DuPIA | = C. du Plessis d'Argentré, Collectio Iudiciorum de Novis Erroribus Qui ab Initio XII Saeculi ... Usque ad a. 1713 in Ecclesia Proscripti Sunt et Notati (Paris, 1728; 2nd ed., 1755) |
| EnchB | = Enchiridion Biblicum , edited by the Pontifical Biblical Commission, 4th ed. (Rome, 1961) |
| EngHR | = English Historical Review (London, 1886ff.) |
| EstEcl | = Estudios eclesiásticos (Madrid, 1922ff.) |
| ÉtFranc | = Études franciscaines (Paris, 1899ff.) |
| FIP | = Florilegium Patristicum (Bonn, 1904–1941) |
| Frdb | = Corpus Iuris Canonici , edited by E. L. Friedberg, 2nd ed. (Leipzig, 1879–1881) |
| FThSt | = Freiburger Theologische Studien (Freiburg, 1910ff.) |
| Funk | = F. X. Funk, Patres Apostolici (Tübingen, 1901ff.) |
| GChSch | = Die Griechischen Christlichen Schriftsteller der ersten drei Jahrhunderte (Berlin and Leipzig, 1897ff.) |
| Greg | = Gregorianum (Rome, 1920ff.) |
| Guibert | = J. de Guibert, Documenta Ecclesiastica Christianae Perfectionis Studium Spectantia (Rome, 1931) |
| HaC | = J. Hardouin, Acta Conciliorum et Epistolae Decretales ac Constitutiones Summorum Pontificum ab Anno 34 ad Annum 1714 (Paris, 1714–1715) |
| HJb | = Historisches Jahrbuch der Görres-Gesellschaft (Münster and Munich, 1880ff.) |
| Hn | = A. Hahn and G. L. Hahn, Bibliothek der Symbole und Glaubensregeln der Alten Kirche , 3rd ed. (Breslau, 1897) |
| Irénikon | = Irénikon (Amay sur Meuse and Chevetogne, 1926ff.) |
| JR | = P. Jaffé, Regesta Pontificum Romanorum , edited by S. Löwenfeld, F. Kaltenbrunner, and P. Ewald, 2nd ed. (Leipzig, 1885–1888) |
| JThSt | = The Journal of Theological Studies (Oxford and London, 1899ff.) |
| Karmiris | = J. N. Karmiris, Τὰ δογματικά καὶ συμβολικά μνημεῖα τῆς Ὀρθοδόξου Καθολικῆς Ἐκκλησίας , vol. 1 (Athens, 1952) |
| Katholik | = Der Katholik (Strasbourg and Mainz, 1821–1918) |
| Kelly | = J. N. D. Kelly, Early Christian Creeds , 3rd ed. (London and New York: Continuum, 2006) |
| KIT | = Kleine Texte für Vorlesungen und Übungen , edited by H. Lietzmann (Bonn, 1902ff.) |
| KüA | = K. Künstle, Antipriscilliana (Freiburg, 1905) |
| KüBS | = K. Künstle, Eine Bibliothek der Symbole und theologischer Traktate zur Bekämpfung des Priscillianismus (Mainz, 1900) |
| LQF | = Liturgiewissenschaftliche Quellen und Forschungen (Münster, 1957ff.) |
| Ltzm | = Symbole der Alten Kirche , selected by H. Lietzmann (KIT 17–18; 2nd ed., Bonn, 1914) |
| MaC | = Sacrorum Conciliorum Nova et Amplissima Collectio , edited by J. D. Mansi (Florence, 1759–1827; Paris and Leipzig, 1901–1927) |
| MGH | = Monumenta Germaniae Historica Inde ab Anno 500 Usque ad Annum 1500 (Hanover and Berlin, 1826ff.) |
| MigThC | = Theologiae Cursus Completus , edited by J.-P. Migne (Paris, 1838ff.) |
| NArch | = Neues Archiv der Gesellschaft für ältere deutsche Geschichtskunde zur Beförderung einer Gesamtausgabe der Quellen deutscher Geschichte des Mittelalters (Hanover, 1876–1936) |
| NGWGött | = Nachrichten der Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften in Göttingen (Berlin, 1884ff.) |
| NKD | = Nachkonziliare Dokumentation , edited by the Liturgischen Institut Trier (Trier, 1967–1977) |
| NvRTh | = Nouvelle revue théologique (Louvain, 1869–1940; 1945ff.) |

| | |
|------------|--|
| ÖstVJKTh | = Österreichische Vierteljahrsschrift für Katholische Theologie (Vienna, 1862–1874) |
| OrChrPer | = Orientalia Christiana Periodica (Rome, 1935ff.) |
| PerRMor | = Periodica de Re Morali, Canonica, Liturgica (Rome, 1903ff.) |
| PG | = Patrologiae Cursus Completus, Series Graeca , edited by J.-P. Migne (Paris, 1857ff.) |
| PL | = Patrologiae Cursus Completus, Series Latina , edited by J.-P. Migne (Paris, 1844ff.) |
| PoR | = A. Potthast, Regesta Pontificum Romanorum Inde ab Anno p. Christum 1198 ad Annum 1304 (Berlin, 1874ff.) |
| PTS | = Patristische Texte und Studien (Berlin and New York, 1964ff.) |
| RBén | = Revue bénédictine (Maredsous, 1884ff.) |
| RechScRel | = Recherches de science religieuse (Paris, 1910–1940; 1946ff.) |
| RechThAM | = Recherches de théologie ancienne et médiévale (Louvain, 1929–1940; 1946ff.) |
| RHE | = Revue d'histoire ecclésiastique (Louvain, 1900ff.) |
| RHLRel | = Revue d'histoire et de littérature religieuses (Paris, 1896–1907) |
| RHPhRel | = Revue d'histoire et de philosophie religieuses (Strasbourg and Paris, 1921ff.) |
| RiTr | = Canones et Decreta Concilii Tridentini ex Editione Romana a. MDCCCXXXIV Repetiti , edited by E. L. Richter (Leipzig, 1853) |
| RömQ | = Römische Quartalschrift für christliche Altertumskunde und für Kirchengeschichte (Rome and Freiburg, 1887ff.) |
| Routh | = M. J. Routh, Reliquiae Sacrae sive Auctorum Fere Iam Perditorum 2ⁱ et 3ⁱ Saeculi p. Christum Natum Quae Supersunt (Oxford, 1846ff.) |
| SbBayAK | = Sitzungsberichte der Bayerischen Akademie der Wissenschaften zu München, philosophisch-historische Klasse (Munich, 1860ff.) |
| SbWienAK | = Sitzungsberichte der Wiener Akademie der Wissenschaften, philosophisch-historische Klasse (Vienna, 1848ff.) |
| ScuolaCatt | = La Scuola Cattolica (Milan, 1873) |
| SGTr | = Concilium Tridentinum, Diariorum, Actorum, Epistularum, Tractatum Nova Collectio , edited by the Görres-Gesellschaft (Freiburg, 1901ff.) |
| SC | = Sources chrétiennes (Paris, 1941ff.) |
| ST | = Studi e Testi: Biblioteca Apostolica Vaticana (Vatican City, 1900ff.) |
| TD | = Textus et Documenta: Series Theologica (Rome, 1932ff.) |
| TheiTr | = Acta Genuina Sacrosancti Oecumenici Concilii Tridentini , edited by A. Theiner (Zagreb and Leipzig, 1874) |
| Thl | = A. Thiel, Epistolae Romanorum Pontificum ... A Sancto Hilario Usque ad Pelagium II (not completed; Braunsberg, 1868) |
| ThPrQ | = Theologisch-Praktische Quartalschrift (Linz, 1848ff.) |
| ThQ | = Theologische Quartalschrift (Tübingen, 1819ff.) |
| ThR | = Theologische Revue (Münster, 1902ff.) |
| TU | = Texte und Untersuchungen zur Geschichte der altchristlichen Literatur (Berlin and Leipzig, 1882ff.) |
| Turner | = Ecclesiae Occidentalis Monumenta Iuris Antiquissima: Canonum et Conciliorum Graecorum Interpretationes Latinae , edited by C. H. Turner (Oxford, 1899–1934) |
| VigChr | = Vigiliae Christianae: A Review of Early Christian Life and Language (Amsterdam, 1947ff.) |
| Viva | = D. Viva, Damnataram Thesium Theologica Trutina , parts 1–3 in one volume, 3rd ed. (Padua, 1711) |
| ZKG | = Zeitschrift für Kirchengeschichte (Gotha and Stuttgart, 1876ff.) |
| ZKTh | = Zeitschrift für Katholische Theologie (Innsbruck, 1877ff.) |
| ZNTW | = Zeitschrift für die Neutestamentliche Wissenschaft und die Kunde der älteren Kirche (Gießen, 1900ff.) |
| ZSavStKan | = Zeitschrift der Savigny-Stiftung für Rechtsgeschichte, Kanonistische Abteilung (Weimar, 1911–1944; 1947ff.) |

Part One

PROFESSIONS OF FAITH

The creeds (professions of faith) presented in this compendium are fixed verbal formulas. They contain the most important truths of the faith, were confirmed by ecclesiastical authorities, and, as a general rule, were destined for the public profession of the faith.

Not included in this collection are formulas cited by ecclesiastical writers only in a vague manner or those that never achieved a stable form or that were reconstructed in a merely hypothetical or uncertain way. Likewise excluded are purely private formulas.

Creeds that represent a solemn act of the Church's Magisterium and can be assigned a doctrinal character equal to other documents of this teaching authority are listed in the second part of the compendium among the "Documents of the Church's Magisterium". In addition, the time of their formulation is most often well known: these would be synodal professions of faith and those presented or accepted by popes.

Those professions of faith whose origins are obscure—since they were only gradually formulated in the life of the Church and used in the liturgy—cannot easily be included in the chronologically ordered part of the collection. It is, therefore, appropriate to bring these together in the same section. This offers the advantage of comparing more easily those documents that have a common origin or are related to each other.

SIMPLE PROFESSIONS

The following creeds are made up of a series of articles having the same order.

1: Letter of the Apostles (Ethiopian Version)

This is an apocryphal work written about 160–170 in Asia Minor; only its Ethiopian version has been preserved. The title hidden in the text was discovered by C. Schmidt; previously it had been mistakenly held to be a part of the Testamentum in Galilaea Domini Nostri Iesu Christi, another apocryphal work.

Ed.: C. Schmidt and I. Wajenberg, Gespräche Jesu mit seinen Jüngern nach der Auferstehung: Ein katholisch-apostolisches Sendschreiben des 2. Jahrhunderts, chap. 5, TU 43/III (Leipzig, 1919), 32 / L. Guerrier, Le Testament en Galilée de Notre Seigneur Jésus-Christ, chap. 16, Patrologia Orientalis 9 (Paris, 1913), 192. [Later additions are in brackets.]

[The five loaves of the miracle recounted in Mark 6:39 are explained allegorically as a profession of faith in five articles:]

| | | |
|--|---|---|
| in Patrem dominatorem universi, | in the Father, Lord of the universe, | 1 |
| et in Iesum Christum [salvatorem nostrum], | and in Jesus Christ [our Savior], | |
| et in Sanctum Spiritum [Paraclitum], | and in the Holy Spirit [the Paraclete], | |
| et in sanctam Ecclesiam, | and in the holy Church, | |
| et in remissionem peccatorum. | and in the forgiveness of sins. | |

2: Liturgical Papyrus Dêr-Balyzeh

This is a fragment from the sixth century found in Upper Egypt that contains the liturgy of the middle of the fourth century; the creed contained in it seems, however, to be much older. The lacuna in the text at the words ΑΝΑΣΤΑΣΙ ... ΑΓΙΑ is completed by some thus: ἀνάστασι[ν, καὶ] ἀγία καθολικὴ ἐκκλησίᾳ. In place of this difficult reading, the reconstruction proposed by J. A. Jungmann (ZKTh 48 [1924]: 465–71) and accepted by C. H. Roberts is to be preferred: ἀνάστασι[ν ἐν τῇ]... Cf. similar constructions at *3f., 60, 62.

Ed.: C. H. Roberts and B. Capelle, An Early Euchologion: The Dêr-Balyzeh Papyrus Enlarged and Re-edited, Bibliothèque du Muséon 23 (Louvain, 1949), 32; photographic reproductions, table 6 / P. de Puniet, in RBén 26 (1909): 42 / DALtg 2/II (1925), 1884 / Kelly 89 / Ltzm 26.

| | | |
|---|--|---|
| Πιστεῦν εἰς Θεὸν πατέρα παντοκράτορα | I believe in God the Father almighty | 2 |
| καὶ εἰς τὸν μονογενῆ αὐτοῦ υἱὸν τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν | and in his only begotten Son, our Lord Jesus Christ, | |
| Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν | | |
| καὶ εἰς τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον | and in the Holy Spirit | |
| καὶ εἰς σαρκὸς ἀνάστασι[ν | and in the resurrection of the flesh, | |
| ἐν τῇ] ἀγία καθολικῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ. | [in the] holy catholic Church. | |

3-5: Constitutions of the Egyptian Church, ca. 500

These may be traced back to the Traditio apostolica of Hippolytus of Rome (cf. *10), and we have versions of them in Coptic (Sahidic and Boharic), Ethiopian, and Arabic. Of these, the Sahidic is the closest to the original Greek text of Hippolytus. In these versions may be found many professions of faith both in a simple form (*3–5) and in a more developed form (*62f.).

Ed.: W. Till and J. Leipoldt, Der koptische Text der Kirchenordnung Hippolyts, chap. 46, 11, TU 58 (Berlin, 1954), 21; H. Duensing, Der äthiopische Text der Kirchenordnung Hippolyts, chaps. 34, 39, Abhandlungen der Akademie der Wissenschaften in Göttingen, Philologisch-historische Klasse, 3rd series, no. 32 (Göttingen, 1946), 75, 111; F. X. Funk, Didascalia et Constitutiones Apostolorum 2: Testimonia et Scripturae propinqua: Constitutiones Ecclesiae Aegyptiacae, chap. 16, 14 (Paderborn, 1906), 110. The Latin text of *3–5 is a translation of the German edition of Till and Duensing; the Greek terms preserved in the Coptic text are placed in brackets.

a. Coptic Version: Baptismal Creed

- 3 Credo (πιστεύειν) in Deum unum verum, Patrem omnipotentem (παντοκράτωρ), et in Filium eius unigenitum (μονογενῆς) Iesum Christum (Χριστός) Dominum et salvatorem (σωτήρ) nostrum, et in Sanctum eius Spiritum (πνεῦμα) [omnia] vivificantem, trinitatem (τριάς) consubstantialiē (ὁμοούσιος), deitatem unam, potestatem unam, regnum unum, fidem (πίστις) unam, baptismum (βάπτισμα) unum [cf. Eph 4:5] in sancta Ecclesia (ἐκκλησία) catholica (καθολική) apostolica (ἀποστολική), in vitam aeternam. Amen.
- I believe in one true God, the Father almighty, and in his only begotten Son, Jesus Christ, our Lord and Savior, and in his Holy Spirit, who gives life to all things, the consubstantial Trinity, one Godhead, one power, one kingdom, one faith, one baptism [cf. Eph 4:5] in the holy, catholic, apostolic Church, in life everlasting. Amen.

b. Ethiopian Version: Interrogatory Form

- 4 Credis in unum Deum, Patrem omnipotentem, et in Filium eius unicum Iesum Christum, Dominum et salvatorem nostrum, et in Spiritum Sanctum vivificantem universam creaturam, Trinitatem deitate aequalem, et unum Dominum, unum regnum, unam fidem, unum baptismum [cf. Eph 4:5] in sancta catholica Ecclesia, et vitam aeternam?
- Do you believe in one God, the Father almighty, and in his only Son, Jesus Christ, our Lord and Savior, and in the Holy Spirit, who gives life to all creation, the Trinity equal in divinity, and in one Lord, one kingdom, one faith, one baptism [cf. Eph 4:5] in the holy catholic Church, and in life everlasting?

c. Ethiopian Version: Declaratory Form

- 5 Credo in unum Deum Patrem, omnium dominatorem, et in unum Filium, Dominum Iesum Christum, et in Sanctum Spiritum, et in resurrectionem carnis, et in sanctam unam catholicam Ecclesiam.
- I believe in one God, the Father, the Lord of all, and in one Son, the Lord Jesus Christ, and in the Holy Spirit, and in the resurrection of the flesh, and in one holy catholic Church.

6: Baptismal Creed (Short Version) of the Armenian Church

Ed.: A. Ter-Mikelian, Die armenische Kirche in ihren Beziehungen zur byzantinischen vom 4. zum 13. Jahrhundert (Leipzig, 1892), 27 (German translation, which is the basis of the Latin text given here). A text (Latin) in some places at variance [here given for purposes of comparison in brackets] is given by I. A. Assemani, Codex liturgicus Ecclesiae universae (Rome, 1749; republished Paris and Leipzig, 1902), 2:203f. / Hn § 136. See the great creed of the Armenian Church at *48f.

- 6 Credimus in sanctissimam Trinitatem, in Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum, in annuntiationem Gabrielis, [in conceptionem Mariae,] in nativitatem Christi, in baptismum, [in festivitatem (?),] in passionem [voluntariam], in crucifixionem, triduanam sepulturam, [beatam] resurrectionem, in deiformam ascensionem, in sessionem ad dexteram Patris, in terribilem [et gloriosum] adventum—
- We believe in the most Holy Trinity, in the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, and in the annunciation of Gabriel, [in the conception of Mary,] in the birth of Christ, in baptism, [in the feast (?),] in the [voluntary] Passion, in the crucifixion, the three-day burial, the [blessed] Resurrection, in the divine Ascension, in the sitting at the right hand of the Father, in the terrible [and glorious] coming—
- ¹*confitemur* et ²*credimus* [²⁻¹]. we profess and believe [we believe and profess].

COMPOSITE PROFESSIONS

I. Tripartate Trinitarian Schema

The grammatical structure of the creeds of this schema corresponds to the threefold baptismal question in regard to faith in the triune God. It is made up of three principal parts in reference to each of the Divine Persons. It is difficult to determine the classification of the articles that express faith in the Church, the remission of sins, the resurrection, etc. For the most part, these are joined to the article on the Holy Spirit in such a way that the truths they express could be understood as connected to the Holy Spirit. Such an explanation, though, does not take into account historical development. As was clearly seen in the primitive professions, these articles first had their own place, which was associated with the articles about the three Divine Persons. After the trinitarian sections had been developed and amplified, this original association was obscured or suppressed. From a historical perspective, it is, therefore, better to consider these passages as “appendices” or “conclusions” of a tripartate creed; nevertheless, the text of the creed is recorded here as the grammatical structure requires.

A. WESTERN FORMULAS

THE APOSTLES' CREED

By this name is designated a specific formula of the faith that for many centuries was thought to have been composed by the apostles themselves and, therefore, enjoyed the highest esteem. The earliest traces of this opinion are found in the late fourth century: cf. the letter of the Synod of Milan (presided over by St. Ambrose) sent to Pope Siricius in 390, in which mention is made, for the first time, of “the Creed of the Apostles” (PL 16:1174); Explanatio symboli of St. Ambrose (ed. by O. Faller: CSEL 73:10f. / B. Botte: SC 25bis, 2nd ed. [Paris, 1961], 46–48, 54 / PL 17:1093, 1096); Rufinus of Aquileia, Expositio in Symbolum 2, written ca. 404 (ed. by M. Simonetti: CpChL 20 [1961]: 134 / PL 21:337). According to the legend, each one of the apostles contributed one article to the creed; cf., e.g., the texts of PL 39:2189 (= Pseudo-Augustine, Sermo 240 [De symbolo]); 89:1034CD; Hn §§ 42f., 66, (III) 92, 99; Hn, n. 87 to § 42; C. F. Bühler: Speculum 28 (Cambridge, Mass., 1953): 335–39. This opinion began to yield to critical arguments in the fifteenth century. The most ancient version of the Apostles' Creed known to us can be dated no earlier than the last decades of the second century.

The creed developed in two forms: the older Roman form (designated by “R”) originated in Rome and was passed on in Greek as well as Latin. The more recent form is the more generally received text (“T”), and it was probably formed around the seventh century in southern Gaul and later introduced into Rome. Afterward, the rest of the Latin Church also adopted the “T” form. The publication of the Roman Catechism (1566) and the Roman Breviary (1568) put an end to the development.

Rome, early third century (parallel or relative to “R”)

10: Hippolytus of Rome: Traditio apostolica (Latin Version)

Hippolytus of Rome (priest, antipope 217–235) wrote in 215 or 217 the work entitled Ἀποστολικὴ παράδοσις (Traditio apostolica). The original Greek text has been lost; however, there are collections of oriental canons in which the work is partially contained, even if more or less amplified or mutilated: the Constitutions of the Egyptian Church, the Canones Hippolyti, the Constitutiones Apostolorum VIII, and the Testamentum Domini Nostri Iesu Christi (cf. *3–5, 62–64, 60f.). In the West, there is only one Latin version, which is conserved in a fragmentary but credible manner in the Veronese Palimpsest LV 53 (ca. 400). The profession of faith included there has an interrogatory form, which is more ancient than the declamatory form. The gaps in the first part can be filled in by the Canones Hippolyti (*64). This form cannot have derived from the older Roman version as it is known to us (*11f.), but it may perhaps come from a common preceding source.

Ed.: E. Hauler, Didascaliae Apostolorum fragmenta Veronensia latina (Leipzig, 1900), 110f. (fragment LXXIII) / B. Botte, La Tradition apostolique de saint Hippolyte: Essai de reconstruction (Münster, 1963), 48, 50 / SC 11bis, 2nd ed. (Paris, 1984), 84–86 / Kelly 91 / Ltzm 10f.

[Credis in Deum Patrem omnipotentem?]

Credis in Christum Iesum, Filium Dei, qui natus est de Spiritu Sancto ex Maria virgine, et crucifixus sub Pontio Pilato et mortuus est et sepultus, et resurrexit die tertia vivus a mortuis, et ascendit in caelis et sedit ad dexteram Patris, venturus iudicare vivos et mortuos?

Credis in Spiritu Sancto, et sanctam Ecclesiam et carnis resurrectionem?

[Do you believe in God, the Father almighty?]

Do you believe in Jesus Christ, the Son of God, who was born of the Holy Spirit from the Virgin Mary, and was crucified under Pontius Pilate and died and was buried, and rose again on the third day, alive from the dead, and who ascended into heaven and sits at the right hand of the Father and shall come to judge the living and the dead?

Do you believe in the Holy Spirit and the holy Church and the resurrection of the flesh?

10

Rome, third century (the older Roman form = “R”)

11: Psalter of King Aethelstan

This is a monastic liturgical book from the beginning of the ninth century, which, at the end of the psalter, gives a profession of faith in Greek transcribed in Anglo-Saxon letters. This creed is among the most ancient forms of type “R”.

Ed.: Hn § 18 / Ltzm 10 / CaUQ 3:5.

Text for comparison [variants in brackets]:

Marcellus, Bishop of Ancyra (Galatia / Asia Minor), appealed ca. 340 to the pope in order to defend himself against the charge of heresy. In his letter to Julius I, he inserted the baptismal creed of the pope himself.

Ed.: In Epiphanius of Salamis, Contra haereses panaria, haer. 72, 3, 1: by K. Holl (GChSch) 3:258 / F. Oehler 2/I (Berlin, 1861), 52 / PG 42:385D / E. Klostermann, Die Fragmente Marcellis (GChSch: Eusebius 4 [Leipzig, 1906], appendix), 215¹⁹⁻²⁴ (fragment 129) / Kelly 103 / Hn § 17. The word πατέρα (father) seems to have been omitted by an oversight and the mention of ζῶντων αἰώνων (life everlasting) added through contamination with the oriental version (cf. *40–55).

- | | |
|---|---|
| 11 Πιστεύω εἰς Θεὸν πατέρα [-!] παντοκράτορα· καὶ εἰς Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν, τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ τὸν μονογενῆ, τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν, τὸν γεννηθέντα ἐκ πνεύματος ἁγίου καὶ Μαρίας τῆς παρθένου, τὸν ἐπὶ Ποντίου Πιλάτου σταυρωθέντα καὶ ταφέντα, καὶ τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ ἀναστάντα ἐκ τῶν νεκρῶν, ἀναβάντα εἰς τοὺς οὐρανοὺς, καὶ καθήμενον ἐν δεξιᾷ τοῦ πατρὸς, ὃθεν ἔρχεται κρῖναι [κρίνειν] ζῶντας καὶ νεκρούς· καὶ εἰς πνεῦμα ἅγιον [τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα], ἁγίαν ἐκκλησίαν, ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν, σαρκὸς ἀνάστασιν [, ζῶντων αἰώνων]. | I believe in God, the Father, [-!] the almighty, and in Christ Jesus, his only begotten Son, our Lord, born of the Holy Spirit and the Virgin Mary, crucified under Pontius Pilate and buried, and on the third day he rose from the dead, ascended into heaven, and is seated at the right hand of the Father, whence he comes to judge the living and the dead; and in the Holy Spirit, the holy Church, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the flesh [, life everlasting]. |
|---|---|

12: Codex Laudianus

The Codex Laudianus Greek 35 (sixth or seventh century), known as Codex “E” of the Acts of the Apostles, contains at the end (fol. 226v) a profession of faith in Latin of form “R”.

Ed.: Hn § 20 / CaUQ 3:5 / Kelly 102 / cf. Ltzm 10.

Text for comparison:

The Codex Swainson (eighth century) contains a Latin creed only slightly more recent [see text in brackets].

Ed.: C. Swainson, The Nicene and Apostles' Creeds (London, 1875), 161 / Hn § 23.

Tyrannius Rufinus in his Commentarius in Symbolum Apostolorum (written ca. 404) notes certain differences between the Roman version and that from Aquileia: M. Simonetti: CpChL 20 (1961): 140, 152, 177 / PL 21:344AB, 356A, 381A. The precise version of the Roman creed cannot, however, be established.

- | | |
|---|---|
| 12 Credo in Deum Patrem omnipotentem, et in Christo Iesu [Iesum Christum], Filium eius unicum, Dominum nostrum, qui natus est de Spiritu Sancto et Maria virgine, qui sub Pontio Pilato crucifixus est et sepultus, tertia die resurrexit a mortuis, ascendit in caelis [caelos], sedet [sedit] ad dextera[m] Patris, unde [inde] venturus est iudicare vivos et [ac] mortuos; et in Spiritu Sancto [Sp'um S'um], sancta[m] Ecclesia[m] catholicam], remissione[m] peccatorum, carnis resurrectionis [resurrectionem]. | I believe in God, the Father almighty, and in Christ Jesus [Jesus Christ], his only Son, our Lord, who was born of the Holy Spirit and the Virgin Mary, who was crucified under Pontius Pilate and buried, on the third day rose from the dead, ascended into heaven, sits [sat] at the right hand of the Father, whence [thence] he shall come to judge the living and the dead; and in the Holy Spirit, the holy Catholic Church, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the flesh. |
|---|---|

Milan, end of fourth century (form “R” changed)

13: Ambrose, Bishop of Milan: Explanatio Symboli

This Explanatio was probably written down by a scribe following the words of St. Ambrose (d. 397). The author’s assertion that he is bringing back the Roman creed (chap. 7, Faller ed., 10) should not be taken too narrowly. It is intended only as a reporting of its contents.

Ed.: O. Faller: CSEL 73 (1955): 19*: a recomposition of the creed, which is dispersed throughout the whole text. / B. Botte: SC 25bis, 3rd ed. (1980), 46–58 / PL 17:1193–96 / Kelly 173 / CaUQ 2:50–58 / CaANQ 201f., 213–22.

| | | |
|--|---|-----------|
| Credo in Deum Patrem omnipotentem, et in Iesum Christum, Filium eius unicum, Dominum nostrum, qui natus de Spiritu Sancto ex Maria virgine, sub Pontio Pilato passus, mortuus et sepultus, tertia die resurrexit a mortuis, ascendit ad caelos, sedet ad dexteram Patris, unde venturus est iudicare vivos et mortuos; et in Spiritum Sanctum, sanctam Ecclesiam, remissionem peccatorum, carnis resurrectionem. | I believe in God, the Father almighty, and in Jesus Christ, his only Son, our Lord, who was born of the Virgin Mary by the Holy Spirit, who suffered under Pontius Pilate, died and was buried. On the third day he rose again from the dead. He ascended into heaven, and is seated at the right hand of the Father, wherefrom he shall come to judge the living and the dead; and in the Holy Spirit, the holy Church, the forgiveness of sins, and the resurrection of the flesh. | 13 |
|--|---|-----------|

14: Augustine: Sermon 213 (= Sermo Guelferbytanus 1) on the Handing on of the Creed

St. Aurelius Augustine, Bishop of Hippo (396–430), gives professions of faith of different types. Sermons 212–14, while presented in Hippo, give the Milanese form; sermon 215 (*21), the form typical of Hippo. Sermon 214, dating from 391 or 392, is the oldest. In the Liber de Fide et Symbolo (CSEL 41:3–32 / PL 40 [1887]: 181–96), Augustine does not give the exact form of the creed, as he himself indicates in the Retractationes I, 16 (others 17), no. 1 (A. Mutzenbecher: CpChL 57 [1984]: 52₆₋₈ / CSEL 36:84₇₋₉ / PL 32:612). Sermon 213, which according to its oldest manuscript is also called Sermo Guelferbytanus, is here taken as the principal text, while the variants of sermons 212 and 214 are noted [in brackets].

Ed.: [Sermon 213]: G. Morin, in Miscellanea Agostiniana 1 (Rome, 1930), 441–50 / CaANQ 223–49. —[Sermons 212–14]: PL 38:1058–72 / Kelly 173 / Hn § 33 / Ltzm 11.

| | | |
|---|--|-----------|
| Credo in Deum Patrem omnipotentem, et in Iesum Christum, Filium eius unicum, Dominum nostrum, qui natus est de Spiritu Sancto et ¹virgine ²Maria [212, 214:²⁻¹], [212, 214: passus est] sub Pontio Pilato [,] crucifixus [212: est] et sepultus, tertia die [212: die tertio; 214: tertio die] resurrexit a mortuis, ascendit in caelum, sedet ad dexteram Patris, inde venturus [212, 214: est] iudicaturus [212, 214: iudicare] vivos et mortuos; et in Spiritum Sanctum, in [212, 214: -!] sanctam Ecclesiam, remissionem peccatorum, carnis resurrectionem. | I believe in God, the Father almighty, and in Jesus Christ, his only Son, our Lord, who was born of the Holy Spirit and the Virgin Mary [212, 214: Mary the virgin], [212, 214: suffered] under Pontius Pilate [,] was crucified and buried, on the third day rose from the dead, ascended into heaven, sits at the right hand of the Father, thence will come to judge the living and the dead; and in the Holy Spirit, in [212, 214: -!] the holy Church, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the flesh. | 14 |
|---|--|-----------|

Ravenna, fifth century (form “R” changed)

15: Peter Chrysologus: Sermons 57–62

In sermons 57–62 of Peter Chrysologus, Bishop of Ravenna (433–458), the whole creed has been transmitted. Nevertheless, minor variations are to be found.

Ed.: A. Olivar: CpChL 24 (1975): 314–55, 312 / PL 52:357–75 / Kelly 174 / Hn § 35 / Ltzm 12.

| | | |
|---|---|-----------|
| Credo in Deum Patrem omnipotentem, et in Christum Iesum, Filium eius unicum, Dominum nostrum, qui natus est de Spiritu Sancto ex Maria virgine, qui sub Pontio Pilato crucifixus est et sepultus, tertia die resurrexit a mortuis [58, 60, 61: -!], ascendit in caelos [62: caelis], sedet ad dexteram Patris, inde venturus est iudicare vivos et mortuos. Credo [60: Credimus] in Spiritum Sanctum, sanctam Ecclesiam [62: catholicam], remissionem peccatorum, carnis resurrectionem, vitam aeternam [61: -!]. | I believe in God, the Father almighty, and in Christ Jesus, his only Son, our Lord, who was born of the Holy Spirit from the Virgin Mary, who was crucified under Pontius Pilate and buried, on the third day rose from the dead [58, 60, 61: -!], ascended into heaven, sits at the right hand of the Father, thence will come to judge the living and the dead. I [60: We] believe in the Holy Spirit, the holy [62: catholic] Church, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the flesh, life everlasting [61: -!]. | 15 |
|---|---|-----------|

Aquileia, end of fourth century (form “R” changed)

16: Tyrannius Rufinus: Expositio (or Commentarius) in symbolum

The author wrote around 404. In the exposition of the creed of his native region of Aquileia, he provides, at the same time, an explanation for the few places in which it differs from the Roman. The formula of the descent into hell, until then common only among the Semiarians, appears here for the first time in a non-Arian creed.

Ed.: M. Simonetti: CpChL 20 (1961):133–82 / PL 21:335–81 / Kelly 174 / Hn § 36 / Ltzm 12.

- | | |
|---|---|
| 16 Credo in Deo Patre omnipotente invisibili et impassibili, et in Christo Iesu, unico Filio eius, Domino nostro, qui natus est de Spiritu Sancto ex Maria virgine, crucifixus sub Pontio Pilato et sepultus, descendit ad inferna, tertia die resurrexit a mortuis, ascendit ad caelos, sedet ad dexteram Patris, inde venturus est iudicare vivos et mortuos; et in Spiritu Sancto, sanctam Ecclesiam, remissionem peccatorum, huius carnis resurrectionem. | I believe in God, the Father almighty, invisible and impassible, and in Jesus Christ, his only Son, our Lord, who was born of the Virgin Mary by the Holy Spirit, was crucified under Pontius Pilate and was buried. He descended into hell. On the third day he rose again from the dead. He ascended into heaven, and is seated at the right hand of the Father. From there he shall come to judge the living and the dead. And in the Holy Spirit, the holy Church, the forgiveness of sins, and the resurrection of the flesh. |
|---|---|

Florence, seventh century (form “R” changed)

17: Florentine Missal and Sacramentary

This work originates from the seventh century and contains a treatise on the creed.

Ed.: CaANQ 295–304 / Hn § 39. —Reg.: CIPL 1751.

- | | |
|--|--|
| 17 Credo in Deum Patrem omnipotentem, et in Iesum Christum, Filium eius unicum, Dominum nostrum, natum de Spiritu Sancto et Maria virgine, sub Pontio Pilato crucifixus est et sepultus, tertia die resurrexit a mortuis, ascendit in caelum, sedet ad dexteram Patris, inde venturus est iudicare vivos et mortuos; et in Spiritu Sancto, in sanctam Ecclesiam, in remissionem peccatorum, carnis resurrectionem. | I believe in God, the Father almighty, and in Jesus Christ, his only Son, our Lord, born of the Holy Spirit and the Virgin Mary, he was crucified under Pontius Pilate and buried, on the third day he rose from the dead, ascended into heaven, sits at the right hand of the Father, thence he will come to judge the living and the dead; and in the Holy Spirit, in the holy Church, in the forgiveness of sins, in the resurrection of the flesh. |
|--|--|

Moesia or Dacia, fourth century (form “R” amplified)

19: Nicetas, Bishop of Remesiana: Explanation of the Creed

This explanation is found in book 5 of the fragmentary work Competentibus ad baptismum instructionis libelli VI, which in the past was attributed to Nicetas, Bishop of Aquileia, but now to Nicetas, Bishop of Remesiana (in Moesia Superior, d. after 414).

Ed.: A. E. Burn, Niceta of Remesiana: His Life and Works (Cambridge, 1905), 39–49 / CaKA 341–60 / PL 52:865–74 / Kelly 175 / Hn § 40.

- | | |
|---|--|
| 19 Credo in Deum Patrem omnipotentem [, caeli et terrae creatorem], et in Filium eius Iesum Christum [Dominum nostrum (?)], natum ex Spiritu Sancto et ex virgine Maria, passum sub Pontio Pilato, crucifixum, mortuum, tertia die resurrexit vivus a mortuis, ascendit in caelos, sedet ad dexteram Patris, inde venturus iudicare vivos et mortuos, | I believe in God, the Father almighty [, creator of heaven and earth], and in his Son, Jesus Christ [our Lord (?)], born of the Holy Spirit and the Virgin Mary, suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, died, on the third day rose alive from the dead, ascended into heaven, sits at the right hand of the Father, thence will come to judge the living and the dead, | et in Spiritum Sanctum, sanctam Ecclesiam catholicam, communionem sanctorum, remissionem peccatorum, carnis resurrectionem et vitam aeternam. and in the Holy Spirit, the holy catholic Church, the communion of saints, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the flesh and life everlasting.
|---|--|

Africa, fifth or sixth century (form "R" changed)

21: Augustine: Sermon 215 on the Recitation of the Creed

This version was very probably in use at Hippo Regius, the episcopal see of St. Augustine (cf. *14).

Ed.: PL 38:1072–76 / Kelly 176 / Hn § 47 / Ltzm 13.

| | |
|---|---|
| Credimus in Deum Patrem omnipotentem, universorum creatorem, regem saeculorum, immortalem et invisibilem. | We believe in God, the Father almighty, creator of all things, king of the ages, immortal and invisible. 21 |
| Credimus et in Filium eius Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum natum de Spiritu Sancto ex virgine Maria, crucifixus sub Pontio Pilato, mortuus et sepultus est, tertia die resurrexit a mortuis, ascendit ad caelos, sedet ad dexteram Dei Patris, inde venturus est iudicare vivos et mortuos. | And we believe in his Son, our Lord Jesus Christ, born of the Holy Spirit from the Virgin Mary, crucified under Pontius Pilate, died and was buried, on the third day he rose from the dead, ascended to heaven, sits at the right hand of God the Father, thence he shall come to judge the living and the dead. |
| Credimus et in Spiritum Sanctum, remissionem peccatorum, resurrectionem carnis, vitam aeternam per sanctam Ecclesiam catholicam. | And we believe in the Holy Spirit, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the flesh, and life everlasting through the holy catholic Church. |

22: Pseudo-Augustine [Quodvultdeus of Carthage]: Sermons on the Creed

The African version was reconstructed by G. Morin (see below) on the basis of four pseudo-Augustinian sermons (PL 40:637–52, 651–60, 659–68; 42:1117–30; cf. R. Braun: CpChL 60 [1976]: 305–63), attributed by him to Quodvultdeus, Bishop of Carthage (437–ca. 453).

Ed.: G. Morin: RBén 31(1914): 156–62; 35 (1923): 233–45.

Text for comparison [variants in brackets]: Fulgentius, Bishop of Ruspe (d. 523). His creed can be deduced from the Libri X contra Fabianum Arianum, fragment 36 (cf. also fragment 32: CpChL 91A:831f., and De fide, 20: ibid., 751 / PL 65:699C).

Ed.: J. Fraipont: CpChL 91A (1968): 854–60 / PL 65:822–27 / CaUQ 2:245–53 / Kelly 176 / Hn § 49. [Variants of less importance are not considered, since the text is not sufficiently certain.]

| | |
|---|--|
| Credo in Deum Patrem omnipotentem, universorum creatorem, regem saeculorum, immortalem et invisibilem. | I believe in God, the Father almighty, creator of all things, king of the ages, immortal and invisible. 22 |
| Credo et in Filium eius [-!] Iesum Christum [, Filium eius unicum, Dominum nostrum], qui natus est de Spiritu Sancto ex virgine Maria, [qui] crucifixus est [-!] sub Pontio Pilato et sepultus [est], tertia die a mortuis [-! (?)] resurrexit, assumptus est in caelos [in caelum ascendit], et ad dexteram Patris sedet [in dextera Dei sedit], inde venturus est iudicare vivos et mortuos. | I believe in his Son [-!] Jesus Christ [, his only Son, our Lord], who was born of the Holy Spirit from the Virgin Mary, [who] was [-!] crucified under Pontius Pilate and [was] buried, on the third day rose from the dead [-! (?)], was assumed into heaven [ascended into heaven], and sits at the right hand of the Father [sat at the right hand of God], thence he will come to judge the living and the dead. |
| Credo et in Spiritum Sanctum, remissionem peccatorum, carnis resurrectionem [et] in [-!] vitam aeternam per sanctam Ecclesiam. | I believe in the Holy Spirit, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the flesh [and] in [-!] life everlasting through the holy Church. |

Spain, sixth or seventh century (form between "R" and "T")

23: Ildefonsus of Toledo: De cognitione baptismi

The creed of Archbishop Ildefonsus of Toledo (659–669) is taken from chaps. 36–83 of the work cited.

Ed.: PL 96:126–42 / Kelly 177 / Hn § 55 / Ltzm 13f. (combination).

Text for comparison [variants in brackets preceded by the abbreviations]:

Martin of Braga (Portugal) [= MBr], abbot and bishop (d. 579), wrote between 572 and 574 a sermon that was entitled by the first editor De correctione rusticorum but in some manuscripts has the more appropriate title Epistula ad Polemium episcopum Asturicensem.

Ed.: C. W. Barlow, Martini episcopi Bracaraensis Opera omnia (New Haven, 1950), 166f., 196f. / C. P. Caspari, M. v. Bracaras Schrift De correctione rusticorum (Christiania, 1883), 26–28 / Hn § 54.

Liber ordinum mozarabicus [= LOMoz] (seventh century).

Ed.: M. Férotin, Le Liber Ordinum en usage dans l'Église wisigothique et mozarabe d'Espagne du V^e au XI^e siècle, Monumenta Ecclesiae Liturgica 5 (Paris, 1904), 185f. / Kelly 177–78 / DALtg 12/I (1935), 447. —Reg.: CIPL 1930. —The text of the creed in the Missale mixtum mozarabicum (PL 85:395A; Hn § 58; Ltzm 14), which in many points differs from the other Spanish versions, is here not taken into consideration.

Etherius (Hetherius), Bishop of Osma, and his teacher, the priest Beatus of Astorga, composed in 785 the work Adversus Elipandum archiepiscopum Toletanum libri II [= Eth]; the exact form of the creed is to be found in bk. 1, chap. 22.

Ed.: PL 96:906D / Hn § 56.

- 23 Credo [MBr: Credis...?] in Deum Patrem omnipotentem, et in Iesum Christum, Filium eius unicum, Deum et Dominum nostrum, qui natus est de Spiritu Sancto et [MBr: ex] Maria virgine, passus sub Pontio Pilato, crucifixus et sepultus, descendit ad inferna, tertia die resurrexit vivus a mortuis, ascendit in caelos, sedet ad dexteram Dei Patris omnipotentis [MBr: Patris], inde venturus [LOMoz: est] iudicare vivos et mortuos.
- Credo* [MBr: Credis...?] in ¹*Sanctum* ²*Spiritum* [MBr Eth:²⁻¹], sanctam Ecclesiam catholicam, remissionem omnium peccatorum, carnis [LOMoz: huius] resurrectionem et vitam aeternam.
- I* [MBr: Do you...?] believe in God, the Father almighty, and in Jesus Christ, his only Son, our God and Lord, who was born of the Holy Spirit and [MBr: from] the Virgin Mary, suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified and buried, descended into hell, on the third day rose alive from the dead, ascended into heaven, sits at the right hand of God the Father almighty [MBr: the Father], thence shall come to judge the living and the dead.
- I* [MBr: Do you...?] believe in the Holy Spirit, the holy catholic Church, the forgiveness of all sins, the resurrection of the [LOMoz: this] flesh and life everlasting.

Southern Gaul, sixth or seventh century (form between "R" and "T")

25–26: Fragments of an Older Gallican Creed

[*25] Cyprian, Bishop of Toulon, letter to Bishop Maximus of Geneva, written between 516 and 533.

Ed.: W. Gundlach: MGH, Epistulae 3:435 / C. Wawra, in ThQ 85 (1903): 589–94 / A. E. Burn, Facsimiles of the Creeds from Early Manuscripts, H. Bradshaw Society 36 (London, 1909), 3 and tables I–III / Kelly 179 / Ltzm 15.

[*26] Faustus, Bishop of Riez (450–480), gives a fragment in his work De Spiritu Sancto I, 2 (earlier attributed to the deacon Paschasius).

Ed.: A. Engelbrecht: CSEL 21:103f. / PL 62:11 / Hn § 61 / Burn, Facsimiles of the Creeds 3 / Kelly 179 / Ltzm 14f. —Other texts attributed to Faustus, with which his creed is often completed, viz. sermons 9 and 10 (of pseudo-Eusebius of Emesa) [in CaKA 1:315, 328] and the Tractatus de symbolo [CaANQ 262], are not considered here, not being authentic.

The two fragments, notwithstanding their distance in time, are so close to one another in the structure of the text and the place of provenance as to complete each other and to form a single creed.

- 25 Credo in Deum Patrem omnipotentem. Credo et in Iesum Christum, Filium eius unigenitum, Dominum nostrum, qui conceptus de Spiritu Sancto, natus ex Maria virgine, passus sub Pontio Pilato, crucifixus et sepultus, tertia die resurrexit a mortuis, ascendit in caelos, sedet ad dexteram Patris, inde venturus iudicaturus vivos ac mortuos.
- I* believe in God, the Father almighty. And I believe in Jesus Christ, his only begotten Son, our Lord, who was conceived of the Holy Spirit, born of the Virgin Mary, suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified and buried, on the third day rose from the dead, ascended into heaven, sits at the right hand of the Father, thence will come to judge the living and the dead.
- 26 Credo et in Spiritum Sanctum, sanctam Ecclesiam, Sanctorum communionem, abremissa[m] peccatorum, carnis resurrectionem, vitam aeternam.
- And I believe in the Holy Spirit, the holy Church, the communion of saints, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the flesh, and life everlasting.

Gaul and Alemannia, seventh or early eighth century (initial form "T")

27: Old Gallican Missal: Sermon [9 of Caesarius of Arles] on the Creed

The Missale Gallicanum Vetus (beginning of the eighth century) contains two versions of the creed that vary only slightly from each other; of the two, only the first is given here from the Sermo de symbolo of Caesarius of Arles (d. 543) (cf. G. Morin, in RBén 46 [1934]: 178–89).

Ed.: G. Morin, Caesarii Arelatensis Sermones 1 (Maretioli, 1936), 48 / CpChL 103 (1953): 47f. / L.C. Mohlberg, Missale Gallicanum Vetus (Cod. Vat. Palat. lat. 493), Rerum ecclesiasticarum documenta, Series maior, Fontes 3 (Rome, 1958), 18, § 63, 14 (the other version: 10, § 26, 5) / J. Mabillon, De liturgia Gallicana III (Paris, 1685 and 1729), 339 (the other version: 348) / PL 72:349BC / Hn § 67 / Ltzm 15. —Another creed given by Caesarius is not considered here because of its imprecise form: Pseudo-Augustine, Sermo 244 de symboli fide et bonis operibus / Caesarius, sermon 10: G. Morin, Caesarii Arelatensis Sermones 1:51–53 / CpChL 103 (1953): 51–53 / PL 39:2194f. / Hn § 62.

Text for comparison [variants in brackets]:

The Missale Bobiense (Bobbio, seventh or beginning of eighth century), in the past also called Sacramentarium Gallicanum or also Missale Vesontiane (Besançon), gives four versions of the creed. Here only the first is taken as a comparative text, setting aside purely orthographic variants.

Ed.: E. A. Lowe, The Bobbio Missal, H. Bradshaw Society 58 (London, 1920), 56 (the other versions: 56f., 74f., 181); J. Wickham Legg, facsimile ed., H. Bradshaw Society 53 (London, 1917), fol. 88r / J. Mabillon, Museum Italicum 1 (Paris, 1687 and 1724), 312 / PL 72:489A / Kelly 401–2 / Hn § 66 / Ltzm 15. —Reg.: CIPL 1924.

Credo in Deum Patrem omnipotentem, creatorem caeli et terrae.

I believe in God, the Father almighty, creator of heaven and earth. 27

Credo et in Iesum Christum [Iesu Christo], Filium eius unigenitum sempiternum,

And I believe in Jesus Christ, his only begotten eternal Son, qui conceptus est [conceptum] de Spiritu Sancto, natus est [natum] de Maria virgine, who was [-!] conceived of the Holy Spirit, was [-!] born of the Virgin Mary, passus est [passum] sub Pontio Pilato, crucifixus, mortuus et sepultus [-um], descendit ad inferna, tertia die resurrexit a mortuis, ascendit ad caelos, sedit ad dexteram Dei Patris omnipotentis, inde venturus iudicare vivos et mortuos.

suffered under Pontius Pilate, died and was buried, descended into hell, on the third day rose from the dead, ascended into heaven, sat at the right hand of God, the Father almighty, thence will come to judge the living and the dead.

Credo in Sanctum Spiritum [Sancto Spiritu], sanctam Ecclesiam catholicam, sanctorum communionem, remissionem peccatorum, carnis resurrectionem, vitam aeternam.

I believe in the Holy Spirit, the holy catholic Church, the communion of saints, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the flesh, and life everlasting.

28: Pirminius: Collection of Texts from All the Canonical Books

Pirminius (or rather, Priminius), originally from Gallia Narbonensis, missionary bishop, founder and abbot of the monastery of Reichenau on Lake Constance, published the creed of his native region in his work Scarapsus, also called Dicta Sancti Pirminii abbatis, written between 718 and 724. This creed, which recurs twice in declamatory form (chaps. 10 and 28a) and once in interrogatory form (chap. 12: = *28), gives all the elements of the text that was then commonly received ("T"). It has the form of the last stage of development, which is still in use today.

Ed.: G. Jecker, Die Heimat des hl. Pirmin, Beiträge zur Geschichte des alten Mönchtums 13 (Münster, 1927), 41, 43, 62f. / A. E. Burn, Facsimiles of the Creeds, H. Bradshaw Society 36 (London, 1909), 10 and table X / CaKA 1:158, 160, 185 / PL 89:1034f., 1046. For chap. 10, cf. also Hn § 92 / Ltzm 15f. —In the Latin text, the original dialectal orthography of the words is preserved.

Credis in Deum Patrem omnipotentem, creatorem caeli et terrae?

Do you believe in God, the Father almighty, creator of heaven and earth? 28

Credis et in Iesu Christum, Filium eius unicum, Dominum nostrum,

Do you believe in Jesus Christ, his only Son, our Lord, qui conceptus est de Spiritu Sancto, natus ex Maria virgine, who was conceived of the Holy Spirit, born of the Virgin Mary, passus sub Pontio Pilato, crucifixus, mortuos et sepultos, descendit ad inferna, tertia die surrexit a mortuis, ascendit ad celos, sedit ad dexteram Dei Patris omnipotentis, inde venturus iudicare vivos et mortuos?

suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, died and was buried, descended into hell, on the third day rose from the dead, ascended into heaven, sits at the right hand of God the Father almighty, thence will come to judge the living and the dead?

Credis in Spiritu Sancto, sancta Aecclesia catholica, sanctorum communione, remissione peccatorum, carnis resurrectionem, vitam aeternam?

Do you believe in the Holy Spirit, the holy catholic Church, the communion of saints, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the flesh, and life everlasting?

Ireland, end of seventh century (form "T" changed)

29: Bangor Antiphonal

Liturgical manuscript produced between 680 and 691 in the monastery of Bangor (Ulster, Northern Ireland).

Ed.: F.E. Warren, The Liturgy and Ritual of the Celtic Church (Oxford, 1881), 189 / Warren, ed., facsimile ed., H. Bradshaw Society 4, 10 (London, 1893, 1895), fol. 19 / CaUQ 2:284 / PL 72:597 / Kelly 402 / Hn § 76 / Ltzm 16. —Reg.: CIPL 1938.

- 29 Credo in Deum Patrem omnipotentem, invisibilem, omnium creaturarum visibilium et invisibilium conditorem. I believe in God, the Father almighty, invisible, creator of all creatures visible and invisible.
- Credo et in Iesum Christum Filium eius unicum, dominum nostrum, Deum omnipotentem, conceptum de Spiritu Sancto, natum de Maria virgine, passum sub Pontio Pilato, qui crucifixus et sepultus descendit ad inferos, tertia die resurrexit a mortuis, ascendit in caelis seditque ad dexteram Dei Patris omnipotentis, exinde venturus iudicare vivos ac mortuos. And I believe in Jesus Christ, his only Son, our Lord, God almighty, conceived of the Holy Spirit, born of the Virgin Mary, suffered under Pontius Pilate, who was crucified and buried, descended into hell, on the third day rose from the dead, ascended into heaven and sits at the right hand of God, the Father almighty, thence will come to judge the living and the dead.
- Credo in Spiritum Sanctum, Deum omnipotentem, unam habentem substantiam cum Patre et Filio, sanctam esse Ecclesiam catholicam, abremissa peccatorum, sanctorum commonionem [!], carnis resurrectionem. Credo vitam post mortem et vitam aeternam in gloria Christi. And I believe in the Holy Spirit, God almighty, having one substance with the Father and the Son, that the Catholic Church is holy, in the forgiveness of sins, the communion of saints, and the resurrection of the flesh. I believe (in) life after death and life eternal in the glory of Christ.
- Haec omnia credo in Deum. All these things I believe in God.

Gaul and Alemannia, eighth century and later, Rome, tenth century and later (form "T")

30: Roman Baptismal Ritual (Ordo Romanus XI, ed. Andrieu = VII, ed. Mabillon)

The text of the creed in this Ordo, originally indicated only by the opening words, as in ceremonial books, is found completely written out in vernacular form in Gallican manuscripts from the ninth century on. When the ancient Roman liturgical tradition was interrupted in the tenth century, Rome adopted this form of the creed along with other elements of the Gallican liturgy.

Ed.: M. Andrieu, Les Ordines Romani du haut moyen âge 2 (Louvain, 1948), 435 in the apparatus.

Texts for comparison [variants in brackets]:

Ordo Romano Antico [= ORA] in Andrieu Ordo 50, appearing around the middle half of the tenth century in Gaul or Alemannia.

Ed.: M. Hittorp, De divinis catholicae Ecclesiae officiis ac ministeriis (Cologne, 1568), 73 / Maxima bibliotheca veterum patrum et antiquorum scriptorum ecclesiastica 13 (Lyon, 1677), 696 / Kelly 369 / Hn § 25.

Pseudo-Augustine: Sermons 240–42 on the Creed: Their origin is uncertain. They provide creeds of form "T" with slight variations. Sermon 240 is in full correspondence with the text of Ordo Romanus XI.

Ed.: PL 39:2188–93 / Hn § 42.

Latin-Greek Psalter "papa Gregorii" [= PsG] is a manuscript of the thirteenth century (Cambridge): it is named, not after a pope, but after a certain English prior with the name of Gregory. The Greek text is a retranslation of the Latin.

Ed.: CaUQ 3:11 / Hn § 24. —Reg.: M. R. James, A Descriptive Catalogue of the MSS in the Library of Corpus Christi College, Cambridge 2 (Cambridge, 1912), 399–403 (no. 468).

Roman Catechism [= Cat]: written in 1564 by the decree of the Council of Trent and published in 1566.

Roman Breviary [= Brv]: published in 1568 "in order to remove deviations in prayer" (ad tollendam orandi varietatem). The form of its creed was prescribed for the whole Latin Church.

- 30 (1) Credo in Deum Patrem omnipotentem, creatorem caeli et terrae, (1) I believe in God, the Father almighty, creator of heaven and earth,
(2) et in Iesum Christum, Filium eius unicum, Dominum nostrum, (2) and in Jesus Christ, his only Son, our Lord,
(3) qui conceptus est de Spiritu Sancto, natus ex Maria virgine, (3) who was conceived by the Holy Spirit, born of the Virgin Mary,

- | | |
|--|---|
| (4) passus sub Pontio Pilato, crucifixus, mortuus et sepultus, descendit ad inferna [Cat Brv: inferos], (5) tertia die resurrexit a mortuis, (6) ascendit ad caelos, sedet ad dexteram Dei Patris omnipotentis, (7) inde venturus est [PsG: -!] iudicare vivos et mortuos. (8) Credo in Spiritum Sanctum, (9) [Cat: Credo] sanctam Ecclesiam catholicam, sanctorum communionem, (10) remissionem peccatorum, (11) carnis resurrectionem, (12) [ORA: et] vitam aeternam. | (4) suffered under Pontius Pilate, was crucified, died and was buried; he descended into hell, (5) on the third day, he rose again from the dead, (6) he ascended into heaven, and is seated at the right hand of God, the Father Almighty, (7) from whence he will come to judge the living and the dead. (8) I believe in the Holy Spirit, (9) [Cat: I believe] the holy catholic Church, the communion of saints, (10) the forgiveness of sins (11) the resurrection of the flesh, (12) [ORA: and] life everlasting. |
|--|---|

BRIEF FORMULAS OF BAPTISMAL CREEDS IN INTERROGATORY FORM

36: Gelasian Sacramentary

This work gives the Roman liturgical practice of about the sixth century, but its baptismal formula (bk. I, 44) dates back to an older period.

Ed.: H. Wilson, The Gelasian Sacramentary (Oxford, 1894), 86 / L. C. Mohlberg and L. Eizenhöfer, Liber Sacramentorum ... (Sacramentarium Gelasianum) (Cod. Vat. Reg. lat. 3/6 / Paris Bibl. Nat. 7193, 41/56), Rerum ecclesiasticarum documenta, Series maior, Fontes 4, 3rd ed. (Rome, 1981), 74 / PL 74:1111C / Hn § 31e.

Texts for comparison [variants in brackets]:

Ordo Romanus XXVIII [= OR].

Ed.: M. Andrieu, Les Ordines Romani du haut moyen âge 3 (Louvain, 1951), 406f. Its source is the order of baptism of the Sacramentarium Gellonense (ca. 800, Gaul), ed. by A. Dumas and J. Deshusses: CpChL 159 (1981): 312–39.

The Manuale Ambrosianum from a manuscript of the eleventh century [= MA].

Ed.: M. Magistretti, Monumenta veteris liturgiae Ambrosianae 3 (Milan, 1905), 208 / Ltzm 11f.

- | | |
|---|--|
| Credis in Deum Patrem omnipotentem [OR, MA: creatorem caeli et terrae]? Credis [MA: -!] et in Iesum Christum, Filium eius unicum, Dominum nostrum, natum et passum? Credis et in Spiritum Sanctum, sanctam Ecclesiam [OR, MA: catholicam], remissionem peccatorum, carnis resurrectionem [OR, MA: vitam aeternam]? | Do you believe in God, the Father almighty [OR, MA: 36 creator of heaven and earth]? And do you believe [MA: -!] in Jesus Christ, his only Son, our Lord, who was born and suffered? Do you believe in the Holy Spirit, the holy [OR, MA: catholic] Church, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the flesh [OR, MA: , life everlasting]? |
|---|--|

B. EASTERN FORMULAS

Reported here are the baptismal creeds of the Churches of Syria and Palestine, Asia Minor, and Egypt. Not considered is the reconstruction of the form commonly called “O” (the equivalent of the form “R”), which, according to some scholars, was the basis of the Eastern creeds.

The professions of faith of the councils of Nicaea and Constantinople are reported in the second part: see *125 and *150.

LOCAL CREEDS

Among the reported creeds, those of Caesarea and Jerusalem (perhaps also that of Macarius the Egyptian) manifest a pre-Nicene form, even if the textual evidence is not as old as the Council of Nicaea. To the other creeds, certain elements of Nicene theology have been added, yet without their original form being seriously changed.

Caesarea in Palestine, late third century

40: Eusebius, Bishop of Caesarea: Letter to His Diocese, 325

Since Eusebius affirms that he was baptized with this formula, his creed could have originated around the middle of the third century. The Council of Nicaea, at which he presented the formula for confirmation, adopted some elements from it in the drafting of its own profession of faith.

Ed.: The text is handed down in: Athanasius of Alexandria, De decretis Nicaenae synodi 33, § 4 (ed. by H. G. Opitz, Athanasius Werke 2/I: Apologien [Berlin and Leipzig, 1935], 29 / Opitz, Athanasius Werke 3/I: Urkunden zur Geschichte des Arianischen Streites 318–28 [Berlin and Leipzig, 1934/1935], 43 = no. 22); Theodoret of Cyrus, Historia ecclesiae I, 12, 4 (ed. by L. Parmentier, GChSch [Leipzig, 1911], 49 / PG 82: 940f.); Socrates, Historia ecclesiae I, 8, 38 (PG 67:69); Gelasius of Cyzicus, Historia synodi Nicaenae II, 35, 4 (ed. by G. Loeschke and M. Heinemann, GChSch [Leipzig, 1918], 124); Kelly 182; Hn § 123.

- 40 Πιστεύομεν εἰς ἕνα Θεὸν πατέρα παντοκράτορα, τὸν τῶν ἀπάντων ὄρατῶν τε καὶ ἀοράτων ποιητὴν.
Καὶ εἰς ἕνα κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν, τὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγον, Θεὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ, φῶς ἐκ φωτός, ζῶν ἐκ ζωῆς, υἷον μονογενῆ, πρωτότοκον πάσης κτίσεως, πρὸ πάντων τῶν αἰώνων ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς γεγεννημένον, δι' οὗ καὶ ἐγένετο τὰ πάντα, τὸν διὰ τὴν ἡμετέραν σωτηρίαν σαρκωθέντα καὶ ἐν ἀνθρώποις πολιτευσάμενον, καὶ παθόντα, καὶ ἀναστάντα τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, καὶ ἀνελθόντα πρὸς τὸν πατέρα, καὶ ἕξοντα πάλιν ἐν δόξῃ κρῖναι ζῶντας καὶ νεκρούς.
Πιστεύομεν καὶ εἰς ἕν πνεῦμα ἅγιον.
- We believe in one God, the Father almighty, the maker of all things visible and invisible.
And in one Lord Jesus Christ,
the Word of God, God from God, light from light, life from life, the only begotten Son, firstborn of all creation, begotten from the Father before all ages, through whom all things were made.
For our salvation he became flesh and lived as a man, he suffered and rose again on the third day and ascended to the Father. He shall come again in glory to judge the living and the dead.
We believe also in one Holy Spirit.

Jerusalem, mid-fourth century

41: Cyril, Bishop of Jerusalem: Catecheses VI–XVIII, ca. 348

The text of the creed must be collected from different passages of the Catecheses. This is why it is reconstituted sometimes in different ways. According to J. G. Davies (VigChr 9 [1955]: 218–21), one must also read κατελθόντα (descended) in a manner analogous to ἀνελθόντα (ascended). Cyril rejected the Nicene concept of ὁμοούσιος as Sabellian.

Ed.: PG 33:533f. (cf. PG 33:605–1060) / F. J. A. Hort, Two Dissertations (Cambridge and London, 1876), 142 / A. A. Stephenson, in Studia Patristica 3, TU 78 (Berlin, 1961), 307, 308–13 / Kelly 183–84 / Hn § 124 / Ltzm 19.

- 41 Πιστεύομεν εἰς ἕνα Θεόν, πατέρα παντοκράτορα, ποιητὴν οὐρανοῦ καὶ γῆς, ὄρατῶν τε πάντων καὶ ἀοράτων.
[Καὶ] εἰς ἕνα κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν, τὸν υἷον τοῦ Θεοῦ τὸν μονογενῆ, τὸν ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς γεννηθέντα Θεὸν ἀληθινὸν πρὸ πάντων τῶν αἰώνων, δι' οὗ τὰ πάντα ἐγένετο, [τὸν κατελθόντα, τὸν σαρκωθέντα καὶ] ἐνανθρωπήσαντα, [τὸν] σταυρωθέντα [καὶ ταφέντα καὶ] ἀναστάντα [ἐκ νεκρῶν] τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, καὶ ἀνελθόντα εἰς τοὺς οὐρανοὺς, καὶ καθίσαντα ἐκ δεξιῶν τοῦ πατρὸς, καὶ ἐρχόμενον ἐν δόξῃ κρῖναι ζῶντας καὶ νεκρούς, οὗ τῆς βασιλείας οὐκ ἔσται τέλος.
[Καὶ] εἰς ἕν ἅγιον πνεῦμα, τὸν παράκλητον, τὸ λαλήσαν ἐν τοῖς προφήταις, καὶ εἰς ἕν βάπτισμα μετανοίας εἰς ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν, καὶ εἰς μίαν ἁγίαν καθολικὴν ἐκκλησίαν, καὶ εἰς σαρκὸς ἀνάστασιν, καὶ εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον.
- We believe in one God, the Father almighty, maker of heaven and earth, of all things visible and invisible.
[And] in one Lord Jesus Christ,
the only begotten Son of God, generated from the Father, true God before all the ages, through whom all things were made.
He [came down, became flesh and] was made man, was crucified [and buried]. He rose again [from the dead] on the third day, and ascended to the heavens, and took his seat at the right hand of the Father. He shall come in glory to judge the living and the dead; to his kingdom there will be no end.
[And] in one Holy Spirit, the Paraclete, who has spoken in the prophets, and in one baptism of conversion for the forgiveness of sins, and in one holy and catholic Church, and in the resurrection of the flesh, and the life everlasting.

Asia Minor (place uncertain), end of fourth century

42–45: Epiphanius, Bishop of Salamis: Ancoratus, 374

In this work, two forms of the creed are found. The shorter form (chap. 118, 9–13), which is very close to the creed of Constantinople (*150), was interpolated by a later copyist, who substituted it for the Nicene creed that Epiphanius originally quoted here: B. M. Weischer, Q̄erellos IV, 2: Traktate des Epiphanius von Zypern und des Proklos von Kyzikos, Äthiopistische Forschungen 6 (Wiesbaden, 1979), 49–51. The longer form (chap. 119, 3–12) was intended for catechetical use or as a baptismal formula for heretics and is a form of the Nicene creed amplified by Epiphanius himself. It is not the only one of its kind, since versions very similar to it are found in the creed Hermeneia (cf. *46) and in the great creed of the Armenians (cf. *48f.).

Ed.: K. Holl, Epiphanius (GChSch) 1:146f. [shorter form] and 148f. [longer form] / PG 43:232C and 234f. / Hn § 125f. / Ltzm 19f. and 21f. —Cf. B. M. Weischer, in Oriens Christianus 63 (1977), 33.

a. Shorter Form

Πιστεύομεν εἰς ἕνα Θεόν, πατέρα παντοκράτορα, ποιητὴν οὐρανοῦ τε καὶ γῆς, ὁρατῶν τε πάντων καὶ ἀοράτων.

Καὶ εἰς ἕνα κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν, τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ τὸν μονογενῆ, τὸν ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς γεννηθέντα πρὸ πάντων τῶν αἰώνων, τουτέστιν ἐκ τῆς οὐσίας τοῦ πατρὸς, φῶς ἐκ φωτός, Θεὸν ἀληθινὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ ἀληθινοῦ, γεννηθέντα οὐ ποιηθέντα, ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρί, δι' οὗ τὰ πάντα ἐγένετο, τὰ τε ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς καὶ τὰ ἐν τῇ γῆ, τὸν δι' ἡμᾶς τοὺς ἀνθρώπους καὶ διὰ τὴν ἡμετέραν σωτηρίαν κατελθόντα ἐκ τῶν οὐρανῶν καὶ σαρκωθέντα ἐκ πνεύματος ἁγίου καὶ Μαρίας τῆς παρθένου, καὶ ἐνανθρωπήσαντα, σταυρωθέντα τε ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν ἐπὶ Ποντίου Πιλάτου, καὶ παθόντα καὶ ταφέντα, καὶ ἀναστάντα τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ κατὰ τὰς γραφάς, καὶ ἀνελθόντα εἰς τοὺς οὐρανοὺς, καὶ καθεζόμενον ἐκ δεξιῶν τοῦ πατρὸς, καὶ πάλιν ἐρχόμενον μετὰ δόξης κρῖναι ζῶντας καὶ νεκρούς, οὗ τῆς βασιλείας οὐκ ἔσται τέλος.

Καὶ εἰς τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, τὸ κύριον καὶ ζωοποιόν, τὸ ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς ἐκπορευόμενον, τὸ σὺν πατρὶ καὶ υἱῷ συμπροσκυνούμενον καὶ συνδοξαζόμενον, τὸ λαλῆσαν διὰ τῶν προφητῶν· εἰς μίαν ἁγίαν καθολικὴν καὶ ἀποστολικὴν ἐκκλησίαν· ὁμολογοῦμεν ἕν βάπτισμα εἰς ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν, προσδοκῶμεν ἀνάστασιν νεκρῶν καὶ ζωὴν τοῦ μέλλοντος αἰῶνος, ἀμήν.

Τοὺς δὲ λέγοντας «ἦν ποτε ὅτε οὐκ ἦν» καὶ «πρὶν γεννηθῆναι οὐκ ἦν», ἢ ὅτι ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων ἐγένετο ἢ ἐξ ἑτέρας ὑποστάσεως ἢ οὐσίας φάσκοντας εἶναι ἢ ρευστὸν ἢ ἀλλοιωτὸν τὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ υἱόν, τούτους ἀναθεματίζει ἡ καθολικὴ καὶ ἀποστολικὴ ἐκκλησία.

b. Longer Form

Πιστεύομεν εἰς ἕνα Θεὸν πατέρα παντοκράτορα, πάντων ὁρατῶν τε καὶ ἀοράτων ποιητὴν· καὶ εἰς ἕνα κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν, τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, γεννηθέντα ἐκ Θεοῦ πατρὸς μονογενῆ, τουτέστιν ἐκ τῆς οὐσίας τοῦ πατρὸς, Θεὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ, φῶς ἐκ φωτός, Θεὸν ἀληθινὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ ἀληθινοῦ, γεννηθέντα οὐ ποιηθέντα, ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρί, δι' οὗ τὰ πάντα ἐγένετο, τὰ τε ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς καὶ τὰ ἐν τῇ γῆ, ὁράτα τε καὶ ἀόρατα,

We believe in one God, the Father almighty, maker of heaven and earth, of all things visible and invisible. 42

And in one Lord Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son of God, generated from the Father before all ages, that is, from the being of the Father, light from light, true God from true God, begotten, not made, one in being with the Father, through whom all things were made, those in the heavens and those on earth.

For us men and for our salvation he came down from the heavens and became flesh from the Holy Spirit and the Virgin Mary and was made man. For our sake, too, he was crucified under Pontius Pilate, suffered, and was buried. On the third day he rose again according to the Scriptures. He ascended to the heavens and is seated at the right hand of the Father. He shall come again in glory to judge the living and the dead; to his kingdom there will be no end.

And in the Holy Spirit, the Lord and Giver of life, who proceeds from the Father, who together with the Father and the Son is worshipped and glorified, who has spoken through the prophets. (And) in one holy, catholic, and apostolic Church. We acknowledge one baptism for the forgiveness of sins. We expect the resurrection of the dead and the life of the world to come. Amen.

As for those who say: “There was a time when he was not” and “Before being begotten he was not” or who declare that he was made from nothing or that the Son of God is from a different substance or being or subject to change and alteration, such persons the Catholic and apostolic Church condemns. 43

We believe in one God, the Father almighty, the creator of all things invisible and visible; and in one Lord Jesus Christ, 44

the Son of God, the only begotten, generated from God the Father, that is, from the being of the Father, God from God, light from light, true God from true God, begotten not made, one in being with the Father, through whom all things were made, those in heaven and those on earth, both visible and invisible, τὸν δι' ἡμᾶς τοὺς ἀνθρώπους καὶ διὰ τὴν ἡμετέραν σωτηρίαν κατελθόντα καὶ σαρκωθέντα, τουτέστι γεννηθέντα τελείως ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας Μαρίας τῆς ἀειπαρθένου διὰ πνεύματος ἁγίου, ἐνανθρωπήσαντα, τουτέστι τέλειον ἄνθρωπον λαβόντα, ψυχὴν καὶ σῶμα καὶ νοῦν καὶ πάντα, εἴ τι ἐστὶν ἄνθρωπος, χωρὶς ἁμαρτίας, οὐκ ἀπὸ σπέρματος ἀνδρὸς οὐδὲ ἐν ἀνθρώπῳ, ἀλλ' εἰς ἑαυτὸν σάρκα ἀναπλάσαντα εἰς μίαν ἁγίαν ἐνότητά· οὐ καθάπερ ἐν προφήταις ἐνέπνευσέ τε καὶ ἐλάλησε καὶ ἐνήργησεν, ἀλλὰ τελείως ἐνανθρωπήσαντα («ὁ γὰρ λόγος σὰρξ ἐγένετο»), οὐ τροπὴν ὑποστάς οὐδὲ μεταβαλὼν τὴν ἑαυτοῦ θεότητα εἰς ἀνθρωπότητα, εἰς μίαν συνενώσαντα ἑαυτοῦ ἁγίαν τελειότητά τε καὶ θεότητα (εἷς γὰρ ἐστὶ κύριος Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς καὶ οὐ δύο, ὁ αὐτὸς Θεός, ὁ αὐτὸς κύριος, ὁ αὐτὸς βασιλεύς), παθόντα δὲ τὸν αὐτὸν ἐν σαρκί, καὶ ἀναστάντα καὶ ἀνελθόντα εἰς τοὺς οὐρανοὺς ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ σώματι, ἐνδόξως καθίσαντα ἐν δεξιᾷ τοῦ πατρὸς, ἐρχόμενον ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ σώματι ἐν δόξῃ κρῖναι ζῶντας καὶ νεκρούς· οὐ τῆς βασιλείας οὐκ ἔσται τέλος· καὶ εἰς τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα πιστεύομεν, τὸ λαλήσαν ἐν νόμῳ καὶ κηρῦξαν ἐν τοῖς προφήταις καὶ καταβάν ἐπὶ τὸν Ἰορδάνην, λαλοῦν ἐν ἀποστόλοις, οἰκοῦν ἐν ἁγίοις· οὕτως δὲ πιστεύομεν ἐν αὐτῷ, ὅτι ἐστὶ πνεῦμα ἅγιον, πνεῦμα Θεοῦ, πνεῦμα τέλειον, πνεῦμα παράκλητον, ἄκτιστον, ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς ἐκπορευόμενον καὶ ἐκ τοῦ υἱοῦ λαμβανόμενον καὶ πιστευόμενον· πιστεύομεν εἰς μίαν καθολικὴν καὶ ἀποστολικὴν ἐκκλησίαν, καὶ εἰς ἓν βάπτισμα μετανοίας, καὶ εἰς ἀνάστασιν νεκρῶν καὶ κρίσιν δικαίαν ψυχῶν καὶ σωμάτων, καὶ εἰς βασιλείαν οὐρανῶν, καὶ εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον.

- 45 Τοὺς δὲ λέγοντας, ὅτι ἦν ποτε, ὅτε οὐκ ἦν ὁ υἱὸς ἢ τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, ἢ ὅτι ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων ἐγένετο ἢ ἐξ ἐτέρας ὑποστάσεως ἢ οὐσίας, φάσκοντας εἶναι τρεπτὸν ἢ ἀλλοιωτὸν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἢ τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα, τούτους ἀναθεματίζει ἡ καθολικὴ καὶ ἀποστολικὴ ἐκκλησία, ἡ μήτηρ ἡμῶν τε καὶ ἡμῶν· καὶ πάλιν ἀναθεματίζομεν τοὺς μὴ ὁμολογοῦντας ἀνάστασιν νεκρῶν καὶ πάσας τὰς αἰρέσεις τὰς μὴ ἐκ ταύτης τῆς ὀρθῆς πίστεως οὔσας.

who for us men and for our salvation came down and became flesh, that is, he was completely begotten of the holy, ever-virgin Mary by the Holy Spirit; he was made man, that is, he assumed the complete man, soul and body and mind and all that is man except sin, not from the seed of man or in a man, but he formed in himself one flesh, consisting of one holy unity; not as he breathed, spoke, and acted in the prophets, but he became fully man (“for the Word became flesh”, without undergoing any change or transforming his divine nature into a human nature); he united (humanity) to his holy perfection and his unique divinity (for there is one Lord Jesus Christ, and not two; the same God, the same Lord, the same King); but the same one suffered in the flesh and arose again and ascended into heaven with the same body; he sits in glory at the right hand of the Father; he will come in glory in the same body to judge the living and the dead; and his kingdom will have no end; and we believe in the Holy Spirit who spoke in the law and preached through the prophets; and he descended to the Jordan, speaking in the apostles and living in the saints; we believe in him in the sense that he is the Holy Spirit, the Spirit of God, the perfect Spirit, the Paraclete Spirit, uncreated, who proceeds from the Father and is received from the Son and (in him) is believed; we believe in one catholic and apostolic Church and in one baptism of conversion; and in the resurrection of the dead, and the just judgment of souls and bodies, and in the kingdom of heaven and life eternal.

But those who say that there was a time when the Son or the Holy Spirit was not or that they were made from nothing or are of another substance or essence, maintaining that the Son of God or the Holy Spirit is subject to change or alteration, these the catholic and apostolic Church, our mother and your mother, condemns under anathema; we also anathematize those who do not confess the resurrection of the dead and likewise all the heresies that are not of this correct faith.

46–47: [Pseudo?-] Athanasian Ἑρμηνεῖα εἰς τὸ σύμβολον

The Hermeneia, or interpretation, of the creed was attributed traditionally to Athanasius of Alexandria (d. 373), but today this attribution is generally denied. The creed is very similar to the longer form of Epiphanius and to the more amplified Armenian version. In regard to the question of the mutual relation of the three creeds, there are diverse opinions. Some believe that the Hermeneia is derived from the creed of Epiphanius and (from the seventh century on) was the basis for the great Armenian creed. Others, though, reverse the order of dependence (cf. *48°).

Ed.: Hn § 127 / PG 26:1232 / CaUQ 1:2–4.

Πιστεύομεν εἰς ἓνα Θεόν, πατέρα παντοκράτορα, πάντων ὁρατῶν τε καὶ ἀορατῶν ποιητήν.

Καὶ εἰς ἓνα κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν, τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, γεννηθέντα ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς, Θεὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ, φῶς ἐκ φωτός, Θεὸν ἀληθινὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ ἀληθινοῦ, γεννηθέντα, οὐ ποιηθέντα, ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρί, δι' οὗ τὰ πάντα ἐγένετο, τὰ τε ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ καὶ τὰ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, ὁρατά τε καὶ ἀόρατα·

τὸν δι' ἡμᾶς τοὺς ἀνθρώπους καὶ διὰ τὴν ἡμετέραν σωτηρίαν κατελθόντα, σαρκωθέντα, ἐνανθρωπήσαντα, τουτέστι γεννηθέντα τελείως ἐκ Μαρίας τῆς ἀειπαρθένου διὰ πνεύματος ἀγίου, σῶμα καὶ ψυχὴν καὶ νοῦν καὶ πάντα, ὅσα ἐστὶν ἀνθρώποις, χωρὶς ἁμαρτίας, ἀληθινῶς καὶ οὐ δοκῆσει ἐσχηκῶτα· παθόντα, τουτέστι σταυρωθέντα, ταφέντα, καὶ ἀναστάντα τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, καὶ ἀνελθόντα εἰς οὐρανοὺς ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ σώματι, ἐνδόξως καθίσαντα ἐν δεξιᾷ τοῦ πατρὸς, ἐρχόμενον ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ σώματι ἐν δόξῃ κρῖναι ζῶντας καὶ νεκρούς, οὗ τῆς βασιλείας οὐκ ἔσται τέλος.

Καὶ πιστεύομεν εἰς τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, τὸ οὐκ ἄλλότριον πατρὸς καὶ υἱοῦ, ἀλλ' ὁμοούσιον ὄν πατρὶ καὶ υἱῷ, τὸ ἄκτιστον, τὸ τέλειον, τὸ παράκλητον, τὸ λαλήσαν ἐν νόμῳ καὶ ἐν προφήταις καὶ ἐν [ἀποστόλοις καὶ] εὐαγγελίοις· καταβάν ἐπὶ τὸν Ἰορδάνην, κηρυζόμενον
[κηρυζάν] ἀποστόλοις, οἰκοῦν ἐν ἁγίοις. Καὶ πιστεύομεν εἰς μίαν μόνην ταύτην καθολικὴν καὶ ἀποστολικὴν [-!] ἐκκλησίαν, εἰς ἐν βάπτισμα μετανοίας καὶ ἀφέσεως ἁμαρτιῶν, εἰς ἀνάστασιν νεκρῶν, εἰς κρίσιν αἰώνιον ψυχῶν τε καὶ σωμάτων, εἰς βασιλείαν οὐρανῶν, καὶ ζωὴν αἰώνιον.

Τοὺς δὲ λέγοντας, ὅτι ἦν ποτε, ὅτε οὐκ ἦν ὁ υἱός, ἢ ἦν ποτε, ὅτε οὐκ ἦν τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα, ἢ ὅτι ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων ἐγένετο, ἢ ἐξ ἐτέρας ὑποστάσεως ἢ οὐσίας φάσκοντας εἶναι τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἢ τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, τρεπτὸν ἢ ἀλλοιωτόν, τούτους ἀναθεματίζομεν, ὅτι αὐτοὺς ἀναθεματίζει ἡ καθολικὴ μήτηρ ἡμῶν καὶ ἀποστολικὴ ἐκκλησία· καὶ ἀναθεματίζομεν πάντας τοὺς μὴ ὁμολογοῦντας ἀνάστασιν σαρκός [νεκρῶν] καὶ πᾶσαν αἵρεσιν, τουτέστι τοὺς μὴ ὄντας ἐκ ταύτης τῆς πίστεως τῆς ἁγίας καὶ μόνης καθολικῆς ἐκκλησίας.

48–49: Great Creed of the Armenian Church

According to A. Ter-Mikelian, this creed was used, not for baptism (like the short form *6), but in the context of the eucharistic liturgy. The original text—undoubtedly Greek—has been lost but can be reconstructed with sufficient certainty from the retranslation of the Armenian text. Minor variants in this reconstruction come from the fact that the Armenians in union with the Roman Church use a form that in some points differs from that of the Orthodox Armenians. For example, the filioque has been introduced. The principal Greek text given here broadly corresponds to the Greek version that can be reconstructed from the fairly literal German translation of the Armenian text made by F. X. Steck, Die Liturgie der katholischen Armenier (Tubingen, 1845), 43; [in brackets] are

We believe in one God, the Father almighty, creator of all things visible and invisible. 46

And in one Lord Jesus Christ,

the Son of God, generated from the Father, God from God, light from light, true God from true God, generated not created, of the same essence of the Father, through whom all things were made, those in heaven and those on earth, visible and invisible; who, on behalf of us men and for our salvation, descended, took flesh, and became man, who, generated perfectly from Mary, ever virgin, by means of the Holy Spirit, had truly, and not in appearance, a body and soul and mind and all that is proper to men but without sin; he suffered, and then was crucified, buried, and he rose again on the third day and ascended into heaven in the same body and is seated in glory at the right hand of the Father, and he will come again in glory in this same body to judge the living and the dead, and his reign will be without end.

And we also believe in the Holy Spirit who is not otherwise than the Father and the Son but is of the same essence as the Father and the Son, uncreated, perfect, the Paraclete who has spoken in the law, in (the) prophets and [in (the) apostles and] in the Gospels; he descended in the Jordan, in order to speak [to have spoken] to (the) apostles and to live within (the) saints. And we believe in one church, catholic and apostolic [-!], in one baptism of conversion and remission of sins, in the resurrection of the dead, in the eternal judgment of the souls and bodies, in the reign of heaven and life eternal.

And for those who say that there was a time when the Son was not, or a time when the Holy Spirit was not or that he may have come from nothing or who say the Son of God or the Holy Spirit is from another hypostasis or essence, is mutable or changeable, we hold such people worthy of anathema, since our Catholic Mother, the apostolic Church, strikes them with an anathema; and we also hold worthy of anathema those who do not acknowledge the resurrection of the flesh [of the dead] and any heresy, that is, those who are not of the faith of the one, holy, catholic Church. 47 noted important variants suggested by Ter-Mikelian and Hort. –Opinions about the origin of this creed are notably diverse. Some hold that it is older than the long creed of Epiphanius (*44f.) and that it was introduced into Armenia from Cappadocia toward the middle of the fourth century; others, that it is simply a more recent and inferior form of the Hermeneia (*46f.) that came into common use in Armenia from the seventh century: cf. G. Winkler, “A Remarkable Shift in the 4th Century Creeds: An Analysis of the Armenian, Syriac and Greek Evidence”, Studia Patristica 17/III (Oxford, 1982), 1396–1401.

Ed.: A. Ter-Mikelian, Die armenische Kirche in ihren Beziehungen zur byzantinischen vom 4. zum 13. Jahrhundert (Leipzig, 1892), 22–24 / F.J.A. Hort, Two Dissertations (Cambridge and London, 1876), 120–23, 146f. (“Cappadocian Creed”) / Hn § 137 (in the notes is the version of the Uniate Armenians) / CaANQ 2:31–34 (a sometimes incorrect reconstruction) / MaC 25:1269CD (with later elements) / A Latin translation alone is given in the Acta Benedicti XII, ed. by A.L. Täutu (Codex Iuris Canonici Orientalis, Fontes III, 8 [Vatican, 1958]), 228.

- 48 Πιστεύομεν εἰς ἓνα Θεόν, πατέρα παντοκράτορα, ποιητὴν οὐρανοῦ καὶ γῆς, ὁρατῶν τε καὶ ἀορατῶν. Καὶ εἰς ἓνα κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν, τὸν υἱὸν Θεοῦ, [τὸν] γεννηθέντα ἐκ τοῦ [-!] πατρὸς μονογενῆ [τουτέστιν ἐκ τῆς οὐσίας τοῦ πατρὸς] πρὸ πάντων τῶν αἰώνων [-!], Θεὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ, φῶς ἐκ φωτός, Θεὸν ἀληθινὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ ἀληθινοῦ, γεννηθέντα οὐ ποιηθέντα, ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρί, δι’ οὗ τὰ πάντα ἐγένετο, τὰ [τε] ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ [ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς] καὶ τὰ ἐν τῇ γῆ [ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς], ὁρατά τε καὶ ἀόρατα, τὸν δι’ ἡμᾶς τοὺς ἀνθρώπους καὶ διὰ τὴν ἡμετέραν σωτηρίαν κατελθόντα ἐκ τῶν οὐρανῶν, σαρκωθέντα, ἐνανθρωπήσαντα [, γεννηθέντα] τελείως ἐκ Μαρίας τῆς ἁγίας παρθένου διὰ πνεύματος ἁγίου, ἐξ ἧς ἀνέλαβεν σάρκα, νοῦν, ψυχὴν [ἐκ ταύτης σῶμα καὶ ψυχὴν καὶ νοῦν] καὶ πάντα ὅσα ἐστὶν ἐν ἀνθρώπῳ [ἄνθρωπος], ἀληθῶς καὶ οὐ δοκῆσει [ἐσχηκότα], παθόντα, σταυρωθέντα, ταφέντα, ἀναστάντα τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, καὶ ἀνελθόντα εἰς τὸν οὐρανόν [τοὺς οὐρανοὺς] ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ σώματι, καθίσαντα ἐν δεξιᾷ [ἐκ δεξιῶν] τοῦ πατρὸς, ἐρχόμενον ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ σώματι καὶ ἐν δόξῃ πατρὸς κρῖναι ζῶντας καὶ νεκρούς, οὗ τῆς βασιλείας οὐκ ἔσται τέλος.
- [Καὶ] Πιστεύομεν εἰς τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, τὸ ἄκτιστον, τὸ τέλειον, τὸ λαλήσαν διὰ τοῦ νόμου καὶ τῶν προφητῶν καὶ τῶν εὐαγγελιστῶν [ἐν νόμῳ καὶ ἐν προφηταῖς καὶ ἐν εὐαγγελίοις], τὸ [-!] καταβὰν ἐπὶ τὸν Ἰορδάνην, κηρῦξαν τὸν ἀπόστολον [ἀποστόλους] καὶ [-!] οἰκῆσαν [οἰκοῦν] ἐν ἁγίοις. [Καὶ] Πιστεύομεν εἰς μίαν μόνην καθολικὴν καὶ ἀποστολικὴν ἐκκλησίαν, εἰς ἓν βάπτισμα εἰς μετάνοιαν [μετανοίας], εἰς ἄφεσιν [ἴλασμόν(?)] καὶ ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν, εἰς ἀνάστασιν νεκρῶν, εἰς κρίσιν τοῦ αἰῶνος [αἰώνιον] ψυχῶν τε καὶ σωμάτων, εἰς βασιλείαν τῶν [-!] οὐρανῶν καὶ εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον.
- 49 Τοὺς δὲ λέγοντας «ἦν ποτε, ὅτε οὐκ ἦν ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ Θεοῦ [-!], ἢ «ἦν ποτε, ὅτε οὐκ ἦν τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον [τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα]», ἢ ὅτι ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων ἐγένοντο [ἐγένετο], ἢ ἐξ ἑτέρας ὑποστάσεως ἢ οὐσίας φάσκοντας εἶναι τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἢ
- We believe in one God, the Father almighty, maker of heaven and earth, of things seen and unseen. And in one Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, who alone was begotten from the [-!] Father [that is, from the same essence of the Father] before all ages [-!], God from God, light from light, true God from true God, begotten not made, consubstantial with the Father, through whom all things were made, in heaven and on earth, seen and unseen, who, for us men and for our salvation, descended from heaven, became incarnate, was made man [, begotten] perfectly through the Holy Spirit from the holy Virgin Mary, from whom he took flesh, mind, soul [from her he took body and soul and mind] and all such as is in man [man], truly and not only in appearance, suffered, was crucified, was buried, rose on the third day, and ascended into heaven in the same body, sat at the right hand of the Father, and will come in the same body and in the glory of the Father to judge the living and the dead, of whose kingdom there will be no end.
- [And] We believe in the Holy Spirit, uncreated, perfect, who has spoken through [in] the law and the prophets and the evangelists, who [-!] descended on the Jordan, preached the apostle (?) [to the apostles] and [-!] dwelled in the saints. [And] We believe in one, sole, catholic and apostolic Church, in one baptism for [of] conversion, in the pardon [expiation] (?) and forgiveness of sins, in the resurrection of the dead, in the judgment of the age [eternal judgment] of souls and bodies, in the kingdom of heaven and life everlasting.
- Those who say “There was a time when the Son of God [-!] was not”, or “There was a time when the Holy Spirit was not”, or that they were made from what was not, or assert that the Son of God or even [-!] the Holy Spirit is from another substance or essence, καὶ [-!] τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, καὶ τρεπτοὺς ἢ ἀλλοιωτοὺς εἶναι αὐτοῦς [τρεπτὸν ἢ ἀλλοιωτόν], τοῦτους ἀναθεματίζει ἡ καθολικὴ καὶ ἀποστολικὴ ἐκκλησία.

or that they are mutable and subject to change, these the catholic and apostolic Church anathematizes.

Antioch, late fourth century

50: Antiochene Baptismal Creed (Fragments)

Of this baptismal creed (which is properly distinguished from that of the synod held in 341 against Athanasius of Alexandria), three fragments have been conserved by the three following authors:

[A] Eusebius, [later] Bishop of Dorylaion, Obtestatio contra Nestorium (under the Acts of the Council of Ephesus, 431).

Ed.: ACoe 1/1/1, 102 / MaC 4:1009E / Kelly 184–85.

[B] John Cassian, De incarnatione Domini contra Nestorium VI, c. 3, no. 2; c. 4, no. 2; c. 6–10. Cited in Latin.

Ed.: M. Petschenig: CSEL 17:327, 329, 331–35 / PL 50:142–44, 149f., 153–58 / Kelly 185.

[C] John Chrysostom, homily 40 on 1 Cor 15:29, nos. 1, 2.

Ed.: PG 61:348, 349.

The other Greek text [within brackets] is a reconstruction. —Cf. also Hn § 130 / Ltzm 22f.

[Πιστεύομεν εἰς ἕνα καὶ μόνον ἀληθινὸν Θεόν, πατέρα παντοκράτορα, πάντων ὁρατῶν τε καὶ ἀοράτων ποιητὴν.

Καὶ εἰς τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν, τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ τὸν μονογενῆ καὶ πρωτότοκον πάσης κτίσεως, τὸν ἐξ αὐτοῦ γεννηθέντα πρὸ πάντων τῶν αἰώνων, οὐ ποιηθέντα,]

[A:] Θεὸν ἀληθινὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ ἀληθινοῦ, ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρί, δι' οὗ καὶ οἱ αἰῶνες κατηρτίσθησαν καὶ τὰ πάντα ἐγένετο, τὸν δι' ἡμᾶς [κατ]ελθόντα καὶ γεννηθέντα ἐκ Μαρίας τῆς ἁγίας [τῆς ἀει]παρθένου, καὶ σταυρωθέντα ἐπὶ Ποντίου Πιλάτου, [καὶ ταφέντα καὶ ἀναστάντα τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ κατὰ τὰς γραφάς, καὶ ἀνελθόντα εἰς τοὺς οὐρανοὺς, καὶ πάλιν ἐρχόμενον κρῖναι ζῶντας καὶ νεκρούς...]

[C:] καὶ εἰς ἁμαρτιῶν ἄφεσιν, καὶ [εἰς] νεκρῶν ἀνάστασιν, καὶ εἰς ζωὴν αἰώνιον.

[B:] Credo in unum et solum verum Deum, Patrem omnipotentem, creatorem omnium visibilium et invisibilium creaturarum.

Et in Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum, Filium eius unigenitum et primogenitum totius creaturae, ex eo natum ante omnia saecula, et non factum, Deum verum ex Deo vero, homousion Patri, per quem et saecula compaginata sunt et omnia facta, qui propter nos venit et natus est ex Maria virgine, et crucifixus sub Pontio Pilato, et sepultus, et tertia die resurrexit secundum Scripturas, et ascendit in caelos, et iterum veniet iudicare vivos et mortuos...

[We believe in one and only true God, the Father almighty, creator of all things, visible and invisible.

And in our Lord Jesus Christ, his only begotten Son and firstborn of all creation, generated from him before all ages and not made,]

[A:] true God from true God, consubstantial with the Father, through whom all the ages were ordered and all things made, who on our behalf came [down] and was born of the holy Virgin [ever-virgin] Mary and was crucified under Pontius Pilate

[and was buried and rose again on the third day according to the Scriptures, and ascended into heaven and will come again to judge the living and the dead...]

[C:] and in the remission of sins and [in] the resurrection of the dead and in life eternal.

[B:] I believe in one and only true God, the Father almighty, creator of all things visible and invisible.

And in our Lord Jesus Christ, his only begotten Son and firstborn of all creation, born from him before all ages, and not made, true God from true God, consubstantial with the Father, through whom all the ages were ordered and all things made, who on our behalf came and was born of Mary the Virgin and was crucified under Pontius Pilate, and was buried and rose again on the third day according to the Scriptures, and ascended into heaven and will come again to judge the living and the dead...

50

*Mopsuestia in Cilicia, late fourth century51: Theodore, Bishop of Mopsuestia: Catecheses I–X, between 381 and 392

The form given by Theodore, as he himself bears witness, was lengthened under the influence of the Council of Constantinople and its creed. The word ἕν was placed before πνεῦμα ἅγιον, and everything that follows πνεῦμα ἅγιον was added.

Ed.: Syriac-French edition of R. Tonneau and R. Devreesse, Les Homélie catéchétiques de Théodor de Mopsueste, ST 145 (Rome, 1949); see reconstructions of the Greek creed in A. Rucker, Ritus baptismi et Missae, quem descripsit Theodorus episcopus Mopsuestemus in sermonibus catecheticis, Opuscula et textus historiam ecclesiae . . . illustrantia, Series liturgica 2 (Münster, 1933), 43f., and J. Lebon, in RHE 32 (1936): 836 / Kelly 187–88.

- 51 Πιστεύομεν εἰς ἕνα Θεόν, πατέρα παντοκράτορα, πάντων ὁρατῶν τε καὶ ἀορατῶν ποιητήν.
Καὶ εἰς ἕνα κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν, τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ τὸν μονογενῆ, τὸν πρωτότοκον πάσης κτίσεως, τὸν ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ γεννηθέντα πρὸ πάντων τῶν αἰώνων, οὐ ποιηθέντα, Θεὸν ἀληθινὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ ἀληθινοῦ, ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ αὐτοῦ, δι’ οὗ οἱ αἰῶνες κατηρτίσθησαν καὶ τὰ πάντα ἐγένετο, τὸν δι’ ἡμᾶς τοὺς ἀνθρώπους καὶ διὰ τὴν ἡμετέραν σωτηρίαν κατελθόντα ἐκ τῶν οὐρανῶν, καὶ σαρκωθέντα καὶ ἄνθρωπον γενόμενον, γεννηθέντα ἐκ Μαρίας τῆς παρθένου, καὶ σταυρωθέντα ἐπὶ Ποντίου Πιλάτου, ταφέντα καὶ ἀναστάντα τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ κατὰ τὰς γραφάς, ἀνελθόντα εἰς τοὺς οὐρανοὺς, καθεζόμενον ἐκ δεξιῶν τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ πάλιν ἐρχόμενον κρῖναι ζῶντας καὶ νεκρούς.
Καὶ εἰς ἕν πνεῦμα ἅγιον, τὸ ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς ἐκπορευόμενον, πνεῦμα ζωοποιόν· ὁμολογοῦμεν ἕν βάπτισμα, μίαν ἁγίαν ἐκκλησίαν καθολικὴν, ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν, ἀνάστασιν σαρκὸς καὶ ζωὴν αἰώνιον.
- We believe in one God, the Father almighty, maker of all things visible and invisible.
And in one Lord, Jesus Christ,
the only begotten Son of God, the firstborn of all creation, begotten of his Father before all ages, not made, true God from true God, consubstantial with his Father, through whom the ages were established and all things made, who, for us men and for our salvation, descended from heaven and became incarnate and was made man, born of the Virgin Mary, and was crucified under Pontius Pilate, buried and rose on the third day in accordance with the Scriptures, ascended into heaven, sits at the right hand of God, and comes again to judge the living and the dead.
And in one Holy Spirit, who proceeds from the Father, the life-giving Spirit; we profess one baptism, one holy catholic Church, the forgiveness of sins, the resurrection of the flesh and life everlasting.

*Egypt, mid-fourth century55: Apophthegmata of St. Macarius the Great

In a Viennese manuscript (ninth century) of the Apophthegmata Patrum and in the Greek Parisian manuscripts 1627 and 1628 (thirteenth and fourteenth century) of the Historia Lausiaca of Palladius of Helenopolis is handed down the life of St. Macarius the Egyptian or the Great (ca. 300–390), in which the creed is given. Its form is probably a local Egyptian one, the nucleus of which is pre-Nicene; Nicene elements were added later. Toward the end of the creed, instead of the official form, it gives a somewhat free paraphrase. While E. Preuschen considers this life to be an authentic part of chapter 19 of the Historia Lausiaca, C. Butler, in his critical edition of this work (The Lausiaca History of Palladius 2 [Cambridge, 1904], 194f., n. 28), disputes this. Neither he nor later editors (A. Lucot [Paris, 1912]; Ramón y Arrufat [Barcelona, 1927]) give the text of the creed.

Ed.: PG 34:212D–213A; cf. also 51D [= Codex Vindobonensis] / E. Preuschen, Palladius und Rufinus (Gießen, 1897), 127₄₋₁₃ [= Codex Parisinus] / Kelly 190–91 / Ltzm 25f. —The principal text given here is that of the Codex Vindobonensis [in brackets: variants of the Codex Parisinus graecus, 1628].

- 55 Πιστεύω εἰς ἕνα Θεόν, πατέρα παντοκράτορα.
Καὶ εἰς τὸν ὁμοούσιον αὐτοῦ λόγον, δι’ οὗ ἐποίησε τοὺς αἰῶνας, τὸν ἐπὶ συντελείᾳ τῶν αἰώνων εἰς ἀθέτησιν τῆς [-!] ἁμαρτίας ἐπιδημήσαντα ἐν σαρκί, ἣν ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας παρθένου Μαρίας ἑαυτῷ ὑπεστήσατο [σαρκωθέντα ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας παρθένου, καὶ]
- I believe in one God, the Father almighty.
And in his consubstantial Word, through whom he made the ages, who, in the fulfillment of the ages, to take away sin, made his dwelling in flesh, which was prepared for him from the holy Virgin Mary [and became incarnate from the holy virgin, and] τὸν [-!] σταυρωθέντα ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν, καὶ ἀποθανόντα καὶ ταφέντα [-!] καὶ ἀναστάντα τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ [καὶ ἀνεληθόντα εἰς τοὺς οὐρανοὺς], καὶ καθεζόμενον ἐν δεξιᾷ τοῦ πατρὸς [καθίσαντα ἐκ δεξιῶν τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ πατρὸς], καὶ πάλιν ἐρχόμενον ἐν τῷ μέλλοντι αἰῶνι [-!] κρῖναι ζῶντας καὶ νεκρούς.

Καὶ εἰς τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον [τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα], τὸ ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ καὶ τῷ [-!] λόγῳ αὐτοῦ [τοῦ Θεοῦ]. Πιστεύομεν [!] δὲ [-!] καὶ εἰς ἀνάστασιν ψυχῆς καὶ σώματος [νεκρῶν], καθὼς λέγει [φησὶν] ὁ ἀπόστολος «[σπείρεται ἐν φθορᾷ, ἐγείρεται ἐν δόξῃ,] σπείρεται σῶμα ψυχικόν, ἐγείρεται σῶμα πνευματικόν» [cf. 1 Cor 15:42–44].

who [-!] was crucified for us, and died and was buried [-!] and rose on the third day [and ascended into heaven], and sits at the right hand of the Father [sat at the right hand of God the Father], and comes again in the age to come [-!] to judge the living and the dead.

And in the Holy Spirit, consubstantial with the Father and his Word [the Word of God]. And we believe [!] in the resurrection of soul and body [of the dead], as the apostle says: “[It is sown in corruption, it rises again in glory,] it is sown a natural body, it rises again a spiritual body” [cf. 1 Cor 15:42–44].

CREEDS CONTAINED IN COLLECTIONS OF EASTERN CANONS

Syria and Palestine

60: Constitutiones Apostolorum, ca. 380

This Greek collection of pseudo-apostolic canons was composed either in the Syriac-Palestinian region or in Constantinople. Its book 8, it is true, derives from the Traditio apostolica of Hippolytus of Rome (cf. *10), but certainly not the creed contained in book 7, chapter 41, which apparently was employed in the Church of the compiler.

Ed.: M. Metzger, SC 336 (Paris, 1987): 98–100 / F.X. Funk, Didascalia et Constitutiones Apostolorum 1 (Paderborn, 1905), 444–48 / J. Quasten, in FIP 7/IV (1936), 13f. / PG 1:1041C / Kelly 186–87 / Hn § 129 / Ltzm 23.

Καὶ πιστεύω καὶ βαπτίζομαι εἰς ἓνα ἀγέννητον μόνον ἀληθινὸν Θεὸν παντοκράτορα, τὸν πατέρα τοῦ Χριστοῦ, κτίστην καὶ δημιουργὸν τῶν ἀπάντων, ἐξ οὗ τὰ πάντα.

Καὶ εἰς τὸν κύριον Ἰησοῦν τὸν Χριστόν, τὸν μονογενῆ αὐτοῦ υἱόν, τὸν πρωτότοκον πάσης κτίσεως, τὸν πρὸ αἰώνων εὐδοκία τοῦ πατρὸς γεννηθέντα οὐ κτισθέντα, δι’ οὗ τὰ πάντα ἐγένετο τὰ ἐν οὐρανοῖς καὶ ἐπὶ γῆς, ὁρατά τε καὶ ἀόρατα, τὸν ἐπ’ ἐσχάτων τῶν ἡμερῶν κατελθόντα ἐξ οὐρανῶν καὶ σάρκα ἀναλαβόντα, ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας παρθένου Μαρίας γεννηθέντα, καὶ πολιτευσάμενον ὁσίως κατὰ τοὺς νόμους τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ, καὶ σταυρωθέντα ἐπὶ Ποντίου Πιλάτου, καὶ ἀποθανόντα ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν, καὶ ἀναστάντα ἐκ νεκρῶν μετὰ τὸ παθεῖν τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, καὶ ἀνεληθόντα εἰς τοὺς οὐρανοὺς καὶ καθεσθέντα ἐν δεξιᾷ τοῦ πατρὸς, καὶ πάλιν ἐρχόμενον ἐπὶ συντελείᾳ τοῦ αἰῶνος μετὰ δόξης κρῖναι ζῶντας καὶ νεκρούς, οὗ τῆς βασιλείας οὐκ ἔσται τέλος.

Βαπτίζομαι καὶ εἰς τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, τουτέστι τὸν παράκλητον, τὸ ἐνεργῆσαν ἐν πᾶσι τοῖς ἀπ’ αἰῶνος ἁγίοις ὑστερον δὲ ἀποσταλὲν καὶ τοῖς ἀποστόλοις παρὰ τοῦ πατρὸς κατὰ τὴν

And I believe, and am baptized, in one unbegotten, only, 60 true God, almighty, the Father of the Christ, creator and framer of all things, from whom (are) all things;

And in the Lord Jesus the Christ, his only begotten Son, the first-begotten of all creation, who before ages was generated, not created, by the good pleasure of the Father, through whom all things came into being, in heaven and upon the earth, visible and invisible, who in the last days came down from heaven and took flesh, born from the holy Virgin Mary, and lived in holy wise according to the laws of God his Father, and was crucified under Pontius Pilate, and died for us, and rose again from the dead, after his Passion, on the third day, and ascended to heaven, and sat down at the Father’s right hand, and will come again at the end of the age with glory to judge living and dead, of whose kingdom there will be no end;

I am baptized also in the Holy Spirit, that is the Paraclete, who worked in all the saints from the beginning, and afterward was sent to the apostles also from the Father according to the promise of our Savior ἐπαγγελίαν τοῦ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν καὶ κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, καὶ μετὰ τοὺς ἀποστόλους δὲ πᾶσι τοῖς πιστεύουσιν ἐν τῇ ἁγίᾳ καθολικῇ καὶ ἀποστολικῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, εἰς σαρκὸς ἀνάστασιν καὶ εἰς ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν καὶ εἰς βασιλείαν οὐρανῶν καὶ εἰς ζωὴν τοῦ μέλλοντος αἰῶνος.

and Lord Jesus Christ, and after the apostles to all believers within the holy catholic and apostolic Church; in the resurrection of the flesh and in the remission of sins and in the kingdom of heaven and in the life of the age to come.

61: Testamentum Domini Nostri Jesu Christi

This is a compilation of canons and the liturgy drawn from Hippolytus of Rome; it originated in Syria around the fifth century. Book 2, chapter 8, contains a creed in the interrogatory form.

Ed.: I. E. Rahmani, Testamentum Domini Nostri Jesu Christi (Mainz, 1899), 128f. / J. Quasten, in FIP 7/V (1936), 36 (cf. also 7/II, n. 16).

- | | |
|---|--|
| 61 Credis in Deum, Patrem omnipotentem? Credis et in Christum Iesum, Filium Dei, qui ex Patre venit, qui a principio cum Patre est, qui ex Maria virgine per Spiritum Sanctum natus est, qui crucifixus est sub Pontio Pilato, mortuus est, resurrexit tertia die reviviscens ex mortuis, ascendit in caelum, sedet ad dexteram Patris, et venturus est ad iudicandos vivos et mortuos? Credis et in Spiritum Sanctum, in Ecclesiam sanctam? | Do you believe in God, the Father almighty? Do you also believe in Jesus Christ, the Son of God, who comes from the Father, who is from the beginning with the Father, who, through the Holy Spirit, was born of the Virgin Mary, who was crucified under Pontius Pilate, died, rose on the third day, coming back to life from the dead, ascended into heaven, sits at the right hand of the Father, and will come to judge the living and the dead? Do you believe in the Holy Spirit, in the holy Church? |
|---|--|

Egypt

62–63: Constitutions of the Egyptian Church

Cf. *3, which provides the complete titles of the editions.

Ed.: Coptic version: Traditio apostolica 16, 16, in Till-Leipoldt 20f. (Funk 2:110); the Coptic version, however, does not provide an interrogatory form; cf. Hn § 139 (second part). —Ethiopian version: Traditio apostolica 34, in Duensing 56–59. —The Latin text reported in *62f. is based on the German editions of Till and Duensing; the Greek terms conserved in the Coptic text are noted in parentheses.

a. Coptic Version: Post-Baptismal Profession of Faith

- | | |
|---|--|
| 62 Credis (πιστεύειν) in Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum (Χριστός), Filium unicum Dei Patris, quod mirabiliter propter nos homo factus est in unitate incomprehensibili per Spiritum (πνεῦμα) suum Sanctum ex Maria sancta virgine (παρθένος) sine semine (σπέρμα) virili, quodque crucifixus est (σταυροῦν) pro nobis sub Pontio Pilato, mortuus est secundum suam voluntatem pro nostra salute simul, resurrexit tertia die, liberavit vinctos, ascendit in caelos, sedet ad dexteram Patris sui boni (ἀγαθός) in excelsis, et iterum venit iudicare (κρίνειν) vivos et mortuos secundum (κατὰ) revelationem suam et regnum suum. Et credis (πιστεύειν) in Spiritum (πνεῦμα) Sanctum, bonum (ἀγαθός) ac vivificantem, qui omnia purificat, in sancta Ecclesia (ἐκκλησία). | You believe in our Lord Jesus Christ, the only Son of God, the Father, that he was marvelously made man for us in an incomprehensible unity through his Holy Spirit from the holy Virgin Mary without the seed of man, and that he was crucified for us under Pontius Pilate, died according to his will, likewise for our salvation, and rose again on the third day, liberated those held captive, ascended into heaven, sits at the right hand of his good Father in the highest heaven, and will come again to judge the living and the dead according to his revelation and his kingdom. And you believe in the good and life-giving Holy Spirit, who purifies all things and in the holy Church. |
|---|--|

b. Ethiopian Version: Post-Baptismal Profession of Faith

Credisne in nomen Iesu Christi, Domini nostri, Filii unici Dei Patris, quod homo factus est miraculo incomprehensibili de Spiritu Sancto et ex virgine Maria sine semine virili, quodque crucifixus est in diebus Pontii Pilati, et mortuus est secundum suam voluntatem pro nostra salute simul, et resurrexit a mortuis tertia die, et liberavit vinctos et ascendit in caelos et sedit ad dexteram Patris, et veniet iudicare vivos et mortuos secundum revelationem suam et regnum suum?

Credisne in Spiritum Sanctum bonum, et qui purificat, et in sanctam Ecclesiam? Et credisne in resurrectionem carnis quae omnes homines manet, et in regnum caelorum et in aeternum iudicium?

Do you believe in the name of Jesus Christ, our Lord, the only Son of God, the Father, that he was made man in an incomprehensible miracle by the Holy Spirit and from the Virgin Mary without the seed of man, and that he was crucified in the days of Pontius Pilate, died according to his will, likewise for our salvation, rose again on the third day from the dead, liberated those held captive, ascended into heaven, is seated at the right hand of the Father, and will come to judge the living and the dead according to his revelation and his kingdom?

Do you believe in the good Holy Spirit who purifies and in the holy Church? And do you believe in the resurrection of the flesh that awaits all men and in a kingdom of heaven and in eternal judgment?

64: Canones Hippolyti

This collection of canons, possibly dating from the mid-fourth century, is an Egyptian redaction of the Traditio apostolica of Hippolytus of Rome (cf. *10). Only its Arabic and Ethiopian translations are preserved. The following creed is taken from the Arabic translation, canon 19.

Ed.: H. Achelis, Die ältesten Quellen des orientalischen Kirchenrechts, TU 6 (Leipzig, 1891), 96f. / D.B. Haneberg, Canones S. Hippolyti arabice e codicibus Romanis (Munich, 1870), 76, no. 11 / cf. J. Quasten, in FIP 7/V (1936), 36, n. 2. —[in brackets: variations of the original text].

Credisne in Deum, Patrem omnipotentem?
Credisne in Iesum Christum, Filium Dei, quem peperit Maria virgo ex Spiritu Sancto, [qui venit ad salvandum genus humanum,] qui crucifixus est [pro nobis] sub Pontio Pilato, qui mortuus est et resurrexit a mortuis tertia die, et ascendit ad caelos, sedetque ad dexteram Patris, et veniet iudicaturus vivos et mortuos?

Credisne in Spiritum Sanctum [Paracletum, procedentem a Patre Filioque]?

Do you believe in God, the Father Almighty?
Do you believe in Jesus Christ, the Son of God, whom the Virgin Mary bore from the Holy Spirit, [who came to save the human race,] who was crucified [for us] under Pontius Pilate, who died and rose from the dead on the third day and ascended into heaven and sits at the right hand of the Father and will come to judge the living and the dead?

Do you believe in the Holy Spirit [Paraclete, proceeding from the Father and the Son]?

II: Bipartate Trinitarian-Christological Schema71–72: Formula Entitled *Fides Damasi

In the past, this formula was attributed to Damasus I or Jerome. It very probably originated in southern France in the late fifth century (as also the creeds *73 and *75f.). It appears initially to have been missing some parts, particularly the words “et Filio” (and from the Son) in reference to the procession of the Holy Spirit; cf. A. E. Burn, cited below, 245, in the critical notes to line 9 (he relies on manuscripts of the eighth to tenth centuries).

Ed.: KüA 47 / KüBS 10:43–45/ A. E. Burn, An Introduction to the Creeds and to the Te Deum (London, 1899), 245f. / Hn § 200 / D. Vallarsi, S. Eusebii Hieronymi Stridonensis presbyteri opera 11 (Verona, 1742), 145f. (under the non-authentic works). [In brackets: variations of the original text.]

Credimus in unum Deum Patrem omnipotentem et in unum Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum Filium Dei et in [unum] Spiritum Sanctum Deum. Non tres Deos, sed Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum unum Deum colimus et confitemur: non sic unum Deum, quasi solitarium, nec eundem, qui ipse sibi Pater sit, ipse et Filius, sed Patrem esse qui genuit, et Filium esse qui

We believe in one God, the Father almighty, and in our one Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, and in [one] Holy Spirit, God. We do not worship and confess three Gods, but one God who is Father and Son and Holy Spirit. He is one God, yet not solitary; he is not at the same time Father to himself and Son, but the Father is he who begets and the Son he who is begotten. As for the Holy Spirit, genitus sit, Spiritum vero Sanctum non genitum neque ingenitum, non creatum neque factum, sed de Patre et Filio [-!] procedentem, Patri et Filio coaeternum et coaequalem et cooperatorem, quia scriptum est: “Verbo Domini caeli firmati sunt” id est, a Filio Dei, “et spiritu oris eius omnis virtus eorum” [Ps 32:6], et alibi: Emitte spiritum tuum et creabuntur et renovabis faciem terrae [cf. Ps 103:30]. Ideoque in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti unum confitemur Deum, quia [deus] nomen est potestatis deus [-!], non proprietatis. Proprium nomen est Patri Pater, et proprium nomen est Filio Filius, et proprium nomen est Spiritui Sancto Spiritus Sanctus. Et in hac Trinitate unum Deum credimus, quia ex uno Patre, quod est unius cum Patre naturae uniusque substantiae et unius potestatis. Pater Filium genuit, non voluntate, nec necessitate, sed natura.

- 72 Filius ultimo tempore ad nos salvandos et ad implendas scripturas descendit a Patre, qui nunquam desiit esse cum Patre, et conceptus est de Spiritu Sancto et natus ex Maria [-!] Virgine, carnem, animam et sensum, hoc est perfectum suscepit hominem, nec amisit, quod erat, sed coepit esse, quod non erat; ita tamen, ut perfectus in suis sit et verus in nostris. Nam qui Deus erat, homo natus est, et qui homo natus est, operatur ut Deus; et qui operatur ut Deus, ut homo moritur; et qui ut homo moritur, ut Deus resurgit [surgit]. Qui devicto mortis imperio cum ea carne, qua natus et passus et mortuus fuerat, resurrexit tertia die [-!], ascendit ad Patrem sedetque ad dextram eius in gloria [gloriam], quam semper habuit habetque. In huius morte et sanguine credimus emundatos nos ab eo resuscitandos die novissima in hac carne, qua nunc vivimus, et habemus spem nos consecuturos ab ipso aut vitam aeternam praemium boni meriti aut poenam pro peccatis aeterni supplicii. Haec lege, haec retine, huic fidei animam tuam subiuga. A Christo Domino et vitam consequeris et praemium [praemia].

he is neither begotten nor unbegotten, neither created nor made, but he proceeds from the Father and the Son [-!], being equally eternal and fully equal with the Father and the Son and cooperating with them; for it is written: “By the Word of the Lord the heavens were made”, that is, by the Son of God, “and all their host by the breath of his mouth” [Ps 33:6]; and elsewhere: “When you send forth your Spirit, they are created, and you renew the face of the earth” [cf. Ps 104:30]. Therefore, in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit we confess one God, for the term “God” refers to power, not to personal characteristics. The proper name for the Father is Father, and the proper name for the Son is Son, and the proper name for the Holy Spirit is Holy Spirit. And in this Trinity we believe that God ⟨is⟩ one because what is of one nature and of one substance and of one power with the Father is from one Father. The Father begets the Son, not by an act of will or out of necessity, but by nature.

In the last times, the Son, who never ceased to be with the Father, came down from the Father to save us and to fulfill the Scriptures. He was conceived from the Holy Spirit and born of the Virgin Mary [-!]. He assumed body, soul, and sensibility, that is, a complete human nature: he did not lose what he was, but began to be what he was not, in such a way, however, that he is perfect in his own nature and truly shares in ours. For, he who was God has been born as a man, and he who has been born as a man acts as God; and he who acts as God dies as man, and he who dies as man rises again as God. Having conquered the power of death with that flesh with which he had been born and had suffered and died, he rose again on the third day [-!]; he ascended to the Father and is seated at his right hand in the glory which he always has had and always has. We believe that we who have been cleansed in his death and in his blood shall be raised up by him on the last day in this flesh in which we now live. It is our hope that we shall receive from him eternal life, the reward of good merit, or else ⟨we shall receive⟩ the penalty of eternal punishment for sins. Read these words, keep them, subject your soul to this faith. From Christ the Lord you will receive both life and reward.

73–74: The Clemens Trinitas Profession

This formula was also called Fides catholica Sancti Augustini episcopi (Codex Augiensis (Reichenau) XVIII, ninth century, ed. KüBS). It originated in the fifth or sixth century in southern France and was later introduced into Spain.

Ed.: J. A. de Aldama, in Greg 14 (1933): 487f. / KüA 65f. / KüBS 147f.; cf. 12. —Reg.: CIPL 1748.

- 73 Clemens Trinitas est una divinitas. Pater itaque et Filius et Spiritus Sanctus, unus fons, una substantia, una virtus, una potestas est. Patrem Deum, et Filium Deum, et Spiritum Sanctum Deum, non tres deos esse dicimus, sed unum piissime confitemur. Nam tres nominantes personas unam esse substantiam catholica atque apostolica profitemur voce. Itaque Pater et Filius

The merciful Trinity is one divinity. Consequently, the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit are one source, one substance, one strength, one power. We do not say that God the Father and God the Son and God the Holy Spirit are three gods, but with great piety we confess them as one. For although we name three Persons, we profess with catholic and apostolic voice et Spiritus Sanctus, et “tres unum sunt” [cf. 1 Io 5:7]. Tres, nec confusi, nec divisi, sed et distincte coniuncti et coniuncti distincti; uniti substantia, sed discreti nominibus, coniuncti natura, distincti personis, aequales divinitate, consimiles maiestate, concordēs trinitate, participes claritate. Qui ita unum sunt, ut tres quoque esse non dubitemus; ita tres sunt, ut separari a se non posse fateamur. Unde dubium non est, unius iniuriam omnium esse contumeliam, quia unius laus ad omnium pertinet gloriam.

“Hoc enim fidei nostrae secundum evangelicam et apostolicam doctrinam principale est, Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum et Dei Filium a Patre nec honoris confessione, nec virtutis potestate, nec substantiae divinitate, nec intervallo temporis separari.”¹ Et ideo si quis Filium Dei, qui sicut vere Deus, ita verus homo absque peccato dumtaxat, vel de humanitate aliquid vel deitate minus dicit habuisse, profanus et alienus ab Ecclesia catholica atque apostolica iudicandus est.

that there is one substance. Therefore, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, “(these) three are one” [cf. 1 Jn 5:7]. Three, neither confused nor divided, but both joined together distinctly, and distinct while being conjoined; united in substance but distinct in name; conjoined in nature, but distinct in the Persons; equal in divinity, entirely similar in majesty; united in the Trinity, sharing in glory. They are one in such a way that we do not doubt that they are likewise three; and they are three in such a way that we confess they cannot be separated from each other. Therefore, there is no doubt that an offense against one is an outrage against all, because the praise of one extends to the glory of all.

“For this, according to the evangelical and apostolic doctrine, is a principal point of our faith: that our Lord Jesus Christ and Son of God is not separated from the Father either by the acknowledgment of honor or by the strength of power or by the divinity of substance or by an interval of time.”¹ And, therefore, if anyone says that the Son of God, who, both truly God and also true man, only without sin, lacked something, with regard either to his humanity or to his divinity, he must be judged as impious and estranged from the catholic and apostolic Church. 74

75–76: The Pseudo-Athanasian Profession Quicumque

Scholarly research has established the almost universal opinion that the author of this creed is not Athanasius of Alexandria but rather someone to be sought among Western theologians. It is true that the majority of the most ancient manuscripts identify Athanasius as the author, while others indicate Pope Anastasius I. Since these do not go back any earlier than the eighth century, however, their reliability is rightfully questioned. The Greek texts still existing are translations from the Latin, not vice versa; for this reason, they are not presented here. Among those to whom this creed has been attributed, special mention should be made of: Hilary of Poitiers, d. ca. 367 (according to M. Speroni); Ambrose of Milan, d. 397 (H. Brewer, P. Schepens, A. E. Burn in 1926); Nicetas of Remesiana, d. ca. 414 (M. Cappuyns; cf. *19); Honoratus of Arles, d. 429 (Burn, 1896); Vincent of Lérins, d. before 450 (G. D. W. Ommaney); Fulgentius of Ruspe, d. 532 (I. Stiglmayr); Caesarius of Arles, d. 543 (G. Morin, prior to 1932); Venantius Fortunatus, d. 601 (L. A. Muratori). The thesis of a Spanish anti-Priscillian origin (K. Künstle) is today no longer advanced. At present, the dominant opinion is that the creed originated between 430 and 500 in southern France, probably in the region of Arles, through the work of an unknown author. In the course of time, this creed attained, both in the West and in the East, such importance that by the Middle Ages it was equal in stature to the Apostles’ and Nicene creeds and was used in the liturgy.

Ed.: Liturgical text: Roman Breviary, Sunday office ad primam (in editions prior to 1954). —Original text: C. H. Turner, in JThSt 11 (1910): 407–11 / A. E. Burn, An Introduction to the Creeds and to the Te Deum (London, 1899), 191–93 / Burn, The Athanasian Creed and Its Early Commentaries, Texts and Studies 4/1 (Cambridge, 1896), 4–6 / Burn, Facsimiles of the Creeds, H. Bradshaw Society 36 (London, 1909), tables XV–XXIV / KüA 232f. / Hn § 150 / Ltzm 16–18 / PL 88:585f. (in Greek, PG 28:1581A–1584C). —Reg.: CIPL 167. In what follows, the liturgical text is given as the principal one. Text for comparison [variations in brackets]: original text.

(1) Quicumque vult salvus esse, ante omnia opus est, ut teneat catholicam fidem: (2) quam nisi quisque [quis] integram inviolatamque servaverit, absque dubio in aeternum peribit.

(3) Fides autem catholica haec est, ut unum Deum in Trinitate, et Trinitatem in unitate veneremur, (4) neque confundentes personas, neque substantiam separantes: (5) alia est enim persona Patris, alia [persona] Filii, alia [persona] Spiritus Sancti; (6) sed Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti una est divinitas, aequalis gloria, coaeterna maiestas.

(1) Whoever wishes to be saved must, before all else, 75 hold the Catholic faith: (2) for unless each one [one] maintains it whole and inviolate, he will certainly perish in eternity.

(3) This, then, is the Catholic faith: We worship one God in the Trinity and the Trinity in the unity, (4) without confusing the Persons or separating the substance; (5) for indeed the Person of the Father is one, [the Person] of the Son another, [the Person] of the Holy Spirit another; (6) but the divinity of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit is one, (their) glory equal, and (their) majesty coeternal.

*74 ¹ Hilary of Poitiers, De synodis 61 (PL 10:522). But instead of “substantiae divinitate” (through the divinity of the substance), it reads: “substantiae diversitate” (through the diversity of the substance).

(7) Qualis Pater, talis Filius, talis [et] Spiritus Sanctus: (8) increatus Pater, increatus Filius, increatus Spiritus Sanctus; (9) immensus [inmensus] Pater, immensus Filius, immensus Spiritus Sanctus; (10) aeternus Pater, aeternus Filius, aeternus Spiritus Sanctus; (11) et tamen non tres aeterni, sed unus aeternus; (12) sicut non tres increati nec tres immensi, sed unus increated [inmensus] et unus immensus [increatus]. (13) Similiter omnipotens Pater, omnipotens Filius, omnipotens Spiritus Sanctus; (14) et tamen non tres omnipotentes, sed unus omnipotens. (15) Ita Deus Pater, Deus Filius, Deus Spiritus Sanctus; (16) et tamen non tres Dii, sed unus Deus. (17) Ita Dominus Pater, Dominus Filius, Dominus Spiritus Sanctus; (18) et tamen non tres Domini, sed unus est [-!] Dominus: (19) quia, sicut singillatim unamquamque personam [et] Deum ac [et] Dominum confiteri christiana veritate compellimur, (20) ita tres Deos aut Dominos dicere catholica religione prohibemur.

(21) Pater a nullo est factus nec creatus nec genitus; (22) Filius a Patre solo est, non factus nec creatus, sed genitus; (23) Spiritus Sanctus a Patre et Filio, non factus nec creatus nec genitus, sed procedens. (24) Unus ergo Pater, non tres Patres; unus Filius, non tres Filii; unus Spiritus Sanctus, non tres Spiritus Sancti. (25) Et [-!] in hac Trinitate nihil prius aut posterius, nihil maius aut minus, (26) sed totae tres personae coaeternae sibi sunt et coaequales. (27) Ita ut per omnia, sicut iam supra dictum est, et unitas in Trinitate et Trinitas in unitate [Trinitas in unitate et unitas in Trinitate] veneranda sit. (28) Qui vult ergo salvus esse, ita de Trinitate sentiat.

76 (29) Sed necessarium est ad aeternam salutem, ut incarnationem quoque Domini nostri Iesu Christi fideliter credat. (30) Est ergo fides recta, ut credamus et confiteamur, quia Dominus noster Iesus Christus Dei Filius [et] Deus [pariter] et homo est: (31) Deus est ex substantia Patris ante saecula genitus, et homo est ex substantia matris in saeculo natus; (32) perfectus Deus, perfectus homo ex anima rationali [rationabili] et humana carne subsistens; (33) aequalis Patri secundum divinitatem, minor Patre secundum humanitatem; (34) qui, licet Deus sit et homo, non duo tamen, sed unus est Christus; (35) unus autem non conversione divinitatis in carnem [carne], sed assumptione humanitatis in Deum [Deo]; (36) unus omnino, non confusione substantiae, sed unitate personae. (37) Nam sicut anima rationalis [rationabilis] et caro unus est homo, ita Deus et homo unus est Christus. (38) Qui passus est pro salute nostra, descendit [descendit] ad inferos, tertia die resurrexit

(7) As the Father is, so is the Son, [and] so is the Holy Spirit: (8) uncreated the Father, uncreated the Son, uncreated the Holy Spirit; (9) infinite the Father, infinite the Son, infinite the Holy Spirit; (10) eternal the Father, eternal the Son, eternal the Holy Spirit; (11) and yet (they are) not three eternal beings, but one eternal; (12) just as (they are) not three uncreated beings or three infinite beings, but one uncreated [infinite] and one infinite [uncreated] being. (13) In like manner, omnipotent (is) the Father, omnipotent the Son, omnipotent the Holy Spirit; (14) and yet (they are) not three omnipotent beings but one omnipotent being. (15) Therefore, the Father (is) God, the Son (is) God, the Holy Spirit (is) God; (16) and yet (there are) not three Gods but one God. (17) In the same way, the Father (is) Lord, the Son (is) Lord, the Holy Spirit (is) Lord; (18) yet (there are) not three Lords, but there is [-!] one Lord; (19) for just as we are compelled by Christian truth to confess each Person individually as God and Lord, (20) just so the Catholic religion forbids us to say that there are three Gods or three Lords.

(21) The Father was not made by anyone; nor was he created or begotten; (22) the Son is from the Father alone, neither made nor created but generated; (23) the Holy Spirit (is) from the Father and the Son, neither made nor created nor generated, but proceeding. (24) Therefore, (there is) one Father, not three Fathers; one Son, not three Sons; one Holy Spirit, not three Holy Spirits. (25) And [-!] in this Trinity, (there is) nothing before or after, nothing greater or lesser, (26) but all three Persons are coequal and coeternal with each other. (27) And so, in all things, as was said already above, both the unity in the Trinity and the Trinity in the unity [the Trinity in the unity and the unity in the Trinity] must be worshipped. (28) Let anyone, therefore, who wishes to be saved think of the Trinity in this manner.

(29) But it is necessary for eternal salvation also to believe faithfully in the Incarnation of our Lord Jesus Christ. (30) The correct faith, therefore, is that we believe and confess that our Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God, is [both] God [equally] and man; (31) he is God generated from the substance of the Father before all ages; and he is man born from the substance of a mother in time; (32) perfect God and perfect man, subsisting with a rational soul and human flesh; (33) equal to the Father according to divinity, less than the Father according to humanity; (34) and while he is both God and man, nevertheless, there is but one Christ, not two; (35) not one, however, by a transformation of the divinity into flesh [in the flesh], but by the assumption of the humanity into God [by God]; (36) he is entirely one, not by a confusion of substance, but by the unity of person. (37) For just as one man is a rational soul and flesh, just so the one Christ is God and man. (38) He suffered for our salvation, descended into hell, and on the third day [-!] rose again from the dead, (39) ascended into heaven, and sits [sat] at the right hand of the Father, from whence he shall come to judge the living and the dead. (40) At his coming, all men are to rise again with [in] their bodies, and they will give an account of their own deeds; (41) and those who have done good will go on to eternal life, but [-!] those who have done evil will go into eternal fire.

[surrexit] a mortuis, (39) ascendit ad caelos, sedet [sedit] ad dexteram Patris, inde venturus est [-!] iudicare vivos et mortuos. (40) Ad cuius adventum omnes homines resurgere habent cum [in] corporibus suis, et reddituri sunt de factis propriis rationem; (41) et qui bona egerunt, ibunt in vitam aeternam, qui vero [-!] mala, in ignem aeternum.

(42) Haec est fides catholica: quam nisi quisque [quis] fideliter firmiterque crediderit, salvus esse non poterit.

(42) This is the Catholic faith: unless each one [one] has believed it faithfully and firmly, he will not be saved.

Part Two

DOCUMENTS OF THE CHURCH'S MAGISTERIUM

It is not possible to determine with complete accuracy the time in office of several popes, especially in the first through third, ninth, and tenth centuries, due to the condition of the sources. The duration of the pontificates is indicated primarily on the basis of the authors L. Duchesne, T. Mommsen, P. Jaffé, and F. X. Seppelt. Consideration was also given to recent hypotheses. Probable variations are noted. The Annuario pontificio, to which A. Mercati, since 1949, has contributed a list of the popes corrected in respect to preceding editions, was also used for comparison.

PETER: 30?–67?

LINUS: 67?–76 (79?)

[ANA]CLETUS: 76 (80?)–90 (88?)

CLEMENT I of ROME: 92 (88?)–101 (97?)

101–102: Letter Διὰ τὰς αἰφνιδίους to the Corinthians, ca. 96

The occasion of the letter was a disturbance in the community of Corinth in which certain presbyters were unjustly deprived of their office. The text is the most ancient evidence of the solicitude of the Church of Rome for other local churches. The author does not explicitly present himself as the bishop of Rome; Irenaeus was the first to use such a designation. He must have been foremost among the presbyters.

Ed. [*101; 102]: K. Bihlmeyer and W. Schneemelcher, Die Apostolischen Väter, 2nd ed., 1 (Tübingen, 1956), 57f.; 38, 66, 69 / J. A. Fischer, Die apostolischen Väter, Schriften des Urchristentums 1 (Darmstadt, 1981), 75–77, 35, 99, 105 / F. X. Funk, Patres Apostolici 1 (Tübingen, 1901), 150f.; 108, 172f., 182 / J. B. Lightfoot, The Apostolic Fathers 1/II: S. Clement of Rome (London, 1890), 121–29; 35, 169–71, 184 / H. Hemmer, Les Pères Apostoliques II, Clement de Rome (Paris, 1909), 82–88; 18, 118, 130 / C. T. Schaefer, in FIP 44 (1941): 45–47; 13, 63f., 69. —Reg.: JR 9.

The Hierarchical Order among the Members of the Church

(c. 40, no. 1) ... ἐγκεκυφότες εἰς τὰ βάθη τῆς θείας γνώσεως, πάντα τάξει ποιεῖν ὀφείλομεν, ὅσα ὁ Δεσπότης ἐπιτελεῖν ἐκέλευσεν κατὰ καιροὺς τεταγμένους, (2) τὰς τε προσφορὰς καὶ λειτουργίας ἐπιτελεῖσθαι, καὶ οὐκ εἰκῆ ἢ ἀτάκτως ἐκέλευσεν γίνεσθαι, ἀλλ' ὠρισμένοις καιροῖς καὶ ὥραις. (3) Ποῦ τε καὶ διὰ τίνων ἐπιτελεῖσθαι θέλει, αὐτὸς ὠρισεν τῇ ὑπερτάτῃ αὐτοῦ βουλήσει, ἵν' ὁσίως πάντα γινόμενα ἐν εὐδοκίῃσι εὐπρόσδεκτα εἴη τῷ θελήματι αὐτοῦ. (4) Οἱ οὖν τοῖς προστεταγμένοις καιροῖς ποιούντες τὰς προσφορὰς αὐτῶν εὐπρόσδεκτοί τε καὶ μακάριοι· τοῖς γὰρ νομίμοις τοῦ Δεσπότητος ἀκολουθοῦντες οὐ διαμαρτάνουσιν. (5) Τῷ γὰρ ἀρχιερεῖ ἴδιαι λειτουργίαι δεδομέναι εἰσίν, καὶ τοῖς ἱερεῦσιν ἴδιος ὁ τόπος προστέτακται, καὶ λευίταις ἴδιαι διακονίαι ἐπίκεινται· ὁ λαϊκὸς ἄνθρωπος τοῖς λαϊκοῖς προστάγμασιν δέδεται.

(c. 41, no. 1) Ἐκαστος ἡμῶν, ἀδελφοί, «ἐν τῷ ἰδίῳ τάγματι» [I Cor 15:23] εὐαρεστέτω [εὐχαριστεῖτω] τῷ Θεῷ ἐν ἀγαθῇ συνειδήσει ὑπάρχων, μὴ παρεκβαίνων τὸν ὠρισμένον τῆς λειτουργίας αὐτοῦ κἀνονα, ἐν σεμνότητι....

(Chap. 40, no. 1) ... Peering into the depths of divine knowledge, we ought to do everything the Lord commanded us to fulfill in an orderly fashion at the proper times. (2) As far as fulfilling both offerings and acts of worship is concerned, the Lord did not command them to be done in an empty or disorderly manner, but at set times and hours. (3) Now where and through whom he wanted these done, he determined by his highest will so that everything might take place in a holy manner and so be completely pleasing to his will. (4) So, those who make their offerings at the appointed times are well-pleasing and blessed, for they do not err if they follow the commands of the Lord. (5) For the high priest has been assigned his own official functions, and the priests have their own appointed place, and the Levites are given ministries of service. The layman is bound by the ordinances for the laity.

(Chap. 41, no. 1) Each of us, brothers, has “his own order” [I Cor 15:23]. Let him give thanks to God with a good conscience, without going beyond his determined guideline of service, in dignity....

(c. 42, no. 1) Οἱ ἀπόστολοι ἡμῖν εὐηγγελίσθησαν ἀπὸ τοῦ Κυρίου Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ, Ἰησοῦς ὁ Χριστὸς ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐξεπέμφθη. (2) Ὁ Χριστὸς οὖν ἀπὸ τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ οἱ ἀπόστολοι ἀπὸ τοῦ Χριστοῦ· ἐγένοντο οὖν ἀμφοτέρωθεν εὐτάκτως ἐκ θελήματος Θεοῦ. (3) Παραγγελίας οὖν λαβόντες καὶ πληροφορηθέντες διὰ τῆς ἀναστάσεως τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ καὶ πιστωθέντες ἐν τῷ λόγῳ τοῦ Θεοῦ, μετὰ πληροφορίας πνεύματος ἁγίου ἐξῆλθον εὐαγγελιζόμενοι, τὴν βασιλείαν τοῦ Θεοῦ μέλλειν ἔρχεσθαι. (4) Κατὰ χώρας οὖν καὶ πόλεις κηρύσσοντες καθίστανον τὰς ἀπαρχὰς αὐτῶν, δοκιμάσαντες τῷ πνεύματι, εἰς ἐπισκόπους καὶ διακόνους τῶν μελλόντων πιστεύειν.

(Chap. 42, no. 1) Now the apostles received the Gospel for us from our Lord Jesus Christ. Jesus Christ was sent from God. (2) So, Christ is from God, and the apostles are from Christ. Both come from God's will in their own order. (3) Therefore, once they received instructions and were fully assured through the Resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ and were confirmed in the Word of God, they went out to preach the gospel with the full assurance of the Holy Spirit, proclaiming that the kingdom of God would come. (4) So, preaching in towns and countryside, they established the firstfruits (of their work); they tested them by the Spirit and appointed them bishops and deacons of future believers.

The Authority of the Roman Church

102 (c. 7, no. 1) Ὑμᾶς νουθετοῦντες ἐπιστέλλομεν. . .

(Chap. 7, no. 1) We write to you by way of exhortation. . .

(c. 58, no. 2) Δέξασθε τὴν συμβουλὴν ἡμῶν, καὶ ἔσται ἀμεταμέλητα ὑμῖν.

(Chap. 58, no. 2) Receive our counsel, and you will not repent it.

(c. 59, no. 1) Ἐὰν δέ τινες ἀπειθήσωσιν τοῖς ὑπ' αὐτοῦ [Χριστοῦ] δι' ἡμῶν εἰρημένοις, γνωσκέτωσαν, ὅτι παραπτώσει καὶ κινδύνῳ οὐ μικρῷ ἑαυτοὺς ἐνδύσουσιν· (2) ἡμεῖς δὲ ἀθῶοι ἐσόμεθα ἀπὸ ταύτης τῆς ἁμαρτίας.

(Chap. 59, no. 1) But if some are disobedient to what has been said by him [Christ] through us, let them know that they will ensnare themselves in not a little error and danger. (2) But we shall be free from this sin.

(c. 63, no. 2) Χαρὰν γὰρ καὶ ἀγαλλίασιν ἡμῖν παρέξετε, ἐὰν ὑπήκοοι γενόμενοι τοῖς ὑφ' ἡμῶν γεγραμμένοις διὰ τοῦ ἁγίου Πνεύματος ἐκκόψητε τὴν ἀθέμιτον τοῦ ζήλου ὑμῶν ὀργὴν κατὰ τὴν ἔντευξιν, ἣν ἐποιησάμεθα περὶ εἰρήνης καὶ ὁμονοίας ἐν τῇδε τῇ ἐπιστολῇ.

(Chap. 63, no. 2) For you will give us joy and gladness if by obedience to what we have written through the Holy Spirit, you get rid of that uncontrolled anger of your envy in accord with the request we have made in this letter for the sake of peace and harmony.

EVARISTUS: 101 (97?)–105?
 ALEXANDER I: 105 (107?)–115 (116?)
 XYSTUS (SIXTUS) I: 115 (116?)–125?
 TELESPHORUS: 125?–136?
 HYGINUS: 136?–140?
 PIUS I: 140?–155?
 ANICETUS: 155?–166
 SOTER: 166?–174 (175?)
 ELEUTHERIUS: 174 (175?)–189?
 VICTOR I: 189–198 (199?)

ZEPHYRINUS: 198 (199?)–217

105: Dogmatic Declarations of Zephyrinus and Callistus

These are cited in an argument against Callistus by Hippolytus of Rome in his work (wrongly attributed in PG to Origen of Alexandria) Philosophumena or Refutatio omnium haeresium (IX, 11), written after 222. Some attribute the second declaration, “The Father is not dead . . .”, to Zephyrinus instead of Callistus. Because the words of Zephyrinus, as they are recorded, demonstrate a great resemblance to the Modalist profession of faith (for which Noetus of Smyrna was condemned around 200), some doubt their authenticity.

Ed.: P. Wendland, Hippolytus 3, GChSch (Leipzig, 1916), 246₁₋₄ / PG 16 (III):3380A.

The Incarnate Word

Αὐτὸν δὲ τὸν Ζεφυρίων [Κάλλιστος] προάγων δημοσίᾳ ἔπειθε λέγειν· «Ἐγὼ οἶδα ἓνα Θεὸν Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν, καὶ πλὴν αὐτοῦ ἕτερον οὐδένα γενητὸν καὶ παθητὸν». ποτὲ δὲ [Κάλλιστος] λέγων· «Οὐχ ὁ Πατὴρ ἀπέθανεν, ἀλλὰ ὁ Υἱός». οὕτως ἄπανστον τὴν στάσιν ἐν τῷ λαῷ διετήρησεν.

But he [Callistus] induced Zephyrinus himself to affirm publicly: “I know only one God Christ Jesus, and besides him no other who was begotten and subject to suffering”; but then by saying “It was not the Father who died but the Son”, he [Callistus] sustained the quarrel among the people. 105

CALLISTUS I: 217 (218?)–222 (223?)

URBAN I: 222?–230

PONTIAN: July–August, 230–September 28, 235

ANTERUS: November 21 (22?), 235–January 3, 236

FABIAN: January 10, 236–January 20, 250

CORNELIUS: March 251–June (September?) 253

108: Letter Quantam sollicitudinem to Bishop Cyprian of Carthage, 251

This concerns a profession of faith given to Pope Cornelius by Maximus, Urbanus, and other Africans who were returning from the Novatian schism and communicated by him to Cyprian.

Ed.: G. Mercati, Le lettere di S. Cornelio papa, Studi e Documenti di Storia e Diritto 20 (Rome, 1899), 102₄₅₋₅₃ / W. Hartel: under Cyprian, letter 49, 2: CSEL 3/II, 611 / PL 3:744 / Routh 3:19 (= letter 2). —Reg.: JR 111.

The Monarchical Constitution of the Church

“Nos . . . Cornelium episcopum sanctissimae catholicae Ecclesiae, electum a Deo omnipotente et Christo Domino nostro scimus; nos errorem nostrum confitemur; imposturam passi sumus; circumventi sumus perfidia et loquacitate captiosa; nam etsi videbamus quasi quandam communicationem cum schismatico et haeretico homine habuisse, cor tamen nostrum semper in Ecclesia fuit, nec enim ignoramus, unum Deum esse, et unum Christum esse Dominum, quem confessi sumus, unum Spiritum Sanctum, unum episcopum in catholica Ecclesia esse debere [praepositum].”

“We . . . know that Cornelius was chosen bishop of the most holy Catholic Church by God almighty and by Christ our Lord; we confess our error; we suffered imposture; we were deceived by treachery and insidious verbosity; for although we seemed to have been in some type of communion with a schismatic and heretical man, our heart was always in the Church; for we are not unaware that there is only one God and one Christ, the Lord, whom we have confessed, and one Holy Spirit and that there ought to be one [supervising] bishop in the Catholic Church.” 108

109: Letter Ἴνα δὲ γνῶς to Bishop Fabius of Antioch, 251

This is a fragment of a lost letter preserved in the Historia ecclesiae VI, 43, 11, by Eusebius of Caesarea.

Ed.: E. Schwartz, Eusebius Werke 2: Kirchengeschichte (GChSch), 618₁₃₋₁₉ / PL 3:765AB / PG 20:621A / Routh 3:23f. —Reg.: JR 106 with attachments.

Ecclesiastical Hierarchy

Ὁ ἐκδικητῆς [Νοουάτος] οὖν τοῦ εὐαγγελίου οὐκ ἠπίστατο ἓνα ἐπίσκοπον δεῖν εἶναι ἐν καθολικῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ; ἐν ᾗ οὐκ ἠγνόει (πῶς γάρ); πρεσβυτέρους εἶναι τεσσαράκοντα ἕξ, διακόνους ἑπτὰ, ὑποδιακόνους ἑπτὰ, ἀκολουθῶντας δύο καὶ τεσσαράκοντα, ἐξορκιστάς

Did not that defender of the Gospel [Novatian] know that there ought to be one bishop in the Catholic Church? It was not hidden from him (for how could it be?) that in this there are forty-six priests, seven deacons, seven subdeacons, forty-two acolytes, and fifty-two exorcists, 109

δὲ καὶ ἀναγνώστας ἅμα πυλωροῦς δύο καὶ πενήκοντα, χήρας σὺν θλιβομένοις ὑπὲρ τὰς χιλίας πεντακοσίας· οὓς πάντας ἢ τοῦ Δεσπότητος χάρις καὶ φιλανθρωπία διατρέφει.

lectors, and porters as well as more than fifteen hundred widows and indigents, all being nourished by the grace and benevolence of the Master.

LUCIUS: June 25 (26?), 253–March 5, 254

STEPHEN I: May 12 (28?), 254–August 2, 257

110: Letter (Fragment) to Cyprian of Carthage, 256

These words of Stephen I, preserved in letter (74) of Cyprian to Pompeius, are a response to the decisions of an African Synod (in the Easter season of 256) that denied the validity of the baptism of heretics. In opposition to this, the pope sets forth the Roman tradition. On this point, Eusebius of Caesarea, in Historia ecclesiae (VII, 3, 1), writes: “Stephen, who maintained that no innovation should be introduced in opposition to the tradition in effect since the earliest times, was deeply disturbed” (Stephanus nihil adversus traditionem, quae iam inde ab ultimis temporibus obtinuerat, innovandum ratus, gravissime id tulit): E. Schwartz, Eusebius Werke 2: Kirchengeschichte (GChSch), 638₈₋₁₀ / PG 20:642A.

Ed.: W. Hartel: CSEL 3/II, 799 (in Cyprian, letter 74) / PL 3:1774B–1175A. —Reg.: JR 125.

Baptism of Heretics

110 (c. 1) ... “Si qui ergo a quacumque haeresi venient ad vos, nihil innovetur nisi quod traditum est, ut manus illis imponatur in paenitentiam, cum ipsi haeretici proprie alterutrum ad se venientes non baptizent, sed communicent tantum.”

(Chap. 1) ... “If any come to you from any heresy whatever, let nothing be introduced except what is already handed down, (namely,) that a hand be imposed on them for penance, since the heretics themselves, for their part, do not baptize one who comes to them from another group but simply admit him to their communion.”

[Rejecting these words of Pope Stephen, Cyprian continues:]

(c. 2) A quacumque haeresi venientem baptizari in ecclesia vetuit, id est omnium haeticorum baptismata iusta esse et legitima [Stephanus] iudicavit.

(Chap. 2) [Stephen] forbade that anyone coming from any heresy whatever would be baptized in the Church, that is, he judged the baptisms of all heretics to be just and legitimate.

111: Letter (Fragment) to the Bishops of Asia Minor, 256

The following words of Stephen were reported by Bishop Firmilian of Caesarea/Cappadocia in a letter to Cyprian of Carthage, chap. 18. The pope had threatened to break communion with the bishops of Cilicia, Cappadocia, Galatia, and surrounding provinces because they were rebaptizing heretics.

Ed.: W. Hartel: CSEL 3/II, 822 (in Cyprian, letter 75, 18); the additional locations 813, 815, 821 / PL 3:1218A, 1206B, 1209, 1210B, 1217B. —Reg.: JR 126.

Baptism of Heretics

111 (c. 18) “Sed in multum ... proficit nomen Christi ad fidem et baptismi sanctificationem, ut quicumque et ubicumque in nomine Christi baptizatus fuerit, consequatur statim gratiam Christi.”

(Chap. 18) “But in many ways the name of Christ contributes ... to the faith and the sanctification of baptism, so that whoever in any place has been baptized in the name of Christ receives at once the grace of Christ.”

[In the same letter, Firmilian also writes the following on the decision of Stephen I:]

(c. 5) ... quod Stephanus dixit, quasi Apostoli eos qui ab haeresi veniunt, baptizari prohibuerint et hoc custodiendum posteris tradiderint....

(Chap. 5) ... Stephen said that the apostles had prohibited the baptism of those who came from heresy and had handed this down to be observed by posterity....

(c. 8) ... Stephanus et qui illi consentiunt, contendunt dimissionem peccatorum et secundam nativitatem in haeticorum baptismata posse procedere, apud quos etiam ipsi confitentur Spiritum Sanctum non esse....

(Chap. 8) ... Stephen and those who agree with him contend that the forgiveness of sins and the second birth can also be obtained in the baptism of the heretics, among whom, they themselves confess, the Holy Spirit is not....

(c. 9) ... non putant quaerendum esse, quis ille sit qui baptizaverit, eo quod qui baptizatus sit, gratiam consequi potuerit invocata Trinitate nominum Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti. ... dicunt eum qui quomodocumque foris baptizatur, mente et fide sua baptismi gratiam consequi posse.

(c. 17) ... Stephanus, qui per successionem cathedram Petri habere se praedicat, nullo adversus haereticos zelo excitatur, concedens illis non modicam, sed maximam gratiae potestatem, ut dicat eos et adseveret per baptismi sacramentum sordes veteris hominis abluere, antiqua mortis peccata donare, regeneratione caelesti filios Dei facere, ad aeternam vitam divini lavacri sanctificatione reparare.

(Chap. 9) ... They do not think it necessary to inquire about who performed the baptism because the one baptized could have received grace through the invocation of the Trinity, the names of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit. ... They say that he who was baptized outside [the Church] by any means whatever can receive the grace of baptism through his disposition of mind and his faith.

(Chap. 17) ... Stephen, who claims the chair of Peter through succession, has no zeal against the heretics. He concedes to them, not a little, but a great power of grace. He says and asserts that the stains of the old man are washed away by the sacrament of baptism, that old deadly sins are forgiven, that children of God are made by a heavenly regeneration, and that they are restored to eternal life by a divine washing.

XYSTUS (SIXTUS) II: August 30? 257–August 6, 258

DIONYSIUS: July 22, 259 (260?)–December 27 (26?), 268

112–115: Letter (Fragment) to Dionysius, Bishop of Alexandria, 262

This letter, which was not written before late 260, is directed against the Tritheists and the Sabellians. It is partially preserved in Athanasius, De decretis Nicaenae synodi 26.

Ed.: H.G. Opitz, Athanasius Werke 2/I (Berlin and Leipzig, 1935), 22f. / C.L. Feltoe, Διονυσίου Λείψανα. The Letters and Other Remains of Dionysius of Alexandria (London, 1904), 177–82 / PG 25:461C–465A / Routh 3:373–77. —Reg.: JR 136.

Trinity and Incarnation

(c. 1) Ἐξῆς δ' ἂν εἰκότως λέγοιμι καὶ πρὸς τοὺς διαιροῦντας καὶ κατατέμνοντας καὶ ἀναιροῦντας τὸ σεμνότατον κήρυγμα τῆς ἐκκλησίας τοῦ Θεοῦ, τὴν μοναρχίαν, εἰς τρεῖς δυνάμεις τινὰς καὶ μεμερισμένας ὑποστάσεις καὶ θεότητας τρεῖς· πέπυσμαι γὰρ εἶναι τινὰς τῶν παρ' ἡμῖν κατηχούτων καὶ διδασκόντων τὸν θεῖον λόγον ταύτης ὑψηλῆς τῆς φρονήσεως· οἱ κατὰ διάμετρον, ὡς ἔπος εἰπεῖν, ἀντίκεινται τῇ Σαβελλίου γνώμῃ· ὁ μὲν γὰρ βλασφημεῖ αὐτὸν τὸν υἱὸν εἶναι λέγων τὸν πατέρα, καὶ ἔμπαλιν· οἱ δὲ τρεῖς θεοὺς τρόπον τινὰ κηρύττουσιν, εἰς τρεῖς ὑποστάσεις ξένας ἀλλήλων παντάπασιν κεχωρισμένας διαιροῦντες τὴν ἅγιαν μονάδα· ἠνώσθαι γὰρ ἀνάγκη τῷ Θεῷ τῶν ὄλων τὸν θεῖον λόγον, ἐμφιλοχεῖν δὲ τῷ Θεῷ καὶ ἐνδαιτυθῆσαι δεῖ τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα· ἤδη καὶ τὴν θεῖαν τριάδα εἰς ἓνα, ὡσπερ εἰς κορυφὴν τινα, τὸν Θεὸν τῶν ὄλων τὸν παντοκράτορα λέγω, συγκεφαλαιουθῆσαι τε καὶ συναγεσθαι πᾶσα ἀνάγκη. Μαρκίωνος γὰρ τοῦ ματαιόφρονος δίδαγμα εἰς τρεῖς ἀρχὰς τῆς μοναρχίας τομὴ καὶ διαιρέσεις, παιδεύμα ὃν διαβολικόν, οὐχὶ δὲ τῶν ὄντων μαθητῶν τοῦ Χριστοῦ καὶ τῶν ἀρεσκομένων τοῖς τοῦ σωτήρος μαθήμασιν. Οὗτοι γὰρ τριάδα μὲν κηρυττομένην ὑπὸ τῆς θείας γραφῆς σαφῶς ἐπίστανται, τρεῖς δὲ θεοὺς οὔτε παλαιὰν οὔτε καινὴν διαθήκην κηρύττουσαν.

(Chap. 1) It is quite appropriate now for me to speak against those who are tearing apart, destroying, and annihilating the most venerable proclamation of God's Church, the (divine) Monarchy, by making it three powers, divided hypostases, and three gods. For I have learned that there are some among you who, in preaching and teaching God's Word, are of this way of thinking. They are, so to speak, diametrically opposed to the opinion of Sabellius, who blasphemes in saying that the Son is the Father, and vice versa. But they, in a certain manner, proclaim three gods by dividing the sacred unity into three hypostases, completely divided and estranged from one another. In fact, it is necessary that the divine Word be united to the God of all, and the Holy Spirit must dwell in God and inhere in him. Therefore, it is absolutely necessary that the divine Trinity be brought together and united in one, as in a summit, namely, the God of all, the Almighty. The doctrine of that foolish Marcion, which cuts and divides the Monarchy into three principles, is a diabolical teaching that belongs neither to the true disciples of Christ nor to those who enjoy the teachings of the Savior. These disciples know for certain that the Trinity is proclaimed by the divine Scriptures and that neither the Old nor the New Testament proclaims three gods.

113 (c. 2) Οὐ μείον δ' ἂν τις καταμέμφουτο καὶ τοὺς ποίημα τὸν υἱὸν εἶναι δοξάζοντας, καὶ γεγονέναι τὸν κύριον ὡσπερ ἐν τι τῶν ὄντως γενομένων νομίζοντας, τῶν θεῶν λογίων γέννησιν αὐτῷ τὴν ἀρμόττουσαν καὶ πρέπουσαν, ἀλλ' οὐχὶ πλάσιν τινὰ καὶ ποιήσιν προσμαρτυρούντων. Βλάσφημον οὖν οὐ τὸ τυχόν, μέγιστον μὲν οὖν, χειροποίητον τρόπον τινὰ λέγειν τὸν κύριον. Εἰ γὰρ γέγονεν υἱός, ἦν ὅτε οὐκ ἦν· αἰεὶ δὲ ἦν, εἴ γε ἐν τῷ πατρὶ ἐστίν, ὡς αὐτὸς φησὶ [Io 14:10s], καὶ εἰ λόγος καὶ σοφία καὶ δύναμις ὁ Χριστός, ταῦτα γὰρ εἶναι τὸν Χριστὸν αἱ θεαὶ λέγουσι γραφαί [Io 1:14; 1 Cor 1:24], ὡσπερ ἐπίστασθε, ταῦτα δὲ δυνάμεις οὐσαι τοῦ Θεοῦ τυγχάνουσιν. Εἰ τοίνυν γέγονεν ὁ υἱός, ἦν ὅτε οὐκ ἦν ταῦτα· ἦν ἄρα καιρός, ὅτε χωρὶς τούτων ἦν ὁ Θεός· ἀτοπώτατον δὲ τοῦτο.

114 Καὶ τί ἂν ἐπὶ πλέον περὶ τούτων πρὸς ὑμᾶς διαλεγοίμην, πρὸς ἄνδρας πνευματοφόρους καὶ σαφῶς ἐπίσταμένους τὰς ἀτοπίας τὰς ἐκ τοῦ ποίημα λέγειν τὸν υἱὸν ἀνακλυπούσας; Αἴς μοι δοκοῦσι μὴ προσεσχέμενοι τὸν νοῦν οἱ καθηγησάμενοι τῆς δόξης ταύτης, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο κομιδῇ τοῦ ἀληθοῦς διημαρτηκέμαι, ἐτέρως ἢ βούλεται ταύτῃ ἡ θεία καὶ προφητικὴ γραφὴ τὸ «κύριος ἔκτισέ με ἀρχὴν ὁδῶν αὐτοῦ» [Prv 8:22; Septg.] ἐκδεξάμενοι. Οὐ μία γὰρ ἡ τοῦ «ἔκτισεν», ὡς ἴστε, σημασία. «Ἐκτισε» γὰρ ἐνταῦθα ἀκουστέον ἀντὶ τοῦ «ἐπέστησε τοῖς ὑπ' αὐτοῦ γεγονούσιν ἔργοις», γεγονούσι δὲ δι' αὐτοῦ τοῦ υἱοῦ. Οὐχὶ δὲ γε τὸ «ἔκτισε» νῦν λέγουι' ἂν ἐπὶ τοῦ «ἐποίησε». Διαφέρει γὰρ τοῦ «ποιῆσαι» τὸ «κτίσαι». «Οὐκ αὐτὸς οὗτός σου πατὴρ ἐκτίσαστό σε, καὶ ἐποίησέ σε καὶ ἔκτισε σε;» [Dt 32:6; Septg.] τῇ ἐν τῷ δευτερονομίῳ μεγάλη ὠδή ὁ Μωσῆς φησὶ. Πρὸς οὓς καὶ εἶποι ἂν τις· Ὡς ῥησοκίνδυνοι ἄνθρωποι, ποίημα «ὁ πρωτότοκος πάσης κτίσεως» [Col 1:15], «ὁ ἐκ γαστρὸς πρὸ ἑωσφόρου γεννηθείς» [Ps 109:3; Septg.], ὁ εἰπὼν ὡς σοφία, «πρὸ δὲ πάντων βουνῶν γεννᾷ με» [Prv 8:25; Septg.]; Καὶ πολλαχοῦ δὲ τῶν θεῶν λογίων γεγενῆσθαι, ἀλλ' οὐ γεγονέναι τὸν υἱὸν λεγόμενον εὖροι τις ἂν. Ὑφ' ὧν καταφανῶς ἐλέγχονται τὰ ψεύδη περὶ τῆς τοῦ κυρίου γεννήσεως ὑπολαμβάνοντες, οἱ ποιήσιν αὐτοῦ τὴν θεῖαν καὶ ἄρρητον γέννησιν λέγειν τολμώντες.

115 (c. 3) Οὐτ' οὖν καταμερίζειν χρὴ εἰς τρεῖς θεότητες τὴν θαυμαστήν καὶ θεῖαν μονάδα, οὔτε ποιήσει κωλύειν τὸ ἀξίωμα καὶ τὸ ὑπερβάλλον μέγεθος τοῦ κυρίου. Ἀλλὰ πεπιστευκέμαι εἰς Θεὸν πατέρα παντοκράτορα, καὶ εἰς Χριστὸν Ἰησοῦν τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ καὶ εἰς τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα, ἠνώσθαι δὲ τῷ Θεῷ τῶν ὄλων τὸν λόγον. «Ἐγὼ» γὰρ φησὶ «καὶ ὁ πατὴρ ἐν ἐσμεν» [Io 10:30]· καὶ «ἐγὼ ἐν τῷ πατρὶ, καὶ ὁ πατὴρ ἐν ἐμοί» [Io 14:10]. Οὕτω γὰρ ἂν καὶ

(Chap. 2) Nor is anyone less worthy of blame who maintains that the Son is a creature and who thinks that the Lord was made like any of those things that were really made, even though the divine Word testifies to his suitable and appropriate generation, but not as though he were something formed and created. And it is not any blasphemy, but the greatest of blasphemies to say that the Lord is some type of thing fashioned by hands. For if the Son was made, then there was a time when he was not; but he always was in the Father, as he himself says [Jn 14:10f.]. If Christ is Word, wisdom, and power—which, as you know, the sacred Scriptures say he is [Jn 1:14; 1 Cor 1:24]—these happen to be powers of God; and if the Son was made, then there was a time when these powers did not exist, and there would have been a time when God was without them, which is completely absurd.

What more should I say about this subject to you, men filled with the Spirit who certainly know the absurdities that arise from saying the Son is a creature? Those who promote such an opinion do not seem to have given sufficient attention to it, and, as a result, they have totally missed the truth because they have understood the passage: “The LORD created me as the beginning of his ways” [Prov 8:22 LXX] in a way other than that wished by the divine and prophetic Scripture. Indeed, as you know, there is not only one meaning of “he has created.” In reality, “he has created” must here be understood as meaning: “He has been established as the head of the works made by him”, that is, those made by the Son himself. In this case, “he has created” is not said in the sense of “he has made”. In reality, there is a difference between “to create” and “to make”. In the great hymn in Deuteronomy, Moses says: “Did not your father procure you, make you, and create you?” [Deut 32:6 LXX]. To them it can also be said, O reckless men, a creature, then, is the “firstborn of all creation” [Col 1:15]; “the one born from the womb before the morning star” [Ps 109:3 LXX]; the one who spoke as wisdom, saying, “Before all the hills, he has engendered me” [Prov 8:25 LXX]. Likewise, one can find many other passages of divine Scripture in which it is said that the Son was generated but not made. For these reasons, those who dare to say that the divine and ineffable generation is a creation are clearly convicted of uttering lies regarding the generation of the Lord.

(Chap. 3) Therefore, we must never divide the awesome and divine unity into three divinities or injure the dignity and transcendent grandeur of God by speaking here of “making”. Instead, it is necessary to believe in God the Father Almighty, and in Jesus Christ, his Son, and in the Holy Spirit. We must also believe that the Word is one with the God of the universe. Indeed, he says “The Father and I are one” [Jn 10:30], and: “I am in the Father and the Father is in me” [Jn 14:10]. Thus ἡ θεία τριάς καὶ τὸ ἅγιον κήρυγμα τῆς μοναρχίας διασώζοιτο.

both the Trinity and the holy proclamation of the Monarchy must be preserved.

FELIX I: January 5 (3?), 269–December 30, 274

EUTYCHIAN: January 4 (3?), 275–December 8 (7?), 283

CAIUS: December 17 (16?), 283–April 22, 295 (296?)

MARCELLINUS: June 30, 295 (296?)–October 25 (January 15?), 304

117–121: Synod of ELVIRA (Spain), 300–303?

It is uncertain when the Synod of Elvira (today a suburb of Granada) took place. Following L. Duchesne, the years 300–303 are accepted by most today (but others point to 306–312 and even the time of Sylvester I). From the synodal acts, only the opening day is certain: May 15. Canon 33 seems to be the most ancient prescription of clerical celibacy.

Ed.: Bruns 2:3, 5–7, 12 / MaC 2:7B–18C / HaC 1:215A–258C / PL 84:303–10 / CdLuc 383–93 / CVis 3, 6f., 15.

Indissolubility of Marriage

Can. 9. Item femina fidelis, quae adulterum maritum reliquerit fidelem et alterum ducit, prohibeatur ne ducat; si duxerit, non prius accipiat communionem, nisi quem reliquerit prius de saeculo exierit; nisi forte necessitas infirmitatis dare compulerit.

Can. 9 Likewise, if a believing woman has left her believing, adulterous husband and (wishes to) marry another, let her be forbidden to marry; if she does marry, she may not receive communion unless (the husband) she abandoned has previously departed this world, unless, perhaps, the exigency of illness urges the giving (of it) to her. 117

Clerical Celibacy

Can. 27. Episcopus, vel quilibet alius clericus, aut sororem aut filiam virginem dicatam Deo tantum secum habeat; extraneam nequaquam habere placuit.

Can. 27. A bishop, or any other cleric, may have (living) with him only his sister or (his) virgin daughter dedicated to God; it is decided that he (must) by no means have a stranger (with him). 118

Can. 33. Placuit in totum prohibere episcopis, presbyteris et diaconibus, vel omnibus clericis positus in ministerio, abstinere se a coniugibus suis et non generare filios: quicumque vero fecerit, ab honore clericatus exterminetur.

Can. 33. It is decided to impose the following absolute interdiction on bishops, priests, and deacons, as well as all other clerics exercising ministry: they are to abstain from their wives and not beget children; to be sure, whoever does this (beget children) shall be removed from the clerical state. 119

Baptism and Confirmation

Can. 38. Loco peregre navigantes aut si ecclesia in proximo non fuerit, posse fidelem, qui lavacrum suum integrum habet nec sit bigamus, baptizare in necessitate infirmitatis positum catechumenum, ita ut, si supervixerit, ad episcopum eum perducatur, ut per manus impositionem perfici possit.

Can. 38. If someone is traveling by sea in a foreign place or if there is no church in the vicinity, a believer who has kept his baptism intact and is not a bigamist may baptize a catechumen if there is an exigency of sickness, on condition that, if (the catechumen) survives, he will bring him to the bishop, so that he might be perfected by the imposition of hands. 120

Can. 77. Si quis diaconus regens plebem sine episcopo vel presbytero aliquos baptizaverit, episcopus eos per benedictionem perficere debet; quod si ante de saeculo recesserint, sub fide, qua quis credidit, poterit esse iustus.

Can. 77. If a deacon who is directing the people has baptized some without a bishop or a priest, the bishop will have to perfect them by means of a blessing; but if they should depart the world before (this is done), they can be justified by the faith with which they believed. 121

MARCELLUS I: May/June 308 (307?)–January 16, 309 (308?)

(In the judgment of some researchers, this pope is identical with Marcellinus.)

EUSEBIUS: April 18, 309 (310?)–August 17, 309 (310?)

MILTIADES (MELCHIADES): July 2, 310 (311?)–January 11, 314

SYLVESTER I: January 31, 314–December 31, 335

123: First Synod of ARLES, begun August 1, 314

This was concerned essentially with the Donatists.

Ed.: Turner 1/II/II (1939), 387f. [= chap. 9] / C. Munier: CpChL 148 (1963): 10f. / Routh 4:306, 308f. [= chap. 8] / Bruns 2:108 / MaC 2:472A. The same canon is also recorded in the synodal letter of Pope Sylvester: Turner, 1/II/II (1939), 387f. [= chap. 9] / CSEL 26:208₁₀₋₁₅ / C. Munier: CpChL 148 (1963): 6 / KIT 122:21 (no. 1652-57) / Gratian, Decretum, p. III, dist. 4, c. 109 (Frdb 1:1395).

Baptism of Heretics

123 Can. 9 (8). De Afris, quod propria lege sua untur, ut rebaptizent, placuit, ut si ad Ecclesiam aliquis de haeresi venerit, interrogent eum symbolum, et si perviderint eum in Patre et Filio et Spiritu Sancto esse baptizatum, manus ei tantum inponatur, ut accipiat Spiritum Sanctum; quod si interrogatus non responderit hanc Trinitatem, baptizetur.

Can. 9 (8). With respect to the Africans, because they use their own law so as to rebaptize, it has been decided that, if anyone comes into the Church from heresy, he should be questioned on the profession of faith, and if it is determined that he has been baptized in (the name of) the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, only hands should be imposed on him, so that he may receive the Holy Spirit; but if, upon being questioned, he does not respond with this Trinity, he is to be baptized.

First Council of NICAEA (First Ecumenical): June 19–August 25, 325

This council of the “318 Fathers”, convoked by Emperor Constantine the Great, mainly condemned the Arians. Begun on June 19 (not on May 20; cf. E. Schwartz, in: Nachr. der Gesellsch. der Wissensch. [Göttingen, 1904], 398; Turner 1/II/II [1904], 105: “XIII Kal. Iul”). Only the profession of faith, twenty canons, and a synodal letter are preserved.

125–126: Nicene Creed, June 19, 325

It is among the most celebrated definitions of the faith. The most authentic text is offered by Eusebius of Caesarea, “Letter to His Dioceses” (PG 20:1540BC); Athanasius of Alexandria, “Letter to the Emperor Jovin”, chap. 3 (PG 26:817B); De decretis Nicaenae synodi 37, § 2 (cf. Opitz, Athanasius Werke 2/1 (Berlin and Leipzig, 1935), 36); Basil the Great, letter 125, chap. 2 (PG 32:548C). The text of later witnesses can no longer be accepted as authentic, for example, that of the Council of Chalcedon (ACOe 2/III, 79₁₆₋₂₃). The example given by the Council of Nicaea gave rise to the practice of drawing up “synodal creeds”.

Among Latin translations of the creed, the versions that stand out for their antiquity are those of Hilary of Poitiers, and, among these, the one from the work De synodis 84 (PL 10:536A) is placed beside the following Greek text (including the anathema).

Ed.: [Greek text] I. Ortiz de Urbina, El simbolo Niceno (Madrid, 1947), 21f. / Ortiz de Urbina in OrChrPer 2 (1936): 342f. / H. G. Opitz, Athanasius Werke 2/1 (Berlin and Leipzig, 1935), 30, 36f. / G. L. Dossetti, Il simbolo di Nicea e di Constantinopoli. Testi e ricerche di scienze religiose 2 (Rome, 1967), 226–27 / Hn § 142 / MaC 2:665C–E (cf. 5:688B) / COeD, 3rd ed., 5₂₋₁₉ / Kelly 215–16 / Ltzm 26f. —[Latin translation] The other translations of Hilary of Poitiers (except for the one cited) are in A. Feder: CSEL 65:150 / The majority of translations are found in the collection of canons in Turner 1/II/II (1904), 106–9 [= the most ancient]; 1/II/I (1913), 297–319 [= later forms]; ibid., 320–24 provides an abundant list of variations.

[Versio graeca]

125 Πιστεύομεν εἰς ἕνα Θεόν, πατέρα παντοκράτορα, πάντων ὄρατῶν τε καὶ ἀοράτων ποιητὴν, καὶ εἰς ἕνα κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν, τὸν
υἰὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, γεννηθέντα ἐκ τοῦ
Πατρὸς μονογενῆ,

[Versio latina]

Credimus in unum Deum, Patrem omnipotentem, omnium visibilium et invisibilium factorem.
Et in unum Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum Filium Dei, natum ex Patre unigennitum, hoc est de sub-

[Greek version]

We believe in one God,
the Father almighty, creator of all things,
visible and invisible,
and in one Lord Jesus Christ, the Son of God,
the Only-Begotten generated from the Father,

[Latin version]

We believe in one God,
the Father almighty, creator of all things,
visible and invisible.
And in our one Lord, Jesus Christ, the Son of God, the Only-Begotten born from the Father, that τουτέστιν ἐκ τῆς οὐσίας τοῦ Πατρὸς, Θεὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ, φῶς ἐκ φωτός, Θεὸν ἀληθινὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ ἀληθινοῦ, γεννηθέντα οὐ ποιηθέντα, ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρί, δι' οὗ τὰ πάντα ἐγένετο, τὰ τε ἐν τῷ οὐρανῷ καὶ τὰ ἐν τῇ γῆ, stantia Patris, Deum ex Deo, lumen ex lumine, Deum verum de Deo vero, natum, non factum, unius substantiae cum Patre (quod graece dicunt homousion), per quem omnia facta sunt, quae in caelo et in terra, that is, from the being of the Father, God from God, light from light, true God from true God, begotten, not made, one in being with the Father, through whom all things were made, those in heaven and those on earth, is, from the substance of the Father, God from God, light from light, true God from true God, born, not made, of one substance with the Father (which they call ὁμοούσιος in Greek), through whom all things were made, those in heaven and those on earth, τοὺς δι' ἡμᾶς τοὺς ἀνθρώπους καὶ διὰ τὴν ἡμετέραν σωτηρίαν κατελθόντα καὶ σαρκωθέντα, ἐνανθρωπήσαντα, παθόντα, καὶ ἀναστάντα τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, [καὶ] ἀνελθόντα εἰς τοὺς οὐρανοὺς, ἐρχόμενον κρῖναι ζῶντας καὶ νεκρούς, καὶ εἰς τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα.

qui propter nostram salutem descendit, incarnatus est et homo factus est et passus est, et resurrexit tertia die, et ascendit in caelos, venturus iudicare vivos et mortuos.

who for us men and for our salvation came down and became flesh, was made man, suffered, and rose again on the third day, ascended into heaven and will come to judge the living and the dead, who for our salvation came down and became flesh, and was made man, suffered, and rose again on the third day, ascended into heaven, and will come to judge the living and the dead.

Et in Spiritum Sanctum.

and in the Holy Spirit.

And in the Holy Spirit.

Τοὺς δὲ λέγοντας· ἦν ποτε ὅτε οὐκ ἦν», καὶ «πρὶν γεννηθῆναι οὐκ ἦν» καὶ ὅτι ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων ἐγένετο, ἢ ἐξ ἐτέρας ὑποστάσεως ἢ οὐσίας φάσκοντας εἶναι ἢ κτιστὸν [-!] ἢ τρεπτὸν ἢ ἀλλοιωτὸν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἀναθεμα-τίξει ἡ καθολικὴ ἐκκλησία.

Eos autem, qui dicunt “Erat, quando non erat” et “Antequam nascereteur, non erat” et “Quod de non exstantibus factus est” vel ex alia substantia aut essentia dicentes aut convertibilem aut demutabilem Deum [Filiū Dei¹], hos anathematizat catholica Ecclesia.

However, those who say: “There was a time when he was not” and “Before he was born he was not” and that he was made from nothing or who say that the Son of God may be of a different hypostasis or essence, or may be created or [-!] subject to change and alteration, (such persons) the Catholic Church anathematizes.

However, those who say: 126 “There was a time when he was not” and “Before he was born, he was not” and “He was made from nothing” or who say that God [the Son of God]¹ may be of another substance or essence or may be subject to change and alteration, (such persons) the Catholic Church anathematizes.

127–129: Canons

Ed.: Bruns 1:16, 19, 18 / HaC 1:326D–330B (cf. 431E–436A) / MaC 2:672B–673D (cf. 896, 900, 904) / COeD, 3rd ed., 927–1237 / [Latin text:] Turner I/II (1904), 122–33, 140f., 130–33 [ancient collections]; 262, 267, 272 [collection of Dionysius Exiguus] / PL 56:827C–830A. —Here the version of Dionysius is presented.

[Regarding 128a:] One who is castrated (a eunuch) had already been denied access into the “house of the Lord” in Deuteronomy 23:2. But since in Scripture it is reported that Christ praises eunuchs “who have made themselves such for the kingdom of heaven”

*126 ¹ So read the remaining textual witnesses according to Turner I/II:108f.; Turner I/II:298ff., 324.

(Mt 19:12) and in another passage recommends self-mutilation (“If ... causes you to sin, tear it out”: Mt 5:29f.; 18:8f.; par.), it could seem peculiar to condemn and prohibit an act of this type committed with the best intentions. There were those who took the words of Christ literally and approved of castration: the sect of the Valesians, for example, if Epiphanius of Salamis can be believed (Panarion haeresium 58, 1: ed. by K. Holl [GChSch] 2:358 / PG 41:1009D–1011C; this fact is repeated by Augustine, De haeresibus 37: ed. by R. Vander Plaetse and C. Beukers: CpChL 46 [1969]: 306 / PL 42:32). It is also known that Origen of Alexandria castrated himself in his youth (Eusebius of Caesarea, Historia ecclesiae VI, 8: ed. by E. Schwartz [GChSch] 2/II, 534 / PG 20:537AB). Canon 1 of Nicaea seems to be the first ecclesiastical prohibition of castration. The (pseudepigraphic) Canones Apostolorum, which take up this theme in canons 21–24 (Turner 1/II, 17f. / Bruns 1:3f.), do not date earlier than the late fourth century. Cf. a collection of similar prohibitions in Gratian’s Decretum, p. I, dist. 55, c. 4–5, 7–9 (Frdb 1:216f.).

Since the problem of castration and mutilation brings to mind the question of the right of man to dispose of his own body, we recall some words of Pius XII in which the principle of totality, which should apply here, is formulated (“Address to the Participants of the First International Congress of the Histopathology of the Nervous System”, September 13, 1952: AAS 44 [1952]: 782): “Because he [the patient] is the utilizer and not the owner, he does not have an unlimited power to impose acts of destruction or mutilation of an anatomical or functional character. But, in virtue of the principle of totality, of his right to make use of the services of the organism as a whole, he can dispose of individual parts by destruction or mutilation when and in the measure it is necessary for the good of the being in its entirety, in order to assure its existence or to avoid and, naturally, to repair grave and enduring injuries that could not be otherwise avoided or treated” (Parce qu’il [le patient] est usufructier et non propriétaire, il n’a pas un pouvoir illimité de poser des actes de destruction ou de mutilation de caractère anatomique ou fonctionnel. Mais, en vertu du principe de totalité, de son droit d’utiliser les services de l’organisme comme un tout, il peut disposer des parties individuelles pour les détruire ou les mutiler, lorsque et dans la mesure où c’est nécessaire pour le bien de l’être dans son ensemble, pour assurer son existence, ou pour éviter, et naturellement pour réparer des dommages graves et durables, qui ne pourraient être autrement ni écartés ni réparés).

Ed.: MaC 2:668C / COeD, 3rd ed., 64–17 / in Gelasius of Cyzicus, Historia ecclesiae II, 32, 1, ed. by G. Loeschke and M. Heinemann [GChSch] 1123–10 / Turner 1/III, 112b.

Baptism of Heretics

127 η'. Περί τῶν ὀνομαζόντων μὲν ἑαυτοὺς Καθαροὺς ποτε, προσερχομένων δὲ τῇ καθολικῇ καὶ ἀποστολικῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, ἔδοξε τῇ ἁγίᾳ καὶ μεγάλῃ συνόδῳ, ὥστε χειροθετούμενους αὐτοὺς μένειν οὕτως ἐν τῷ κλήρῳ· πρὸ πάντων δὲ τοῦτο ὁμολογήσαι αὐτοὺς ἐγγράφως προσήκει, ὅτι συνθήσονται καὶ ἀκολουθήσουσι τοῖς τῆς καθολικῆς καὶ ἀποστολικῆς ἐκκλησίας δόγμασιν· τουτέστι καὶ διγάμοις κοινωνεῖν καὶ τοῖς ἐν τῷ διωγμῷ παραπετωκόσιν...

128 ιθ'. Περί τῶν Παυλιανισάντων, εἴτα προσφυγόντων τῇ καθολικῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ, ὅρος ἐκτέθειται, ἀναβαπτίζεσθαι αὐτοὺς ἐξάπαντος· εἰ δὲ τινες ἐν τῷ παρεληλυθότῳ χρόνῳ ἐν τῷ κλήρῳ ἐξητάσθησαν, εἰ μὲν ἄμεμπτοι καὶ ἀνεπίληπτοι φανεῖεν, ἀναβαπτισθέντες χειροτονείσθησαν ὑπὸ τοῦ τῆς καθολικῆς ἐκκλησίας ἐπισκόπου...

8. With respect to those (i.e., the Novatianists) who call themselves “the Cathars” (= the pure ones), the holy and great council decrees that, when they wish to enter into the catholic and apostolic Church, they are to receive an imposition of the hands and thus may remain among the clergy. First of all, however, it is fitting that they profess in writing to accept and follow the decrees of the catholic and apostolic Church: namely, to remain in communion with those who have been married twice and with those who have lapsed during persecution...

19. With regard to the Paulianists who subsequently seek refuge in the Catholic Church, it is decided that they must, by all means, be rebaptized. In cases where some of them, in the past, were members of the clergy, if they seem blameless and above reproach, once they are rebaptized, they are to be ordained by the bishop of the Catholic Church...

Castration

128a α'. Εἴ τις ἐν νόσῳ ὑπὸ ἰατρῶν ἐχειροουργήθη, ἢ ὑπὸ βαρβάρων ἐξετημήθη, οὗτος μενέτω ἐν τῷ κλήρῳ· εἰ δὲ τις ὑγιαίνων ἑαυτὸν ἐξέτεμε, τοῦτον καὶ ἐν τῷ κλήρῳ ἐξεταζόμενον πεπαῦσθαι προσήκει, καὶ ἐκ τοῦ δεῦρο μηδένα τῶν τοιούτων χρῆναι προσάγεσθαι· ὡσπερ δὲ τοῦτο πρόδηλον, ὅτι περὶ τῶν ἐπιτηδευόντων τὸ πρᾶγμα καὶ τολμώντων ἑαυτοὺς ἐκτέμνειν εἴρηται· οὕτως εἰ τινες ὑπὸ βαρβάρων ἢ δεσποτῶν εὐνοχίσθησαν, εὐρίσκονται δὲ ἄλλως ἄξιοι, τοὺς τοιούτους εἰς κλῆρον προσίεται ὁ κανὼν.

1. If anyone has been castrated by physicians during an illness or by barbarians, he may remain in the clergy. But if anyone is healthy and castrates himself, it is appropriate that he be excluded from the clergy, and from now on no such person should be admitted. Because it is also clear that this is said about those who engage in this practice deliberately by daring to castrate themselves, if some are made eunuchs by barbarians or tyrants, but are otherwise found worthy, the canon admits such persons to the clergy.

Viaticum for the Dying

ιγ'. Περὶ δὲ τῶν ἐξοδευόντων ὁ παλαιὸς καὶ κανονικὸς νόμος φυλαχθήσεται καὶ νῦν, ὥστε εἴ τις ἐξοδεύει, τοῦ τελευταίου καὶ ἀναγκαιοτάτου ἐφοδίου μὴ ἀποστερεῖσθαι· εἰ δὲ ἀπογνωσθῆς καὶ κοινωνίας πάλιν τυχῶν, πάλιν ἐν τοῖς ζῶσιν ἐξετασθῆ, μετὰ τῶν κοινωνούντων τῆς εὐχῆς μόνης ἔστω· καθόλου δὲ καὶ περὶ παντὸς οὐτινος ἐξοδεύοντος, αἰτοῦντος τοῦ μετασχεῖν εὐχαριστίας ὁ ἐπίσκοπος μετὰ δοκιμασίας ἐπιδότω [al.: μεταδιδότω τῆς προσφορᾶς].

13. Concerning the dying, the ancient law is still to be maintained, namely, that those who are dying are not to be deprived of their last, most necessary viaticum. But if one whose life has been despaired of has been admitted to communion and has shared in the offering and is found to be numbered again among the living, he shall be among those who take part in prayer only. But as a general rule, in the case of anyone whatsoever who is dying and seeks to share in the Eucharist, the bishop upon examining the matter shall give him a share [in the offering].

130: Synodal Letter Ἐπειδὴ τῆς to the Egyptians

Ed.: In Athanasius of Alexandria, De decretis Nicaenae synodi 36, §§ 2–4; ed. by Opitz, Athanasius Werke 2/1 (Berlin and Leipzig, 1935), 35. —In Socrates, Historia ecclesiae I, 9; PG 67:78C. —In Theodoret of Cyrus, Historia ecclesiae I, 9, 4f.; ed. by L. Parmentier (GChSch), 39 / PG 82:928C. —In Gelasius of Cyzicus, Historia ecclesiae II, 34, 4f.; ed. by G. Loeschke and M. Heinemann (GChSch), 121.

The Errors of Arius

(c. 1, no. 2) Πρῶτον μὲν οὖν ἐξ ἀπάντων ἐξετάσθη τὰ κατὰ τὴν ἀσέβειαν καὶ τὴν παρανομίαν Ἀρείου καὶ τῶν σὺν αὐτῷ, . . . καὶ παμψηφεί ἔδοξεν ἀναθεματισθῆναι τὴν ἀσεβῆ αὐτοῦ δόξαν, καὶ τὰ ῥήματα καὶ τὰ ὀνόματα τὰ βλάσφημα, οἷς ἐκέχρητο βλασφημῶν, τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ λέγων ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων, καὶ εἶναι ποτε οὐκ ἦν· καὶ αὐτεξουσιότητι κακίας καὶ ἀρετῆς δεκτικὸν τὸν Υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ λέγοντος, καὶ κτίσμα καὶ ποίημα ὀνομάζοντος, ἅπαντα ἀνεθεμάτισεν ἡ ἁγία σύνοδος, οὐδὲ ὅσον ἀκοῦσαι τῆς ἀσεβοῦς δόξης ἢ ἀπονοίας καὶ τῶν βλασφημῶν ῥημάτων ἀνασχομένη.

(Chap. 1, no. 2) First of all, the impiety and perversity of Arius and his followers were examined, . . . and it was unanimously decided to condemn his impious doctrine and the blasphemous utterances by which he expressed himself regarding the Son of God: maintaining in fact that he came from nothing and that prior to his birth he did not exist; he also said that the Son of God, through his free will, had capacity for both good and evil and called him a creature and something made. The holy council anathematized all of this, not wishing even to listen to this impious and insane doctrine or such blasphemous language.

MARK: January 18–October 7, 336

JULIUS I: February 6, 337–April 12, 352132: Letter Ἀνέγνων τὰ γράμματα to the Antiochenes, 341

Ed.: CouE 385B / PL 8:906A / PG 25:305D–308A (= Athanasius, Apologia contra Arianos 35; the letter is inserted within) / MaC 2:1229E–1232A. —Reg.: JR 186.

Primacy of the Roman See

(22) . . . Εἰ γὰρ καὶ ὄλωσ, ὡς φατέ, γέγονε τι εἰς αὐτοὺς ἀμάρτημα, ἔδει κατὰ τὸν ἐκκλησιαστικὸν κανόνα, καὶ μὴ οὕτως γεγενῆσθαι τὴν κρίσιν. Ἔδει γραφῆναι πᾶσιν ἡμῖν, ἵνα οὕτως παρὰ πάντων ὀρισθῆ τὸ δίκαιον· ἐπίσκοποι γὰρ ἦσαν οἱ πάσχοντες, καὶ οὐχ αἱ τυχοῦσαι ἐκκλησίαι αἱ πάσχουσαι, ἀλλ' ὧν αὐτοὶ οἱ ἀπόστολοι δι' ἑαυτῶν καθηγήσαντο. Διὰ τί δὲ περὶ τῆς Ἀλεξανδρέων ἐκκλησίας μάλιστα

(22) . . . If indeed, as you say, there was some transgression committed by them, the judgment ought to have been in accordance with ecclesiastical norm and not in this manner. You should have written to all of us so that what is just might be established by all; those concerned were bishops; and the churches concerned were not just any ones, but those that the apostles themselves personally governed. Yet why was nothing written to us, οὐκ ἐγράφετο ἡμῖν; Ἡ ἀγνοεῖτε ὅτι τοῦτο ἔθος ἦν, πρότερον γράφεσθαι ἡμῖν, καὶ οὕτως ἔνθεν ὀρίζεσθαι τὰ δίκαια; Εἰ μὴν οὖν τι τοιοῦτον ἦν ὑποπτευθὲν εἰς τὸν ἐπίσκοπον τὸν ἐκεῖ, ἔδει πρὸς τὴν ἐνταῦθα ἐκκλησίαν γραφῆναι.

especially regarding the Church of Alexandria? Or did you perhaps not know that this was the custom: that first you write to us and thus what is just is determined from here? If, therefore, something of this kind was suspected regarding the bishop there, this Church should have been informed of it.

133-135: Synod of SERDICA, ca. 343

This synod was convoked either in the autumn of 343 or earlier in 342 at Serdica (Sofia, Bulgaria; for the spelling “Serdica” instead of “Sardica”, cf. Turner 1/II/III, 533) but was deprived of its ecumenical character by the absence or, more precisely, the departure of many bishops. Its canons are numbered in very different order in various collections; cf. the comparative table in Turner 1/II/III, 442. The Latin text that we have today is not the original; in opposition to Turner and Schwartz, the opinion now prevails that the original language of the decree was Greek (cf. G. von Hankiewicz in ZSavStKan 2 [1912]: 44-99).

Ed.: Turner 1/II/III (1930), 455-57 [= the Latin text alone with critical apparatus]; 492-94 [= Latin and Greek] / Turner in JThSt 3 (1902): 396f. [= cann. 3 and 7 of the Prisca of Dionysius Exiguus] / Bruns 1:90-94 [Greek and Latin] / MaC 3:7C-9C, 23C-25A, 32C-33C / HaC 1:637f., 641f. / PL 56:775B-777C; cf. 832C-833C; 84:116.

Order of the Churches and Primacy of the Roman See

[Recensio latina]

133 (([Can. 3a] Isidor. can. 4) Osius episcopus dixit: Illud quoque [suppl. e graeco: necessario adiciendum est], ut episcopus de provincia ad aliam provinciam, in qua sunt episcopi, non transeat; nisi forte a fratribus suis invitatus, ne videamur ianuam caritatis clausisse.

Illud quoque providendum est: si in aliqua provincia forte aliquis episcopus contra fratrem suum episcopum litem habuerit, non ex his unus ex alia provincia advocet episcopos.

Quod si aliquis episcopus iudicatus fuerit in aliqua causa, et putat bonam causam habere, ut iterum iudicium renovetur, si vobis placet, sanctissimi Petri Apostoli memoriam honoremus: scribatur vel ab his, qui causam examinant, vel ab episcopis, qui in proxima provincia morantur, Romano episγ'. Ὅσιος ἐπίσκοπος εἶπεν· Καὶ τοῦτο προστεθῆναι ἀναγκαῖον, ἵνα μηδεὶς ἐπισκόπων ἀπὸ τῆς ἑαυτοῦ ἐπαρχίας εἰς ἑτέραν ἐπαρχίαν, ἐν ᾗ τυγχάνουσιν ὄντες ἐπίσκοποι, διαβαίνοι· εἰ μὴ τι παρὰ τῶν ἀδελφῶν τῶν ἑαυτοῦ κληθεῖη, διὰ τὸ μὴ δοκεῖν ἡμᾶς τὰς τῆς ἀγάπης ἀποκλείειν πύλας.

[Recensio graeca]

Καὶ τοῦτο δὲ ὡσαύτως προνοητέον, ὥστε ἐὰν ἐν τινι ἐπαρχίᾳ ἐπισκόπων τις ἄντικρυς ἀδελφοῦ ἑαυτοῦ καὶ συνεπισκόπου πρᾶγμα σχοίη, μηδέτερον ἐκ τούτων ἀπὸ ἑτέρας ἐπαρχίας ἐπισκόπους ἐπιγνώμονας ἐπικαλεῖσθαι.

Εἰ δὲ ἄρα τις ἐπισκόπων ἐν τινι πράγματι δόξη κατακρίνεσθαι, καὶ ὑπολαμβάνει ἑαυτὸν μὴ σαθρόν, ἀλλὰ καλὸν ἔχειν τὸ πρᾶγμα, ἵνα καὶ αὐθις ἢ κρίσις ἀνανεωθῆ εἰ δοκεῖ ὑμῶν τῇ ἀγάπῃ, Πέτρου τοῦ ἀποστόλου τὴν μνήμην τιμῶμεν, καὶ γραφῆναι παρὰ τούτων τῶν κρινάντων (([Can. 3a] Isidore: can. 4) Bishop Hosius said: And also that [completed from the Greek: it is necessary to add] a bishop may not cross from one province into another province in which there are bishops, unless perchance on the invitation of his brothers, lest we seem to have shut the door of charity.

[Latin version]

For this, too, it should be provided: if perchance in any province some bishop has a dispute with a brother bishop, let no one of these summon the bishops from another province.

But if any bishop has been judged in some case, and he thinks he has a good case, so that a new trial may be given, if it seems good to you, let us honor the memory of the most holy apostle Peter: either let those who have examined the case or the bishops who reside in the next province write to

[Greek version]

3. Bishop Hosius said: It is necessary to declare this in order that no bishop may keep crossing from his own province into a different province in which there are bishops, unless perchance he should be invited by his brothers, so that we may not seem to close the doors of charity.

And this too, one must provide for, that, if in any province one of the bishops should have trouble with his brother and fellow bishop, neither of these two call to his aid as judges the bishops of another province.

Yet, on the other hand, if one of the bishops should think that he is being condemned in some trouble and thinks that he has, not an unsound, but a good case, in order that a new trial may be held, if it seems good to Your Charity, let us honor the memory of Peter the apostle and let these copo; et si iudicaverit renovandum esse iudicium, renovetur, et det iudices. Si autem probaverit talem causam esse, ut ea non refricentur quae acta sunt, quae decreverit confirmata erunt. Si hoc omnibus placet? Synodus respondit: Placet.

(Isid. 5) Gaudentius episcopus dixit: Addendum, si placet, huic sententiae, quam plenam sanctitatis protulisti: cum aliquis episcopus depositus fuerit eorum episcoporum iudicio, qui in vicinis commorantur locis, et proclamaverit agendum sibi esse negotium in urbe Roma, alter episcopus in eadem cathedra, post appellationem eius, qui videtur esse depositus, omnino non ordinetur loco ipsius, nisi causa fuerit iudicio Romani episcopi determinata.

([Can. 3b] Isid. 7) Osius episcopus dixit: Placuit autem, ut, si episcopus accusatus fuerit, et iudicaverint congregati episcopi regionis ipsius, et de gradu suo deiecerint eum, et appellasse videatur, et confugerit ad beatissimum ecclesiae Romanae episcopum et voluerit audiri et iustum putaverit, [ut] renovetur examen;

[Ἰουλίῳ]¹ τῷ ἐπισκόπῳ Ῥώμης, ὥστε διὰ τῶν γεινιῶντων τῇ ἐπαρχίᾳ ἐπισκόπων, εἰ δέοι, ἀνανεωθῆναι τὸ δικαστήριον, καὶ ἐπιγνώμονας αὐτὸς παράσχοι. Εἰ δὲ μὴ συστήναι δύναται, τοιοῦτον αὐτοῦ εἶναι τὸ πρᾶγμα, ὡς παλινδικίας χρῆξιν, τὰ ἅπαξ κεκριμένα μὴ ἀναλύεσθαι, τὰ δὲ ὄντα βέβαια τυγχάνειν.

δ'. Γαυδέντιος ἐπίσκοπος εἶπεν· Εἰ δοκεῖ, ἀναγκαῖον προστεθῆναι ταύτῃ τῇ ἀποφάσει, ἦντινα ἀγάπης εἰλικρινοῦς πλήρη ἐξενήνοχας· ὥστε ἂν τις ἐπίσκοπος καθαιρεθῇ τῇ κρίσει τούτων τῶν ἐπισκόπων φάσκει πάλιν ἐαυτῷ ἀπολογίας πρᾶγμα ἐπιβαλεῖν, μὴ πρότερον εἰς τὴν καθέδραν αὐτοῦ ἕτερον ὑποκαταστήναι, ἂν μὴ ὁ τῆς Ῥωμαίων ἐπίσκοπος ἐπιγνοῦς περὶ τούτου, ὅρον ἐξενέγκῃ.

ε'. Ὅσιος ἐπίσκοπος εἶπεν· Ἦρεσεν, ἵνα εἴ τις ἐπίσκοπος καταγγελθείη, καὶ συναθροισθέντες οἱ ἐπίσκοποι τῆς ἐνορίας τῆς αὐτῆς τοῦ βαθμοῦ αὐτὸν ἀποκινήσωσιν, καὶ ὡσπερ ἐκκαλεσάμενος καταφύγῃ ἐπὶ μακαριώτατον τῆς Ῥωμαίων ἐκκλησίας ἐπίσκοπον, καὶ βουληθῆναι αὐτοῦ διακοῦthe Roman bishop; and if he should judge that the judicial investigation ought to be repeated, let it be repeated, and let him appoint judges. But if he should determine that the case is such that what has been finished should not be reopened, his decree shall be confirmed. Is this agreeable to all? The synod replied: It is agreeable.

(Isidore 5) Bishop Gaudentius said: If it is agreeable, we should add to this opinion that you have offered full of charity: if a bishop has been deposed by the judgment of bishops residing in the vicinity and he has declared that he must plead his case in the city of Rome, then, after the appeal of the one who seems to have been deposed, another bishop may not in any way be ordained to take his place in the see unless his case has been decided by the judgment of the bishop of Rome.

([Can. 3b] Isidore 7) Bishop Hosius said: However, it has been agreed that if a bishop has been accused and the assembled bishops of the same province have judged and deprived him of his office and he appears to have appealed and has taken refuge with the most blessed bishop of the Roman Church and has desired to judges write to [Julius,]¹ the bishop of Rome[,] so that through the bishops who border on the province, if it should be necessary, the trial be reopened, and he himself should furnish the judges. But if it cannot be proven that this matter is of such a nature as to need a new trial, let not the decisions made once be set aside, but let them be confirmed.

4. Bishop Gaudentius 134 said: If it is decided, we ought to add to this decision that you have offered full of pure charity: if a bishop has been deposed by the judgment of these bishops who are in the vicinity and he alleges that the business of defense will again fall upon himself, another may not be ordained to his office unless previously the bishop of Rome has come to a decision concerning him and has published his judgment.

5. Bishop Hosius said: 135
It has been agreed that, if a bishop has been accused, and the assembled bishops of the same region have deposed him from his rank, and inasmuch as he has appealed and taken refuge with the most blessed bishop of the Roman Church and he has wished to hear him, if he thinks it is just to renew the *133 ¹ The name of this pope was inserted later.

| | | | |
|--|---|---|--|
| scribere his episcopis dignetur, qui in finitima et propinqua provincia sunt, [ut] ipsi diligenter omnia requirant et iuxta fidem veritatis definiant. Quod si qui rogat causam suam iterum audiri et deprecatione sua moverit episcopum Romanum, ut e latere suo presbyterum mittat, erit in potestate episcopi, quid velit aut quid aestimet: si decreverit mittendos esse, qui praesentes cum episcopis iudicent, habentes [eius] auctoritatem, a quo destinati sunt, erit in suo arbitrio. Si vero crediderit sufficere episcopos, ut negotio terminum imponant, faciet quod sapientissimo consilio suo iudicaverit. | σαι, δίκαιόν τε εἶναι ομίση ἀνανεώσασθαι αὐτοῦ τὴν ἐξέτασιν τοῦ πράγματος· γράφειν τούτοις τοῖς ἐπισκόποις καταξιώση, τοῖς ἀγχιστεύουσι τῇ ἐπαρχίᾳ, ἵνα αὐτοὶ ἐπιμελῶς καὶ μετὰ ἀκριβείας ἕκαστα διερευνήσωσιν καὶ κατὰ τὴν τῆς ἀληθείας πίστιν ψῆφον περὶ τοῦ πράγματος ἐξενέγκωσιν. Εἰ δέ τις ἀξιοῖ καὶ πάλιν αὐτοῦ τὸ πρᾶγμα ἀκουσθῆναι, καὶ τῆ δέησει τῇ ἑαυτοῦ τὸν Ῥωμαίων ἐπίσκοπον κινεῖν δόξη ἀπὸ τοῦ ἰδίου πλευροῦ προεσβυτέρους ἀποστείλοι· εἶναι ἐν τῇ ἐξουσίᾳ αὐτοῦ τοῦ ἐπισκόπου, ὅπερ ἂν καλῶς ἔχειν δοκιμάση καὶ [ἐὰν] ὀρίση, δεῖν ἀποσταλῆναι τοὺς μετὰ τῶν ἐπισκόπων κρινοῦντας, ἔχοντάς τε τὴν αὐθεντίαν τούτου παρ' οὗ ἀπεστάλησαν, καὶ τοῦτο θετέον. Εἰ δὲ ἐξαρκεῖν νομίζοι πρὸς τὴν τοῦ πράγματος ἐπίγνωσιν καὶ ἀπόφασιν τοῦ ἐπισκόπου, ποιήσει ὅπερ ἂν τῇ ἐμφρονεστάτῃ αὐτοῦ βουλῇ καλῶς ἔχειν δόξη. Ἀπεκρίναντο οἱ ἐπίσκοποι· Τὰ λεχθέντα ἤρασαν. | be heard and he has thought it just that an examination be made anew, let him deign to write to these bishops who are in the adjoining and neighboring province so that they themselves may diligently make all inquiries and decide according to their pledge of truth. But if anyone asks that his case be heard again and by his plea moves the Roman bishop to send a presbyter from his own side, what he (the presbyter) wishes or what he determines will be in the power of the bishop; and if he decrees those ought to be sent who in person may judge with the bishops and who have the authority (of him) by whom they have been appointed, it (this decree) will be within his decision. But if he believes that the bishops suffice to put an end to the affair, he will do that which he decides in accordance with his own very wise deliberation. | examination of his difficulty, let him deign to write to these bishops who live in the neighboring province so that they themselves may examine carefully and with exactness each matter and declare their vote on the problem according to their pledge of truth. But if anyone should ask that his case be heard again and by his prayer seems to move the bishop of Rome to dispatch presbyters from his side, what he decides is good is in the power of the bishop himself, and if he determines that it is necessary to send those who will judge with the bishops and who have the absolute authority of him by whom they were sent, this also must be granted. But if he should consider it sufficient by reason of the examination of the difficulty and the sentence of the bishop, he will do what he thinks is good according to his very wise deliberation. The bishops gave an answer. What was said was agreeable. |
|--|---|---|--|

136: Letter of the Synod of Serdica Quod semper to Pope Julius I, ca. 343

Ed.: A. Feder: CSEL 65:127 / CouE 395 / MaC 3:40B / HaC 1:653C.

Primacy of the Roman See

- 136 Hoc enim optimum et valde congruentissimum esse videbitur, si ad caput, id est ad Petri Apostoli sedem, de singulis quibusque provinciis Domini referant sacerdotes. For this will seem to be best and most fitting indeed, if the priests from each and every province refer to the head, that is, to the chair of Peter the apostle.

LIBERIUS: May 17, 352–September 24, 366

138–143: Acts of Pope Liberius on the Question of the Semiarians, 357

Pope Liberius signed in exile the creed written by the Semiarians, and he excommunicated Athanasius, the proponent of the Nicene faith. Cf. Athanasius, Historia Arianorum ad monachos 41 (PG 25:741), Sozomenus, Historia ecclesiae IV, 15 (J. Bidez and G. C. Hansen [GChSch], 158 / PG 67:1152). Further documentation can be found in the letters of Liberius himself, which have been preserved among the fragments of the historical work Adversus Valentem et Ursacium, by Hilary of Poitiers. Their authenticity was formerly questioned without justification. This raises the question of the orthodoxy of Pope Liberius. The faith formulas accepted by him avoid the Nicene concept ὁμοούσιον (homoousion). This concerns mostly the first Sirmian formula, which was written at the Second Synod of Sirmium (Lower Pannonia) in the year 351 against Paul of Samosata and Photinus and which Liberius had to sign during his exile in Beröa in the year 357. Even Hilary of Poitiers, a severe critic of Liberius, De synodis 39–62, also interpreted this formula favorably in terms of orthodoxy. In all probability Liberius, having been taken to Sirmium in 358, also signed the third Sirmian formula, which was written by the fourth synod (after Easter 358). This formula is a synthesis of the above-mentioned first Sirmian formula, the second formula of the likewise Semiarian Synod of Antioch (Church Dedication Synod of 341), and of the twelve anathemas, which had been selected by the Fourth Synod of Sirmium from the nineteen articles of the Semiarian Synod of Ancyra (before Easter 358), with the omission, however, of canons 1–5, 18, and 19, which were especially suspect in regard to heresy; cf. H. C. Brennecke, Hilarius von Poitiers und die Bischofsopposition gegen Konstantius 2: Untersuchungen zur dritten Phase des Arianischen Streites (337–361), PTS 26 (Berlin, 1984), 265–97. Of these formulas, only the first Sirmian is given; for the others, only an indication of the source.

Ed.: Letters of Liberius [138, 141–43]: A. L. Feder, S. Hilarii Pictavii opera IV, Collectanea antiariana Parisina, ser. B, III/1, VII/7–9, 10, 11: CSEL 65:155, 167–73 / PL 10:679A–681A, 688–95 (= Fragment IV, VI/4–7, 8–9, 11) / BarAE, at year 352, no. 13; for the year 357, nos. 42–44. —Reg.: JR 207, 217–19.

Ed.: First Sirmian formula [*139f.]: The original Greek text is found in Athanasius of Alexandria, De synodis 27 (PG 26:736–40); a Latin version in Hilary of Poitiers, De synodis 38 (PL 10:509–12). This formula is also (in Greek) in Socrates, Historia ecclesiae II, 30 (PG 67:280–85) and (in Latin) in Cassiodorus-Epiphanius, Historia ecclesiae tripartita V, 7 (CSEL 71:222–26); cf. also Hn § 160 / MaC 3:257A–260E / HaC 1:702.

Ed.: Third Sirmian formula: (a) Second formula of Antioch (341): found in Athanasius of Alexandria, De synodis 23 (PG 26:721f.); in Socrates, Historia ecclesiae II, 10 (PG 67:201f.); in Hilary of Poitiers, De synodis 29f. (PL 10:502A–503B); cf. also Hn § 154 / Ltzm 28f. / MaC 2:1339C–1342C / HaC 1:610BC. —(b) Anathemas: the original in Greek is in Epiphanius of Constantia or Salamis, Contra haereses panaria, haer. 73, chaps. 10–11 (K. Holl, Epiphanius 3, GChSch [Leipzig, 1933], 280–84 / F. Oehler 2/I [Berlin, 1861], 88–94 / PG 42:421–24 / Hn § 162). Epiphanius lists all nineteen anathemas of Ancyra. The third Sirmian formula included the anathemas in the following sequence: 6, 8, 7, 9–17; in Latin, these are found in Hilary of Poitiers, De synodis 12–27 (PL 10:489–501 / MaC 3:267D–270A / HaC 1:707A–708C).

Condemnation of Athanasius and Professions of the Faith

a. Letter Studens paci to the Eastern Bishops, Spring 357

Studens paci et concordiae Ecclesiarum, posteaquam litteras caritatis vestrae de nomine Athanasii et ceterorum factas ad nomen Iulii bonae memoriae episcopi accepi, secutus traditionem maiorum presbyteros urbis Romae Lucium, Paulum et Helianum e latere meo ad Alexandriam ad supradictum Athanasium direxi, ut ad urbem Romam veniret, ut in praesenti id, quod de Ecclesiae disciplina exstitit, in eum statueretur. Litteras etiam ad eundem per supradictos presbyteros dedi, quibus continebatur, quod si non veniret, sciret se alienum esse ab Ecclesiae Romanae communione. Reversi igitur presbyteri nuntiaverunt eum venire noluisse. Secutus denique litteras caritatis vestrae, quas de nomine supradicti Athanasii ad nos dedistis, sciatis his litteris, quas ad unanimitatem vestram dedi, me cum omnibus vobis et cum universis episcopis Ecclesiae catholicae pacem habere, supradictum autem Athanasium alienum esse a communione mea sive Ecclesiae Romanae et a consortio litterarum et ecclesiasticarum.

Eager for peace and harmony among the Churches, 138 after I received the letter written by Your Grace to the person of Bishop Julian of blessed memory about the person of Athanasius and others, and following the tradition of predecessors, I directed presbyters at my side from the city of Rome, Lucius, Paulus, and Helianus, to go to Alexandria to the aforementioned Athanasius that he might come to Rome, so that, in his presence, what corresponds to the discipline of the Church might be established in his case. I also sent a letter to the same man through the aforementioned presbyters that said that if he did not come, he must know that he would be cut off from communion with the Roman Church. When the presbyters returned, they reported that he refused to come. Finally, having followed the letter of Your Grace that you addressed to us regarding the aforementioned Athanasius, I let you know by this letter that I have composed in the desire for unanimity with you that I am at peace with you all and with all the bishops of the Catholic Church, but that the aforementioned Athanasius is cut off from communion with me, which is to say, from that of the Roman Church, and from the communication of ecclesiastical letters.

b. First Profession of Faith of Sirmium (351), Subscribed to by Liberius in 357

Πιστεύομεν εἰς ἕνα Θεόν, πατέρα παντοκράτορα, τὸν κτίστην καὶ ποιητὴν τῶν πάντων, ἕξ οὗ πᾶσα πατριὰ ἐν οὐρανῷ καὶ ἐπὶ γῆς ὀνομάζεται [cf. Eph 3:15].

We believe in one God, the Father almighty, creator and 139 maker of everything, from whom every fatherhood in heaven and on earth derives its name [cf. Eph 3:15];

καὶ εἰς τὸν μονογενῆ αὐτοῦ υἱὸν τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν τὸν Χριστόν, τὸν πρὸ πάντων τῶν αἰώνων ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς γεννηθέντα· Θεὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ, φῶς ἐκ φωτός, δι' οὗ ἐγένετο τὰ πάντα, τὰ τε ἐν τοῖς οὐρανοῖς καὶ τὰ ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς, τὰ ὄρατά καὶ τὰ ἀόρατα· Λόγον ὄντα καὶ σοφίαν, καὶ φῶς ἀληθινόν, καὶ ζωήν·

τὸν ἐπ' ἑσχάτων τῶν ἡμερῶν δι' ἡμᾶς ἐνανθρωπήσαντα· καὶ γεννηθέντα ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας παρθένου, καὶ σταυρωθέντα, καὶ ἀποθανόντα, καὶ ταφέντα· καὶ ἀναστάντα ἐκ νεκρῶν τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, καὶ ἀναληφθέντα εἰς οὐρανόν, καὶ καθεσθέντα ἐν δεξιᾷ τοῦ πατρὸς· καὶ ἐρχόμενον ἐπὶ συντελείᾳ τοῦ αἰῶνος κρῖναι ζῶντας καὶ νεκρούς, καὶ ἀποδοῦναι ἐκάστῳ κατὰ τὰ ἔργα αὐτοῦ· οὗ ἡ βασιλεία, ἀκατάπαυστος οὔσα, διαμένει εἰς τοὺς ἀπείρους αἰῶνας· ἔσται γὰρ καθεζόμενος ἐν δεξιᾷ τοῦ πατρὸς, οὐ μόνον ἐν τῷ αἰῶνι τούτῳ, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐν τῷ μέλλοντι· καὶ εἰς τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, τουτέστι τὸν παράκλητον, ὅπερ ἐπαγγελία ἡμεῖς τοῖς ἀποστόλοις, μετὰ τὴν εἰς οὐρανοὺς αὐτοῦ ἄνοδον ἀποστεῖλαι, διδάξαι καὶ ὑπομνησαί αὐτοὺς πάντα, ἔπεμψε; δι' οὗ καὶ ἁγιάζονται αἱ τῶν εἰλικρινῶς εἰς αὐτὸν πεπιστευκότων ψυχαί.

140 1. Τοὺς δὲ λέγοντας ἐξ οὐκ ὄντων τὸν υἱόν, ἢ ἐξ ἑτέρας ὑποστάσεως, καὶ μὴ ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ, καὶ ὅτι ἦν χρόνος ἢ αἰὼν, ὅτε οὐκ ἦν, ἄλλοτριούς οἶδεν ἢ ἁγία καὶ καθολικὴ Ἐκκλησία.

2. Πάλιν οὖν ἐροῦμεν· Εἴ τις τὸν πατέρα καὶ τὸν υἱὸν δύο λέγει Θεοὺς, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

3. Καὶ εἴ τις, λέγων Θεὸν τὸν Χριστόν πρὸ αἰώνων υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, ὑπουργηκότα τῷ πατρὶ εἰς τὴν τῶν ὅλων δημιουργίαν μὴ ὁμολογίῃ, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

4. Εἴ τις τὸν ἀγέννητον, ἢ μέρος αὐτοῦ ἐκ Μαρίας λέγειν γεγενῆσθαι τολμᾷ, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

5. Εἴ τις κατὰ πρόγνωσιν πρὸ Μαρίας λέγει τὸν υἱὸν εἶναι, καὶ μὴ πρὸ αἰώνων ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς γεγεννημένον πρὸς τὸν Θεὸν εἶναι, καὶ δι' αὐτοῦ γεγενῆσθαι τὰ πάντα, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

6. Εἴ τις τὴν οὐσίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ πλατύνεσθαι, ἢ συστέλλεσθαι φάσκει, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

7. Εἴ τις πλατυνομένην τὴν οὐσίαν τοῦ Θεοῦ τὸν υἱὸν λέγει ποιεῖν, ἢ τὸν πλατυσμὸν τῆς οὐσίας αὐτοῦ υἱὸν ὀνομάζει, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

8. Εἴ τις ἐνδιάθετον ἢ προφορικὸν λόγον λέγει τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

9. Εἴ τις ἄνθρωπον μόνον λέγει τὸν ἐκ Μαρίας υἱόν, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

10. Εἴ τις Θεὸν καὶ ἄνθρωπον τὸν ἐκ Μαρίας λέγων, Θεὸν τὸν ἀγέννητον οὕτω νοεῖ, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

11. Εἴ τις τὸ «Ἐγὼ Θεὸς πρῶτος, καὶ ἐγὼ μετὰ ταῦτα, καὶ πλὴν ἐμοῦ οὐκ ἔστι Θεός» [Is 44:6], ἐπ' and in his only begotten Son, our Lord Jesus Christ, who was begotten from the Father before all ages, God from God, light from light, through whom everything in heaven and on earth, both visible and invisible, was made. He is the Word and wisdom, the true light and life;

(we believe that) he also became a man in these last days for us and was born of the holy Virgin and was crucified, died, and was buried; he rose from the dead on the third day, was taken up into heaven, sits at the right hand of the Father, and will come at the end of the age to judge the living and the dead and to reward each one in accord with his works; his kingdom is without end and remains forever, for he will be seated at the right hand of the Father, not only in this age, but in the age to come;

and in the Holy Spirit, that is, the Paraclete (advocate), whom he promised to send to the apostles after his ascent into heaven and whom he did send in order to teach and exhort them in everything; through (the same Spirit), the souls of those who sincerely believe in him are made holy.

1. The holy and catholic Church views as outsiders those who say that the Son was from nothing, or from a different substance, and not from God, and who say that there was a time or an age when the Word was not.

2. So, we say again, if anyone says that the Father and the Son are two gods, let him be anathema.

3. If anyone says that Christ as the Son of God is eternally God but does not confess that he assisted the Father in the making of all, let him be anathema.

4. If anyone dares to say that the Unbegotten One, or some part of him, was born of Mary, let him be anathema.

5. If anyone says that the Son existed before Mary by way of foreknowledge and not that he, generated by the Father before time, is with God and that everything came into being through him, let him be anathema.

6. If anyone says that God's essence is expanded or contracted, let him be anathema.

7. If anyone says that the extended essence of God forms the Son or calls the Son an extension of his being, let him be anathema.

8. If anyone says that the Son is an inner or expressed Word of God, let him be anathema.

9. If anyone says that the Son from Mary was only a man, let him be anathema.

10. If anyone says he who was (born) of Mary was God and man but means by this the unbegotten God, let him be anathema.

11. If anyone understands the text "I (am) the first and I (am) after (all) this, and besides me there is no god" ἀναιρέσει εἰδώλων καὶ τῶν μὴ ὄντων θεῶν εἰρημένον, ἐπ’ ἀναιρέσει τοῦ μονογενοῦς πρὸ αἰώνων Θεοῦ Ἰουδαϊκῶς ἐκλαμβάνοι, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

12. Εἴ τις τὸ «Ὁ Λόγος σὰρξ ἐγένετο» [Io 1:14] ἀκούων, τὸν Λόγον εἰς σάρκα μεταβεβλήσθαι νομίζοι, ἢ τροπὴν ὑπομεμενηκότα ἀνειληφέναι τὴν σάρκα λέγοι, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

13. Εἴ τις, τὸν μονογενῆ υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐσταυρωμένον ἀκούων, τὴν θεότητα αὐτοῦ φθοράν, ἢ πάθος, ἢ τροπὴν, ἢ μείωσιν, ἢ ἀναίρεσιν ὑπομεμενηκέναι λέγοι, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

14. Εἴ τις τὸ «Ποιήσωμεν ἄνθρωπον» [Gn 1:26], μὴ τὸν πατέρα πρὸς τὸν υἱὸν λέγειν, ἀλλ’ αὐτὸν πρὸς ἑαυτὸν λέγοι τὸν Θεὸν εἰρηκέναι, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

15. Εἴ τις μὴ τὸν υἱὸν λέγοι τῷ Ἀβραάμ ἐωραῖσθαι [Gn 18:1–22], ἀλλὰ τὸν ἀγέννητον Θεόν, ἢ μέρος αὐτοῦ, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

16. Εἴ τις τῷ Ἰακώβ μὴ τὸν υἱὸν ὡς ἄνθρωπον πεπαλαικέναι [Gn 32:25–31], ἀλλὰ τὸν ἀγέννητον Θεόν, ἢ μέρος αὐτοῦ λέγοι, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

17. Εἴ τις τὸ «Ἐβρεξε κύριος πῦρ παρὰ κυρίου» [Gn 19:24], μὴ ἐπὶ τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ τοῦ υἱοῦ ἐκλαμβάνοι, ἀλλ’ αὐτὸν παρ’ ἑαυτοῦ λέγει βεβρεχέναι, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω· ἔβρεξε γὰρ κύριος ὁ υἱὸς παρὰ κυρίου τοῦ πατρὸς.

18. Εἴ τις, ἀκούων κύριον τὸν πατέρα, καὶ τὸν υἱὸν κύριον, καὶ κύριον τὸν πατέρα καὶ τὸν υἱόν, ἐπεὶ κύριος ἐκ κυρίου, δύο λέγει Θεοὺς, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω. Οὐ γὰρ συντάσσομεν υἱὸν τῷ πατρί, ἀλλ’ ὑποτεταγμένον τῷ πατρί. Οὔτε γὰρ κατήλθεν ἐπὶ Σόδομα ἄνευ βουλής τοῦ πατρὸς, οὔτε ἔβρεξεν ἀφ’ ἑαυτοῦ, ἀλλὰ παρὰ κυρίου, αὐθεντοῦντος δηλαδὴ τοῦ πατρὸς; οὔτε κάθηται ἐκ δεξιῶν ἀφ’ ἑαυτοῦ, ἀλλ’ ἀκούει λέγοντος τοῦ πατρὸς: «Κάθου ἐκ δεξιῶν μου» [Ps 109:1].

19. Εἴ τις τὸν πατέρα, καὶ τὸν υἱόν, καὶ τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα ἓν πρόσωπον λέγει, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

20. Εἴ τις, τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον παράκλητον λέγων, τὸν ἀγέννητον λέγοι Θεόν, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

21. Εἴ τις, ὡς ἐδίδαξεν ἡμᾶς ὁ κύριος, μὴ ἄλλον λέγοι τὸν παράκλητον παρὰ τὸν υἱόν· εἶρηκε γάρ· «Καὶ ἄλλον παράκλητον πέμψει ὑμῖν ὁ πατήρ, ὃν ἐρωτήσω ἐγώ» [Io 14:16], ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

22. Εἴ τις τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον μέρος λέγει τοῦ πατρὸς, ἢ τοῦ υἱοῦ, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

23. Εἴ τις τὸν πατέρα, καὶ τὸν υἱόν, καὶ τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα τρεῖς λέγοι Θεοὺς, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

24. Εἴ τις βουλήσει τοῦ Θεοῦ ὡς ἓν τῶν ποιημάτων γεγονέναι λέγοι τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

[Is 44:6], as referring, as the Jews do, to the invalidation of the Only Begotten of God, rather than to the destruction of idols and those that are not really gods, let him be anathema.

12. If anyone who hears the words “The Word was made flesh” [Jn 1:14] thinks that this means the Word was changed into flesh, or if he says that the Word assumed flesh by submitting to a change, let him be anathema.

13. If anyone who hears that the only begotten Son of God was crucified says that his divinity underwent corruption, suffering, change, diminution, or destruction, let him be anathema.

14. If anyone says that the words “Let us make man” [Gen 1:26] were not said by the Father to the Son, but that God himself was speaking to himself, let him be anathema.

15. If anyone says that it was not the Son who was seen by Abraham [Gen 18:1–22] but the Unbegotten God, or some part of him, let him be anathema.

16. If anyone says that it was not the Son as a man who wrestled with Jacob [Gen 32:25–31] but the Unbegotten of God, or some part of him, let him be anathema.

17. If anyone understands the text “The Lord let fire rain from the Lord” [Gen 19:24] as not referring to the Father and the Son, but says that he rained it down from himself, let him be anathema. For the Lord the Son let it rain down from the Lord the Father.

18. If anyone says that there are two gods when he hears that the Father is Lord and the Son is Lord, and that the Father and the Son are Lord because the Lord (rains down) from the Lord, let him be anathema. For we do not place the Son in the same order as the Father, but (we say that he is) subject to the Father. For he did not come down on Sodom without the Father’s will, nor did he rain down from himself, but from the Lord, that is, at the instigation of the Father; nor does he sit at his own right hand; rather he hears the Father say, “Sit at my right hand” [Ps 110:1].

19. If anyone says that the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit are one person, let him be anathema.

20. If anyone, when calling the Holy Spirit the Paraclete, says that he is the Unbegotten God, let him be anathema.

21. If anyone does not say, as the Lord teaches us, that the Paraclete is other than the Son—for the Lord says, “The Father will send you another paraclete for whom I will ask” [Jn 14:16]—let him be anathema.

22. If anyone says that the Holy Spirit is part of the Father or the Son, let him be anathema.

23. If anyone says that the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit are three gods, let him be anathema.

24. If anyone says that the Son of God was produced like one of the creatures by the will of God, let him be anathema.

25. Εἴ τις μὴ θελήσαντος τοῦ πατρὸς γεγεννησθαι λέγοι τὸν υἱόν, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω. Οὐ γὰρ βιασθεὶς ὁ πατήρ ὑπὸ ἀνάγκης φυσικῆς ἀχθεὶς, ὡς οὐκ ἤθελεν, ἐγέννησε τὸν υἱόν, ἀλλ' ἅμα τε ἠβουλήθη, καὶ ἀχρόνως καὶ ἀπαθῶς ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ αὐτὸν γεννήσας ἐπέδειξεν.

26. Εἴ τις ἀγέννητον καὶ ἄναρχον λέγοι τὸν υἱόν, ὡς δύο ἄναρχα καὶ δύο ἀγέννητα λέγων, καὶ δύο ποιῶν Θεούς, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω. Κεφαλὴ γάρ, ὃ ἐστὶν ἀρχὴ τῶν πάντων, ὁ υἱός; κεφαλὴ δέ, ὃ ἐστὶν ἀρχὴ τοῦ Χριστοῦ, ὁ Θεός; οὕτω γὰρ εἰς μίαν ἄναρχον τῶν ὅλων ἀρχὴν δι' υἱοῦ εὐσεβῶς τὰ πάντα ἀνάγομεν.

27. Καὶ πάλιν συνδιακριβοῦντες τοῦ χριστιανισμοῦ τὴν ἔννοιαν λέγομεν, ὅτι· Εἴ τις Χριστὸν Θεὸν υἱὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ προαιώνιον ὄντα, καὶ ὑπουργηκότα τῷ πατρὶ εἰς τὴν τῶν ὅλων δημιουργίαν μὴ λέγοι· ἀλλ' ἐξ οὗ ἐκ Μαρίας ἐγεννήθη, ἐκ τότε καὶ Χριστὸν καὶ υἱὸν κεκληθῆναι, καὶ ἀρχὴν εἰληφέναι τοῦ Θεοῦ εἶναι, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

c. Letter Pro deifico to the Eastern Bishops, Spring 357

[The introductory text of Hilary of Poitiers:] After he had done and promised all this, Liberius, sent into exile, annulled everything by writing to the heretical Arian traitors who had brought an unjust sentence to bear against the holy orthodox bishop Athanasius (Post haec omnia, quae vel gesserat ver promiserat Liberius missus in exilium, universa in irritum deduxit scribens praevaricatoribus Arianis haereticis, qui in sanctum Athanasium orthodoxum episcopum iniuste tulere sententiam):

141 [Liberii ep.:] (1) Pro deifico timore sancta fides vestra Deo cognita est et hominibus bonae voluntatis [Lc 2:14]. Sicut lex loquitur: Iusta iudicate, filii hominum [Ps 57:2], ego Athanasium non defendi, sed, quia susceperat illum bonae memoriae Iulius episcopus decessor meus, verebar, ne forte in aliquo praevaricator iudicaret. At ubi cognovi, quando Deo placuit, iuste vos illum condemnasse, mox consensum commodavi sententiis vestris. Litteras adaeque super nomine eius, id est de condemnatione ipsius, per fratrem nostrum Fortunatianum dedi perferendas ad imperatorem Constantium. Itaque amoto Athanasio a communionem omnium nostrum, cuius nec epistula a me suscipienda sunt, dico me pacem cum omnibus vobis et cum universis episcopis Orientalibus seu per universas provincias pacem et unanimitatem habere.

(2) Nam ut verius sciatis me veram fidem per hanc epistulam meam proloqui, dominus et frater meus communis Demophilus, quia dignatus est pro sua benivolentia fidem vestram et catholicam exponere, quae Sirmio a pluribus fratribus et coepiscopis nostris tractata, exposita et suscepta est (— haec¹ est perfidia Ariana, hoc ego notavi, non apostata, Liberius sequentia: —) ab omnibus, qui in praesenti fuerunt, hanc ego

25. If anyone says that the Son was generated against the will of the Father, let him be anathema. For the Father did not generate the Son by a necessity of nature as if he did not will it: but as soon as he willed it, in a manner beyond time and without passion, he showed him (the Son) forth, generated from himself.

26. If anyone speaks of the Son as unbegotten and without beginning as if to say that there are two timeless and unbegotten principles, as if making two gods, let him be anathema. For the head, which is the origin of all things, is the Son, but the head that is the origin of Christ is God. So, in a godly manner, we attribute everything through the Son to one timeless origin of all things.

27. Again, we carefully scrutinize the understanding of Christian doctrine, and we say that if anyone does not confess that Christ God, the Son of God, was before time and assisted the Father in the creation of all things, but that he was called Christ and Son when he was born of the Mary and received the beginning of the divine being, let him be anathema.

[Letter of Liberius:] (1) Because of a God-given reverence, your holy faith is known to God and to men of goodwill [Lk 2:14]. As the law says, Judge the just, O sons of men [Ps 58:2]. I did not defend Athanasius. But because Bishop Julius, my predecessor of happy memory, had supported him, I was fearful lest somehow I may be judged in some way neglectful. But when I realized, when God was pleased, that you had justly condemned him, I soon gave my consensus to your judgment. In like manner, I sent a letter to the emperor Constantius through our brother Fortunatus about (Athanasius), that is, concerning his condemnation. Therefore, because Athanasius has been removed from communion with all of us and his letters are no longer received by me, I say that I am at peace and unanimity with all of you and with all the Eastern bishops, that is, in all the provinces.

(2) In order that you may know more precisely that I am expressing the true faith through this letter of mine: because my Lord and brother Demophilus has deigned, through his kindness, to set forth your Catholic faith, which was discussed and explained at Sirmium by many of our brothers and fellow bishops (—this¹ is Arian treachery—I have noted this—not the apostate; Liberius, the following:) and accepted by all who were libenti animo suscepi (— sanctus Hilarius illi anathema dicit: anathema tibi a me dictum, Liberi, et sociis tuis —), in nullo contradixi, consensum accommodavi; hanc sequor, haec a me tenetur. (— Iterum tibi anathema et tertio, praevaricator Liberi —). Sane petendam credidi sanctitatem vestram, quia iam pervidetis in omnibus me vobis consentaneum esse, dignemini communi consilio ac studio elaborare, quatenus de exilio dimittar et ad sedem, quae mihi divinitus credita est, revertar.

*141 ¹ These insertions were not added by Hilary but come from a compiler or copyist of the letter; cf. A. L. Feder, SbWienAk 162/IV (1910), 123f.

d. Letter Quia scio to Ursacius, Valens, and Germinius, 357

(1) Quia scio, vos filios pacis esse, diligere etiam concordiam et unanimatem Ecclesiae catholicae, idcirco non aliqua necessitate impulsus—Deo teste dico—sed pro bono pacis et concordiae, quae martyrio praeponitur, his litteris convenio vos, domini fratres carissimi. Cognoscat itaque prudentia vestra, Athanasium, qui Alexandrinae Ecclesiae episcopus fuit, [a me esse damnatum] priusquam ad comitatum sancti imperatoris secundum litteras Orientalium episcoporum [scriberem, quod] et ab Ecclesiae Romanae communione separatus est, sicuti teste est omne presbyterium Ecclesiae Romanae. Sola haec causa fuit, ut tardius viderer de nomine ipsius litteras ad fratres et coepiscopos nostros Orientales dare, ut legati mei, quos ab urbe Roma ad comitatum direxeram, seu episcopi, qui fuerant deportati, et ipsi una cum his, si fieri posset, de exilio revocarentur.

(2) Et hoc autem scire vos volo, quod fratrem Fortunatianum petii, ut litteras meas ad clementissimum imperatorem [perferat, quas ad Orientales episcopos feci, ut scirent et ipsi una secum Athanasii communione me esse separatum. Quas credo quod pietas ipsius pro bono pacis gratulanter accipiet... Pervideat caritas vestra haec me benigno et innocenti animo gessisse. Quapropter his litteris meis convenio vos et adiuro per Deum omnipotentem et Christum Iesum Filium eius, Deum et Dominum nostrum, ut dignemini ad clementissimum imperatorem]¹ Constantium Augustum pergere et petere, ut bono pacis et concordiae, in qua pietas eius semper exultat, me ad Ecclesiam mihi divinitus traditam iubeat reverti, ut temporibus ipsius Ecclesia Romana nullam sustineat tribulationem....

present, I, with a free mind, accept it (—Saint Hilary pronounced anathema upon him: I also pronounce anathema upon you, Liberius, and your associates—), I have not contradicted it in any way, and I have given my consent to it; this {faith} is what I follow; this is what I keep. (—A second time, anathema upon you, and a third time, Liberius, you traitor!—) Truly, I thought I should ask Your Holiness, since you now clearly see that I am in agreement with you in all things, to deign to undertake efforts, with common counsel and diligence, so that I may be released from exile and returned to the See entrusted to me by God.

(1) Because I know that you are sons of peace and 142
(that you) also love the concord and unanimity of the catholic Church, therefore under no necessity—I speak with God as my witness—but for the sake of peace and concord, which is preferable to martyrdom, I come to you, my beloved brothers in the Lord, with this letter. Therefore, let Your Prudence know that Athanasius, who was bishop of the Church of Alexandria, [was condemned by me] before [I wrote] to the court of the holy emperor in accordance with the letter of the Eastern bishops [that] he has also been separated from communion with the Roman Church, as the entire presbyterate of the Roman Church is witness. This was the only reason that I might have seemed rather late in sending a letter concerning him to our brothers and fellow bishops in the East, that my delegates, whom I had sent from Rome to the court and the bishops who were deported, and myself along with them, might, if possible, be recalled from exile.

(2) But I also wish you to know that I have asked brother Fortunatianus [to bring] my letter to the most merciful emperor, [which I wrote to the Eastern bishops so that they would know also for themselves that, together with them, I am separated from communion with Athanasius. I believe that His Piety will joyfully receive this for the sake of peace.... May Your Charity realize that I have done this with a benevolent and innocent spirit. Wherefore, I turn to you by means of this letter, and I implore, by almighty God and Jesus Christ his Son, our God and Lord, that you deem it fitting] to go and appeal [to the most merciful emperor]¹ Constantius Augustus, so that, for the sake of peace and concord in which His Piety always rejoices, he may grant me to return to the Church that was divinely entrusted to me, in order that, during his lifetime, the Church of Rome may suffer no tribulation....

*142 ¹ Because of the homoioleuton, what is put in brackets is missing in some manuscripts.

e. Letter Non doceo to Vincentius, 357

143 (2) Sanctitati tuae significandum credidi, me de contentione illa a nomine Athanasii recessisse et ad fratres et coepiscopos nostros Orientales litteras dedisse desuper eius nomine. Unde, quia Deo volente et pax nobis ubique est, dignaberis convenire episcopos cunctos Campaniae et haec illis insinuare. Ex ipsorum numero una cum epistula vestra de unanimitate nostra et pace ad clementissimum imperatorem scribite, de quo possim et ego de tristitia liberari.... Cum omnibus episcopis Orientalibus pacem habemus et vobiscum....

(2) I believed Your Holiness should be informed that, with respect to this controversy, I have distanced myself from the person of Athanasius and that I have sent a letter to our brothers and fellow bishops of the East having to do with his person. Therefore, because we have peace everywhere by the will of God, you should condescend to visit all the bishops of Campania and announce this to them. Have something written by them come to the most kind emperor, along with a letter from you, about unanimity and peace with us, so that I may also be freed from sorrow.... We are at peace with all the Eastern bishops and with you....

DAMASUS I: October 1, 366–December 11, 384

144–147: Fragments of Letters to the Eastern Bishops, ca. 374

These three fragments, according to E. Schwartz, are part of three different letters written between 372 and 378. According to M. Richard, however, they stem from one and the same letter sent in 374 (AnBoll 67 [1949]: 201f., n. 3). Fragment *144f. is directed against Marcellus of Ancyra and Apollinaris of Laodicea, whose names, however, are not mentioned. *147 seems to be the response of the pope to letter 243 of Basil the Great (PG 32:901–12).

Ed.: E. Schwartz in ZNTW 35 (1936): 20–23 / PL 13:350C–353C / MaC 3:460A–462D / CouE 495A–500A.

The Divine Trinity

144 Ea gratia, fratres, Jericho illa, quae figura est saecularium voluptatum, conclamata concidit nec resurgit, quia omnes uno ore unius virtutis, unius maiestatis, unius divinitatis, unius usiae dicimus Trinitatem, ita ut inseparabilem potestatem, tres tamen adseramus esse personas, nec redire in se aut minui, ... sed semper manere nec potentiae gradus quosdam ortusque tempora disparata nec prolativum Verbum, ut generationem ei demamus, nec imperfectum, ut ad personam aut Patris natura aut divinitatis ei plenitudo defuerit, nec dissimilem opere Filium nec dissimilem potestate aut per universa dissimilem nec subsistere aliunde, sed de Deo natum nec falsum, sed Deum verum de Deo vero esse generatum, lumen verum de vero lumine, ne minutum aut diversum putetur, quod Unigenitus habet splendorem lucis aeternae [cf. Sap 7:26], quia naturae ordine neque sine splendore lumen neque splendor potest esse sine lumine, imaginem quoque Patris, ut qui eum viderit, viderit et Patrem [Io 14:9]; eundem redemptionis nostrae gratia processisse de virgine, ut perfectus homo pro perfecto qui peccaverat homine nasceretur. Ergo, fratres, adseramus Dei Filium et perfectum hominem suscepisse.

For this reason, Brothers, this Jericho, which is a symbol of worldly desires, fell with a shout and did not rise again, since we all say with one voice that the Trinity is of one power, one majesty, one divinity, and one essence, so we assert that there is one inseparable power, yet three Persons, who neither return to themselves nor are diminished, ... but always remain; and also that there are no gradations of power or different times of origin, that the Word is neither uttered, so that we would take generation away from him, nor imperfect, so that there would be lacking in his Person the nature of the Father or the fullness of divinity; <we assert> also that the Son is not unlike <the Father> in work, unlike in power, or unlike in anything, or that he has his existence from elsewhere, but that he was born of God, not as false, but that he was generated as true God from true God, true light from true light, so that it should not be thought of as diminished or different, since the Only-Begotten has the splendor of eternal light [Wis 7:26]; because in the order of nature neither light can be without splendor nor splendor without light; <he is> also the image of the Father, since he who has seen him has also seen the Father [Jn 14:9]; the same <Son> proceeded from the Virgin for the sake of our redemption in order that a perfect man might be born for the perfect man who had sinned. Therefore, brothers, we assert that the Son of God also assumed perfect humanity.

Spiritum quoque Sanctum increatum atque unius maiestatis, unius usiae, unius virtutis cum Deo Patre et Domino nostro Iesu Christo fateamur. Neque enim creaturae dignus iniuriae est, qui emissus est, ut crearet, sicut propheta sanctus adstruxit dicens: “Emitte Spiritum tuum et creabuntur” [Ps 103:30]. Deinde alius item posuit: “Spiritus divinus, qui fecit me” [cf. Job 33:4]. Non enim separandus est divinitate, qui in operatione ac peccatorum remissione conectitur.

The Incarnation, against the Apollinarists

Illud sane miramur, quod quidam inter nostros dicantur, quia licet de Trinitate piam intellegentiam habere videantur, de sacramento tamen salutis nostrae . . . recta non sentiant. Adseruntur enim dicere, Dominum ac Salvatorem nostrum ex Maria virgine imperfectum, id est sine sensu hominem suscepisse. Heu quanta erit Arianorum in tali sensu vicinitas! Illi imperfectam divinitatem in Dei Filio dicunt, isti imperfectam humanitatem in hominis Filio mentiuntur. Quod si utique imperfectus homo susceptus est, imperfectum Dei munus est, imperfecta nostra salus, quia non est totus homo salvatus. Et ubi erit dictum illud dictum Domini: “Venit Filius hominis salvare quod perierat” [Mt 18:11]? Totus, id est in anima et corpore, in sensu atque in tota substantiae suae natura. Si ergo totus homo perierat, necesse fuit, ut id quod perierat, salvaretur; si autem sine sensu salvatus est, iam contra evangelii fidem invenietur, non totum, quod perierat, esse salvatum, cum alio loco ipse Salvator dicat: Irascimini mihi, quia totum hominem salvum feci [cf. Io 7:23]. Quid quod ipsius principalis delicti et totius perditionis summa in hominis sensu consistit. Primum enim hominis sensus eligendi boni malique si non perisset, non moreretur: quomodo ergo praesumeretur in finem salvari minime debuisse, quod ante omnes peccasse cognoscitur? Nos autem, qui integros et perfectos salvatos nos scimus, secundum catholicae Ecclesiae professionem perfectum Deum perfectum suscepisse hominem profitemur.

The Holy Spirit and the Incarnation of the Word

Ut enim Nicaeni Concilii fidem inviolabilem per omnia retinentes sine simulatione verborum aut sensu corrupto coaeternae et unius essentiae Trinitatem credentes in nullo Spiritum Sanctum separamus, sed perfectum in omnibus, virtute, honore, maiestate, deitate, cum Patre conveneramur et Filio, ita etiam plenitudinem Dei Verbi, non prolativi, sed nati, neque in Patre remanentis, ut non

We likewise profess that the Holy Spirit (is) uncreated and of one majesty, of one essence, of one power with God the Father and our Lord Jesus Christ. Nor is he deserving of creaturely injury, (he) who was sent to create, as the holy prophet affirms in saying: “Send forth thy Spirit and they shall be created” [Ps 104:30]. Later, another likewise affirms: “The divine Spirit who made me” [cf. Job 33:4]. Indeed, he cannot be separated as to divinity who is united in operation and in the remission of sins. 145

We truly wonder what is said about some among us, for although they appear to have an orthodox understanding of the Trinity, yet, with regard to the sacrament of our salvation, . . . they do not think correctly. In fact, it is claimed they say that our Lord and Savior received an imperfect humanity from the Virgin Mary, namely, without the mind. Oh, how close to the Arians is this concept! The (Arians) speak of an imperfect divinity in the Son of God, but these falsely assert an imperfect humanity in the Son of Man. But if, indeed, he assumed an imperfect manhood, then the gift of God is imperfect, and our salvation is imperfect, because the entire man is not saved. And why would these words of the Lord have been said: “The Son of Man has come to save what was lost” [Mt 18:11]? The whole (man) means in soul and in body, in the mind and in the total nature of his substance. So, if the total man had perished, it was necessary that what had perished be saved; but if man is saved without the mind, it thus will follow, contrary to the faith of the Gospel, that not everything that has perished has been saved, for in another place, the Savior himself says, “You are angry with me because I have saved the whole man” [cf. Jn 7:23]. Besides, it is chiefly in the mind of man that the original sin and the totality of perdition are found. If initially man’s sense of choosing good and evil had not been lost, he would not have died: how, then, can one presume that what is known to have sinned before all else should have no need in the end of being saved? We, however, who know that we have been saved completely and perfectly, confess, according to the profession of the Catholic Church, that the perfect God has assumed perfect humanity. 146

For just as in all things we hold inviolable the faith of the Council of Nicaea, without twisting the words or corrupting its meaning, (in) the Trinity of a co-eternal and identical essence and do not separate in anything the Holy Spirit, but venerate him as perfect in everything, power, honor, majesty, and Godhead, with the Father and the Son, so we also believe that the fullness of the Word 147 sit, sed ex aeterno in aeternum subsistentis perfectum, id est integrum transgressorem adsumpsisse et salvasse confidimus.

of God, who was not uttered, but born, and who does not remain in the Father, so that he might not be, but subsists from eternity to eternity, has taken on and saved the complete sinner, that is, in his totality.

148: Letter Per filium meum to Bishop Paulinus of Antioch, 375

Ed.: PL 13:356B–357A (= letter 3) / MaC 3:426AB / CouE 509B–510B. —Reg.: JR 235.

Incarnation of the Word

148 ... Confitendus [est] ipse Sapientia, Sermo Filii Dei humanum suscepisse corpus, animam, sensum, id est integrum Adam, et, ut expressius dicam, totum veterem nostrum sine peccato hominem. Sicuti enim confitentes eum humanum corpus suscepisse, non statim ei et humanas vitiorum adiungimus passiones: ita et dicentes eum suscepisse et hominis animam et sensum, non statim dicimus et cogitationum eum humanarum subiacuisse peccato. Si qui autem dixerit, Verbum pro humano sensu in Domini carne versatum, hunc catholica Ecclesia anathematizat, necnon et eos, qui duos in Salvatore filios confitentur, id est alium ante incarnationem, et alium post assumptionem carnis ex Virgine, et non eundem Dei Filium et ante et postea confitentur.

... We must confess that Wisdom itself, the Word, the Son of God assumed body, soul, and mind, that is, the complete Adam, or, to say it more expressly, our complete old man except for sin. Just as we confess that he assumed a human body (though we do not immediately attribute to him defective human passions), so also by saying that he assumed a human soul and mind, we are not thereby saying that he was subject to the sin of human thoughts. But if there is anyone who says that the Word [verbum] took the place of the human mind in the Lord's flesh, the Catholic Church anathematizes such a person as well as those who confess that there are two sons in the Savior, that is, one before the Incarnation and another after he assumed his flesh from the Virgin, and who do not confess that he is the same Son of God before and after.

149: Letter "Οτι τῆ ἀποστολικῆ καθέδρα to the Eastern Bishops, ca. 378

Ed.: Greek from Theodoret of Cyrus, Historia ecclesiae V, 10, 2, 4f.: L. Parmentier (GChSch; 1911), 295₁₄–297₄ / PG 82:1220A–C; Latin translation by Cassiodorus-Epiphanius, Historia ecclesiae tripartita IX, 15, 24f.: W. Jacob and R. Hanslik: CSEL 71 (1952): 517f. / PL 13:369B–371B (= letter 7).

Condemnation of Apollinarianism

149 Γινώσκετε τοίνυν ὅτι πάλαι τὸν Τιμόθεον τὸν βέβηλον, τὸν μαθητὴν τοῦ Ἀπολιναρίου τοῦ αἰρετικοῦ, μετὰ τοῦ ἀσεβοῦς αὐτοῦ δόγματος καθείλομεν, καὶ οὐδαμῶς πιστεῦομεν αὐτοῦ τὰ λείψανα λόγῳ τινὶ τοῦ λοιποῦ ἰσχύειν... Ὁ γὰρ Χριστὸς ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ θεοῦ ὁ κύριος ἡμῶν τῶ γενεῖ τῶν ἀνθρώπων διὰ τοῦ ἰδίου πάθους πληρεστάτην ἀπέδωκε τὴν σωτηρίαν, ἵνα ὅλον τὸν ἄνθρωπον ταῖς ἀμαρτίαις ἐνεχόμενον πάσης ἀμαρτίας ἐλευθερώσῃ. Τοῦτον εἴ τις ἦτοι ἀνθρωπότητος ἢ θεότητος ἔλαττον ἐσχηκέναι εἴποι, πνεύματος διαβόλου πεπληρωμένος τῆς γεέννης υἱὸν ἑαυτὸν ἀποδείκνυσι. Τί τοίνυν πάλιν παρ' ἐμοῦ ζητεῖτε τὴν καθαιρεῖν Τιμοθέου; Ὅς καὶ ἐνταῦθα κρίσει τῆς ἀποστολικῆς καθέδρας ... καθηρέθη ἅμα τῷ διδασκάλῳ αὐτοῦ Ἀπολιναρίῳ...

Know then that already long ago we condemned that profane man Timothy, the disciple of Apollinarius the heretic, along with his godless doctrine. In no way do we believe that his legacy will exercise any influence from now on... For Christ our Lord, the Son of God, granted mankind through his own suffering the fullest salvation possible so as to set free of every sin the complete man bound in (his) sins. If anyone says that this (Christ) had less of humanity or divinity, he shows himself to be a son of hell by being full of the devil's spirit. Why, then, are you asking me again for a judgment against Timothy? He, along with his teacher Apollinarius, was also condemned here by the judgment of the Apostolic See....

First Council of CONSTANTINOPLE (Second Ecumenical): May–July 30, 381

The synod of the "150 Fathers" defined, above all, the divinity of the Holy Spirit against the Macedonians (Pneumatomachians). Canon 1 is directed against Arians of all kinds: the followers of Apollinarius of Laodicea, of Sabellius of Ptolemais, of Marcellus of Ancyra, of Photinus of Sirmium, of Eunomius of Cyzicus, and of Eudoxius of Constantinople. This synod was already called “ecumenical” in a letter of the local Synod of Constantinople (382) to Pope Damasus (in Theodoret of Cyrus, Historia ecclesiae V, 9, 13, ed. by Parmentier [GChSch] 293 / PG 82:1217B); only much later, however, was it generally accepted as such. In the Western Church, where the third canon, which claimed the privilege of a patriarchy for the location of the “New Rome”, raised opposition, it was accepted implicitly—and only with respect to its teachings—through the fact that Pope Vigilius confirmed the Second Council of Constantinople (553).

150: The Constantinopolitan Creed

From the end of the seventeenth century on, it has been known by the name “Niceno-Constantinopolitan”, as if it were a mere further development or broadening of the Nicene Creed. It is not certain whether it was written during the council itself or whether it had existed earlier. The latter can be assumed with reference to the shorter creed of Epiphanius (*42), which is very similar to the Constantinopolitan Creed and which can be found in the Ancoratus (written in 374!). During the sixth century, it was accepted in the East, primarily as a baptismal creed. Very soon it assumed greater importance than the Nicene Creed, above all when it was introduced into the liturgy of the Mass (first by the Monophysites in Antioch around 480, then in Constantinople before 518). It appears first in the Church of the West as the Credo in Mass at the Third Synod of Toledo (589), can. 2 (MaC 9:992f.). It is in this creed that for the first time the filioque is found in a magisterial document. It was, however, probably inserted after the synod; cf. *470^o. From the eighth century on, the filioque caused serious theological controversies. When this addition was already widely used (cf. the Gallican liturgy, researched by F. J. Mone, the Synod of Friuli in 791, and the Synod of Frankfurt in 794), the Synod of Aix-la-Chapelle demanded in 809 of Pope Leo III the acceptance of the filioque into the creed of the entire Church. The pope refused, not because he objected to the formula, but rather because he was reluctant to add anything to the traditional creed. Later on, Henry II succeeded in persuading Pope Benedict VIII to have the creed with the inserted filioque sung during his coronation Mass in Rome in the year 1014. It was finally accepted by both the Latins and also some Greeks at the ecumenical councils of Lyon II (1274) and Florence (1439); (cf. *853, 1302).

Ed.: The oldest text comes from the Council of Chalcedon, session 3 (others, mistakenly, session 2; critical text in G. L. Dossetti, Il simbolo di Nicea e di Costantinopoli, Testi e ricerche di scienze religiose 2 [Rome, 1967], 244–50). But already the form of the creed repeated in session 5 deviates from the original form: ACOe 2/III, 80_{3–16} / E. Schwartz, in ZNTW 25 (1926): 49f. / Hn §§ 144f. / Karmiris 1:80, 133 / MaC 3:565A–C / COeD, 3rd ed., 24 / Ltzm 36f. —Concerning the liturgical form of the Roman Church, cf.: Ordo Romanus XI, (before VII) (ed. by Andrieu, Les Ordines Romani du haut moyen âge 2 (Louvain, 1948), 434f., Sacramentarium Gelasianum (ed. by Mohlberg and Eizenhöfer, Liber Sacramentorum ... (Sacramentarium Gelasianum) (Cod. Vat. Reg. lat. 3/6 / Paris Bibl. Nat. 7193, 41/56), Rerum ecclesiasticarum documenta, Series maior, Fontes 4, 3rd ed. (Rome, 1981), 48–50 / Wilson, The Gelasian Sacramentary (Oxford, 1894), 53–55; Missale Romanum; the Latin text that follows is the liturgical text according to the Missale Romanum.

[Recensio graeca]

Πιστεύομεν εἰς ἕνα Θεόν,
πατέρα παντοκρά-
τορα, ποιητὴν οὐρα-νοῦ καὶ γῆς, ὁρατῶν τε πάντων καὶ ἀοράτων· καὶ εἰς ἕνα κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν, τὸν
υἶόν τοῦ Θεοῦ τὸν μονογενῆ, τὸν ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς γεν-νηθέντα πρὸ πάντων τῶν αἰώνων, φῶς ἐκ φωτός, Θεὸν ἀληθινὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ ἀληθι-νοῦ, γεννηθέντα οὐ ποιηθέντα, ὁμοού-σιον τῷ πατρί, δι’ οὗ τὰ πάντα ἐγένετο· τὸν δι’ ἡμᾶς τοὺς ἀνθρώπους καὶ διὰ τὴν ἡμετέραν σωτηρίαν κατελθόντα ἐκ τῶν οὐρανῶν καὶ σαρκωθέντα ἐκ πνεύ-ματος ἁγίου καὶ

[Recensio latina]

Credo in unum Deum, Patrem omnipotentem, factorem caeli et ter-rae, visibilibus omnium et invisibilibus.
Et in unum Dominum Iesum Christum, Fi-lium Dei unigenitum, et ex Patre natum ante omnia saecula, Deum de Deo, lumen de lumine, Deum verum de Deo vero, genitum, non factum, con-substantialia Patri:
per quem omnia facta
sunt;
qui propter nos homines et propter nostram salutem descendit de caelis, et incarnatus est de Spiritu Sancto ex Maria virgine, et homo factus est,

[Greek version]

We believe in one God,
the Father almighty, creator of heaven and earth, of all things
visible and invisible.
And in one Lord Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son of God, generated from the Father before all ages, light from light, true
God from true God,
begotten, not made,
consubstantial with the Father, through whom all things were made.
For us men and for our salvation he came down from heaven and became flesh from the Holy Spirit and the Virgin Mary and was made man.

[Latin version]

I believe in one God, the 150
Father almighty, creator of heaven and earth, of all things
visible and invisible.
And in one Lord Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son of God,
born of the Father
before all ages, God from God, light from light, true God from true God, begotten, not made, consub-stantial with the Father, through whom all things were made;
for us men and for our salvation, he came down from heaven and by the power of the Holy Spirit was incarnate from the Virgin Mary and

Μαρίας τῆς παρθένου, καὶ ἐνανθρωπήσαντα, σταυρωθέντα τε ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν ἐπὶ Ποντίου Πιλάτου καὶ παθόντα καὶ ταφέντα καὶ ἀναστάντα τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ κατὰ τὰς γραφάς, καὶ ἀνελθόντα εἰς τοὺς οὐρανοὺς, καὶ καθεζόμενον ἐν δεξιᾷ τοῦ πατρὸς, καὶ πάλιν ἐρχόμενον μετὰ δόξης, κρῖναι ζῶντας καὶ νεκρούς· οὗ τῆς βασιλείας οὐκ ἔσται τέλος·

καὶ εἰς τὸ πνεῦμα τὸ ἅγιον, τὸ κύριον καὶ ζωοποιόν, τὸ ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς ἐκπορευόμενον, τὸ σὺν πατρὶ καὶ υἱῷ συμπροσκυνούμενον καὶ συνδοξαζόμενον, τὸ λαλῆσαν διὰ τῶν προφητῶν. Εἰς μίαν ἁγίαν καθολικὴν καὶ ἀποστολικὴν ἐκκλησίαν. Ὁμολογοῦμεν ἓν βάπτισμα εἰς ἄφεσιν ἁμαρτιῶν. Προσδοκῶμεν ἀνάστασιν νεκρῶν καὶ ζωὴν τοῦ μέλλοντος αἰῶνος. Ἀμήν.

crucifixus etiam pro nobis sub Pontio Pilato, passus et sepultus est, et resurrexit tertia die secundum Scripturas, et ascendit in caelum, sedet ad dexteram Patris, et iterum venturus est cum gloria, iudicare vivos et mortuos: cuius regni non erit finis.

Et in Spiritum Sanctum, Dominum et vivificantem, qui ex Patre Filioque procedit, qui cum Patre et Filio simul adoratur et conglorificatur qui locutus est per prophetas. Et unam sanctam catholicam et apostolicam Ecclesiam. Confiteor unum baptismum in remissionem peccatorum. Et exspecto resurrectionem mortuorum, et vitam venturi saeculi. Amen.

For our sake, too, he was crucified under Pontius Pilate, suffered, and was buried. On the third day he rose again, according to the Scriptures, ascended into heaven, and is seated at the right hand of the Father; and he will come again in glory to judge the living and the dead; to his kingdom there will be no end.

And (we believe) in the Holy Spirit, the Lord and Giver of life, who proceeds from the Father, who together with the Father and the Son is worshipped and glorified, who has spoken through the prophets. And (we believe) in one, holy, catholic, and apostolic Church. We acknowledge one baptism for the forgiveness of sins. We await the resurrection of the dead and the life of the world to come. Amen.

was made man; he was also crucified for us under Pontius Pilate, suffered, and was buried; and on the third day he rose again according to the Scriptures and ascended into heaven; he is seated at the right hand of the Father and will come again in glory to judge the living and the dead; and his kingdom will have no end.

And (I believe) in the Holy Spirit, the Lord and Giver of life, who proceeds from the Father and the Son, who together with the Father and the Son is likewise worshipped and glorified, who has spoken through the prophets. And (I believe) in one, holy, catholic, and apostolic Church. I acknowledge one baptism for the forgiveness of sins. And I await the resurrection of the dead and the life of the world to come. Amen.

151: Canons, July 9, 381

Ed.: Bruns 1:20, 21 / MaC 3:557E, 566D / HaC 1:809A / Karmiris 1:135 / COeD, 3rd ed., 314-15; [only the Latin:] Turner 2/III (1939), 409, 411; cf. PL 84:135C.

Condemnation of Diverse Heresies

151 α') Μὴ ἀθετεῖσθαι τὴν πίστιν τῶν πατέρων τῶν τριακοσίων δεκαοκτώ, τῶν ἐν Νικαίᾳ τῆς Βυθυνίας συνελθόντων· ἀλλὰ μένειν ἐκείνην κυρίαν, καὶ ἀναθεματισθῆναι πᾶσαν αἵρεσιν· καὶ ἰδικῶς τὴν τῶν Εὐνομιανῶν, εἴτ' οὖν Ἀνομοιῶν· καὶ τὴν τῶν Ἀρειανῶν, εἴτ' οὖν Εὐδοξιανῶν· καὶ τὴν τῶν Ἡμιαρειανῶν, εἴτ' οὖν Πνευματομάχων· καὶ τὴν τῶν Σαβελλιανῶν, καὶ τὴν τῶν Μαρκελλιανῶν, καὶ τὴν τῶν Φωτεινιανῶν, καὶ τὴν τῶν Ἀπολιναριστῶν.

1. The faith of the 318 Fathers who gathered in Nicaea of Bythinia should not be annulled. Rather it should continue to have authority, and every heresy (should be) anathematized, especially that of the Eunomians, or the Anomians, that of the Arians, or Eudoxians, that of the Semiarians, or Pneumatomachians, that of the Sabelians, that of the Marcellians, that of the Photinians, and that of the Apollinarians.

152–180: Synod of ROME, 382a. Tomus Damasi, or the Profession of Faith of Bishop Paulinus of Antioch

According to P. Galtier (RechScRel 26 [1936]: 385–418, 563–78), the Tomus Damasi is the fruit of the efforts of the synod of 382 (not earlier). It is comprised of a double sequence of dogmatic canons (1–8; 10–24), which have also been transmitted separately. The disciplinary canon 9, which alludes to the schism of Meletius of Antioch, was inserted into and sometimes preceded the profession of faith of Nicaea. The teaching of Diodorus of Tarsus (can. 6), of Apollinaris of Laodicea (can. 7), and of Marcellus of Ancyra (can. 8) is condemned, without, however, making mention of their names. The original text was in Latin. However, it is uncertain whether the following text is the original or a retranslation from a Greek text of Theodoret of Cyrus, Historia ecclesiae V, 11, 1–15. It is cited also by Arnobius the Younger in Conflictus II, 32.

Ed.: Turner I/III/I (1913), 284–94 / PL 13:358B–364B (= letter 4); 56:686B–690B / MaC 3:481D–484A (cf. 486C–488B) / HaC 1:802B–803D; in Theodoret, Historia ecclesiae V, 11, ed. by L. Parmentier (GChSch), 297₁₅–302₁₅ / PG 82:1221B–1226B; in Arnobius: PL 53:319B–322C. —Reg.: JR 235, with additions; CIPL 1633.

Trinity and Incarnation of the Word

Quia post Concilium Nicaenum is error inolevit, ut quidam ore sacrilego auderent dicere, Spiritum Sanctum factum esse per Filium:

(1.) Anathematizamus eos, qui non tota libertate proclamant, eum cum Patre et Filio unius potestatis esse atque substantiae.

(2.) Anathematizamus quoque eos, qui Sabellii sequuntur errorem, eundem dicentes esse Patrem quem et Filium.

(3.) Anathematizamus Arium atque Eunomium, qui pari impietate, licet sermone dissimili, Filium et Spiritum Sanctum asserunt creaturas.

(4.) Anathematizamus Macedonianos, qui de Arii stirpe venientes, non perfidiam mutaverunt, sed nomen.

(5.) Anathematizamus Photinum, qui Ebionis haeresim instaurans, Dominum Iesum Christum tantum ex Maria confitetur.

(6.) Anathematizamus eos, qui duos asserunt Filios, unum ante saecula, et alterum post assumptionem carnis ex Virgine.

(7.) Anathematizamus eos, qui pro hominis anima rationabili et intelligibili dicunt Dei Verbum in humana carne versatum, cum ipse Filius et Verbum Dei non pro anima rationabili et intelligibili in suo corpore fuerit, sed nostram (id est rationabilem et intelligibilem) sine peccato animam susceperit atque salvaverit.

(8.) Anathematizamus eos, qui Verbum Filium Dei extensionem aut collectionem et a Patre separatum, insubstantivum et finem habiturum esse contendunt.

Because, after the Council of Nicaea, this error arose, that some with sacrilegious speech were daring to affirm that the Holy Spirit was made through the Son: 152

(1.) We anathematize those who do not with full freedom proclaim that he (the Holy Spirit) is of one power and substance with the Father and the Son. 153

(2.) We likewise anathematize those who follow the error of Sabellius in saying that the Father and the Son are one and the same. 154

(3.) We anathematize Arius and Eunomius, who, with equal impiety though in different words, assert that the Son and the Holy Spirit are creatures. 155

(4.) We anathematize the Macedonians, who, coming from the same root as Arius, have not changed the faithfulness but (only) the name. 156

(5.) We anathematize Photinus, who renews the heresy of Ebion and professes that the Lord Jesus Christ (came) only from Mary. 157

(6.) We condemn those who affirm two sons, one who is before the ages, the other after the assumption of the flesh from the Virgin. 158

(7.) We condemn those who say that the Word of God dwelling in human flesh took the place of the rational and spiritual soul, since the Son and the Word of God did not replace the rational and spiritual soul in his body but rather assumed our soul (i.e., a rational and spiritual one) without sin and saved it. 159

(8.) We anathematize those who affirm that the Word, the Son of God, is an extension or a contraction and is separate from the Father, without substance, and will have an end. 160

- 161 (9.) Eos quoque, qui de ecclesiis ad ecclesias migraverunt, tamdiu a communione nostra habemus alienos, quamdiu ad eas redierint civitates, in quibus primum sunt constituti. Quodsi alius, alio transmigrante, in loco viventis est ordinatus, tamdiu vacet sacerdotii dignitate, qui suam deseruit civitatem, quamdiu successor eius quiescat in Domino.
- (9.) Those also who have migrated from church to church we regard as alienated from our communion until they return to those cities in which they were first appointed. If someone else, while the other is moving about, has been ordained in his place during his lifetime, the one who has left his city will be deprived of the dignity of the priesthood until his successor should rest in the Lord.
- 162 (10.) Si quis non dixerit semper Patrem, semper Filium, semper Spiritum Sanctum esse: haereticus est.
- (10.) Anyone who does not say that the Father always is, the Son always is, and the Holy Spirit always is, is a heretic.
- 163 (11.) Si quis non dixerit Filium natum de Patre, id est de substantia divina ipsius: haereticus est.
- (11.) Anyone who does not say that the Son is born of the Father, that is, of his same divine substance, is a heretic.
- 164 (12.) Si quis non dixerit verum Deum Filium Dei, sicut verum Deum Patrem eius, et omnia posse et omnia nosse et Patri aequalem: haereticus est.
- (12.) Anyone who denies that the Son of God is true God, as the Father is true God, that he can do all things, knows all things, and is equal to the Father is a heretic.
- 165 (13.) Si quis dixerit, quod in carne constitutus cum esset in terra, in caelis cum Patre non erat: haereticus est.
- (13.) Anyone who says that the Son, while incarnate on earth, was not in heaven with the Father is a heretic.
- 166 (14.) Si quis dixerit, quod in passione crucis dolorem sentiebat Deus, et non caro cum anima, quam induerat—forma servi, quam sibi acceperat [cf. Phil 2:7], sicut ait Scriptura—Filius Dei Christus: non recte sentit.
- (14.) Anyone who says that in the Passion of the Cross it is God himself who felt the pain and not the flesh and the soul that Christ, the Son of God, had taken to himself—the form of servant that he had accepted, as Scripture says [cf. Phil 2:7]—he is mistaken.
- 167 (15.) Si quis non dixerit, quod in carne sedet in dextera Patris, in qua venturus est iudicare vivos et mortuos: haereticus est.
- (15.) Anyone who does not say that he sits at the right hand of the Father in the flesh in which he will come to judge the living and the dead is a heretic.
- 168 (16.) Si quis non dixerit, Spiritum Sanctum de Patre esse vere ac proprie, sicut Filium, de divina substantia et Deum verum: haereticus est.
- (16.) Anyone who denies that the Holy Spirit, like the Son, is really and truly from the Father, of the divine substance, and true God is a heretic.
- 169 (17.) Si quis non dixerit, omnia posse Spiritum Sanctum et omnia nosse et ubique esse, sicut Filium et Patrem: haereticus est.
- (17.) Anyone who denies that the Holy Spirit can do all things, knows all things, and is everywhere present, just like the Father and the Son, is a heretic.
- 170 (18.) Si quis dixerit Spiritum Sanctum facturam, aut per Filium factum: haereticus est.
- (18.) Anyone who says that the Holy Spirit is a creature or made by the Son is a heretic.
- 171 (19.) Si quis non dixerit, omnia per Filium et Spiritum Sanctum Patrem fecisse, id est visibilia et invisibilia: haereticus est.
- (19.) Anyone who denies that the Father made all things, that is, things visible and invisible, through the Son and the Holy Spirit is a heretic.
- 172 (20.) Si quis non dixerit, Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti unam divinitatem, potestatem, maiestatem, potentiam, unam gloriam, dominationem, unum regnum, atque unam voluntatem ac veritatem: haereticus est.
- (20.) Anyone who denies that the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit have one Godhead, one might, one majesty, one power, one glory, one lordship, one kingdom, one will and truth is a heretic.

(21.) Si quis tres personas non dixerit veras Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti, aequales, semper viventes, omnia continentes visibilia et invisibilia, omnia potentes, omnia iudicantes, omnia vivificantes, omnia facientes, omnia salvantes: haereticus est.

(22.) Si quis non dixerit adorandum Sanctum Spiritum ab omni creatura sicut Filium et Patrem: haereticus est.

(23.) Si quis de Patre et Filio bene senserit, de Spiritu autem non recte habuerit, haereticus est, quod omnes haeretici de Filio Dei et Spiritu Sancto male sentientes, in perfidia Iudaeorum et paganorum inveniuntur.

(24.) Quod si quis partiatur, Patrem Deum dicens et Deum Filium eius et Deum Sanctum Spiritum, deos dici et non Deum propter unam divinitatem et potentiam, quam credimus et scimus Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti; subtrahens autem Filium aut Spiritum Sanctum, ita solum aestimet Deum Patrem dici, aut ita credit unum Deum: haereticus est in omnibus, immo Iudaeus, quod nomen deorum et angelis et sanctis omnibus a Deo est positum et donatum, de Patre autem et Filio et Spiritu Sancto propter unam et aequalem divinitatem non nomen deorum, sed Dei nobis ostenditur atque indicitur, ut credamus, quia in Patre et Filio et Spiritu Sancto solum baptizamus et non in archangelorum nominibus aut angelorum, quomodo haeretici, aut Iudaei, aut etiam pagani dementes.

Haec ergo est salus christianorum, ut credentes Trinitati, id est Patri et Filio et Spiritui Sancto, et in eam baptizati veram solam unam divinitatem et potentiam, maiestatem et substantiam eiusdem esse sine dubio credamus.

b. Decretum Damasi

See the introductory note to Decretum Gelasianum, *350^o. Even if the text is not authentic, its fundamental assertions are considered to be those of Damasus. Cf. the slightly older canon of Scripture of the Synod of Laodicea, chap. 60 (Bruns 1:79f. / Turner 2/III, 388–92), in which the books of Judith, Sirach, 1–2 Maccabees, and Revelation are missing.

Ed.: [*178–80] C. H. Turner, in JThSt 1 (1900): 556–59 / E. von Dobschütz, Das Decretum Gelasianum, TU 38/IV (Leipzig, 1912), 3–5, 21–28 [variations of this text in brackets for *179f.] / PL 19:787B–793A; 59:157A–159B. —[only *178]: PL 13:373f. —[only *179f.]: BullTau 1:663f. / EnchB nos. 26f. —Reg.: JR 251, with additions; cf. 700.

The Holy Spirit

Prius agendum est de Spiritu septiformi, qui in Christo requiescit. Spiritus sapientiae: Christus Dei virtus et Dei sapientia [I Cor 1:24]. Spiritus intellectus: Intellectum dabo tibi, et instruum te in via, in qua ingredieris [Ps 31:8]. Spiritus consilii: Et vocabitur nomen eius magni consilii angelus [Is 9:6: Septg.]. Spiritus virtutis: ut

(21.) Anyone who denies that there are three true Persons, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, equal, living eternally, containing all things visible and invisible, all-powerful, judging, creating, and saving all things, is a heretic. 173

(22.) Anyone who denies that the Holy Spirit is to be adored by all creatures just like the Son and the Father is a heretic. 174

(23.) Anyone who has a correct idea about Father and Son, but not about the Holy Spirit, is a heretic, because all heretics who do not think correctly about the Son and the Spirit share in the unbelief of the Jews and pagans. 175

(24.) Anyone who, while saying that the Father is God, that his Son is God, and that the Holy Spirit is God, divides them and means ⟨several⟩ gods and does not say that they are God on account of the one Godhead and might that we believe and know to belong to the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit; and if he excludes the Son and the Holy Spirit and believes that only the Father is God and this is what he means when he believes in one God, he is a heretic on all these points and indeed a Jew. For the name of gods has been appointed and given by God to the angels and all the saints; but for the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, because of their one and equal divinity, it is not the name of gods but of God that we are shown and taught to believe; for we are baptized solely in the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, and not in the names of archangels or angels, like the heretics, the Jews, or even the pagans in their folly. 176

This, then, is the salvation of Christians, that, believing in the Trinity, that is, in Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, ⟨and⟩ baptized in it, we must believe without doubt that to it belongs the one and only true Godhead and might, majesty and substance. 177

We must first treat the sevenfold Spirit that reposes in Christ. The Spirit of wisdom: Christ ⟨is⟩ the power of God and the wisdom of God [I Cor 1:24]. The Spirit of understanding: I will give you understanding and instruct you in the way you should go [Ps 32:8]. The Spirit of counsel: And his name shall be called messenger of 178 supra, Dei virtus et Dei sapientia [1 Cor 1:24]. Spiritus scientiae: Propter eminentiam Christi scientiae Iesu [Eph 3:19; Phil 3:8] apostoli. Spiritus veritatis: Ego via et vita et veritas [Io 14:6]. Spiritus timoris [Dei]: Initium sapientiae timor Domini [Ps 110:10; Prv 9:10].

Multiformis autem nominum Christi dispensatio: Dominus, quia spiritus; Verbum, quia Deus; Filius, quia unigenitus ex Patre;... propheta, quia futura revelavit; "Spiritus enim Sanctus non est Patris tantummodo aut Filii tantummodo Spiritus, sed Patris et Filii Spiritus; scriptum est enim: Si quis dilexerit mundum, non est Spiritus Patris in illo [cf. 1 Io 2:15; Rm 8:9]; item scriptum est: Quisquis 'autem Spiritum Christi non habet, hic non est eius' [Rm 8:9]; nominato ita Patre et Filio intelligitur Spiritus"¹ Sanctus, de quo ipse Filius in Evangelio dicit, quia Spiritus Sanctus a Patre procedit [Io 15:26], et de meo accipiet et adnuntiabit vobis [Io 16:14].

great counsel [Is 9:6 LXX]. The Spirit of strength, as said above: the power of God and the wisdom of God [1 Cor 1:24]. The Spirit of knowledge: because of the excellence of the knowledge of Christ Jesus [Eph 3:19; Phil 3:8], the Apostle. The Spirit of truth: I (am) the way, the truth, and the life [Jn 14:6]. The Spirit of the fear [of God]: The fear of the Lord (is) the beginning of wisdom [Ps 111:10; Prov 9:10].

Multiform, then, is the distribution of the titles of Christ: Lord, because he is spirit; Word, because he is God; Son, since he is the Only-Begotten of the Father;... Prophet, since he has revealed future things. "For the Holy Spirit is not the Spirit only of the Father or only of the Son, but the Spirit of the Father and the Son; for it is written: If one loves the world, the Spirit of the Father is not in him [cf. 1 Jn 2:15; Rom 8:9]. It is likewise written: Whoever 'does not, therefore, have the Spirit of Christ does not belong to him' [Rom 8:9]; when the Father and the Son are thus named, the Holy Spirit is understood",¹ of whom the Son himself in the Gospel says: The Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father [Jn 15:26] and: He will receive from what is mine and announce it to you [Jn 16:14].

The Canon of Sacred Scripture

179 Nunc vero de Scripturis divinis agendum est, quid universalis catholica recipiat Ecclesia et quid vitare debeat.

Incipit ordo Veteris Testamenti. Genesis liber unus; Exodus lib. 1; Leviticus lib. 1; Numeri lib. 1; Deuteronomium lib. 1; Iesu Nave lib. 1; Iudicum lib. 1; Ruth lib. 1; Regum libri 4; Paralypomenon [Paralipomenon] libri 2; Psalmi CL [Psalterium] lib. 1; Salamonis [Salomonis] libri 3; Proverbia lib. 1, Ecclesiastes lib. 1, Cantica Canticorum lib. 1; item Sapientia lib. 1, Ecclesiasticus lib. 1.

Item ordo Prophetarum. Esaiiae liber unus; Hieremiae lib. 1, cum Cinoth id est Lamentationibus suis; Ezechiel[is] lib. 1; Danihel[is] lib. 1; Oseae lib. 1; Amos lib. 1; Micheae lib. 1; Iohel lib. 1; Abdiae lib. 1; Ionae lib. 1; Naum lib. 1; Ambacum [Abbacuc] lib. 1; Sophoniae lib. 1; Aggei lib. 1; Zachariae lib. 1; Malacihel [Malachiae] lib. 1.

Item ordo storiarum. Iob liber unus; Tobiae lib. 1; Esdrae [Hesdrae] libri 2; Hester lib. 1; Iudit lib. 1 [-!]; Machabeorum libri 2.

Now indeed we must treat of the divine Scriptures, what the universal Catholic Church accepts and what she must avoid.

At the beginning, the order of the Old Testament. Genesis, one book; Exodus, one book; Leviticus, one book; Numbers, one book; Deuteronomy, one book; Joshua, one book; Judges, one book; Ruth, one book; Kings, four books (= two books of Samuel, two books of Kings); Chronicles, two books; 150 Psalms [Psalter], one book; three books of Solomon; Proverbs, one book; Ecclesiastes (= Qoheleth), one book; Song of Songs, one book; likewise, Wisdom, one book; Ecclesiasticus (= Sirach), one book.

Likewise, the order of the prophets. Isaiah, one book; Jeremiah, one book, along with the Qinoth, that is, his Lamentations; Ezekiel, one book; Daniel, one book; Hosea, one book; Amos, one book; Micah, one book; Joel, one book; Obadiah, one book; Jonah, one book; Nahum, one book; Habakkuk, one book; Zephaniah, one book; Haggai, one book; Zechariah, one book; Malachi, one book.

Likewise, the order of the histories. Job, one book; Tobit, one book; Ezra, two books (one book of Ezra, one book of Nehemiah); Esther, one book; Judith, one book [-!]; of the Maccabees, two books.

*178 ¹ "For the Holy Spirit ... is understood" (Spiritus enim Sanctus ... intelligitur Spiritus) is a citation of Augustine, In evangelium Iohannis, tract. 9, no. 7 (PL 35:1461 / R. Willems, CpChL 36 [1954]: 94); since this work was not written by Augustine before 414, the citation should be distinguished from the original Decretum of Damasus. E. Schwartz (ZNTW 29 [1930]: 161-68) maintains it should be treated as an interpolation.

Item ordo Scripturarum Novi et aeterni [-!] Testamenti, quem sancta et catholica [Romana] suscipit [et veneratur] Ecclesia. Evangeliorum [libri 4:] secundum Matheum liber unus, sec. Marcum lib. 1, sec. Lucam lib. 1, sec. Iohannem lib. 1.

[Item Actuum apostolorum liber unus.]

Epistulae Pauli [apostoli] numero 14: ad Romanos [ep.] una, ad Corinthios [ep.] duas, ad Ephesios 1, ad Thessalonicenses 2, ad Galatas 1, ad Philippenses 1, ad Colosenses 1, ad Timotheum 2, ad Titum 1, ad Filimonem [Philemonem] 1, ad Hebreos 1.

Item Apocalypsis Iohannis liber 1.

Et Actus apostolorum liber 1 [-! vd. supra].

Item epistulae canonicae [can. ep.] numero 7: Petri apostoli epistulae 2, Iacobi apostoli ep. 1, Iohannis apostoli ep. 1, alterius¹ Iohannis presbyteri ep. 2, Iudae zelotus apostoli ep. 1.

Explicit canon Novi Testamenti.

Likewise, the order of the Scriptures of the New 180 and eternal [-!] Testament, which the holy and catholic [Roman] Church accepts [and venerates]. [Four books] of the Gospels: according to Matthew, one book; according to Mark, one book; according to Luke, one book; according to John, one book.

[Likewise, one book of the Acts of the Apostles.]

Fourteen letters of [the apostle] Paul: to the Romans, one [letter]; to the Corinthians, two [letters]; to the Ephesians, one; to the Thessalonians, two; to the Galatians, one; to the Philippians, one; to the Colossians, one; to Timothy, two; to Titus, one; to Philemon, one; to the Hebrews, one.

Likewise, one book of the Apocalypse of John.

And one book of the Acts of the Apostles [-! see above].

Likewise, seven canonical letters: of the apostle Peter, two letters; of the apostle James, one letter; of the apostle John, one letter; of the other John¹ the Presbyter, two letters; of the apostle Jude the Zealot, one letter.

End of the canon of the New Testament.

SIRICIUS: December 384 (January 12, 385?)–November 26, 399

181–185: Letter Directa ad decessorem to Bishop Himerius of Tarragona, February 10, 385

Ed.: [*181f.; 183–85]: PL 13:1132C, 1146A–1147A; 1133A–1134A, 1135A–1136A, 1138A–C, 1139A / CouE 624B–631A / MaC 3:655D–661D / HaC 1:847C–849E. —Reg.: JR 255, with additions.

Primacy and Doctrinal Authority of the Bishop of Rome

(Prooem. § 1) ... Consultationi tuae responsum competens non negamus, quia officii Nostri consideratione non est Nobis dissimulare, non est tacere libertas, quibus maior cunctis christianae religionis zelus incumbit. Portamus onera omnium qui gravantur; quin immo haec portat in Nobis beatus Apostolus Petrus, qui Nos in omnibus, ut confidimus, administrationis suae protegit et tuetur heredes....

(c. 15 § 20) Nunc fraternitatis tuae animum ad servandos canones et tenenda decretalia constituta magis ac magis incitamus, ut haec quae ad tua rescriptsimum consulta, in omnium coepiscoporum nostrorum perferri facias notionem, et non solum eorum qui in tua sunt dioecesi constituti, sed etiam ad universos Carthaginenses ac Baeticos, Lusitanos atque Gallicios, vel eos qui vicinis tibi collimitant hinc inde provinciis, haec quae a Nobis sunt salubri ordinatione disposita, sub litterarum tuarum prosecutione mittantur. Et quamquam statuta Sedis Apostolicae vel canonum venerabilia

(Preface, § 1) ... We do not refuse an adequate 181 response to your request of counsel, since, in regard to Our duty, We are not free to hide or to remain silent, since it is incumbent on Us more than all to have a greater zeal for the Christian religion. We carry the weight of all who are oppressed; or rather, these are borne in Us by the blessed apostle Peter, who, in all things, as We trust, protects and defends the successors of his ministry....

(Chap. 15, § 20) Now We encourage more and 182 more Your Fraternity's resolution to observe the canons and keep the established decrees, so that what We have replied to your inquiries might be brought to the attention of all our fellow bishops, and not only those who are in your province; rather, what has been determined by Us in a salutary ordinance should also be sent under a cover letter from you to all those (bishops) of Cartagena, Baetica, Lusitania, and Galicia, or those who are contiguous to you in neighboring provinces. And, although it is permissible for none of the priests of definita nulli sacerdotum Domini ignorare sit liberum: utilius tamen et, pro antiquitate sacerdotii tui, dilectioni tuae esse admodum poterit gloriosum, si ea, quae ad te speciali nomine generaliter scripta sunt, per unanimi- tatis tuae sollicitudinem, in universorum fratrum nostrorum notitiam perferantur: quatenus et quae a Nobis non inconsulte, sed provide sub nimia cautela et deliberatione sunt salubriter constituta, intemerata permaneant et omnibus in posterum excusationibus aditus, qui iam nulli apud Nos patere poterit, obstruatur.

*180 ¹ Thus according to Jerome of Stridon, who was present at this synod; cf. De viris illustribus, lib. 9, 18 (PL 23:655, 670). Later, in the version of the Decretum Gelasianum (see *350^o) attributed to Pope Hormisdas, in the repetition of the canon of Scriptures of the Decretum Damasi, one reads at this point: "three letters of the Apostle John" (Thl 932), as had been established by the Synod of Carthage in 397; cf. *186.

the Lord to disregard the statutes of the Apostolic See or the venerable definitions of the canons, nevertheless it will be very useful and, in view of your seniority in the priesthood, it could be a source of glory for Your Charity if what has been written to you in your particular name in general terms be brought, through your concern for unanimity, to the attention of all our brothers, so that what We have decided, in a salutary way, not in a rash manner, but cautiously, with the greatest prudence and deliberation, may remain inviolate and so that the path may be closed to all excuses in the future, (a path) that now cannot remain open to anyone among Us.

Baptism of Heretics

183 (c. 1 § 2) [Significasti] ... baptizatos ab impiis Arianis plurimos ad fidem catholicam festinare et quosdam de fratribus nostris eosdem denuo baptizare velle: quod non licet, cum hoc fieri et Apostolus vetet [cf. Eph 4:5; Hbr 6:4s?] et canones contradicant et post cassatum Ariminense Concilium missa ad provincias a ven. mem. praedecessore meo Liberio generalia decreta¹ prohibeant. Quos nos cum Novatianis aliisque haereticis, sicut est in synodo constitutum, per invocationem solam septiformis Spiritus episcopalis manus impositione catholicorum conventui sociamus, quod etiam totus Oriens Occidensque custodit; a quo tramite vos quoque posthac minime convenit deviare, si non vultis a nostro collegio synodali sententia separari.

(Chap. 1, § 2) [You have indicated] ... that many of those baptized by the impious Arians are hastening to the Catholic faith and that some among our brothers wish to baptize them again: this is not allowed, for the apostle forbids it to be done [cf. Eph 4:5; Heb 6:4f. (?)] and the canons oppose it, and the general decrees¹ sent to the provinces by my predecessor Liberius, of venerable memory, after the annulment of the synod of Rimini, likewise forbid it. We receive these (Arians) into the community of the Catholics, along with the Novatianists and the other heretics, in the manner decided in the synod: through the sole invocation of the sevenfold Spirit by the imposition of a bishop's hand, as is likewise observed throughout all of the East and the West. If you do not wish to be separated from our communion by means of a synodal decision, you also, from now on, must not deviate in the least from this practice.

Necessity of Baptism

184 (c. 2 § 3) Sicut sacram ergo paschalem reverentiam in nullo dicimus esse minuendam,¹ ita infantibus qui necdum loqui poterunt per aetatem vel his, quibus in qualibet necessitate opus fuerit sacri unda baptismatis, omni volumus celeritate succurri, ne ad nostrarum perniciem tendat animarum, si negato desiderantibus fonte salutari exiens unusquisque de saeculo et regnum perdat et vitam. Quicumque etiam discrimen naufragii, hostilitatis incursum, obsidionis ambiguum vel cuiuslibet corporalis aegritudinis desperationem inciderint, et sibi unico credulitatis auxilio poposcerint subveniri, eodem quo poscunt momento temporis expetitae regenerationis praemia consequantur. Hactenus erratum in hac parte sufficiat; nunc praefatam regulam omnes teneant sacerdotes, qui nolunt ab apostolicae petrae, super quam Christus universalem construxit Ecclesiam, soliditate divelli.

(Chap. 2, § 3) Just as We say, then, that the sacred reverence due to Easter is in no respect to be reduced,¹ so we wish that aid be brought with all swiftness to infants who, because of their age, are not yet able to speak as well as to those who require the water of sacred baptism in any necessity whatsoever, so that it may not redound to the loss of our soul if, after those who desired it are denied the font of salvation, one (of them), when he departs this world, loses both his life and the kingdom (of heaven). Let anyone, likewise, who is in danger of shipwreck, the attack of an enemy, the uncertainty of a siege, or the hopelessness of some bodily illness and who requests that help be provided him by the incomparable aid of the faith obtain the reward of a speedy rebirth at the very moment when he requests it. The error made in this respect up to this point should be enough; from now on, let all priests hold to the aforesaid rule if they do not wish to be torn from the firmness of the apostolic rock upon which Christ has built his whole Church.

*183 ¹ These decrees apparently no longer exist.

*184 ¹ This had been preceded by an exhortation to observe strictly the liturgical times fixed for baptism, namely, the day of Easter and that of Pentecost.

Clerical Celibacy

(c. 7 § 8) ... Plurimos enim sacerdotes Christi atque levitas, post longa consecrationis suae tempora, tam de coniugiis propriis quam etiam de turpi coitu sobolem didicimus procreasse et crimen suum hac praescriptione defendere, quia in Veteri Testamento sacerdotibus ac ministris generandi facultas legitur attributa.

[Contra hoc argumentum obiicit Romanus Pontifex:] (§ 9) Cur etiam procul a suis domibus, anno vicis suae, in templo habitare iussi sunt sacerdotes? Hac videlicet ratione, ne vel cum uxoribus possent carnale exercere commercium, ut conscientiae integritate fulgentes, acceptabile Deo munus offerent.

(§ 10) Unde et Dominus Iesus, cum nos suo illustrasset adventu, in Evangelio protestatur, quia Legem venerit implere, non solvere [Mt 5:17]. Et ideo Ecclesiae, cuius sponsus est, formam castitatis voluit splendore radiare, ut in die iudicii, cum rursus advenerit, “sine macula et ruga” [Eph 5:27] eam possit ... reperire. Quorum sanctionum omnes sacerdotes atque levitae insolubili lege constringimur, ut a die ordinationis nostrae sobrietati ac pudicitiae et corda nostra mancipemus et corpora, ut domino Deo nostro in his, quae quotidie offerimus, sacrificiis placeamus.¹

(Chap. 7, § 8) ... For We have learned that many priests of Christ and deacons, long after their consecrations, have begotten offspring either from their own marriages or from shameful unions, and they defend their offense under the pretext that one reads in the Old Testament that the authority to procreate was accorded to the priests and ministers. 185

[Against this argument the Roman pontiff objects:] (§ 9) Why was it also required that the priests live in the temple away from their homes during the year of their service? Evidently, so they could not have carnal intercourse with their wives, in order that they might render an offering acceptable to God, resplendent with purity of conscience.

{§ 10} Whence, the Lord Jesus, when he had enlightened us by his coming, also testifies in the Gospel that he came to fulfill the law, not to destroy it [Mt 5:17]. And so he wished the form of the Church, who is his spouse, to shine with the splendor of chastity, so that, on the Day of Judgment, when he comes again, he may be able ... to find her “without spot or wrinkle” [Eph 5:27]. By the indissoluble law of these rules we are all bound, priests and deacons, in order that, from the day of our ordination, we may hand over both our hearts and our bodies to temperance and chastity, so that we may be pleasing to the Lord our God in these sacrifices that we daily offer.¹

186: Third Synod of CARTHAGE, August 28, 397

Canon 47 of this synod offers a list of the canonical books. According to tradition, it corresponds, except for some minor differences, with can. 36 of the synod held on October 8, 393, at Hippo Regius. It is repeated almost unchanged in can. 24 (according to some, can. 29) of the Synod of Carthage of 419, which offers the following conclusion: “This certainly should be made known to our holy brother and fellow priest Boniface, the bishop of the city of Rome, and even to the other bishops of these regions, for confirmation of this canon, since we have received it handed down from the Fathers that it is thus to be read in the Church” (Hoc etiam fratri et consacerdoti nostro sancto Bonifatio, urbis Romae episcopo, vel aliis earum partium episcopis pro confirmando isto canone innotescat, quia a Patribus ita accepimus in ecclesia legendum: CpChL 149:142₂₆₆₋₆₈).

Ed.: Synod of Hippo of 393, can. 36 [text reproduced below]: C. Munier: CpChL 149 (1974): 43₁₉₄₋₂₀₄ / PL 56:428A-429A / MaC 3:924AB / EnchB nos. 16-20. —Synod of Carthage of 397 (August 28), can. 47: Bruns 1:133 / MaC 3:891AB / HaC 1:968A. —Synod of Carthage of 419, can. 24: PL 56:871; cf. 67:191AB / CpChL 149:142₂₅₆₋₆₅ / MaC 4:430AB.

Canon of Sacred Scripture

[Placuit,] ... ut praeter scripturas canonicas nihil in ecclesia legatur sub nomine divinarum Scripturarum. Sunt autem canonicae scripturae: Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numeri, Deuteronomium, Iesu[s] Nave, Iudicum, Ruth, Regnorum libri quatuor, Paralipomenon libri duo, Iob, Psalterium Davidicum, Salomonis libri quinque, duodecim libri Prophetarum, Esaias, Ieremias, Daniel, Ezechiel, Tobias, Iudith, Hester, Hesdrae libri duo, Machabaeorum libri duo.

[It has been decided] ... that, in the Church, nothing should be read except the canonical writings under the name of the “divine Scriptures”. These canonical writings are: Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy, Joshua, Judges, Ruth, the four books of Kings (= two of Samuel, two of Kings), the two books of Chronicles, Job, the Davidic Psalter, the five books of Solomon, the twelve books of the prophets, Isaiah, Jeremiah, Daniel, Ezekiel, Tobit, Judith, Esther, two books of Esdras (= one of Ezra, one of Nehemiah), two books of Maccabees. 186

*185 ¹ The law of celibacy was not decreed for the first time in this document; rather, the document assumes that it has already been in force for some time in various parts of the Western Church; cf. the Synod of Elvira, *118f.

Novi autem Testamenti: Evangeliorum libri quatuor, Actus Apostolorum liber unus, Pauli Apostoli epistolae tredecim, eiusdem ad Hebraeos una, Petri duae, Ioannis tres [cf. *180], Iacobi una, Iudae una, Apocalypsis Ioannis.

[Additur in quodam cod.:] . . . ut de confirmando isto canone transmarina Ecclesia consulatur.

⟨The canonical writings⟩ of the New Testament, furthermore ⟨are⟩: the four books of the Gospels, one book of the Acts of the Apostles, the thirteen Epistles of Paul the apostle, one of the same to the Hebrews, two of Peter, three of John [cf. *180], one of James, one of Jude, and the Revelation of John.

[In one codex, it is added:] . . . that the Church beyond the sea should be consulted for the confirmation of this canon.

ANASTASIUS I: November 27, 399–402 (December 19, 401?)

187–208: First Synod of TOLEDO, September 400 (405?)

There is disagreement about the year of this synod as well as about the origin of the so-called Symbolum Toletanum I, an anti-Priscillianist profession attached to the synodal acts. According to José A. de Aldama, there are two forms: a shorter one that must be attributed to the Synod of Toledo of 400 and a longer version approved at the Synod of Toledo of 447 [the later form is within brackets]. The later form could be the Libellus in modum symboli, thought to be lost, of Bishop Pastor of Palencia. Instead of the Synod of Toledo of 447, C. García Goldáraz (CdLuc, n. to 434_g) places a Concilium Celinense held in Galicia in 447 at the request of Leo I the Great (letter to Turribius of Astorga; cf. *283–286). This hypothesis is no longer mentioned by D. Ramos-Lisson and J. Orlandis, Die Synoden auf der iberischen Halbinsel bis zum Einbruch des Islam (711), Konziliengeschichte, ed. by W. Brandmüller, series A, vol. 2 (Paderborn, 1981), 39–51.

Ed.: The 20 Canons: Bruns 1:206f. / MaC 3:1002AB / HaC 1:992 / CVis 24f. / PL 84:332B / CdLuc 430. — Creed: J. A. de Aldama, El símbolo Toledano I, Analecta Gregoriana 7 (Rome, 1934), 30–37 / KüA 43_{1–45}₂₆ / KüBS 8–9, 31–33 / Hn § 168 / MaC 3:1003AB / HaC 1:993A / PL 84:333f. / C. W. Barlow, Martini episcopi Bracarenensis opera omnia (New Haven, 1950), 288–90 / CdLuc 431–34; cf. 939f.

a. Chapters

Consecration of Chrism

187 Can. 20. (1) Quamvis paene ubique custodiatur, ut absque episcopo chrisma nemo conficiat, tamen quia in aliquibus locis vel provinciis presbyteri dicuntur chrisma conficere, placuit, ex hac die nullum alium nisi episcopum chrisma conficere et per dioeceses destinare, ita ut de singulis ecclesiis ad episcopum ante diem Paschae diaconi destinentur aut subdiaconi, ut confectum chrisma ab episcopo destinatum ad diem Paschae possit occurrere. (2) Episcopum sane certum est omni tempore licere chrisma conficere, sine conscientia autem episcopi nihil penitus faciendum; statutum vero est diaconum non chrismare, sed presbyterum absente episcopo, praesente vero, si ab ipso fuerit praeceptum.

Can. 20. (1) Although the custom is maintained almost everywhere that no one confects the chrism apart from the bishop, nevertheless, because in certain places or provinces priests are said to be confecting the chrism, it has been decided that from this day forward no other person but the bishop is to confect the chrism and distribute it to the dioceses, in such a way that deacons or subdeacons be sent to the bishop before Easter day from the individual churches, so that the chrism confected and distributed by the bishop can be available on Easter day. (2) It is quite certain that it is permissible for a bishop to confect the chrism at any time, but nothing at all is to be done without the knowledge of the bishop; it has been decided, however, that a deacon is not to chrismate, but a priest may do so in the absence of the bishop, or in his presence if he has been so directed by him.

b. Symbolum Toletanum I (400) and Its Longer Form, Called Libellus in modum symboli, of Bishop Pastor of Palencia (447)

Profession of Faith in Opposition to the Priscillianists

188 Credimus in unum verum Deum, Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum, visibilium et invisibilium factorem, per quem creata sunt omnia in caelo et in terra. Hunc unum Deum et hanc unam esse divini nominis [divinae substantiae] Trinitatem. Patrem [autem] non esse ipsum

We believe in one true God, the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, maker of things visible and invisible, by whom all things in heaven and on earth were created. This is the one God, and this is the one Trinity of divine name [of divine substance]. The Father [however] is not Filium, sed habere Filium qui Pater non sit. Filium non esse Patrem, sed Filium Dei [de Patris] esse natura. Spiritum quoque Paracletum [Paraclitum] esse, qui nec Pater sit ipse, nec Filius, sed a Patre [Filioque] procedat [procedens]. Est ergo ingenitus Pater, genitus Filius, non genitus Paracletus, sed a Patre [Filioque] procedens. Pater est, cuius vox haec est audita de caelis: Hic est Filius meus dilectus, in quo bene complacui; hunc [ipsum] audite [Mt 17:5; 2 Pt 1:17; cf. Mt 3:17]. Filius est, qui ait: Ego a Patre exivi, et a Deo veni in hunc mundum [cf. Io 16:28]. Paracletus ipse [Paraclitus Spiritus] est, de quo Filius ait: Nisi abiero [ego] ad Patrem, Paracletus non veniet ad vos [Io 16:7]. Hanc Trinitatem personis distinctam, substantiam unam [unitam], virtutem, potestatem, maiestatem [virtute et potestate et maiestate] indivisibilem, indifferentem; praeter illam [hanc] nullam [credimus] divinam esse naturam, vel angeli vel spiritus vel virtutis alicuius, quae Deus esse credatur.

Hunc igitur [ergo] Filium Dei, Deum, natum a Patre ante omne omnino principium, sanctificasse in utero beatae Mariae virginis [uterum Mariae vg.], atque ex ea verum hominem, sine virii [virili] generatum semine, suscepisse; [duabus dumtaxat naturis, id est deitatis et carnis, in unam convenientibus omnino personam] id est Dominum [nostrum] Iesum Christum. Non [Nec] imaginarium corpus aut forma sola compositum [phantasmatis alicuius in eo fuisse], sed solidum [atque verum]: Atque [-!] hunc et esurisse et sitiisse et doluisse et flevisse et omnia corporis exitia sensisse [omnes corporis iniurias pertulisse]. Postremo [a Iudaeis] crucifixum, mortuum [-!] et sepultum, [et] tertia die resurrexisset; conversatum postmodum cum discipulis [suis], quadragesima [post resurrectionem] die ad caelos [caelum] ascendisse. Hunc filium hominis etiam “Dei Filium” appellari [dici]; Filium autem Dei “Deum”, “filium hominis” non vocari [Filius autem Dei Deum hominis filium appellari].

Resurrectionem vero [futuram] humanae credimus carnis [carni]. Animam autem hominis non divinam esse substantiam aut Dei partem, sed creaturam [dicimus] divina voluntate non prolapsam [?] [creatam].

1. Si quis ergo [autem] dixerit atque [aut] crediderit, a Deo omnipotente mundum hunc factum non fuisse atque eius omnia instrumenta, anathema sit.

2. Si quis dixerit atque [vel] crediderit, Deum Patrem eundem Filium esse [esse Filium] vel Paracletum, anathema sit.

the Son himself but has a Son who is not the Father. The Son is not the Father, but he is Son of God by [the] nature [of the Father]. And the Spirit is the Paraclete [Paraclite], who is neither the Father himself nor the Son, but proceeds [is proceeding] from the Father [and the Son]. Therefore the Father is unbegotten, the Son is begotten, the Paraclete is not begotten but is proceeding from the Father [and the Son]. It is the Father whose voice is heard from heaven: This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; listen to this one [him] [Mt 17:5; 2 Pet 1:17; cf. Mt 3:17]. It is the Son who says: I have come forth from the Father, and I have come from God into this world [cf. Jn 16:28]. It is the Paraclete himself [the Paraclete Spirit] about whom the Son says: Unless [I] go to the Father, the Paraclete will not come to you [Jn 16:7]. This Trinity, distinct in Persons, is one indivisible and undifferentiated substance, [a united substance, indivisible and undifferentiated in its] strength, power, and majesty; [we believe that] apart from it [this] there is no nature that is divine, whether of an angel or of a spirit or of any other power, which may be believed to be God.

Consequently [Therefore], this Son of God, who 189 as God was born of the Father before every beginning whatsoever, was sanctified in the womb of [Blessed] Mary the Virgin, and he assumed from her a true human being, begotten without the seed of a man [male seed]; [in two natures, that is, of the Godhead and of the flesh, entirely combined in one Person] that is, [our] Lord Jesus Christ. It was not [And it was not] a body of mere appearance or one composed of form alone [of some phantasm], but a solid [and true] one. And [-!] he experienced hunger and thirst and pain and tears and felt all injuries to the body [endured all the hardships of the body]. Last of all, he was crucified [by the Jews], died, [-!] and was buried, [and] rose again on the third day; having spent some time with [his] disciples, on the fortieth day [after the Resurrection] he ascended into the heavens [heaven]. This Son of Man is also called [said to be] “the Son of God”; however, the Son of God is called “God”, not “the Son of Man” [however, God the Son of God is called the Son of Man].

But we believe in the [future] resurrection of the [for] 190 the human flesh. Moreover, the human soul is not a divine substance or part of God, but a creature not fallen from the divine will [we call it a creature created by the divine will].

1. If anyone, then [however], says and [or] believes 191 that this world and all its array was not made by almighty God, let him be anathema.

2. If anyone says and [or] believes that God the 192 Father is the same as the Son or the Paraclete, let him be anathema.

- 193 3. Si quis ... crediderit, Deum [Dei] Filium eundem esse Patrem vel Paracletum, anathema sit. 3. If anyone ... believes that God the Son [the Son of God] is the same as the Father or the Paraclete, let him be anathema.
- 194 4. Si quis ... crediderit, Paracletum Spiritum [-!] vel Patrem esse vel Filium, anathema sit. 4. If anyone ... believes that the Paraclete Spirit [-!] is either the Father or the Son, let him be anathema.
- 195 5. Si quis ... crediderit, hominem Iesum Christum a Filio Dei assumptum non fuisse [carnem tantum sine anima a Filio Dei fuisse susceptam], anathema sit. 5. If anyone ... believes that Jesus Christ as man was not assumed by the Son of God [only the flesh was assumed by the Son of God without a soul], let him be anathema.
- 196 6. Si quis ... crediderit, Filium Dei Deum passum [Christum innascibilem esse], anathema sit. 6. If anyone ... believes that the Son of God suffered as God [Christ was incapable of being born], let him be anathema.
- 197 7. Si quis ... crediderit, hominem Iesum Christum hominem impassibilem fuisse [deitatem Christi convertibilem fuisse vel passibilem], anathema sit. 7. If anyone ... believes that the man Jesus Christ was a man incapable of suffering [the divinity of Christ was capable of change or of suffering], let him be anathema.
- 198 8. Si quis ... crediderit, alterum Deum esse priscae Legis, alterum Evangeliorum, anathema sit. 8. If anyone ... believes that there is one God of the Old Law, another one of the Gospels, let him be anathema.
- 199 9. Si quis ... crediderit, ab altero Deo mundum fuisse factum quam [factum fuisse et non] ab eo, de quo scriptum est: In principio fecit Deus caelum et terram [cf. Gn 1:1], anathema sit. 9. If anyone ... believes that the world was made by another God rather than [and not] by the One of whom it is written: In the beginning God made heaven and earth [cf. Gen. 1:1], let him be anathema.
- 200 10. Si quis ... crediderit, corpora humana non resurrectura [resurgere] post mortem, anathema sit. 10. If anyone ... believes that the human bodies are not going to rise after death, let him be anathema.
- 201 11. Si quis ... crediderit, animam humanam Dei portionem vel Dei esse substantiam, anathema sit. 11. If anyone ... believes that the human soul is a segment of God or is of the substance of God, let him be anathema.
- 202 12. Si quis aliquas scripturas, praeter quas catholica Ecclesia recepit, vel in auctoritate habendas esse crediderit vel fuerit veneratus [Si quis ... crediderit, alias scripturas, praeter quas Ecclesia catholica recipit, in auctoritate habendas vel esse venerandas], anathema sit. 12. If anyone either believes that other scriptures, apart from the ones that the Catholic Church has received, should be regarded as authoritative or has venerated <them> [If anyone ... believes that other scriptures, apart from the ones that the Catholic Church accepts, should also be regarded as authoritative or should be venerated], let him be anathema.
- 203 [13. Si quis ... crediderit, deitatis et carnis unam in Christo esse naturam, anathema sit.] [13. If anyone ... believes that in Christ the deity and the flesh are a single nature, let him be anathema.]
- 204 [14. Si quis ... crediderit, esse aliquid, quod se extra divinam Trinitatem possit extendere, anathema sit.] [14. If anyone ... believes that there is anything that can extend beyond the divine Trinity, let him be anathema.]
- 205 [15. Si quis astrologiae vel mathesiae [sic!] aestimat esse credendum, anathema sit.] [*Cf. 460] [15. If anyone judges that credence should be given to astrology or mathematics [sic], let him be anathema.] [*Cf. 460.]
- 206 [16. Si quis ... crediderit, coniugia hominum, quae secundum legem divinam licita habentur, execrabilia esse, anathema sit.] [16. If anyone ... believes that human marriages that are regarded as permissible according to divine law are blameworthy, let him be anathema.]
- 207 [17. Si quis ... crediderit, carnes avium seu pecudum, quae ad escam datae sunt, non tantum pro castigatione corporum abstinendas, sed execrandas esse, anathema sit.] [17. If anyone ... believes that the meat of birds or beasts, which has been provided as food, should not be subject to abstinence merely for the mortification of the body but is abominable, let him be anathema.]

[18. Si quis in his erroribus Priscilliani sectam sequitur vel profitetur, ut aliud in salutari baptismi contra sedem sancti Petri faciat, anathema sit.]

[18. If anyone follows the sect of Priscillian in these errors or professes (them) so that he does something different in the salvific rite of baptism, contrary to the See of St. Peter, let him be anathema.] 208

209: Letter Dat mihi to Bishop Venerius of Milan, ca. 401

This was written in late 400 or in 401 primarily in opposition to a resurgence of Origenism.

Ed.: J. van den Gheyn, in RHLRel 4 (1899): 5f. / J. Pitra, Analecta novissima Spicilegii Solesmensis 1 (Paris, 1885), 463f. (cf. 20ff.). —Reg.: JR 281, with additions; CIPL 1639.

Question of the Orthodoxy of Pope Liberius

Dat mihi plurimum laetitiae illud Christi amore factum, quo divinitatis studio et alacritate succensa, integram fidem Apostolis traditam locatamque a maioribus toto orbe victrix retinebat Italia, hoc quippe sub tempore, quo divae memoriae Constantius orbem victor obtinuit, nec potuit sordes suas immittere aliqua subreptione haeretica factio Ariana, Deo nostro, ut credimus, providente, ne illa sancta fides et impolluta in aliquo vitio blasphemiae maledicorum hominum contaminaretur, haec scilicet, quae a sanctis viris et in requie sanctorum iam collocatis episcopis tractata fuerat vel definita in Synodi conventu Nicaenae. Pro qua exilium libenter tulerunt, qui sancti tunc episcopi sunt probati, hoc est Dionysius inde Dei servus, divina instructione compositus, vel eius secuti exemplum sanctae recordationis, Ecclesiae Romanae Liberius episcopus, Eusebius quoque a Vercellis, Hilarius de Gallis, ut de plerisque taceam, quorum potuerit arbitrio residere cruci potius affigi, quam Deum Christum, quod Ariana cogebat haeresis, blasphemarent, aut Filium Dei Deum Christum dicerent creaturam Domini.

Very great joy is given me by what took place for the love of Christ, namely, that Italy, victorious in all the world, inflamed by divine zeal and ardor, retained intact that faith which was handed down by the apostles and established by (our) ancestors (and this indeed at the time when Constantius of divine memory reigned as victor over the world); and that the Arian faction was not able to insinuate its defilements by any heretical deception, because our God, as we believe, made sure that this holy and immaculate faith was not contaminated by any blasphemous error of slanderous men—that (faith) which had been discussed and defined at the council assembled at Nicaea by holy men and bishops, who already abide in the repose of the saints. On behalf of this (faith), those who proved themselves then to be holy bishops willingly accepted exile: namely, Dionysius—for this reason a servant of God, disposed by divine instruction—or those of holy memory who followed his example: Liberius, bishop of the Roman Church; and also Eusebius of Vercelli, Hilary of Gaul, not to mention the great many who could choose to be fixed on a cross rather than blaspheme God, the Christ, as demanded by the Arian heresy, or call the Son of God, God, the Christ, a creature of the Lord. 209

[There follows the reprobation of the books of Origen of Alexandria translated into Latin by Rufinus: cf. *353.]

INNOCENT I: December 21 (22?), 402 (401?)–March 12, 417

211: Letter Etsi tibi to Bishop Victricius of Rouen, February 15, 404

The “imposition of the hand” is usually understood as “imposition of the hand for penance”. However, J. Macdonald interprets it as a repetition of confirmation for those who were born into heresy: Studia Patristica 2, TU 64 (Berlin, 1957), 49–53.

Ed.: CouE 752A / PL 20:475B / MaC 3:1034D. —Reg.: JR 286, with additions.

Baptism of Heretics

(c. 8 § 11) [Expedit custodire] . . . ut venientes a Novatianis vel Montensibus per manus tantum impositionem suscipiantur, quia quamvis ab haereticis, tamen in Christi nomine sunt baptizati.

(Chap. 8, § 11) [It is good to observe] . . . that those who come from the Novatianists or the Montanists should be received by the imposition of the hand only, because although they were baptized by heretics, nevertheless they were baptized in the name of Christ. 211

212–213: Letter Consulenti tibi to Bishop Exsuperius of Toulouse, February 20, 405

Ed. [*212; 213]: H. Wurm, in Apoll 12 (1939): 65–67; 74–78 / PL 20:498B–499A; 501A–502A (= letter 6) / MaC 3:1039C–1041A; 1040E–1041A. —[only *213]: C. H. Turner, in JThSt 13 (1912): 80–82 / EnchB nos. 21f. —Reg.: JR 293, with additions.

Reconciliation at the Point of Death

212 (c. 2) . . . Quaesitum est, quid de his observari oporteat, qui post baptismum omni tempore incontinentiae voluptatibus dediti, in extremo fine vitae suae paenitentiam simul et reconciliationem communionis exposcunt.

De his observatio prior durior, posterior interveniente misericordia inclinatio est. Nam consuetudo prior tenuit, ut concederetur eis paenitentia, sed communio negaretur. Nam cum illis temporibus crebrae persecutiones essent, ne communionis concessa facilitas homines de reconciliatione securos non revocaret a lapsu, merito negata communio est, concessa paenitentia, ne totum penitus negaretur: et durio remissionem fecit temporis ratio. Sed postquam Dominus noster pacem Ecclesiae suis reddidit, iam terrore depulso communionem dari abeuntibus placuit, et propter Domini misericordiam quasi viaticum profecturis, et ne Novatiani haeretici negantis veniam asperitatem et duritiam sequi videamur. Tribuitur ergo cum paenitentia extrema communio: ut homines huiusmodi vel in supremis suis, permittente Salvatore nostro, a perpetuo exitio vindicentur [cf. *2638].

(Chap. 2) . . . It has been asked what must be observed with regard to those who after baptism have surrendered on every occasion to the pleasures of incontinence and at the very end of their lives ask for penance and at the same time the reconciliation of communion.

Concerning them the former rule was harder, the later more favorable, because mercy intervened. For the previous custom held that penance should be granted but that communion should be denied. For since in those times there were frequent persecutions, so that the ease with which communion was granted might not recall men become careless of reconciliation from their lapse, communion was justly denied, penance allowed, lest the whole be entirely refused; and the system of the time made remission more difficult. But after our Lord restored peace to his churches, when terror had now been removed, it was decided that communion be given to the departing, and on account of the mercy of God, as a viaticum to those about to set forth and that we may not seem to follow the harshness and the rigor of the Novatianist heretic who refused mercy. Therefore with penance a last communion will be given, so that such men in their extremities may be freed from eternal ruin with the permission of our Savior [cf. *2638].

The Canon of Sacred Scripture and the Apocryphal Books

213 (c. 7) Qui vero libri recipiantur in canone, brevis adnexus ostendit. Haec sunt, quae desiderata moneri voce voluisti:

Moyse libri V, id est Genesis Exodi Levitici Numeri Deuteronomii, et Hiesu Nave I, Iudicum I, Regnorum libri IV, simul et Ruth, Prophetarum libri XVI, Solomonis libri V, Psalterium.

Item historiarum: Iob liber I, Tobiae I, Hester I, Iudith I, Machabeorum II, Hesdrae II, Paralypomenon II.

Item Novi Testamenti: Evangeliorum IV, Apostoli Pauli epistulae XIII [XIV], epistulae Iohannis III, epistulae Petri II, [epistula Iudae I], epistula Iacobi I, Actus Apostolorum, Apocalypsis Iohannis.

Cetera autem, quae vel sub nomine Mathiae sive Iacobi minoris, vel sub nomine Petri et Iohannis, quae a quodam Leucio scripta sunt, [vel sub nomine Andreae, quae a Xenocaride et Leonida philosophis,] vel sub nomine Thomae, et si qua sunt alia, non solum repudianda, verum etiam noveris esse damnanda.

(Chap. 7) A brief addition shows what books really are received in the canon. These are the desiderata of which you wished to be informed verbally:

Of Moses five books, that is, of Genesis, of Exodus, of Leviticus, of Numbers, of Deuteronomy, and of Joshua one book, of Judges one book, of Kings four books (= two books of Samuel, two books of Kings), and also Ruth, of the prophets sixteen books, of Solomon five books, the Psalms.

Likewise of the histories: Job one book, of Tobit one book, Esther one, Judith one, of the Maccabees two, of Esdras two (= Ezra one, Nehemiah one), of Chronicles two books.

Likewise of the New Testament: of the Gospels four books, of Paul the apostle thirteen [fourteen] Epistles, of John three Epistles, of Peter two, [an Epistle of Jude], an Epistle of James, the Acts of the Apostles, the Apocalypse of John.

Others, however, which were written by a certain Leucius under the name of Matthias or of James the Less, or under the name of Peter and John [or which were written by Xenocharides and Leonidas the philosophers under the name of Andrew], or under the name of Thomas, and if there are any others, you know that they ought not only to be repudiated but also condemned.

214: Letter Magna me gratulatio to Rufus and the Other Bishops of Macedonia, December 13, 414

Ed.: CouE 836BC / PL 20:533B (= letter 17) / MaC 3:1061E. —Reg.: JR 303.

Baptismal Form

[Here it is explained why, according to canons 8 and 19 of Nicaea (*127f.), baptism is required for the Paulianists who enter the Church but not for the Novatianists:]

(c. 5 § 10) Quod idcirco distinctum esse ipsis duabus haeresibus, ratio manifesta declarat, quia Paulianistae in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti minime baptizant, et Novatiani iisdem nominibus tremendis venerandisque baptizant, nec apud istos de unitate potestatis divinae, hoc est Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti, quaestio aliquando commota est.

(Chap. 5, § 10) What therefore is distinct in the two heresies themselves, clear reason declares, because the Paulianists do not at all baptize in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, and the Novatianists do baptize in the same tremendous and venerable names, and among them the question has not ever been raised concerning the unity of the divine power, that is of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit. 214

215–216: Letter Si instituta ecclesiastica to Bishop Decentius of Gubbio, March 19, 416

Ed.: PL 20:554B–555A, 559B–561A (letter 25) / CouE 858A–859A, 862B–864A / MaC 3:1029BC, 1030E / Gratian, Decretum, p. III, dist. 4, c. 119 (Frdb 1:1398). —Reg.: JR 311, with additions.

Minister of Confirmation

(c. 3 § 6) De consignandis vero infantibus manifestum est, non ab alio quam ab episcopo fieri licere. Nam presbyteri, licet secundi sint sacerdotes, pontificatus tamen apicem non habent. Hoc autem pontificium solis deberi episcopis, ut vel consignent, vel Paracletum Spiritum tradant, non solum consuetudo ecclesiastica demonstrat, verum et illa lectio Actuum Apostolorum, quae asserit Petrum et Ioannem esse directos, qui iam baptizatis traderent Spiritum Sanctum [cf. Act 8:14–17]. Nam presbyteris, sive extra episcopum, sive praesente episcopo cum baptizant, chrismate baptizatos ungere licet, sed quod ab episcopo fuerit consecratum; non tamen frontem ex eodem oleo signare, quod solis debetur episcopis, cum tradunt Spiritum Paracletum. Verba vero dicere non possum, ne magis prodere videar, quam ad consultationem respondere.

(Chap. 3, § 6) But in regard to the signing of little children, it is evident that it may not be done by any other than a bishop. For the presbyters, although they are in the second order, nevertheless do not possess the crown of the pontificate. That this power of a bishop, however, is due to the bishops alone, so that they either sign or give the Paraclete the Spirit, not only ecclesiastical custom indicates, but also that reading in the Acts of the Apostles which declares that Peter and John were directed to give the Holy Spirit to those already baptized [cf. Acts 8:14–17]. For to presbyters it is permitted to anoint the baptized with chrism whenever they baptize, whether without a bishop or in the presence of a bishop, but (with chrism) that has been consecrated by a bishop; nevertheless (it is) not (allowed) to sign the forehead with the same oil; that is due to the bishops alone when they bestow the Spirit, the Paraclete. Indeed, I cannot say the words lest I seem to go farther than to reply to the inquiry. 215

Anointing of the Sick

(c. 8 § 11) Sane quoniam de hoc sicut de ceteris consulere voluit dilectio tua, adiecit etiam filius meus Caelestinus diaconus in epistola sua, esse a tua dilectione positum illud, quod in beati Apostoli Iacobi epistola conscriptum est: “Si infirmus aliquis in vobis est, vocet presbyteros, et orent super eum, ungentes eum oleo in nomine Domini: et oratio fidei salvabit laborantem, et suscitabit illum Dominus, et si peccatum fecit, remittet ei” [Iac 5:14s]. Quod non est dubium de fidelibus aegrotantibus accipi vel intelligi debere, qui sancto oleo chrismatis perungi possunt, quod ab episcopo confectum,

(Chap. 8, § 11) Truly since Your Charity has wished to take counsel regarding this: just as concerning other (matters), my son Celestine, the deacon, has also added in his letter that what was written in the Epistle of the blessed apostle James has been proposed by Your Charity: “If anyone among you is sick, let him call the priests, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord: and the prayer of faith shall save the sufferer, and the Lord shall raise him up, and if he has committed sin, he shall pardon him” [Jas 5:14f.]. There is no doubt that this anointing ought to be interpreted or 216 non solum sacerdotibus, sed et omnibus uti Christianis licet in sua aut in suorum necessitate ungendum.

Ceterum illud superfluum esse videmus adiectum, ut de episcopo ambigatur quod presbyteris licere non dubium est. Nam idcirco presbyteris dictum est, quia episcopi occupationibus aliis impediti ad omnes languidos ire non possunt. Ceterum si episcopus aut potest aut dignum ducit aliquem a se visitandum, et benedicere et tangere chrismate sine cunctatione potest, cuius est chrisma conficere. Nam paenitentibus istud infundi non potest, quia genus est sacramenti. Nam quibus reliqua sacramenta negantur, quomodo unum genus putatur posse concedi?

understood of the sick faithful, who can be anointed with the holy oil of chrism, which, prepared by a bishop, is permitted not only to priests, but also to all as Christians for anointing in their own necessity or in the necessity of their (people).

Moreover, We see that addition to be superfluous; that what is undoubtedly permitted the presbyters is questioned regarding bishops. For, on this account it was said to priests, because the bishops being hindered by other business cannot go to all the sick. But if a bishop, to whom it belongs to prepare the chrism, is able (to do it) or thinks someone is worthy to be visited by him, he can both bless and anoint with the chrism without delay. For, that cannot be administered to penitents, because it is a kind of sacrament. For, how is it supposed that one species (of sacrament) can be granted to those to whom the rest of the sacraments are denied?

217: Letter In requirendis to the Bishops of the Synod of Carthage, January 27, 417

Ed.: A. Goldbacher: CSEL 44:701–3 (in Augustine, letter 181) / PL 20:582C–583B (= Innocent, letter 29); 33:780 (in Augustine, letter 181). —Reg.: JR 321.

Primacy of the Roman See

217 (c. 1) In requirendis Dei rebus ... antiquae traditionis exempla servantes ... nostrae religionis vigorem non minus nunc in consulendo quam antea, cum pronuntiaretis, vera ratione firmastis, qui ad Nostrum referendum adprobastis esse iudicium, scientes, quid Apostolicae Sedi, cum omnes hoc loco positi ipsum sequi desideremus Apostolum, debeatur, a quo ipse episcopatus et tota auctoritas nominis huius emerit. Quem sequentes tam mala iam damnare novimus quam probare laudanda, velut id vero, quod Patrum instituta sacerdotali custodientes officio non censetis esse calcanda, quod illi non humana sed divina decrevere sententia, ut quicquid quamvis de disiunctis remotisque provinciis ageretur, non prius ducerent finiendum, nisi ad huius Sedis notitiam perveniret, ut tota huius auctoritate, iusta quae fuerit pronuntiatio, firmaretur, indeque sumerent ceterae Ecclesiae, velut de natali suo fonte aquae cunctae procederent et per diversas totius mundi regiones puri capitis incorruptae manarent, quid praecipere, quos abluere, quos velut caeno inmundabilis sordidatos mundis digna corporibus unda vitaret.

(Chap. 1) In seeking the things of God ..., preserving the examples of ancient tradition ..., you have strengthened the vigor of your religion ... with true reason, for you have confirmed that reference must be made to Our judgment, realizing what is due the Apostolic See, since all of Us placed in this position desire to follow the apostle, from whom the episcopate itself and all the authority of this name have emerged. Following him We know how to condemn evils just as (well as how) to approve praiseworthy things. Take this as an example, guarding with your sacerdotal office the practices of the Fathers, you resolve that (they) must not be trampled upon, because they made their decisions, not by human, but by divine judgment, so that they thought that nothing whatever, although it concerned separated and remote provinces, should be concluded unless it first came to the attention of this See, so that what was a just proclamation might be confirmed by the total authority of this See, and from this source (just as all waters proceed from their original font and through diverse regions of the whole world remain pure liquids of an uncorrupted source), the other Churches might assume what (they ought) to teach, whom they ought to wash, those whom the water worthy of clean bodies would shun as though defiled with filth incapable of being cleansed.

218–219: Letter Inter ceteras Ecclesiae Romanae to Silvanus and the Other Fathers of the Synod of Milevum, January 27, 417

Ed.: In Augustine, letter 182; A. Goldbacher: CSEL 44:716f., 720 / PL 33:784f.: 20:590AB (in Innocent, letter 30); 56:468, 470 (= Codex canonum ecclesiasticorum). —Reg.: JR 322.

Primacy of the Roman See

(c. 2) Diligenter ergo et congrue apostolici consulitis honoris arcana, honoris, inquam, illius, quem “praeter illa, quae sunt extrinsecus, sollicitudo” manet “omnium Ecclesiarum” [2 Cor 11:28] super anxiiis rebus quae sit tenenda sententia, antiquae scilicet regulae formam secuti, quam toto semper ab orbe mecum nostis servatam. . . . Quid id etiam actione firmastis nisi scientes, quod per omnes provincias de apostolico fonte petentibus responsa semper emanent? Praesertim quotiens fidei ratio ventilatur, arbitror omnes fratres et coepiscopos nostros nonnisi ad Petrum, id est sui nominis et honoris auctorem referre debere, velut nunc rettulit vestra dilectio, quod per totum mundum possit Ecclesiis omnibus in commune prodesse. Fiant enim necesse est cautiores, cum inventores malorum ad duplicis relationem synodi sententiae nostrae statutis viderint ab ecclesiastica communione seiunctos.

(Chap. 2) Therefore it is with diligence and good order that you are consulting the resources of the apostolic office—that office, I say, which retains, “apart from other things, anxiety for all the churches” [2 Cor 11:28], asking what opinion should be held in regard to points of controversy; you have, of course, followed the practice of the ancient norm that you know has always been observed by all the world with me. . . . Why have you, too, affirmed this by your action if not because you knew that replies always go forth from the apostolic font through all the provinces to those who request it? In particular, whenever the norm of the faith is under discussion, I judge that all our brothers and fellow bishops ought to have recourse to Peter, that is, to the bearer of his name and office, just as now Your Charity has referred a matter that could be of benefit to all the Churches in common throughout the whole world. For they must become more cautious when they see that the originators of the evil, according to the report of the double synod, have been severed from the communion of the Church by the provisions of our judgment. 218

Necessity of Baptism

(c. 5) . . . parvulos aeternae vitae praemiis etiam sine baptismatis gratia posse donari, perfatuum est. Nisi enim manducaverint carnem Filii hominis et biberint sanguinem eius, non habebunt vitam in semet ipsis [cf. Io 6:53s]. Qui autem hanc eis sine regeneratione defendunt, videntur mihi ipsum baptismum velle cassare, cum praedicant hos habere, quod in eos creditur non nisi baptismate conferendum. Si ergo nihil volunt officere non renasci, fateantur necesse est nec regenerationis sacra fluenta prodesse. Verum, ut superfluum hominum prava doctrina celeri veritatis possit ratione discingi, proclamat hoc Dominus in Evangelio dicens: Sinite infantes et nolite eos prohibere venire ad me: talium est enim regnum caelorum [cf. Mt 19:14; Mc 10:14; Lc 18:16].

(Chap. 5) . . . It is quite foolish (to imagine) that little children can be given the rewards of eternal life even without the grace of baptism. For unless they have eaten the flesh of the Son of Man and drunk his blood, they shall not have life in them [cf. Jn 6:53f.]. Moreover, those who claim this (i.e., eternal life) for them without their being born again seem to me to wish to make baptism itself null and void, since they proclaim that these (children) have that which, it is believed, cannot be conferred upon them except by baptism. If, therefore, they wish (to maintain) that not being born again is not of any consequence, it is necessary that they also profess that the sacred cleansing of rebirth does no good. But, so that the perverse teaching of frivolous men may be able to be thwarted by a swift account of the truth, the Lord proclaims this in the Gospel, saying: “Permit the children to come to me, and do not prevent them; for of such is the kingdom of heaven” [cf. Mt 19:14; Mk 10:14; Lk 18:16]. 219

ZOSIMUS: March 18, 417–December 26, 418

221: Letter Quamvis Patrum to the Synod of Carthage, March 21, 418

Ed.: O. Guenther: CSEL 35:115f. (= Collectio Avellana, letter 50) / PL 20:676A–677A (= Zosimus, letter 12) / MaC 4:366D–367A. —Reg.: JR 342.

Doctrinal Authority of the Bishop of Rome

(n. 1) Quamvis Patrum traditio Apostolicae Sedi auctoritatem tantam tribuerit, ut de eius iudicio disceptare nullus auderet, idque per canones semper regulasque

(No. 1) Although the tradition of the Fathers attributed so much authority to the Apostolic See that no one dared to challenge its judgment and has always preserved it 221

servaverit et currens adhuc suis legibus ecclesiastica disciplina Petri nomini, a quo ipsa quoque descendit, reverentiam quam debet exsolvat: ... (3) cum ergo tantae auctoritatis Petrus caput sit et sequentia omnium maiorum statuta firmaverint, ut tam humanis quam divinis legibus disciplinisque omnibus firmetur Romana Ecclesia, cuius locum Nos regere, ipsius quoque potestatem nominis obtinere non latet vos, sed nostis, fratres carissimi, et, quemadmodum sacerdotes, scire debetis: (4) tamen cum Nobis tantum esset auctoritatis, ut nullus de Nostra possit retractare sententia, nihil egimus, quod non ad vestram notitiam Nostris ultro litteris referremus, dantes hoc fraternitati et in commune consulentes, non quia quid deberet fieri nesciremus aut faceremus aliquid, quod contra utilitatem Ecclesiae veniens displiceret, sed pariter vobiscum volumus habere tractatum de illo [Caelestio accusato].

through canons and regulations and (although) current ecclesiastical discipline still displays by its laws the reverence it should to the name of Peter, from whom it itself also descends: ... (3) Although, therefore, Peter is the source of such great authority and the subsequent decisions of all the forefathers have confirmed it, that the Roman Church might be strengthened by all the laws and customs, both human and divine—you are not unaware, rather, you have learned, my very dear brothers, and as priests must know that We govern in his place and also hold Our office by virtue of his name—; (4) and, although such great authority belongs to Us that no one could argue again with Our decision, We have done nothing that We would not have brought to your attention of Our own accord in Our letter, granting this to Our fraternal relationship and taking counsel in common, not because We would not have known what ought to be done or because We would have done anything that would be displeasing by going against what is advantageous for the Church, but because We wished to confer with you in regard to the man [i.e., the accused Caelestius].

222–230: Fifteenth (or Sixteenth) Synod of Carthage, begun May 1, 418

This synod is usually associated with the transmission of eight canons against the Pelagians. In some manuscript, there are nine, with another text being added as canon 3 (*224). In the past, these canons were erroneously attributed to the Second Synod of Milevum (Numidia) of A.D. 416: cf. MaC 3:1071; PL 20:582B; F. Maassen, Geschichte der Quellen und der Literatur des canonischen Rechts 1 (Graz, 1870), 167. It is question of canons 109–16 from the collection of canons of the African Church. Canons 3–5 are cited in the Indiculus, chap. 7 (*245), a chapter that almost certainly is part of the Epistula tractoria of Pope Zosimus and are, therefore, expressly approved by him. What is cited there as chap. 3 is not can. 3' (*224) transmitted separately, but the usual text *225. It is not entirely certain whether Zosimus approved the other canons. The words of Augustine in De natura et origine animae II, 12, no. 17 (CSEL 60:351 / PL 44:505), which are sometimes invoked in support of this opinion, are too vague.

Ed.: Bruns 1:188–91 / HaC 1:926E–930E; cf. 1:1217D–1219B / MaC 3:811A–815D; cf. 4:326C–329C / Hn § 169 / PL 56:486B–490A. —Some parts, such as cann. 1, 2, 6–8, are reproduced in Bishop Brachiarius of Seville (between 656–681), De ecclesiasticis dogmatibus 33–37 (PL 83:1235f., as an appendix to the works of Isidore of Seville). —Can. 3' [*224]: HaC 1:927Bn / PL 20:694C–695A / Hn § 169, no. 3.

Original Sin

222 Can. 1. Placuit omnibus episcopis ... in sancta Synodo Carthaginensis Ecclesiae constitutis: ut quicumque dixerit, Adam primum hominem mortalem factum ita, ut, sive peccaret sive non peccaret, moreretur in corpore, hoc est de corpore exiret non peccati merito, sed necessitate naturae,¹ anathema sit.

Can 1. It has been decided by all the bishops ... assembled in the holy Synod of the Church of Carthage: Whoever says that Adam, the first man, was created subject to death in such a way that, whether he sinned or whether he did not sin, he would die in the body, that is, would go forth from the body, not as a penalty for sin, but due to the necessity of nature,¹ let him be anathema.

223 Can. 2. Item placuit, ut quicumque parvulos recentes ab uteris matrum baptizandos negat aut dicit in remissionem quidem peccatorum eos baptizari, sed nihil ex Adam trahere originalis peccati, quod lavacro regenerationis expietur, unde fit consequens, ut in eis forma baptismatis “in remissionem peccatorum” non vera, sed falsa intellegatur, anathema sit. Quoniam non aliter intellegendum est quod ait Apostolus: “Per unum

Can. 2. Likewise, it has been decided: Whoever says that little children right from their mothers' wombs ought not to be baptized or says that they are indeed baptized for the forgiveness of sins but that they derive from Adam no trace of original sin that would have to be removed by the bath of rebirth, whence it follows that in their case the baptismal formula “for the remission of sins” is to be understood as not true but false, let him be anathema.

*222 ¹ This proposition and others are cited by Marius Mercator, Commonitorium super nomine Caelestii 1 (ACOe 1/V, 66, no. 36 / PL 48:69A; 45:1686). See Augustine, De peccatorum meritis et remissione et de baptismo parvulorum I, 2, no. 2 (CSEL 60:3; PL 44:109).

hominem peccatum intravit in mundum (et per peccatum mors), et ita in omnes homines pertransiit, in quo omnes peccaverunt” [cf. Rm 5:12], nisi quemadmodum Ecclesia catholica ubique diffusa semper intellexit. Propter hanc enim regulam fidei etiam parvuli, qui nihil peccatorum in se ipsis adhuc committere potuerunt, ideo in peccatorum remissionem veraciter baptizantur, ut in eis regeneratione mundetur, quod generatione traxerunt.

Can. 3'. Item placuit, ut si quis dicit, ideo dixisse Dominum: “In domo Patris mei mansiones multae sunt” [Io 14:2], ut intelligatur, quia in regno caelorum erit aliquis medius aut ullus alicubi locus, ubi beate vivant parvuli, qui sine baptismo ex hac vita migrarunt, sine quo in regnum caelorum, quod est vita aeterna, intrare non possunt, anathema sit. Nam cum Dominus dicat: Nisi quis renatus fuerit ex aqua et Spiritu Sancto, non intrabit in regnum caelorum [Io 3:5], quis catholicus dubitet participem fore diaboli eum, qui coheres esse non meruit Christi? Qui enim dextra caret, sinistram procul dubio partem incurret.

For in no other way must one understand that which the apostle says: “Through one man sin entered into the world (and through sin, death), and so it has passed on into all men; in him all have sinned” [cf. Rom 5:12] except as the Catholic Church spread throughout the world has always understood it. For because of this tenet of the faith even little children, who in themselves have not yet been able to commit any sins, are in consequence baptized truly for the remission of sins, so that in them that which was incurred by their birth may be cleansed by their rebirth.

Can. 3'. Likewise, it has been decided: If anyone says that the Lord said, “In my Father’s house there are many rooms” [Jn 14:2], in such a way that it is understood that in the kingdom of heaven there is some place in the middle or elsewhere where little children may live blessedly even if they have gone forth from this world without baptism, without which they cannot enter into the kingdom of heaven, which is everlasting life, let him be anathema. For since the Lord says, “Unless one is born again of water and the Holy Spirit, he shall not enter into the kingdom of heaven” [Jn 3:5], what Catholic could doubt that he who has not deserved to be a co-heir with Christ is going to share the lot of the devil? For he who is not on the right-hand side will without doubt fall to the left. 224

Grace

Can. 3. Item placuit, ut quicumque dixerit, gratiam Dei, qua iustificatur homo per Iesum Christum Dominum nostrum, ad solam remissionem peccatorum valere, quae iam commissa sunt, non etiam ad adiutorium, ut non committantur, anathema sit.

Can. 3. Likewise, it has been decided that whoever says that the grace of God, by which man is justified through Jesus Christ, our Lord, has power only for the remission of sins that have already been committed and not also for help that they be not committed, let him be anathema. 225

Can. 4. Item, quisquis dixerit, eandem gratiam Dei per Iesum Christum Dominum nostrum propter hoc tantum nos adiuvare ad non peccandum, quia per ipsam nobis revelatur et aperitur intellegentia mandatorum, ut sciamus, quid appetere, quid vitare debeamus, non autem per illam nobis praestari, ut quod faciendum cognoverimus, etiam facere diligamus atque valeamus, anathema sit. Cum enim dicat Apostolus: “Scientia inflat, caritas vero aedificat” [1 Cor 8:1], valde impium est, ut credamus, ad eam quae inflat nos habere gratiam Christi, et ad eam, quae aedificat, non habere, cum sit utrumque donum Dei, et scire, quid facere debeamus, et diligere, ut faciamus, ut aedificante caritate scientia nos non possit inflare. Sicut autem de Deo scriptum est: “Qui docet hominem scientiam” [Ps 93:10] ita etiam scriptum est: “Caritas ex Deo est” [1 Io 4:7].

Can. 4. In like manner, whoever says that the same grace of God through Jesus Christ, our Lord, helps us not to sin only for this reason, that through it the understanding of the commands is revealed and opened to us, that we may know what we ought to strive after, what we ought to avoid, but that through this (the power) is not also given to us to love and to be able to do that which we know ought to be done, let him be anathema. For since the apostle says: “Knowledge puffs up, but charity edifies” [1 Cor 8:1], it is very impious for us to believe that for that which puffs up, we have the grace of Christ, and for that which edifies we have not, although each is a gift of God, both to know what we ought to do and to love in order that we may do it, so that while charity edifies, knowledge may not be able to puff us up. Moreover, just as it is written of God: “He teaches man knowledge” [Ps 94:10], so also it is written: “Charity is from God” [1 Jn 4:7]. 226 227 Can. 5. Item placuit, ut quicumque dixerit, ideo nobis gratiam iustificationis dari, ut, quod facere per liberum iubemur arbitrium, facilius possimus implere per gratiam, tamquam et si gratia non daretur, non quidem facile, sed tamen possimus etiam sine illa implere divina mandata, anathema sit. De fructibus enim mandatorum Dominus loquebatur, ubi non ait: sine me difficilius potestis facere, sed ait: “Sine me nihil potestis facere” [Io 15:5].

228 Can. 6. Item placuit, quod ait sanctus Ioannes Apostolus: “Si dixerimus, quia peccatum non habemus, nos ipsos seducimus, et veritas in nobis non est” [1 Io 1:8]: quisquis sic accipiendum putaverit, ut dicat propter humilitatem oportere dici, nos habere peccatum, non quia vere ita est, anathema sit. Sequitur enim Apostolus et adiungit: “Si autem confessi fuerimus peccata nostra, fidelis est et iustus, qui remittat nobis peccata et mundet nos ab omni iniquitate” [1 Io 1:9]. Ubi satis apparet, hoc non tantum humiliter, sed etiam veraciter dici. Poterat enim Apostolus dicere: “Si dixerimus: non habemus peccatum, nos ipsos extollimus, et humilitas in nobis non est”. Sed cum ait: Nos ipsos decipimus, et veritas in nobis non est: satis ostendit eum, qui se dixerit non habere peccatum, non verum loqui, sed falsum.

229 Can. 7. Item placuit, ut quicumque dixerit, in oratione dominica ideo dicere sanctos: “Dimitte nobis debita nostra” [Mt 6:12], ut non pro seipsis hoc dicant, quia non est iam necessaria ista petitio, sed pro aliis qui sunt in suo populo peccatores, et ideo non dicere unumquemque sanctorum: “Dimitte mihi debita mea”, sed “Dimitte nobis debita nostra”, ut hoc pro aliis potius quam pro se iustus petere intellegatur, anathema sit. Sanctus enim et iustus erat Apostolus Iacobus, cum dicebat: “In multis enim offendimus omnes” [Iac 3:2]. Nam quare additum est “omnes”, nisi ut ista sententia conveniret et Psalmo, ubi legitur: “Ne intres in iudicium cum servo tuo, quia non iustificabitur in conspectu tuo omnis vivens” [Ps 142:2]? Et in oratione sapientissimi Salomonis: “Non est homo qui non peccavit” [3 Rg 8:46]. Et in libro sancti Iob: “In manu omnis hominis signat, ut sciat omnis homo infirmitatem suam” [Iob 37:7]. Unde etiam Daniel sanctus et iustus, cum in oratione pluraliter diceret: “Peccavimus, iniquitatem fecimus” [Dn 9:5, 15], et cetera quae ibi veraciter et humiliter confitetur: ne putaretur, quemadmodum quidam sentiunt, hoc non de suis, sed de populi sui potius dixisse peccatis, postea dixit: “Cum ... orarem et confiterer peccata mea et peccata populi mei” [Dn 9:20] Domino Deo meo, noluit dicere “peccata nostra”, sed “peccata populi sui” dixit et “sua”, quoniam futuros istos, qui tam male intellegerent, tamquam propheta praevidit.

Can. 5. It has likewise been decided that whoever says that the grace of justification is given to us so that we may accomplish more easily by grace what we are ordered to do by free will, as though, even if grace were not given, we could still fulfill the divine commands without it, though not as easily, let him be anathema. For when he spoke of the fruit of the commandments, the Lord did not say: “Without me you can accomplish with greater difficulty”, but: “Without me you can do nothing” [Jn 15:5].

Can. 6. It has likewise been decided: If anyone thinks that what St. John the apostle says: “If we say we have no sin, we deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us” [1 Jn 1:8], is to be interpreted as meaning that we ought to say we have sin for the sake of humility, and not because it is really true, let him be anathema. For the apostle indeed continues and adds: “If we confess our sins, he is faithful and will forgive our sins and cleanse us from all iniquity” [1 Jn 1:9]. Here it is sufficiently clear that this is said not only in humility but also in truth. For the apostle could have said: “If we say we have no sin, we extol ourselves, and humility is not in us.” But when he says: We deceive ourselves, and the truth is not in us, he clearly shows that the one who declares he has no sin speaks, not the truth, but falsehood.

Can. 7. It has likewise been decided: If anyone declares that in the Lord’s Prayer, when the saints say, “Forgive us our debts” [Mt 6:12], they are not saying this for themselves, since they no longer need this petition, but for others among their people who are sinners and that therefore each one of the saints does not say: “Forgive me my debts”, but “Forgive us our debts”, since it is known that the just man requests this more for others than for himself, let him be anathema. For the apostle James was holy and just when he said: “For in many things we all offend” [Jas 3:2]. For why was “all” added if not because this meaning corresponds to the psalm where one reads: “Enter not into judgment with thy servant, because no living person shall be justified in thy sight” [Ps 143:2]? And in the prayer of the most wise Solomon: “There is not a man who has not sinned” [1 Kings 8:46]; and in the book of holy Job: “He seals up the hand of every man, so every man may know his infirmity” [Job 37:7]; and likewise the holy and just Daniel, when in prayer he declared in the plural: “We sinned, we have committed iniquity” [Dan 9:5, 15], and the rest of those things that he truly and humbly confesses there. Lest it be thought, as some perceive, that he said this, not for his own sins, but rather for those of his people, he later says: “When ... I prayed and confessed my sins and the sins of my people” [Dan 9:20] to the Lord my God. He did not want to say “our sins”, but the “sins of his people” and “his” <sin>, for, as a prophet, he foresaw those to come who would understand this matter so badly.

Can. 8. Item placuit, ut quicumque ipsa verba dominicae orationis, ubi dicimus: “Dimitte nobis debita nostra” [Mt 6:12], ita volunt a sanctis dici, ut humiliter, non veraciter hoc dicatur, anathema sit. Quis enim ferat orantem et non hominibus, sed ipsi Domino mentientem, qui labiis sibi dicit dimitti velle, et corde dicit, quae sibi dimittantur, debita non habere?

Can. 8. It has likewise been decided that whoever wishes that the words themselves of the Lord’s prayer, where we say: “Forgive us our debts” [Mt 6:12], be said by the saints so as to be spoken humbly, not truthfully, let him be anathema. For who would tolerate one praying and lying, not to men, but to the Lord himself, who says with his lips that he wishes to be forgiven and in his heart holds that he does not have debts to be forgiven? 230

231: Epistula tractoria to the Eastern Churches, between June and August 418

This circular letter was sent throughout the East: Egypt, Constantinople, Thessalonica, and Jerusalem. Even so, only a few fragments of it have been preserved. Besides the fragment that follows, two others are cited in the Indiculus (*244f.). The name “Epistula tractoria” (= tractatoria, treatise) is handed down by Marius Mercator, Commonitorium super nomine Caelestii 3, 1 (ACO 1/V, 68₂₁/PL 48:90).

Ed.: in Augustine, letter 190 (A. Goldbacher: CSEL 57:159 / PL 20:693BC). —Reg.: JR 343.

Original Sin

Fidelis Dominus in verbis suis [Ps 144:13] eiusque baptismus re ac verbis, id est opere, confessione et remissione vera peccatorum in omni sexu, aetate, condicione generis humani, eandem plenitudinem tenet. Nullus enim, nisi qui peccati servus est, liber efficitur, nec redemptus dici potest, nisi qui vere per peccatum fuerit ante captivus, sicut scriptum est: “Si vos Filius liberaverit, vere liberi eritis” [Jo 8:36]. Per ipsum enim renascimur spiritaliter, per ipsum crucifigimur mundo. Ipsius morte mortis ab Adam omnibus nobis introductae atque transmissae universae animae, illud propagatione contractum chirographum [cf. Col 2:14] rumpitur, in quo nullus omnino natorum, antequam per baptismum liberetur, non tenetur obnoxius.

The Lord is faithful in his words [Ps 145:13], and his baptism contains in the object and in the words, that is, through the action, the profession of faith, and the true remission of sins, the same plenitude for each sex, age, and condition of the human race. For no one except the one who is the slave of sin may be rendered free, nor can he be said to be redeemed unless truly he was previously a captive of sin, as it is written: “If the Son makes you free, you will be free indeed” [Jn 8:36]. For through him we are spiritually reborn, through him we are crucified to the world. Through his death is broken that bond of death [cf. Col 2:14] contracted by propagation, that death introduced for us all by Adam and transmitted to every soul; to which everyone born, without exception, is subject before being liberated through baptism. 231

BONIFACE I: December 29, 418–September 4, 422

232: Letter Retro maioribus to Bishop Rufus of Thessalonica, March 11, 422

Ed.: C. Silva Tarouca, Epistularum Romanorum Pontificum ad vicarios per Illyricum aliosque episcopos Collectio Thessalonicensis, TD ser. theol. 23 (Rome, 1937), 33 (= letter 9) / PL 20:776A (= letter 13). —Reg.: JR 363.

Primacy of the Roman See

(c. 2) ... Ad synodum [Corinthi] ... talia scripta direximus, quibus universi fratres intellegant, ... de nostro non esse iudicio retractandum. Numquam etenim licuit de eo rursus, quod semel statuta est ab Apostolica Sede, tractari.

(Chap. 2) ... We have directed to the synod [of Corinth] ... such writings that all the brethren may know ... that there is to be no review of our judgment. In fact, it has never been licit to deliberate again on that which has once been decided by the Apostolic See. 232

233: Letter Institutio to the Bishops of Thessalonica, March 11, 422

Ed.: C. Silva Tarouca, Epistularum Romanorum Pontificum ad vicarios per Illyricum aliosque episcopos Collectio Thessalonicensis, TD ser. theol. 23 (Rome, 1937), 34–35₁₄ (= letter 10) / CouE 1037 / PL 20:777 (= letter 14) / MaC 8:755CD. —Reg.: JR 364.

Primacy of the Roman See

233 (c. 1) Institutio universalis nascentis Ecclesiae de beati Petri sumpsit honore principium, in quo regimen eius et summa consistit. Ex eius enim ecclesiastica disciplina per omnes Ecclesias, religionis iam crescente cultura, fonte manavit. Nicaenae synodi non aliud praecepta testantur: adeo ut non aliquid super eum ausa sit constituere, cum videret, nihil supra meritum suum posse conferri, omnia denique huic noverat Domini sermone concessa. Hanc ergo Ecclesiis toto orbe diffusis velut caput suorum certum est esse membrorum: a qua se quisquis abscidit, sit christianae religionis extorris, cum in eadem non ceperit esse compage.

(Chap. 1) The institution of the universal Church that sprang forth took her origin from the dignified office of blessed Peter, in which her government and preeminence rest. In fact, from this source flowed the ecclesiastical discipline for all the Churches while the cultivation of religion was already growing. The decrees of the Council of Nicaea bear witness to nothing else: so much so that (the council) did not dare establish anything above (this office), since it saw that nothing could take place above its proper right, and, finally, it knew that everything had been granted to it by the word of the Lord. Therefore, it is certain that this (Roman Church) is, as it were, like the head of its members for the Churches spread throughout the whole world, and if anyone cuts himself off from her, he is exiled from the Christian religion, since he no longer can share in the same fellowship.

234–235: Letter Manet beatum to Rufus and the Other Bishops in Macedonia, etc., March 11, 422

Ed.: C. Silva Tarouca, Epistularum Romanorum Pontificum ad vicarios per Illyricum aliosque episcopos Collectio Thessalonicensis, TD ser. theol. 23 (Rome, 1937), 27₆–30₉₅ (= letter 8) / CouE 1039–42 / PL 20:779B–782C (= letter 15) / MaC 8:756C–758A. —Reg.: JR 365.

Primacy of the Roman See

234 Manet beatum apostolum Petrum per sententiam dominicam universalis Ecclesiae ab hoc sollicitudo suscepta, quippe quam evangelio teste in se noverit esse fundatam. Nec umquam eius honor vacuus potest esse curarum, cum certum sit summam rerum ex eius deliberatione pendere.... Absit hoc a Domini sacerdotibus, ut in hunc aliquis eorum cadat reatum, ut in nova quippiam usurpatione temptando, inimica sibi faciat scita maiorum, aemulum se illum specialiter habere cognoscens, apud quem Christus noster sacerdotii summam locavit, in cuius contumeliam quisquis insurgit, habitator caelestium non poterit esse regnorum. “Tibi”, inquit, “dabo claves regni caelorum” [Mt 16:19], in quod nullus absque gratia ianitoris intrabit....

Through the pronouncement of the Lord, the responsibility received from him for the universal Church belongs to the blessed apostle Peter, who indeed knew, according to the testimony of the Gospel, that (this Church) was founded on him. Nor could his dignified office be without responsibilities, since it is certain that all matters depend on his deliberation.... Far be it from the priests of the Lord that any one of them should fall prey to this fault: that, by attempting some unlawful innovation, he sets himself against the decrees of the forefathers, knowing that, in a special way, his rival is the one upon whom our Christ placed the height of the priesthood; and whoever rises up in defiance of him cannot be an inhabitant of the heavenly kingdom. “To you”, he says, “I will give the keys of the kingdom of heaven” [Mt 16:19], into which no one shall enter without the favor of the gatekeeper....

235 Quoniam locus exigit, si placet, recensete canonum sanctiones, repperietis, quae sit post Ecclesiam Romanam secunda sedes, quaeve sit tertia.... Nemo unquam apostolico culmini, de cuius iudicio non licet retractari, manus obvias audacter intulit, nemo in hoc rebellis existit nisi qui de se voluit iudicari. Servant Ecclesiae magnae praedictae per canones dignitates: Alexandrina et Antiochena [cf. Conc. Nicaen. I can. 6], habentes ecclesiastici iuris notitiam. Servant, inquam, statuta maiorum, in omnibus deferentes, et eius vicissitudinem

Because the subject requires it, please examine the provisions of the canons: you will find what see is second after the Roman Church and what is third.... No one has ever boldly raised his hands against the apostolic eminence, from whose judgment it is not permissible to dissent; no one has rebelled against this who did not wish judgment to be passed upon him. The aforesaid great Churches keep their ranks according to the canons: those of Alexandria and Antioch [cf. First Council of Nicaea, can. 6], for they are cognizant of ecclesiastical law. They recipientes gratiae, quam se in Domino, qui pax nostra est, Nobis debere cognoscunt.

Sed quia res postulat, adprobandum documentis est, maxime Orientalium Ecclesias in magnis negotiis, in quibus opus esset disceptatione maiore, Sedem semper consuluisse Romanam, et quotiens usus exegit, eius auxilium postulasse.

[There follow examples of appeals and requests in the matter of Athanasius and Peter of Alexandria, of the Church of Antioch, of Nectarius of Constantinople, and of the Orientals separated at the time of Innocent I.]

CELESTINE I: September 10, 422–July 27, 432

236: Letter Cuperemus quidem to the Bishops of the Provinces of Vienne and Narbonne, July 26, 428

Ed.: CouE 1067C–E / PL 50:431BC (= letter 4); 84:687DE and 130:755CD (= collection of decrees) / MaC 4:465B–E / HaC 1:1259AB. —Reg.: CIPL 1650; JR 369.

Reconciliation at the Point of Death

(2) Agnovimus paenitentiam morientibus denegari nec illorum desideriis annui, qui obitus sui tempore hoc animae suae cupiunt remedio subveniri. Horremus, fateor, tantae impietatis aliquem reperiri, ut de Dei pietate desperet, quasi non possit ad se quovis tempore concurrenti succurrere et periclitantem sub onere peccatorum hominem pondere, quo se ille expediri desiderat, liberare. Quid hoc, rogo, aliud est, quam morienti mortem addere, eiusque animam sua crudelitate, ne absoluta esse possit, occidere? Cum Deus ad subveniendum paratissimus, invitans ad paenitentiam sic promittat: Peccator, inquit, quacunq[ue] die conversus fuerit, peccata eius non imputabuntur ei [cf. Ez 33:16]. . . . Cum ergo sit Dominus cordis inspector, quovis tempore non est deneganda paenitentia postulanti. . . .

observe, I say, the decisions of the forefathers, according (good grace) in all matters and receiving that good grace in return, which they recognize they owe to Us in the Lord, who is our peace.

But because the situation requires it, it must be shown by documentary evidence that in important matters in which there was need for fuller consideration, the Churches of the Eastern (Christians) in particular always consulted the See of Rome and sought its help whenever it was required.

(2) We have learned that penance is being denied to the dying and no assent given to the desires of those who, at the moment of their death, wish this remedy for their souls. We are horrified, I must confess, that there could be anyone of such great impiety that he despairs of God's goodness, as if God could not at any time come to the aid of the one who turns to him for help and free from his burden a man endangered by the weight of sins, from which he longs to be liberated. For what else is this, I ask, except to add another death to the dying and to kill his soul with one's own cruelty so that it cannot be absolved? For God is always ready to pardon, inviting to repentance by promising: "The sinner, whatever the day of his conversion, shall not have his sins imputed to him" [cf. Ezek 33:16]. . . . Since, therefore, God is the judge of the heart, penance must not be denied at any time to one who asks for (it). . . .

237: Letter Apostolici verba to the Bishops of Gaul, May 431

Very soon after his death, Augustine became one of the greatest authorities in the Church (cf. *366 and 399). However, the authority of hardly any other Doctor of the Church has been the subject of as much abuse as that of Augustine (cf. the thirtieth Jansenist proposition condemned in *2330). Augustine says about his authority: "I would like it if, in regard to all that I have written, one should follow me only in those things in which one has recognized that I have not erred: for now, on this account, I am writing books in which I have undertaken to reexamine my writings, to demonstrate that neither have I followed myself in all things" (Neminem velim sic amplecti omnia mea, ut me sequatur nisi in iis, in quibus me non errare perspexerit: nam propterea nunc facio libros, in quibus opuscula mea retractanda suscepi, ut nec meipsum in omnibus me secutum fuisse demonstrem; De dono perseverantiae 21: PL 45:1027f.).

Ed.: PL 50:530A (= letter 21); 45:1756 (appendix to Augustine's works); 84:682A and 130:750BC (collection of decrees) / MaC 4:455E / HaC 1:1254B. —Reg.: CIPL 1652; JR 381, with additions.

Authority of Augustine

Cap. 2. Augustinum sanctae recordationis virum pro vita sua atque meritis in nostra communione semper habuimus, nec unquam hunc sinistrae suspitionis saltem

Chap. 2. We have always held Augustine a man of holy memory because of his life and also of his services in our communion, nor has any report ever sullied him rumor adpersit: quem tantae scientiae olim fuisse meminimus, ut inter magistros optimos etiam ante a meis semper decessoribus haberetur.

with unfavorable suspicion. We recall him as having once been a man of such great knowledge that even by my predecessors in the past he was always accounted among the best teachers.

238–249: Pseudo-Celestine Chapters, or Indiculus

A few anti-Pelagian chapters are usually attached to the above-cited letter of Celestine I that are erroneously attributed to this same pope. They are also known as Praetorium Sedis Apostolicae episcoporum auctoritates de gratia Dei et libero voluntatis arbitrio (Doctrinal judgments of the former bishops of the Apostolic See on the grace of God and the free choice of the will). According to M. Cappuyns (RBén 41 [1929]: 156–70), these were collected between 435 and 442 in Rome by Prosper of Aquitaine. They gained general acceptance when, around 500, they were included by Dionysius Exiguus in his collection of decrees (Decretalium collectioni).

Ed.: P. and H. Ballerini, S. Leonis I opera 2 (Venice, 1756), 251–57 / PL 51:205–12 (= works of Prosper of Aquitaine); 45:1756–60 (= works of Augustine, in an appendix); 50:531–37 (= Celestine I, letter 22); 84:682–86 and 130:750–54 (= collection of decrees).—Reg.: CIPL 527.

Grace

238 Quia nonnulli, qui catholico nomine gloriantur, in damnatis haeticorum sensibus seu pravitate sive imperitia demorantes, piissimis disputatoribus obviare praesumunt, et cum Pelagium atque Caelestium anathematizare non dubitent, magistris tamen nostris, tamquam necessarium modum excesserint, obloquuntur, eaque tantummodo sequi et probare profitentur, quae sacratissima beati Apostoli sedes Petri contra inimicos gratiae Dei per ministerium praesulum suorum sanxit et docuit, necessarium fuit diligenter inquirere, quid rectores Romanae Ecclesiae de haeresi, quae eorum temporibus exorta fuerat, iudicarent, et contra nocentissimos liberi arbitrii defensores quid de gratia Dei sentiendum esse censuerint; ita ut etiam Africanorum conciliorum quasdam sententias iungeremus, quas utique suas fecerunt apostolici antistites, cum probarunt.

Ut ergo plenius, qui in aliquo dubitant, instruantur, constitutiones sanctorum Patrum compendioso manifestamus Indiculo, quo, si quis non nimium est contentiosus, agnoscat omnium disputationum connexionem ex hac subditarum auctoritatum brevitate pendere, nullamque sibi contradictionis superesse rationem, si cum catholicis credat et dicat:

Because some persons who boast of the name “Catholic”, persisting in the condemned opinions of heretics, whether due to malice or to ignorance, presume to contradict our most devout apologists, and because, although they do not hesitate to anathematize Pelagius and Caelestius, they nevertheless contradict our teachers, as if they had exceeded the necessary limits, and profess that they only follow and approve what the most holy See of the blessed apostle Peter has established and taught through the ministry of its bishops against the enemies of the grace of God, it was necessary to ascertain with diligence what judgment the rulers of the Roman Church made about a heresy that had arisen in their times and what views they judged should be held concerning the grace of God, in opposition to the highly malignant defenders of free will; consequently, we also append certain statements of the African synods that the apostolic prelates certainly made their own when they approved them.

Therefore, so that those who have doubts on some point may be instructed more completely, we are setting forth the determinations made by the holy Fathers in a brief index (Indiculus), by means of which any person, if he is not excessively prone to argument, may recognize that the resolution of all these disputes emerges from the brief statements of the authorities quoted below and that he has no remaining reason for contradiction, if he believes and says in harmony with the Catholics that:

239 Cap. 1. In praevaricatione Adae omnes homines, naturalem possibilitatem¹ et innocentiam perdidisse, et neminem de profundo illius ruinae per liberum arbitrium posse consurgere, nisi eum gratia Dei miserentis erexerit, pronuntiante beatae memoriae Innocentio papa atque dicente in epistula ad Carthaginense concilium:² “Liberum enim arbitrium olim ille perpeusus, dum suis inconsultius utitur bonis, cadens in praevaricationis Chap. 1. In the transgression of Adam, all men lost their natural capacity¹ and their innocence, and no one can rise from the depths of that collapse through free will unless the grace of the merciful God lifts him up, as Pope Innocent of blessed memory proclaims and says in his letter to the Synod of Carthage:² “For long ago that man, a victim of his free will in making quite rash use of his goods, fell into the depths of transgression and sank profunda demersus est, et nihil, quemadmodum exinde surgere posset, invenit; suaque in aeternum libertate deceptus, huius ruinae iacuisset oppressu, nisi eum post Christi pro sua gratia relevasset adventus, qui per novae regenerationis purificationem omne praeteritum vitium sui baptismatis lavacro purgavit.”

*239 ¹ See Augustine, De natura et gratia 40, no. 47 (CSEL 60:268; PL 44:270).

² Letter In requirendis, January 27, 417, no. 7 (CSEL 44:709f.) = no. 6 (PL 20:586B).

Cap. 2. Neminem esse per semetipsum bonum, nisi participationem sui ille donet, qui solus est bonus. Quod in eisdem scriptis eiusdem pontificis sententia protestatur dicens:¹ “Numquid nos de eorum posthac rectum mentibus aestimemus, qui sibi se putant debere, quod boni sunt, nec illum considerant, cuius quotidie gratiam consequuntur, qui sine illo tantum se assequi posse confidunt?”

Cap. 3. Neminem etiam baptismatis gratia renovatum idoneum esse ad superandas diaboli insidias et ad vincendas carnis concupiscentias, nisi per quotidianum adiutorium Dei perseverantiam bonae conservationis acceperit. Quod eiusdem antistitis in eisdem paginis doctrina confirmat, dicens:¹ “Nam quamvis hominem redemisset a praeteritis ille peccatis, tamen sciens iterum posse peccare, ad reparationem sibi, quemadmodum posset illum et post ista corrigere, multa servavit, quotidiana praestans illi remedia, quibus nisi freti confisque nitamur, nullatenus humanos vincere poterimus errores. Necesse est enim, ut quo auxiliante vincimus, eo iterum non adiuvante vincamur.”

Cap. 4. Quod nemo, nisi per Christum, libero bene utatur arbitrio, idem magister in epistula ad Milevitanum concilium [416] data praedicat dicens:¹ “Adverte tandem, o pravissimarum mentium perversa doctrina, quod primum hominem ita libertas ipsa decepit, ut, dum indulgentius frenis eius utitur, in praeveraricationem praesumptione conciderit. Nec ex hac potuit erui, nisi ei providentia regenerationis statum pristinae libertatis Christi Domini reformasset adventus.”

Cap. 5. Quod omnia studia et omnia opera ac merita Sanctorum ad Dei gloriam laudemque referenda sint; quia nemo aliunde ei placet, nisi ex eo, quod ipse donaverit. In quam nos sententiam dirigit beatae recordationis papae and found no means by which he might be able to rise from there; and, deceived forever by his own freedom, he would have lain under the crushing weight of this collapse if the subsequent coming of Christ had not lifted him up again by virtue of the grace of him who, through the purification of the new rebirth, has washed away every past fault in his baptismal bath.”

Chap. 2. No one is good by himself unless the One who alone is good grants him a sharing in himself. And this is attested by the declaration of the same pontiff in the same document, saying:¹ “In times to come are we actually to judge what is right on the basis of the opinions of those who think they are indebted to themselves for the fact that they are good, who do not take into account the One whose grace they receive every day, and who are confident that they can attain to so much without him?” 240

Chap. 3. In addition, no one, even if renewed by the grace of baptism, is able to overcome the snares of the devil or subdue the passions of the flesh unless he receives, through the daily help of God, the gift of perseverance in remaining good. And the teaching of the same prelate confirms this in the same pages, saying:¹ “For although he had redeemed man from previous sins, nevertheless, knowing that he could sin again, he retained many means for healing him again, by which he might correct him even after those (subsequent sins), providing him with daily remedies; and if we do not support ourselves by relying upon these and trusting in them, to no extent shall we be able to overcome human failings. For it is necessary that, just as we are victorious with his help, so, on the other hand, we are overcome without his help.” 241

Chap. 4. In a letter sent to the Synod of Milevum [416], the same teacher proclaims that no one may make good use of his free will except through Christ, saying:¹ “Pay attention, finally, O perverse doctrine from very wicked minds, to the fact that freedom itself deceived the first man to such an extent that, while he plied the reins upon it in too lax a manner, he fell into transgression due to his presumption. And he could not have been rescued from this unless the coming of Christ the Lord, through the providence of rebirth, had restored for him the state of his original freedom.” 242

Chap. 5. All the pursuits and all the endeavors and meritorious deeds of the saints must be attributed to the glory and praise of God; because no one pleases him except as a result of that which he himself has granted. The 243

*240 ¹ Ibid., no. 3 (CSEL 44:705f.; PL 20:584B); here is the complete text according to CSEL (in the Indiculus, it is a bit abridged or mutilated): “... nor are they considering the One from whom they daily receive grace? But actually those of this kind do not receive any grace of God, since they are confident of being able to attain without him what those scarcely merit who implore him and receive it” (... nec illum considerant, cuius cotidie gratiam consequuntur? Sed iam isti, qui tales sunt, nullam Dei gratiam consequuntur, qui sino illo tantum se adsequi posse confidunt, quantum vix illi, qui ab illo postulant et accipiunt, promerentur).

*241 ¹ Ibid., no. 7 (CSEL 44:710f.) = no. 6 (PL 20:586C).

*242 ¹ Letter Inter ceteras, January 27, 417, no. 3 (CSEL 44:718f. / PL 20:591A).

Zosimi regularis auctoritas, cum scribens ad totius orbis episcopos ait:¹ “Nos autem instinctu Dei (omnia enim bona ad auctorem suum referenda sunt, unde nascuntur) ad fratrum et coepiscoporum nostrorum conscientiam universa retulimus.” Hunc autem sermonem sincerissimae veritatis luce radiantem tanto Afri episcopi honore venerati sunt, ut ita ad eundem virum scriberent: “Illud vero, quod in litteris, quas ad universas provincias curasti esse mittendas, posuisti dicens: ‘Nos tamen instinctu Dei, etc.’, sic accepimus dictum, ut illos, qui contra Dei adiutorium extollunt humani arbitrii libertatem, districto gladio veritatis velut cursim transiens amputares. Quid enim tam libero fecistis arbitrio, quam quod universa in nostrae humilitatis conscientiam retulistis. Et tamen instinctu Dei factum esse fideliter sapienterque vidistis, veraciter fidenterque dixistis. Ideo utique, quia ‘praeparatur voluntas a Domino’ [Prv 8:35 Septg.; cf. *374], et ut boni aliquid agant, paternis inspirationibus suorum ipse tangit corda filiorum. ‘Quotquot enim Spiritu Dei aguntur, hi filii Dei sunt’ [Rm 8:14]; ut nec nostrum deesse sentiamus arbitrium, et in bonis quibusque voluntatis humanae singulis motibus magis illius valere non dubitemus auxilium.”

decisive authority of Pope Zosimus of blessed memory leads us to this conclusion when he says, writing to the bishops of the entire world:¹ “However, by the prompting of God (for all good things must be referred to the One who originates them, from whom they come into being), We have referred everything to the shared understanding of our brothers and fellow bishops.” Moreover, the African bishops venerated this declaration, resplendent in the light of the most heartfelt truth, giving it such honor that they wrote as follows to the same man: “But as to the point you made in the letter that you arranged to have sent to all the provinces, saying: ‘However, by the prompting of God, We’, and so on, we have taken the remark in the sense that, by the drawn sword of truth, you are cutting off (as if in passing) those persons who exalt the freedom of the human will over against the assistance of God. For what have you done with such free will except refer everything to the shared understanding of our own lowliness? And, for all that, you have seen faithfully and wisely that it was done by the prompting of God; you have said this truthfully and boldly. Certainly, then, because ‘the will is made ready by the Lord’ [Prov 8:35 LXX; cf. *374], he himself touches the hearts of his children with his fatherly inspirations so that they may accomplish something good. ‘For as many as are led by the Spirit of God, these are the sons of God’ [Rom 8:14]; with the result that we do not feel that our free will is lacking and do not doubt that, in every single good impulse of the human will, his aid provides the greater share of the strength.”

244 Cap. 6. Quod ita Deus in cordibus hominum atque in ipso libero operetur arbitrio, ut sancta cogitatio, pium consilium omnisque motus bonae voluntatis ex Deo sit, quia per illum aliquid boni possumus, “sine quo nihil possumus” [Io 15:5]. Ad hanc enim nos professionem idem doctor Zosimus instituit, qui, cum ad totius orbis episcopos de divinae gratiae opitulatione loqueretur:¹ “Quod ergo”, ait, “tempus intervenit, quo eius non egeamus auxilio? In omnibus igitur actibus, causis, cogitationibus, motibus adiutor et protector orandus est. Superbum est enim, ut quidquam sibi humana natura praesumat, clamante Apostolo: ‘Non est nobis colluctatio adversus carnem et sanguinem, sed contra principes et potestates aëris huius, contra spiritualia nequitiae in caelestibus’ [Eph 6:12]. Et sicut ipse iterum dicit: ‘Infelix ego homo, quis me liberabit de corpore mortis huius? Gratia Dei per Iesum Christum Dominum nostrum’ [Rm 7:24s]. Et iterum: ‘Gratia Dei sum id quod sum, et gratia eius in me vacua non fuit; sed plus illis omnibus laboravi: non ego autem, sed gratia Dei mecum’ [I Cor 15:10].”

Chap. 6. God acts in the hearts of men and in free will itself in such a way that holy thoughts, devout plans, and every stirring of good will is from God, because through him we can accomplish something good, (but) “without him we can do nothing” [cf. Jn 15:5]. For the same teacher, Zosimus, has brought us to acknowledge this when, speaking to the bishops of the entire world about the assistance of divine grace, he said:¹ “Therefore, what period of time is there when we do not need his help? Consequently, in all actions, concerns, thoughts, and feelings he must be invoked as helper and protector. For it is an act of pride for human nature to boast of anything, as the apostle declares: ‘Our struggle is not against flesh and blood, but against the princes and powers of this earth, against the spirits of wickedness in the other world’ [Eph 6:12]. And as he again says: ‘Unfortunate man that I am, who will free me from the body of this death? The grace of God through Jesus Christ our Lord’ [Rom 7:24f.]. And again: ‘By the grace of God I am what I am, and his grace toward me was not in vain; no, I have worked harder than any of them, though it was not I, but the grace of God which is with me’ [I Cor 15:10].”

*243 ¹ Epistula tractoria (cf. *231).

*244 ¹ Another fragment of the Epistula tractoria. Very probably the entire chap. 7 of the Indiculus, which follows, was part of this letter, within which cann. 3–5 of the Synod of Carthage (*225–227) are almost literally repeated.

Cap. 7. Illud etiam, quod intra Carthaginensis synodi [a. 418] decreta constitutum est, quasi proprium Apostolicae Sedis amplectimur, quod scilicet tertio capitulo definitum est: “Ut quicumque dixerit, gratiam Dei, qua iustificamur per Iesum Christum Dominum nostrum, ad solam remissionem peccatorum valere, quae iam commissa sunt, non etiam ad adiutorium, ut non committantur, anathema sit.”

Et iterum quarto capitulo: “Ut quisquis dixerit, gratiam Dei per Iesum Christum propter hoc tantum nos adiuuare ad non peccandum, quia per ipsam nobis revelatur et aperitur intelligentia mandatorum, ut sciamus, quid appetere et quid vitare debeamus, non autem per illam nobis praestari, ut quod faciendum cognovimus, etiam facere diligamus atque valeamus, anathema sit. Cum enim dicat Apostolus: ‘Scientia inflat, caritas vero aedificat’ [1 Cor 8:1]: valde impium est, ut credamus, ad eam, quae inflat, nos habere gratiam Christi, et ad eam, quae aedificat, non habere, cum sit utrumque donum Dei, et scire, quid facere debeamus, et diligere, ut faciamus, ut aedificante caritate, scientia non possit inflare. Sicut autem de Deo scriptum est: ‘Qui docet hominem scientiam’ [Ps 93:10], ita scriptum est etiam: ‘Caritas ex Deo est’ [1 Io 4:7].”

Item quinto capitulo: “Ut quisquis dixerit, ideo nobis gratiam iustificationis dari, ut, quod facere per liberum arbitrium iubemur, facilius possimus implere per gratiam, tamquam etsi gratia non daretur, non quidem facile, sed tamen possimus etiam sine illa implere divina mandata, anathema sit. De fructibus enim mandatorum Dominus loquebatur, ubi non ait: Sine me difficilius potestis facere, sed ait: ‘Sine me nihil potestis facere’ [Io 15:5].”

Cap. 8¹. Praeter has autem beatissimae et Apostolicae Sedis inviolabiles sanctiones, quibus nos piissimi Patres, pestiferae novitatis elatione deiecta, et bonae voluntatis exordia et incrementa probabilium studiorum et in eis usque in finem perseverantiam ad Christi gratiam referre docuerunt, obsecrationum quoque sacerdotalium sacramenta respiciamus, quae ab Apostolis tradita in toto mundo atque in omni Ecclesia catholica uniformiter celebrantur, ut legem credendi lex statuat supplicandi.²

Cum enim sanctarum plebium praesules mandata sibimet legatione fungantur, apud divinam clementiam

Chap. 7. We also accept as if it belonged to the Apostolic See what was decided in the decrees of the Synod of Carthage [in the year 418], which is defined as follows in their third chapter: “That whoever says that the grace of God, by which man is justified through Jesus Christ, our Lord, has power only for the remission of sins that have already been committed and not also for help that they be not committed, let him be anathema.”

And again in the fourth chapter: That “whoever says that the same grace of God through Jesus Christ, our Lord, helps us not to sin only for this reason, that through it (i.e., grace) the understanding of the commandments is revealed and opened to us, that we may know what we ought to strive after, what we ought to avoid, but that through this (the power) is not also given to us to love and to be able to do that which we know ought to be done, let him be anathema. For since the apostle says: ‘Knowledge puffs up, but charity edifies’ [1 Cor 8:1], it is very impious for us to believe that for that which puffs up, we have the grace of Christ, and for that which edifies we have not, although each is a gift of God, both to know what we ought to do and to love in order that we may do it, so that while charity edifies, knowledge may not be able to puff us up. Moreover, just as it is written of God: ‘He teaches man knowledge’ [Ps 94:10], so also it is written: ‘Charity is from God’ [1 Jn 4:7].”

Next, in the fifth chapter: “Whoever says that the grace of justification is given to us so that we may accomplish more easily by grace what we are ordered to do by free will, as though, even if grace were not given, we could still fulfill the divine commands without it, though not as easily, let him be anathema. For when he spoke of the fruit of the commandments, the Lord did not say: “Without me you can accomplish (it) with greater difficulty”, but: ‘Without me you can do nothing’ [Jn 15:5].”

Chap. 8.¹ Moreover, in addition to these inviolable determinations made by the most blessed Apostolic See, by means of which the very devout Fathers have taught us, in casting aside the arrogance of pernicious innovation, to attribute to the grace of Christ the beginnings of good will and progress in praiseworthy endeavors and perseverance in them all the way to the end, let us also consider the sacred rites of (liturgical) prayer offered by priests, rites that, having been handed down from the apostles, are celebrated in a uniform manner in the entire world and in every Catholic church, so that the rule of prayer determines the rule of belief.²

For when those who preside over the holy peoples perform the function enjoined upon them, they plead the humani generis agunt causam, et tota secum Ecclesia congemiscente, postulant et precantur, ut infidelibus donetur fides, ut idololatrae ab impietatis suae liberentur erroribus, ut Iudaeis ablato cordis velamine lux veritatis appareat, ut haeretici catholicae fidei perceptione respiscant, ut schismatici spiritum redivivae caritatis accipiant, ut lapsis paenitentiae remedia conferantur, ut denique catechumenis ad regenerationis sacramenta perductis caelestis misericordiae aula reseretur.

*246 ¹ Chapter 8 corresponds closely to the thought of Prosper of Aquitaine’s De vocatione omnium gentium I, 12 (PL 51:664CD).

² A principle by which the liturgy is presented as a source of theological knowledge.

Haec autem non perfunctorie neque inaniter a Domino peti rerum ipsarum monstrat effectus: quandoquidem ex omni errorum genere plurimos Deus dignatur attrahere, quos “erutos de potestate tenebrarum transferat in regnum Filii caritatis suae” [cf. Col 1:13], et “ex vasis irae faciat vasa misericordiae” [cf. Rm 9:22s]. Quod adeo totum divini operis esse sentitur, ut haec efficienti Deo gratiarum semper actio laudisque confessio pro illuminatione talium vel correctione referatur.

247 Cap. 9. Illud etiam, quod circa baptizandos in universo mundo sancta Ecclesia uniformiter agit, non otioso contemplatur intuitu. Cum sive parvuli sive iuvenes ad regenerationis veniunt sacramentum, non prius fontem vitae adeunt, quam exorcismis et exsufflationibus clericorum spiritus ab eis immundus abigatur; ut tunc vere appareat, quomodo princeps mundi huius mittatur foras [Io 12:31], et quomodo prius alligetur fortis [cf. Mt 12:29], et deinceps vasa eius diripiantur [cf. Mc 3:27], in possessionem translata victoris, qui “captivam ducit captivitatem” [Eph 4:8], et dat dona hominibus [Ps 67:19].

248 His ergo ecclesiasticis regulis et ex divina sumptis auctoritate documentis, ita adiuvante Domino confirmati sumus, ut omnium bonorum affectuum atque operum et omnium studiorum omniumque virtutum, quibus ab initio fidei ad Deum tenditur, Deum profiteamur auctorem, et non dubitemus, ab ipsius gratia omnia hominis merita praeveniri, per quem fit, ut aliquid boni et velle incipiamus et facere [cf. Phil 2:13].

Quo utique auxilio et munere Dei non aufertur liberum arbitrium, sed liberatur, ut de tenebroso lucidum, de pravo rectum, de languido sanum, de imprudente sit providum. Tanta enim est erga omnes homines bonitas Dei, ut nostra velit esse merita, quae sunt ipsius dona, et case of the human race before the divine mercy, and, with the whole Church groaning (in repentance) along with them, they ask and pray that the faith might be given to those who lack it, that those who worship idols might be freed from the errors of their impiety, that the veil might be removed from the hearts of the Jews and that the light of truth might appear (to them), that the heretics might come to their senses through acceptance of the Catholic faith, that schismatics might receive the spirit of a rekindled charity, that the remedies of penance might be granted to those who have fallen away, and finally that the palace of heaven’s mercy might be opened to the catechumens who are being prepared for the sacraments of rebirth.

Moreover, the actual consequences show that these requests are not made of the Lord in a perfunctory or useless way: for God deigns to draw very many persons away from every kind of error, in order to “deliver (them) from the power of darkness and transfer (them) into the kingdom of his beloved Son” [Col 1:13] and in order, “out of vessels of wrath, to make vessels of mercy” [cf. Rom 9:22f.]. And all this is felt so much to be the work of God that continual thanksgiving and praise of his glory for their enlightenment and correction are offered to God as the one who accomplishes these things.

Chap. 9. We also regard with no indifferent interest what the holy Church uniformly does throughout the entire world in respect to those who are to be baptized. When either little children or young persons come to the sacrament of rebirth, they do not approach the fountain of life before the unclean spirit is driven from them by the exorcisms and insufflations of the clergy; so that it may be truly evident how the prince of this world is expelled [Jn 12:31] and how the strong one is first bound [cf. Mt 12:29] and then his possessions are plundered [cf. Mk 3:27], being transferred into the possession of the victor, who “leads captivity captive” [Eph 4:8] and gives gifts to men [Ps 68:19].

Through these ecclesiastical norms and proofs founded upon divine authority, we have been so confirmed, with the help of the Lord, that we acknowledge God as the author of all good tendencies and deeds and of all efforts and all virtues by which advancement is made toward God from the beginnings of faith; and we do not doubt that his grace precedes all man’s merits; through him it comes about that we begin both to wish for and to do anything that is good [cf. Phil 2:13].

And free will is certainly not taken away by this help and gift from God. Rather, it is set free, so that, instead of being dark, it might be luminous, instead of being crooked, it might be straight, instead of being sluggish, it might be vigorous, instead of being foolish, it might be pro his, quae largitus est, aeterna praemia sit donaturus.¹ Agit quippe in nobis, ut, quod vult, et velimus et agamus, nec otiosa in nobis esse patitur, quae exercenda, non negligenda, donavit, ut et nos cooperatores simus gratiae Dei. Ac si quid in nobis ex nostra viderimus remissione languescere, ad illum sollicito recurramus, qui sanat omnes languores nostros et redimit de interitu vitam nostram [Ps 102:3s], et cui quotidie dicimus: Ne inducas nos in tentationem, sed libera nos a malo [Mt 6:13].

Cap. 10. Profundiores vero difficilioresque partes incurrentium quaestionum, quas latius pertractarunt, qui haereticis resisterunt, sicut non audemus contemnere, ita non necesse habemus adstruere, quia ad confitendum gratiam Dei, cuius operi ac dignationi nihil penitus subtrahendum est, satis sufficere credimus, quidquid secundum praedictas regulas Apostolicae Sedis nos scripta docuerunt: ut prorsus non opinemur catholicum, quod apparuerit praefixis sententiis esse contrarium.

wise. For so great is the goodness of God toward all men that he wishes those merits, which are gifts from him, to be our own, and he intends to give an everlasting reward for these gifts that he has lavished on us.¹ For he acts in us so that we may both wish and do that which he wishes and does not permit those powers to be inactive in us that he has given us to be exercised, not to be neglected, so that we too might be collaborators with the grace of God. And if we see that anything is growing slack in us due to our own carelessness, let us have urgent recourse to him who heals all our infirmities and saves our life from perishing [Ps 103:3f.], and to whom we say every day: “Lead us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil” [Mt 6:13].

Chap. 10. But, just as we do not dare to hold in contempt the more profound and more difficult aspects of the present questions, which those who have resisted the heretics have handled more fully, so we do not regard it as necessary to address them, because we believe that in order to acknowledge the grace of God, from whose work and generous condescension nothing whatsoever should be subtracted, these points are sufficient, (i.e.,) whatever these writings have taught us in accordance with the aforesaid norms from the Apostolic See: so that, in short, we do not regard as Catholic that which appears to be contrary to the views established above. 249

Council of EPHEsus (Third Ecumenical): June 22–September 431

The council was convoked by Emperor Theodosius II most especially to oppose the heresy of Nestorius. In addition, it condemned the Pelagians (cf. *267f.) as well as the Messalians (also known as the Euchitarians or the Enthusiasts) by approving the synodal letter of the Synod of Constantinople held in 426–427 under Sisinnius (cf. ACOe 1/I/VII, 117f.; Latin translation, ACOe 1/V, 354f.). The controversy over Nestorius so divided the members of the synod into two parties, the Cyrillians and the “Orientals”, that they held separate sessions. The first session of the Cyrillians was fixed as the plenary session by Cyril of Alexandria on June 22, even before the arrival of the papal delegation and the Antiochene bishops. Under protest, the emperor’s envoys read out the letter of invitation, whereby the council was opened. During the first session, the letter of Cyril of Alexandria Καταφλαροῦσι μὲν (cf. *250f.) was read, the second of three letters he had written to Nestorius, and also the letter of the Synod of Alexandria Τοῦ σωτήρος, to which twelve anathemas were attached (cf. *252–63). The Fathers present declared the harmony of the letter Καταφλαροῦσι μὲν with the faith of Nicaea (cf. ACOe 1/II, 13–31; a very abbreviated Latin translation in ACOe 1/II, 39f.). The acts of the council say nothing about a confirmation of the other letter or the anathemas (cf. also P. Galtier: RechScRel 23 (1933): 45–57.) The “anti-anathemas” of Nestorius that were handed on (translated by Mario Mercator: ACOe 1/V/I, 71–84 / PL 48:909–23) are not authentic, according to E. Schwartz (SbBayAk, Philosophisch-philologische und historische Klasse [1922], issue 1). The decisions of the first session of the Cyrillians were approved by the papal legates during sessions 2 and 3 (July 10 and 11).—The numbers given for the sessions and the canons in MaC and HaC are not in accord with those in the critical edition of ACOe.

250–264: Session 1 of the Supporters of Cyril, June 22, 431

a. Second Letter of Cyril of Alexandria to Nestorius (Καταφλαροῦσι μὲν)

Written between January 26 and February 24, 430; it was read and approved at the council.

Ed.: ACOe 1/II, 2625–2822; Latin translations: 1/II, 382–3910; 1/III, 21; 1/V/I, 50 / PG 77:45B–48BC (= Cyril, letter 4) / MaC 4:1138 / HaC 1:1273E–1277A; 2:116D–117E / COeD, 3rd ed., 4122–4410.

*248 ¹ Augustine, letter 194 to the presbyter Sixtus, chap. 5, no. 19 (CSEL 57:190f. / PL 33:880).

Incarnation of the Son of God

250 Οὐ γάρ φαμεν ὅτι ἡ τοῦ Λόγου φύσις μεταποιηθεῖσα γέγονε σάρξ· ἀλλ' οὐδὲ ὅτι εἰς ὅλον ἄνθρωπον μετεβλήθη, τὸν ἐκ ψυχῆς καὶ σώματος· ἐκεῖνο δὲ μᾶλλον, ὅτι σάρκα ἐψυχωμένην ψυχῆ λογικῆ ἑνώσας ὁ Λόγος ἑαυτῷ καθ' ὑπόστασιν, ἀφράστως τε καὶ ἀπερινοήτως γέγονεν ἄνθρωπος, καὶ κεχηματίκεν υἱὸς ἀνθρώπου, οὐ κατὰ θέλησιν μόνην, ἢ εὐδοκίαν· ἀλλ' οὐδὲ ὡς ἐν προσλήψει προσώπου μόνου· καὶ ὅτι διάφοροι μὲν αἱ πρὸς ἐνότητα τὴν ἀληθινὴν συνενεχθεῖσαι φύσεις· εἷς δὲ ἕξ ἀμοιβῶν Χριστὸς καὶ Υἱός· οὐχ ὡς τῆς τῶν φύσεων διαφορᾶς ἀνηρημένης διὰ τὴν ἕνωσιν· ἀποτελεσασῶν δὲ μᾶλλον ἡμῖν τὸν ἕνα Κύριον καὶ Χριστὸν καὶ Υἱόν, θεότητος τε καὶ ἀνθρωπότητος, διὰ τῆς ἀφράστου καὶ ἀπορρήτου πρὸς ἐνότητα συνδρομῆς....

251 Οὐ γάρ πρῶτον ἄνθρωπος ἐγεννήθη κοινὸς ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας Παρθένου· εἶθ' οὕτως καταπεφοίτηκεν ἐπ' αὐτὸν ὁ Λόγος· ἀλλ' ἕξ αὐτῆς μήτρας ἐνωθεὶς ὑπομεῖναι λέγεται γέννησιν σαρκικὴν, ὡς τῆς ἰδίας σαρκὸς τὴν γέννησιν οἰκειούμενος.... Οὕτως τεθαρσῆκασι, θεοτόκον εἰπεῖν τὴν ἁγίαν παρθένον, οὐχ ὡς τῆς τοῦ Λόγου φύσεως ἤτοι τῆς θεότητος αὐτοῦ τὴν ἀρχὴν τοῦ εἶναι λαβούσης ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας παρθένου, ἀλλ' ὡς γεννηθέντος ἕξ αὐτῆς τοῦ ἁγίου σώματος ψυχωθέντος λογικῶς ᾧ καὶ καθ' ὑπόστασιν ἐνωθεὶς ὁ Λόγος γεγενῆσθαι λέγεται κατὰ σάρκα.

We do not say, in fact, that the nature of the Word underwent a transformation and became flesh or that it was changed into a complete man composed of soul and body. Rather, we say that the Word, hypostatically uniting to himself the flesh animated by a rational soul, became man in an ineffable and incomprehensible manner and was called Son of man, not merely by will or good pleasure or because he only assumed a person. Furthermore, (we say) that the natures brought together in real union (are) different and from these two only one Christ and Son results, not as though the difference of the natures was suppressed by the union, but, rather, because the divinity and the humanity have formed for us only one Lord and Christ and Son by their ineffable and mysterious coming together in unity....

For this was not an ordinary man who was at first begotten of the holy Virgin, and then the Word descended upon him: rather, (the Word) united flesh to himself from his mother's womb and is said to have undergone begetting in the flesh in order to take to himself flesh of his own.... For this reason [the holy Fathers] have not hesitated to speak of the holy Virgin as the Mother of God, not certainly because the nature of the Word or his divinity had the origin of its being from the holy Virgin, but because from her was generated his holy body, animated by a rational soul, a body hypostatically united to the Word; and thus it is said that (the Word) was begotten according to the flesh.

b. Second Letter of Nestorius to Cyril (Τὰς μὲν καθ' ἡμῶν ὕβρεις)

This letter, which Nestorius had written on June 15, 430, was read at the council after the letter of Cyril. Just as the subject of Cyril's letter was decided in a general manner, so also was the letter of Nestorius. It was rejected because it contradicted the profession of faith of Nicaea. From the rejected text, one cannot formulate a precise judgment about the doctrine of Nestorius. See in this regard his fragments (F. Loofs, Nestoriana [Halle/S., 1905]) and his Liber Heraclidis written while in exile (the Syriac text was edited by P. Bedjan [Paris, 1910]; French translation by F. Nau [Paris, 1910]; English translation by G.R. Driver and L. Hodgson [Oxford, 1925]).

Ed.: ACOe I/II, 29²⁷–32⁴ (= Greek); I/II, 41²⁵–43¹⁵; I/V/I, 47²¹–49⁹ (= Latin translations) / Loofs, Nestoriana 175⁵–179¹³ / MaC 4:893 / HaC 1:1277D–1281B / PG 77:52A–56B (= Cyril, letter 5).

Union of the Natures in Christ

251a (c. 3) Πιστεύω [πιστεύομεν] τοίνυν, φασί [οἱ ἅγιοι Πατέρες], καὶ εἰς τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ τὸν μονογενῆ. Σκόπησον ὅπως τὸ «κύριος» καὶ «Ἰησοῦς» καὶ «Χριστός» καὶ «μονογενής» καὶ «υἱός» πρότερον θέντες τὰ κοινὰ τῆς θεότητος καὶ τῆς ἀνθρωπότητος ὡς θεμελίου ὀνόματα τότε τὴν τῆς ἐνανθρωπήσεως καὶ τῆς ἀναστάσεως καὶ τοῦ πάθους ἐποικοδομοῦσι παράδοσιν, ἵνα τῶν ὀνομάτων τῆς φύσεως ἑκατέρας κοινῶν τινων σημαντικῶν προκειμένων μήτε τὰ τῆς υἰότητος καὶ κυριότητος τέμνηται μήτε τὰ τῶν φύσεων ἐν τῷ τῆς υἰότητος μοναδικῷ συγχύσεως ἀφανισμῷ κινδυνεύη.

(Chap. 3) I believe [we believe], then, they [the holy Fathers] say, also in our Lord Jesus Christ, his only begotten Son. Notice they first posit as foundations the (terms) “Lord” and “Jesus” and “Christ” and “only begotten” and “Son”, which are common to the divinity and to the humanity; then they construct the traditional account of the Incarnation and the Resurrection and the Passion, so that, since certain shared terms that signify both natures have been propounded, those things that pertain to sonship and lordship may not be divided, and those things that pertain to the natures may not fall into danger of confusion and disappear due to the uniqueness of the Sonship.

(c. 4) Τούτου γὰρ αὐτοῖς παιδευτῆς ὁ Παῦλος γενένηται, ὃς τῆς ἐνανθρωπήσεως τῆς θείας τὴν μνήμην ποιούμενος καὶ μέλλων τὰ τοῦ πάθους ἐπάγειν, πρότερον θεῖς τὸ «Χριστός», τὸ κοινόν, ὡς μικρῶ πρότερον ἔφην, τῶν φύσεων ὄνομα, προσάγει τὸν λόγον ἀμφοτέραις πρεπῶδη ταῖς φύσεσιν. Τί γὰρ φησιν; «Τοῦτο φρονεῖσθω ἐν ὑμῖν ὁ καὶ ἐν Χριστῷ Ἰησοῦ, ὃς ἐν μορφῇ Θεοῦ ὑπάρχων οὐχ ἀρπαγμὸν ἠγήσατο τὸ εἶναι ἴσα Θεῷ. Ἄλλ'», ἵνα μὴ τὰ καθ' ἕκαστον λέγω, «ὑπήκοος ἐγένετο μέχρι θανάτου, θανάτου δὲ σταυροῦ» [Phil 2:5s, 8]. Ἐπειδὴ γὰρ ἔμελλεν τοῦ θανάτου μεμνήσθαι, ἵνα μὴ τὸν Θεὸν Λόγον ἐντεῦθεν τις παθητὸν ὑπολάβῃ, τίθησιν τὸ «Χριστός», ὡς τῆς ἀπαθούς καὶ παθητῆς οὐσίας ἐν μοναδικῷ προσώπῳ προσηγορίαν σημαντικὴν, ὅπως καὶ ἀπαθῆς ὁ Χριστὸς καὶ παθητὸς ἀκινδύνως καλοῖτο, ἀπαθῆς μὲν θεότητι, παθητὸς δὲ τῇ τοῦ σώματος φύσει.

(c. 5) Πολλὰ λέγειν περὶ τούτου δυνάμενος καὶ πρῶτόν γε τὸ μὴδὲ γεννήσεως ἐπὶ τῆς οἰκονομίας ἀλλ' ἐνανθρωπήσεως τοὺς ἁγίους ἐκείνους μνημονεῦσαι πατέρας, τὴν τῆς βραχυλογίας ἐν προοιμίῳ ὑπόσχεσιν χαλινοῦσαν τὸν λόγον αἰσθάνομαι καὶ πρὸς τὸ δεύτερον τῆς σῆς ἀγάπης κινουσαν κεφάλαιον, ἐν ᾧ τὴν μὲν τῶν φύσεων ἐπήνουν διαίρεσιν κατὰ τὸν τῆς ἀνθρωπότητος καὶ θεότητος λόγον καὶ τὴν τούτων εἰς ἑνὸς προσώπου [sic!] συνάφειαν καὶ τὸ τὸν Θεὸν λόγον δευτέρας ἐκ γυναικὸς μὴ φάσκειν δεδεῖσθαι γεννήσεως καὶ τοῦ πάθους ἄδεκτον ὁμολογεῖν τὴν θεότητα. Ὁρθόδοξα γὰρ ὡς ἀληθῶς τὰ τοιαῦτα καὶ ταῖς τῶν αἱρέσεων πασῶν περὶ τὰς δεσποτικὰς φύσεις ἐναντία κακοδοξίαις. Τὰ λοιπὰ δὲ εἰ μὲν τινα σοφίαν κεκρυμμένην ἐπήγετο ταῖς τῶν ἀναγινωσκόντων ἀκοαῖς ἀκατάληπτον, τῆς σῆς ἐστὶν ἀκριβείας εἰδέναι· ἐμοὶ γοῦν τὰ πρῶτα καταστρέφειν ἐδόκει. Τὸν γὰρ ἐν τοῖς πρώτοις ἀπαθῆ κηρυχθέντα καὶ δευτέρας γεννήσεως ἄδεκτον πάλιν παθητὸν καὶ νεόκτιστον οὐκ οἶδ' ὅπως εἰσηγεν, ὡς τῶν κατὰ φύσιν τῷ Θεῷ λόγῳ προσόντων τῇ τοῦ ναοῦ συναφείᾳ διεφθαρμένων ἢ μικροῦ τινος τοῖς ἀνθρώποις νομιζομένου τοῦ τὸν ἀναμάρτητον ναὸν καὶ τῆς θείας ἀχώριστον φύσεως τὴν ὑπὲρ ἁμαρτωλῶν γέννησιν τε καὶ τελευτὴν ὑπομένειν ἢ πιστεύεσθαι τῆς δεσποτικῆς οὐκ ὀφειλούςσης φωνῆς πρὸς Ἰουδαίους βοώσης· «Λύσατε τὸν ναὸν τοῦτον, καὶ ἐν τρισὶν ἡμέραις ἐγερῶ αὐτόν» [Jo 2:19], οὐ· λύσατέ μου τὴν θεότητα καὶ ἐν τρισὶν ἡμέραις ἐγερθήσεται.

(c. 6) ... Πανταχοῦ τῆς θείας γραφῆς, ἥνικα ἂν μνήμην τῆς δεσποτικῆς οἰκονομίας ποιῆται, γέννησις ἡμῖν καὶ πάθος οὐ τῆς θεότητος, ἀλλὰ τῆς ἀνθρωπότητος τοῦ Χριστοῦ παραδίδοται, ὡς

(Chap. 4) For Paul was the one who taught them this; for he, making mention of the divine Incarnation and being about to proceed to the Passion, first posits the (term) “Christ”, the term common to the natures, as I said a little earlier, and then adds an account appropriate to both natures. For what does he say? “Have this mind among yourselves, which was in Christ Jesus, who, though he was in the form of God, did not count equality with God a thing to be grasped, but [to omit some particulars] became obedient unto death, even death on a cross” [Phil 2:5–6, 8]. For since he was going to mention his death, so that no one might infer from that that God the Word was capable of suffering, he posits the (term) “Christ”, a designation indicating in a single Person the nature free from suffering and the nature subject to suffering, so that Christ may safely be called free from suffering and subject to suffering: free from suffering in respect to his divinity and subject to suffering in respect to his bodily nature. 251b

(Chap. 5) I am able to speak at length on this point and with special reference to the fact that those holy Fathers did not make mention of “generation” in regard to the economy (of salvation) but of “incarnation”; but I perceive that the promise of brevity (given) at the outset restrains the discourse and carries (me) to Your Excellency’s second chapter. I praise the differentiation of natures made in that (chapter) according to the concept of the humanity and of the divinity and their union in a single Person; and also you say that the God-Word did not require a second birth from a woman, and you profess that the divinity is incapable of suffering. For this is truly orthodox and contradicts the heterodoxies of all the heresies in regard to the Lord’s nature. But it is left to your astuteness to ascertain whether the rest contains some hidden wisdom that cannot be grasped by the ears of the readers; to me, at least, it seems to contradict what precedes it. For the One who was previously proclaimed to be incapable of suffering and in no need of a second birth is reintroduced as capable of suffering and as newly created—I do not see how—as if the qualities that belonged to the God-Word by nature had been destroyed in the association with the temple (i.e., of his body), or as if men should regard as unimportant that the sinless temple, inseparable from the divine nature, had accepted birth and death for sinners or as if it were not necessary to believe the voice of the Lord crying out to the Jews: “Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up” [Jn 2:19], not “Destroy my divinity and in three days it shall be raised up again.” 251c

(Chap. 6) ... Everywhere in Sacred Scripture, when mention is made of the Lord’s economy (of salvation), the birth and suffering presented to us are not of the divinity, but of the humanity of Christ, so that the holy 251d καλεῖσθαι κατὰ ἀκριβεστέραν προσηγορίαν τὴν ἁγίαν παρθένον Χριστοτόκον, οὐ Θεοτόκον. Καὶ ἄκουε ταῦτα τῶν εὐαγγελίων βοώντων· «Βίβλος», φησὶν, «γενέσεως, Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ υἱοῦ Δαυὶδ υἱοῦ Ἀβραάμ» [Mt 1:1]. Δῆλον δὲ ὅτι τοῦ Δαυὶδ υἱὸς ὁ Θεὸς Λόγος οὐκ ἦν. Δέχου καὶ ἄλλην, εἰ δοκεῖ, μαρτυρίαν «Ἰακώβ δὲ ἐγέννησε τὸν Ἰωσήφ τὸν ἄνδρα Μαρίας, ἐξ ἧς ἐγέννηθη Ἰησοῦς ὁ λεγόμενος Χριστός» [Mt 1:16]. Σκόπει πάλιν ἑτέραν ἡμᾶς διαμαρτυρομένην φωνήν· «Τοῦ δὲ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἡ γέννησις οὕτως ἦν. Μνηστευθεῖσις γὰρ τῆς μητρὸς αὐτοῦ Μαρίας τῷ Ἰωσήφ, εὐρέθη ἐν γαστρὶ ἔχουσα ἐκ πνεύματος ἁγίου» [Mt 1:18]. Κτίσμα δὲ Πνεύματος τίς ἂν τὴν τοῦ μονογενοῦς ὑπολάβοι θεότητα; Τί δεῖ λέγειν καὶ τὸ «ἦν ἡ μήτηρ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ ἐκεῖ» [Jo 2:1]; καὶ πάλιν τὸ «σὺν Μαρίας τῇ μητρὶ τοῦ Ἰησοῦ» [Act 1:14] καὶ τὸ «τὸ ἐν αὐτῇ γεννηθὲν ἐκ πνεύματος ἁγίου» [Mt 1:20] καὶ τὸ «λάβε τὸ παιδίον καὶ τὴν μητέρα αὐτοῦ καὶ φεῦγε εἰς Αἴγυπτον» [Mt 2:13] καὶ τὸ «Περὶ τοῦ υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ τοῦ γενομένου ἐκ σπέρματος Δαυὶδ κατὰ σάρκα» [Rom 1:3] καὶ περὶ τοῦ πάθους αὐτοῦ ὅτι «ὁ Θεὸς τὸν ἑαυτοῦ υἱὸν πέμψας ἐν ὁμοιώματι σαρκὸς ἁμαρτίας καὶ περὶ ἁμαρτίας κατέκρινε τὴν ἁμαρτίαν ἐν τῇ σαρκί» [Rom 8:3] καὶ πάλιν «Χριστὸς ἀπέθανεν ὑπὲρ τῶν ἁμαρτιῶν ἡμῶν» [1 Cor 15:3] καὶ «Χριστοῦ παθόντος σαρκί» [1 Pt 4:1] καὶ «Τοῦτό ἐστιν», οὐχ ἡ θεότης μου, ἀλλὰ «τὸ σῶμα τὸ ὑπὲρ ὑμῶν κλώμενον» [1 Cor 11:24].

251e (c. 7) Καὶ ἄλλων μυρίων φωνῶν διαμαρτυρομένων τῶν ἀνθρώπων τὸ γένος μὴ τὴν τοῦ υἱοῦ νομίζειν θεότητα πρόσφατον ἢ πάθους σωματικοῦ δεκτικὴν, ἀλλὰ τὴν συνημμένην τῇ φύσει τῆς θεότητος σάρκα. Ὅθεν καὶ κύριον τοῦ Δαυὶδ ἑαυτὸν ὁ Χριστὸς καὶ υἱὸν ὀνομάζει· «Τί γάρ», φησὶν, «ὕμῖν δοκεῖ περὶ τοῦ Χριστοῦ; τίνοσ υἱὸς ἐστὶ; λέγουσιν αὐτῷ· τοῦ Δαυὶδ. Ἀπεκρίθη Ἰησοῦς καὶ εἶπεν αὐτοῖς· πῶς οὖν Δαυὶδ ἐν πνεύματι κύριον αὐτὸν καλεῖ, λέγων· εἶπεν ὁ κύριος τῷ κυρίῳ μου· κάθου ἐκ δεξιῶν μου» [Mt 22:42–44]· ὡς υἱὸς ὢν πάντως τοῦ Δαυὶδ κατὰ σάρκα, κατὰ δὲ τὴν θεότητα κύριος. Εἶναι μὲν οὖν τῆς τοῦ υἱοῦ θεότητος τὸ σῶμα ναὸν καὶ ναὸν κατ' ἄκραν τινα καὶ θείαν ἠνωμέναν συνάφειαν, ὡς οικειοῦσθαι τὰ τούτου τὴν τῆς θεότητος φύσιν, ὁμολογεῖσθαι καλὸν καὶ τῶν εὐαγγελικῶν παραδόσεων ἄξιον· τὸ δὲ δὴ τῷ τῆς οικειότητος προστριβεῖν ὀνόματι καὶ τὰς τῆς συνημμένης σαρκὸς ιδιότητας, γέννησιν λέγω καὶ πάθος καὶ νέκρωσιν, ἢ πλανωμένης ἐστίν, ἀδελφέ, καθ' Ἑλληνας διανοίας ἢ τὰ τοῦ φρενοβλαβοῦς Ἀπολιναρίου καὶ Ἀρείου καὶ τῶν ἄλλων νοσοῦσης αἰρέσεων, μᾶλλον δὲ τι κάκεινων βαρύτερον. Ἀνάγκη γὰρ τῷ τῆς οικειότητος τοῦ τοιοῦτου παρασυρομένους ὀνόματι καὶ γαλακτοτροφίας κοινωνῶν διὰ τὴν οικειότητα τὸν Θεὸν Λόγον ποιεῖν

Virgin is more accurately called the Mother of Christ, not the Mother of God. Listen, too, to these words that the Gospels proclaim: “The book”, it says, “of the genealogy of Jesus Christ, the son of David, the son of Abraham” [Mt 1:1]. It is thus clear that the God-Word was not the son of David. Accept this evidence, too, if you please: “Jacob (was) the father of Joseph the husband of Mary, of whom Jesus was born, who is called Christ” [Mt 1:16]. Again, consider another text that gives us testimony: “The birth of Jesus Christ took place in this way. When his mother Mary had been betrothed to Joseph, . . . she was found to be with child of the Holy Spirit” [Mt 1:18]. Would anyone suppose the divinity of the Only-Begotten to be something created by the Spirit? What, too, should be said of this: “The mother of Jesus was there” [Jn 2:1]? And again, “Mary the mother of Jesus” [Acts 1:14], and “that which is conceived in her is of the Holy Spirit” [Mt 1:20], and “take the child and his mother, and flee to Egypt” [Mt 2:13], and “concerning his Son, who was descended from David according to the flesh” [Rom 1:3], and later in regard to the Passion, “God, sending his own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh and for sin, . . . condemned sin in the flesh” [Rom 8:3], and again, “Christ died for our sins” [1 Cor 15:3], and “Christ suffered in the flesh” [1 Pet 4:1], and “This is”, not my divinity, but “my body which is for you” [1 Cor 11:24].

(Chap. 7) And countless other passages attest to the human race that they should not think it is the divinity of the Son that is recently born or subject to bodily suffering, but the flesh that is joined to the nature of the divinity. Consequently, Christ even calls himself the lord of David and his son, “saying, ‘What do you think of the Christ? Whose son is he?’ They said to him, ‘The son of David.’ He said to them, ‘How is it then that David, inspired by the Spirit, calls him Lord, saying, “The Lord said to my Lord, ‘Sit at my right hand’”?’ [Mt 22:42–44], being thus entirely the son of David according to the flesh, but (his) Lord according to his divinity. It is proper, then, and in accordance with what the Gospels have handed down to acknowledge that the body is the temple of the Son’s divinity, and a temple joined to it by a connection so lofty and divine that the divine nature appropriates its properties. But to ascribe under the term appropriation even the particular qualities of the flesh united to it—I mean birth and suffering and mortality—is, my brother, the act of a mind that has either gone astray in the footsteps of the pagans or become sick with the thinking of the crazed Apollinarius, of Arius, and of the other heresies, or rather something even more unhealthy than those. For it is unavoidable that such persons, ensnared by the term “appropriation”, should make God the Word καὶ τῆς κατὰ μικρὸν ἀυξήσεως μέτοχον καὶ τῆς ἐν τῷ τοῦ πάθους καιρῷ δειλίας καὶ βοηθείας ἀγγελικῆς ἐνδεᾶ. Καὶ σιωπῶ περιτομὴν καὶ θυσίαν καὶ ἰδρωτάς καὶ πεινᾶν, ἃ τῇ σαρκὶ μὲν ὡς δι' ἡμᾶς συμβάντα προσκυνητὰ προσαπτόμενα ἐπὶ δὲ τῆς θεότητος ταῦτα καὶ ψευδῆ λαμβανόμενα καὶ ἡμῖν ὡς συκοφάνταις δικαίας κατακρίσεως αἵτια.

participate in the experience of being suckled due to appropriation, let him participate in gradual growth and in the fear at the time of his Passion and to be in need of help from the angel. And I make no mention of circumcision and sacrifice and perspiration and hunger, which, if associated with the flesh, are adorable as having befallen him because of us, but which, attributed to his divinity, are found to be false and, as calumniations, ground for just condemnation on our part.

c. Anathemas of Cyril of Alexandria Enclosed with the Letter of the Synod of Alexandria Τοῦ σωτήρος ἡμῶν to Nestorius (= Third Letter of Cyril to Nestorius)

The letter was written in early November 430 and delivered to Nestorius on November 30.

Ed.: ACOe 1/1/I, 40–42; Latin translations 1/II, 50f. (Collectio Veronensis); 1/V/II, 242–44 / PG 77:120f. (= Cyril, letter 17) / MaC 4:1084E / COeD, 3rd ed., 59₁₀–61₂₂ / Hn § 219.

Union of the Natures in Christ

α'. Εἴ τις οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ, Θεὸν εἶναι κατὰ ἀλήθειαν τὸν Ἐμμανουήλ, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο θεοτόκον τὴν ἁγίαν παρθένον (γεγέννηκε γὰρ σαρκικῶς σάρκα γεγονότα τὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ λόγον)· ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

1. If anyone does not confess that the Emmanuel 252 is truly God and for this reason the holy Virgin is the Mother of God (since she begot, according to the flesh, the Word of God made flesh), let him be anathema.

β'. Εἴ τις οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ, σαρκὶ καθ' ὑπόστασιν ἠνώσθαι τὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ πατρός λόγον, ἕνα τε εἶναι Χριστὸν μετὰ τῆς ἰδίας σαρκός, τὸν αὐτὸν δηλονότι Θεὸν τε ὁμοῦ καὶ ἄνθρωπον· ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

2. If anyone does not confess that the Word from God 253 the Father was united to the flesh hypostatically and that he is one sole Christ with his own flesh, namely, the same at once both God and man, let him be anathema.

γ'. Εἴ τις ἐπὶ τοῦ ἐνὸς Χριστοῦ διαιρεῖ τὰς ὑποστάσεις μετὰ τὴν ἔνωσιν, μόνῃ συνάπτων αὐτὰς συναφείᾳ τῇ κατὰ τὴν ἀξίαν, ἧγουν αὐθεντίαν ἢ δυναστείαν, καὶ οὐχὶ δὴ μᾶλλον συνόδῳ τῇ καθ' ἔνωσιν φυσικῇ· ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

3. If anyone, with respect to the one Christ, divides 254 the hypostases after the union, joining them by a mere connection of dignity, authority, or power, and not rather by a coming together according to a natural union, let him be anathema.

δ'. Εἴ τις προσώποις δυσὶν ἢ γοῦν ὑποστάσεσιν τὰς τε ἐν τοῖς εὐαγγελικοῖς καὶ ἀποστολικοῖς συγγράμμασι διανέμει φωνάς, ἢ ἐπὶ Χριστῷ παρὰ τῶν ἁγίων λεγομένας, ἢ παρ' αὐτοῦ περὶ ἑαυτοῦ· καὶ τὰς μὲν ὡς ἀνθρώπῳ παρὰ τὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ λόγον ἰδικῶς νοουμένην προσάπτει, τὰς δὲ ὡς θεοπρεπεῖς μόνῳ τῷ ἐκ Θεοῦ πατρὸς λόγῳ· ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

4. If anyone attributes separately to the two Persons 255 or the two hypostases the expressions contained in the Gospels and apostolic writings that have been spoken of Christ by the saints or used by Christ about himself and applies some to a man considered by himself, distinct from the Word, and others, because they befit God, only to the Word, who is from God the Father, let him be anathema.

ε'. Εἴ τις τολμᾷ λέγειν θεοφόρον ἄνθρωπον τὸν Χριστὸν, καὶ οὐχὶ δὴ μᾶλλον Θεὸν εἶναι κατὰ ἀλήθειαν, ὡς υἱὸν ἕνα καὶ φύσει, καθὼς γέγονε σὰρξ ὁ λόγος καὶ κεκοινώθηκε παραπλησίως ἡμῖν αἵματος καὶ σαρκός· ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

5. If anyone dares to say that the Christ is a God- 256 bearing man and not, rather, truly God (both) as the one Son and by nature, since the Word became flesh and has come to share in blood and flesh like us, let him be anathema.

ς'. Εἴ τις λέγει, Θεὸν ἢ δεσπότην εἶναι τοῦ Χριστοῦ τὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ πατρός λόγον καὶ οὐχὶ δὴ μᾶλλον τὸν αὐτὸν ὁμολογεῖ Θεὸν τε ὁμοῦ καὶ ἄνθρωπον, ὡς γεγονότος σαρκὸς τοῦ λόγου κατὰ τὰς γραφάς· ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

6. If anyone says that the Word from God the Father 257 was the God or Ruler of Christ and does not confess instead that the same is at once God and man, since the Word became flesh according to the Scriptures, let him be anathema.

ζ'. Εἴ τις φησιν, ὡς ἄνθρωπον ἐνηργῆσθαι παρὰ τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγου τὸν Ἰησοῦν καὶ τὴν τοῦ μονογενοῦς εὐδοξίαν περιῆφθαι, ὡς ἐτέρῳ παρ' αὐτὸν ὑπάρχοντι· ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

7. If anyone says that Jesus, as man, was moved (in his 258 actions) by God the Word and that the glory of the Only-Begotten was applied to him as though belonging to another subsisting apart from him, let him be anathema.

259 η'. Εἴ τις τολμᾷ λέγειν, τὸν ἀναληφθέντα ἄνθρωπον συμπροσκυνεῖσθαι δεῖν τῷ Θεῷ λόγῳ, καὶ συνδοξάζεσθαι, καὶ συγχορηματίζειν Θεόν, ὡς ἕτερον ἑτέρῳ (τὸ γὰρ «σὺν» αἰεὶ προστιθέμενον τοῦτο νοεῖν ἀναγκάσει) καὶ οὐχὶ δὴ μᾶλλον μιᾷ προσκυνήσει τιμᾷ τὸν Ἐμμανουὴλ καὶ μίαν αὐτῷ τὴν δοξολογίαν ἀνάπτει, καθὸ γέγονε σὰρξ ὁ λόγος· ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

260 θ'. Εἴ τις φησὶν τὸν ἕνα κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν δεδοξάσθαι παρὰ τοῦ πνεύματος, ὡς ἄλλοτρία δύναμις τῆ δι' αὐτοῦ χρώμενον, καὶ παρ' αὐτοῦ λαβόντα τὸ ἐνεργεῖν δύνασθαι κατὰ πνευμάτων ἀκαθάρτων, καὶ τὸ πληροῦν εἰς ἀνθρώπους τὰς θεοσημείας, καὶ οὐχὶ δὴ μᾶλλον ἴδιον αὐτοῦ τὸ πνευμά φησὶν, δι' οὗ καὶ ἐνήργηκε τὰς θεοσημείας· ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

261 ι'. Ἀρχιερέα καὶ ἀπόστολον τῆς ὁμολογίας ἡμῶν [cf. Hbr 3:1] γεγενῆσθαι Χριστόν, ἢ θεία λέγει γραφή, προσκεκόμικε δὲ ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν ἑαυτὸν εἰς ὁσμὴν εὐωδίας τῷ Θεῷ [cf. Eph 5:2] καὶ πατρί· εἴ τις τοίνυν ἀρχιερέα καὶ ἀπόστολον ἡμῶν γεγενῆσθαι φησὶν οὐκ αὐτὸν τὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ λόγον, ὅτε γέγονε σὰρξ καὶ καθ' ἡμᾶς ἄνθρωπος, ἀλλ' ὡς ἕτερον παρ' αὐτὸν ἰδικῶς ἄνθρωπον ἐκ γυναικός· ἢ εἴ τις λέγει, καὶ ὑπὲρ ἑαυτοῦ προσενεγκεῖν αὐτὸν τὴν προσφορὰν, καὶ οὐχὶ δὴ μᾶλλον ὑπὲρ μόνων ἡμῶν (οὐ γὰρ ἂν ἐδεήθη προσφορᾶς ὁ μὴ εἰδὼς ἁμαρτίαν)· ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

262 ια'. Εἴ τις οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ τὴν τοῦ κυρίου σάρκα ζωοποιὸν εἶναι, καὶ ἰδίαν αὐτοῦ τοῦ ἐκ Θεοῦ πατρὸς λόγου, ἀλλ' ὡς ἑτέρου τινὸς παρ' αὐτὸν συνημμένον μὲν αὐτῷ κατὰ τὴν ἀξίαν ἢ γοῦν ὡς μόνην θείαν ἐνοίκησιν ἐσχηκότος, καὶ οὐχὶ δὴ μᾶλλον ζωοποιόν, ὡς ἔφημεν, ὅτι γέγονεν ἴδια τοῦ λόγου, τοῦ τὰ πάντα ζωογονεῖν ἰσχύοντος· ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

263 ιβ'. Εἴ τις οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ τὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγον παθόντα σαρκί, καὶ ἐσταυρωμένον σαρκί, καὶ θανάτου γευσάμενον σαρκί, γεγονότα τε πρωτότοκον ἐκ τῶν νεκρῶν, καθὸ ζωὴ τέ ἐστι καὶ ζωοποιὸς ὡς Θεός· ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

d. Judgment of the Council against Nestorius

Ed.: ACOe 1/II/II, 54; Latin translations: 1/II, 65; 1/III, 82f. / MaC 4:1212CD / HaC 1:1421DE.

Condemnation of Nestorianism

264 Πρὸς τοῖς ἄλλοις, μήτε ὑπακοῦσαι βουλευθέντος τοῦ τιμωτάτου Νεστορίου τῆ παρ' ἡμῶν κλήσει, μήτε μὴν τοὺς παρ' ἡμῶν ἀποσταλέντας ἀγιωτάτους καὶ θεοσεβεστάτους ἐπίσκοπους προσδεξαμένους, ἀναγκαιῶς ἐχωρήσαμεν ἐπὶ τὴν ἐξέτασιν τῶν δυσσεβηθέντων αὐτῷ καὶ φωράσαντες αὐτόν, ἕκ τε τῶν ἐπιστολῶν αὐτοῦ καὶ ἐκ τῶν συγγραμμάτων τῶν ἀναγνωσθέντων καὶ ἐκ τῶν ἀρτίως παρ'

8. If anyone dares to say that the man assumed ought be adored and glorified along with God the Word and that he should be called God conjointly as one (person) with another (for each time the word “with” is added, one is forced to think in this way) and does not instead venerate the Emmanuel with one adoration and glorify him with one praise, since the Word became flesh, let him be anathema.

9. If anyone says that the one Lord Jesus Christ was glorified by the Spirit, as if he made use of a power not his own, and that he received from (the Spirit) the power to counter unclean spirits and to work divine signs among men and does not say instead that the Spirit by which he worked these divine signs was his own, let him be anathema.

10. Christ, the divine Scripture says, has become “High Priest and Apostle of our confession” [Heb 3:1], and he offered himself for us as a fragrant sacrifice [cf. Eph 5:2] to God the Father. If anyone, therefore, says that it is not the Word of God himself who, when he became flesh and man like us, became High Priest and our Apostle, but another, distinct from him, who properly speaking is a man born of a woman, or if anyone says that he offered the sacrifice for himself and not for us only—for he who knew no sin had no need of sacrifice—let him be anathema.

11. If anyone does not confess that the flesh of the Lord is life-giving and that it is the flesh of the Word of God himself who is from the Father, but (regards it) as the flesh of someone other than him, united with him in dignity or possessing only divine indwelling, and if he does not confess that it is life-giving, as we have said, because it has become the flesh of the Word himself, who has the power to enliven all things, let him be anathema.

12. If anyone does not confess that the Word of God suffered in the flesh and was crucified in the flesh and that he tasted death in the flesh and became the firstborn from the dead, being Life and giver of life as God, let him be anathema.

Since the most honored Nestorius, among other things, has not been willing to obey our summons or even to receive the very holy and God-fearing bishops sent by us, we have been forced to proceed to the examination of the impious remarks made by him and, on the basis of his letters and of his writings that have been read and of the declarations made by him recently in this metropolis and confirmed by witnesses, we have αὐτοῦ ῥηθέντων κατὰ τήνδε τὴν μητρόπολιν καὶ προσμαρτυρηθέντων δυσσεβῶς φρονοῦντα καὶ κηρύττοντα, ἀναγκαίως κατεπειχθέντες ἀπὸ τε τῶν κανόνων καὶ ἐκ τῆς ἐπιστολῆς τοῦ ἁγιωτάτου πατρὸς ἡμῶν καὶ συλλειτουργοῦ Κελεστίνου τοῦ ἐπισκόπου τῆς Ῥωμαίων Ἐκκλησίας, δακρύσαντες πολλάκις ἐπὶ ταύτην τὴν σκυθρωπὴν κατ' αὐτοῦ ἐχωρήσαμεν ἀπόφασιν·

Ὁ βλασφημηθεὶς τοίνυν παρ' αὐτοῦ Κύριος ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς ὥρισε διὰ τῆς παρουσίας ἁγιωτάτης συνόδου, ἀλλότριον εἶναι τὸν αὐτὸν Νεστορίον τοῦ τε ἐπισκοπικοῦ ἀξιώματος καὶ παντὸς συλλόγου ἱερατικοῦ.

convicted him of thinking and preaching impiously, and we, being compelled of necessity by the canons and also by the letter of our most Holy Father and collaborator Celestine, Bishop of the Church of Rome, we have come, with many tears, to this sorrowful verdict against him:

Our Lord Jesus Christ, having been blasphemed by him, determines through the present most holy council that the same Nestorius is excluded from the dignity of the episcopate and from all participation in the priestly fellowship.

265–266: Session 6 of the Supporters of Cyril, July 22, 431

Ed.: ACOe 1/1/VII, 105f.; Latin translations: 1/II, 69f.; 1/III, 83f.; 1/III, 133 / MaC 4:1361D–1364B / HaC 1:1526D / COeD, 3rd ed., 65.

Preserving the Nicene Creed

... Ὁρισεν ἡ ἁγία σύνοδος, ἑτέραν πίστιν μηδενὶ ἐξεῖναι προφέρειν ἢ γοῦν συγγράφειν ἢ συντιθέναι παρὰ τὴν ὀρισθεῖσαν παρὰ τῶν ἁγίων πατέρων τῶν ἐν τῇ Νικαέων συνελθόντων σὺν ἁγίῳ πνεύματι...

... Εἰ φωραθεῖν τινες εἴτε ἐπίσκοποι εἴτε κληρικοί, εἴτε λαϊκοὶ ἢ φρονοῦντες ἢ διδάσκοντες τὰ ἐν τῇ προσκομισθείᾳ ἐκθέσει παρὰ Χαρισίου τοῦ πρεσβυτέρου περὶ τῆς ἐνανθρωπήσεως τοῦ μονογενοῦς υἱοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ,¹ ἢ γοῦν τὰ μιὰ καὶ διεστραμμένα Νεστορίου δόγματα ... ὑποκείσθωσαν τῇ ἀποφάσει τῆς ἁγίας ταύτης καὶ οἰκουμενικῆς συνόδου...

... The holy council decided that no one is allowed to profess or else to compose or devise a faith other than that defined by the holy Fathers gathered together at Nicaea with the Holy Spirit... 265

If any should be discovered, whether bishops, priests, or lay persons, who believe or teach the doctrines contained in the exposition of the priest Charisius concerning the Incarnation of the only begotten Son of God¹ or likewise the defiled and distorted doctrines of Nestorius ..., let them be subject to the decision of this holy and ecumenical council... 266

267–268: Session 7 of the Supporters of Cyril, August 31 (?), 431: Synodal Letter

Ed.: ACOe 1/1/III, 27₂₃–28₁₀; Latin translations: 1/IV, 243 / MaC 4:1471C–1473A / HaC 1:1621D–1624A / Bruns 1:24f. / COeD, 3rd ed., 63f.

Condemnation of Pelagianism

α'. Εἴτε ὁ μητροπολίτης τῆς ἐπαρχίας ἀποστατήσας τῆς ἁγίας καὶ οἰκουμενικῆς συνόδου ... τὰ Κελεστίου ἐφρόνησεν ἢ φρονήσει, οὗτος κατὰ τῶν τῆς ἐπαρχίας ἐπισκόπων διαπράττεσθαι τι οὐδαμῶς δύναται, πάσης ἐκκλησιαστικῆς κοινωνίας ἐντεῦθεν ἤδη ὑπὸ τῆς συνόδου ἐκβεβλημένος καὶ ἀνερέγητος ὑπάρχων...

δ'. Εἰ δέ τινες ἀποστατήσαιεν τῶν κληρικῶν, καὶ τολμήσαιεν ἢ κατ' ἰδίαν ἢ δημοσίᾳ τὰ Νεστορίου ἢ τὰ Κελεστίου φρονῆσαι, καὶ τούτους εἶναι καθηρημένους, ὑπὸ τῆς ἁγίας συνόδου δεδικαίωται.

1. If the metropolitan of a province, having distanced himself from this holy and ecumenical council, ... has embraced the doctrines of Caelestius or does so in the future, he can no longer act in any manner against the bishops of the province, since he is henceforth barred by the council from all ecclesiastical communion and is rendered completely ineffective... 267

4. But if some of the clergy rebel and dare to hold the opinions of Nestorius or Caelestius, either in private or in public, it has been judged by the holy council that they, too, are deposed. 268

*266 ¹ ACOe 1/1/VII, 97 / MaC 4:1348.

XYSTUS (SIXTUS) III: July 31, 432–August 19 (18?), 440

271-273: Formula of the Union between Cyril of Alexandria and the Bishops of the Church of Antioch, Spring 433

By means of this formula of union, proposed by Bishop John of Antioch, speaking on behalf of the Orientals, the christological controversies, which had continued since the Council of Ephesus, were settled. The text is found in three documents: [A'] John of Antioch, letter Πρώην ἐκ θεοπείματος to Cyril of Alexandria; [B'] Cyril of Alexandria, letter Ἐὐφραινέσθωσαν οἱ οὐρανοὶ to John of Antioch; [C'] John of Antioch, letter Ἐπὶ καλῶ to Pope Sixtus III. The pope congratulated both on the union. An explicit approval of the formula does not exist (cf. letter of September 17, 433, published in ACOe 1/II, 107, 108; cf. JR 391f.).

Ed.: ACOe 1/II/IV, 8f.; Latin translation 1/II, 103 [= A']; 1/II/IV, 17; Latin translation 1/II, 104f. [= B']; 1/II/VII, 159 (Greek only) [= C'] / PG 77:172B-173A [= A', = Cyril, letter 38]; 77, 177B [= B', = letter 39] / MaC 5:292A-C [= A']; 5:304E-305B [= B'] / Hn § 170 / HaC 1:169E [= A']; 1:704AB [= B']. [C' is missing in PG, MaC, HaC].

The Two Natures in Christ

271 Περὶ δὲ τῆς θεοτόκου παρθένου ὅπως καὶ φρονοῦμεν καὶ λέγομεν, τοῦ τε τρόπου τῆς ἐνανθρωπήσεως τοῦ υἱοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ, ἀναγκαίως, οὐκ ἐν προσθήκης μέρει, ἀλλ' ἐν πληροφορίας εἶδει, ὡς ἄνωθεν ἐκ τε τῶν θείων γραφῶν ἐκ τε τῆς παραδόσεως τῶν ἁγίων πατέρων παρεληφότες ἐσχίκαμεν, διὰ βραχείων ἐροῦμεν, οὐδὲν τὸ σύνολον προστιθέντες τῇ τῶν ἁγίων πατέρων τῶν ἐν Νικαίᾳ ἐκτεθείῃ πίστει. Ὡς γὰρ ἔφθημεν εἰρηκότες, πρὸς πᾶσαν ἐξαρκεῖ καὶ εὐσεβείας γνῶσιν καὶ πάσης αἰρετικῆς κακοδοξίας ἀποκήρυξιν. Ἐροῦμεν δὲ οὐ κατατολμῶντες τῶν ἀνεφίκτων, ἀλλὰ τῇ ὁμολογίᾳ τῆς οἰκειᾶς ἀσθενείας ἀποκλείοντες τοῖς ἐπιφύεσθαι βουλομένοις, ἐν οἷς τὰ ὑπὲρ ἀνθρώπων διασκεπτόμεθα.

In regard to the way in which we both think and speak about the Virgin Mother of God, and also about the manner of the Incarnation of the Son of God, we shall give a necessarily brief summary, not as if adding anything, but in the sense of a full explanation, such as we have received from the beginning from the divine Scriptures and also from the tradition of the holy Fathers, adding nothing at all to the faith set forth by the holy Fathers at Nicaea. For, as we have already said, that is sufficient both for a knowledge of the true faith and for the refutation of any heretical errors. But we shall speak, not as if we were making an assault upon the unattainable, but, by an acknowledgment of our own weakness, deflecting those who wish to assail us over the (terms) with which we discuss superhuman matters.

272 Ὁμολογοῦμεν τοιγαροῦν τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν τὸν υἱὸν τοῦ θεοῦ τὸν μονογενῆ, θεὸν τέλειον καὶ ἄνθρωπον τέλειον ἐκ ψυχῆς λογικῆς καὶ σώματος, πρὸ αἰώνων μὲν ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς γεννηθέντα κατὰ τὴν θεότητα, ἐπ' ἐσχάτου δὲ τῶν ἡμερῶν τὸν αὐτὸν δι' ἡμᾶς καὶ διὰ τὴν ἡμετέραν σωτηρίαν ἐκ Μαρίας τῆς παρθένου κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα, ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ τὸν αὐτὸν κατὰ τὴν θεότητα καὶ ὁμοούσιον ἡμῖν κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα. Δύο γὰρ φύσεων ἕνωσις γέγονεν· δι' ὃ ἕνα Χριστόν, ἕνα υἱόν, ἕνα κύριον ὁμολογοῦμεν. Κατὰ ταύτην τὴν τῆς ἀσυγγύτου ἐνώσεως ἔννοιαν ὁμολογοῦμεν τὴν ἁγίαν παρθένον θεοτόκον διὰ τὸν θεὸν λόγον σαρκωθῆναι καὶ ἐνανθρωπήσαι καὶ ἐξ αὐτῆς τῆς συλλήψεως ἐνώσαι ἑαυτῶ τὸν ἐξ αὐτῆς ληφθέντα ναόν.

Consequently, we acknowledge that our Lord Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son of God, perfect God and perfect man, composed of a rational soul and a body, was begotten of the Father before the ages in respect to his divinity, but in the final days the same was born for our sake and for our salvation of the Virgin Mary in respect to his humanity; he is of the same being as the Father in respect to his divinity and of the same being as we in respect to his humanity. For a union of two natures has taken place; due to it we acknowledge one Christ, one Son, one Lord. In accordance with this understanding of the unmixed union, we acknowledge that the holy Virgin is the God-bearer because the God-Word took flesh and became man, and, from his very conception, he made one with himself the temple taken from her.

273 Τὰς δὲ εὐαγγελικὰς καὶ ἀποστολικὰς περὶ τοῦ κυρίου φωνὰς ἴσμεν τοὺς θεολόγους ἄνδρας τὰς μὲν κοινοποιοῦντας ὡς ἐφ' ἐνὸς προσώπου, τὰς δὲ διαιροῦντας ὡς ἐπὶ δύο φύσεων, καὶ τὰς μὲν θεοπρεπεῖς κατὰ τὴν θεότητα τοῦ Χριστοῦ, τὰς δὲ ταπεινὰς κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα αὐτοῦ παραδιδόντας.

We know that in treating certain sayings of the Gospels and of the apostles in reference to the Lord, theologians regard some as shared, as if pertaining to a single Person, but distinguish others as if (pertaining) to two natures and apply the sayings appropriate to God to the divinity of Christ but the lowly ones to his humanity.

LEO I THE GREAT: September 29, 440–November 10, 461

280–281: Letter Ut nobis gratulationem to the Bishops of Campania, Picenum, and Tuscia, October 10, 443

Ed.: H. Wurm: Apoll 12 (1939): 90f. / PL 54:613A–614A (= letter 4) / BullCocq 1:29b / BullTau 1:47b / Gratian, Decretum, p. II, cs. 14, q. 4, c. 8 (others, 7) (Frdb 1:737). —Reg.: JR 402.

Usury

(c. 3) Nec hoc quoque praetereundum duximus, quosdam lucri turpis cupiditate captatos usurariam exercere pecuniam, et faenore velle ditescere, quod Nos non dicam in eos, qui sunt in clericali officio constituti, sed et in laicos cadere, qui christianos se dici cupiunt, condolemus. Quod vindicari acrius in eos qui fuerint confutati decernimus, ut omnis peccandi opportunitas adimatur.

(c. 4) Illud etiam duximus praemonendum, ut sicut non suo, ita nec alieno nomine aliquis clericorum exercere faenus adtemptet: indecens enim est, crimen suum commodis alienis impendere. Faenus autem hoc solum aspicere et exercere debemus, ut quod hic misericorditer tribuimus, ab eo Domino, qui multipliciter et in perpetuum mansura tribuet, recipere valeamus.

(Chap. 3) And We think that the following matter should not be passed over: certain persons, taken by a lust for base gain, are lending money out at interest and wish to become rich from the proceeds—a practice We regret has fallen (I am sorry to say) not only upon those constituted in clerical office, but also among the laity who wish to be called Christians. We decree that punishment be carried out more severely against those who are caught in the act so that any occasion of sin might be removed. 280

(Chap. 4) We also believe that a warning should be given that, just as any cleric must not attempt to exact interest on his own money, so let him not attempt to do so in anyone else's name: for it is disgraceful for him to commit his own crime for the advantage of others. Moreover, we ought to look for and work toward only that form of interest we are worthy to receive from the Lord, who will bestow everlasting blessings many times over for what we have granted out of mercy in this life. 281

282: Letter Quanta fraternitati to Bishop Anastasius of Thessalonica, 446 (?)

Ed.: PL 54:676AB (= letter 14) / BullCocq 1:32bf. / BullTau 1:53b–54a. —Reg.: JR 411.

Hierarchy and Monarchy of the Church

(c. 11) ... Connexio totius corporis unam sanitatem, unam pulchritudinem facit; et haec connexio totius quidem corporis unanimatem requirit, sed praecipue exigit concordiam sacerdotum. Quibus cum dignitas sit communis, non est tamen ordo generalis: quoniam et inter beatissimos apostolos in similitudine honoris fuit quaedam discretio potestatis; et cum omnium par esset electio, uni tamen datum est, ut ceteris praeemineret. De qua forma episcoporum quoque orta est distinctio, et magna ordinatione provisum est, ne omnes sibi omnia vindicarent, sed essent in singulis provinciis singuli, quorum inter fratres haberetur prima sententia, et rursus quidam in maioribus urbibus constituti sollicitudinem suscipere amplioem, per quos ad unam Petri sedem universalis Ecclesiae cura conflueret et nihil usquam a suo capite dissideret.

(Chap. 11) ... The cohesion of the whole body produces a single health, a single beauty; and this cohesion certainly requires unanimity of the whole body, but in particular it demands harmony among priests. And although they have a common dignity, (their) rank is not the same: because even among the most blessed apostles there was a certain distinction of power along with a similarity of honor; and although the selection of them all was the same, nevertheless, it was given to one of them to be preeminent over the rest. From this model there has also arisen a distinction among bishops, and provision has been made by a wise arrangement, so that all might not claim all things for themselves, but there would be individual (bishops) in individual provinces whose opinion would be regarded as primary among their brothers, and again certain ones established in major cities would undertake a fuller responsibility, through whom the universal care for the Church might flow together toward the one chair of Peter and might not in any place separate itself from its source. 282

283–286: Letter Quam laudabiliter to Bishop Turribius of Astorga, July 21, 447

The letter is a response to a lost writing of Bishop Tur[r]ibius of Astorga (Spain). KüA 118, 126, maintains that this letter may be a false one written only after the Synod of Braga, 563 (on the basis of the anathemas formulated there).

Ed.: BullCocq 1:33a–34b / BullTau 1:55a–57a / PL 54:679A–683C (= letter 15). —Reg.: JR 412.

Errors of the Priscillianists in General

283 [Impietas Priscillianistarum] tenebris se etiam paganitatis immersit, ut per magicarum artium profana secreta et mathematicorum vana mendacia religionis fidem morumque rationem in potestate daemonum et in effectu siderum collocarent. Quod si et credi liceat et doceri, nec virtutibus praemium nec vitiis poena debetur omniaque non solum humanarum legum, sed etiam divinarum constitutionum decreta solventur: quia neque de bonis neque de malis actibus ullum poterit esse iudicium, si in utramque partem fatalis necessitas motum mentis impellit, et quidquid ab hominibus agitur, non est hominum, sed astrorum....

Merito Patres nostri ... instanter egere, ut impius furor ab universa Ecclesia pelleretur: quando etiam mundi principes ita hanc sacrilegam amentiam detestati sunt, ut auctorem eius [scl. Priscillianum] cum plerisque discipulis legum publicarum ense prosternerent. Videbant enim omnem coniugiorum copulam solvi simulque divinum ius humanumque subverti, si huiusmodi hominibus usquam vivere cum tali professione licuisset. Profuit diu ista districtio ecclesiasticae lenitati, quae etsi sacerdotali contenta iudicio, cruentas refugit ultiones, severis tamen christianorum principum constitutionibus adiuvatur, dum ad spiritale nonnumquam recurrit remedium, qui timent corporale supplicium....

[The impiety of the Priscillianists] has sunk even into the darkness of paganism, with the result that, through the profane and secret practices of the magical arts and the hollow deceptions of astrologers, they base religious faith and moral laws upon the power of demons and the influence of the stars. But if it were permitted for this to be believed and taught, no reward would be owed to virtues or punishment to vices, and all rules not only of human laws but also of divine ordinances would be dissolved; for it would be impossible for there to be any judgment in regard either to good acts or to bad ones if a fated necessity compelled the movement of the mind in the two directions and if whatever is done by men comes, not from men, but from the stars....

With good reason our fathers ... took decisive action, so that (this) impious delusion might be driven from the whole Church: even the princes of this world have despised this sacrilegious madness so much that they struck down with the sword of the public laws its originator [Priscillian] with most of his followers. For they saw that the bond of matrimony would be entirely dissolved and that divine law and human law would likewise be overturned if men of this sort were permitted to live anywhere with such a creed. For a long time that severity was of benefit to the mildness of the Church, which, even if she is content with the judgments of her priests and avoids bloody punishments, yet is helped by the severe regulations of Christian rulers, inasmuch as those who fear bodily punishment sometimes have recourse to spiritual remedies....

The Divine Trinity, against the Modalists

284 (c. 1) Primo itaque capitulo demonstratur, quam impie sentiant de Trinitate divina, qui et Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti unam atque eandem asserunt esse personam, tamquam idem Deus nunc Pater, nunc Filius, nunc Spiritus Sanctus nominetur; nec alius sit qui genuit, alius qui genitus est, alius qui de utroque processit; sed singularis unitas in tribus quidem vocabulis, sed non in tribus sit accipienda personis. Quod blasphemiae genus de Sabellii opinione sumpserunt, cuius discipuli etiam Patripassiani merito nuncupantur; quia si ipse est Filius qui et Pater, crux Filii Patris est passio; et quidquid in forma servi Filius Patri oboediendo sustinuit, totum in se Pater ipse suscepit.

(Chap. 1) And so it is pointed out in the first chapter how impiously those persons think about the divine Trinity who assert that there is one and the same Person consisting of the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, as if the same God were now called Father, now Son, now Holy Spirit; and that there is not one who begets, another who is begotten, another who proceeds from both; but that the singular unity must be accepted in three names, to be sure, but not in three Persons. And they have derived this sort of blasphemy from the opinion of Sabellius, whose disciples are with justification also called "Patripassionists"; because if the Son is the same as the Father, the Cross of the Son is the suffering of the Father; and whatever the Son endured in the likeness of a slave out of obedience to the Father, the Father assimilated all of it himself.

Quod catholicae fidei sine ambiguitate contrarium est, quae Trinitatem deitatis sic homousion confitetur, ut Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum sine confusione indivisos, sine tempore sempiternos, sine differentia credat aequales: quia unitatem in trinitate non eadem persona, sed eadem implet essentia. . . .

This is without any doubt contrary to the Catholic faith, which acknowledges the Trinity of the Godhead to be of the same being in such a way that it believes the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit (are) undivided without confusion, are everlasting without time, are equal without difference: because in the Trinity it is not the same person but the same name that constitutes unity. . . .

The Nature of the Human Soul

(c. 5) Quinto capitulo refertur, quod animam hominis divinae asserant esse substantiae, nec a natura Creatoris sui condicionis nostrae distare naturam. Quam impietatem . . . catholica fides damnat: sciens nullam tam sublimem tamque praecipuam esse facturam, cui Deus ipsa natura sit. Quod enim de ipso est, id est quod ipse, neque id aliud est quam Filius et Spiritus Sanctus. Praeter hanc autem summae Trinitatis unam consubstantialiam et sempiternam atque incommutabilem deitatem nihil omnino creaturarum est, quod non in exordio sui ex nihilo creatum sit. . . .

(Chap. 5) In the fifth chapter it is related that they assert that the soul of man is of the divine substance and that the nature of our condition does not differ from the nature of its Creator. The Catholic faith condemns . . . this impiety, knowing that there is no creature so sublime and so excellent that God is its very nature. For that which is of him is that which he himself is, and this is no other than the Son and the Holy Spirit. Moreover, apart from this one consubstantial and everlasting and unchangeable Godhead of the most high Trinity, there is no created being whatsoever that was not in its origin created from nothing. . . . 285

Nemo hominum veritas, nemo sapientia, nemo iustitia est; sed multi participes sunt veritatis et sapientiae atque iustitiae. Solus autem Deus nullius participatione indigus est: de quo quidquid digne utcumque sentitur, non qualitas est, sed essentia. Incommutabili enim nihil accedit, nihil deperit: quia esse illi quod est sempiternum, semper est proprium. Unde in se manens innovat omnia, et nihil accipit, quod ipse non dederit.

No one among men is truth, none is wisdom, none is justice; but there are many who have a share in truth and wisdom and justice. However, God alone has no need of a share in anything; in his case, whatever is believed of him in a worthy manner represents, not a quality, but his essence. For nothing is added to the unchangeable; nothing is taken away; because being is always a property of that which is everlasting. Whence, abiding in himself, he renews everything and receives nothing that he himself has not given.

The Nature of the Devil

(c. 6) Sexta annotatio indicat eos dicere, quod diabolus numquam fuerit bonus, nec natura eius opificium Dei sit, sed eum ex chao et tenebris emersisse: quia scilicet nullum sui habeat auctorem, sed omnis mali ipse sit principium atque substantia: cum fides vera . . . omnium creaturarum sive spiritualium sive corporalium bonam confiteatur substantiam, et mali nullam esse naturam: quia Deus, qui universitatis est conditor, nihil non bonum fecit. Unde et diabolus bonus esset, si in eo quod factus est permaneret. Sed quia naturali excellentia male usus est “et in veritate non stetit” [Io 8:44], non in contrariam transiit substantiam, sed a summo bono, cui debuit adhaerere, descivit, sicut ipsi qui talia asserunt, a veris in falsa prouunt et naturam in eo arguunt, in quo sponte delinquant ac pro sua voluntaria perversitate damnantur. Quod utique in ipsis malum erit, et ipsum malum non erit substantia, sed poena substantiae.

(Chap. 6) The sixth section indicates that they say that the devil was never good and that his nature was not the handiwork of God, but that he emerged from chaos and darkness; because, of course, he had no one who made him but is himself the beginning and substance of all evil: although the true faith . . . professes that the substance of all natures, whether spiritual or bodily, is good and that there is no nature of evil, because God, who is the establisher of the universe, made nothing that was not good. Whence even the devil would be good if he had remained in that state in which he was made. But because he made bad use of his natural excellence “and did not remain in the truth” [Jn 8:44], he was not transformed into an opposite substance, but he fell away from the supreme Good, to which he was obligated to cling, just as those very persons who make such claims rush away from the truth into falsehoods and blame their nature for their having gone astray intentionally and are damned for their own voluntary perversity. And evil will certainly be upon them, and the evil itself will not be a substance, but the punishment applied to a substance. 286

290–295: Letter Lectis dilectionis tuae to Bishop Flavian of Constantinople (Tomus [I] Leonis), June 13, 449

In the christological controversies of the ancient Church, this letter is regarded as an important and frequently cited doctrinal document. Sometimes it is called Tomus I in order to be distinguished from the letter (165) to Emperor Leo (cf. *317f.), which is designated Tomus II.

Ed.: C. Silva Tarouca, Sancti Leonis Magni Tomus ad Flavianum episcopum Constantinopolitanum, TD ser. theol. 9 (Rome, 1932), 21–28 / ACOe 2/II/1, 25₈–29 / PL 54:757B–771A (= letter 28) / BullTau appendix 1:27a–31b. —Reg.: JR 423.

The Incarnation of the Word

290 (c. 2) Nesciens igitur [Eutyches], quid deberet de Verbi Dei incarnatione sentire . . . , illum saltem communem et indiscretam confessionem sollicito recepisset auditu, qua fidelium universitas profitetur credere se “in Deum Patrem omnipotentem et in Christum Iesum Filium eius unicum Dominum nostrum, qui natus est de Spiritu Sancto et Maria virgine” [Symb. Apostol.: *12]. . . .

Cum enim Deus et omnipotens Pater creditur, consempternus eidem Filius demonstratur; in nullo a Patre differens, quia de Deo Deus; de Omnipotente omnipotens; de Aeterno natus est coaeternus; non posterior tempore, non inferior potestate, non dissimilis gloria, non divisus essentia.

291 Idem vero sempiterni Genitoris unigenitus sempiternus “natus est de Spiritu Sancto et Maria virgine”. Quae nativitas temporalis illi nativitati divinae et sempiternae nihil minuit, nihil contulit, sed totum se reparando homini qui erat deceptus inpendit, ut et mortem vinceret et diabolus qui mortis habebat imperium sua virtute destrueret. Non enim possemus superare peccati et mortis auctorem, nisi naturam nostram ille susciperet et suam faceret, quem nec peccatum contaminare nec mors potuit detinere.

Conceptus quippe est de Spiritu Sancto intra uterum virginis matris, quae illum ita salva virginitate edidit, quemadmodum salva virginitate concepit. . . .

292 An forte ideo [Eutyches] putavit Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum non nostrae esse naturae, quia missus ad beatam Mariam angelus ait: “Spiritus Sanctus superveniet in te, et virtus Altissimi obumbrabit tibi, ideoque quod nascitur ex te sanctum vocabitur Filius Dei” [Lc 1:35]. Ut quia conceptus virginis divini fuit operis, non de natura concipientis fuerit caro concepti. Sed non ita intelligenda est illa generatio singulariter mirabilis et mirabiliter singularis, ut per novitatem creationis proprietas remota sit generis: fecunditatem virgini Sanctus Spiritus dedit, veritas autem corporis sumpta de corpore est, et “aedificante sibi Sapientia domum” [Prv 9:1] “Verbum caro factum est, et habitavit in nobis” [Io 1:14], hoc est, (Chap. 2) [Eutyches], then, not knowing what he ought to believe about the Incarnation of the Word of God . . . , should at least have accepted with attentive ears that commonly held and undifferentiated profession of faith by which the totality of the faithful acknowledge that they believe “in God the Father almighty, and in Jesus Christ, his only Son, our Lord, who was born of the Holy Spirit and the Virgin Mary” [Apostles’ Creed: *12]. . . .

For when one believes that the Father is God and almighty, the Son is shown to be co-eternal with him: differing from the Father in no respect, because he is God from God, Almighty from Almighty; since he was born from the Eternal One, he is co-eternal, not subsequent to him in time, not inferior in power, not dissimilar in glory, not different in essence.

But this same eternal only begotten Son of the eternal Father “was born of the Holy Spirit and the Virgin Mary”. And this birth in time did not at all diminish that divine and everlasting birth, and it added nothing to it; but it took place entirely for the redemption of man, who had been deceived, so that he might both overcome death and by his strength defeat the devil, who had control over death. For we would not be able to overcome the originator of sin and death if the one whose nature could neither be stained by sin nor grasped by death had not taken on our nature and made it his own.

For he was conceived by the Holy Spirit within the womb of the Virgin Mother, who gave birth to him in such a way that her virginity was undiminished, just as she had conceived him with her virginity undiminished. . . .

But perhaps [Eutyches] thought that our Lord Jesus Christ was not of our nature because the angel sent to Blessed Mary said: “The Holy Spirit will come upon you, and the power of the Most High will overshadow you; therefore the child to be born will be called holy, the Son of God” [Lk 1:35], as if to say that, because the conception of the Virgin was a result of divine action, the flesh of the one conceived was not of the nature of the one conceiving. But that begetting—uniquely miraculous and miraculously unique—must not be understood to mean that what is uniquely proper to our race was removed by the novelty of the creation: the Holy Spirit bestowed fertility on the Virgin, but the reality of a body in ea carne, quam sumpsit ex homine, et quam spiritus vitae rationalis animavit.

(c. 3) Salva igitur proprietate utriusque naturae et in unam coeunte personam, suscepta est a maiestate humilitas, a virtute infirmitas, ab aeternitate mortalitas, et ad resolvendum condicionis nostrae debitum natura inviolabilis naturae est unita passibili: ut, quod nostris remediis congruebat, unus atque idem “mediator Dei et hominum, homo Christus Iesus” [1 Tim 2:5] et mori posset ex uno, et mori non ex altero.¹ In integra ergo veri hominis perfecta que natura verus natus est Deus, totus in suis, totus in nostris—nostra autem dicimus quae in nobis ab initio Creator condidit et quae reparanda suscepit; nam illa, quae deceptor intulit et homo deceptus admisit, nullum habuerunt in salvatore vestigium. . . .

Adsumpsit formam servi sine sorde peccati, humana augens, divina non minuens, quia exinanitio illa, quae se invisibilis visibilem praebuit . . . , inclinatio fuit miserationis, non defectio potestatis.²

(c. 4) Ingreditur ergo haec mundi infirma Filius Dei, de caelesti sede descendens et a paterna gloria non recedens, novo ordine, nova nativitate generatus. Novo ordine: quia invisibilis in suis, visibilis est factus in nostris, incomprehensibilis voluit comprehendi; ante tempora manens esse coepit ex tempore; universitatis Dominus servilem formam obumbrata maiestatis suae immensitate suscepit; impassibilis Deus non dedignatus est homo esse passibilis et immortalis mortis legibus subiacere.¹ Nova autem nativitate generatus: quia inviolata virginitas concupiscentiam nescivit, carnis materiam ministravit.² Assumpta est de matre Domini natura, non culpa;³ nec in Domino Iesu Christo, ex utero virginis genito, quia nativitas est mirabilis, ideo nostri est natura dissimilis. Qui enim verus est Deus, idem verus est homo, et nullum est in hac unitate mendacium,⁴ dum invicem sunt et humilitas hominis et altitudo divinitatis. Sicut enim Deus non mutatur miseratione, ita homo non consumitur dignitate. Agit enim utraque forma cum alterius communione quod proprium est: Verbo scilicet was taken from her body, and “Wisdom was building up a house for you” [Prov 9:1]. “The Word became flesh and dwelt among us” [Jn 1:14], that is, in the flesh that he took from a human being and which he animated with the spirit of rational life.

(Chap. 3) The character of each nature, therefore, being preserved and united in one person, humility was assumed by majesty, weakness by strength, mortality by eternity, and, in order to pay the debt of our condition, the inviolable nature was united to a nature subject to suffering: so that, as was fitting for our healing, one and the same “mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus” [1 Tim 2:5], could die in one nature and not die in the other.¹ Therefore, the true God was born in the complete and perfect nature of true man, complete in his nature and complete in ours—by “ours”, however, we mean that which the Creator formed in us from the beginning and which he assumed in order to restore; as for those things that the deceiver introduced and that deceived man allowed, they had no trace in the Savior. . . .

He assumed the form of a servant without the defilement of sin, enriching the human without diminishing the divine, because that self-emptying, through which the invisible rendered himself visible . . . , was an inclination of mercy, not a defect of power.²

(Chap. 4) The Son of God, therefore, descending 294 from his heavenly throne, enters into the infirmities of this world; and, not leaving the Father’s glory, he is generated in a new order and a new birth. In a new order, because invisible in his own, he was made visible in ours; being incomprehensible, he wished to be comprehended; while remaining prior to time, he began to exist in time; the Lord of the universe, concealing the immensity of his majesty, assumed the form of a slave; the impassible God did not disdain to be man subject to suffering, nor the Immortal One to be subject to the laws of death.¹ He is generated, however, by a new birth: because an inviolate virginity, not knowing concupiscence, has supplied the matter of the flesh.² From the Mother of the Lord, nature, not guilt, was assumed.³ Nor does the Lord Jesus Christ, born from the womb of a virgin, have a nature different from ours just because his birth was miraculous. For he who is true God is likewise true man, and there is no falsehood in this unity,⁴ in which the lowliness of man and the height of divinity coincide. God is not changed

*293 ¹ “Salva igitur . . . ex altero” (The character of each nature . . . in the other) = homily 21, 2 (PL 54:192A); cf. Tertullian, Adversus Praxean 27, 11 (E. Kroymann and E. Evans: CpChL 2 [1954]: 1199 / CSEL 47:282j).

² “In integro . . . defectio potestatis” (Therefore, the true God . . . defect of power) = homily 23, 2 (PL 54:201AB).

*294 ¹ “Ingreditur . . . subiacere” (The Son of God, therefore . . . the laws of death) = homily 22, 2 (PL 54:195A).

² Cf. ibid., 3 (ibid., 196C).

³ Cf. ibid. (196CD).

⁴ “Christo . . . mendacium” (Christ . . . falsehood in this unity) = homily 24, 3 (PL 54:205C).

operante quod Verbi est, et carne exsequente quod carnis est. Unum horum coruscat miraculis, aliud succumbit iniuriis. Et sicut Verbum ab aequalitate paternae gloriae non recedit, ita caro naturam nostri generis non relinquit.

by his compassion, nor is man swallowed up by such dignity. For each nature does what is proper to each in communion with the other: the Word does what pertains to the Word, and the flesh to what pertains to the flesh. One shines forth with miracles; the other succumbs to injuries. And just as the Word does not depart from equality with the Father's glory, just so the flesh does not abandon the nature of our race.

295 ... Non eiusdem naturae est dicere: "Ego et Pater unum sumus" [Io 10:30] et dicere: "Pater maior me est" [Io 14:28]. Quamvis enim in Domino Iesu Christo Dei et hominis una persona sit, aliud tamen est, unde in utroque communis est contumelia, aliud, unde communis est gloria. De nostro enim illi est minor Patre humanitas, de Patre illi aequalis cum Patre divinitas.

... To say "I and the Father are one" [Jn 10:30] and to say "The Father is greater than I" [Jn 14:28] is not by any means of the same nature. For although in the Lord Jesus Christ the Person of God and of man is one, nevertheless, it is due to the one (nature) that injury is common to both, (and) due to the other that glory is common. For from what is ours he has humanity, which is less than the Father; from the Father, his divinity, which is equal to the Father.

296–299: Letter Licet per nostros to Julianus of Cos, June 13, 449

Ed.: C. Silva Tarouca, Sancti Leonis Magni Epistulae contra Eutyichis haeresim, TD ser. theol. 15 (Rome, 1934), 14_{12–15}, 15_{39–17}₁₀₅ / ACOe 2/IV, 6_{15–17}, 7_{6–8}₂₂ / BullTau appendix 1:41b, 42b–44a / PL 54:803A–805A, 805B–809A (= letter 35). —Reg.: JR 429.

The Incarnation of the Son of God

296 (c. 1) ... Sancti Spiritus in Nobis atque in vobis una est eruditio eademque doctrina, quam quisque non recipit, non est membrum corporis Christi, nec potest eo capite gloriari, in quo naturam suam asserit non haberi...

(Chap. 1) ... In Us and in you there is one instruction and an identical doctrine about the Holy Spirit; and whoever does not accept this is not a member of the body of Christ and is not able to boast of this Head, in whom, as he affirms, his nature does not subsist...

297 (c. 2) ... Quod deitatis est, caro non minuit; quod carnis est, deitas non peremit. Idem enim et sempiternus ex Patre et temporalis ex matre, in sua virtute inviolabilis, in nostra infirmitate passibilis, in deitate Trinitatis cum Patre et Spiritu Sancto unius eiusdemque naturae, in susceptione autem hominis non unius substantiae, sed unius eiusdemque personae, ut idem esset dives in paupertate, omnipotens in abiectioe, impassibilis in supplicio, immortalis in morte. Nec enim Verbum aut in carnem aut in animam aliqua sui parte conversum est, cum simplex et incommutabilis natura deitatis tota in sua sit semper essentia, nec damnum sui recipiens nec augmentum et sic adsumptam naturam beatificans, ut glorificata in glorificante permaneat. Cur autem inconveniens aut impossibile videatur, ut Verbum et caro atque anima unus Iesus Christus et unus Dei hominisque sit Filius, si caro et anima, quae dissimilium naturarum sunt, unam faciunt etiam sine Verbi incarnatione personam? ...

(Chap. 2) ... The flesh does not diminish that which is of the Godhead; the Godhead does not abolish that which is of the flesh. For the same (one) was both everlasting from the Father and temporal from the Mother, inviolable in his strength and subject to suffering in our weakness; in the Godhead of the Trinity he was of one and the same nature as the Father and the Holy Spirit, but in becoming incarnate he was not of one substance, but of one and the same Person, so that the same one (might be) rich in poverty, almighty in abasement, incapable of suffering in torture, immortal in death. For the Word was not transformed in some portion of himself either into flesh or into a soul, since the simple and unchangeable nature of the Godhead is always entire in its essence, experiencing neither any diminution nor any increase of itself and making blessed the assumed nature insofar as it remains glorified in the one who glorifies it. Moreover, why should it seem unreasonable or impossible that Word and flesh and spirit should be the one Jesus Christ and the one Son of God and of man, if flesh and spirit, which are of dissimilar natures, constitute one person even without the Incarnation of the Word? ...

Nec Verbum igitur in carnem nec in Verbum caro mutata est, sed utrumque in uno manet et unus in utroque

Therefore, the Word was not changed into flesh, nor was flesh changed into the Word, but both remain in one, est, non diversitate divisus, non permixtione confusus, nec alter ex Patre, alter ex matre, sed idem aliter ex Patre ante omne principium, aliter de matre in fine saeculorum, ut esset “mediator Dei et hominum homo Iesus Christus”, [1 Tim 2:5], in quo habitaret “plenitudo divinitatis corporaliter” [Col 2:9], quia adsumpti, non adsumptis profectio est, quod “Deus illum exaltavit . . .” [Phil 2:9–11].

(c. 3) . . . Arbitror [Eutychem] talia loquentem [scl. ante incarnationem duas in Christo fuisse naturas, post incarnationem autem unam] hoc habere persuasum, quod anima quam Salvator adsumpsit, prius in caelis sit commorata quam de Maria virgine nasceretur, eamque sibi Verbum in utero copularit. Sed hoc catholicae mentes auresque non tolerant, quia nihil secum Dominus de caelo veniens nostrae condicionis exhibuit. Nec animam enim quae anterior exstitisset, nec carnem quae non materni corporis esset, accepit: Natura quippe nostra non sic adsumpta est, ut prius creata post adsumeretur, sed ut ipsa adsumptione crearetur. Unde quod in Origene merito damnatum est [cf. *209], qui animarum, antequam corporibus insererentur, non solum vitas, sed et diversas fuisse asseruit actiones, necesse est ut etiam in isto, nisi maluerit sententiam abdicare, plectatur.

Nativitas enim Domini secundum carnem, quamvis habeat quaedam propria, quibus humanae condicionis initia transcendat, sive quod solus [ex Sancto Spiritu] ab inviolata virgine sine concupiscentia est conceptus et natus, sive quod ita visceribus matris est editus, ut et fecunditas pareret et virginitas permaneret, non alterius tamen naturae erat eius caro quam nostrae, nec alio illi quam ceteris hominibus anima est inspirata principio, quae excelleret non diversitate generis, sed sublimitate virtutis. Nihil enim carnis suae habebat adversum, nec discordia desideriorum gignebat compugnantiam voluntatum, sensus corporei vigeabant sine lege peccati, et veritas affectionum sub moderamine deitatis et mentis nec temptabatur illecebris nec cedebat iniuriis. Verus homo vero unitus est Deo, nec secundum existentem prius animam deductus e caelo nec secundum carnem creatus ex nihilo, eandem gerens in Verbi deitate personam et tenens communem nobiscum in corpore animaque naturam. Non enim esset Dei hominumque mediator, nisi idem Deus idemque homo in utroque et unus esset et verus.

and there is one in both, not divided by differentiation, not blended by being mixed together, not one Person from the Father and another from the Mother, but the same Person, in one way from the Father before all beginning, in another way from the Mother at the end of the ages, so that he might be “the mediator between God and men, the man Jesus Christ” [1 Tim 2:5], in whom “the whole fullness of deity dwells bodily” [Col 2:9], because it is an elevation of that which is taken up, not of the One who takes it up, if “God has highly exalted him . . .” [Phil 2:9–11].

(Chap. 3) . . . It is my opinion that, when [Eutyches] 298 says things of this sort [i.e., that there were two natures in Christ before the Incarnation, but one nature after the Incarnation], he is convinced that the soul our Savior assumed dwelled in heaven before it was born of the Virgin Mary and that the Word united it to himself in her womb. But Catholic minds and ears do not tolerate this, because the Lord, when he came from heaven, exhibited nothing of our (human) condition at all. For he assumed neither a soul that had existed previously nor flesh that was not of the body of the Mother. For our nature was not assumed in such a way that it was first created and then assumed, but (in such a way) that it was created by that very act of assumption. Consequently, it is necessary that what was justly condemned in the case of Origen [cf. *209], who asserted that not merely life but also various actions emanated from souls before they were placed into bodies, should also be corrected in this case, unless he prefers to abandon his view.

For, although the birth of the Lord according to the 299 flesh has certain characteristics in which it transcends the beginnings of the human condition, whether because he alone was conceived and born from the inviolate Virgin [by the Holy Spirit] without concupiscentia or because he was brought forth from the womb of the Mother in such a way that her fertility gave birth while her virginity remained, nevertheless, his flesh was not of another nature than our own, and his soul was not breathed into him in any other beginning than that of other men, a soul that excelled, not due to a difference in kind, but due to the loftiness of virtue. For he had nothing that was in opposition to his flesh, and no discord of desire produced a conflict of wills; his bodily senses were strengthened without the dominance of sin, and the truth of his feelings, under the guidance of his Godhead and the Spirit, was not tempted by enticements, nor did it give way in the face of abuse. True man was united to true God; he was neither brought down from heaven in respect to a previously existing soul, nor was he created from nothing in respect to his flesh. He was the very same Person in the Godhead of the Word and had a common nature with us in body and soul. For he would not be the Mediator between God and men if the same one, at once God and man, were not both one and also truly in both.

Council of CHALCEDON (Fourth Ecumenical): October 8–early November 451

This council, convoked by Emperor Marcianus, brings the christological controversies of the early Church to a certain end. It rejects Monophysitism. Eutyches, an archimandrite (monk) of Constantinople, had already been condemned in November 448 by a local synod of Constantinople under Patriarch Flavian. In the so-called “Robber Council” of Ephesus (latrocinium: Leo I [ACoE 2/IV, 514]) in August 449, he was rehabilitated. Theodoret of Cyrus, because of his anti-Cyrrillian writings, and Ibas of Edessa, because of his letter to Maris, the Persian, were deposed as “Nestorians”. These were recognized as orthodox by the Council of Chalcedon (October 26–27; sessions 9–11 [others 8–10]). Later, their orthodoxy was placed in question again during the dispute over the “Three Chapters” and also in regard to some formulations of the Creed (cf. *436f., 472, and Liber Diurnus, formula 84, Codex Vaticanus = formula 65, Codex Claromontanus (Clermont-Ferrand) = formula 60, Codex Ambrosianus: ed. by H. Foerster [Bern, 1958], 153, 228, 345; in this formula, their condemnation is attributed, not to the Second Council of Constantinople [A.D. 553], but erroneously to the Council of Chalcedon). The decrees of the council were confirmed by Pope Leo I in his letters (114–17 in Ballerini, PL 54:1027–39 = Collectio Grimanica, letter 64, 61–63, ACoE 2/IV, 70, 67–69; JR 490–93) of March 21, 453, except for the resolution concerning the privileges of the Patriarchal See of Constantinople. The Council of Chalcedon had revived can. 3 of the First Council of Constantinople (“can. 28 of Chalcedon”).

300–303: Session 5, October 22, 451: The Chalcedonian Creed

Ed.: ACoE 2/III, 128–30; Latin translation: 2/III/II, 136–38 / MaC 7:112C–116D / HaC 2:453D–456D / Hn § 146 / Ltzm 35f. / COED, 3rd ed., 84–87.

The Two Natures in Christ

300 [Prooemium definitionis. Praemissis duobus symbolis Nicaeno et Constantino-politano sequitur:] Ἦρκει μὲν οὖν εἰς ἐντελεῖα τῆς εὐσεβείας ἐπίγνωσιν τε καὶ βεβαίωσιν τὸ σοφὸν καὶ σωτήριον τοῦτο τῆς θείας χάριτος σύμβολον· περὶ τε γὰρ τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ τοῦ υἱοῦ καὶ τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος ἐκδιδάσκει τὸ τέλειον καὶ τοῦ κυρίου τὴν ἐνανθρώπησιν τοῖς πιστῶς δεχομένοις παρίστησιν. Ἄλλ’ ἐπειδήπερ οἱ τῆς ἀληθείας ἀθετεῖν ἐπιχειροῦντες τὸ κήρυγμα διὰ τῶν οικειῶν αἰρέσεων τὰς κενοφωνίας ἀπέτεκον, οἱ μὲν...τὴν θεοτόκος ἐπὶ τῆς παρθένου φωνὴν ἀπαρνούμενοι, οἱ δὲ σύγχυσιν καὶ κρᾶσιν εἰσάγοντες καὶ μίαν εἶναι φύσιν τῆς σαρκὸς καὶ τῆς θεότητος ἀνοήτως ἀναπλάττοντες καὶ παθητὴν τοῦ μονογενοῦς τὴν θεῖαν φύσιν τῇ συγχύσει τερατευόμενοι, διὰ τοῦτο πᾶσαν αὐτοῖς ἀποκλείσαι κατὰ τῆς ἀληθείας μηχανὴν βουλομένη ἢ παροῦσα νῦν αὕτη ἁγία καὶ μεγάλη καὶ οἰκουμένη συνόδος τὸ τοῦ κηρύγματος ἄνωθεν ἀσάλευτον ἐκδιδάσκουσα ὥρισεν προηγουμένως τῶν τιῆ [= τριακοσίων ὀκτωκαίδεκα] ἁγίων πατέρων τὴν πίστιν μένειν ἀπαρεγχείρητον.

Καὶ διὰ μὲν τοὺς τῷ πνεύματι τῷ ἁγίῳ μαχομένους τὴν χρόνους ὑστερον παρὰ τῶν ἐπὶ τῆς βασιλευούσης πόλεως ρν’ [= ἑκατὸν πενήκοντα] συναλεθόντων πατέρων περὶ τῆς τοῦ πνεύματος οὐσίας παραδοθεῖσαν διδασκαλίαν κυροῦ, ἦν ἐκεῖνοι πᾶσιν ἐγνώρισαν οὐχ ὡς τι λείπον τοῖς προλαβοῦσιν ἐπεισάγοντες, ἀλλὰ τὴν περὶ τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος αὐτῶν ἔννοιαν κατὰ τῶν τὴν αὐτοῦ δεσποτείαν ἀθετεῖν πειρωμένων γραφικαῖς μαρτυρίαῖς τρανώσαντες· διὰ δὲ τοὺς τὸ τῆς οἰκονομίας παραφθεῖρειν ἐπιχειροῦντας μυστήριον καὶ ψιλὸν ἄνθρωπον εἶναι τὸν ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας παρθένου τεχθέντα Μαρίαῖς ἀναιδῶς ληρωδοῦντάς τὰς τοῦ μακαρίου Κυρίλλου τοῦ τῆς Ἀλεξανδρέων ἐκκλησίας γενομένου ποιμένους

[Introduction to the definition. After first stating the two creeds of Nicaea and Constantinople, it proceeds as follows:] This wise and salvific profession of God’s grace was sufficient, then, for a complete knowledge and confirmation of right belief; for its teaching about the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit is complete, and it presents the Incarnation of the Lord to those who accept it with faith. Since, however, those who seek to suppress the proclamation of the truth have brought forth empty notions through their own heresies: some of them ... reject the expression “God-bearer” with respect to the Virgin, while others introduce admixture and mingling and foolishly imagine that there is one nature of the flesh and the Godhead and make the preposterous claim that, because of the commingling, the divinity of the Only-Begotten is subject to suffering: for this reason, in order to make any machination against the truth impossible, this holy and great ecumenical council here assembled, teaching the unchangeable doctrine preached from the beginning, defines above all that the creed of the 318 holy Fathers (of Nicaea) remains irreformable.

And, with reference to the Pneumatomachians, it confirms the teaching on the being of the Spirit propounded at a later time by the 150 Fathers assembled in the imperial city; and they made this known to all, not as if they were adding something missing in earlier teachings, but explaining through the testimony of the Scriptures their understanding in respect to the Holy Spirit, in opposition to those who were trying to obliterate his sovereign power. With reference to those who are attempting to destroy the mystery of the economy [of salvation], on the other hand, and shamelessly prattle that the one born of the holy Virgin Mary is a mere man, (the council) has approved the conciliar letters of blessed Cyril, the former shepherd over the Church at Alexandria, to Nestorius and συνοδικὰς ἐπιστολάς πρὸς τε Νεστόριον καὶ πρὸς τοὺς τῆς Ἀνατολῆς ἀρμοδίας οὐσας ἐδέξατο εἰς ἔλεγχον μὲν τῆς Νεστορίου φρενοβλαβείας... αἷς καὶ τὴν ἐπιστολὴν τοῦ τῆς μεγίστης καὶ πρεσβυτέρας Ῥώμης προέδρου τοῦ μακαριωτάτου καὶ ἁγιωτάτου ἀρχιεπισκόπου Λέοντος τὴν γραφεῖσαν πρὸς τὸν ἐν ἁγίοις ἀρχιεπίσκοπον Φλαβιανὸν ἐπ' ἀναίρεσει τῆς Εὐτυχοῦς κακονοίας [*290–295] ἅτε δὴ τῇ τοῦ μεγάλου Πέτρου ὁμολογίᾳ συμβαίνουσιν καὶ κοινὴν τινα στήλην ὑπάρχουσιν κατὰ τῶν κακοδοξούντων εἰκότως συνήρμοσεν πρὸς τὴν τῶν ὀρθῶν δογμάτων βεβαίωσιν.

Τοῖς τε γὰρ εἰς υἱὸν δυάδα τὸ τῆς οἰκονομίας διασπᾶν ἐπιχειροῦσι μυστήριον παρατάττεται καὶ τοὺς παθητὴν τοῦ μονογενοῦς λέγειν τολμῶντας τὴν θεότητα τοῦ τῶν ἱερέων ἀπωθεῖται συλλόγου καὶ τοῖς ἐπὶ τῶν δύο φύσεων τοῦ Χριστοῦ κρᾶσιν ἢ σύγχυσιν ἐπινοοῦσιν ἀνθίσταται καὶ τοὺς οὐράνιον ἢ ἐτέρας τινὸς ὑπάρχειν οὐσίας τὴν ἐξ ἡμῶν ληφθεῖσαν αὐτῷ τοῦ δούλου μορφὴν παραπαίοντας ἐξελαύνει καὶ τοὺς δύο μὲν πρὸ τῆς ἐνώσεως φύσεις τοῦ κυρίου μυθεύοντας, μίαν δὲ μετὰ τὴν ἔνωσιν ἀναπλάττοντας ἀναθεματίζει.

[Definitio] Ἐπόμενοι τοίνυν τοῖς ἁγίοις πατράσιν, ἕνα καὶ τὸν αὐτὸν ὁμολογεῖν υἱὸν τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν συμφώνως ἅπαντες ἐκδιδάσκομεν, τέλειον τὸν αὐτὸν ἐν θεότητι, καὶ τέλειον τὸν αὐτὸν ἐν ἀνθρωπότητι, Θεὸν ἀληθῶς, καὶ ἄνθρωπον ἀληθῶς τὸν αὐτὸν ἐκ ψυχῆς λογικῆς καὶ σώματος, ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ κατὰ τὴν θεότητα, καὶ ὁμοούσιον ἡμῖν τὸν αὐτὸν κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα, κατὰ πάντα ὅμοιον ἡμῖν χωρὶς ἁμαρτίας [cf. Hbr 4:15]· πρὸ αἰώνων μὲν ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς γεννηθέντα κατὰ τὴν θεότητα, ἐπ' ἐσχάτων δὲ τῶν ἡμερῶν τὸν αὐτὸν δι' ἡμᾶς καὶ διὰ τὴν ἡμετέραν σωτηρίαν ἐκ Μαρίας τῆς παρθένου τῆς θεοτόκου κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα·

ἕνα καὶ τὸν αὐτὸν Χριστὸν υἱὸν κύριον μονογενῆ ἐν δύο φύσεσιν¹ ἀσυγχύτως, ἀτρέπτως, ἀδιαιρέτως, ἀχωρίστως γνωριζόμενον, οὐδαμοῦ τῆς τῶν φύσεων διαφορᾶς ἀνηρημένης διὰ τὴν ἔνωσιν, σωζομένης δὲ μᾶλλον τῆς ιδιότητος ἐκατέρας φύσεως, καὶ εἰς ἕν πρόσωπον καὶ μίαν ὑπόστασιν συντρεχούσης, οὐκ εἰς δύο πρόσωπα μεριζόμενον ἢ διαιρούμενον, ἀλλ' ἕνα καὶ τὸν αὐτὸν υἱὸν μονογενῆ Θεὸν λόγον, κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν, καθάπερ ἄνωθεν οἱ προφητῆται περὶ

to the Eastern (bishops) as being suitable for a refutation of the crazed ravings of Nestorius... , to which it has with good reason added, for the confirmation of orthodox doctrine, the letter that the most blessed and most holy Leo, archbishop of the See of Rome, which is the greatest and the elder, wrote to Archbishop Flavianus (who is among the saints) for the suppression of the heresy of Eutyches [*290–295], since it is in keeping with the confession of faith made by the great Peter and serves as a shared defense against the purveyors of false doctrines.

For it is opposed to those who are attempting to tear the mystery of the economy (of salvation) into a duality of sons (and) excludes from the assembly of priests those who have the effrontery to say that the Godhead of the Only-Begotten is subject to suffering; and it resists those who imagine that there is mingling or admixture in the two natures of Christ and drives off those who foolishly believe that the “form of a slave” taken by him from us is of heavenly or some other nature; and it anathematizes those who invent the myth of two natures of the Lord before the union but imagine there was only one (nature) after the union.

[Definition] Following therefore the holy Fathers, we 301 unanimously teach to confess one and the same Son, our Lord Jesus Christ, the same perfect in divinity and perfect in humanity, the same truly God and truly man composed of rational soul and body, the same one in being with the Father as to the divinity and one in being with us as to the humanity, like unto us in all things but sin [cf. Heb 4:15]. The same was begotten from the Father before the ages as to the divinity and in the latter days for us and our salvation was born as to his humanity from Mary the Virgin Mother of God.

(We confess that) one and the same Lord Jesus Christ, 302 the only begotten Son, must be acknowledged in two natures,¹ without confusion or change, without division or separation. The distinction between the natures was never abolished by their union but rather the character proper to each of the two natures was preserved as they came together in one Person and one hypostasis. He is not split or divided into two Persons, but he is one and the same only begotten Son, God the Word, the Lord Jesus αὐτοῦ καὶ αὐτὸς ἡμᾶς Ἰησοῦς Χριστὸς ἐξεπαίδευσεν, καὶ τὸ τῶν πατέρων ἡμῶν παραδέδωκε σύμβολον.

¹ 302 It should read ἐν δύο φύσεσιν (in two natures) and not ἐκ δύο φύσεων (from two natures), a variant that is offered by the most ancient and less critical editions of the Greek text, while all the Latin translations affirm “in two natures” (in duabus naturis). The other variant is the exact opposite of the intention of the council, being characteristic of Monophysitism. Cf. other extraconciliar testimonies of the correct reading in R.V. Sellers, The Council of Chalcedon (London, 1953), 120f., n. 6; I. Ortiz de Urbina, “Das Symbol von Chalcedon”, in A. Grillmeier and H. Bacht, eds., Das Konzil von Chalcedon, 2nd ed., vol. 1 (Würzburg, 1959), 391, n. 4 (in the 1st ed., 1951, cf. the appendix in vol. 3 [1954], 877).

Christ, as formerly the prophets and later Jesus Christ himself have taught us about him and as has been handed down to us by the creed of the Fathers.

- 303 [Sanctio] Τούτων τοίνυν μετὰ πάσης πανταχόθεν ἀκριβείας τε καὶ ἐμμελείας παρ' ἡμῶν διατυπωθέντων, ὥρισεν ἡ ἁγία καὶ οἰκουμενικὴ σύνοδος, ἕτεραν πίστιν μηδενὶ ἐξεῖναι προφέρειν, ἢ γοῦν συγγράφειν ἢ συντιθέναι ἢ φρονεῖν ἢ διδάσκειν ἕτέρως. . . .

[Sanction] As these points have been determined by us with all possible precision and care, the holy ecumenical council has ordained that no one may propose, put into writing, devise, hold, or teach to others any other faith than this. . . .

304-305: Session 7 (15): Canons

Ed.: ACOe 2/II, 158 [= can. 2], 161 [= can. 14]; Latin translation 2/III/III, 93, 95f.; 2/II/I, 33, 37; 54, 57; 87, 90; 99, 101; 106, 108 (various collections of canons) / MaC 7:357D-360A, 364D and in other places / HaC 2:601AB, 607AB, etc. / Bruns 1:25f., 29 / COeD, 3rd ed., 87f., 93f. [can. 2]: Gratian, Decretum, p. II, cs. 1; q. 1, c. 8 (Frdb 1:359f.)

Simony

- 304 Καν. 2. Εἴ τις ἐπίσκοπος ἐπὶ χρήμασι χειροτονίαν ποιήσῃ καὶ εἰς πρᾶσιν καταγάγοι τὴν ἄπρατον χάριν καὶ χειροτονήσῃ ἐπὶ χρήμασιν ἐπίσκοπον ἢ χωρεπίσκοπον ἢ πρεσβύτερον ἢ διάκονον ἢ ἕτερόν τινα τῶν ἐν τῷ κλήρῳ καταριθμουμένων ἢ προβάλοιτο ἐπὶ χρήμασιν οἰκονόμον ἢ ἐκδικον ἢ παραμονάριον ἢ ὄλως τινὰ τοῦ κανόνος δι' αἰσχροκέρδειαν οἰκείαν, ὁ τοῦτο ἐπιχειρήσας ἐλεγχθεὶς κινδυνεύτω περὶ τὸν οἰκεῖον βαθμὸν καὶ ὁ χειροτονούμενος μηδὲν ἐκ τῆς κατ' ἐμπορίαν ὠφελείσθω χειροτονίας ἢ προβολῆς, ἀλλ' ἔστω ἀλλότριος τῆς ἀξίας ἢ τοῦ φροντισματος οὐπὲρ ἐπὶ χρήμασιν ἔτυχεν. Εἰ δέ τις καὶ μεσιτεύων φανείη τοῖς οὕτως αἰσχροῖς καὶ ἀθεμίτοις λήμμασιν, καὶ οὗτος εἰ μὲν κληρικὸς εἴη, τοῦ οἰκείου ἐκπιπτέτω βαθμοῦ· εἰ δὲ λαϊκὸς ἢ μονάζων, ἀναθεματιζέσθω.

(Can. 2) If any bishop should perform an ordination for monetary gain and should put up for sale the grace that is unsalable and should ordain for monetary gain a bishop or a suffragan or a priest or a deacon or any other one of those who are numbered among the clergy; or if for the sake of monetary gain he should name an administrator or solicitor or a trustee or any one at all of those holding canonical appointments, doing so out of base self-interest—let the one who has undertaken this, upon conviction, suffer the loss of his own office, and let the one ordained obtain no benefit from the ordination or appointment gained through purchase; rather, let him be removed from the dignity or the official position he has gained through money. But if anyone be detected arranging disgraceful and lawless transactions in this way, let this person, too, be removed from his own office if he is a cleric; if he is a layman or a monk, let him be anathematized.

Mixed Marriage and Reception of Baptism in a Heretical Sect

- 305 Καν. 14. Ἐπειδὴ ἔν τισιν ἐπαρχίαις συγκεχώρηται τοῖς ἀναγνώσταις καὶ ψάλταις γαμεῖν, ὥρισεν ἡ ἁγία σύνοδος μὴ ἐξεῖναι τινὰ αὐτῶν ἑτερόδοξον γυναῖκα λαμβάνειν· τοὺς δὲ ἤδη ἐκ τοιούτων γάμων παιδοποιήσαντας, εἰ μὲν ἔφθασαν βαπτίσει τὰ ἐξ αὐτῶν τεχθέντα παρὰ τοῖς αἰρετικοῖς, προσάγειν αὐτὰ τῇ κοινῶν τῆς καθολικῆς ἐκκλησίας· μὴ βαπτισθέντα δὲ μὴ δύνασθαι ἔτι βαπτίζειν αὐτὰ παρὰ τοῖς αἰρετικοῖς μήτε μὴν συνάπτειν πρὸς γάμον αἰρετικῷ ἢ Ἰουδαίῳ ἢ Ἑλληνι, εἰ μὴ ἄρα ἐπαγγέλλοιτο μετατίθεσθαι εἰς τὴν ὀρθόδοξον πίστιν τὸ συναπτόμενον πρόσωπον τῷ ὀρθόδοξῳ. Εἰ δέ τις τοῦτον τὸν ὅρον παραβαίη τῆς ἁγίας συνόδου, κανονικῶς ὑποκεισθῶ ἐπιτιμῶν.

(Can. 14) Since in certain provinces it has been allowed for lectors and cantors to marry, the holy council has decreed that none of them shall have permission to marry a woman who is heterodox. The ones who have already had children from marriages of this sort, if they have had their children baptized among the heretics, are to bring them into communion with the Catholic Church. They are no longer to be allowed to baptize their unbaptized children among the heretics or to arrange marriage for them with a heretic or a Jew or a pagan, unless the person marrying the orthodox offspring shall announce his intention to convert to the true faith. And if anyone shall violate this decree of the holy council, let him be subjected to canonical penalties.

306: Synodal Letter Ἐπλήσθη χαρᾶς to Pope Leo I, early November 451

Ed.: Original Greek text: ACOe 2/III, 116₂₀-117₂; Latin translation: 2/III/II, 93₁₆₋₃₁, 96₁₄₋₂₉.

Primacy of the Roman See

... Τί γὰρ πίστεως πρὸς εὐφροσύνην ἀνώτερον; ... ἦν αὐτὸς ἄνωθεν ἡμῖν ὁ σωτὴρ πρὸς σωτηρίαν παρέδωκε φήσας; «πορευθέντες μαθητεύσατε πάντα τὰ ἔθνη...» [Mt 28:19s], ἦν αὐτὸς ὡσπερ χρυσὴν σειρὰν τῷ προστάγματι τοῦ θεμένου καταγομένην εἰς ἡμᾶς διεφύλαξας πᾶσι τῆς τοῦ μακαρίου Πέτρου φωνῆς ἐρμηνεὺς καθιστάμενος καὶ τῆς ἐκείνου πίστεως τοῖς πᾶσι τὸν μακαρισμὸν ἐφέλκόμενος. Ὅθεν καὶ ἡμεῖς ὡς ἀρχηγῶ σοι τοῦ καλοῦ πρὸς ὠφέλειαν χρησάμενοι τῆς ἀληθείας τοῖς τῆς ἐκκλησίας τέκνοις τὸν κλῆρον ἐδείξαμεν, ... μὲν συμποιοῖα καὶ ὁμοιοῖα τῆς πίστεως τὴν ὁμολογίαν γνωρίσαντες. Καὶ ἡμεν ἐν κοινῇ χορεία, τοῖς πνευματικοῖς ὡς ἐν βασιλικοῖς δέλτοις ἐντροφῶντες ἐδέσασιν, ἅπερ διὰ τῶν ὁσίων γραμμάτων¹ ὁ Χριστὸς τοῖς εὐχολογούμενοις ἠντήρησε, καὶ τὸν ἐπουράνιον νυμφίον ἐν ἡμῖν ὄραν ἐδοκοῦμεν ἐνδιατώμενον. Εἰ γὰρ ὅπου εἶσι δύο ἢ τρεῖς συναγμένοι εἰς τὸ αὐτοῦ ὄνομα, ἐκεῖ ἔφη εἶναι ἐν μέσῳ αὐτῶν [cf. Mt 18:20], πόσην περὶ πεντακοσίου εἰκοσιν ἱερέας τὴν οἰκείωσιν ἐπεδείκνυτο, οἳ καὶ πατρίδος καὶ πόνου τῆς εἰς αὐτὸν ὁμολογίας τὴν γῶσιν προέθηκαν; ὧν σὺ μὲν ὡς κεφαλὴ μελῶν ἡγεμόνευες ἐν τοῖς τῆν σὴν τάξιν ἐπέχουσι τὴν εὐβουλίαν ἐπιδεικνύμενος....

... For what gives more joy than the faith?... And 306 the Savior himself has given this to us from of old for salvation, saying, “Go therefore and make disciples of all nations...” [Mt 28:19f.]; you yourself have protected it like a golden chain that comes down to us by order of the Master, since you are the interpreter of the voice of blessed Peter and the one who procures for all the blessing of his faith. Whence we also, having made use of you as a guide to the advantageous use of this good, have shown to the children of the Church the legacy of truth, ... making known the profession of the faith with a unanimous agreement and harmony. And we were in unison together, enjoying, as if at an imperial banquet, the spiritual nourishment that Christ furnished to those at the banquet through your letters,¹ and we seemed to behold the heavenly Bridegroom dining in our midst. For if, whenever two or three are gathered in his name, he is present in their midst, as he says, [cf. Mt 18:20], how great an intimacy has he not shown, then, to the 520 priests who have placed a greater value on the knowledge of faith in him than on their native lands and labors? And you were their leader, as the head is (the leader) of the limbs, making known your excellent advice in the persons of those who represented you....

308–310: Letter Sollicitudinis quidem tuae to Bishop Theodore of Fréjus (Southern France), June 11, 452

Ed.: BullTau appendix 1:102b, 103a–104a / PL 54:1014A (= letter 108) / MaC 6:209A–211A / Gratian, Decretum, p. II, cs. 26, q. 6, c. 10 (Frdb 1:1038f.). —Reg.: JR 485.

The Sacrament of Penance

(c. 2) Multiplex misericordia Dei ita lapsibus subvenit humanis, ut non solum per baptismi gratiam, sed etiam per poenitentiae medicinam spes vitae reparatur aeternae, ut qui regenerationis dona violassent, proprio se iudicio condemnantes ad remissionem criminum pervenirent: sic divinae bonitatis praesidiis ordinatis, ut indulgentia Dei nisi supplicationibus sacerdotum nequeat obtineri. “Mediator enim Dei et hominum, homo Christus Iesus” [1 Tim 2:5] hanc praepositis Ecclesiae tradidit potestatem, ut et confitentibus actionem poenitentiae darent, et eosdem salubri satisfactione purgatos ad communionem sacramentorum per ianuam reconciliationis admitterent....

(Chap. 2) The manifold mercy of God has come to 308 the aid of human failings in such a way that the hope of eternal life may be regained not only through the grace of baptism, but also through the medicine of penance, so that those who have tainted the gifts of rebirth may, if they convict themselves by their own judgment, attain to forgiveness of their offenses. The provisions of the divine goodness are set up in such a way that the forgiveness of God cannot be obtained except through the supplications of priests. For “the mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus” [1 Tim 2:5], has bestowed this power upon those in charge of his Church, so that they might both impose the performance of a penance on those who make their confession and also admit them to the communion of the sacraments through the door of reconciliation once these (persons) have been cleansed by salutary reparation....

¹ *306 This is a reference in particular to the Tomus Leonis (*290–295; cf. also *300), which in sess. 2 and sess. 4 was read with full approval; and likewise to the letter (no. 93, PL) to the council that was read in sess. 16.

309 (c. 4) His autem, qui in tempore necessitatis et in periculi urgentis instantia praesidium paenitentiae et mox reconciliationis implorant, nec satisfactio interdicenda est nec reconciliatio deneganda: quia misericordiae Dei nec mensuras possumus ponere nec tempora definire, apud quem nullas patitur veniae moras vera conversio....

310 (c. 5) Unde oportet unumquemque christianum conscientiae suae habere iudicium, ne converti ad Deum de die in diem differat nec satisfactionis sibi tempus in fine vitae suae constituat, ... et cum posset pleniore satisfactione indulgentiam promereri, illius temporis angustias eligat, quo vix inveniat spatium vel confessio paenitentis vel reconciliatio sacerdotis. Verum, ut dixi, etiam talium necessitati ita auxiliandum est, ut et actio illis paenitentiae et communionis gratia, si eam etiam amisso vocis officio per indicia integri sensus postulanti, non negetur. At si aliqua vi aegritudinis ita fuerint aggravati, ut, quod paulo ante posebant, sub praesentia sacerdotis significare non valeant, testimonia eis fidelium circumstantium prodesse debebunt, ut simul et paenitentiae et reconciliationis beneficium consequantur....

(Chap. 4) Moreover, to those who beg for the assistance of penance and of a speedy reconciliation in time of necessity and in immediate, imminent danger, satisfaction is not to be refused, nor is reconciliation to be denied; because we are not able to place boundaries upon the mercy of God or impose limits of time upon him in whose presence a sincere repentance experiences no delays in obtaining pardon....

(Chap. 5) Whence it is fitting that each Christian heed the judgment of his conscience and not postpone from day to day his return to God or schedule the time of making satisfaction for the end of his life, ... and, although he could merit forgiveness after a fuller reparation, let him <not> choose the distress of that time when there may scarcely be opportunity either for confession on the part of the penitent or reconciliation on the part of the priest. But, as I said, help must be provided for the needs even of <persons> such as these, in such a way that neither the act of confession nor the grace of communion be denied to them, even in the case of persons who cannot speak, if they indicate a desire for it by means of the senses that are still intact. But if they shall have been afflicted by some stroke of ill health to such an extent that they are not able to indicate in the presence of the priest that which they were requesting a little earlier, the testimony given by the faithful who were present ought to be of use, so that they may obtain the benefits of both repentance and reconciliation at the same time....

311–316: Letter Regressus ad nos to Bishop Nicetas of Aquileia, March 21, 458

Ed.: BullCocq 1:45b–46b / BullTau 1:78a–79a / PL 54:1136A–1139A (= letter 159) / MaC 6:331C–335A / HaC 1:1770B–1771D. —[Chaps. 1–4:] Gratian, Decretum, p. II, cs. 34, q. 1, 2, c. 1 (Frdbl:1256f.). —Reg.: JR 536.

The Second Marriage of Presumed Widows

311 (c. 1) Cum ergo per bellicam cladem et per gravissimas hostilitatis incursus ita quaedam dicatis divisa esse coniugia, ut abductis in captivitatem viris feminae eorum remanserint destitutae, quae cum viros proprios aut interemptos putarent aut numquam a dominatione crederent liberandos, ad aliorum coniugium, solitudine cogente, transierint, cumque nunc, statu rerum auxiliante Domino in meliora converso, nonnulli eorum qui putabantur periisse, remeaverint, merito caritas tua videtur ambigere, quid de mulieribus, quae aliis iunctae sunt viris, a nobis debeat ordinari.

Sed quia novimus scriptum, quod a Deo iungitur mulier viro [cf. Prv 19:14] et iterum praeceptum agnovimus, ut quod Deus iunxit, homo non separet [Mt 19:6], necesse est, ut legitimarum foedera nuptiarum redintegrandam credamus et, remotis malis quae hostilitas (Chap. 1) Since, then, you say that certain marriages have been split apart by defeat in war and by very serious attacks by enemies, so that, after the men have been led away into captivity, their wives remain abandoned and, thinking their own husbands have been killed or that they will never be freed from foreign rule, they have been impelled by loneliness to enter into marriage with others, and since now, when by the help of the Lord the state of affairs has changed for the better, some of those who were thought to have perished have come back, Your Charity appears to be understandably in doubt regarding what we should prescribe in regard to women who have been wed to other men.

But because we know that it is written that a woman is joined to her husband by God [cf. Prov 19:14] and because we also know the commandment that what God has joined together man must not separate [Mt 19:6], it is necessary for us to believe that the bonds of intulit, unicuique hoc quod legitime habuit reformetur, omnique studio procurandum est, ut recipiat unusquisque quod proprium est.

(c. 2) Nec tamen culpabilis iudicetur et tamquam alieni iuris pervasor habeatur, qui personam eius mariti, qui iam non esse existimabatur, assumpsit. Sic enim multa, quae ad eos qui in captivitatem ducti sunt pertinebant, in ius alienum transire potuerunt, et tamen plenum iustitiae est, ut eisdem reversis propria reformentur. Quodsi in mancipiis vel in agris aut etiam in domibus ac possessionibus rite servatur, quanto magis in coniugiorum redintegratione faciendum est, ut, quod bellica necessitate turbatum est, pacis remedio reformetur?

(c. 3) Et ideo, si viri post longam captivitatem reversi ita in dilectione suarum coniugum perseverent, ut eas cupiant in suum redire consortium, omittendum est et inculpabile iudicandum, quod necessitas intulit, et restituendum, quod fides poscit.

(c. 4) Si autem aliquae mulieres ita posteriorum virorum amore sunt captae, ut malint his cohaerere quam ad legitimum redire consortium, merito sunt notandae, ita ut etiam ecclesiastica communione priventur: quae de re excusabili contaminationem criminis elegerunt, ostendentes sibimet pro sua incontinentia placuisse, quod iusta remissio poterat expiare. . . .

The Unrepeatability of Baptism

(c. 6) His vero . . . , qui ad iterandum baptismum vel metu coacti sunt vel errore traducti, et nunc se contra catholicae fidei sacramentum egisse cognoscunt, ea custodienda est moderatio, qua in societatem nostram non nisi per poenitentiae remedium et per impositionem episcopalis manus communionis recipiant unitatem. . . .

(c. 7) Nam hi, qui baptismum ab haeticis acceperunt, cum antea baptizati non fuissent, sola invocatione Spiritus Sancti per impositionem manuum confirmandi sunt, quia formam tantum baptismi sine sanctificationis virtute sumpserunt. Et hanc regulam, ut scitis, servandam in omnibus Ecclesiis praedicamus, ut lavacrum semel initum nulla iteratione violetur, dicente Apostolo: “Unus the legitimate marriages must be reestablished and that, after the evils inflicted by enemies are removed, what each person had lawfully should be returned to him; and care must be exerted with all zeal to see that each person recovers what is his own.

(Chap. 2) But anyone who has taken the role of that husband who was not thought to be alive should not be judged blameworthy and regarded as a violator of another person’s rights. For in this way many things that belonged to those who have been led into captivity have been able to pass into the rights of someone else; and yet it fully corresponds to justice that they should recover what is theirs when they have come back. But if this principle is properly maintained in the case of chattels or land or even in the case of homes and possessions, how much more must it be applied in the reestablishment of marriages, so that that which has been thrown into disarray by the exigencies of war may be restored through the curative effect of peace? 312

(Chap. 3) And consequently, if men who have come back after a long captivity persevere in loving their wives to such an extent that they desire them to return to (marital) union with them, then that which necessity has provoked must be renounced and judged not to be a matter for blame; and what fidelity demands must be restored. 313

(Chap. 4) However, if some women are so captivated by love for their subsequent spouses that they prefer to cling to them rather than to return to a lawful relationship, they are to be justly reproved by being deprived of communion with the Church: in a matter in which there is a reasonable excuse, they have chosen to be tainted by an offense, making it clear that, in their incontinence, they have been pleased by what a well-founded pardon could have expiated. . . . 314

(Chap. 6) But in the case of those . . . who have either been compelled by fear or misled by error to repeat their baptism and now recognize that they have acted contrary to the sacrament of the Catholic faith, the rule must be observed, whereby they (enter into) community with us only through the remedy of penance and receive the unity of communion only through the imposition of the hand of the bishop. . . . 315

(Chap. 7) For these persons who have received baptism from heretics when they had not been baptized previously are to be confirmed merely by the invocation of the Holy Spirit through the imposition of hands, because they have received only the form of baptism, without its power of sanctification. And we proclaim that this rule, as you know, is to be observed in all the Churches: that once 316

Dominus, una fides, unum baptismum” [Eph 4:5]. Cuius ablutio nulla iteratione temeranda est, sed, ut diximus, sola sanctificatio Spiritus Sancti invocanda est: ut quod ab haereticis nemo accipit, a catholicis sacerdotibus consequatur.

the bath (of baptism) has been received, it should not be violated by any repetition, as the apostle says, “One Lord, one faith, one baptism” [Eph 4:5]. And their cleansing is not to be desecrated by any repetition, but, as we have said, only the sanctifying action of the Holy Spirit should be invoked, so that one may obtain from Catholic priests that which no one receives from the heretics.

317–318: Letter Promisisse me memini to Emperor Leo I: August 17, 458

This letter is also called Tomus II Leonis (cf. *290°). The most important assertions of the letter are taken, except for a few modifications, from the letter Sollicitudini meae of Pope Leo to the monks of Palestine, written around June 453 (ACOe 2/IV, 159–63; cited portion: 161^{7–11, 23–27}, 162^{9–15} / PL 54:1061–68 = letter 124; JR 500).

Ed.: C. Silva Tarouca, Sancti Leonis Magni Tomus ad Flavianum episcopum Constantinopolitanum... et... Epistula ad Leonem I imperatorem (Epistula CLXV), TD ser. theol. 9 (Rome, 1932), 50–54 (nos. 76–81, 94–98, 113–22) / ACOe 2/IV, 115^{30–1161, 13–17}, 117^{8–18} (= Collectio Grimanica, letter 104) / BullTau appendix 1:173b–174a, 175a / PL 54:1163B–1165A, 1167AB (= letter 165). —Reg.: JR 542.

The Two Natures in Christ

317 (c. 6) Licet ergo in uno Domino Iesu Christo, vero Dei atque hominis Filio, Verbi et carnis una persona sit, quae inseparabiliter atque indivise communes habeat actiones, intellegendae tamen sunt ipsorum operum qualitates, et sincerae fidei contemplatione cernendum est, ad quae provehatur humilitas carnis, et ad quae inclinetur altitudo deitatis, quid sit, quod caro sine Verbo non agit, et quid sit, quod Verbum sine carne non efficit.¹...

(Chap. 6) Therefore, although in the one Lord Jesus Christ, true Son of God and Son of Man, there is one Person of Word and of flesh who has performed common actions without separation or division, nevertheless the qualities of the acts themselves must be (correctly) understood, and it can be seen with a sincere consideration of faith to what the humility of the flesh is elevated and to what the loftiness of the Godhead condescends, what it is that the flesh does not do without the Word and what it is that the Word does not accomplish without the flesh.¹...

Quamvis itaque ab illo initio, quo in utero Virginis Verbum caro factum est, nihil unquam inter utramque formam divisionis exstiterit, et per omnia incrementa corporea unius personae fuerint totius temporis actiones, ea ipsa tamen, quae inseparabiliter facta sunt, nulla permixtione confundimus, sed quid cuius formae sit, ex operum qualitate sentimus....

And so, although from that beginning by which the Word became flesh in the womb of the Virgin, there has never existed any separation between the two forms, and through all his bodily growth the actions at every point in time were those of a single Person, nevertheless, we do not confuse what was done without separation through a commingling, but rather we perceive from the quality of the acts what belongs to each form....

318 (c. 8) Cum ergo unus sit Dominus Iesus Christus et verae deitatis veraeque humanitatis in ipso una prorsus eademque persona sit, exaltationem tamen, qua illum, sicut Doctor gentium dicit, exaltavit Deus et donavit illi nomen, quod super omne nomen excellit [cf. Phil 2:9s], ad eandem intellegimus pertinere formam, quae ditanda erat tantae glorificationis augmento. In forma quippe Dei aequalis erat Filius Patri, et inter Genitorem atque Unigenitum nulla erat in essentia discretio, nulla in maiestate diversitas; nec per incarnationis mysterium aliquid decesserat Verbo, quod ei Patris munere redderetur. Forma autem servi, per quam impassibilis deitas sacramentum magnae pietatis implevit, humana humilitas est, quae in gloriam divinae potestatis evecta est, in tantam unitatem ab ipso conceptu Virginis deitate

(Chap. 8) Therefore, although the Lord Jesus Christ is one and (although) in him entirely one and the same Person is that of the true Godhead and the true humanity, nevertheless we understand the act of exaltation by which God exalted him, as the teacher of the Gentiles says, and gave him the name that is above every name [cf. Phil 2:9f.] to pertain to the same form that was to be enriched by so great an increase of glory. In the form of God, of course, the Son was equal to the Father, and between the Begetter and the Begotten there was no distinction in essence, no difference in majesty; and through the mystery of the Incarnation nothing was taken away from the Word that would have to be given back to him by the gift of the Father. But the form of a slave, through which the Godhead, ever free from suffering, fulfilled the mystery of his great compassion, is the human lowliness that was elevated into the glory of the divine power, whereas the Godhead and humanity had been joined from his very conception by the Virgin in so great a unity that the divine (acts) were not done without the man, nor were the human (acts) done without God.

*317 ¹ “Licet ... efficit” (Therefore ... the flesh); sermon 64, 4 (PL 54:360B).

et humanitate conserta, ut nec sine homine divina, nec sine Deo agerentur humana.

319–320: Letter Frequenter quidem to Bishop Neo of Ravenna, October 24, 458

Ed.: BullCocq 1:43bf. / BullTau 1:7ab / PL 54:1192A–1194B (= letter 166). —Reg.: JR 543.

Doubtful Baptism and Baptism Conferred by Heretics

(1) ... Quorundam fratrum suggestione comperimus, aliquos captivorum ad sedes suas libere redeuntes, qui scilicet in captivitatem illa aetate devenerint, quae nullius rei firmam potuerat habere notitiam, remedium quidem implorare baptismatis, sed utrum eiusdem mysterium baptismatis ac sacramenta perceperint, infantiae inscientia non posse reminisci, et ideo sub hoc latentis recordationis incerto animas suas in discrimen adduci, dum sub specie cautionis negatur his gratia, quae ideo non impenditur, quia putatur impensa. Cum itaque tribuere talibus dominici sacramenta mysterii non immerito quorundam fratrum formido dubitaret, in synodali ut diximus coetu formam huiusmodi consultationis accepimus....

In primis itaque providere debemus, ne dum speciem quamdam cautionis tenemus, damnum regenerandarum incidamus animarum. Quis enim ita sit suspicationibus suis deditus, ut verum esse definiat, quod, omni manifestatione cessante, ex opinione ambigua suspicatur?

Cum itaque baptizatum se nec ille recordetur, qui regenerationis est cupidus, nec alter attestari de eo possit, qui nesciat consecratum, nihil est, in quo peccatum possit obrepere, cum in hac parte conscientiae suae nec ille reus sit, qui consecratur, nec ille, qui consecrat.

Scimus quidem inexpiable esse facinus, quoties iuxta haereticorum damnata a sanctis Patribus instituta cogitur aliquis lavacrum, quod regenerandis semel tributum est, bis subire, apostolica reclamante doctrina, quae nobis unam praedicat in Trinitate deitatem, unam in fide confessionem, unum in baptisate sacramentum [Eph 4:5]. Sed in hoc nihil simile formidatur, quoniam non potest in iterationis crimen venire, quod factum esse omnino nescitur....

(Chap. 1)... We have learned through information 319 provided by certain brethren that some captives, returning in freedom to their own homes—and who had fallen into captivity at an age when they could have had no sure knowledge of anything—are in fact requesting the remedy of baptism but cannot remember, due to their inability to recall their early childhood, whether they have received the mystery of this same baptism and the sacraments, and hence, due to their obstructed memory, their souls are being placed in jeopardy because, under the pretext of caution, grace is denied to them—grace that is not being conferred because it is thought to have been already bestowed. And so, because the hesitation of certain brethren has, not unreasonably, produced a reluctance to confer the sacrament of the Lord’s mystery to such persons, We have received, as We said, in the synodal assembly, the formal request for counsel (on this matter)....

And so first of all we ought to take care lest, through clinging to the appearance of caution, we cause harm to souls that should be reborn. For who is so much in thrall to his own suppositions that he would determine that to be true which, in the absence of all evidence, is merely supposed on the basis of a doubtful opinion?

Consequently, if he who is desirous of rebirth does not remember being baptized, and no one else can give testimony about it since he does not know if he has been sanctified, there is no possibility by which sin could creep in, since neither he who is baptized nor he who performs the baptism is blameworthy on this point in his conscience.

Of course, we know that an unforgivable crime takes place whenever someone, in accordance with the practices of the heretics that have been condemned by the holy Fathers, is forced to undergo twice the cleansing that has been given once to those who are to be reborn, since the apostolic teaching contradicts it, which proclaims to us one Godhead in the Trinity, one confession in faith, one sacrament in baptism [Eph 4:5]. But in this (case) nothing similar is to be feared, since that which is not known to have happened at all cannot become grounds for a charge of repetition....

320 (2) Quod si ab haereticis baptizatum quempiam fuisse constiterit, erga hunc nullatenus sacramentum regenerationis iteretur, sed hoc tantum, quod ibi deficit, conferatur: ut per episcopalem manus impositionem virtutem Sancti Spiritus consequatur.

(2) But if it is established that anyone has been baptized by the heretics, the sacrament of rebirth should by no means be repeated for him; rather, only that element should be conferred which was missing: that he might obtain the strength of the Holy Spirit through the imposition of hands by the bishop.

321–322: Letter Epistolas fraternitatis to Bishop Rusticus of Narbonne, 458 or 459

Ed.: BullCocq 1:28b / BullTau 1:45b / PL 54:1207BC (= letter 167). —Reg.: JR 544.

The Binding Force of Religious Vows

321 (Inquisitio 14) Propositum monachi proprio arbitrio aut voluntate susceptum deseri non potest absque peccato. Quod enim quis vovit Deo, debet et reddere [Dt 23:21; Ps 49:14]. Unde qui relicta singularitatis professione ad militiam vel ad nuptias devolutus est, publicae paenitentiae satisfactione purgandus est: quia etsi innocens militia et honestum potest esse coniugium, electionem meliorum deseruisse transgressio est.

(Question 14) The resolution that a monk has undertaken by his own judgment or will cannot be abandoned without sin. For that which a person has vowed to God should also be rendered to him [Deut 23:21; Ps 50:14]. Consequently, anyone who has abandoned his promise of the solitary life and has entered into military service or marriage must be purified through an act of public penance: because, even though military service can be blameless and marriage can be honorable, it is an offense to have forsaken the choice of what is better.

322 (Inquisitio 15) Puellae, quae non coactae parentum imperio, sed spontaneo iudicio virginitatis propositum atque habitum susceperunt, si postea nuptias eligunt, praevaricantur, etiam si consecratio non accessit....

(Question 15) If girls who have embraced the resolution and clothing of virginity, not forced by the order of their parents but of their own free decision, subsequently choose marriage, they sin, even if no consecration has (yet) been added....

323: Letter Magna indignatione to All the Bishops of Campania, etc., March 6, 459

Ed.: BullCocq 1:47a / BullTau 1:80a / PL 54:1210CD (= letter 168). —Reg.: JR 545.

Secret Confession

323 (c. 2) Illam etiam contra apostolicam regulam praesumptionem, quam nuper agnovi a quibusdam illicita usurpatione committi, modis omnibus constituo submoveri. De paenitentia scilicet, quae a fidelibus postulatur, ne de singulorum peccatorum genere libello scripta professio publice recitetur, cum reatus conscientiarum sufficiat solis sacerdotibus indicari confessione secreta. Quamvis enim plenitudo fidei videatur esse laudabilis, quae propter Dei timorem apud homines erubescere non veretur, tamen quia non omnium huiusmodi sunt peccata, ut ea, qui paenitentiam poscunt, non timeant publicare, removeatur tam improbabilis consuetudo, ne multi a paenitentiae remediis arceantur, dum aut erubescunt aut metuunt inimicis suis facta reserari, quibus possint legum constitutione percelli. Sufficit enim illa confessio, quae primum Deo offertur, tum etiam sacerdoti, qui pro delictis paenitentium precatore accedit. Tunc enim demum plures ad paenitentiam poterunt provocari, si populi auribus non publicetur conscientia confitentis.

(Chap. 2) I also decree that that presumption against the apostolic regulation, which I recently learned is being committed by some through unlawful usurpation, be banished by all means. With regard to penance, what is demanded of the faithful is clearly not that an acknowledgment of the nature of individual sins written in a little book be read publicly, since it suffices that the states of consciences be made known to the priests alone in secret confession. For although such fullness of faith seems praiseworthy that, out of fear of God, is not afraid of embarrassment before men, nevertheless—because the sins are not all such that those who seek penance do not fear to have them publicly disclosed—let such an objectionable custom be suppressed, so that many might not be kept away from the remedy of penance so long as they are ashamed or fear to have their actions revealed to their enemies (and for which, according to the disposition of the law, they may be punished). For that confession is sufficient which is first offered to God, then also to a priest, who serves as an intercessor for the transgressions of the penitents. For then, indeed, more will be able to be incited to penance if the conscience of the one confessing is not exposed to the ears of the people.

325–329: Statuta Ecclesiae Antiqua, mid-late fifth century

According to a later tradition, these statutes are also called the Statuta antiqua Orientis. The canons of this collection come from diverse synods and manifest a similarity to the Constitutiones Apostolorum. They are not the result of the alleged Fourth Synod of Carthage of 398 but were composed around the mid- to late fifth century in Gallia Narbonensis. They are ascribed, no longer to Caesarius of Arles, but rather to Gennadius of Marseille and his Liber ecclesiasticorum dogmatum (cf. C. Munier, cited below).

Ed.: C. Munier, Les Statuta Ecclesiae Antiqua: Édition—Études critiques, Bibliothèque de l'Institut de Droit Canonique de l'Université de Strasbourg 5 (Paris, 1960), 75–78 [= *325], 95f. [= *326–29] / in Caesarius of Arles: Opera omnia 2, ed. by G. Morin (Maretioli, 1942), 90f., 95 / C. Munier: CpChL 148 (1963): 164–66, 181f. / M. Andrieu, Les Ordines romani du haut moyen-âge 3, Spec. Sacr. Lov. 24 (Louvain, 1951), 616f., 617f. (= appendix to Ordo Romanus XXXIV) / Bruns 1:140f., 141 / PL 56:879A–880B, 887C–888A / MaC 3:949D–950D, 950E–951C / HaC 1:978C–E, 979AB (= “Fourth Synod of Carthage”). —Reg.: CIPL 1776.

Examination of Faith for Episcopal Ordination

Qui episcopus ordinandus est, antea examinetur, si ... in Scripturarum sensibus cautus, si in dogmatibus ecclesiasticis exercitatus, et ante omnia, si fidei documenta verbis simplicibus adserat, id est, Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum unum Deum esse confirmans, totamque in Trinitate deitatem coessentialem et consubstantialem et coaeternalem et coomnipotentem praedicans; si singulam quamque in Trinitate personam plenum Deum et totas tres personas unum Deum; si incarnationem divinam non in Patre neque in Spiritu Sancto factam, sed in Filio tantum credat, ut, qui erat in divinitate Dei Patris Filius, ipse fieret in homine hominis matris filius, Deus verus ex Patre, et homo verus ex matre, carnem ex matris visceribus habens, et animam humanam rationabilem, simul in eo ambae naturae, id est, homo et Deus, una persona, unus Filius, unus Christus, unus Dominus, creator omnium quae sunt, et auctor et dominus et creator [rector] cum Patre et Spiritu Sancto omnium creaturarum, qui passus est vera carnis passione, mortuus vera corporis sui morte, resurrexit vera carnis suae resurrectione et vera animae resumptione, in qua venit iudicare vivos et mortuos.

Quaerendum est etiam ab eo, si Novi et Veteris Testamenti, id est, Legis et Prophetarum et Apostolorum unum eundemque credat auctorem et Deum; si diabolus non per condicionem, sed per arbitrium factus sit malus. Quaerendum etiam ab eo, si credat huius quam gestamus et non alterius carnis resurrectionem; si credat iudicium futurum et recepturos singulos pro his quae in hac carne gesserunt vel poenas vel gloriam; si nuptias non improbet; si secunda matrimonia non damnet; si carniū perceptionem non culpet; si paenitentibus reconciliatis communicet; si in baptismo omnia peccata, id est, tam illud originale contractum quam illa quae voluntarie admissa sunt, dimittantur; si extra Ecclesiam catholicam nullus salvetur.

Let the person who is to be ordained bishop first be examined (to see) if ... he is cautious in his understanding of the Scriptures, versed in the dogmas of the Church, and, above all, if he affirms in plain words the teachings of the faith, that is, confirming that the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit are one God and proclaiming that the entire Godhead in the Trinity (is) of one essence and of one substance and co-eternal and co-omnipotent; that each individual Person in the Trinity is the complete God and that all three Persons are one God; if he believes that the Incarnation of God did not take place in the Father or in the Holy Spirit but only in the Son, so that he himself who in his divinity was the Son of God the Father became in his humanity the Son of man, of the Mother, true God from the Father and true man from the Mother, having flesh from the womb of the Mother as well as a rational human soul; two natures (are) in him at the same time, that is, man and God, and (he is) one Person, one Son, one Christ, one Lord, Creator of all that exists, with the Father and the Holy Spirit the author and Lord and creator [ruler] of all creatures, who suffered in a true suffering of the flesh, died in a true death of his body, rose again in a true Resurrection of his flesh and a true resumption of his soul, in which he shall come to judge the living and the dead.

It must also be asked of him whether he believes that the author and God of the Old and the New Testament, that is, of the law and the prophets and the apostles, is one and the same; whether (he believes that) the devil became evil, not by his nature, but by his free choice. It must also be asked of him whether he believes in the resurrection of this flesh that we bear and not of some other; if he believes in the judgment that is to come and that each individual is going to receive either punishment or glory for what he has done in this flesh; if he does not disapprove of marriage; if he does not condemn second marriages; if he does not reprove the eating of meat; if he maintains communion with sinners who have been reconciled; if (he believes that) all sins are forgiven in baptism, that is, both original sin and those that have been committed voluntarily; whether (he believes that) no one is saved outside the Catholic Church.

Cum, in his omnibus examinatus, inventus fuerit plene instructus, tunc cum consensu clericorum et laicorum et conventu totius provinciae episcoporum ... ordinetur episcopus.

When he has been found to be fully instructed after being examined on all these points, then, with the consent of the clergy and laity and by the assembly of the bishops of the entire province, ... let him be ordained bishop.

Ordination by Means of the Imposition of Hands

- 326 Recapitulatio ordinationis officialium Ecclesiae:
Can. 90 (2). Episcopus cum ordinatur, duo episcopi ponant et teneant Evangeliorum codicem super cervicem [caput] eius, et, uno super eum fundente benedictionem, reliqui omnes episcopi qui adsunt manibus suis caput eius tangant.
- 327 Can. 91 (3). Presbyter cum ordinatur, episcopo eum [-!] benedicente et manus super caput eius tenente, etiam omnes presbyteri qui praesentes sunt manus suas iuxta manus episcopi super caput illius teneant.
- 328 Can. 92 (4). Diaconus cum ordinatur, solus episcopus qui eum benedicit manus suas super caput eius ponat: quia non ad sacerdotium, sed ad ministerium¹ consecratur.
- 329 Can. 93 (5). Subdiaconus cum ordinatur, quia manus impositionem non accipit, patenam de manu episcopi accipiat vacuum, et vacuum calicem. De manu vero archidiaconi accipiat urceolum cum aqua et manile et manutergium.

- Summary of the ordination of Church officials:
Can. 90 (2). When a bishop is ordained, let two bishops place (expose) and hold the book of the Gospels above his neck [head], and, while one pours forth the benediction upon him, let all the remaining bishops who are present touch his head with their hands.
- Can. 91 (3). When a priest is ordained, while the bishop is blessing him [-!] and holding his hands over his head, let all the priests, also, who are present hold their hands close to the hands of the bishop above his head.
- Can. 92 (4). When a deacon is ordained, let the bishop alone who blesses him place his hands above his head, because he is consecrated, not for the priesthood, but for the ministry.¹
- Can. 93 (5). When a subdeacon is ordained, because he does not receive the imposition of hands, let him receive the empty paten from the hand of the bishop and the empty chalice. But from the hand of the archdeacon let him receive the cruet with the water and the maniple and the towel.

HILARY: November 19, 461–February 29, 468

SIMPLICIUS: March 3, 468–March 10, 483

330–342: Synod of ARLES, 473: Formula of Submission of the Priest Lucidus

Two synods were held to deal with the doctrines on predestination of the presbyter Lucidus: that of Arles in 473 and, shortly afterward, the Synod of Lyon. The written retraction was composed by Bishop Faustus of Riez (or Reji) and sent to the thirty synodal bishops of Gaul. Lucidus was ordered to subscribe to it.

Ed.: In Faustus of Riez, letter 2: ed. by Aug. Engelbrecht, in CSEL 21:165₁₄–168₂ / ed. by B. Krusch, in MGH Auctores antiquissimi 8 (Berlin, 1887), 290f. (= appendix to C. Sollius Apollinaris Sidonius, Epistulae et carmina, letter 19); in Bishop Hinkmar of Reims, Liber de praedestinatione Dei et libero arbitrio II, 1: PL 125:81C–82C / J. Sirmond, Historia Praedestiniana, in PL 53:685D (= appendix to Praedestinatus) / MaC 7:1010D–1012A / HaC 2:809B–810C.

Grace and Predestination

- 330 Correptio vestra salus publica, et sententia vestra medicina est. Unde et ego summum remedium duco, ut praeteritos errores accusando excusem, et salutifera Your reproof is public salvation, and your opinion is medicine. From this I also draw the highest remedy, that by blaming past errors I excuse [them],

*328 ¹ Namely, to the service of the bishop or the priest, which is also determined in can. 57 (37); cf. the source of this prescription, namely, Hippolytus of Rome, Traditio apostolica 8: "In the ordination of the deacon, the bishop only imposes his hands, because he is not ordained to the priesthood, but to service of the bishop, so that he carries out that which he is asked to do by him ..." (in diacono ordinando solus episcopus imponat manus, propterea quia non in sacerdotio ordinatur, sed in ministerio episcopi, ut faciat ea quae ab ipso iubentur ...); cf. B. Botte, Hippolyte de Rome, SC 11bis, 3rd ed. (1984), 58; Botte, Hippolyte de Rome, LQF 39 (Münster, 1963), 22.

confessione me diluam. Proinde iuxta praedicandi recentia statuta concilii, damno vobiscum sensum illum, qui dicit humanae oboedientiae laborem divinae gratiae non esse iungendum;

qui dicit post primi hominis lapsum ex toto arbitrium voluntatis exstinctum;

qui dicit quod Christus Dominus et Salvator noster mortem non pro omnium salute susceperit; qui dicit quod praescientia Dei hominem violenter compellat ad mortem, vel quod Dei pereant voluntate qui pereunt;

qui dicit quod post acceptum legitime baptismum in Adam moriatur quicumque deliquerit;

qui dicit alios deputatos ad mortem, alios ad vitam praedestinos;

qui dicit ab Adam usque ad Christum nullos ex gentibus per primam Dei gratiam, id est per legem naturae, in adventum Christi esse salvatos eo quod liberum arbitrium ex omnibus in primo parente perdidissent; qui dicit patriarchas ac prophetas vel summos quosque sanctorum, etiam ante redemptionis tempora in paradisi habitatione deguisse; qui dicit ignes et inferna non esse.

Haec omnia quasi impia et sacrilegiis repleta condemno. Ita autem assero gratiam Dei, ut adnsum hominis et conatum gratiae semper adiungam, et libertatem voluntatis humanae non exstinctam, sed adtenuatam et infirmatam esse pronuntiem, et periclitari eum, qui salvus est, et eum qui periit, potuisse salvari.

Christum etiam, Deum et Salvatorem nostrum, quantum pertinet ad divitias bonitatis suae, pretium mortis pro omnibus obtulisse, et quia nullum perire velit, qui est Salvator omnium hominum, maxime fidelium, dives in omnibus qui invocant illum [Rm 10:12]. Et quia in tantis rebus conscientiae satisfaciendum, memini me ante dixisse, quod Christus pro his tantum, quos credituros praescivit, advenisset [provocando ad Mt 20:28; 26:28; Hbr 9:27]. Nunc vero sacrorum testimoniorum auctoritate, quae abunde per spatia divinarum inveniuntur Scripturarum, ex seniorum doctrinae ratione patefacta, libens fateor Christum etiam pro perditis advenisse, quia eodem nolente perierunt. Neque enim fas est circa eos solum, qui videntur esse salvati, immensae divitias bonitatis ac beneficia divina concludi. Nam si Christum his tantum remedia adtulisse dicimus, qui redempti sunt, videbimur absolvere non and by healing confession I wash myself. Just so in consequence of the recent statutes of the council about to be published, I condemn with you that view which states that the work of human obedience does not have to be united with divine grace; which says that after the fall of the first man the free choice of the will was totally destroyed; 331

which states that Christ our Lord and Savior did not incur death for the salvation of all; 332 which states that the foreknowledge of God violently impels man to death, or that they who perish, perish by the will of God; 333 which affirms that whoever sins after baptism that has been legitimately received dies in Adam; 334 which states that some have been condemned to death, others have been predestined to life; 335

which says that from Adam up to Christ none among the Gentiles was saved by the first grace of God, that is, through the law of nature, in view of the coming of Christ, since free will had been lost by all in the first ancestor; 336 which states that the patriarchs and prophets or every one of the highest saints, even before the times of the redemption, entered into paradise; 337

which states that fire and hell do not exist. 338

I condemn all these as impious and totally sacrilegious. In the same way, however, I uphold the grace of God in order that I may always unite the striving of man and the impulse of grace, and I declare that the freedom of the human will is not destroyed but weakened and enfeebled and that he who is saved is (still) in danger; and he who has perished could have been saved. 339

Also that Christ, God and Redeemer, as far as it pertained to the riches of his goodness, offered the price of death for all and because he, who is the Savior of all, especially of the faithful, does not wish anyone to perish, (being) rich unto all who call upon him [Rom 10:12]. And since, in regard to matters of such importance, I must satisfy conscience, I remember that I previously stated that Christ came only for those he knew beforehand would believe [making reference to Mt 20:28; 26:28, and Heb 9:27–28]. Now by the authority of the sacred witnesses, which are found in great profusion through the extent of the divine Scriptures, in accordance with the doctrine of our elders made dear by reason, I freely confess that Christ came also for the lost, because they perished although he did not will (it). For it is not right that the riches of his boundless goodness and his divine benefits be confined to those only who seem to have 340 redemptos, quos pro redemptione contempta constat esse puniendos.

341 Assero etiam per rationem et ordinem saeculorum alios lege gratiae, alios lege Moysi, alios lege naturae, quam Deus in omnium cordibus scripsit [cf. Rm 2:15], in spe adventus Christi fuisse salvatos; nullos tamen ex initio mundi, ab originali nexu nisi intercessione sacri sanguinis absolutos.

342 Profiteor etiam aeternos ignes et infernales flammis factis capitalibus praeparatas, quia perseverantes in finem humanas culpas merito sequitur divina sententia, quam iuste incurrunt, qui haec non toto corde crediderint.

Orate pro me, domini sancti et apostolici Patres!—
Lucidus presbyter hanc epistolam manu propria subscripsi et, quae in ea adstruuntur, assero, et quae sunt damnata, damno.

343: Letter Quantum presbyterorum to Bishop Acacius of Constantinople, January 10, 476

This alludes to the councils of Nicaea, Ephesus, and Chalcedon. It names the heretics condemned by these. It does not mention the First Council of Constantinople (381).

Ed.: O. Guenther: CSEL 35:131₁₂–132₂₄ (= Collectio Avellana, letter 58, 3, 6) / Thl 178f. (= letter 2) / PL 58:41B–42B (letter 5) / BullTau appendix 1:207b–208b. —Reg.: JR 572.

Authority of the Bishop of Rome and of Ecumenical Councils

343 (§ 3 [c. 2]) Quia sanctae memoriae praedecessorum Nostrorum exstante doctrina, contra quam nefas est disputare, quisquis recte sapere videtur novis assertionibus non indiget edoceri, sed plana atque perfecta sunt omnia, quibus potest vel deceptus ab haereticis erudiri, vel in vinea Domini plantandus institui; implorata fide clementissimi principis vocem faciendae synodi fac respui. . . . (6[3]) Hortor ergo, frater carissime, ut modis omnibus faciendae synodi perversorum conatibus resistatur, quae non alias semper indicta est, nisi cum aliquid in pravis sensibus novum aut in assertionem dogmatum emerit ambiguum: ut in commune tractantibus, si qua esset obscuritas, sacerdotalis deliberationis illuminaret auctoritas; sicut primum Arii ac deinde Nestorii, postremum Dioscori atque Eutyichis fieri coegit impietas. Et—quod misericordia Christi Dei nostri Salvatoris avertat—intimidandum est, abominabile esse, contra sententias totius orbis Domini sacerdotum et principum utriusque rectorum damnatos restitui. . . .

been saved. For if we say that Christ extended assistance only to those who have been redeemed, we shall seem to absolve the unredeemed, who, it is established, had to be punished for having despised redemption.

I also declare that through the order and course of the centuries some have been saved by the law of grace, others by the law of Moses, others by the law of nature, which God has written in the hearts of all [cf. Rom 2:15], in the hope of Christ's coming; nevertheless, from the beginning of the world, none has been set free from the original bondage except by the intercession of the sacred blood.

I also confess that the eternal fires and the flames of hell are prepared for mortal sins; for the human faults that endure to the end are deservedly followed by the divine judgment, which those justly incur who have not believed this (truth) with all their heart.

Pray for me, holy lords and apostolic Fathers! I, Lucidus the priest, have signed this my letter with my own hand, and I affirm the things that are asserted in it, and I condemn what has been condemned.

(§ 3 [chap. 2]) Since the doctrine of Our predecessors of holy memory is known, against which it is not permitted to dispute, and (since) no one who seems to think rightly has any need to be instructed by new explanations, but (since) all is clear and complete on how one deceived by heretics can be instructed and how one about to be planted in the vineyard of the Lord should be taught; therefore, when appealing to the faith of the most merciful prince, make him reject the request to hold a council. . . . (6 [3]) I therefore urge, dearest brother, that the efforts of perverse men to hold a council be resisted in every way; (councils) have never been convened except when something new arose in distorted minds or something doubtful appeared in the explication of dogmas: so that, if there were any obscurity, those who were discussing it in common might be enlightened by the authority of priestly deliberation; just as, first, the impiety of Arius and, then, that of Nestorius and, finally, that of Dioscorus and Eutyches compelled (this) to be done. And it must be made known that it is an abomination (may the mercy of Christ our God and Savior preserve us from this) to rehabilitate those condemned against the judgments of the priests of the Lord of all the earth and of the two reigning princes. . . .

FELIX II (III): March 13, 483–March 1, 492345: Letter Quoniam pietas to Emperor Zenon, August 1, 484

Ed.: E. Schwartz, Publizistische Sammlungen zum Acacianischen Schisma, AbhBayAk Philosophisch-historische Abteilung, n.s. 10 (Munich, 1934), 81₁₄–82₂₃ (Collectio Berolinensis, letter 33) / Thl 247, 249f. (= letter 8) / BullTau appendix 1:249a–250a. —Reg.: JR 601.

Liberty of the Church

Cum apud barbaras etiam nationes atque ipsius deitatis ignaras in exsequendis negotiis vel humanis iure gentium semper legationis cuiuslibet habeatur sacrosancta libertas, notum est omnibus quanto magis ab imperatore Romano et christiano principe in rebus praesertim divinis oportuerit intemerata servari. . . .

Puto autem quod pietas tua, quae etiam suis mavult vinci legibus quam reniti, caelestibus debeat parere decretis atque ita humanarum sibi rerum fastigium noverit esse commissum, ut tamen ea quae divina sunt, per dispensatores divinitus adtributos percipienda non ambigat; puto quod vobis sine ulla dubitatione sit utile, si Ecclesiam catholicam vestri tempore principatus sinatis uti legibus suis nec libertati eius quemquam permittatis obsistere, quae regni vobis restituit potestatem.

Certum est enim, hoc rebus vestris esse salutare, ut cum de causis agitur Dei, iuxta ipsius constitutum regiam voluntatem sacerdotibus Christi studeatis subdere, non praeferre, et sacrosancta per eorum praesules discere potius quam docere, Ecclesiae formam sequi, non huic humanitas sequenda iura praefigere neque eius sanctionibus velle dominari, cui Deus voluit clementiam tuam pia devotionis colla summittere, ne dum mensura caelestis dispositionis exceditur, eatur in contumeliam disponentis.

Since the freedom of any embassy whatsoever is 345 always regarded as sacrosanct by the law of nations, even among nations that are barbarian and ignorant of the Deity, even in conducting human affairs, everyone knows that it must, for all the more reason, be held unassailed, especially in divine matters, by a Roman emperor and a Christian ruler. . . .

I think, however, that Your Charity, who even prefer to be restrained by your own laws rather than to resist them, ought to obey the decrees of heaven and realize that supremacy in human concerns has been granted to you in such a way, however, that you have no doubt that what is divine is to be received from the hands of the stewards appointed by God; I think that, without any doubt, it is advantageous to you if, during the extent of your reign, you permit the Catholic Church to exercise her own laws and do not permit anyone to obstruct her freedom, which has restored to you the power to rule.

For it is certain that this is beneficial to your interests: that, when it is in regard to matters of God, to strive, in accordance with his commandments, to subject, not prefer, your royal will to the priests of Christ, and to learn what is most sacred through their leaders rather than to teach them, to follow the rule of the Church, not to apply to her statutes from a human law, and not wanting to rule over the determinations of her to whom God has wished Your Clemency to bow in the submission of religious devotion, so that, by exceeding the measure of celestial order, you do not come to abuse the One who orders.

GELASIUS I: March 1, 492–November 21, 496347: Letter Famuli vestrae pietatis to Emperor Anastasius I, 494

The letter is the most celebrated document of the ancient Church concerning the two powers on earth.

Ed.: E. Schwartz, Publizistische Sammlungen zum Acacianischen Schisma, AbhBayAk Philosophisch-historische Abteilung, n.s. 10 (Munich, 1934), 20₅₋₂₈ / Thl 350–52 (= letter 12, no. 2f.) / BullTau appendix 1:281ab / PL 59:42A–43A (= letter 8); cf. Gratian, Decretum, p. I, dist. 96, c. 10 (Frdb 1:340). —Reg.: JR 632.

Twofold Supreme Power on Earth

(2) Duo sunt quippe, imperator auguste, quibus principaliter mundus hic regitur, auctoritas sacrata pontificum et regalis potestas, in quibus tanto gravius pondus est sacerdotum, quanto etiam pro ipsis regibus hominum in divino redditori sunt examine rationem.

(2) For there are, Your Imperial Majesty, two 347 principles by which this world is principally governed: the sacred authority of the pontiffs and the royal power; between the two, the burden of priests is all the heavier, as they are obliged to give an accounting before the divine justice even for those very kings of men.

Nosti etenim, fili clementissime, quoniam licet praesedeas humano generi dignitate, rerum tamen praesulibus divinarum devotus colla submittis atque ab eis causas tuae salutis expetis, inque sumendis caelestibus sacramentis eisque, ut competit, disponendis subdi te debere cognoscis religionis ordine potius quam praeesse. Nosti itaque inter haec ex illorum te pendere iudicio, non illos ad tuam velle redigi voluntatem.

Si enim quantum ad ordinem publicae pertinet disciplinae, cognoscentes imperium tibi superna dispositione conlatum legibus tuis ipsi quoque parent religionis antistites, ne vel in rebus mundanis exclusae ...¹ videantur obviare sententiae, quo, oro te, decet affectu eis et convenit oboedire, qui praerogandis venerabilibus sunt attributi mysteriis?

Proinde, sicut non leve discrimen incumbit pontificibus siluisse pro divinitatis cultu quod congruit, ita his, quod absit, non mediocre periculum est, qui, cum debeant parere, despiciunt. Et si cunctis generaliter sacerdotibus recte divina tractantibus fidelium convenit corda submitti, quanto potius sedis illius praesuli consensus est adhibendus, quem cunctis sacerdotibus et divinitas summa voluit praeminere et subsequens Ecclesiae generalis iugiter pietas celebravit?

(3) Ubi pietas tua evidenter advertit numquam quolibet penitus humano consilio elevare se quemquam posse illius privilegio vel confessioni, quem Christi vox praetulit universis, quem Ecclesia veneranda confessa semper est et habet devota primatem. Impeti possunt humanis praesumptionibus, quae divino sunt iudicio constituta, vinci autem quorumlibet potestate non possunt.

348: Synod of ROME: Acts of the Absolution of Misenus, May 13, 495

Misenus, the papal legate, had defected to the schismatic Acacius. In the Synod of Rome of 495, he was absolved of the excommunication imposed upon him in October 485.

Ed.: CSEL 35:484₈–485₂₀ (= Collectio Avellana, letter 103) / Thl 445f. (= Gelasius, letter 30) / BarAE, at year 495, nos. 17–18.

Power of the Church to Remit Sins

348 ... Cum nulli animae Deus omnipotens et misericors per ecclesiasticam pietatem quaerenti voluerit remedium denegari, non dubium est hoc ipso auctore Deo et divina

For you are, most merciful son, aware that through your dignity you indeed preside over mankind, but nevertheless, you bow devoutly to those who are the leaders in divine matters, and from them you seek the source of your salvation; and you understand that, in receiving the sacraments of heaven and in administering them (as appropriate), you must be a follower, according to the rule of religion, rather than the leader. And so you realize that in these matters you are dependent upon their judgment and must not want them to be subject to your will.

If, then, religious leaders themselves recognize, in what concerns the order of public discipline, that authority has been bestowed upon you by a dispensation from above, and therefore obey your laws, so that in worldly things they may not even appear to oppose ...¹ an impossible decision, with what feelings, I ask you, is it fitting and proper for you to obey those who have been assigned to the administration of the venerable mysteries?

Hence, just as no small risk impends for pontiffs if they remained silent about what pertains to the worship of the Deity, so there is no trivial danger for persons who—perish the thought!—show disrespect when they ought to show obedience. And if it is appropriate for the hearts of the faithful to be submissive to all priests in general when they are properly attending to godly concerns, how much the more is compliance to be accorded the leader of that See which the most high Godhead has wished to give preeminence over all priests and which the subsequent devotion of the universal Church also has continually exalted?

(3) In this regard Your Charity has obviously noticed that no one has ever been able to lift himself up by any merely human devising to the privilege or the acknowledged position of the person whom the voice of Christ has put before all the rest, whom the venerable Church has always acknowledged and devoutly regards as primate. That which has been decided by God's judgment can be attacked by human presumptuousness, but it cannot be vanquished by any power whatsoever.

... Since the almighty and merciful God has wished that no soul who desires the means of salvation through the clemency of the Church should be refused, there is no doubt that this has come about at the instigation of God himself and in consequence of God-given repentance, that action is being taken in regard to his [Misenus]’ reception at a time when a necessity that cannot be postponed also compels it to be granted, inasmuch as our Savior assigns to the blessed apostle Peter before the rest: “Whatever you bind on earth shall be bound in heaven, and whatever you loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven” [Mt 16:19]; and just as no exception to these words exists, so through the offices of the apostolic dispensation everything without distinction can be bound and everything can subsequently be absolved as well, particularly when an example of apostolic forgiveness can thereby be given even more for all, so that all who have been condemned, if they return to their senses and withdraw from error . . . , may have no doubt that they will be freed . . . from the bonds of condemnation . . . through absolution. . . .

*347 ¹ Schwartz finds a lacuna here that he completes in the following manner: "parere vel a Deo tibi permissae" (what is to be obeyed or permitted to you by God).

conpunctione prodire, ut tunc de eius [Miseni] receptione tractetur, quando eam non protelanda quoque necessitas compellat impendi, nostro praeterea Salvatore beato Petro Apostolo prae ceteris deleganti: “Quaecumque ligaveris super terram, ligata erunt et in caelis, et quaecumque solveris super terram, erunt soluta et in caelis” [Mt 16:19], sicut et his verbis nihil constat exceptum, sic per apostolicae dispensationis officium et totum possit generaliter alligari et totum consequenter absolvi, praecipue cum ex hoc magis praerberi cunctis oporteat apostolicae miserationis exemplum, ut absolutione damnati, si respiscant universi et ab errore se retrahant . . . vinculis se damnationis . . . non ambigant exuendos. . . .

Proinde quantum permittente Domino possibilitatis humanae desideranti remedia praebeamus, totum, quod supra nostrae facultatis est modulum, divino iudicio relinquentes, non autem nobis poterunt imputare, cur praevaricationis offensam viventibus remittamus, quod Ecclesiae Deo largiente possibile est, qui nos etiam mortuis veniam praestare deposcunt, quod nobis possibile non esse manifestum est. Quia cum dictum sit “quae ligaveris super terram”, quos ergo non esse iam constat super terram, non humano, sed suo iudicio reservavit, nec audet Ecclesia sibimet vindicare, quod ipsis beatis apostolis conspiciat non fuisse concessum, quia alia sit causa superstitum, alia defunctorum.

Hence, we wish to provide the remedies of which mankind is capable, with the permission of the Lord, to the one who desires it, leaving to God’s judgment everything that goes beyond the small bounds of our capacity. However, no one will be able to reproach us for forgiving to the living the offense of a transgression, which is possible for the Church due to God’s generosity, if he demands that we grant pardon even to the dead, which is clearly not possible for us. For, since it is said “what you bind on earth”, he has therefore reserved those who, it is agreed, are no longer on earth for his own judgment, not for that of men, and the Church does not dare to claim for herself what she clearly sees was not granted to the blessed apostles themselves, since the situation of the living is one thing, that of the dead another.

349: Treatise Ne forte regarding the Bond of Anathema, 495

Ed.: E. Schwartz, Publizistische Sammlungen zum Acacianischen Schisma, AbhBayAk Philosophisch-historische Abteilung, n.s. 10 (Munich, 1934), 10₁₃–11₂ / Thl 562 (= tract. 4) / PL 59:105A–C / MaC 8:90C–91A. —Reg.: CiPL 1672; JR 701.

Remission of Sins

(5) Dixit Dominus, quod in Spiritum Sanctum peccantibus nec hic esset nec in futuro saeculo remittendum [Mt 12:32]. Quantos autem cognoscimus in Spiritum Sanctum delinquentes, sicut haereticos diversos . . . ad fidem catholicam revertentes, et hic remissionem suae percepisse blasphemiae, et in futurum spem sumpsisse indulgentiae consequendae? Nec ideo non vera est Domini sententia, aut putabitur esse ullatenus resoluta, cum circa tales, si hoc esse permanent, nunquam omnino solvenda persistat, effectis autem non talibus inesse non possit, quae non est talibus inrogata.

Sicut etiam est consequenter et illud beati Ioannis Apostoli: Est peccatum ad mortem: non dico, ut ore tur

(5) The Lord said that to those sinning against the Holy Spirit, it should not be forgiven either here or in the future world [Mt 12:34]. But how many do we know that sin against the Holy Spirit, such as various heretics . . . who return to the Catholic faith, and here have received the pardon of their blasphemy and have enjoyed the hope of gaining indulgence in the future? And not on this account is the judgment of the Lord not true, or will it be thought to be in any way weakened, since with respect to such men, if they continue to be thus, the judgment remains never to be relaxed at all; moreover, never because of such effects is it not imposed.

Just as consequently it is likewise said by the blessed apostle John: There is a sin unto death: I do not say pro eo; et est peccatum non ad mortem: dico, ut oretur pro eo [1 Io 5:16f]. Est peccatum ad mortem in eodem peccato manentibus; est peccatum non ad mortem ab eodem peccato recedentibus. Nullum est quippe peccatum, pro quo aut non oret Ecclesia remittendo, aut quod, data sibi divinitus potestate, desistentibus ab eodem non possit absolvere, vel paenitentibus relaxare, cui dicitur: Quaecunque dimiseritis super terram ... [cf. Io 20:23]; “quaecunque solveritis super terram, soluta erunt et in caelo” [Mt 18:18]. In quibuscunque omnia sunt, quantacunque sint, et qualiacunque sint, veraci nihilominus eorum manente sententia, qua nunquam solvendus esse denuntiatur in eorum tenore consistens, non etiam ab hoc eodem post recedens.

that prayer should be offered for this: and there is a sin not unto death: I do say that prayer should be offered for this [1 Jn 5:16f]. It is a sin unto death for those persisting in the same sin; it is not a sin unto death for those withdrawing from the same sin. For there is no sin for whose remission the Church does not pray, or which she cannot forgive those who desist from that same sin, or from which she cannot loose for those who repent, since the power has been divinely given to her, to whom it was said: Whatever you forgive upon earth ... [cf. Jn 20:23]; “whatever you loose upon earth shall be loosed in heaven” [Mt 18:18]. In whatever all are (included), however great they may be and of whatever kind they may be, although the judgment of them nevertheless remains true, by which he is denounced (as) never to be loosed who continues in the course of them, but not after he withdraws from this same (course).

350–354: Decretum Gelasianum, or the Decretal Letter concerning Books Approved and Not Approved, date uncertain

According to tradition, all or some parts of this collection of documents are attributed to Damasus I (Decretum Damasi) or to Gelasius I (Decretum Gelasianum). They were also amplified and revised by Pope Hormisdas (decretal letter [125 Thl] De scripturis divinis, August 13, 520). It consists of documents of diverse epochs that were brought together in the sixth century either in northern Italy or southern France by an ecclesiastical clerk. It is made up of five parts: (1) the treatment of the Holy Spirit and christological titles [*178]; (2) the canon of Sacred Scripture [*179f.]; (3) declaration on the primacy of the Roman See and on the patriarchal sees [*350f.]; (4) declaration on the recognition of ecumenical councils [*352]; (5) decree on the approval of the writings of the Fathers of the Church and on the rejection of apocryphal and heretical works [*353f.]. Parts 1–2 can substantially be traced back to Damasus I; however, this is disputed for part 3 (cf. C. H. Turner and E. Schwartz; others, though, still attribute this part to Damasus). Parts 4–5 are, without doubt, later than Damasus; they are attributed to Gelasius I and Hormisdas. The authenticity, though, of the above-mentioned letter [of Hormisdas] is contested.

Ed.: [*350–54]: E. von Dobschütz: TU 38/IV (Leipzig, 1912), 7–13, 29–60 / Thl 454–71 [= Decretum Gelasianum]; 932–38 [= letter of Hormisdas] / PL 59:159B–164B; cf. 165–80, the synopsis / BullTau 1:122b–124b; cf. 665–72 / BullCocq 1:71a–72a; cf. 1:409–16 / MaC 8:147–52; cf. 157–72. —[only *350f.]: Turner, in JThSt 1 (1900): 560 / Turner 1/1/II, 155–58 / PL 13:374B–376A; 19:793A–794B. —Reg.: CIPL 1676; JR 700, with additions.

Primacy of the Roman See

350 Post [has omnes]¹ propheticas et evangelicas atque apostolicas [quas superius deprompsimus]¹ scripturas, quibus Ecclesia catholica per gratiam Dei fundata est, etiam illud intimandum putavimus, quod, quamvis universae per orbem catholicae diffusae Ecclesiae unus thalamus Christi sit, sancta tamen Romana Ecclesia nullis synodicis constitutis ceteris Ecclesiis praelata sit, sed evangelica voce Domini et Salvatoris primatum obtenuit: Tu es Petrus, inquis, et super hanc petram aedificabo Ecclesiam meam, et portae inferi non praevalent adversus eam, et tibi dabo claves regni caelorum, et quaecumque ligaveris super terram, erunt ligata et in caelo, et quaecumque solveris super terram, erunt soluta et in caelo [Mt 16:18s].

After [all these]¹ prophetic and evangelical and apostolic writings [which we have set forth above],¹ on which the Catholic Church by the grace of God is founded, we have thought this (fact) also ought to be published, namely, that, although the universal Catholic Church spread throughout the world is the one bridal chamber of Christ, nevertheless the holy Roman Church has not been preferred to the other Churches by reason of synodal decrees, but she has obtained the primacy by the evangelical voice of the Lord and Savior saying: You are Peter, and on this rock I will build my Church, and the powers of death shall not prevail against her. I will give you the keys of the kingdom of heaven, and whatever you bind on earth shall be bound in heaven, and whatever you loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven [Mt 16:18f].

*350 ¹ Added in manuscripts in which the canon of Holy Scripture precedes.

Addita est etiam societas beatissimi Pauli Apostoli, vasis electionis, qui non diverso, sicut haeretici garrunt, sed uno tempore, uno eodemque die gloriosa morte cum Petro in urbe Roma sub Caesare Nerone agonizans coronatus est; et pariter supradictam sanctam Romanam Ecclesiam Christo Domino consecrarunt aliisque omnibus urbibus in universo mundo sua praesentia atque venerando triumpho praetulerunt.

Est ergo prima Petri Apostoli sedes Romana Ecclesia non habens maculam neque rugam nec aliquid eiusmodi [Eph 5:27]. Secunda autem sedes apud Alexandriam beati Petri nomine a Marco eius discipulo atque evangelista consecrata est.... Tertia vero sedes apud Antiochiam beatissimi Apostoli Petri habetur honorabilis, eo quod illic, priusquam Romam venisset habitavit et illic primum nomen Christianorum novellae gentis exortum est [cf. Act 11:26].

There is added also the association of the most blessed Paul the apostle, the vessel of election, who not at a different time, as the heretics say, but at the one time, on one and the same day, while suffering agony together with Peter was crowned with a glorious death under the emperor Nero in the city of Rome; and equally have they consecrated the above-mentioned Church of Rome to Christ the Lord and have raised her above all other cities in the whole world by their presence and their venerable triumph.

Accordingly the see of Peter the apostle of the Church of Rome is first, having neither spot nor wrinkle nor any such thing [Eph 5:27]. But the second see at Alexandria was consecrated in the name of blessed Peter by Mark, his disciple and evangelist.... As indeed the third in honor is considered the see of the most blessed apostle Peter at Antioch, because he lived there before he came to Rome and (since) the name "Christians" for the new people first arose there [cf. Acts 11:26].

Authority of Ecumenical Councils

Et quamvis aliud fundamentum nullus possit ponere praeter id, quod positum est, qui est Christus Iesus [cf. 1 Cor 3:11], tamen ad aedificationem sancta id est Romana Ecclesia post illas Veteris vel Novi Testamenti, quas regulariter suscipimus, etiam has suscipi non prohibet Scripturas, id est: Sanctam Synodum Nicaenam ...; [sanctam Synodum Constantinopolitanam, ... in qua Macedonius haereticus debitam damnationem excepit;]¹ s. Synodum Ephesinam...; s. Synodum Chalcedonensem.... [Sed et si qua sunt concilia a s. Patribus hactenus instituta, post istorum quattuor auctoritatem et custodienda et recipienda decrevimus.]¹

And although no one can lay a foundation other than the one that has been laid, which is Christ Jesus [cf. 1 Cor 3:11], nevertheless, the holy, that is, Roman Church does not forbid that, after the scriptures of the Old and New Testaments, which we take as a rule, there be received for edification also these writings, namely: the holy Council of Nicaea ...; [the holy Council of Constantinople, ... at which the heretic Macedonius received a well-deserved condemnation;]¹ the holy Council of Ephesus ...; the holy Council of Chalcedon.... [But we have decided that any other synods that have been held by the holy Fathers up to this time are also to be both observed and accepted as next in authority to those four.]¹

Books to Be Accepted

Item opuscula beati Caecilii Cypriani martyris, Carthag. episcopi. Item opuscula ... [Eodem modo allegantur Gregor. Naz., Basilius M., Athanas. Alex., Iohannes Chrysost., Theophilus Alex., Cyrill. Alex., Hilarius Pict., Ambros., Augustin., Hieronym., Prosper Aquit.] Item epistolam beati Leonis papae ad Flavianum C'politatum episcopum destinata; de cuius textu quispiam si usque ad unum iota disputaverit, et non eam in omnibus venerabiliter receperit, anathema sit. Item opuscula atque tractatus omnium orthodoxorum Patrum, qui in nullo a sanctae Ecclesiae Romanae consortio deviarunt, ... legendos decernimus.

Likewise, the works of the blessed martyr Caecilius Cyprian, Bishop of Carthage. Likewise, the works.... [In the same manner are cited Gregory Nazianzen, Basil the Great, Athanasius of Alexandria, John Chrysostom, Theophilus of Alexandria, Cyril of Alexandria, Hilary of Poitiers, Ambrose, Augustine, Jerome, Prosper of Aquitaine.] Also the epistle of blessed Pope Leo addressed to Flavian, Bishop of Constantinople; if anyone argues concerning the text of this one even in regard to one iota, and does not receive it in all (parts) reverently, let him be anathema. Likewise, we decree that the works and treatises of all the orthodox Fathers who in nothing have deviated from the communion of the holy Roman Church ... ought to be read.

*352 ¹ Without doubt, this was not inserted prior to the Acacian schism (A.D. 519).

Item decretales epistolae, quas beatissimi papae diversis temporibus ab urbe Roma pro diversorum Patrum consultatione dederunt, venerabiliter suscipiendas esse.

Item gesta sanctorum martyrum... Sed ideo secundum antiquam consuetudinem singulari cautela in sancta Romana Ecclesia non leguntur, quia et eorum, qui conscribere, nomina penitus ignorantur, et ab infidelibus et idiotis superflua aut minus apta quam rei ordo fuerit, esse putantur... Propter quod, ... ne vel levis subsannandi oriretur occasio, in sancta Romana Ecclesia non leguntur. Nos tamen cum praedicta Ecclesia et omnes martyres et eorum gloriosos agones, qui Deo magis quam hominibus noti sunt, omni devotione veneramus.

Item vitas Patrum, Pauli, Antonii, Hilarionis et omnium eremitarum, quas tamen vir beatissimus Hieronymus descripsit, cum omni honore suscipimus.

[Continuando seriem librorum monetur:] cum haec ad catholicorum manus pervenerint, beati Pauli Apostoli praecedat sententia: “Omnia probate, quod bonum est, tenete” [1 Th 5:21]. Item Rufinus vir religiosus plurimos ecclesiastici operis edidit libros, nonnullas etiam Scripturas interpretatus est. Sed quoniam venerabilis Hieronymus eum in aliquibus de arbitrii libertate notavit, illa sentimus, quae praedictum beatum Hieronymum sentire cognoscimus; et non solum de Rufino, sed etiam de universis, quos vir saepius memoratus zelo Dei et fidei religione reprehendit.—Item Origenis nonnulla opuscula, quae vir beatissimus Hieronymus non repudiat, legenda suscipimus. Reliqua autem omnia cum auctore suo dicimus renuenda...

Likewise, too, the decretal letters that the most blessed popes have written at various times from the city of Rome to advise various Fathers are to be received with reverence.

Likewise, the deeds of the holy martyrs... But in accordance with ancient custom (and) with particular caution these are not read in the holy Roman Church, because the names of those who wrote them are entirely unknown and, in addition, they are thought by infidels and the ignorant to be superfluous or less appropriate than the actual circumstances... Because of this, ... they are not read in the holy Roman Church so that not even the slightest occasion of ridicule might arise. We, however, with the aforementioned Church venerate with all devotion both all the martyrs and the glorious agonies of those who are known to God more than to men.

Likewise, we receive with all reverence the lives of the Fathers, of Paul, of Anthony, of Hilarion, and of all the hermits, but only those the most blessed Jerome has written.

[In continuing the listing of books a warning is given:] Although this comes into the hands of Catholics, let the judgment of blessed Paul the apostle lead the way: “Test everything; hold fast what is good” [1 Thess 5:21]. Likewise, Rufinus, a religious man, has produced several volumes of ecclesiastical works and also interpretations of some of the Scriptures. But because the venerable Jerome criticized him on certain points in regard to free will, our opinion is what we perceive to be the opinion of the aforesaid blessed Jerome; and not only in regard to Rufinus, but also in regard to all those criticized by that man so often noted for his zeal for God and his devotion to the faith. — Likewise, we accept as readable some works of Origen that the most blessed Jerome did not repudiate. However, we say that all his other works are to be rejected along with their author...

Books Not to Be Accepted

354 Cetera, quae ab haereticis sive schismaticis conscripta vel praedicata sunt, nullatenus recipit catholica et apostolica Romana Ecclesia.

[Following this is a long list of apocrypha, in the narrow sense, i.e., of pseudo-canonical writings, as well as in the broad sense, of writings burdened with heresy.]

Haec et his similia, quae ... haeresiarum ... docuerunt vel conscripserunt, quorum nomina minime retinentur, non solum repudiata, verum etiam ab omni Romana catholica et apostolica Ecclesia eliminata atque cum suis auctoribus auctorumque sequacibus sub anathematis insolubili vinculo in aeternum confitemur esse damnata.

Other works that have been written or proclaimed by heretics or schismatics, the Catholic and apostolic Roman Church does not accept at all.

We declare that (all) this and what is similar to it, which ... the heretics ... taught or composed ... , whose names are not all retained (in memory), has been not only rejected, but even banned by the whole Roman Catholic and apostolic Church and condemned along with its authors and the followers of the authors under an unbreakable bond of anathema forevermore.

355: Treatise Necessarium quoque against Eutyches and Nestorius, date uncertain

Ed.: E. Schwartz, Publizistische Sammlungen zum Acacianischen Schisma, AbhBayAk Philosophisch-historische Abteilung, n.s. 10 (Munich, 1934), 87_{8–12} / Thl 532f. (= tract. III). —Reg.: JR 670; CIPL 1673.

Two Natures in Christ

(c. 4) Quamvis enim unus atque idem sit Dominus Iesus Christus, et totus Deus homo et totus homo Deus, et quicquid est humanitatis, Deus homo suum faciat, et quicquid est Dei, homo Deus habet: tamen ut hoc permaneat sacramentum nec possit ex aliqua parte dissolvi, sic totus homo permanet esse quod Deus est, ut totus Deus permaneat esse quod homo est...

(Chap. 4) Although, indeed, the Lord Jesus Christ is one and the same, both man fully God and God fully man, and all that pertains to humanity, the God-man makes his own, and all that pertains to God, the man-God possesses, nevertheless, in order that this mystery may endure and not be dissolved in any respect, just so the whole man continues to be what God is, as the whole God continues to be what man is...

ANASTASIUS II: November 24, 496–November 17 (19?), 498356: Letter Exordium pontificatus mei to Emperor Anastasius I, late 496

Ed.: Thl 620–23 (= letter 1) / BullCocq 1:74b–75a / BullTau 1:128b–129a / cf. Gratian, Decretum, p. I, dist. 19, c. 8 (Frdb 1:63). —Reg.: JR 744 with additions.

The Validity of the Sacraments Administered by Schismatics

(c. 7) Secundum Ecclesiae catholicae consuetudinem sacratissimum serenitatis tuae pectus agnoscat, quod nullum de his, vel quos baptizavit Acacius¹ vel quos sacerdotes sive levitas secundum canones ordinavit, ulla eos ex nomine Acacii portio laesionis attingat, quo forsitan per iniquum tradita sacramenti gratia minus firma videatur. Nam et baptismum ... sive ab adultero vel a fure fuerit datum, ad percipientem munus pervenit illibatam: quia vox illa, quae per columbam sonuit, omnem maculam humanae pollutionis excludit, qua declaratur ac dicitur: “Hic est qui baptizat ...” [Lc 3:16].² Nam si visibilis solis istius radii, cum per loca foetidissima transeunt, nulla contactus inquinatio maculantur, multo magis illius, qui istum visibilem fecit, virtus nulla ministri indignitate constringitur...

(Chap. 7) According to the most sacred custom of the Catholic Church, let the heart of Your Serenity acknowledge that no share in the injury from the name of Acacius¹ should attach to any of these whom Acacius the schismatic bishop has baptized, or to any whom he has ordained priests or deacons according to the canons, lest perchance the grace of the sacrament seem less powerful when conferred by an unjust (person). For baptism ... even if administered by an adulterer or by a thief accomplishes its purpose by undiminished reception: since that voice which issued forth through the dove excludes all stain of human pollution whereby it declares and pronounces: “This is he who baptizes ...” [Lk 3:16].² For if the rays of that visible sun are not stained by contact with any pollution when they pass over the foulest places, much less is the virtue of him who made that visible (sun) fettered by any unworthiness in the minister...

(c. 9, al. 8) Ideo ergo et hic ... male bona ministrando sibi tantum nocuit. Nam inviolabile sacramentum, quod per illum datum est, aliis perfectionem suae virtutis obtinuit.

(Chap. 9, others chap. 8) On that account, therefore, this one ... has injured only himself by administering good things wickedly. For the inviolable sacrament, which was given through him, preserved for others the perfection of its power.

357–359: Letter In prolixitate epistolae to Bishop Laurence of Lignido (Illyria), 497

This letter was erroneously attributed also to Gelasius I. The same formula of faith is likewise found in the letter, conserved in fragments, of Anastasius II to Ursicinus from 497 (Thl 627f. = letter 4).

Ed.: O. Guenther: CSEL 35:226₁–228₉ (= Collectio Avellana, letter 81) / Thl 625f. (= Anastasius, letter 3) / PL 59:20A–21B (= Gelasius, letter 2). —Reg.: JR 746.

*356 ¹ Patriarch of Constantinople (472–489), author of the Acacian schism (484–519).

² Cf. Augustine, Contra epistolam Parmeniani II, 10, no. 22; 11, no. 23 (CSEL 51:71_{10f.}, 73₂₂ / PL 43:66, 67).

Profession of Faith

357 Confitemur ergo, Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum Filium Dei unigenitum ante omnia quidem saecula sine principio ex Patre natum secundum deitatem, in novissimis autem diebus de sancta virgine Maria eundem incarnatum et perfectum hominem ex anima rationali et corporis susceptione, homouision Patri secundum deitatem et homouision nobis secundum humanitatem. Duarum enim naturarum perfectarum unitas facta est ineffabiliter. Propter quod unum Christum eundem Filium Dei et hominis unigenitum a Patre et primogenitum ex mortuis confitemur, scientes quod quidem coaeternus suo Patri secundum divinitatem, secundum quam opifex est omnium, et dignatus est post consensionem sanctae Virginis, cum dixit ad angelum “Ecce ancilla Domini, fiat mihi secundum verbum tuum” [Lc 1:38], ineffabiliter sibi ex ipsa aedificari templum et istud sibi univit, quod non coaeternum de sua substantia e caelo detulit corpus, sed ex massa nostrae substantiae, hoc est ex Virgine. Hoc accipiens et sibi univens non Deus Verbum in carne versus est neque ut phantasma apparens, sed inconvertibiliter et incommutabiliter suam conservavit essentiam, primitias naturae nostrae sibi univit. Nam principium Deus Verbum has nostrae naturae primitias per multam sibi bonitatem unire dignatus est: qui non permixtus, sed in utrisque substantiis unus et ipse visus secundum quod scriptum est: “Solvite templum istud, et in tribus diebus resuscitabo illud” [Io 2:19]. Solvitur enim Christus Iesus secundum meam substantiam, quam suscepit, et solum suscitavit proprium templum, hoc ipse secundum divinam substantiam, secundum quam et omnium artifex est.

358 Numquam autem post resurrectionem unitio nostrae naturae discessit a proprio templo nec discedere potest propter ineffabilem suam benignitatem, sed est ipse Dominus Iesus Christus et passibilis et impassibilis, passibilis secundum humanitatem, impassibilis secundum divinitatem. Suscitavit igitur suum templum Deus Verbum et in se naturae nostrae resurrectionem et renovationem operatus est. Et hanc Dominus Christus, postquam resurrexit a mortuis, discipulis ostendebat dicens: “Palpate me et videte, quoniam spiritus carnem et ossa non habet, quemadmodum me videtis habere” [Lc 24:39]. Non dixit “quemadmodum me dicitis esse”, sed “habere”, ut et qui habet et qui habetur considerans, non permixtionem, non conversionem, non mutationem, sed unitatem factam respicias. Propterea et fixuras clavorum et punctioem lanceae demonstravit et cum

Therefore we acknowledge that our Lord Jesus Christ, only begotten Son of God, was indeed before all ages born from the Father without a beginning in respect to his divinity, but was in recent times made flesh of the holy Virgin Mary and perfect man from his rational soul and his assumption of a body, one in being with the Father in respect to his divinity and one in being with us in respect to his humanity, for the union of the two perfect natures was brought about in a way that cannot be expressed in words. For this reason we acknowledge the one Christ both as Son of God and as (Son) of Man, as the Only-Begotten of the Father and as the firstborn of the dead; for we know that he is co-eternal with his Father in respect to his divinity, with whom he is the Creator of everything, and that, after the consent of the holy Virgin, when she said to the angel, “Behold, I am the handmaid of the Lord; let it be to me according to your word” [Lk 1:38], he deigned to build from her, in a way beyond the power of words, a temple for himself and united it to himself; and he did not bring down this body from heaven as co-eternal out of his own substance, but out of the matter of our substance, that is, from the Virgin. In taking this and uniting it to himself, God the Word was not turned into flesh, nor was he like an illusion, but he kept his own essence in an inconvertible and immutable way (and) united the fundamentals of our nature to himself. For God the Word, as the beginning, deigned to unite these fundamentals of our nature to himself through his abundant goodness; he appeared, not commingled, but one and the same in both substances, as it was written: “Destroy this temple, and in three days I will raise it up” [Jn 2:19]. For Christ Jesus is destroyed in respect to my substance, which he took upon himself, and he raises up his own temple that was destroyed, (doing this) in respect to the divine substance by virtue of which he is also the Creator of everything.

After the resurrection of our nature united (with his), however, he has never separated himself from his temple and, due to his inexpressible goodness, can no longer separate himself (from it); rather, the Lord Jesus Christ himself is both subject to suffering and incapable of suffering: capable of suffering in respect to (his) humanity, incapable of suffering in respect to (his) divinity. Therefore, God the Word has raised up his own temple and brought about in himself the resurrection and the renewal of our nature. And Christ the Lord showed this to his disciples after he rose from the dead, saying: “Handle me and see; for a spirit has not flesh and bones as you see that I have” [Lk 24:39]. He said, not “which you say that I am”, but “(that I) have”, so that both the one who has and the one who is might be considered and so that it might be realized that this is not a blending, discipulis manducavit, ut per omnia resurrectionem nostrae naturae in se renovatam doceret, et, quia secundum beatam divinitatis substantiam inconvertibilis, incommutabilis, impassibilis, immortalis, nullius indigens, perficiens omnes passiones, et permisit proprio inferri templo, quod virtute propria suscitavit, et per propriam perfectionem templi sui renovationem nostrae naturae operatus est.

Qui autem dicunt subtilem hominem Christum aut passibilem Deum aut in carne versum aut non cointum habuisse corpus aut de caelo hoc detulisse aut phantasma esse aut mortale dicentes Deum Verbum indiguise, ut a Patre resuscitaretur, aut sine anima corpus aut sine sensu hominem suscepisse aut duas substantias Christi secundum permixtionem confusas unam factam fuisse substantiam et non confitentes Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum duas esse naturas inconfusas, unam autem personam, secundum quod unus Christus, unus idem Filius, istos anathematizat catholica et apostolica Ecclesia.

360–361: Letter Bonum atque iucundum to the Bishops of Gaul, August 23, 498

Ed.: Thl 634–36 (= letter 6) / J. Tosi: ÖstVJKTh 5 (1866): 556–59 / BullTau appendix 1:342b–344b. —Reg.: JR 751, with additions.

The Origin of Souls and Original Sin

(c. 1 § 2) [Asserunt quidam haeretici] quod humano generi parentes, ut ex materiali faece tradunt corpora, ita etiam vitalis animae spiritum tribuant. . . . (§ 4) Quomodo ergo contra divinam sententiam carnali nimis intellectu animam ad Dei imaginem factam putant hominum permixtionem diffundi atque insinuari, cum ab illo, qui ab initio hoc fecit, actio ipsa hodieque non desinat, sicut ipse dixit: “Pater meus adhuc operatur, et ego operor” [cf. Io 5:17?] . . .

(§ 5) Cum et illud debeant intelligere quod scriptum est: “Qui vivit in aeternum, creavit omnia simul” [Sir 18:1]. Si igitur, antequam Scriptura per species singulas in singulis quibusque creaturis ordinem rationemque diserneret, “potentialiter”, quod negari non potest, “et causaliter in opere pertinente ad creanda omnia simul, a quibus consummatis in die septimo requievit, nunc autem visibiliter in opere pertinente ad temporum cursum usque nunc operatur”:¹ sanae igitur doctrinae acquiescant, quod ille indat animas, qui “vocat ea, quae non sunt, tanquam sint” [cf. Rm 4:17].

not a metamorphosis, not an alteration, but a unity that has been produced. For this reason he showed both the marks of the nails and the lance wound and ate with his disciples, so that through every means he might show how our nature has been resurrected and renewed in him; and, because by virtue of the blessed substance of his divinity he (is) unchangeable, immutable, incapable of suffering, immortal, needing nothing, he accomplished all sufferings and allowed them to be inflicted on his temple, which he raised up by his own strength, and, through the proper perfection of his temple, brought about the renewal of our nature.

But the catholic and apostolic Church anathematizes 359 those who say that Christ was a mere man or that God was capable of suffering or was transformed into flesh or did not possess a body united to him or brought it down from heaven or that he is a ghost or, saying that as God the Word was mortal, he needed to be raised by the Father or that he took on a body without a soul or humanity without the senses or that the two substances of Christ were intermingled in a mixture and became one substance and do not acknowledge that our Lord Jesus Christ is two natures, without confusion, but one Person and, consequently, is one Christ and one and the same Son.

(Chap. 1, § 2) [Certain heretics declare] that just 360 as parents transmit bodies to the human race through a material excretion, so also they bestow the spirit of the living soul. . . . (§ 4) How do they suppose, therefore, with an excessively carnal understanding contrary to divine purpose, that a soul made in the image of God is propagated and imparted through the mingling of human beings, when the action of him who has made this from the beginning does not cease making this even today, just as he himself said: “My Father is working still, and I am working” [cf. Jn 5:17?] . . .

(§ 5) For they also should understand what was written: “He who lives eternally created all things at the same time” [Sir 18:1]. If, then, before Scripture, (God) disposed order and reason through particular species in each and every creature, “potentially” (which cannot be denied) “and in a causal mode in the work of creating all things at once (after whose completion he rested on the seventh day), he now, however, operates visibly in the work extending through the course of time up to the present”:¹ let them, therefore, follow the sound doctrine that (God) imparts souls, he who “calls forth things which are not so that they may come to be” [cf. Rom 4:17].

*360 ¹ Augustine, De Genesi ad litteram VI, 4, no. 5 (CSEL 28/I:175₂₄ / PL 34:341).

361 (c. 4 § 13) Qua putant fortasse pie ac bene se dicere, ut animas merito dicant a parentibus tradi, cum sint peccatis implicitae, haec ab ipsis sapienti debent separatione discerni: quod ab illis nihil aliud potest tradi, quam quod ab ipsorum mala praesumptione commissum est, id est, culpa poenae peccati, quam per traducem secuta progenies evidenter ostendit, ut pravi homines distortique nascantur. In quo solo utique Deus nullam communionem habere perspicue cernitur, qui ne in hanc necessitatem calamitatis inciderent, genito mortis terrore prohibuit atque praedixit. Itaque per traducem, quod a parentibus traditur, evidenter apparet, et quid ab initio usque ad finem vel operatus sit Deus vel operetur ostenditur.

(Chap. 4, § 13) Insofar as they perhaps suppose they are speaking piously and well, in saying that souls are rightfully transmitted by parents, since they are enveloped with sins, they should, in this regard, make a wise distinction: that (the parents) cannot transmit anything else than what was committed by their evil presumption, namely, the guilt and the penalty of sin, which is clearly seen in the lineage that results from this transmission: men are born wicked and twisted. In this alone, as is clearly seen, God has no involvement: for, by instilling in them a fear of death, he prohibited and forewarned them, lest they fall into this disastrous fate. And so, with regard to transmission, it is readily apparent what the parents hand on and what God, from the beginning to the end, has done and still does.

SYMMACHUS: November 22, 498–July 19, 514

362: Letter Ad augustae memoriae to Emperor Anastasius I, between 506 and 512

This letter is also given the title Apologia contra Anastasius. It was written between 506 and 512.

Ed.: E. Schwartz, Publizistische Sammlungen zum Acacianischen Schisma, AbhBayAk Philosophisch-historische Abteilung, n.s. 10 (Munich, 1934), 154₃₁–155₁₄ / Thl 703f. (= letter 10) / PL 62:68C–69A / BullTau appendix 1:355b–356a. —Reg.: JR 761.

The Twofold Supreme Power on Earth

362 (8) Conferamus autem honorem imperatoris cum honore pontificis: inter quos tantum distat, quantum ille rerum humanarum curam gerit, iste divinarum. Tu, imperator, a pontifice baptismum accipis, sacramenta sumis, orationem poscis, benedictionem speras, paenitentiam rogas. Postremo tu humana administras, ille tibi divina dispensat. Itaque ut non dicam superior, certe aequalis honor est. . . .

(8) Let us compare, then, the position of the emperor with the position of the pontiff: there is exactly the following difference between them, that the former takes care of human affairs while the latter takes care of the divine (matters). It is from the pontiff that you, O Emperor, received baptism, take the sacraments, ask for prayer, hope for a blessing, request a penance. In short, you administer the human (things); he grants you the divine. And so his position is certainly an equal (if not higher) one. . . .

Sit istud in mundo iudicium spectante Deo et angelis eius, spectaculum omni saeculo simus, quo aut sacerdotes bonae vitae aut imperator religiosae modestiae consequantur exemplum, quia his praecipue duobus officiis regitur humanum genus, et non debeat aliquis eorum existere, quo valeat offendi divinitas, maxime cum uterque honor videatur esse perpetuus atque ita humano generi ex alterutro consulatur.

Let this be the decision in the world, in the sight of God and his angels; let us be a spectacle for every generation, from which priests may obtain an example of a virtuous life or the emperor, (that) of religious moderation; because it is principally by these two offices that the human race is governed, and neither of them should be such as could offend the Deity, particularly since the two positions seem to be held for life, and thus the human race is cared for by both of the two.

Precor, imperator, pace tua dixerim, memento te hominem, ut possis uti concessa tibi divinitus potestate, quia etiam si haec sub humano provenerint iudicio, sub divino necesse est ut discutiantur examine.

I beg you, O Emperor (do not be angry with me!): Remember that you (are) a man, so that you may be able to use the power that has been granted to you from God; for even if this takes place according to human judgment, it must (still) be examined under the judgment of God.

Fortassis dicturus es, scriptum esse: omni potestati nos subditos esse debere [cf. Tit 3:1]. Nos quidem potestates humanas suo loco suscipimus, donec contra Deum suas non erigant voluntates. Ceterum si omnis potestas a Deo

Perhaps you are going to say, It has been written: we ought to be subject to every authority [cf. Tit 3:1]. We of course accept human authorities in their sphere, provided they do not raise their will against God. If, moreover, all est, magis ergo quae rebus est praestituta divinis. Defer Deo in nobis, et nos deferimus Deo in te.

power is from God, all the more, then, is that which has been placed over divine matters. Pay (respect) to God in us, and we pay (respect) to God in you.

HORMISDAS: July 20, 514–August 6, 523

363–365: Libellus fidei of Pope Hormisdas, Sent to Constantinople, August 11, 515

This profession of faith was designed for the clergy returning from the Acacian schism. Among the various versions, differing slightly from each other, is the following one that Hormisdas consigned to his legate on August 11, 515. It was subscribed to at Constantinople on March 18, 517. Very close to this version of the formula is another one that was attached to the letter Inter ea quae, addressed to the bishops of Spain, dated April 2, 517 [variants noted in brackets]. Cf. also the formula of the letter of Patriarch John of Constantinople to Hormisdas dated April 22, 519 (Collectio Avellana, letter 159). On March 16, 536, Emperor Justinian and Patriarch Menas of Constantinople (Collectio Avellana, letters 89–90) subscribed to such a formula as did later the Fourth Council of Constantinople (sess. 1).

Ed.: O. Guenther: CSEL 35:520₂₈–522₅ (= Collectio Avellana, letter 116b) / Thl 754f. (= letter 7, chap. 9). —The second formula, namely, the one attached to the letter to the bishops of Spain: Thl 795f. / W. Haacke, Die Glaubensformel des Papstes Hormisdas in Acacianischen Schisma, Analecta Gregoriana 20 (Rome, 1939), 10–13. See also CSEL 35:608_{15–20}, 338_{21–339}₁, 340_{24–341}₂, 800_{13–801}₁. —Reg.: CIPL 1684; JR 788.

Profession of Faith against Christological Errors

(1) Prima salus est rectae fidei regulam custodire et a constitutis Patrum nullatenus deviare. Et quia non potest Domini nostri Iesu Christi praetermitti sententia dicentis: “Tu es Petrus et super hanc petram aedificabo Ecclesiam meam” [Mt 16:18], haec, quae dicta sunt, rerum probantur effectibus, quia in Sede Apostolica immaculata est semper catholica servata religio.

(2) De hac ergo [qua] spe et fide separari minime cupientes et Patrum sequentes in omnibus [-!] constituta, anathematizamus omnes haereses, praecipue Nestorium haeticum, qui quondam Constantinopolitanae fuit urbis episcopus, damnatum in Concilio Epheseno a Caelestino papa urbis Romae et a sancto [venerabili viro] Cyrillo Alexandrinae civitatis antistite; una cum isto [similiter] anathematizantes Eutychen et Dioscorum Alexandrinum in sancta Synodo, quam sequimur et amplectimur, Chalcedonensi damnatos [, quae secuta s. Concilium Nicaenum fidem apostolicam praedicavit].

(3) His Timotheum adiicientes parricidam [Detestamur et T. parr.], Aelurum cognomento, et discipulum quoque ipsius atque sequacem in omnibus Petrum Alexandrinum; itemque [-!] condemnamus [etiam] et anathematizamus Acacium Constantinopolitanum quondam episcopum ab Apostolica Sede damnatum, eorum complicem atque sequacem, vel qui in eorum communionis societate permanserint: quia [Acacius] quorum se communioni miscuit, ipsorum similem meruit in damnatione sententiam. Petrum nihilominus Antiochenum damnantes [damnamus] cum sequacibus suis et omnium supra scriptorum.

(1) The beginning of salvation is to guard the rule 363 of the right faith and to deviate in no way from the determinations of the Fathers. And because one cannot ignore the words of our Lord Jesus Christ when he said, “You are Peter, and on this rock I will build my Church” [Mt 16:18], what was said has been borne out by actual results, for in the Apostolic See that Catholic faith has always been preserved immaculate.

(2) Therefore [-!], desiring not to be separated by 364 any means from this hope and this faith, and following the determinations of the Fathers in all particulars [-!], we anathematize all heresies, especially the heretic Nestorius, who was formerly bishop of the city of Constantinople, condemned at the Council of Ephesus by Celestine, pope of the city of Rome, and by Saint [the venerable man] Cyril, bishop of the city of Alexandria; anathematizing together with him [similarly] Eutyches and Dioscorus of Alexandria, condemned at the holy Council of Chalcedon, which we follow and embrace [, which proclaimed the apostolic faith subsequent to the holy Council of Nicaea].

(3) Adding to these the traitor Timothy [We also execrate the traitor Timothy], surnamed Aelurus, and also his disciple and follower in all respects Peter of Alexandria; and likewise [-!] we [also] condemn and anathematize Acacius, their accomplice and adherent, formerly bishop of Constantinople, condemned by the Apostolic See, as well as those who have remained in association with their communion: because he [Acacius] joined in their communion, he has deserved the same judgment of condemnation. No less condemning [do we condemn] Peter of Antioch with his followers and those of all whose names are written above.

365 (4) Quapropter [-!] suscipimus [autem] et probamus epistolas beati Leonis papae universas, quas de christiana religione conscripsit. Unde [-!], sicut praediximus, sequentes in omnibus Apostolicam Sedem et praedicantes eius omnia constituta, [. Et ideo] spero, ut in una communione vobiscum, quam Sedes Apostolica praedicat, esse merear, in qua est integra et verax christianae religionis [et perfecta] soliditas: promittentes [promittens] etiam [in sequenti tempore] sequestratos a communione Ecclesiae catholicae, id est non consentientes Sedi Apostolicae, eorum nomina inter sacra non recitanda esse mysteria. [Quodsi in aliquo a professione mea deviare tentavero, his, quos damnavi, complicem me mea sententia esse profiteor.] (5) Hanc autem professionem meam [ego] manu propria [mea] subscripsi et tibi Hormisdas sancto et venerabili papae urbis Romae obtuli [direxi]. . . .

(4) Consequently [-!] [, however,] we accept and approve all the letters of the blessed Pope Leo that he composed on the subject of the Christian religion. Whence [-!], as we have said, following the Apostolic See in all matters and proclaiming all that has been determined by it, [. And therefore] I hope that I may deserve to be in the one communion with you that the Apostolic See proclaims, in which there is the complete and true [and perfect] solidity of the Christian religion: we promise also [I promise] that [in the future] the names of those who are separated from the communion of the Catholic Church, that is, who are not in agreement with the Apostolic See, will not be recited in the sacred mysteries. [But if in any respect I shall attempt to deviate from my profession of faith, I acknowledge that by my own judgment I would be an accomplice of these persons whom I have condemned.] (5) Moreover, I have signed this profession of my faith with my own hand and have offered [sent] it to you, Hormisdas, holy and venerable pope of the city of Rome. . . .

366: Letter Sicut ratione to the African Bishop Possessor, August 13, 520

Possessor, a bishop living in exile, had requested the judgment of the pope in regard to the doctrine of grace of Faustus of Riez [Reji] (Collectio Avellana, letter 230 / Thiel [= Hormisdas, letter 115] / PL 63:489f.). The “chapters” mentioned in the response of the pope, are, without doubt, the same as those spoken of in the preface of the Synod of Orange: cf. *370.

Ed.: ACOe 4/II, 46 / O. Guenther: CSEL 35:700₁₅₋₂₁ (= Collectio Avellana, letter 231) / Thiel 930 (= Hormisdas, letter 124) / PL 63:493A (= Hormisdas, letter 70). —Reg.: JR 850.

Authority in Questions of the Doctrine of Grace

366 (c. 5) De arbitrio tamen libero et gratia Dei quid Romana, hoc est catholica, sequatur et servet Ecclesia, licet et variis libris beati Augustini, et maxime ad Hilarium et Prosperum, abunde possit agnoscere, tamen et in scriniis ecclesiasticis expressa Capitula continentur, quae, si ibi desunt et necessaria creditis, destinabimus, quamquam qui diligenter Apostoli dicta considerat, quid sequi debeat, evidenter agnoscat.

(Chap. 5) Nevertheless, what the Roman, that is, the Catholic, Church follows and preserves concerning free will and the grace of God can be abundantly recognized in the various books of the blessed Augustine and especially (in those) to Hilary and Prosper, but the prominent chapters are contained in the ecclesiastical archives, and if these are lacking there and you believe them necessary, We will send (them), although he who diligently considers the words of the apostle should know clearly what he ought to follow.

367–369: Letter Inter ea quae to Emperor Justinian, March 26, 521

Ed.: O. Guenther: CSEL 35:718₁₈–720₂₂ (= Collectio Avellana, letter 236); Thiel 961–63 (= letter 137, 3); PL 63:513D–515A (= letter 79). —Reg.: JR 857.

The Divine Trinity

367 (c. 7) Nam si Trinitas Deus, hoc est Pater et Filius et Spiritus Sanctus, Deus autem unus, specialiter Legislatore dicente: “Audi Israel, Dominus Deus tuus Deus unus est” [Dt 6:4]: qui aliter habet, necesse est aut divinitatem in multa dividat aut specialiter passionem ipsi essentiae Trinitatis impingat et . . . hoc est aut plures deos more profanae gentilitatis inducere aut sensibilem

(Chap. 7) For if the Trinity (is) God, that is, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, but God (is) one, particularly since the Lawgiver says: “Hear, O Israel: the Lord your God is one God” [Deut 6:4], whoever maintains otherwise necessarily either divides the Godhead into many (parts) or in particular attributes suffering to the essence of the Trinity itself, and . . . this is either the introduction poenam ad eam naturam, quae aliena est ab omni passione, transferre.

(c. 8) Unum est sancta Trinitas, non multiplicatur numero, non crescit augmento nec potest aut intelligentia comprehendi aut hoc quod Deus est discretione seiungi. Quis ergo illi secreto aeternae impenetrabilisque substantiae, quod neque ulla vel invisibilium creaturarum potuit investigare natura, profanam divisionem temptet ingerere et divini arcana mysterii revocare ad calculum moris humani? Adoremus Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum, indistinctam distincte, incomprehensibilem et inenarrabilem substantiam Trinitatis, ubi etsi admittit numerum ratio personarum, unitas tamen non admittit essentiae, ita tamen, ut servemus divinae propriae naturae, servemus propriae unicuique personae, ut nec personis divinitatis singularitas denegetur nec ad essentiam hoc, quod est proprium nominum, transferatur.

(c. 9) Magnum est sanctae et incomprehensibile mysterium Trinitatis: Deus Pater, Deus Filius, Deus Spiritus Sanctus, Trinitas indivisa, et tamen notum est, quia proprium est Patris, ut generaret Filium; proprium Filii Dei, ut ex Patre Patri nasceretur aequalis, notum etiam, quid sit proprium Spiritus Sancti.

The Incarnation of the Divine Word

(c. 10) Proprium autem Filii Dei, ut ... in novissimis temporibus Verbum caro fieret et habitaret in nobis [cf. Io 1:14], ita intra viscera sanctae Mariae virginis genitricis Dei unitis utrisque sine aliqua confusione naturis, ut qui ante tempora erat Filius Dei, fieret Filius hominis et nasceretur ex tempore hominis more, matris vulvam natus aperiens et virginitatem matris deitatis virtute non solvens.

(c. 11) Dignum plane Deo nascente mysterium, ut servaret partum sine corruptione, qui conceptum fecit esse sine semine, servans quod ex Patre erat, et repraesentans quod ex matre susceperat ...

(c. 12) Idem enim Deus et homo, non, ut ab infidelibus dicitur, sub quartae introductione personae, sed ipse Dei Filius Deus et homo, idem virtus et infirmitas, humilitas et maiestas, redimens et venditus, in cruce positus et caeli regna largitus, ita nostrae infirmitatis ut possit interimi, ita ingenitae potentiae ne posset morte consumi.

of several gods, in the manner of the unholy Gentiles, or the transference of a sensible agony to that nature which is exempt from all suffering.

(Chap. 8) The Holy Trinity is one; it is not multiplied by number; it is not increased by augmentation, and what God is cannot be either grasped by the understanding or separated by making distinctions. Who, then, would try to impose an unholy division upon that mystery of the eternal and impenetrable substance that no nature—even that of invisible creatures—can explore and to reduce the inscrutability of the divine mystery to a human kind of reckoning? Let us adore the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, the distinctly undifferentiated, incomprehensible, and ineffable substance of the Trinity; and even if reason admits a number of Persons therein, still unity does not admit any (numbering) of essence; as we preserve the aspects proper to the divine natures, so we also preserve the aspects proper to each Person, so that the uniqueness of the divinity may not be denied to the Persons and what is proper to the names may not be transferred to the essence.

(Chap. 9) Great and incomprehensible is the mystery of the Holy Trinity: God the Father, God the Son, God the Holy Spirit, the undivided Trinity; and yet it is known that it is proper to the Father that he beget the Son, proper to the Son of God that he be born of the Father and equal to the Father, and it is also known what is proper to the Holy Spirit.

(Chap. 10) Now, the aspect proper to the Son of God (is) that ... in recent times the Word became flesh and dwelt among us [cf. Jn 1:14], both natures being united without any confusion within the womb of the holy Virgin Mary, Mother of God, in such a way that he who was the Son of God before the ages became the Son of Man and was born in time in the manner of a human being, opening the Mother's womb by his birth and yet not damaging the virginity of the Mother by the power of the Godhead.

(Chap. 11) The mystery was entirely worthy of the birth of God, whereby he who brought about conception without human seed should keep the birth from violation, preserving that which was from the Father and manifesting that which he took from the Mother ...

(Chap. 12) For the same (Person is) God and man, not by means of the introduction of a fourth person, as is said by the infidels, but the Son of God is himself God and man, the same (Person) is strength and weakness, lowliness and majesty, the one who redeems and the one sold, hung on the Cross and bestowing the kingdom of heaven, so much in our weakness that he could be killed and so much in his innate power that he could not be destroyed by death.

(c. 13) Sepultus est iuxta id, quod homo voluit nasci, et iuxta id, quod Patri erat similis, resurrexit: patiens vulnerum et salvator aegrorum, unus defunctorum et vivificator obeuntium, ad inferna descendens et a Patris gremio non recedens. Unde et animam, quam pro communi condicione posuit, pro singulari virtute et admirabili potentia mox resumpsit.

(Chap. 13) He was buried because he wished to be born as a man; and because he was similar to the Father, he rose again: one who suffered wounds and savior of the suffering, one of the dead and the restorer of the dead to life, descending into hell and not departing from the bosom of the Father. In consequence, he also soon recovered, by his unique strength and admirable power, the soul that he gave up because of the common condition of existence (with us).

JOHN I: August 13, 523–May 18, 526

FELIX III (IV): July 12, 526–September 22, 530

370–397: Second Synod of ORANGE, begun July 3, 529

In order to lend the authority of the pope to his doctrine of grace against his opponents gathered at the Synod of Valence, Caesarius, Archbishop of Arles, requested these “little chapters”. By this, one should understand not only the “canons” in the strict sense, namely, cann. 1–8 (which begin “Si quis . . .” [If anyone . . .]), but also the Sententiae ex Augustino delibatae, collected in Rome toward the mid-fifth century by Prosper of Aquitaine, that is, cann. 9–25 (cf. M. Cappuyns, “L’Origine des ‘Capitula’ d’Orange”, RechThAM 6 [1934]: 121–42). The “canons” are taken from a Syllabus Treverensis [= Treviri], in which cann. 3–10 correspond fully to the “canons” of Orange. M. Cappuyns traces these to Joannes Maxentius, the leader of the Scythian Theopaschist monks (cf. his Libellus in ACOe 4/II, 9f.; the letter of the same monks to the African bishops, cann. 6–8: PL 65:447B–451C; the response of Fulgentius, the Liber ad Petrum Diaconum 12ff.: PL 65:466A–469B). The synod was confirmed by Boniface II (*398–400). As a provincial synod, it remained largely unknown to many, and by the eighth century, it had fallen into oblivion. It was recalled to mind only through the discussions of the Council of Trent.

Ed.: G. Morin, Caesarii Arelatensis Opera varia (Opera omnia 2; Maretoli, 1942), 70–77 / C. Munier: CpChL 148 (1963): 55–63 / F. Maassen: MGH Leges III = Concilia 1 (1893), 46–52 / Bruns 2:176–82 / MaC 8:711D–717A.

a. Preface

370 . . . Pervenit ad nos, esse aliquos, qui de gratia et libero arbitrio per simplicitatem minus caute et non secundum fidei catholicae regulam sentire velint. Unde id nobis, secundum admonitionem et auctoritatem Sedis Apostolicae, iustum ac rationabile visum, ut pauca capitula ab Apostolica nobis Sede transmissa, quae ab antiquis Patribus de sanctarum Scripturarum voluminibus in hac praecipue causa collecta sunt, ad docendos eos, qui aliter quam oportet sentiunt, ab omnibus observanda proferre et manibus nostris subscribere deberemus. . . .

. . . There has come to us news of some who, in regard to grace and free will, would like to judge with little caution and not according to the rule of the Catholic faith. To us, according to the admonition and authority of the Apostolic See, it has seemed just and reasonable that we should set forth to be observed by all, and that we should sign with our own hands, a few chapters transmitted to us by the Apostolic See, which were collected by the ancient Fathers from the volumes of the Sacred Scripture especially in this cause, to teach those who think otherwise than they ought. . . .

b. Canons

Original Sin

371 Can. 1. Si quis per offensam praevaricationis Adae non totum, id est secundum corpus et animam, “in deterius” dicit hominem “commutatam”,¹ sed animae libertate illaesa durante, corpus tantummodo corruptioni credit obnoxium, Pelagii errore deceptus adversatur Scripturae dicenti: “Anima, quae peccaverit, ipsa morietur” [Ez 18:20]; et: “Nescitis, quoniam, cui exhibetis vos servos

Can. 1. If anyone says that through the offense of Adam’s sin the whole person, body and soul, was not “changed for the worse”¹ but believes that only the body was subjected to corruption while the freedom of the soul remained unharmed, such a one is misled by the error of Pelagius and goes against Scripture, which says: “The soul that sins shall die” [Ezek 18:20], and: “Do you not ad oboediendum, servi estis eius, cui oboeditis?” [Rm 6:16]; et: “A quo quis superatur, eius et servus addicitur” [cf. 2 Pt 2:19].

*371 ¹ Augustine, De nuptiis et concupiscentia II, 34, no. 57 (CSEL 42:315 / PL 44:471).

Can. 2. Si quis soli Adae praevaricationem suam, non et eius propagini asserit nocuisse, aut certe mortem tantum corporis quae poena peccati est, non autem et peccatum, quod mors est animae, per unum hominem in omne genus humanum transiisse testatur, iniustitiam Deo dabit contradicens Apostolo dicenti: “Per unum hominem peccatum intravit in mundum [mundo], et per peccatum mors, et ita in omnes homines [mors] pertransiit, in quo omnes peccaverunt” [cf. Rm 5:12].¹

know that if you yield yourselves to anyone as obedient slaves, you are slaves of the one whom you obey?” [Rom 6:16]; and again: “Whatever overcomes one, to that he is enslaved” [2 Pet 2:19].

Can. 2. If anyone maintains that the fall harmed Adam alone and not his descendants or declares that only bodily death which is the punishment of sin, but not sin itself, which is the death of the soul, was passed on to the whole human race by one man, he ascribes injustice to God and contradicts the words of the apostle: “Sin came into the world through one man, and death through sin, and so [death] spread to all men as all sinned in him” [Rom 5:12].¹

Grace

Can. 3. Si quis invocatione humana gratiam Dei dicit posse conferri, non autem ipsam gratiam facere, ut invocetur a nobis, contradicit Isaiae prophetae vel Apostolo idem dicenti: “Inventus sum a non quaerentibus me; palam apparui his, qui me non interrogabant” [Rm 10:20; cf. Is 65:1]

Can. 3. If anyone says that the grace of God can be conferred because of human prayer, and not rather that it is grace itself that prompts us to pray, one contradicts the prophet Isaiah or the apostle who says the same thing: “I have been found by those who did not seek me; I have shown myself to those who did not ask for me” [Rom 10:20; cf. Is 65:1].

Can. 4. Si quis, ut a peccato purgemur, voluntatem nostram Deum expectare contendit,¹ non autem, ut etiam purgari velimus, per Sancti Spiritus infusionem et operationem in nos fieri confitetur, resistit ipsi Spiritui Sancto per Salomonem dicenti: “Praeparatur voluntas a Domino” [Prv 8:35 Septg.],² et Apostolo salubriter praedicanti: “Deus est, qui operatur in vobis et velle et perficere pro bona voluntate” [cf. Phil 2:13].

Can. 4. If anyone contends that God awaits our will before cleansing us from sin,¹ but does not confess that even the desire to be cleansed is aroused in us by the infusion and action of the Holy Spirit, he opposes the Holy Spirit himself speaking through Solomon: “The will is prepared by the Lord” [Prov 8:35 LXX]² and the apostle’s salutary message: “God is at work in you, both to will and to work for his good pleasure” [Phil 2:13].

Can. 5. Si quis, sicut augmentum, ita etiam initium fidei ipsumque credulitatis affectum, quo in eum credimus, qui iustificat impium, et ad [re]generationem sacri baptismatis pervenimus, non per gratiae donum, id est per inspirationem Spiritus Sancti corrigentem voluntatem nostram ab infidelitate ad fidem, ab impietate ad pietatem, sed naturaliter nobis inesse dicit, apostolicis dogmatibus adversarius approbatur, beato Paulo dicente: “Confidimus, quia qui coepit in vobis bonum opus, perficiet usque in diem Iesu Christi” [cf. Phil 1:6]; et illud: “Vobis datum est pro Christo non solum, ut in eum credatis, verum etiam, ut pro illo patiamini” [cf. Phil 1:29]; et: “Gratia salvi facti estis per fidem, et hoc non ex vobis: Dei enim donum est” [cf. Eph 2:8]. Qui enim fidem, qua in Deum credimus, dicunt esse naturalem, omnes eos, qui ab Ecclesia Christi alieni sunt, quodammodo fideles esse definiunt.¹

Can. 5. If anyone says that the increase as well as the beginning of faith and the very desire of faith—by which we believe in him who justifies the sinner and by which we come to the regeneration of holy baptism—proceeds from our own nature and not from a gift of grace, namely, from an inspiration of the Holy Spirit changing our will from unbelief to belief and from godlessness to piety, such a one reveals himself in contradiction with the apostolic doctrine, since Paul says: “I am sure that he who began a good work in you will bring it to completion at the day of Jesus Christ” [Phil 1:6]; and again: “It has been granted to you that for the sake of Christ you should not only believe in him but also suffer for his sake” [Phil 1:29]; and also: “By grace you have been saved through faith; and this is not your own doing, it is the gift of God” [Eph 2:8]. For those who say that the faith by which we believe in God is natural declare that all those who are strangers to the Church of Christ are, in some way, believers.¹

*372 ¹ Cf. Augustine, Contra duas epistulas Pelagianorum IV, 4, nos. 4–7 (CSEL 60:524–28 / PL 44:611–14).

*374 ¹ This is directed against Faustus of Riez; cf. his work De gratia I, 18 (CSEL 21:56_{sr}) = I, 19 (PL 58:812D).

² This is the erroneous translation of the Hebrew text in the Septuagint, which is translated correctly in the Vulgate: “He will draw salvation from the Lord” (hauriet salutem a Domino).

*375 ¹ This canon is a quasi-summary of Augustine, De praedestinatione sanctorum (PL 44:959–92).

376 Can. 6. Si quis sine gratia Dei credentibus, volentibus, desiderantibus, conantibus, laborantibus, orantibus, vigilantibus, studentibus, petentibus, quaerentibus, pulsantibus nobis misericordiam dicit conferri divinitus, non autem, ut credamus, velimus, vel haec omnia, sicut oportet, agere valeamus, per infusionem et inspirationem Sancti Spiritus in nobis fieri confitetur, et aut humilitati, aut oboedientiae humanae subiungit gratiae adiutorium, nec, ut oboedientes et humiles simus, ipsius gratiae donum esse consentit, resistit Apostolo dicenti: “Quid habes, quod non accepisti?” [1 Cor 4:7]; et: “Gratia Dei sum id, quod sum” [1 Cor 15:10].¹

377 Can. 7. Si quis per naturae vigorem bonum aliquid, quod ad salutem pertinet vitae aeternae, cogitare, ut expedit, aut eligere, sive salutari, id est evangelicae praedicationi consentire posse confirmat absque illuminatione et inspiratione Spiritus Sancti, qui dat omnibus suavitatem in consentiendo et credendo veritati, haeretico fallitur spiritu, non intelligens vocem Dei in Evangelio dicentis: “Sine me nihil potestis facere” [Io 15:5]; et illud Apostoli: “Non quod idonei simus cogitare aliquid a nobis quasi ex nobis, sed sufficientia nostra ex Deo est” [2 Cor 3:5].¹

378 Can. 8. Si quis alios misericordia, alios vero per liberum arbitrium, quod in omnibus, qui de praevaricatione primi hominis nati sunt, constat esse vitiatum, ad gratiam baptismi posse venire contendit, a recta fide probatur alienus. Is enim non omnium liberum arbitrium per peccatum primi hominis asserit infirmatum, aut certe ita laesum putat, ut tamen quidam valeant sine revelatione Dei mysterium salutis aeternae per semetipsos posse conquirere. Quod quam sit contrarium, ipse Dominus probat, qui non aliquos, sed neminem ad se posse venire testatur, nisi “quem Pater attraxerit” [cf. Io 6:44], sicut et Petro dicit. “Beatus es, Simon Bar-Jona, quia caro et sanguis non revelavit tibi, sed Pater meus, qui in caelis est” [Mt 16:17]; et Apostolus: “Nemo potest dicere Dominum Iesum nisi in Spiritu Sancto” [cf. 1 Cor 12:3].¹

379 Can. 9. “De adiutorio Dei. Divini est muneris, cum et recte cogitamus, et pedes nostros a falsitate et iniustitia continemus; quoties enim bona agimus, Deus in nobis atque nobiscum, ut operemur, operatur.”¹

Can. 6. If anyone says that mercy is divinely conferred upon us when, without God’s grace, we believe, will, desire, strive, labor, pray, keep watch, endeavor, request, seek, knock, but does not confess that it is through the infusion and inspiration of the Holy Spirit that we believe, will, or are able to do all these things as is required; or if anyone subordinates the help of grace to humility or human obedience and does not admit that it is the very gift of grace that makes us obedient and humble, one contradicts the apostle, who says: “What have you that you did not receive?” [1 Cor 4:7]; and also: “By the grace of God I am what I am” [1 Cor 15:10].¹

Can. 7. If anyone asserts that to be able by one’s natural strength to think as is required or choose anything good pertaining to one’s eternal salvation or to assent to the saving message of the Gospel without the illumination and inspiration of the Holy Spirit, who gives to all ease and joy in assenting to the truth and believing it, one is deceived by the heretical spirit and does not understand the word said by God in the Gospel: “Apart from me you can do nothing” [Jn 15:5] or the ⟨word⟩ of the apostle: “Not that we are sufficient of ourselves to claim anything as coming from us; our sufficiency is from God” [2 Cor 3:5].¹

Can. 8. If anyone maintains that some are able to come to the grace of baptism through ⟨God’s⟩ mercy, but others through their own free will—which, it is clear, is wounded in all those who are born from the transgression of the first man—one shows that one has departed from the correct faith. For one does not acknowledge that free will has been weakened in all by the sin of the first man, or at least holds that free will has been wounded only in such a way that some are still able to attain to the mystery of eternal salvation by themselves without divine revelation. Yet that the opposite is true is proved by the Lord himself, who does not testify that some can come to him, but that nobody can, unless drawn by the Father [cf. Jn 6:44], as he also says to Peter: “Blessed are you, Simon Bar-Jona! For flesh and blood has not revealed this to you, but my Father who is in heaven” [Mt 16:17]. And the apostle, too, says: “No one can say ‘Jesus is Lord’ except by the Holy Spirit” [1 Cor 12:3].¹

Can. 9. “The assistance of God. It is a divine gift, both when we think rightly and when we restrain our feet from falsity and injustice; for as often as we do good, God operates in us and with us, that we may work.”¹

*376 ¹ Cf. Augustine, De dono preserverantiae 23, no. 64 (PL 45:1032); Prosper of Aquitaine, De gratia Dei et libero arbitrio contra Collatorem (PL 51:220f. = c. 2, nos. 4–5; PL 45:1804f. = c. 2, nos. 6–7).

*377 ¹ Cf. Augustine, De gratia Christi et de peccato originali 25, no. 26–26, no. 27 (CSEL 42:145–48 / PL 44:373f.).

*378 ¹ Cf. Prosper of Aquitaine, Contra Collatorem (PL 51:225BC, 267f. = c. 5, no. 1; c. 19; PL 45:1806f., 1829 = c. 5, no. 13; c. 19, no. 55 [sixth definition]).

*379 ¹ From here up to can. 25 (with the exception of can. 10, whose source cannot be precisely determined) are cited phrases chosen from Prosper of Aquitaine, Sententiae ex operibus S. Augustini delibatae; it suffices here to indicate the number; the different passages of the source can be easily found in PL 51:427–96; the same work as an appendix to the writings of Augustine is found in PL 45:1859–98. The passage cited here is sent. 22.

Can. 10. De adiutorio Dei. Adiutorium Dei etiam renatis ac sanatis semper est implorandum, ut ad finem bonum pervenire, vel in bono possint opere perdurare.¹

Can. 11. “De obligatione votorum. Nemo quidquam Domino recte voveret, nisi ab ipso acceperit quod voveret”,¹ sicut legitur: Et quae de manu tua accepimus, damus tibi [1 Par 29:14].

Can. 12. “Quales nos diligit Deus. Tales nos amat Deus, quales futuri sumus ipsius dono, non quales sumus nostro merito.”¹

Can. 13. De reparatione liberi arbitrii. Arbitrium voluntatis in primo homine infirmatum, nisi per gratiam baptismi non potest reparari; “quod amissum, nisi a quo potuit dari, non potest reddi. Unde Veritas ipsa dicit: ‘Si vos Filius liberaverit, tunc vere liberi eritis’ [Io 8:36].”¹

Can. 14. “Nullus miser de quantumque miseria liberatur, nisi qui Dei misericordia praevenitur”,¹ sicut dicit Psalmista: “Cito anticipet nos misericordia tua Domine” [Ps 78:8]; et illud: “Deus meus, misericordia eius praeveniet me” [Ps 58:11].

Can. 15. “Ab eo, quod formavit Deus, mutatus est Adam, sed in peius per iniquitatem suam. Ab eo, quod operata est iniquitas, mutatur fidelis, sed in melius per gratiam Dei. Illa ergo mutatio fuit praevaricatoris primi, haec secundum Psalmistam ‘mutatio est dextrae Excelsi’ [cf. Ps 76:11].”¹

Can. 16. “Nemo ex eo, quod videtur habere, gloriatur, tamquam non acceperit, aut ideo se putet accepisse, quia littera extrinsecus vel, ut legeretur, apparuit, vel, ut audiretur, sonuit. Nam sicut Apostolus dicit: ‘Si per legem iustitia, ergo Christus gratis mortuus est’ [Gal 2:21]; ‘ascendens in altum captivavit captivitatem, dedit dona hominibus’ [cf. Eph 4:8; cf. Ps 67:19]. Inde habet, quicumque habet; quisquis autem se inde habere negat, aut vere non habet, aut id, ‘quod habet, auferetur ab eo’ [Mt 25:29].”¹

Can. 10. The assistance of God. The assistance of God ought to be implored always even by those who have been reborn and have been healed, that they may arrive at a good end or may be able to continue in good work.¹

Can. 11. “The obligation of vows. No one would rightly vow anything to God if he had not received from him what he vows”,¹ as it is written: “For all things come from you, and of your own have we given you” [1 Chron 29:14].

Can. 12. “How God loves us. God loves us as we will be by his gift, not as we are by our merit.”¹

Can. 13. The restoration of free will. Freedom of will weakened in the first man cannot be repaired except through the grace of baptism; “once it has been lost, it cannot be restored except by him by whom it could be given. Thus Truth itself says: ‘If the Son makes you free, you will be free indeed’” [Jn 8:36].¹

Can. 14. “No wretched person is freed from misery, however small, unless he is first reached by the mercy of God”,¹ just as the Psalmist says: “Let your mercy, Lord, speedily come before us” [Ps 79:8], and also: “My God, his mercy goes before me” [Ps 59:10].

Can. 15. “From that which God fashioned, Adam was changed by his own iniquity, but for the worse. From that which injustice has effected, the faithful (man) is changed by the grace of God, but for the better. Therefore, the former change was (the result) of the first transgression, the latter according to the Psalmist ‘is the change from the right hand of the Most High’ [cf. Ps 77:10].”¹

Can. 16. “Let no one glory in that which he seems to possess, as if he did not receive (it), or think that he has received (it) for this reason, because the sign appeared from without, either that it might be read, or sounded that it might be heard. For thus says the apostle: ‘If justice (is) through the law, then Christ died for nothing’ [Gal 2:21]; ‘ascending on high he led captivity captive, he gave gifts to men’ [Eph 4:8; cf. Ps 68:18]. Whoever has, has from him, but whoever denies that he has from him either does not truly possess or that ‘which he possesses is taken away from him’ [Mt 25:29].”¹

*380 ¹ This corresponds to Prosper of Aquitaine, Contra Collatorem 11–12 (PL 51:242–47; 45:1815–17).

*381 ¹ Sent. 54 (in Prosper, it reads: “De oblatione votorum” [the offering of vows]!: Augustine, De civitate Dei XVII, 4, 7 (B. Dombart and A. Kalb: CpChL 48 [1955]: 559 / CSEL 40/II:216 / PL 41:530).

*382 ¹ Sent. 56.

*383 ¹ Sent. 152; from Augustine, De civitate Dei XIV, 11, 1 (CpChL 48:432 / CSEL 40/II:28 / PL 41:418).

*384 ¹ Sent. 212 (in others, 211).

*385 ¹ Sent. 226 (in others, 225); from Augustine, Enarrationes in Psalmos 68 [v. 1], sermon 1, 2 (E. Dekkers and J. Fraipont: CpChL 39 [1956]: 902 / PL 36:841).

*386 ¹ Sent. 260 (in others, 259); from Augustine, De Spiritu et littera 29, no. 50 (CSEL 60:205 / PL 44:231).

- 387 Can. 17. “De fortitudine christiana. Fortitudinem Gentilium mundana cupiditas, fortitudinem autem Christianorum Dei caritas facit, quae ‘diffusa est in cordibus nostris’, non per voluntatis arbitrium, quod est a nobis, sed ‘per Spiritum Sanctum, qui datus est nobis’ [Rm 5:5].”¹
- Can. 17. “Christian strength. The strength of the Gentiles come from earthly desire, but the strength of Christians comes from the charity of God, which ‘is poured into our hearts’, not by the power of free will, which is from us, but ‘through the Holy Spirit, who has been given to us’ [Rom 5:5].”¹
- 388 Can. 18. “Nullis meritis gratiam praeveniri. Debetur merces bonis operibus, si fiant; sed gratia, quae non debetur, praecedat, ut fiant.”¹
- Can. 18. “Grace is not preceded by any merit. A reward is due to good works if they are performed; but grace, which is not due, precedes, that they may be done.”¹
- 389 Can. 19. “Neminem nisi Deo miserante salvari. Natura humana, etiamsi in illa integritate, in qua est condita, permaneret, nullo modo se ipsam, creatore suo non adiuvante, servaret; unde cum sine Dei gratia salutem non possit custodire, quam accepit, quomodo sine Dei gratia poterit reparare, quod perdidit?”¹
- Can. 19. “That no one is saved except by God’s mercy. Even if human nature remained in that integrity in which it was formed, it would in no way save itself without the help of its Creator; therefore, since without the grace of God it cannot guard the health that it received, how without the grace of God will it be able to recover what it has lost?”¹
- 390 Can. 20. “Nihil boni hominem posse sine Deo. Multa Deus facit in homine bona, quae non facit homo; nulla vero facit homo bona, quae non Deus praestat, ut faciat homo.”¹
- Can. 20. “Man can do nothing good without God. God does many good things in man that man does not do; but man can do nothing good unless God enables him to do it.”¹
- 391 Can. 21. “De natura et gratia. Sicut iis, qui volentes in lege iustificari et a gratia exciderunt, verissime dicit Apostolus: ‘Si ex lege iustitia est, ergo Christus gratis mortuus est’ [Gal 2:21], sic iis, qui gratiam, quam commendat et percipit fides Christi, putant esse naturam, verissime dicitur: Si per naturam iustitia est ‘ergo Christus gratis mortuus est’. Iam hic enim erat lex, et non iustificabat: iam hic erat et natura, et non iustificabat. Ideo Christus non gratis mortuus est, ut et lex per illum impleretur, qui dixit: ‘Non veni legem solvere, sed adimplere’ [Mt 5:17], et natura per Adam perdita per illum repararetur, qui dixit, venisse se ‘quaerere et salvare, quod perierat’ [Lc 19:10].”¹
- Can. 21. “Nature and grace. Just as the apostle most truly says to those who, wishing to be justified in the law, have fallen even from grace: ‘If justice is from the law, then Christ died in vain’ [Gal 2:21]; so it is most truly said to those who think that grace, which the faith of Christ commends and obtains, is nature: If justice is through nature, ‘then Christ died in vain’. For the law was already here, and it did not justify; nature, too, was already present, and it did not justify. Therefore, Christ did not die in vain, that the law also might be fulfilled through him who said: ‘I have come not to destroy the law, but to fulfill (it)’ [Mt 5:17], and in order that nature ruined by Adam might be repaired by him who said he came ‘to seek and to save that which had been lost’ [Lk 19:10].”¹
- 392 Can. 22. “De his, quae hominum propria sunt. Nemo habet de suo nisi mendacium et peccatum. Si quid autem habet homo veritatis atque iustitiae, ab illo fonte est, quem debemus sitire in hac eremo, ut ex eo quasi guttis quibusdam irrorati non deficiamus in via.”¹
- Can. 22. “Those things that are proper to man. No one has anything of his own except lying and sin. But if a man has anything of truth and justice, it is from that fountain for which we should thirst in this desert, so that, as though refreshed by some of its drops, we may not falter along the way.”¹

*387 ¹ Sent. 297 (in others, 295); from Augustine, Contra secundam Iuliani responsionem imperfectum opus I, 83 (PL 45:1104).

*388 ¹ Sent. 299 (in others, 297); from Augustine, Contra secundam Iuliani responsionem imperfectum opus I, 133 (PL 45:1133).

*389 ¹ Sent. 310 (in others, 308); from Augustine, letter 186, chap. 11, no. 37 (CSEL 57:77 / PL 33:830).

*390 ¹ Sent. 314 (in others, 312); from Augustine, Contra duas epistulas Pelagianorum II, 9 (in others, 8), no. 21 (CSEL 60:482 / PL 44:586).

*391 ¹ Sent. 317 (in others, 315); from Augustine, De gratia et libero arbitrio 13, no. 25 (PL 44:896).

*392 ¹ Sent. 325 (in others, 323); from Augustine, In evangelium Iohannis, tract. 5, 1 [on Jn 1:33] (R. Willems: CpChL 36 [1954]: 40 / PL 35:1414).

Can. 23. “De voluntate Dei et hominis. Suam voluntatem homines faciunt, non Dei, quando id agunt, quod Deo displicet; quando autem id faciunt, quod volunt, ut divinae serviant voluntati, quamvis volentes agant quod agunt, illius tamen voluntas est, a quo et praeparatur et iubetur, quod volunt.”¹

Can. 24. “De palmitibus vitis. Ita sunt in vite palmites, ut viti nihil conferant, sed inde accipiant unde vivant: sic quippe vitis est in palmitibus, ut vitale alimentum subministret iis, non sumat ab iis. Ac per hoc et manentem in se habere Christum, et manere in Christo, discipulis prodest utrumque, non Christo. Nam praeciso palmitis, potest de viva radice alius pullulare; qui autem praecisus est, sine radice non potest vivere [cf. Io 15:5–8].”¹

Can. 25. “De dilectione, qua diligimus Deum. Prorsus donum Dei est diligere Deum. Ipse ut diligeretur dedit, qui non dilectus diligit. Displicentes amati sumus, ut fieret in nobis unde placeremus. Diffundit enim caritatem in cordibus nostris Spiritus [Rm 5:5] Patris et Filii, quem cum Patre amamus et Filio.”¹

Can. 23. “The good will of God and of man. Men do their own will, not God’s, when they do what displeases God; but when they do what they wish in order to serve the divine will, even though willingly they do what they do, nevertheless, it is the will of him who both prepared and ordered what they will.”¹ 393

Can. 24. “The branches of the vine. Thus there are branches in the vine, not that they may bestow anything upon the vine, but that they may receive from it the means by which they may live; so truly the vine is in the branches, that it may furnish vital nourishment to these, not take it from them. And by this it is an advantage to the disciples, not to Christ, that each have Christ abiding in him and that each abide in Christ. For if the branch is cut off, another can sprout forth from the living root; but that which has been cut off cannot live without the root [cf. Jn 15:5–8].”¹ 394

Can. 25. “The love with which we love God. To love God is completely a gift of God. He who, not being loved, grants that he may be loved. While not being pleasing, we have been loved, so that there might be produced in us (something) by which we might please. For the Spirit of the Father and the Son, whom we love with the Father and the Son, has poured forth charity into our hearts [Rom 5:5].”¹ 395

c. Conclusions Drawn up by Bishop Caesarius of Arles

Grace, Human Cooperation, and Predestination

Ac sic secundum supra scriptas sanctarum Scripturarum sententias vel antiquorum Patrum definitiones hoc Deo propitiante et praedicare debemus et credere, quod per peccatum primi hominis ita inclinatum et attenuatum fuerit liberum arbitrium, ut nullus postea aut diligere Deum sicut oportuit, aut credere in Deum aut operari propter Deum quod bonum est, possit, nisi eum gratia misericordiae divinae praevenerit. Unde et Abel iusto et Noe et Abraham et Isaac et Iacob, et omni antiquorum Sanctorum multitudini illam praeclaram fidem, quam in ipsorum laude praedicat Apostolus Paulus [Hbr 11], non per bonum naturae, quod prius in Adam datum fuerat, sed per gratiam Dei credimus fuisse collatam.

Quam gratiam etiam post adventum Domini omnibus, qui baptizari desiderant, non in libero arbitrio haberi, sed Christi novimus simul et credimus largitate conferri, secundum illud, quod iam saepe dictum est et praedicat Paulus Apostolus: “Vobis donatum est pro Christo, non Thus, according to the texts of Holy Scripture and the explanations of the early Fathers quoted above, we must with God’s help preach and believe the following: free will has been so distorted and weakened by the sin of the first man that thereafter no one could love God as was required or believe in God or perform for the sake of God what is good, unless the grace of the divine mercy first attained him. Therefore, we believe that that excellent faith, so highly proclaimed to their praise by St. Paul [Heb 11], which was given to the just Abel, to Noah, to Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, and to that vast multitude of saints of old, was conferred through the grace of God, and not through the natural goodness that had first been given to Adam.

And we know and believe that, even after the coming of the Lord, for all those who desire to be baptized, this grace (of faith) is not found in their free will but is conferred by the generosity of Christ, according to what has been repeatedly said above and which the apostle solum, ut in eum credatis, sed etiam, ut pro eo patiamini” [Phil 1:29]; et illud: “Deus, qui coepit in vobis bonum opus, perficiet usque in diem Domini nostri” [Phil 1:6]; et illud: “Gratia salvi facti estis per fidem, et hoc non ex vobis: Dei enim donum est” [Eph 2:8]; et quod de se ipso ait Apostolus: “Misericordiam consecutus sum, ut fidelis essem” [1 Cor 7:25; 1 Tim 1:13]; non dixit: “quia eram”, sed: ut essem. Et illud: “Quid habes, quod non accepisti?” [1 Cor 4:7]. Et illud: “Omne datum bonum, et omne donum perfectum desursum est, descendens a Patre luminum” [Iac 1:17]. Et illud: “Nemo habet quidquam, nisi illi datum fuerit desuper” [Ioh 3:27]. Innumerabilia sunt sanctarum Scripturarum testimonia, quae possint ad probandam gratiam proferri, sed brevitatis studio praetermissa sunt, quia et revera, cui pauca non sufficiunt, plura non proderunt.

*393 ¹ Sent. 340 (in others, 338): from Augustine, In evangelium Iohannis, tract. 19, 19 [on Jn 5:19–30] (R. Willems: CpChL 36 [1954]: 202 / PL 35:1555).

*394 ¹ Sent. 368 (in others, 366): from Augustine, In evangelium Iohannis, tract. 81, 1 [on Jn 15:4–7] (CpChL 36:530 / PL 35:1841).

*395 ¹ Sent. 372 (in others, 370): from Augustine, In evangelium Iohannis, tract. 102, 5 (on Jn 16:23–28) (CpChL 36:597 / PL 35:1898).

397 Hoc etiam secundum fidem catholicam credimus, quod post acceptam per baptismum gratiam omnes baptizati, Christo auxiliante et cooperante, quae ad salutem animae pertinent, possint et debeant, si fideliter laborare voluerint, adimplere. Aliquos vero ad malum divina potestate praedestinos esse, non solum non credimus, sed etiam, si sunt, qui tantum mali credere velint, cum omni detestatione illis anathema dicimus.

Hoc etiam salubriter profitemur et credimus, quod in omni opere bono non nos incipimus, et postea per Dei misericordiam adiuvamur, sed ipse nobis nullis praecedentibus bonis meritis et fidem et amorem sui prius inspirat, ut et baptismi sacramenta fideliter requiramus, et post baptismum cum ipsius adiutorio ea, quae sibi sunt placita, implere possimus. Unde manifestissime credendum est, quod et illius latronis, quem Dominus ad paradisi patriam revocavit [Lc 23:43], et Cornelii centurionis, ad quem angelus Domini missus est [Act 10:3], et Zachaei, qui ipsum Dominum suscipere meruit [Lc 19:6], illa tam admirabilis fides non fuit de natura, sed divinae gratiae largitate donata.

Paul preaches: “It has been granted to you that for the sake of Christ you should not only believe in him but also suffer for his sake” [Phil 1:29]; and also: “He who began a good work in you will bring it to completion at the day of Jesus Christ” [Phil 1:6]; and again: “By grace you have been saved through faith; and this is not your own doing, it is the gift of God” [Eph 2:8]. And of himself the apostle says: “I have obtained mercy that I might be faithful” [1 Cor 7:25, Vulg.; 1 Tim 1:13]; where he does not say: “because I was faithful”, but rather: “that I might be faithful.” And again: “What have you that you did not receive?” [1 Cor 4:7]; and again: “Every good endowment and every perfect gift is from above, coming down from the Father of lights” [Jas 1:17]; and again: “No one can receive anything except what is given him from heaven” [Jn 3:27]. There are innumerable passages of Sacred Scripture that could be adduced as testimonies in favor of grace, but they have been omitted for the sake of brevity. For, indeed, more texts will not help anyone for whom a few do not suffice.

According to the Catholic faith we also believe that after grace has been received through baptism, all the baptized, if they are willing to labor faithfully, can and ought to accomplish with Christ’s help and cooperation what pertains to the salvation of their souls. Not only do we not believe that some are predestined to evil by the divine power, but if there are any who wish to believe such an enormity, we with great abhorrence anathematize them.

We also believe and profess for our salvation that in every good work it is not we who begin and afterward are helped by God’s mercy, but he himself, without any previous merits on our part, first instills in us faith in him and love for him, so that we may faithfully seek the sacrament of baptism and, after baptism, we may with his help accomplish what is pleasing to him. Therefore we must clearly believe that the wonderful faith of the thief whom the Lord called to his home in paradise [cf. Lk 23:43], of Cornelius the centurion to whom an angel of the Lord was sent [cf. Acts 10:3], and Zachaeus, who merited to receive the Lord himself [cf. Lk 19:6], did not come from nature but was a gift from the bounty of divine grace.

BONIFACE II: September 22, 530–October 17, 532

398–400: Letter Per filium nostrum to Bishop Caesarius of Arles, January 25, 531

Ed.: G. Morin, Caesarii Arelatensis Opera varia (Opera omnia 2; Maretoli, 1942), 67–69 / C. de Clercq: CpChL 148A (1963), 66–68 / cf. also the edition (in need of partial revision) PL 65:31C–33B; 45:1790f. / MaC 8:735D–736D.

Confirmation of the Second Synod of Orange

398 (c. 1) ... Petitioni tuae, quam laudabili fidei sollicitudine concepisti, catholicum non distulimus dare responsum. Indicas enim, quod aliqui episcopi

(Chap. 1) ... To your petition, which you have composed with laudable solicitude for the faith, We have not delayed to give a Catholic reply. For you point out

Galliarum, cum cetera iam bona ex Dei acquieverint gratia provenire, fidem tantum, qua in Christo credimus, naturae esse velint, non gratiae; et hominibus ex Adam, quod dici nefas est, in libero arbitrio remansisse, non etiam nunc in singulis misericordiae divinae largitate conferri; postulans ut pro ambiguitate tollenda, confessionem vestram, qua vos e diverso fidem rectam in Christo, totiusque bonae voluntatis initium, iuxta catholicam veritatem per praevenientem Dei gratiam singulorum definitis sensibus inspirari, auctoritate Sedis Apostolicae firmaremus.

(c. 2) Atque ideo, cum de hac re multi Patres, et praeter ceteris beatae recordationis Augustinus episcopus, sed et maiores nostri Apostolicae Sedis antistites ita ratione probentur disseruisse latissima, ut nulli ulterius deberet esse ambiguum, fidem quoque nobis ipsam venire de gratia: supersedendum duximus responsione multiplici; maxime cum secundum eas, quas ex Apostolo direxisti sententias, quibus dicit: “Misericordiam consecutus sum, ut fidelis essem” [I Cor 7:25], et alibi: Vobis datum est pro Christo, non solum ut in eum credatis, verum etiam ut pro eo patiamini [Phil 1:29], evidenter appareat, fidem, qua in Christo credimus, sicut et omnia bona singulis hominibus ex dono supernae venire gratiae, non ex humanae potestate naturae.

Quod etiam Fratritatem tuam, habita collatione cum quibusdam sacerdotibus Galliarum, iuxta fidem gaudemus sensisse catholicam: in his scilicet, in quibus uno, sicut indicasti, consensu definierunt fidem, qua in Christo credimus, gratia divinitatis praeveniente conferri; adiciennes etiam, nihil esse prorsus secundum Deum boni, quod sine Dei quis gratia aut velle, aut incipere, aut operari, aut perficere possit, dicente ipso Salvatore nostro: “Sine me nihil potestis facere” [Io 15:5]. Certum est enim atque catholicum, quia in omnibus bonis, quorum caput est fides, nolentes nos adhuc misericordia divina praeveniat, ut velimus, insit in nobis cum volumus, sequatur etiam ut in fide duremus, sicut David propheta dicit: “Deus meus, misericordia eius praeveniet me” [Ps 58:11]; et iterum: “Misericordia mea cum ipso est” [Ps 88:25]; et alibi: “Misericordia eius subsequitur me” [Ps 22:6]. Similiter et beatus Paulus dicit: “Aut quis prior dedit ei, et retribuetur illi? Quoniam ex ipso, et per ipsum, et in ipso sunt omnia” [Rm 11:35s];

Unde nimis eos, qui contra sentiunt, admiramur, usque eo vetusti erroris adhuc reliquiis praegravari, ut ad Christum non credant Dei beneficio, sed naturae venire; et ipsius naturae bonum, quod Adae peccato noscitur depravatum, auctorem nostrae fidei dicant magis esse quam Christum; nec intelligant se dominicae reclamare that some bishops of the Gauls, although they now agree that other goods are born of God’s grace, think that faith, by which we believe in Christ, is only of nature, not of grace; and that (faith) has remained in the free will of man from Adam—which it is a sin to say—and is not even now conferred on individuals by the bounty of God’s mercy; asking that, for the sake of ending the ambiguity, We confirm by the authority of the Apostolic See your confession, in which, to the contrary, you explain that correct faith in Christ and the beginning of all good will, according to Catholic truth, is inspired in the minds of individuals by the preceding grace of God.

(Chap. 2). And therefore, since many Fathers, and above all Bishop Augustine of blessed memory, but also Our former high priests of the Apostolic See are proved to have discussed this with such detailed reasoning that there should be no further doubt in anyone that faith itself also comes to us from grace, We have thought that We should desist from a complex response, especially since according to these statements from the apostle that you have arranged, in which he says: “I have obtained mercy, that I may be faithful” [I Cor 7:25], and elsewhere: “It has been given to you, for Christ, not only that you may believe in him, but also that you may suffer for him” [Phil 1:29], it clearly appears that the faith by which we believe in Christ, just as all blessings, comes to each man from the gift of celestial grace, not from the power of human nature.

We likewise rejoice that Your Fraternity, after holding a meeting with certain priests of the Gauls, understood according to the Catholic faith, namely, in these matters in which with one accord, as you have indicated, they explained that the faith, by which we believe in Christ, is conferred by the preceding grace of God; adding also that there is no good at all according to God that anyone can will or begin or accomplish without the grace of God, since our Savior himself says: “Without me you can do nothing” [Jn 15:5]. For it is certain and Catholic that in all blessings of which the chief is faith, though we do not will it, the mercy of God precedes us, that we may be steadfast in faith, just as David the prophet says: “My God, his mercy will go before me” [Ps 59:10]; and again: “My mercy is with him” [Ps 89:24]; and elsewhere: “His mercy follows me” [Ps 23:6]. And similarly blessed Paul says: “Or did anyone first give to him, and will he be rewarded by him? Since from him, and through him, and in him are all things” [Rm 11:35f].

So We marvel very much that those who believe the contrary are oppressed by the remains of an ancient error even to the point that they believe that we come to Christ, not by the favor of God, but by that of nature and say that the good of that very nature, which is known to have been perverted by Adam’s sin, is the author of our faith sententiae dicenti: “Nemo venit ad me, nisi datum fuerit illi a Patre meo” [Io 6:44]; sed et beato Paulo simul obsistere clamanti ad Hebraeos: “Curramus ad propositum nobis certamen, aspicientes in auctorem fidei et consummatorem Iesum Christum” [Hbr 12:1s]. Quae cum ita sint, invenire non possumus, quid ad credendum in Christo, sine Dei gratia, humanae deputent voluntati; cum Christus auctor consummatorque sit fidei. —(c. 3) Quapropter ... supra scriptam confessionem vestram consentaneam catholicis Patrum regulis approbamus.

rather than Christ; and do not perceive that they contradict the statement of the Master, who said: “No one comes to me, except it be given to him by my Father” [Jn 6:44]; but they also oppose blessed Paul likewise, who exclaims to the Hebrews: “Let us run in the contest proposed to us, looking upon the author and finisher of faith, Jesus Christ” [Heb 12:1f.]. Since this is so, We cannot ascertain what they ascribe to the human will for faith in Christ without the grace of God, since Christ is the author and consummator of faith. —(Chap. 3) Therefore ... We approve your confession written above as in agreement with the Catholic rules of the Fathers.

JOHN II: January 2, 533–May 8, 535

401–402: Letter Olim quidem to the Senators of Constantinople, March 534

Some Scythian monks under the guidance of Maxentius were in favor of the formula “Unus de [or ex] Trinitate passus est” (one of [or from] the Trinity has suffered). The formula could have derived from the Trisagion (thrice-holy) of the Monophysite Peter Fullo, who had referred the liturgical acclamation ἅγιος ὁ θεός, ἅγιος ἰσχυρός, ἅγιος ἀθάνατος (holy God, holy Mighty One, holy Immortal One) not only to Christ but to the entire Trinity, so that the addition, introduced around 435, ὁ σταυρωθεὶς δι’ ἡμᾶς (who was crucified for us) could suggest Theopaschitism. To defend themselves against this suspicion, the monks appealed to Pope Hormisdas. He did not pronounce a definitive judgment, but he exhorted them to be content with the Christology of the Council of Chalcedon and the Tomus of Pope Leo I. Later, Emperor Justinian took up their defense against the Acoemeti, monks of Constantinople, and he got John II to approve the formula of the Scythians and condemn the Acoemeti (John II, letter Inter claras to Emperor Justinian, March 25, 534: CSEL 35:320–28 / PL 66:17–20). In the sense of the communication of idioms the formula can be justified. To the three questions posed by Justinian in his letter to John II (cf. Collectio Avellana, letter 84, 91: CSEL 35:322–25, 344–47), the pope responds in his letter to the senators of Constantinople.

Ed.: ACOe 4/II, 206–10 / PL 66:20C–23C / MaC 8:803E–806D / HaC 2:1150C–1152E / BullTau appendix 1:496a–500a. — Reg.: CIPL 1692; JR 885.

Communication of Idioms

401 [Justinianus imperator] de his tribus quaestionibus orta certamina fuisse significavit: [I] Utrum “unus ex Trinitate” Christus et Deus noster dici possit, hoc est una de tribus personis sanctae Trinitatis sancta persona. [II] An Deus Christus carne pertulerit impassibilis deitate. [III] An proprie et veraciter Mater Domini Dei nostri Christi Maria semper virgo debeat appellari....

[De adagio “Unus de Trinitate passus est”.] Unum enim ex sancta Trinitate Christum esse, hoc est unam de tribus sanctae Trinitatis personis sanctam esse personam sive subsistentiam, quam Graeci hypostasim dicunt, in his exemplis evidenter ostendimus [allegantur inter alia Gn 3:22; 1 Cor 8:6; Symbolum Nicaenum].

[De Christo “Deo carne passo”.] Deum vero carne passum his nihilominus roboremus exemplis [Dt 28:66; Io 14:6; Mal 3:8; Act 3:15; 20:28; 1 Cor 2:8; Cyrillus Alexandrinus, Anathematismus 12; Leo I, Tomus ad Flavianum, etc.].

[De titulo “Mater Dei”.] Gloriosam vero sanctam semper virginem Mariam proprie et veraciter Dei genitricem matremque Dei Verbi ex ea incarnati ab hominibus catholicis confiteri recte docemus. Proprie

[The emperor Justinian] indicated that disputes had arisen concerning these three questions: [I.] Whether our Christ and God can be called “one of the Trinity”, that is, one holy Person of the three Persons of the Holy Trinity. [II.] Whether the Christ God, being incapable of suffering in his divinity, suffered in the flesh. [III.] Whether the ever-virgin Mary should properly and truly be called the Mother of Christ our Lord (and) God....

[Concerning the expression “One of the Trinity suffered.”] That Christ is truly one of the Holy Trinity, that is, one holy Person or “subsistence”, which the Greeks call hypostasis, of the three Persons of the Holy Trinity, we clearly demonstrate in these examples [Gen 3:22, 1 Cor 8:6, and the Nicene Creed, among other passages, are cited].

[Concerning Christ as “God who suffered in the flesh.”] Nevertheless, we wish to confirm with these examples that God suffered in the flesh [Deut 28:66; Jn 14:6; Mal 3:8; Acts 3:15, 20:28; 1 Cor 2:8; Cyril of Alexandria, Anathema 12; Leo I, Tomus to Flavian, etc.].

[Concerning the title “Mother of God.”] We rightly teach that Catholics properly and truly confess that the holy, glorious, ever-virgin Mary is the Mother and Birthgiver of God the Word, who was incarnate of namque et veraciter idem ipse ultimis temporibus incarnatus, ex sancta et gloriosa Virgine matre nasci dignatus est. Propterea ergo, quia proprie et veraciter Dei Filius ex ea incarnatus et natus est, ideo proprie et veraciter matrem Dei ex ea incarnati et nati esse confitemur, et, ne Dominus Iesus per honorificentiam vel gratiam nomen Dei accepisse credatur, sicut Nestorius sentit insulsus: veraciter autem ideo, ne in phantasmate aut aliquo modo non veram sumpsisse carnem credatur ex virgine, sicut asseruit impius Eutyches.

[Summarium christologiae.] His igitur evidenter ostensum est, . . . quid speraverit imperator, quid Romana sequatur et colat Ecclesia, scilicet Christum Dominum nostrum unum esse, ut saepe diximus, sanctae Trinitatis, ex duabus naturis cognoscendum, hoc est in deitate et humanitate perfectum, non antea existente carne et postea unita Verbo, sed in ipso Deo Verbo initium, ut esset, accipiente. Ideo enim quia Verbi ex materno corpore caro sumpsit initium, salva proprietate et veritate utriusque naturae, hoc est divinitatis atque humanitatis [cf. *293], Dei Filium Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum catholice confitemur, omni posthac commutatione vel confusione submota. Neque enim naturas in eo aliter agnoscimus, nisi differentias intellegentes et confitentes divinitatis atque humanitatis. Sed nec duas personas in Christo intellegimus per id quod dicimus duas naturas, ut adunationis divisionem facere videamur et sit, quod absit, quaternitas, non trinitas, sicut Nestorius sentit insanus, nec confundimus easdem unitas naturas, cum unam personam Christi confitemur, ut Eutyches impius credit. Tomum vero papae Leonis omnesque epistolas nec non et quattuor synodos, Nicaenam, Constantinopolitanam et Ephesenam primam et Calchidonensem, sicut Romana hactenus suscepit et veneratur Ecclesia, sequimur, amplectimur atque servamus.

her. For having really and truly taken flesh in the last times, he himself deigned to be born of the holy and glorious Virgin Mother. Therefore, since the Son of God was really and truly incarnate and born of her, we confess that she is really and truly the Mother of God, who was incarnate and born of her, lest anyone believe that the Lord Jesus received the name of God as an honor or a favor, as Nestorius foolishly believes. We say “truly”, however, lest anyone think that he took flesh from the Virgin (only) in appearance, or flesh that was somehow not real, as the impious Eutyches asserts.

[Summary of Christology.] With these (examples) it is clearly demonstrated . . . what the emperor anticipated and the Roman Church maintains and reveres, namely, that Christ our Lord, as we have often said, is one of the Holy Trinity, to be understood as (composed) of two natures, perfect in divinity and humanity, not in the sense that the flesh existed first and was afterward united to the Word, but that it received the origins of its being in God the Word himself. For since the flesh of the Word received its origins from his Mother’s body, without detriment to the true and proper character of both his natures, that is, the human and divine [cf. *293], we profess the Catholic doctrine of the Son of God, our Lord, Jesus Christ, having ruled out any subsequent change or confusion (of his natures). Moreover, we do not acknowledge “natures” in him, except insofar as we understand and profess the distinction between divinity and humanity. We do not, however, understand the statement that Christ has two natures to mean there are two Persons in him, so that we seem to make a division of unity, so that there is [heaven forbid!] a quaternity rather than a trinity, as the mad Nestorius holds. Nor do we confuse these same united natures when we confess the one Person of Christ, as the impious Eutyches believes. We observe, embrace, and maintain the Tomus of Pope Leo, all his letters, and the four Councils of Nicaea, Constantinople, Ephesus I, and Chalcedon, just as the Roman Church has received and venerates them to the present day.

AGAPITUS I: May 13, 535–April 22, 536

SILVERIUS: June 1 (8?), 536–November 11, 537

VIGILIUS: November 11 (March 29), 537–June 7, 555

Through the initiative of Empress Theodora, Pope Silverius was deposed, and on March 29, Vigilius was named as his successor. Only when Silverius abdicated on November 11 did Vigilius become legitimate.

403–411: Edict of Emperor Justinian to Patriarch Menas of Constantinople, Published at the Synod of Constantinople, 543

Justinian, who conceived his role as that of a theologian on his imperial throne, opposed the monks of Jerusalem, who were spreading the doctrines of Origen. On the basis of Origen’s De principiis, he composed, among others, the following nine anathemas that concluded his work Adversus Origenem liber or Edictum (written between late 542 and early 543). The anathemas of Justinian were proclaimed publicly at the Synod of Constantinople in 543. Pope Vigilius seems to have confirmed these during his stay in Constantinople (547–555), as is indicated in Cassiodorus' De institutionibus divinarum litterarum 1 (PL 70:1111D). Moreover, a series of fifteen anathemas are attributed to the same synod (MaC 9:396–400 / Hn § 175 / P. Koetschau, cited below, pp. CXXI–CXXIII: only anathemas 1–6) that are not recorded here.

Ed.: ACOe 3:213f. / P. Koetschau, Origenes' Werke 5. GChSch (Leipzig, 1913): De principiis, pp. CVIff. / PG 86:989 / PL 69:221A–D / MaC 9:533A–D / HaC 3:279C–E.

Anathemas against Origen

- 403 α'. Εἴ τις λέγει ἢ ἔχει, προϋπάρχειν τὰς τῶν ἀνθρώπων ψυχὰς, ὅτι πρῶην νόας οὐσας καὶ ἀγίας δυνάμεις· κόρον δὲ λαβούσας τῆς θείας θεωρίας, καὶ πρὸς τὸ χεῖρον τραπέισας, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο ἀποψυγείσας μὲν τῆς τοῦ Θεοῦ ἀγάπης, ἐντεῦθεν δὲ ψυχὰς ὀνομασθείσας, καὶ τιμωρίας χάριν εἰς [τὰ] σώματα καταπεμφθείσας, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.
1. If anyone says or holds that human souls had a previous existence, viz., that first they were spirits or blessed powers that, having become tired of the contemplation of God and turned to evil, grew cold in the love of God (ψύχω) and for this reason came to be called souls (ψυχή) and so were in punishment sent down into bodies, let him be anathema.
- 404 β'. Εἴ τις λέγει ἢ ἔχει, τὴν τοῦ Κυρίου ψυχὴν προϋπάρχειν, καὶ ἡνωμένην γεγενῆσθαι τῷ Θεῷ λόγῳ πρὸ τῆς ἐκ παρθένου σαρκώσεώς τε καὶ γεννήσεως, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.
2. If anyone says or holds that the soul of the Lord preexisted and was united to God the Word before his Incarnation and birth from the Virgin, let him be anathema.
- 405 γ'. Εἴ τις λέγει ἢ ἔχει, πρῶτον πεπλάσθαι τὸ σῶμα τοῦ Κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ἐν τῇ μήτρᾳ τῆς ἀγίας παρθένου, καὶ μετὰ ταῦτα ἐνωθῆναι αὐτῷ τὸν Θεὸν λόγον, καὶ τὴν ψυχὴν ὡς προϋπάρξασαν, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.
3. If anyone says or holds that the body of our Lord Jesus Christ was first formed in the womb of the holy Virgin and that after this God, the Word, and the soul, since it had preexisted, were united to it, let him be anathema.
- 406 δ'. Εἴ τις λέγει ἢ ἔχει, πᾶσι τοῖς οὐρανίοις τάγμασιν ἐξομοιωθῆναι τὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγον, γενόμενον τοῖς Χερουβὶμ Χερουβίμ, καὶ τοῖς Σεραφίμ Σεραφίμ, καὶ πάσαις ἀπλῶς ταῖς ἄνω δυνάμειν ἐξομοιωθέντα, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.
4. If anyone says or holds that the Word of God was made like all the heavenly orders, having become a Cherubim for the Cherubim, a Seraphim for the Seraphim, and evidently having been made like all the powers above, let him be anathema.
- 407 ε'. Εἴ τις λέγει ἢ ἔχει, ἐν τῇ ἀναστάσει σφαιροειδῆ τὰ τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἐγείρεσθαι σώματα, καὶ οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ ὀρθίους ἡμᾶς ἐγείρεσθαι, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.
5. If anyone says or holds that in resurrection the bodies of men are raised up from sleep spherical and does not agree that we are raised up from sleep upright, let him be anathema.
- 408 ς'. Εἴ τις λέγει ἢ ἔχει, οὐρανὸν καὶ ἥλιον καὶ σελήνην καὶ ἀστέρας καὶ ὕδατα τὰ ὑπεράνω τῶν οὐρανῶν ἐμπύχους καὶ λογικάς [ύλικὰς]¹ εἶναι τινὰς δυνάμεις, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.
6. If anyone says or holds that the sky and the sun and the moon and the stars and the waters above the heavens are living and intelligent [material]¹ powers, let him be anathema.
- 409 ζ'. Εἴ τις λέγει ἢ ἔχει, ὅτι ὁ δεσπότης Χριστὸς ἐν τῷ μέλλοντι αἰῶνι σταυρωθήσεται ὑπὲρ δαιμόνων, καθὰ καὶ ὑπὲρ ἀνθρώπων, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.
7. If anyone says or holds that the Lord Christ in the future age will be crucified in behalf of the demons, just as (he was) for the sake of men, let him be anathema.
- 410 η'. Εἴ τις λέγει ἢ ἔχει, ἡ πεπερασμένην εἶναι τὴν τοῦ Θεοῦ δύναμιν, καὶ τοσαῦτα αὐτὸν δημιουργῆσαι, ὅσων [ὅσον] περιδράξασθαι καὶ νοεῖν ἠδύνατο, ἢ τὰ κτίσματα συναῖδια εἶναι τῷ Θεῷ [-!], ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.
8. If anyone says or holds that God's power is finite or that he has created all that he could comprehend and think or that creatures are co-eternal with God [-!], let him be anathema.
- 411 θ'. Εἴ τις λέγει ἢ ἔχει, πρόσκαιρον εἶναι τὴν τῶν δαιμόνων καὶ ἀσεβῶν ἀνθρώπων κόλασιν, καὶ τέλος κατὰ τινα χρόνον αὐτὴν ἔξειν, ἥγουν ἀποκατάστασιν ἔσεσθαι δαιμόνων, ἢ ἀσεβῶν ἀνθρώπων, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.
9. If anyone says or holds that the punishment of the demons and of impious men is temporary and that it will have an end at some time, that is to say, there will be a complete restoration of the demons or of impious men, let him be anathema.

*408 ¹ Contrary to all the Greek manuscripts, it should here read λογικάς = endowed with reason: cf. Origen, De principiis I, 7 (P. Koetschau: GChSch Origenes 5 [1913], 85–94); this is confirmed by a Syriac translation of the Edictum.

412–415: Letter Dum in sanctae to All the People of God, February 5, 552

With this letter, the pope, who had fled from the emperor to Chalcedon, opposes the Monophysite activities of the emperor.

Ed.: E. Schwartz, Vigiliusbrieife, SbBayAk, Philosophisch-historische Abteilung 1940, no. 2, 5₂₇–8₁₄ / PL 69:56B–57D / MaC 9:53A–54D. —Reg.: JR 931.

Profession of Faith of Pope Vigilius

Sciunt igitur universi nos illam fidem praedicare, tenere ac defendere, quam ab Apostolis traditam et per successores eorum inviolabiliter custoditam reverenda Nicaena synodus CCCXVIII patrum Sancto Spiritu sibi revelante suscipiens redegit in symbolum ac deinde tres aliae sanctae synodi, id est Constantinopolitana ... Ephesena ... Calchidonensis ... ediderunt.

Hinc est quod Dominus noster contra errorum huiusmodi feritatem pastorale caelitus armavit officium, quod beatissimo Petro apostolo trina praeceptione commendans ait: “Pasce oves meas” [Io 21:15]. Et recte illi pascendarum est cura commissa, cuius fidei praeclara confessio Domini est ore laudata... eundem ipsum [Christum] hominis esse filium Deique sub mirabili interrogationis responsionisque brevitate confessus est “Tu es Christus filius Dei vivi” [Mt 16:16], sacratissimae scilicet mysterium incarnationis eius aperiens, dum in unitate personae, servata geminae proprietate naturae, homo idemque Deus esset, quod ex matre semper virgine sumpsit in tempore, et quod natus ex patre est ante saecula, permaneret.

Inconfuse autem et indivise atque inconvertibiliter et substantialiter uniens sibi carnem Deus Verbum Emmanuel noster, qui lege et prophetis adnuntiantibus expectabatur, advenit: “Verbum ergo caro factum est et habitavit in nobis” [Io 1:14], totus in suis, totus in nostris, adsumens ex vulva carnem cum anima rationali et intellectuali...

Humanitatis sumpsit initium, ut nos aeternitatis suae faceret coheredes; nostrae consors dignatus est esse naturae, ut nos suae immortalitatis faceret esse participes; pauper factus est, cum esset dives, ut eius inopia ditaremur [cf. 2 Cor 8:9]; omnia quae nostra sunt, evacuato noxarum nostrarum chirographo condonavit [cf. Col 2:13s] ... id peragens ..., ut “mediator Dei et hominum homo Christus Iesus” [1 Tim 2:5] maledicto quo primus homo terrenus mortis vinculis tenebatur, adstrictus, secundus homo caelestis [1 Cor 15:47], dum mortem morte calcaret, absolveret.

Let all men know that We preach, hold, and defend the faith that was handed down by the apostles and inviolably guarded through their successors and which the reverend Nicene Council of 318 Fathers, by the revelation of the Holy Spirit, received and condensed into a creed and which was then proclaimed by three other holy councils, that is, the councils of Constantinople ..., Ephesus ..., and Chalcedon. 412

This is why our Lord, against the ferocity of such errors, armed with heavenly strength the pastoral office that he entrusted with a triple formula to blessed Peter the apostle, saying “Feed my sheep” [Jn 21:15]. Rightly was the responsibility of feeding them committed to the man whose outstanding confession of faith the Lord praised with his own mouth... For with admirable brevity in both the question and the answer, he confessed that this same [Christ] is the Son of man and God: “You are the Christ, the son of the living God” [Mt 16:16]. He thereby revealed the mystery of his sacred Incarnation, since he was both man and God in unity of person, without detriment to the special property of his twofold nature, and remained that which he received in time from his ever-virgin Mother and that which he was, having been born of the Father before all ages. 413

Uniting flesh to himself in an unconfused, undivided, unchangeable, and substantial manner, God the Word, our Emmanuel, for whom (the world) waited, since he was announced by the law and the prophets, came among us. “Therefore, the Word became flesh and dwelt among us” [Jn 1:14], wholly existing in his own nature, wholly in ours, taking from the maternal womb his flesh, together with a rational and intellectual soul...

He assumed human origins, in order to make us co-heirs of his eternity; he deigned to be a sharer of our nature, in order to make us partakers of his immortality. Although he was rich, he became poor, that by his poverty we might become rich [cf. 2 Cor 8:9]. He forgave everything that is ours, canceling the written bond of our sins [cf. Col 2:13f.] ... , bringing it about ... that “the mediator of God and men, the man Jesus Christ” [1 Tim 2:5], as the second, heavenly man [1 Cor 15:47], might free (us), as he trampled death by death, from the curse through which the first earthly man was held bound by the fetters of death.

414 Passus est pro nobis Dei Filius, crucifixus carne est, mortuus carne est et die tertio resurrexit, ut divina impassibili permanente natura et carnis nostrae veritate servata unius eiusdemque Domini Dei nostri Iesu Christi et passiones et miracula fateamur, ut glorificationem Capitis nostri totius Ecclesiae corpus aspiciens, quales primitias in Capite nostro, id est in Christo Deo ac Domino, intueretur ex mortuis, tales in his qui eius membra sunt, in futurae gloriae praestoletur adventum. Ipse igitur Redemptor noster sedet ad dexteram Patris, unus idemque sine confusione utriusque naturae, sine divisione personae et ex duabus atque in duabus creditus permanensque naturis, inde venturus iudicare vivos et mortuos.

415 Pater autem cum eodem unigenito Filio et Spiritu Sancto unus est in deitate et aequalis indiscretaeque naturae. Huius fidei plenitudinem Dominus noster post resurrectionem mandavit Apostolis dicens: “Ite, docete omnes gentes, baptizantes eos in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti” [Mt 28:19]. “In nomine”, inquit, dixit non in nominibus, ut in quibus una virtus, una potestas, una deitas, una aeternitas, una gloria, una omnipotentia, una beatitudo, una operatio est unaque natura, unius quoque nominis existat integritas. Nihil in deitate quippe discretum est, cum tantum personarum proprietates manifesta distinctione signetur. Totum ergo quod Trinitas est, permanet consubstantialis et indiscreta divinitas.

The Son of God suffered for us, was crucified in the flesh, died in the flesh, and on the third day rose again, so that, maintaining his divine, impassible nature, and without detriment to the truth of our flesh, we might confess both the sufferings and the miracles of one and the same Lord, our God, Jesus Christ. Thus the body of the whole Church, looking upon the glorification of our Head and seeing the firstfruits from the dead in him, that is, in Christ, the Lord and God, might look forward to such fruits in his members at the coming of future glory. Therefore, our Redeemer himself sits at the right hand of the Father, one and the same, without confusion of his two natures, without division in his Person, forever consisting of and in two natures, as we believe, whence he shall come to judge the living and the dead.

Now, the Father is one in dignity, and of an equal and undifferentiated nature, with the same only begotten Son and Holy Spirit. After his Resurrection, our Lord entrusted the fullness of this faith to the apostles, saying, “Go, teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit” [Mt 28:19]. He says, “in the name”, not “in the names”, so that in those in whom there is one virtue, one power, one Godhead, one eternity, one glory, one omnipotence, one blessedness, one operation, and one nature there may be integrity in name. For in the Godhead nothing is differentiated, since only the manifest uniqueness of Persons is subject to distinction. The whole of that which is the Trinity remains consubstantial and undifferentiated divinity.

416-420: Constitution (I) Inter innumeras sollicitudines on the “Three Chapters” to Emperor Justinian, May 14, 553

The “Three Chapters” refer to the work Contra impium Apollinarium libri III of Theodore of Mopsuestia, the texts (Pentalogus) of Theodoret of Cyrus against Cyril of Alexandria, and the letter of Ibas of Edessa to Maris the Persian. Emperor Justinian asked for the condemnation of these “Nestorian writings”. In a first constitution, the pope anathematizes fifty-six propositions of Theodore of Mopsuestia without, however, condemning his person. He defends the orthodoxy of Theodoret and Ibas and attaches anathemas of a general nature against the Nestorian errors. In a second constitution, Dominus noster et Salvator of February 23, 554 (ACOe 4/II, 138-68; PL 69:143-78), the pope yields to the pressure of Justinian and condemns all of the “Three Chapters”.

Ed.: O. Guenther: CSEL 35:295₁₈-296₁₆ (= Collectio Avellana, letter 83) / PL 69:104 / MaC 9:97E-98C / Hn § 228. —Reg.: JR 935.

Condemnation of the Errors of Nestorianism concerning the Humanity of Christ

416 1. Si quis servata inconvertibilitate naturae divinae non confitetur Verbum carnem factum et ex ipsa conceptione de utero Virginis humanae naturae sibi secundum subsistentiam unisse principia, sed tamquam cum existenti iam homine fuerit Deus Verbum, ut per hoc non sancta Virgo vere Dei genitrix esse credatur, sed verbo tenus appelletur, anathema sit.

1. If anyone does not confess that the Word, without detriment to the immutability of his divine nature, was made flesh and that from his very conception in the womb of the Virgin he united, according to hypostasis, the principles of human nature, but says that God the Word was with a preexisting man, so that, as a consequence, one cannot believe that the holy Virgin was in fact the Mother of God, but only that she is said to be such in name, let him be anathema.

2. Si quis secundum subsistentiam unitatem naturarum in Christo factam denegat, sed seorsum existenti homini tamquam uni iustorum inhabitare Deum Verbum, et non ita confitetur naturarum secundum subsistentiam unitatem, ut Deus Verbum cum adsumpta carne una permanserit permaneatque subsistentia sive persona, anathema sit.

3. Si quis voces evangelicas et apostolicas in uno Christo ita dividit, ut etiam naturarum in ipso unitarum divisionem introducat, anathema sit.

4. Si quis unum Iesum Christum verum Dei et eundem verum hominis Filium futurorum ignorantiam aut diei ultimi iudicii habuisse dicit et tanta scire potuisse, quanta ei deitas quasi alteri cuidam inhabitans revelabat, anathema sit.

5. Si quis illud Apostoli, quod est in epistula ad Hebraeos [5:7s] dictum, quod experimento cognovit oboedientiam et cum clamore forti et lacrimis preces supplicationesque obtulit ad eum, qui salvum illum posset a morte facere, tamquam nudo deitate Christo deputans, qui laboribus virtutis perfectus sit, ut ex hoc duos introducere Christos vel duos Filios videatur, et non unum eundemque credit Christum Dei et hominis Filium ex duabus et in duabus naturis inseparabilibus indivisisque confitendum atque adorandum, anathema sit.

2. If anyone denies the unity of the natures in Christ effected according to hypostasis, but (says) that God the Word dwells in a man with separate existence, as though in one of the just, and if he does not confess the unity of natures according to hypostasis in the sense that God the Word, with the flesh he assumed, remained and remains one hypostasis, or Person, let him be anathema. 417

3. If anyone divides the words of the Gospel and the apostles concerning the one Christ in such a way that he also introduces a division of the natures united in him, let him be anathema. 418

4. If anyone says that the one Jesus Christ, the true Son of man and the true Son of God, was ignorant of future events or the day of the Last Judgment and that he was able to know only as much as was revealed to him by the divinity dwelling in him, as though in another person, let him be anathema. 419

5. If anyone regards the saying of the apostle to the Hebrews [5:7f.], that he learned obedience through suffering and with a loud cry and tears offered prayers and supplications to the one who could save him from death, as referring to a Christ devoid of Godhead, who was made perfect by works of virtue, with the result that he seems to introduce two Christs or two Sons and does not believe that we must profess and adore one and the same Christ, the Son of God and man, consisting of and in two inseparable and undivided natures, let him be anathema. 420

Second Council of CONSTANTINOPLE (Fifth Ecumenical): May 5–June 2, 553

The council was convoked by Emperor Justinian to win over the Monophysites by the condemnation of the most important theologians of the Antiochene school (cf. *416°). Pope Vigilius, who had been removed by force from Rome, refused to participate in the council. Eventually, he yielded to the pressure of the emperor and confirmed the council in his letter of December 8, 553, to Patriarch Eutychius of Constantinople (PL 69:121C–128A / MaC 9:413–20) and in the second constitution, of February 23, 554, cited above (*416°). The fourteen anathemas of this council derive, for the greater part, from the second edict of Justinian composed in the year 551. This Ὁμολογία πίστεως contains thirteen anathemas and is directed against the “Three Chapters” (ed. by E. Schwartz, Drei dogmatische Schriften Justinians, AbhBayAk, Philosophisch-historische Abteilung, n.s., no. 18 [Munich, 1939], 90–95 / MaC 9:537C–582A / HaC 3:287B–329A / PL 69:225C–268B).

421–438: Session 8, June 2, 553: Canons

Ed.: ACOe 4/I, 240–44 in Greek; 215–20 in Latin / MaC 9:375D–388C / HaC 3:193D–201B / Hn § 148 / COeD, 3rd ed., 114–22.

Anathemas against the “Three Chapters”

α'. Εἴ τις οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ πατρός καὶ υἱοῦ καὶ ἁγίου πνεύματος μίαν φύσιν ἦτοι οὐσίαν, μίαν τε δύναμιν, καὶ ἐξουσίαν, τριάδα ὁμοούσιον, μίαν θεότητα ἐν τρισὶν ὑποστάσεσιν ἡγουν προσώποις προσκυνουμένην· ὁ τοιοῦτος ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

Εἷς γὰρ Θεὸς καὶ πατήρ, ἐξ οὗ τὰ πάντα, καὶ εἷς κύριος Ἰησοῦς Χριστός, δι' οὗ τὰ πάντα, καὶ ἐν πνεῦμα ἅγιον, ἐν ᾧ τὰ πάντα.

1. If anyone does not confess that Father, Son, and Holy Spirit are one nature or essence, one might and power, a Trinity one in being, one Godhead to be worshipped in three hypostases or Persons, let him be anathema. 421

For one (is) the God and Father from whom all things (are), one (is) the Lord Jesus Christ through whom all things (are), and one the Holy Spirit in whom all things (are).

422 β'. Εἴ τις οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ, τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγου εἶναι τὰς δύο γεννήσεις, τὴν τε πρὸ αἰώνων ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς, ἀχρόνως καὶ ἀσωμάτως, τὴν τε ἐπ' ἐσχάτων τῶν ἡμερῶν, τοῦ αὐτοῦ κατελθόντος ἐκ τῶν οὐρανῶν, καὶ σαρκωθέντος ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας ἐνδόξου θεοτόκου καὶ ἀειπαρθένου Μαρίας, καὶ γεννηθέντος ἐξ αὐτῆς· ὁ τοιοῦτος ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

423 γ'. Εἴ τις λέγει, ἄλλον εἶναι τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγον τὸν θαυματουργήσαντα, καὶ ἄλλον τὸν Χριστὸν τὸν παθόντα, ἢ τὸν Θεὸν λόγον συνεῖναι λέγει τῷ Χριστῷ γενομένῳ ἐκ γυναικός [cf. Gal 4:4], ἢ ἐν αὐτῷ εἶναι ὡς ἄλλον ἐν ἄλλῳ, ἀλλ' οὐχ ἓνα καὶ τὸν αὐτὸν κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν, τὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγον, σαρκωθέντα καὶ ἐνανθρωπήσαντα, καὶ τοῦ αὐτοῦ τὰ τε θαύματα καὶ τὰ πάθη, ἄπερ ἑκουσίως ὑπέμεινε σαρκί· ὁ τοιοῦτος ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

424 δ'. Εἴ τις λέγει, κατὰ χάριν, ἢ κατὰ ἐνέργειαν, ἢ κατὰ ἰσοτιμίαν ἢ κατὰ αὐθεντίαν, ἢ ἀναφοράν, ἢ σχέσιν, ἢ δύναμιν τὴν ἔνωσιν τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγου πρὸς ἄνθρωπον γεγενῆσθαι· ἢ κατὰ εὐδοκίαν, ὡς ἀρεσθέντος τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγου τοῦ ἀνθρώπου, ἀπὸ τοῦ εὔ και καλῶς δόξαι αὐτῷ περὶ αὐτοῦ, καθὼς Θεόδωρος μαινόμενος λέγει·

ἢ κατὰ ὁμωνυμίαν, καθ' ἣν οἱ Νεστοριανοὶ τὸν Θεὸν λόγον Ἰησοῦν καὶ Χριστὸν καλοῦντες, καὶ τὸν ἄνθρωπον κεχωρισμένως Χριστὸν καὶ υἱὸν ὀνομάζοντες, καὶ δύο πρόσωπα προφανῶς λέγοντες, κατὰ μόνην τὴν προσηγορίαν, καὶ τιμὴν καὶ ἀξίαν, καὶ προσκύνησιν, καὶ ἓν πρόσωπον, καὶ ἓνα Χριστὸν ὑποκρίνονται λέγειν· ἀλλ' οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ τὴν ἔνωσιν τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγου πρὸς σάρκα ἐμψυχωμένην ψυχῇ λογικῇ καὶ νοερᾷ, κατὰ σύνθεσιν ἦγουν καθ' ὑπόστασιν γεγενῆσθαι, καθὼς οἱ ἅγιοι πατέρες ἐδίδαξαν· καὶ διὰ τοῦτο μίαν αὐτοῦ τὴν ὑπόστασιν, ὅ ἐστιν ὁ κύριος Ἰησοῦς Χριστός, εἷς τῆς ἁγίας τριάδος· ὁ τοιοῦτος ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

425 Πολυτρόπως γὰρ νοουμένης τῆς ἐνώσεως, οἱ μὲν τῇ ἀσεβείᾳ Ἀπολλιναρίου καὶ Εὐτυχοῦς ἀκολουθοῦντες, τῷ ἀφανισμῷ τῶν συνελθόντων προκειμένοι, τὴν κατὰ σύγχυσιν τὴν ἔνωσιν προβεβούσιν. Οἱ δὲ τὰ Θεοδώρου καὶ Νεστορίου φρονοῦντες, τῇ διαρέσει χαίροντες, σχετικὴν τὴν ἔνωσιν ἐπεισάγουσιν· ἢ μέντοι ἁγία τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐκκλησία, ἑκατέρας αἰρέσεως τὴν ἀσεβείαν ἀποβαλλομένη, τὴν ἔνωσιν τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγου πρὸς τὴν σάρκα κατὰ σύνθεσιν ὁμολογεῖ· ὅπερ ἐστὶ καθ' ὑπόστασιν. Ἡ γὰρ κατὰ σύνθεσιν ἔνωσις, ἐπὶ τοῦ κατὰ Χριστὸν μυστηρίου, οὐ μόνον ἀσύγχυτα τὰ συνελθόντα διαφυλάττει, ἀλλ' οὐδὲ διαίρειν ἐπιδέχεται.

2. If anyone does not confess the two births of the Word of God, one from the Father before the ages, which is timeless and incorporeal, the other (which took place) in the latter days when the same (Word), descending from heaven, was made flesh from Mary, the holy and glorious Mother of God ever Virgin, and was born of her, let him be anathema.

3. If anyone says that the Word of God who performed miracles was someone other than the Christ who suffered or that God the Word was with the Christ born of a woman [cf. Gal 4:4] or was in him as one in another, but (does) not (confess) one and the same our Lord Jesus Christ the Word of God incarnate and made man, to whom belong the miracles and the sufferings that he has voluntarily endured in the flesh, let him be anathema.

4. If anyone says that the union of God the Word with the man was no more than a union by grace or by operation or by equality of honor or by authority or relation, affection, or power; or if he says that it took place because of goodwill, the Word of God being well pleased with the man for whom he had high esteem, as Theodore foolishly asserts; or (if he speaks of a union) by homonymy as the Nestorians, who, by giving to God the Word the name of Jesus and of Christ and by calling the man separately considered Christ and Son, evidently speak of two Persons while they pretend to speak of one Person and one Christ because of the common appellation, honor, dignity, and adoration;

but does not confess that the union of God the Word with the flesh animated by a rational and intellectual soul took place by way of synthesis, that is, according to the hypostasis, as the holy Fathers have taught, and consequently denies that he has only one hypostasis who is our Lord Jesus Christ, one of the Holy Trinity, let him be anathema.

For, since union can be understood in various ways, some, following the impiety of Apollinaris and Eutyches and upholding the obliteration of the elements that come together, maintain a union by confusion. Others, who think with Theodore and Nestorius, favoring division, introduce an accidental union. The Holy Church of God, rejecting these two impious heresies, confesses the union of God the Word with the flesh as being by synthesis, that is, according to the hypostasis. For, in the mystery of Christ, union by synthesis not only preserves from confusion what has come together but also tolerates no division.

ε'. Εἴ τις τὴν μίαν ὑπόστασιν τοῦ κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ οὕτως ἐκλαμβάνει, ὡς ἐπιδεχομένην πολλῶν ὑποστάσεων σημασίαν, καὶ διὰ τούτου εἰσάγειν ἐπιχειρεῖ ἐπὶ τοῦ κατὰ Χριστὸν μυστηρίου δύο ὑποστάσεις, ἦτοι δύο πρόσωπα, καὶ τῶν παρ' αὐτοῦ εἰσαγομένων δύο προσώπων, ἐν πρόσωπον λέγει κατὰ ἀξίαν, καὶ τιμὴν, καὶ προσκύνησιν, καθάπερ Θεόδωρος καὶ Νεστόριος μαινόμενοι συνεγράψαντο· καὶ συκοφαντεῖ τὴν ἁγίαν ἐν Χαλκηδόνι σύνοδον, ὡς κατὰ ταύτην τὴν ἀσεβῆ ἔννοιαν χρησαμένην τῷ τῆς μᾶς ὑποστάσεως ῥήματι· ἀλλὰ μὴ ὁμολογεῖ τὸν τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγον σαρκὶ καθ' ὑπόστασιν ἐνωθῆναι, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο μίαν αὐτοῦ τὴν ὑπόστασιν, ἦτοι ἐν πρόσωπον· οὕτως τε καὶ τὴν ἁγίαν ἐν Χαλκηδόνι σύνοδον μίαν ὑπόστασιν τοῦ κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ὁμολογήσαι· ὁ τοιοῦτος ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

Οὔτε γὰρ προσθήκη προσώπου, ἦγουν ὑποστάσεως ἐπεδέξατο ἡ ἁγία τριάς καὶ σαρκωθέντος τοῦ ἐνὸς τῆς ἁγίας τριάδος Θεοῦ λόγου.

ς'. Εἴ τις καταχρηστικῶς, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀληθῶς θεοτόκον λέγει τὴν ἁγίαν ἐνδοξον ἀειπαρθένον Μαρίαν· ἢ κατὰ ἀναφορὰν, ὡς ἀνθρώπου ψιλοῦ γεννηθέντος, ἀλλ' οὐχὶ τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγου σαρκωθέντος καὶ γεννηθέντος ἐξ αὐτῆς, ἀναφερομένης δὲ κατ' ἐκείνους τῆς τοῦ ἀνθρώπου γεννήσεως ἐπὶ τὸν Θεὸν λόγον ὡς συνόντα τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ γενομένῳ· καὶ συκοφαντεῖ τὴν ἁγίαν ἐν Χαλκηδόνι σύνοδον, ὡς κατὰ ταύτην τὴν ἀσεβῆ ἐπινοηθεῖσαν παρὰ Θεοδώρου ἔννοιαν θεοτόκον τὴν παρθένον εἰποῦσαν·

ἢ εἴ τις ἀνθρωποτόκον αὐτὴν καλεῖ ἢ χριστοτόκον, ὡς τοῦ Χριστοῦ μὴ ὄντος Θεοῦ·

ἀλλὰ μὴ κυρίως, καὶ κατὰ ἀλήθειαν θεοτόκον αὐτὴν ὁμολογεῖ, διὰ τὸ τὸν πρὸ τῶν αἰώνων ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς γεννηθέντα Θεὸν λόγον ἐπ' ἐσχάτων τῶν ἡμερῶν ἐξ αὐτῆς σαρκωθῆναι, οὕτω τε εὐσεβῶς καὶ τὴν ἁγίαν ἐν Χαλκηδόνι σύνοδον θεοτόκον αὐτὴν ὁμολογήσαι, ὁ τοιοῦτος ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

ζ'. Εἴ τις ἐν δύο φύσει λέγων, μὴ ὡς ἐν θεότητι καὶ ἀνθρωπότητι τὸν ἕνα κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν γνωρίζεσθαι ὁμολογεῖ, ἵνα διὰ τούτου σημάνη τὴν διαφορὰν τῶν φύσεων, ἐξ ὧν ἀσυγχύτως ἢ ἀφρατος ἐνωσις γέγονεν· οὔτε τοῦ λόγου εἰς τὴν τῆς σαρκὸς μεταποιηθέντος φύσιν, οὔτε τῆς σαρκὸς πρὸς τὴν τοῦ λόγου φύσιν μεταχωρησάσης (μένει γὰρ ἐκάτερον, ὅπερ ἐστὶ τῆ φύσει, καὶ γενομένης τῆς ἐνώσεως καθ' ὑπόστασιν), ἀλλ' ἐπὶ διαιρέσει τῆ ἀνά μέρος, τὴν τοιαύτην λαμβάνει φωνὴν ἐπὶ τοῦ κατὰ Χριστὸν μυστηρίου·

ἢ τὸν ἀριθμὸν τῶν φύσεων ὁμολογῶν ἐπὶ τοῦ αὐτοῦ ἐνὸς κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγου

5. If anyone understands the one hypostasis of our Lord Jesus Christ as admitting the meaning of several hypostases and so tries to introduce into the mystery of Christ two hypostases or two Persons and, after having introduced two Persons, speaks of one Person as regards dignity, honor, and adoration, as Theodore and Nestorius have written senselessly; and if he makes the slanderous assertion that the holy Council of Chalcedon has used the term “one hypostasis” in this impious way 426 and does not confess that the Word of God has been united to the flesh according to the hypostasis and that, therefore, there is but one hypostasis or Person and that this is the sense in which the holy Council of Chalcedon confessed one hypostasis of our Lord Jesus Christ, let him be anathema.

For the Holy Trinity has had no Person or hypostasis added to it, even by the Incarnation of God the Word, one of the Holy Trinity.

6. If anyone says that the glorious holy Mary, ever virgin, is not Mother of God in the true sense but only by an abuse of language, or that she is so by relation, meaning that a mere man was born from her and not God the Word made flesh in her, though, according to those who hold this, the birth of this man can be attributed to God the Word insofar as he was with the man at his birth; and if he makes the slanderous assertion that it was in this blasphemous sense thought out by Theodore that the holy Council of Chalcedon called the Virgin “Mother of God”; 427 or if anyone calls her mother of the man or mother of Christ as though Christ were not God, but does not confess that she is Mother of God in the true and proper sense since God the Word, begotten from the Father before the ages, became incarnate from her in the latter days, and this is the pious sense in which the holy Council of Chalcedon confessed her to be the Mother of God, let him be anathema.

7. If anyone, while using the phrase “in two natures”, does not confess that the one Jesus Christ our Lord is acknowledged in divinity and humanity, signifying thereby the distinction of the natures of which the ineffable union was made without any confusion, without either the Word being transformed into the nature of the flesh or the flesh being translated into the nature of the Word—for each of the two remains what it is by nature, even after the union according to the hypostasis has taken place—but if he applies the phrase to the mystery of Christ as meaning a division into parts, 428 or if, while confessing the plurality of natures in one and the same Jesus, our Lord, the Word of God made σαρκωθέντος, μη τῇ θεωρίᾳ μόνῃ τὴν διαφορὰν τούτων λαμβάνει, ἐξ ὧν καὶ συνετέθη, οὐκ ἀναιρουμένην διὰ τὴν ἔνωσιν (εἷς γὰρ ἐξ ἀμφοῖν, καὶ δι' ἑνὸς ἀμφοτέρα), ἀλλ' ἐπὶ τούτῳ κέχρηται τῷ ἀριθμῷ, ὡς κεχωρισμένας καὶ ἰδιοὑποστάτους ἔχει τὰς φύσεις, ὁ τοιοῦτος ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

429 η'. Εἴ τις ἐκ δύο φύσεων θεότητος καὶ ἀνθρωπότητος ὁμολογῶν τὴν ἔνωσιν γεγενῆσθαι, ἢ μίαν φύσιν τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγου σεσαρκωμένην λέγων, μη οὕτως αὐτὰ λαμβάνῃ, καθάπερ καὶ οἱ ἅγιοι πατέρες ἐδίδαξαν, ὅτι ἐκ τῆς θείας φύσεως καὶ τῆς ἀνθρωπίνης, τῆς ἐνώσεως καθ' ὑπόστασιν γενομένης, εἷς Χριστὸς ἀπετελέσθη· ἀλλ' ἐκ τῶν τοιούτων φωνῶν μίαν φύσιν, ἥτοι οὐσίαν θεότητος καὶ σαρκὸς τοῦ Χριστοῦ εἰσάγειν ἐπιχειρεῖ, ὁ τοιοῦτος ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

430 Καθ' ὑπόστασιν γὰρ λέγοντες τὸν μονογενῆ λόγον ἠνώσθαι, οὐκ ἀνάχυσιν τινα τὴν εἰς ἀλλήλους [-ας] τῶν φύσεων πεπραχθῆαι φαμέν· μενούσης δὲ μᾶλλον ἑκατέρας ὅπερ ἐστίν, ἠνώσθαι σαρκὶ νοοῦμεν τὸν λόγον. Διὸ καὶ εἷς ἐστὶν ὁ Χριστὸς, Θεὸς καὶ ἄνθρωπος, ὁ αὐτὸς ὁμοούσιος τῷ πατρὶ κατὰ τὴν θεότητα, καὶ ὁμοούσιος ἡμῖν ὁ αὐτὸς κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα· ἐπίσης γὰρ καὶ τοὺς ἀνά μέρος διαιροῦντας, ἥτοι τέμνοντας, καὶ τοὺς συγχέοντας τὸ τῆς θείας οἰκονομίας μυστήριον τοῦ Χριστοῦ, ἀποστρέφεται καὶ ἀναθεματίζει ἢ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐκκλησία.

431 θ'. Εἴ τις προσκυνεῖσθαι ἐν δυοῖν φύσεσιν λέγει τὸν Χριστόν, ἐξ οὗ δύο προσκυνήσεις εἰσάγονται, ἰδίᾳ τῷ Θεῷ λόγῳ καὶ ἰδίᾳ τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ·

ἢ εἴ τις ἐπὶ ἀναιρέσει τῆς σαρκὸς, ἢ ἐπὶ συγχύσει τῆς θεότητος καὶ τῆς ἀνθρωπότητος, ἢ μίαν φύσιν ἤγουν οὐσίαν τῶν συνελθόντων τερατευόμενος, οὕτως προσκυνεῖ τὸν Χριστόν, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐπιπροσκυνήσει τὸν Θεὸν λόγον σαρκωθέντα μετὰ τῆς ἰδίας αὐτοῦ σαρκὸς προσκυνεῖ, καθάπερ ἢ τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐκκλησία παρέλαβεν ἐξ ἀρχῆς, ὁ τοιοῦτος ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

432 ι'. Εἴ τις οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ, τὸν ἐσταυρωμένον σαρκὶ κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν εἶναι Θεὸν ἀληθινόν καὶ κύριον τῆς δόξης καὶ ἕνα τῆς ἁγίας τριάδος· ὁ τοιοῦτος ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

433 ια'. Εἴ τις μὴ ἀναθεματίζει Ἄρειον, Εὐνόμιον, Μακεδόσιον, Ἀπολλινάριον, Νεστόριον, Εὐτυχεῖα καὶ Ὠριγένην, μετὰ τῶν ἀσεβῶν αὐτῶν συγγραμμάτων, καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους πάντας αἰρετικούς, τοὺς κατακριθέντας ὑπὸ τῆς ἁγίας καθολικῆς καὶ ἀποστολικῆς ἐκκλησίας καὶ τῶν προειρημένων ἁγίων τεττάρων συνόδων, καὶ τοὺς τὰ ὅμοια τῶν προειρημένων αἰρετικῶν φρονήσαντας ἢ φρονοῦντας, καὶ μέχρι τέλους τῆς οἰκείας ἀσεβείας ἐμμέναντας· ὁ τοιοῦτος ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

flesh, he does not only accept in “theory” the distinction between the principles of which he (Christ) is constituted, a distinction that is not suppressed by their union—for one is from both and both are by one—but uses the number with the intention of separating the natures and of attributing to each its own hypostasis, let him be anathema.

8. If anyone, while confessing that the union was made out of two natures, the divinity and the humanity, or, while speaking of “one incarnate nature of God the Word”, does not understand these expressions according to the teaching of the holy Fathers, that is, as meaning that from the divine and the human natures, when the union according to the hypostasis was realized, there resulted one Christ; but if by these expressions he attempts to introduce one nature or essence of the divinity and of the flesh of Christ, let him be anathema.

For when we say that the only begotten Word was united according to the hypostasis, we do not say that there took place any confusion between natures; rather, we think that God the Word was united to the flesh, each of the two (natures) remaining what it is. This is why Christ is one, God and man; the same, one in being with the Father as to the divinity and one in being with us as to the humanity. For the Church of God repudiates and condemns equally those who introduce a separation or division and those who introduce a confusion into the mystery of the divine Incarnation.

9. If anyone says that Christ is worshipped in two natures, whereby he introduces two acts of worship, one proper to God the Word and the other proper to the man, or if anyone, in order to suppress the flesh or to fuse the divinity and the humanity, speaks falsely of one nature or essence of the elements that have been united and worships Christ in this sense but does not venerate by one act of worship God the Word made flesh together with his own flesh, according to the tradition received in the Church of God from the beginning, let him be anathema.

10. If anyone does not confess that he who was crucified in the flesh, our Lord Jesus Christ, is true God, Lord of glory and one of the Holy Trinity, let him be anathema.

11. If anyone does not anathematize Arius, Eunomius, Macedonius, Apollinarius, Nestorius, Eutyches, and Origen, in company with their sinful works, and all other heretics who have been condemned by the holy, catholic, and apostolic Church and by the four holy synods above-mentioned, and those of the above-mentioned heretics who have thought or think likewise, and have remained in their impiety until the end, let him be anathema.

ιβ'. Εἴ τις ἀντιποιεῖται Θεοδώρου τοῦ ἀσεβοῦς τοῦ Μοψουεστίας, τοῦ εἰπόντος, ἄλλον εἶναι τὸν Θεὸν λόγον, καὶ ἄλλον τὸν Χριστὸν ὑπὸ παθῶν ψυχῆς καὶ τῶν τῆς σαρκὸς ἐπιθυμιῶν ἐνοχλούμενον, καὶ τῶν χειρόνων κατὰ μικρὸν χωριζόμενον, καὶ οὕτως ἐκ προκοπῆς ἔργων βελτιωθέντα, καὶ ἐκ πολιτείας ἁμωμον καταστάνα, ὡς ψιλὸν ἄνθρωπον βαπτισθῆναι εἰς ὄνομα πατρὸς καὶ υἱοῦ καὶ ἁγίου πνεύματος, καὶ διὰ τοῦ βαπτίσματος τὴν χάριν τοῦ ἁγίου πνεύματος λαβεῖν, καὶ υἰοθεσίας ἀξιωθῆναι· καὶ κατ' ἰσότητά βασιλικῆς εἰκόνας εἰς πρόσωπον τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγου προσκυνεῖσθαι· καὶ μετὰ τὴν ἀνάστασιν ἄτρεπτον ταῖς ἐννοίαις καὶ ἀναμάρτητον παντελῶς γενέσθαι.

Καὶ πάλιν εἰρηκότος τοῦ αὐτοῦ ἀσεβοῦς Θεοδώρου, τὴν ἔνωσιν τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγου πρὸς τὸν Χριστὸν τοιαύτην γεγενῆσθαι, οἷαν ὁ ἀπόστολος ἐπὶ ἄνδρὸς καὶ γυναῖκός· «ἔσονται οἱ δύο εἰς σάρκα μίαν» [Eph 5:31].

Καὶ πρὸς ταῖς ἄλλαις ἀναριθμήτοις αὐτοῦ βλασφημίαις, τολμήσαντος εἰπεῖν, ὅτι μετὰ τὴν ἀνάστασιν ἐμφυσήσας ὁ κύριος τοῖς μαθηταῖς καὶ εἰπὼν· «λάβετε πνεῦμα ἅγιον» [Jn 20:22], οὐ δέδωκεν αὐτοῖς πνεῦμα ἅγιον, ἀλλὰ σχηματὶ μόνον ἐνεφύσησε.

Οὗτος δὲ καὶ τὴν ὁμολογίαν τοῦ Θωμᾶ τὴν ἐπὶ τῇ ψηλαφήσει τῶν χειρῶν καὶ τῆς πλευρᾶς τοῦ κυρίου, μετὰ τὴν ἀνάστασιν, τὸ «ὁ κύριός μου καὶ ὁ Θεός μου» [Jn 20:28] εἶπε, μὴ εἰρησθαι περὶ τοῦ Χριστοῦ παρὰ τοῦ Θωμᾶ, ἀλλ' ἐπὶ τῷ παραδόξῳ τῆς ἀναστάσεως ἐκπλαγέντα τὸν Θωμᾶν ὑμῆσαι τὸν Θεὸν ἐγείραντα τὸν Χριστόν.

Τὸ δὲ χεῖρον, καὶ ἐν τῇ τῶν πράξεων τῶν ἀποστόλων γενομένη παρ' αὐτοῦ δῆθεν ἐρμηνεῖα συγκρίνων ὁ αὐτὸς Θεόδωρος τὸν Χριστὸν Πλάτωνι, καὶ Μανιχαίῳ, καὶ Ἐπικούρῳ, καὶ Μαρκίῳ, λέγει, ὅτι, ὡσπερ ἐκείνων ἕκαστος εὐράμενος οἰκεῖον δόγμα, τοὺς αὐτῷ μαθητεύσαντας πεποίηκε καλεῖσθαι Πλατωνικούς καὶ Μανιχαίους καὶ Ἐπικουρείους καὶ Μαρκωνιστάς, τὸν ὅμοιον τρόπον καὶ τοῦ Χριστοῦ εὐραμένου δόγμα, ἐξ αὐτοῦ Χριστιανούς καλεῖσθαι.

Εἴ τις τοίνυν ἀντιποιεῖται τοῦ εἰρημένου ἀσεβεστάτου Θεοδώρου, καὶ τῶν ἀσεβῶν αὐτοῦ συγγραμμάτων, ἐν οἷς τὰς τε εἰρημένας καὶ ἄλλας ἀναριθμήτους βλασφημίας ἐξέχει, κατὰ τοῦ μεγάλου Θεοῦ καὶ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ· ἀλλὰ μὴ ἀναθεματίζει αὐτόν, καὶ τὰ ἀσεβῆ αὐτοῦ συγγράμματα, καὶ πάντας τοὺς δεχομένους, ἢ καὶ ἐκδικούντας αὐτόν, ἢ λέγοντας ὀρθοδόξως αὐτὸν ἐκθέσθαι, καὶ τοὺς γράψαντας ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ καὶ τὰ αὐτὰ ἐκείνω φρονήσαντας ἢ καὶ τοὺς γράφοντας ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ καὶ τῶν ἀσεβῶν αὐτοῦ συγγραμμάτων, καὶ τοὺς τὰ ὅμοια φρονοῦντας, ἢ φρονήσαντας πώποτε, καὶ μέχρι τέλους ἐμμείναντας τῇ τοιαύτῃ ἀσεβείᾳ [αἰρέσει], ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

12. If anyone defends the impious Theodore of Mopsuestia, who said that God the Word is one while Christ is another who, disturbed by the passions of the soul and the desires of the flesh, freed himself gradually from inferior inclinations and, having improved through the progress of his works and having become irreproachable in his conduct, was baptized as a mere man in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit; who received through baptism the grace of the Holy Spirit and was deemed worthy of (divine) adoption; who, much like an image of the emperor, is worshipped in the Person of God the Word; who after the Resurrection became perfectly steadfast in his thoughts and wholly impeccable.

Furthermore, the same impious Theodore has said that the union of God the Word with Christ is similar to that of man and wife, of which the apostle says: “the two shall be in one flesh” [Eph 5:31].

And, in addition to his other countless blasphemies, he dared to say that, when after the Resurrection the Lord breathed on the disciples and said, “Receive the Holy Spirit” [Jn 20:22], he did not give them the Holy Spirit but only breathed on them figuratively.

He also said, as regards the confession of Thomas after the Resurrection, when having touched the hands and the side of Christ he said, “My Lord and my God” [Jn 20:28], that it was not addressed to Christ by Thomas, but that, struck by the miracle of the Resurrection, Thomas praised God who had raised Christ.

Worse still, in the commentary that he wrote on the Acts of the Apostles, the same Theodore compares Christ with Plato, Manes, Epicurus, and Marcion. As each one of these, he says, having devised his own doctrine, caused his disciples to be called Platonists, Manichaeans, Epicureans, or Marcionites, similarly, Christ having devised a doctrine, it is after him that Christians were named.

If anyone, therefore, defends the aforementioned most impious Theodore and his impious writings in which he spreads the blasphemies mentioned and countless others against our great God and Savior Jesus Christ, and if he does not condemn him and his impious writings and those as well who accept him either by justifying him or by saying that his positions are orthodox and those who have written in his favor and in favor of his impious writings and those who hold similar opinions or once held them and remained to the end in such impiety [heresy], let him be anathema.

436 ιγ'. Εἴ τις ἀντιποιεῖται τῶν ἀσεβῶν συγγραμμάτων Θεοδορίτου, τῶν κατὰ τῆς ἀληθοῦς πίστεως, καὶ τῆς ἐν Ἐφέσῳ πρώτης καὶ ἁγίας συνόδου καὶ τοῦ ἐν ἁγίοις Κυρίλλου, καὶ τῶν δώδεκα αὐτοῦ κεφαλαίων [cf. *252-263], καὶ πάντων ὧν συνεγράψατο ὑπὲρ Θεοδώρου καὶ Νεστορίου τῶν δυσσεβῶν, καὶ ὑπὲρ ἄλλων τῶν τὰ αὐτὰ τοῖς προειρημένους Θεοδώρῳ καὶ Νεστορίῳ φρονούντων, καὶ δεχομένων αὐτούς, καὶ τὴν αὐτῶν ἀσεβείαν, καὶ δι' αὐτῶν ἀσεβεῖς καλεῖ τοὺς τῆς ἐκκλησίας διδασκάλους, τοὺς καθ' ὑπόστασιν τὴν ἔνωσιν τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγου φρονούντας·

καὶ εἴπερ οὐκ ἀναθεματίζει τὰ εἰρημένα ἀσεβῆ συγγράμματα, καὶ τοὺς τὰ ὅμοια τοῦτοις φρονήσαντας ἢ φρονούντας, καὶ πάντας δὲ τοὺς γράψαντας κατὰ τῆς ὀρθῆς πίστεως, ἢ τοῦ ἐν ἁγίοις Κυρίλλου καὶ τῶν δώδεκα αὐτοῦ κεφαλαίων, καὶ ἐν τῇ τοιαύτῃ ἀσεβείᾳ τελευτήσαντας· ὁ τοιοῦτος ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

437 ιδ'. Εἴ τις ἀντιποιεῖται τῆς ἐπιστολῆς τῆς λεγομένης παρὰ Ἰβᾶ γεγράφθαι πρὸς Μάρην τὸν Πέρσην, τῆς ἀρνούμενης μὲν τὸν Θεὸν λόγον ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας θεοτόκου καὶ ἀειπαρθένου Μαρίας σαρκωθέντα, ἄνθρωπον γεγενῆσθαι· λεγούσης δὲ ψιλὸν ἄνθρωπον ἐξ αὐτῆς γεννηθῆναι, ὃν ναὸν ἀποκαλεῖ· ὡς ἄλλον εἶναι τὸν Θεὸν λόγον, καὶ ἄλλον τὸν ἄνθρωπον· καὶ τὸν ἐν ἁγίοις Κύριλλον τὴν ὀρθὴν τῶν χριστιανῶν πίστιν κηρύξαντα διαβαλλούσης ὡς αἰρετικόν, καὶ ὁμοίως Ἀπολλιναρίῳ τῷ δυσσεβεῖ γράψαντα· καὶ μεμφομένης τὴν ἐν Ἐφέσῳ πρώτην ἁγίαν σύνοδον, ὡς χωρὶς ζητήσεως Νεστόριον καθελοῦσαν· καὶ τὰ δώδεκα κεφάλαια τοῦ ἐν ἁγίοις Κυρίλλου [*252-263] ἀσεβῆ καὶ ἐναντία τῇ ὀρθῇ πίστει ἀποκαλεῖ ἢ αὐτὴ ἀσεβῆς ἐπιστολὴ, καὶ ἐδικεῖ Θεόδωρον καὶ Νεστόριον καὶ τὰ ἀσεβῆ αὐτῶν δόγματα καὶ συγγράμματα· εἴ τις τοίνυν τῆς εἰρημένης ἐπιστολῆς ἀντιποιεῖται, καὶ μὴ ἀναθεματίζει αὐτήν, καὶ τοὺς ἀντιποιομένους αὐτῆς, καὶ λέγοντας, αὐτὴν ὀρθὴν εἶναι, ἢ μέρος αὐτῆς, καὶ γράψαντας καὶ γράφοντας ὑπὲρ αὐτῆς, ἢ τῶν περιεχομένων αὐτῇ ἀσεβειῶν, καὶ τολμώντας ταύτην ἐδικεῖν ἢ τὰς περιεχομένας αὐτῇ ἀσεβείας ὀνόματι τῶν ἁγίων πατέρων, ἢ τῆς ἁγίας ἐν Χαλκηδόνι συνόδου, καὶ τοῦτοις μέχρι τέλους ἐμμείναντας· ὁ τοιοῦτος ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

438 Τούτων τοίνυν οὕτως ὁμολογηθέντων, ἃ καὶ παρελάβομεν ἐκ τῆς θείας γραφῆς, καὶ τῆς τῶν ἁγίων πατέρων διδασκαλίας, καὶ τῶν ὀρισθέντων περὶ τῆς μιᾶς καὶ τῆς αὐτῆς πίστεως παρὰ τῶν προειρημένων ἁγίων τεσσάρων συνόδων, γενομένης δὲ καὶ παρ' ἡμῶν τῆς ἐπὶ τοῖς αἰρετικοῖς, καὶ τῆς αὐτῶν ἀσεβείας, πρόσγε καὶ τῆς τῶν ἐκδικησάντων ἢ ἐκδικούντων τὰ εἰρημένα τρία κεφάλαια, καὶ ἐναπομεινάντων ἢ ἀπομενόντων τῇ οἰκείᾳ πλάνῃ, κατακρίσεως, εἰ

13. If anyone defends the impious works of Theodoret against the orthodox faith, against the first holy Council of Ephesus, and against St. Cyril and his twelve anathemas [cf. *252-263], and if he defends all that he has written in favor of the impious Theodore and Nestorius and of others who have the same opinions as the aforesaid Theodore and Nestorius and who accept them and their impiety, and if, because of this, brands as impious those teachers of the Church who confess the union of God the Word according to the hypostasis and does not condemn the above-mentioned impious writings and those who have held and hold like opinions together with all who have written against the orthodox faith and against St. Cyril and his twelve anathemas and have died in such impiety, let him be anathema.

14. If anyone defends the letter said to have been written by Ibas to Maris the Persian, which denies that God the Word, made flesh from Mary the holy Mother of God ever virgin, became man; but asserts (instead) that a mere man whom it terms Temple was born of her, as though God the Word was one and the man another; in which also St. Cyril, the herald of the orthodox faith of Christians, is accused of being a heretic and of having written in the same vein as the impious Apollinaris; in which, furthermore, the first holy Council of Ephesus is blamed for having condemned Nestorius without investigation; the same impious letter, moreover, qualifies as impious and contrary to the orthodox faith the twelve anathemas of St. Cyril [*252-263] and justifies Theodore and Nestorius together with their impious doctrines and writings.

If, therefore, anyone defends the above-mentioned letter and does not condemn it and its defenders who say that it is orthodox or that part of it is orthodox, together with those who have written or are writing in its favor or (in favor of) its impious contents, and those who dare to justify it and its impious contents in the name of the holy Fathers or of the holy Council of Chalcedon, and remain to the end in these errors, let him be anathema.

When, then, these things have been so confessed, which we have received from Holy Scripture and from the teaching of the holy Fathers and from what was defined with regard to one and the same faith by the aforesaid four holy councils and from that condemnation formulated by us against the heretics and their impiety and, besides, against those who have defended or are defending the aforementioned three chapters and who have persisted or do persist in their own error; if anyone τις ἐπιχειρήσοι ἐναντία τοῖς παρ' ἡμῶν εὐσεβῶς διατυποθεῖσι παραδοῦναι, ἢ διδάξαι, ἢ γράψαι, εἰ μὲν ἐπίσκοπος εἶη, ἢ ἐν κλήρῳ ἀναφερόμενος, ὁ τοιοῦτος ἀλλότρια ἱερέων καὶ τῆς ἐκκλησιαστικῆς καταστάσεως πράττων, γυμνωθήσεται τῆς ἐπισκοπῆς, ἢ τοῦ κλήρου, εἰ δὲ μοναχός, ἢ λαϊκός, ἀναθεματισθήσεται.

should attempt to transmit (doctrines) opposed to those piously molded by us or to teach or to write (them) if indeed he be a bishop, or belongs to the clergy, such a one, because he acts in a manner foreign to the sacred and ecclesiastical constitutions, shall be stripped of the office of bishop or cleric, but if he be a monk or a layman, he shall be anathematized.

PELAGIUS I: April 16, 556–March 3 (4?), 561

441–443: Letter Humani generis to King Childebert I, February 3, 557

According to the state of contemporary research, the Fides Pelagii is comprised of parts of the letter Humani generis (*441–443 = letter 7, 6–16, of the edition of Gassó) and of the letter Vas electionis (*444 = letter 11, 6–11, ibid.). In this second letter, the Fides seems to be formulated completely for the first time. With the profession of faith, Pelagius I was seeking to counter the reproach that he had fallen away from the faith of Chalcedon in his inconstancy in the “Three Chapters” controversy. He was at first a zealous supporter of the “Three Chapters”, and he assisted Pope Vigilius in the composition of his first constitution (*416–420). However, he immediately took the side of the emperor when Justinian, after the death of Vigilius, offered him the papacy.

Ed.: P. M. Gassó and C. M. Battle, Pelagii I papae Epistulae quae supersunt, Scripta et Documenta, ed. by the Abbey of Montserrat, 8 (Barcelona, 1956), 22–25 (= letter 7) / W. Gundlach, MGH Epistulae III (1892), 78₁₈–79₄₀ (= Epistulae Arelatenses 54) / PL 69:407D–410D (= letter 15) / MaC 9:728D–730B / J. B. Pitra, Spicilegium Solesmense 4 (Paris, 1958), pp. XIIff. (erroneously attributed to Pope Vigilius) / Hn § 229. —Reg.: JR 946.

“Fides Pelagii”

[De Trinitate divina.] Credo igitur in unum Deum, Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum: Patrem scilicet omnipotentem, sempiternum, ingenitum; Filium vero, ex eiusdem Patris substantia vel natura genitum, ante omne omnino vel temporis vel aevi cuiusquam initium, id est [de omnipotente] omnipotentem, aequalem, consempternum et consubstantialem Genitori; Spiritum quoque Sanctum, omnipotentem, utriusque, Patri scilicet ac Filio, aequalem, consempternum atque consubstantialem; qui ex Patre intemporaliter procedens, Patris est Filiique Spiritus; hoc est, tres personas sive tres subsistentias unius essentiae sive naturae, unius virtutis, unius operationis, unius beatitudinis atque unius potestatis; ut trina sit unitas, et una sit Trinitas, iuxta vocis dominicae veritatem, dicentis: “Ite, docete omnes gentes, baptizantes eos in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti” [Mt 28:19]. “In nomine”, inquit, non “nominibus”, ut et unum Deum per indistinctum divinae essentiae nomen ostenderet et personarum discretionem suis demonstratam proprietatibus edoceret [cf. *415]; quia dum tribus unum deitatis nomen est, aequalitas ostenditur personarum, et rursus aequalitas personarum nihil extraneum, nihil accedens in eis permittit intelligi: ita ut et unusquisque eorum verus perfectusque sit Deus, et omnes tres simul unus verus perfectusque sit Deus, videlicet ex plenitudine divinitatis nihil minus in singulis, nihil amplius intellegatur in tribus.

[The divine Trinity.] I therefore believe in one God, 441 Father, Son, and Holy Spirit: that is, the Father, almighty, eternal, and ungenerated; the Son, truly generated from the substance or nature of this same Father, entirely before the beginning of any time or age, that is [of the Almighty] almighty, equal, co-eternal, and consubstantial to the Father; also the Holy Spirit, almighty, equal, co-eternal and consubstantial to both, that is, the Father and the Son, who, proceeding timelessly from the Father, is the Spirit of the Father and of the Son; there are thus: three Persons or three subsistences of one essence or nature, of one sole strength, one sole action, one sole blessedness, and one sole power, so that the unity is triune and the Trinity is one, according to the truth of the Lord’s words, saying: “Go, therefore and teach all the nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit” [Mt 28:19]. “In the name”, he said, not “(in the) names”, both to reveal clearly the one God through the undifferentiated name of the divine essence and to make known the diversity of the Persons shown by their distinct qualities [cf. *415]; because, while the equality of the Persons is shown by the fact that the three have one name, the divinity, the equality of the Persons, in turn, does not permit that anything extraneous or anything added on to them be recognized: so that as each and every one of them is true and perfect God, so all three at once are true and perfect God; that is, nothing less than the fullness of the divinity is to be recognized in any single one of them, and nothing more in the three.

442 [De Filio Dei incarnato.] Ex hac autem sancta et beatissima atque consubstantiali Trinitate credo atque confiteor unam personam, id est Filium Dei, pro salute humani generis novissimis temporibus descendisse de caelo, nec patriam sedem nec mundi gubernacula relinquente[m], et superveniente in beata virgine Maria Sancto Spiritu atque obumbrante ei virtute Altissimi, eundem Verbum ac Filium Dei in utero eiusdem sanctae virginis Mariae clementer ingressum et de carne eius sibi unisse carnem anima rationali et intellectuali animatam; nec ante creatam esse carnem, et postea supervenisse Filium Dei, sed, sicut scriptum est, “sapientia aedificante sibi domum” [Prv 9:1] mox carnem in utero Virginis, mox Verbi Dei carnem factam exindeque sine ulla permutatione aut conversione Verbi carnisque naturae, Verbum ac Filium Dei factum hominem, unum in utraque natura, divina scilicet et humana, Christum Iesum Deum verum eundemque verum hominem processisse, id est natum esse, servata integritate maternae virginitatis: quia sic eum Virgo permanens genuit, quemadmodum Virgo concepit. Propter quod eandem beatam virginem Mariam Dei genitricem verissime confitemur: peperit enim incarnatum Dei Verbum.

Est ergo unus atque idem Iesus Christus verus Filius Dei et idem ipse verus filius hominis, perfectus in deitate, et idem ipse perfectus in humanitate, utpote totus in suis et idem ipse totus in nostris [cf. *293]; sic per secundam nativitatem sumens ex homine matre quod non erat, ut non desisteret esse quod per primam, qua ex Patre natus est, erat. Propter quod eum ex duabus et in duabus, manentibus indivisis inconfusisque credimus esse naturis: indivisis quidem, quia et post adumptionem naturae nostrae unus Christus Filius Dei permansit et permanet: inconfusus autem, quia sic in unam personam atque subsistentiam adunatas credimus esse naturas, ut utriusque proprietate servata, neutra converteretur in alteram. Ac propterea, sicut saepe diximus, unum eundemque Christum esse verum Filium Dei, et eundem ipsum verum filium hominis confitemur, consubstantialem Patri secundum deitatem, et consubstantialem nobis eundem secundum humanitatem, per omnia nobis similem absque peccato; passibilem carne, eundem ipsum impassibilem deitate.

Quem sub Pontio Pilato sponte pro salute nostra passum esse carne confitemur, crucifixum carne, mortuum carne, resurrexisse tertia die, glorificata et incorruptibili eadem carne, et . . . ascendisse in caelos; sedere etiam ad dexteram Patris.

[The incarnate Son of God.] I believe and profess that from this holy and most blessed and consubstantial Trinity one Person, that is, the Son of God, descended from heaven on behalf of the salvation of the human race in these latter days, without relinquishing the throne of God the Father and the governance of the world; and when the Holy Spirit came upon the blessed Virgin Mary and the power of the most high overshadowed her, this same Word and Son of God lovingly entered into the womb of the same holy Virgin Mary and from her flesh united to himself flesh animated by a rational soul and intellect; it was not that first there was created the flesh and then the Son of God came (into her), but, as it is written, “Wisdom building a house for herself” (Prov 9:1), immediately the flesh in the womb of the Virgin (was made) the flesh of the Word of God; and accordingly the Word and the Son of God became man without any change or transformation of the nature of the Word and the nature of the flesh, one in both natures, namely, divine and human, and (thus) Christ Jesus came forth as true God and true man, that is, he was born preserving the integrity of the Mother’s virginity: since she bore him while remaining a Virgin just as she conceived him as a Virgin. Because of this, we confess most truly that the same Blessed Virgin Mary is the Mother of God: for she gave birth to the incarnate Word of God.

The one and the same Jesus Christ is therefore the true Son of God and also the true Son of man, perfect in his divinity and likewise perfect in his humanity since he (is) entire in his and entire in ours (cf. *293); thus, through the second birth from a human mother, he assumed what he was not, while never ceasing to be what he was through the first, as born from the Father. Therefore, we believe that he is both from and in two natures that remain undivided and unconfused: undivided since the one Christ, even after the assumption of our nature, remained and remains the Son of God: unconfused because we believe that the natures were united in one Person and subsistence in such a way that, conserving the distinctiveness of both, neither of the two was transformed into the other. And, therefore, we profess, as we have often said, that the one and the same Christ is the true Son of God and the same is true Son of man, consubstantial with the Father according to divinity and consubstantial with us according to humanity, like us in all things except sin; subject to suffering in the flesh and not subject to suffering in his divinity.

We profess that he freely suffered in the flesh under Pontius Pilate for the sake of our salvation, was crucified in the flesh, died in the flesh, and rose again on the third day in the same glorified and incorruptible flesh, and . . . ascended into heaven and sits at the right hand of the Father.

[De consummatione mundi.] Quem credo et confiteor ... sicut ascendit in caelos, ita venturum iudicare vivos et mortuos. Omnes enim homines ab Adam usque ad consummationem saeculi natos et mortuos cum ipso Adam eiusque uxore, qui non ex aliis parentibus nati sunt, sed alter de terra, altera autem de costa viri [cf. Gn 2:7, 22] creati sunt, tunc resurrecturos esse confiteor et ad stare “ante tribunal Christi, ut recipiat unusquisque propria corporis, prout gessit, sive bona sive mala” [Rm 14:10; 2 Cor 5:10]; et iustos quidem per largissimam gratiam Dei, utpote “vasa misericordiae in gloriam praeparata” [cf. Rm 9:23], aeternae vitae praemiis donaturum, in societate videlicet angelorum absque ullo iam lapsus sui metu sine fine victuros; iniquos autem arbitrio voluntatis propriae “vasa irae apta in interitum” [Rm 9:22] permanentes, qui viam Domini aut non agnoverunt aut cognitam diversis capti praevaricationibus reliquerunt, in poenis aeterni atque inextinguibilis ignis, ut sine fine ardeant, iustissimo iudicio traditurum.

Haec est igitur fides mea et spes, quae in me dono misericordiae Dei est, pro qua maxime paratos esse debere beatus Petrus Apostolus praecipit ad respondendum omniposcenti nos rationem [cf. 1 Pt 3:15].

[The consummation of the world.] I believe and confess ... that just as he ascended into heaven, he will also come to judge the living and the dead. Indeed, all men, that is, who have been born and have died from the time of Adam up to the consummation of the world, along with Adam himself and his wife, who were not born of other parents, but were created, the one from the earth, the other, however, from the rib of the man [cf. Gen 2:7, 22], will then rise again and “stand before the judgment seat of Christ, so that each one may receive recompense according to what was done in the body, whether good or bad” [Rom 14:10; 2 Cor 5:10]; and, indeed, by the superabundant grace of God, he will present the just, as “vessels of mercy prepared beforehand for glory” [Rom 9:23], with the rewards of eternal life; and certainly they will live without end in the company of the angels without any fear that they could fall again; the wicked, however, remaining by their own choice as “vessels of wrath fit for destruction” [Rom 9:22], who either did not know the way of the Lord or, knowing it, abandoned it when seduced by various transgressions, he will hand over by a most just judgment to the punishment of the eternal and inextinguishable fire, so that they may burn without end.

This, then, is my faith and hope, which is in me by the gift of God’s mercy and for which, as blessed Peter enjoined, we must especially be prepared to provide an answer to all those who ask us for a reason [cf. 1 Pet 3:15].

444: Encyclical Vas electionis to All the People of God, ca. 557

This letter, which contains the second part of the Fides Pelagii, has the same purpose as the letter reported above. The time of its composition is disputed: Gassó (p. 36) indicates a period between April 16, 557, and early January 559 in opposition to Duchesne, Devreesse, and others, who maintain that it was already written by the day of the pope’s consecration, April 16, 556.

Ed.: P.M. Gassó and C.M. Batlle, Pelagii I papae Epistulae quae supersunt, Scripta et Documenta, ed. by the Abbey of Montserrat, 8 (Barcelona, 1956), 38f. (= letter 11) / W. Gundlach, MGH Epistulae III (1892), 82₂₃–83₁₅ (= Epistulae Arelatenses 56) / PL 69:399D–400C (= letter 6) / MaC 9:720A–D / J. B. Pitra, Spicilegium Solesmense 4 (Paris, 1958), pp. XIV–XV. —Reg.: JR 938.

Authority of Ecumenical Councils

De sanctis vero quattuor conciliis, id est Nicaeno trecentorum decem et octo [Patrum], Constantinopolitano centum quinquaginta, Epheseno primo¹ ducentorum, sed et [de] Chalcedonensi sexcentorum triginta, ita me protegente divina misericordia sensit et usque ad terminum vitae meae sentire toto animo et tota virtute profiteor, ut eas in sanctae fidei defensione et damnationibus haeresum atque haeticorum, utpote Sancto firmatas Spiritu, omnimoda devotione custodiam; quarum firmitatem, quia universalis Ecclesiae firmitas est, ita me tueri ac defendere profiteor, sicut eas decessores

Concerning the four holy councils: namely, the one of Nicaea of the 308 [Fathers], that of Constantinople of the 150; the first of Ephesus¹ of the two hundred, but also the one of Chalcedon of the 630, I profess, under the protection of divine mercy, that I have thought and will continue to think, with all my mind and strength, until the end of my life, in such a way as to preserve these with full devotion in defense of the holy faith and condemnation of heresies and heretics, inasmuch as they were confirmed by the Holy Spirit. I promise to protect and defend their solidity, because it is the solidity of the meos defendisse non dubium est. In quibus illum maxime et sequi et imitari desidero, quem Calchedonensis synodi auctorem novimus exstitisse [Leo I pp.], qui suo congruens nomini eius se membrum, qui de tribu Iuda leo exstitit [cf. Apc 5:5], vivacissima fidei sollicitudine evidenter ostendit. Similem igitur suprascriptis synodis reverentiam me semper exhibiturum esse confido, et quicumque ab eisdem quattuor conciliis absoluti sunt, me esse orthodoxos habiturum, nec umquam in vita mea ... aliquid de sanctae et verae praedicationis eorum auctoritate minuere.

*444 ¹ Distinguishing it from the Second Council of Ephesus, the “Latrocinium” (Robber Council; Leo I: ACOe 2/IV, 514 / PL 54:943B), which was held in August 449 in favor of Eutyches.

Sed et canones, quos Sedes Apostolica suscipit, sequor et veneror. ... Epistolas etiam beatae recordationis papae Caelestini ... et Agapiti pro defensione fidei catholicae et pro firmitate suprascriptarum quattuor synodorum et contra haereticos ... me custodire profiteor, et omnes, quos ipsi damnaverunt, habere damnatos, et quos ipsi receperunt, praecipue venerabiles episcopos Theodoretum et Ibas, me inter orthodoxos venerari.

entire Church, just as, without doubt, my predecessors have defended them. In doing so, I wish most of all to follow and imitate the one whom we know to have been the author of the Council of Chalcedon [Pope Leo I], who, in conformity with his name, by his most ardent zeal for the faith, clearly showed himself to be a member of the lion that appeared from the tribe of Judah [cf. Rev 5:5]. In the same way, I am therefore confident that I will always show the same reverence for the above-mentioned councils and will consider as orthodox all those who were approved by those four councils; and never in my life ... will I take away anything from the authority of their holy and true proclamation.

But I also follow and venerate the canons that the Apostolic See accepts. ... I promise likewise to guard ... the letters of Pope Celestine of blessed memory ... and of Agapitus for the defense of the Catholic faith, for the solidity of the above-mentioned four councils, and against heretics. ... (I profess that) I condemn all those whom (these councils) have condemned and venerate among the orthodox those who have been approved by them, especially the venerable bishops Theodore and Ibas.

445: Letter Admonemus ut to Bishop Gaudentius of Volterra, between September 558 and February 2, 559

Ed.: P. M. Gassó and C. M. Batlle, Pelagii I papae Epistulae quae supersunt, Scripta et Documenta, ed. by the Abbey of Montserrat, 8 (Barcelona, 1956), 65f. (= letter 21); Gratian, Decretum, p. III, dist. 4, c. 30, 82 (Frdb 1:1370, 1389) (= Pseudo-Gelasius). —Reg.: JR 980; P. Ewald, in NArch 5 (1880): 539f. (= Collectio Britannica, Pelagius, letter 8).

The Form of Baptism

445 De haereticis [ad catholicam fidem reversuris, de quibus]... Nos consulendos esse duxisti, ... utrum baptizandi sint an tantummodo reconciliandi, haec tuam volumus observantiam custodire...: ... quia in nomine solummodo Christi una etiam mersione se asserunt baptizari, evangelicum vero praeceptum ... nos admonet, in nomine Trinitatis, trina etiam mersione sanctum baptisma unicuique tribuere, dicente Domino nostro discipulis suis: “Ite, baptizate omnes gentes in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti” [Mt 28:19], si re vera hi de praefatis haereticis ... solummodo se in nomine Domini baptizatos fuisse forsitan confitentur, sine cuiusquam dubitationis ambiguo eos ad catholicam fidem venientes sanctae Trinitatis nomine baptizabis. Sin vero ... manifesta confessione claruerit, quod in Trinitatis fuerint nomine baptizati, sola reconciliationis inpensae gratia catholicae sociare fidei maturabis. ...

Concerning the heretics [, those who wish to return to the Catholic faith]... You sought Our counsel ... whether they are to be baptized or only reconciled; We wish Your Reverence to heed the following ...: ... they assert that they were baptized only in the name of Christ and also with only one immersion, while the evangelical precept ... admonishes us to administer each holy baptism in the name of the Trinity and also by triple immersion, as our Lord, speaking to his disciples, said: “Go, baptize all nations in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit” [Mt 28:19]; if, in fact, therefore, those among the aforesaid heretics ... should admit to having been baptized only in the name of the Lord, you should, when they come to the Catholic faith, baptize them, without any uncertainty of doubt, in the name of the Holy Trinity. If, however, ... it becomes evident from a manifest confession that they have been baptized in the name of the Trinity, you will hasten to bring them into the Catholic faith making use only of the grace of the reconciliation accorded (them)...

446: Letter Adeone te to Bishop [John], early 559

Ed.: P. M. Gassó and C. M. Batlle, Pelagii I papae Epistulae quae supersunt, Scripta et Documenta, ed. by the Abbey of Montserrat, 8 (Barcelona, 1956), 111f. (= letter 39) / S. Löwenfeld, Epistulae Pontificum Romanorum ineditae (Leipzig, 1885), 15f. (= no. 28 = Collectio Britannica, Pelagius, letter 26). —Reg.: JR 998, with additions; P. Ewald, in NArch 5 (1880): 547.

The Necessity of Union with the Apostolic See

Adeone te in summo sacerdotii gradu positum catholicae fefellit veritas matris, ut non statim schismaticum te conspiceres, cum a Sedibus Apostolicis recessisses? Adeone populis ad praedicandum positus non legeras super Apostolorum principem a Christo Deo nostro Ecclesiam esse fundatam, et ita fundamentum ut portae adversus ipsam inferi praevalere non possent [cf. Mt 16:18]? Quod si legeras, ubinam praeter ipsum esse credebas Ecclesiam, in quo uno omnes scilicet Apostolicae Sedes sunt, quibus pariter, sicut illi, qui claves acceperat, ligandi solvendique potestas indulta est? Sed idcirco uni primum, quod daturus erat, etiam omnibus dedit, ut, secundum beati Cypriani martyris id ipsum exponentis sententiam, una esse monstretur Ecclesia.¹ Quo ergo tu, carissime iam in Christo, ab ista divisus errabas, vel quam salutis tuae tenebas spem?

Has the truth of your Catholic mother so failed you, who have been placed in the highest office of the priesthood, that you have not at once recognized yourself as a schismatic when you withdrew from the Apostolic Sees? Being appointed to preach the Gospel to the people, had you not even read that the Church was founded by Christ our Lord upon the chief of the apostles, so that the gates of hell might not be able to prevail against her [cf. Mt 16:18]? If you had read this, where did you believe the Church to be outside of him in whom alone are clearly all the Apostolic Sees? To whom in like measure as to him, who had received the keys, has the power of binding and of loosing been granted [cf. Mt 16:19]? But for this reason he gave first to him alone what he was about to give also to all, so that, according to the opinion of blessed Cyprian the martyr, who explains this very thing, the Church might be shown to be one.¹ Why, therefore, did you, already most dear in Christ, fall into error by separating from that very (See), or what hope did you have for your salvation?

447: Letter Relegentes autem to the Patrician Valerian, March or early April 559

Ed.: P. M. Gassó and C. M. Batlle, Pelagii I papae Epistulae quae supersunt, Scripta et Documenta, ed. by the Abbey of Montserrat, 8 (Barcelona, 1956), 158 (= letter 59) / PL 69:413B / in part: Gratian, Decretum, p. I, dist. 17, c. 4 (Frdb 1:51). —Reg.: JR 1018; P. Ewald, in NArch 5 (1880): 553–55 (= Collectio Britannica, Pelagius, letter 46).

The Pope as the Interpreter of Conciliar Decrees

Nec licuit aliquando nec licebit, particularem synodum ad diiudicandum generalem synodum congregari. Sed quotiens aliqua de universali synodo aliquibus dubitatio nascitur, ad recipiendam de eo quod non intellegunt rationem aut sponte ii qui salutem animae suae desiderant, ad Apostolicas Sedes pro percipienda ratione conveniunt, aut, si forte ... ita obstinati et contumaces exstiterint ut doceri non velint, eos ab eisdem Apostolicis Sedibus aut attrahi ad salutem quoquomodo necesse est, aut, ne aliorum perditio esse possint, secundum canones¹ per saeculares opprimi potestates.

It has never been permitted, and never will be, to convoke a particular council to stand in judgment over a general council. But any time doubt is raised among some in regard to a universal council—in order to obtain an explanation on a matter they do not understand—either those who desire the salvation of their souls should come together on their own accord to consult with the Apostolic See to receive clarification, or, if perhaps ... they are so obstinate and contumacious that they do not wish to be instructed, it is necessary either that they be drawn to salvation in every possible way by the same Apostolic See or that they be suppressed by secular powers, in conformity to the canons,¹ so they cannot be a cause for the ruin of others.

JOHN III: July 17, 561–July 13, 574

451–464: First Synod of BRAGA (Portugal), begun May 1, 561: Anathemas against the Priscillianists and Others

This is also listed erroneously as the Second Synod of Braga. After adopting the profession of faith and the canons of the First Synod of Toledo (*188–208), it adds the following chapters.

Ed.: Bruns 2:30f. / MaC 9:774C–775A / HaC 3:348B–349D / KüA 36–38 / Hn § 176 / CdLuc 823–25 / CVis 67–69.

*446 ¹ Cf. Cyprian, De catholicae Ecclesiae unitate 4 (M. Bévenot: CpChL 3 [1972]: 251f. / CSEL 3:212f.).

*447 ¹ Synod of Antioch of 341, can. 5, cited by the Council of Chalcedon, sess. 4 (ACOe 2/III, 118, no. 90 in Greek; 2/III/II, 124, Latin translation).

The Trinity and Christ

- 451 1. Si quis Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum non confitetur tres personas unius esse substantiae et virtutis ac potestatis, sicut catholica et apostolica Ecclesia docet, sed unam tantum dicit et solitariam esse personam, ita ut ipse sit Pater qui Filius, ipse etiam sit Paraclitus Spiritus, sicut Sabellius et Priscillianus dixerunt, anathema sit.
1. If anyone does not confess that the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit (are) three Persons of one substance and virtue and power, just as the Catholic and apostolic Church teaches, but says there is only one solitary Person, so that he himself is the Father who is the Son, and also he himself is the Paraclete, the Spirit, just as Sabellius and Priscillian have asserted, let him be anathema.
- 452 2. Si quis extra sanctam Trinitatem alia nescio quae divinitatis nomina introducit, dicens quod in ipsa divinitate sit trinitas trinitatis, sicut Gnostici et Priscillianus dixerunt, anathema sit.
2. If anyone introduces some other names of the Godhead in addition to the Holy Trinity because, as he says, there is in the Godhead himself a Trinity of the Trinity, just as the Gnostics and Priscillians have stated, let him be anathema.
- 453 3. Si quis dicit, Filium Dei Dominum nostrum, antequam ex Virgine nasceretur, non fuisse, sicut Paulus Samosatenus et Photinus et Priscillianus dixerunt, anathema sit.
3. If anyone says that the Son of God our Lord did not exist before he was born of the Virgin, just as Paul of Samosata and Photinus and Priscillian have said, let him be anathema.
- 454 4. Si quis natalem Christi secundum carnem non vere honorat, sed honorare se simulat, ieiunans in eodem die et in Dominico, quia Christum in vera hominis natura natum esse non credit, sicut Cerdon, Marcion, Manichaeus et Priscillianus dixerunt, anathema sit.
4. If anyone does not truly honor the birthday of Christ according to the flesh, but pretends that he honors (it), fasting on the very day and on the Lord's Day, because, like Cerdon, Marcion, Manichaeus, and Priscillian, he does not believe that Christ was born in the true nature of man, let him be anathema.

The Creation and Governance of the World

- 455 5. Si quis animas humanas vel angelos ex Dei credit substantia exstitisse, sicut Manichaeus et Priscillianus dixerunt, anathema sit.
5. If anyone believes that the human souls or the angels come from the substance of God, as Manichaeus and Priscillian have said, let him be anathema.
- 456 6. Si quis animas humanas dicit prius in caelesti habitatione peccasse et pro hoc in corpora humana in terra deiectas, sicut Priscillianus dixit, anathema sit.
6. If anyone says that the human souls first committed sin in the heavenly abode and for this reason were thrown down on earth into human bodies, as Priscillian has said, let him be anathema.
- 457 7. Si quis dicit, diabolum non fuisse prius bonum angelum a Deo factum, nec Dei opificium fuisse naturam eius, sed dicit eum ex chao et tenebris emersisse nec aliquem sui habere auctorem, sed ipsum esse principium atque substantiam mali, sicut Manichaeus et Priscillianus dixerunt, anathema sit.
7. If anyone says that the devil was not first a good angel created by God or that his nature was not the work of God, but that he emerged from darkness and had no creator but is himself the principle and substance of evil, as Manichaeus and Priscillian have said, let him be anathema.
- 458 8. Si quis credit, quia aliquantas in mundo creaturas diabolus fecerit et tonitrua et fulgura et tempestates et siccitates ipse diabolus sua auctoritate faciat, sicut Priscillianus dixit, anathema sit.
8. If anyone says that the devil made some of the creatures in the world and that he is by his own power the author of thunder and lightning and storms and droughts, as Priscillian has said, let him be anathema.
- 459 9. Si quis animas et corpora humana fatalibus stellis credit adstringi, sicut pagani et Priscillianus dixerunt, anathema sit.
9. If anyone believes that the human souls and bodies are by their fate bound to the stars, as pagans and Priscillian have said, let him be anathema.
- 460 10. Si quis duodecim signa de sideribus, quae mathematici observare solent, per singula animae vel corporis membra disposita credunt et nominibus
10. If anyone believes that the twelve signs or stars, which the astrologers are accustomed to observe, have been arranged in relation to specific members of the soul

Patriarcharum adscripta dicunt, sicut Priscillianus dixit, anathema sit.

11. Si quis coniugia humana damnat et procreationem nascentium perhorrescit, sicut Manichaeus et Priscillianus dixerunt, anathema sit.

12. Si quis plasmationem humani corporis diaboli dicit esse figmentum, et conceptiones in uteris matrum operibus dicit daemonum figurari, propter quod et resurrectionem carnis non credit, sicut Manichaeus et Priscillianus dixerunt, anathema sit.

13. Si quis dicit, creationem universae carnis non opificium Dei, sed malignorum esse angelorum, sicut Manichaeus et Priscillianus dixerunt, anathema sit.

14. Si quis immundos putat cibos carniarum, quos Deus in usus hominum dedit, et, non propter afflictionem corporis sui, sed quasi immunditiam putans, ita ab eis absteineat, ut ne olera cocta cum carnibus praegustet, sicut Manichaeus et Priscillianus dixerunt, anathema sit.

or body and say that they have been attributed to the names of the patriarchs, just as Priscillian has asserted, let him be anathema.

11. If anyone condemns human marriage and despises the procreation of children, as Manichaeus and Priscillian have said, let him be anathema. 461

12. If anyone says that the formation of the human body is the work of the devil and that the conception of children in their mothers' womb is brought about through the activity of the devil and for this reason does not believe in the resurrection of the flesh, as Manichaeus and Priscillian have said, let him be anathema. 462

13. If anyone says that the creation of all flesh is not the work of God but of bad angels, as Manichaeus and Priscillian have said, let him be anathema. 463

14. If anyone considers the foods of the flesh, which God has given man for his use, to be unclean, and he abstains from these, not for bodily chastisement, but because he judges them as so unclean that he may not even taste vegetables cooked with meats, just as Manichaeus and Priscillian have said, let him be anathema. 464

BENEDICT I: June 2, 575–July 30, 579

PELAGIUS II: November 26, 579–February 7, 590

468–469: Letter Dilectionis vestrae to the Schismatic Bishops of Istria, 585 or 586

Ed.: ACOe 4/II, 110²⁷–111²⁶ / L. M. Hartmann: MGH Epistulae II, 447³⁹–448³⁴ / PL 72:713B–714C (= letter 4) / MaC 9:898A–899A. —Reg.: JR 1055.

The Necessity of Union with the Roman See

Ubi namque sit Ecclesia constituta, licet ipsius Domini voce in sancto evangelio sit apertum, quid tamen beatus Augustinus eiusdem dominicae memor sententiae definierit, audiamus. In his namque, ait, esse Dei Ecclesiam constitutam, qui Sedibus Apostolicis per successionem praesulum praesidere noscuntur, et quicumque ab earumdem Sedium se communionem vel auctoritate suspenderit, esse in schismate demonstratur. Et post alia: “Positus foris, etiam pro Christi nomine mortuus eris; Inter membra Christi patere pro Christo haerens corpori; pugna pro capite [Inter membra Christi non numeraberis; patere pro Christo; haerens corpori pugna pro capite].”¹

For although it is evident from the word of the Lord himself in the Sacred Gospel where the Church is established, let us hear nevertheless what the blessed Augustine, mindful of the opinion of the same Lord, has explained. For he says that the Church of God is established among those who are known to preside over the Apostolic Sees, through the succession of those in charge, and whoever separates himself from the communion or authority of these sees is shown to be in schism. And following additional remarks, (he says): “If you are put outside, for the name of Christ you will also die. Suffer for Christ among the members of Christ holding fast to the body; fight for the head [You will not be counted among the members of Christ; suffer for Christ; fight for the head holding fast to the body].”¹

*468 ¹ Source uncertain.

469 Sed et beatus Cyprianus ... inter alia sic dicit: "Exordium ab unitate proficiscitur, et primatus Petro datur, ut una Christi Ecclesia et cathedra monstretur";¹ et pastores sunt omnes, sed grex unus ostenditur, qui ab Apostolis unanimi consensione pascatur.

Et post pauca: "Hanc Ecclesiae unitatem qui non tenet, tenere se fidem credit? Qui cathedram Petri, super quam Ecclesia fundata est [cf. Mt 16:18], deserit et resistit, in Ecclesia se esse confidit?"² ...

"Cum Deo manere non possunt, qui esse in Ecclesia Dei unanimiter noluerunt: ardeant licet flammis et ignibus traditi, vel obiecti bestiis animam suam ponant: non erit illa fidei corona, sed poena perfidiae, nec exitus gloriosus, sed desperationis interitus. Occidi talis potest, coronari non potest."³ ...

"Peius schismatis crimen est quam quod hi, qui sacrificaverunt; qui tamen in paenitentia criminis constituti Deum plenissimis satisfactionibus deprecantur. Illic Ecclesia quaeritur et rogatur; hic Ecclesiae repugnatur. Illic qui lapsus est, sibi tantum nocuit; hic qui schisma facere conatur, multos secum trahendo decipit. Illic animae unius est damnum; hic periculum plurimorum. Certe peccasse se hic intellegit et lamentatur et plangit; ille tumens in peccato suo et ipsis sibi delictis placens, a matre filios segregat, oves a pastore sollicitat, Dei sacramenta disturbat, et cum lapsus semel peccaverit, hic quotidie peccat. Postremo lapsus martyrium postmodum consecutus, potest regni promissa percipere; hic, si extra Ecclesiam fuerit occisus, ad Ecclesiae non potest praemia pervenire."⁴

But also the blessed Cyprian ..., among other things, says the following: "The beginning starts from unity, and the primacy is given to Peter, so that the Church and the chair of Christ may be shown (to be) one;¹ and they are all shepherds, but the flock, which is fed by the apostles in unanimous agreement, is shown to be one.

And a little later: "Does he who does not hold this unity of the Church believe that he has the faith? Does he who deserts and resists the chair of Peter, on which the Church was founded [cf. Mt 16:18], have confidence that he is in the Church?"² ...

"Those who were not willing to be at agreement in the Church of God cannot remain with God; although given over to flames and fires, they burn, or thrown to wild beasts, they lay down their lives, there will not be (for them) that crown of faith, but the punishment of faithlessness, not a glorious result (of religious virtue), but the ruin of despair. Such a one can be slain, he cannot be crowned."³ ...

"For the crime of schism is worse than (the crime) of those who have sacrificed (to pagan gods) but who, nevertheless, have submitted to penance for their crimes and implored God with the fullest satisfactions. In the one case, the Church is sought and beseeched; in the other, the Church is opposed. In the one case, the lapsed person injured only himself; in the other, the person who tried to cause a schism deceives many by dragging (them) with himself. In the one case, there is the loss of one soul; in the other, there is danger for many. The (lapsed one) certainly knows that he has sinned, and he laments and weeps; the other, puffed up with pride in his sin and taking pleasure in his own transgressions, separates children from their mother, seduces the sheep from their shepherd, disturbs the sacraments of God; and, while the lapsed person has sinned but once, the (schismatic) sins daily. Finally, if the lapsed person should later attain martyrdom, he can receive the promises of the kingdom; but if the (schismatic) is slain outside of the Church, he cannot attain the rewards of the Church."⁴

470: Third Synod of TOLEDO, begun May 8, 589: Profession of Faith of King Reccaredus

Besides the profession of faith, worth noting are the twenty-three anathemas against the Arian heresy and the Filioque inserted into the Constantinopolitan profession of faith, which is found for the first time in the acts of this synod (MaC 9:981D / HaC 3:472A), but it seems to be an interpolation, since it is absent in some older manuscripts, e.g., the Codex Lucensis (ninth century): cf. J. Orlandis

*469 ¹ Cyprian of Carthage, De catholicae Ecclesiae unitate 4; instead of "et primatus ... monstretur" (and the primacy ... one), the most ancient manuscripts of Cyprian have only "ut ecclesia Christi una monstretur" (so that the Church of Christ may be shown [to be] one) (M. Bévenot: CpChL 3 [1972]: 252 / CSEL 3:213_{4f} / cf. PL 4:515A); on the question of this insertion, cf. M. Bévenot, St. Cyprian's De unitate Chap. 4 in Light of the Manuscripts, Analecta Gregoriana, ser. theol. 11 (Rome, 1937), appendix: Skeleton texts, familia VII.

² Cyprian of Carthage, De catholicae Ecclesiae unitate 4; instead of "cathedram ... deserit" (he who deserts ... the chair), the original text is "Ecclesiae renititur" (who resists the Church) (CpChL 3:252 / CSEL 3:213_{8f} / PL 4:516A).

³ Ibid., 14 (CpChL 3:260_{363f} / CSEL 3:223₅₋₁₀ / PL 4:527A).

⁴ Ibid., 19 (CpChL 3:263₄₆₃₋₇₇ / CSEL 3:227₉₋₂₈ / PL 4:530CD; cited very freely).

and D. Ramos-Lisson, Die Synoden auf der iberischen Halbinsel bis zum Einbruch des Islam (711), Konziliengeschichte, series A: Darstellung (Paderborn, 1981), 109f., in particular, n. 54.

Ed.: MaC 9:978C–979A / HaC 3:459D–470A / Hn § 177 / CVis 109 / CdLuc 449₂₃–450₆.

The Holy Trinity

Confitemur esse Patrem, qui genuerit ex sua substantia Filium sibi coequalem et coaeternum, non tamen ut ipse idem sit natus et genitor [natus ingenitus], sed persona alius sit Pater, qui genuit, alius sit Filius, qui fuerit generatus, unius tamen uterque substantiae divinitate subsistat: Pater, ex quo sit Filius, ipse vero ex nullo sit alio; Filius, qui habeat Patrem, sed sine initio et sine diminutione in ea, quia Patri coequalis et coaeternus est, divinitate subsistat. Spiritus aequae Sanctus confitendus a nobis et praedicandus est a Patre et a Filio procedere et cum Patre et Filio unius esse substantiae; tertiam vero in Trinitate Spiritus Sancti esse personam, qui tamen communem habeat cum Patre et Filio divinitatis essentiam. Haec enim sancta Trinitas unus est Deus, Pater et Filius et Spiritus Sanctus, cuius bonitate, omnis [hominis] licet bona sit condita creatura [natura], per assumptam tamen a Filio humani habitus formam a damnata progenie reformamur ad beatitudinem pristinam.

We profess there to be one Father, who generated from his substance a Son who is co-equal and co-eternal to himself, yet not in order that the same one might be born and the one who generates [born, not generated], but <that> one Person may be the Father who generated and another may be the Son who was generated; nevertheless, both are as one substance according to divinity: the Father, from whom is the Son, is himself from none other; the Son, who has a Father, exists, however, without beginning or diminishment in this divinity, since he is co-equal and co-eternal with the Father. Likewise, we must profess and proclaim that the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father and the Son and is one substance with the Father and the Son; therefore, within the Trinity, the third Person is that of the Holy Spirit, who, nevertheless, has the divine essence in common with the Father and the Son. This Holy Trinity, indeed, is one God, Father and Son and Holy Spirit, from whose goodness all creatures [human nature] were established as good; nevertheless, through the human form assumed by the Son, we are restored from a condemned progeny to the previous blessedness.

GREGORY I THE GREAT: September 3, 590–March 12, 604

472: Letter Consideranti mihi to the Patriarchs, February 591

Ed.: P. Ewald, Gregorii I papae Registrum epistolarum, MGH Epistulae I (Berlin, 1887), 16₁₉–37₁ (= Registrum epistolarum I, 24) / D. Norberg: CpChL 140 [1982]: 32 (= Registrum epistolarum I, 24) / PL 77:478A–C (= Registrum epistolarum 1:25) / Gratian, Decretum, p. I, dist. 15, c. 2 (Frdb 1:35f.). —Reg.: JR 1092.

The Authority of Ecumenical Councils

... Sicut sancti Evangelii quattuor libros, sic quattuor concilia suscipere et venerari me fateor: Nicaenum scilicet, in quo perversum Arii dogma destruitur; Constantinopolitanum quoque, in quo Eunomii et Macedonii error convincitur, Ephesenum etiam primum, in quo Nestorii impietas iudicatur, Chalcedonense vero, in quo Eutycheis Dioscorique pravitas reprobatur, tota devotione complector, integerrima approbatione custodio: quia in his, velut in quadrato lapide, sanctae fidei structura consurgit et cuiuslibet vitae atque actionis existat, quisquis eorum soliditatem non tenet, etiam si lapis esse cernitur, tamen extra aedificium iacet.

Quintum quoque concilium pariter veneror, in quo Epistola quae Ibae dicitur erroris plena reprobatur, Theodorus [Mopsuestenus] personam Mediatoris Dei et

... Just as <I do for> the four books of the holy Gospel, so I profess that I accept and venerate the four councils: For I embrace with complete reverence and preserve with unqualified approval that of Nicaea, in which the perverse teaching of Arius was destroyed; also that of Constantinople, in which the error of Eunomius and Macedonius was refuted; likewise, the first of Ephesus, in which the impiety of Nestorius was judged; and that of Chalcedon, in which the depravity of Eutyches and Dioscorus was condemned; for, on these, as on a four-sided stone, the structure of the holy faith arises and all life and activity exist; whoever does not adhere to their solidity, even if he is esteemed as the stone, is nevertheless outside the edifice.

I likewise venerate the fifth council, in which the so-called letter of Ibas, <which was> full of error, was condemned and Theodore [of Mopsuestia], who hominum in duabus subsistentiis separans ad impietatis perfidiam cecidisse convincitur, scripta quoque Theodreti, per quae beati Cyrilli fides reprehenditur, ausu dementiae prolata refutantur.¹

Cunctas vero quae praefata veneranda concilia personas respuunt, respuo, quas venerantur, amplector, quia dum universali sunt consensu constituta, se et non illa destruit, quisquis praesumit aut solvere quos religant aut ligare quos solvunt. Quisquis ergo aliud sapit, anathema sit.

separated the Person of the Mediator between God and man into two subsistences, was convicted for his impious error; likewise rejected were the writings of Theodoret, the product of a demented endeavor, in which the faith of the blessed Cyril was criticized.¹

I reject as well all the people whom the aforesaid venerable councils rejected; and those they venerate, I accept; since they are founded on a universal consent, whoever presumes to loose what the councils have bound or to bind what they have loosed destroys himself and not these (councils). Whoever, therefore, thinks otherwise, let him be anathema.

473: Letter O quam bona to Bishop Virgilius of Arles, August 12, 595

Very similar letters concerning simony were sent by Gregory I to bishops in Greece and Epirus (Registrum epistolarum V, 63, and VI, 7. MGH = V, 58, and VI, 8, Editio Maurina, PL; JR 1379, 1383).

Ed.: MGH Epistulae I, 369₁₁₋₂₅ (= Registrum epistolarum V, 58) / CpChL 140:355f. (= Registrum epistolarum V, 58) / PL 77:783B–784A (= Registrum epistolarum V, 53) / BullTau 1:164ab / BullCocq 1:98b. —Gratian, Decretum, p. II, cs. 1, q. 1, c. 117 (Frdb 1:403f.) reports letter JR 1379. —Reg.: JR 1374.

Simony

473 ... Agnovi quod in Galliarum vel Germaniae partibus nullus ad sacrum ordinem sine commodi datione perveniat. Quod si ita est, flens dico, gemens denuntio, quia cum sacerdotalis ordo intus cecidit, foris quoque diu stare non poterit. Scimus quippe ex Evangelio, quid Redemptor noster per semetipsum fecerit, quia ingressus templum cathedras vendentium columbas evertit [cf. Mt 21:12], Columbas enim vendere est de Spiritu Sancto, quem Deus omnipotens consubstantialem sibi per impositionem manuum hominibus tribuit, commodum temporale percipere. Ex quo, ut praedixi, malo iam innuitur, quid sequatur, quia qui in templo Dei columbas vendere praesumpserunt, eorum, Deo iudice, cathedras ceciderunt.

Qui videlicet error in subditis cum augmento propagatur. Nam ipse quoque, qui pretio ad sacrum honorem [ordinem] perducitur, iam in ipsa provectus sui radice vitiatus, paratior est aliis venumdare quod emit. Et ubi est quod scriptum est: “Gratis accepistis, gratis date” [Mt 10:8]?

Et cum prima contra sanctam Ecclesiam simoniaca haeresis sit exorta, cur non perpenditur, cur non videtur, quia eum, quem quis cum pretio ordinat, provehendo agit, ut haereticus fiat?

... I have learned that in parts of Gaul and Germany nobody attains sacred orders without giving a handsome gift. If this is so, I speak with tears, and I proclaim with groaning that when the sacerdotal order collapses internally, it will not be able to endure for long externally. We certainly know from the Gospel what our Redeemer himself did: when he entered the temple, he overturned the chairs of those selling doves [cf. Mt 21:12]. Indeed, selling doves is to receive some temporal gain from the Holy Spirit whom, as consubstantial with himself, the almighty God confers upon men by the imposition of hands. What results from this evil, as I said, has already been indicated: for those who dared to sell doves in the temple of God had their chairs overturned by the judgment of God.

This error manifestly spreads and increases among subordinates. For the man who attains to the sacred honor [order] for a price is already corrupt himself in the very root of his promotion, and he is all the more disposed to sell to others what he has bought. And where in this is the Scripture: “Freely give what you have freely received” [Mt 10:8]?

And since simony arose as the first heresy against the holy Church, why is it not considered, why is it not seen, that he who ordains someone for a price, by promoting him, causes him to become a heretic?

474–476: Letter Sicut aqua to Patriarch Eulogius of Alexandria, August 600

Ed.: L. M. Hartmann: MGH Epistulae II (Berlin, 1899), 257_{9-25,35-258}₁₃ (= Registrum epistolarum X, 21) / D. Norbert: CpChL 140A [1892]: 853–55 (= Registrum epistolarum X, 21) / PL 77:1097A–1098C (= Registrum epistolarum X, 39). —Reg.: JR 1790.

*472 ¹ Cf. the oscillations by Vigilii and Pelagius I regarding the judgment on Theodoret and Ibas made at the Council of Chalcedon (*300^o, 416^o, 444).

Knowledge of Christ (against the Agnoetes)

De eo . . . , quod scriptum est, quia “diem et horam neque Filius neque angeli sciunt” [cf. Mk 13:32], omnino recte vestra sanctitas sensit, quoniam non ad eundem Filium iuxta hoc quod caput est, sed iuxta corpus eius quod nos sumus, est certissime referendum. Qua de re multis in locis . . . Augustinus eo sensu utitur.¹

Dicit quoque et aliud, quod de eodem Filio possit intelligi, quia omnipotens Deus aliquando more loquitur humano, sicut ad Abraham dicit: “Nunc cognovi, quia times Deum” [cf. Gn 22:12], non quia se Deus tunc timeri cognoverit, sed quia tunc eundem Abraham fecit agnoscere, quia Deum timeret. Sicut enim nos diem laetum dicimus, non quod ipse dies laetus sit, sed quia nos laetos facit, ita et omnipotens Filius nescire se dicit diem, quem nesciri facit, non quod ipse nesciat, sed quia hunc sciri minime permittat.

Unde et Pater solus dicitur scire, quia consubstantialis ei Filius ex eius natura, qua est super angelos, habet ut hoc sciat, quod angeli ignorant. Unde et hoc intelligi subtilius potest, quia incarnatus Unigenitus factusque pro nobis homo perfectus in natura quidem humanitatis novit diem et horam iudicii, sed tamen hunc non ex natura humanitatis novit. Quod ergo in ipsa novit, non ex ipsa novit, quia Deus homo factus diem et horam iudicii per deitatis suae potentiam novit. . . .

Itaque scientiam, quam ex humanitatis natura non habuit, ex qua cum angelis creatura fuit, hanc se cum angelis, qui creaturae sunt, habere denegavit. Diem ergo et horam iudicii scit Deus et homo; sed ideo, quia Deus est homo.

Res autem valde manifesta est, quia quisquis Nestorianus non est, Agnoita esse nullatenus potest. Nam qui ipsam Dei Sapientiam fatetur incarnatam, qua mente valet dicere: esse aliquid, quod Dei Sapientia ignoret? Scriptum est: “In principio erat Verbum, et Verbum erat apud Deum, et Deus erat Verbum. Omnia per ipsum facta sunt” [Jo 1:1, 3]. Si omnia, procul dubio etiam dies iudicii et hora. Quis ergo ita desipiat, ut dicere praesumat, quia Verbum Patris fecit quod ignorat? Scriptum quoque est: Sciens Iesus, quia omnia dedit ei Pater in manus

Concerning . . . the passage of Scripture according to which “neither the Son nor the angels know the day and the hour” [cf. Mk 13:32], Your Holiness is entirely correct in judging that it is certainly to be referred to the Son, not considered as the Head, but considered as the Body that we are. In a number of passages, . . . Augustine understands it in this sense.¹

He also says that it can be understood as referring to the Son himself, because almighty God sometimes speaks in human fashion, as for instance when he says to Abraham: “Now I know that you fear God” [cf. Gen 22:12], which does not mean that God came then to know that he was feared but that he then made Abraham recognize that he feared God. Just as we speak of a joyful day, not because the day is joyful, but because it makes us joyful, so the almighty Son says that he does not know the day that he causes not to be known, not because he himself does not know, but because he does not in any way allow it to be known.

Thus, it is also said that only the Father knows, because the Son who is one in being with him has, from the nature that he receives from him and that is superior to that of the angels, a knowledge that angels do not have. This can also, therefore, be understood in a more subtle way by saying that the only begotten Son incarnate, made perfect man for us, knew the day and the hour of judgment in his human nature but did not know it from his human nature. What he knew, therefore, in his humanity he did not know from it, because it is by the power of his divinity that God-made-man knew the day and the hour of judgment. . . .

Thus it is that he denied having the knowledge that he did not have from the human nature by which he was a creature as the angels are, as he also denied it to the angels because they are creatures. The God-man knows therefore the day and the hour of judgment, but precisely because God is man.

It is perfectly clear that whoever is not a Nestorian cannot in any way be an Agnoete. For, how can one who professes that the Wisdom of God himself became incarnate ever maintain that there is anything that the Wisdom of God does not know? It is written: “In the beginning was the Word and the Word was with God and the Word was God. . . . All things were made through him” [Jn 1:1, 3]. If all things, then undoubtedly the day and the hour also. Who would then be so foolish as to say that the Word of the Father made something he did not know? Scripture again says: “Jesus, knowing that the Father had given all things into his hands . . .” [Jn 13:3]. If all things, then certainly the day and the hour also. Who, then, is so foolish as to say that the Son received in his hands that of which he was ignorant?

*474 ¹ Cf., e.g., Augustine, Enarrationes in Psalmos 6 [on v. 1] (E. Dekkers and J. Fraipont: CpChL 38 [1956]: 27); De diversis questionibus LXXXIII libri, q. 60, 65 (A. Mutzenbecher: CpChL 44A [1975]: 119, 147-49 / PL 40:48, 59f.); De Trinitate I, 12 (W.J. Mountain and F. Glorie: CpChL 50 [1968]: 61-68 / PL 42:836-40).

[Io 13:3]. Si omnia, profecto et iudicii diem et horam. Quis ergo ita stultus est, ut dicat, quia accepit Filius in manibus quod nescit?

De eo vero loco, in quo mulieribus de Lazaro dicit: “Ubi posuistis eum?” [Io 11:34], ipsa specialiter sensimus, quae sensitis, quia si negant scisse Dominum, ubi fuerat Lazarus sepultus, atque ideo requisisse, procul dubio compelluntur fateri quia nescivit Dominus, in quibus locis se Adam et Eva post culpam absconderant, cum in paradiso dixit: “Adam, ubi es?” [cf. Gn 3:9], aut cum Cain corripit dicens: “Ubi est Abel frater tuus?” [Gn 4:9]. Qui si nesciebat, cur protinus adiunxit: “Sanguis fratris tui de terra clamat ad me”?

Regarding the passage in which he says of Lazarus to the women: “Where have you laid him?” [Jn 11:34], we have thought exactly the same as you have thought: namely, that if they say that the Lord did not know where Lazarus was buried and because of this asked the question, they are constrained without doubt to admit that the Lord did not know the place where Adam and Eve hid themselves after the fall, when in paradise, he asked: “Adam, where are you?” [cf. Gen 3:9], or when reproving Cain, he said: “Where is Abel, your brother?” [Gen 4:9]. If he did not know, why did he add immediately: “The blood of your brother cries out to me from the earth”?

477: Letter Litterarum tuarum primordia to Bishop Serenus of Marseille, October 600

This was preceded by a brief letter in July 599 to Bishop Serenus on the same matter (Registrum epistolarum IX, 208, MGH = IX, 105 PL).

Ed.: MGH Epistolae II, 270⁷⁻¹⁶, 271¹⁵⁻¹⁹ (= Registrum epistolarum XI, 10) / CpChL 140A:873-75 (= Registrum epistolarum XI, 13) / PL 77:1128BC, 1129C (= Registrum epistolarum XI, 13) / Gratian, Decretum, p. III, dist. 3, c. 27 (Frdb 1:1360). —Reg.: JR 1800.

The Right of the Faithful to Venerate Images of the Saints

477 Perlatum . . . ad Nos fuerat, quod . . . Sanctorum imagines sub hac quasi excusatione, ne adorari debuissent, confregeris. Et quidem quia eas adorari vetuisses, omnino laudamus; fregisse vero reprehendimus. . . . Aliud est enim, picturam adorare, aliud, per picturae historiam quid sit adorandum, addiscere. Nam quod legentibus scriptura, hoc idiotis praestat pictura cernentibus, quia in ipsa ignorantes vident quid sequi debeant, in ipsa legunt qui litteras nesciunt; unde et praecipue gentibus pro lectione pictura est. . . .

Si quis imagines facere voluerit, minime prohibe, adorare vero imagines omnimodis devita. Sed hoc sollicitate fraternitas tua admoneat, ut ex visione rei gestae ardorem compunctionis percipiant et in adoratione solius omnipotentis sanctae Trinitatis humiliter prosternantur.

It has been . . . reported to Us that . . . you have broken images of the saints under the supposed excuse that they should not be adored. Indeed, We fully commend you for having forbidden them to be adored; but We rebuke you for having them broken. . . . It is indeed one thing to adore a picture; it is something else to learn what should be adored by what the picture relates. For what Scripture is for those who read, so the picture serves the simple ones who gaze upon it, since in it the unlearned perceive what they should follow, and in it those who know not letters read, and wherefore, in a special way, the picture takes the place of reading for the people. . . .

If anyone wishes to make images, by no means prohibit it, but in every way, to be sure, avoid adoring the images. But let Your Fraternity admonish carefully, so that from the vision of what has happened (the people) may feel the burning of compunction and prostrate themselves humbly in adoration of the sole almighty Holy Trinity.

478–479: Letter Quid caritati nihil to the Bishops of Iberia (Georgia), ca. June 22, 601

Ed. [*478; 479]: MGH Epistolae II, 325¹⁰⁻²⁵, 327⁴⁻¹², 326²⁷⁻³²⁷₄ (= Registrum epistolarum XI, 52) / CpChL 140A:952-55 (= Registrum epistolarum XI, 52) / PL 77:1205A–1206A, 1207A, 1207D–1208B (= Registrum epistolarum XI, 67). —[only *478]: Gratian, Decretum, p. III, dist. 4, c. 44, 84 (Frdb 1:1380, 1390). —Reg.: JR 1844.

The Baptism and Ordination of Heretics

478 Ab antiqua Patrum institutione didicimus, ut quilibet apud haeresim in Trinitatis nomine baptizantur, cum ad sanctam Ecclesiam redeunt, aut unctione chrismatis

From the ancient instruction of the Fathers, We have learned that those in heresy who are baptized in the name of the Trinity, when they return to the holy aut impositione manus aut sola professione fidei ad sinum matris Ecclesiae revocentur. Unde Arianos per impositionem manus Occidens, per unctionem vero sancti chrismatis ad ingressum Ecclesiae catholicae Oriens reformat. Monophysitas vero et alios ex sola vera confessione recipit, quia sanctum baptismum, quod sunt apud haereticos consecuti, tunc in eis vires emundationis accipit, cum vel illi per impositionem manus Spiritum Sanctum acceperint vel isti per professionem verae fidei sanctae et universalis Ecclesiae visceribus fuerint uniti.

Hi vero haeretici, qui in Trinitatis nomine minime baptizantur, sicut sunt Bonosiaci et Catafrigae, quia et illi Christum Dominum non credunt et isti Sanctum Spiritum perverso sensu esse quendam pravum hominem Montanum credunt, ... cum ad sanctam Ecclesiam veniunt, baptizantur, quia baptismum non fuit, quod in errore positi in sanctae Trinitatis nomine minime perceperunt. Nec potest hoc ipsum iteratum dici baptismum, quod, sicut dictum est, in Trinitatis nomine non erat datum. ...

Absque ulla dubitatione eos [scl. Nestorianos reversos] Sanctitas vestra, servatis eis propriis ordinibus, in suo coetu recipiat, ut, dum ... per mansuetudinem nullam eis contrarietatem vel difficultatem de propriis suis ordinibus facitis, eos ab antiqui hostis ore rapiatis.

Church, should be recalled to the bosom of Mother Church either by the anointing of chrism or by the imposition of hands or by the mere profession of faith. Wherefore, the West renews the Arians for entering the Catholic Church by the imposition of hands, while the East does so by the unction of holy chrism. Monophysites and others, however, are taken back only on the basis of the true profession of faith because the holy baptism that they received while among the heretics receives then the power of cleansing when either the former have received the Holy Spirit by the imposition of hands or the latter have been united to the heart of the holy and universal Church by means of the profession of the true faith.

Heretics, however, who are not baptized in the name of the Trinity, such as the Bonosians and the Cataphrygians—since the former do not believe in Christ, the Lord, and the latter in a perverse manner believe the Holy Spirit to be a certain depraved man, Montanus—... are baptized when they come back to the Catholic Church, because when they were in error they did not receive baptism in any way since it was not done in the name of the Holy Trinity. And this cannot be called a repeated baptism, since the first, as we have said, was not given in the name of the Trinity. ...

Without any hesitation, let Your Holiness receive them [namely, the converts from Nestorianism] back into your company, preserving their orders, so that ... through your clemency in not creating any opposition or difficulty in regard to their orders, you will pull them from the jaws of the ancient enemy.

The Time of the Hypostatic Union

Non autem prius in utero Virginis caro concepta est, et postmodum divinitas venit in carne; sed mox Verbum venit in uterum, mox Verbum, servata propriae virtute naturae, factum est caro. ... Nec ante conceptus et postmodum unctus est; sed hoc ipsum de Spiritu Sancto, ex carne Virginis concipi a Sancto Spiritu ungui fuit.

The flesh, however, was not first conceived in the womb of the Virgin and afterward the divinity entered into the flesh; but as soon as the Word came into the womb, then the Word, conserving the power of his own nature, became flesh. ... Nor was he first conceived and afterward anointed; rather, being conceived by the Holy Spirit from the flesh of the Virgin was the same as being anointed by the Holy Spirit. 479

480: Letter Qui sincera to Bishop Paschasius of Naples, November 602

Ed.: MGH Epistulae II, 383 (= Registrum epistolarum XIII, 15) / CpChL 140A:1013f. (= Registrum epistolarum XIII, 13) / PL 77:1267C–1268B (= Registrum epistolarum XIII, 12) / Gratian, Decretum, p. I, dist. 45, c. 3 (Frdb 1:1160f.). —Reg.: JR 1879.

Tolerance toward the Religious Convictions of Others

Qui sincera intentione extraneos ad christianam religionem, ad fidem cupiunt rectam adducere, blandimentis debent, non asperitatibus, studere, ne quorum mentem reddita plana ratio poterat provocare, pellat procul adversitas. Nam quicumque aliter agunt et eos sub hoc velamine a consueta ritus sui volunt cultura suspendere, suas illi magis quam Dei probantur causas

Those who sincerely desire to bring those outside the Christian religion to the correct faith should be earnestly engaged in displays of courtesy, not harshness, lest hostility drive far away those whose minds a clearly thought out reason could challenge. For whoever acts otherwise, and wants to keep them away from their customary practice of rites under this pretext, is shown 480 attendere. Iudaei siquidem Neapolim habitantes questi Nobis sunt asserentes, quod quidam eos a quibusdam feriarum suarum solemnibus irrationabiliter nitantur arcere, ne illis sit licitum, festivitatum suarum solemnia colere, sicut eis nunc usque et parentibus eorum longis retro temporibus licuit observare vel colere. Quod si ita se veritas habet, supervacuae rei videntur operam adhibere. Nam quid utilitatis est, quando, etsi contra longum usum fuerint vetiti, ad fidem illis et conversionem nihil proficit? Aut cur Iudaeis, qualiter caeremonias suas colere debeant, regulas ponimus, si per hoc eos lucrari non possumus?

Agendum ergo est, ut ratione potius et mansuetudine provocati sequi nos velint, non fugere, ut eis ex eorum Codicibus ostendentes quae dicimus ad sinum matris Ecclesiae Deo possimus adiuvante convertere. Itaque fraternitas tua eos monitis quidem, prout potuerit Deo adiuvante, ad convertendum accendat et de suis illos solemnitatibus inquietari denuo non permittat, sed omnes festivitates feriasque suas, sicut hactenus ... tenuerunt, liberam habeant observandi celebrandique licentiam.

to be more concerned with his own interests than with those of God. For the Jews who live in Naples complained to Us that some people have unreasonably sought to prevent them from celebrating some of their solemn feast days, so that they were not permitted to celebrate their solemn festivals, as they, up to the present, and their ancestors for a long time previously, were allowed to observe or honor. If such is the case, these men seem to be engaged in a useless pursuit. For what advantage is there when, contrary to long practice, these (feasts) have been forbidden and it serves no benefit toward their faith and conversion? Or why are we setting up rules for the Jews on how they should celebrate their ceremonies if in doing so we cannot persuade them?

This, then, is the agendum: by being encouraged more by reason and gentleness, they are to wish to follow, not flee from, us, so that by showing them what we affirm from their Scriptures, we may be able, with God's help, to convert them to the bosom of Mother Church. And thus, Your Fraternity, as far as possible with God's help, should awaken them to conversion by admonitions and not allow them to be further disturbed in their celebrations. But they should have the complete freedom to observe and celebrate all their feasts and holy days as up till now ... they have possessed.

SABINIAN: September 13, 604–February 22, 606

BONIFACE III: February 19–November 12, 607

BONIFACE IV: August 25, 608–May 8, 615

DEUSDEDIT (ADEODATUS I): October 19, 615–November 8, 618

BONIFACE V: December 23, 619–October 25, 625

HONORIUS I: October 27, 625–October 12, 638

485–486: Fourth Synod of TOLEDO, begun December 5, 633: Chapters

The profession of faith of this synod is linked especially with the creeds Fides Damasi and Quicumque (*71f. and 75f.).

Ed. [*485; 486]: Bruns 1:221; 1:228 / MaC 10:615C–616B; 10:624AB / HaC 3:578E–579C; 3:584C / CdLuc 498f.; 511 / CVis 187f., 198. —[only *485]: Hn § 179. —[only *486]: EnchB no. 34.

Trinitarian and Christological Creed

485 (cap. 1) Secundum divinas Scripturas et doctrinam, quam a sanctis Patribus accepimus, Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum unius deitatis atque substantiae confitemur; in personarum diversitate trinitatem credentes, in divinitate unitatem praedicantes, nec personas confundimus nec substantiam separamus. Patrem a nullo factum vel genitum dicimus, Filium a Patre non factum sed genitum asserimus, Spiritum vero Sanctum nec creatum nec genitum, sed procedentem ex Patre et Filio profitemur, ipsum autem Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum Filium Dei et creatorem omnium, ex substantia Patris ante saecula genitum, descendisse

(Chap. 1) In conformity with the Sacred Scriptures and the teaching that we have received from the holy Fathers, we confess that the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit (are) of one unique divinity and substance; believing the Trinity in a diversity of Persons and proclaiming unity in the divinity, we neither confuse the Persons nor separate the substance. We say that the Father (was) neither made nor generated by anyone; we affirm that the Son (was) not made by the Father but generated; we truly profess that the Holy Spirit (was) neither created nor generated but proceeds from the Father and the Son. However, our Lord Jesus Christ himself, Son of God and creator of ultimo tempore pro redemptione mundi a Patre, qui numquam desiit esse cum Patre; incarnatus est enim ex Spiritu Sancto et sancta gloriosa Dei genitrice virgine Maria et natus ex ipsa solus; idem Christus Dominus Iesus unus de sancta Trinitate anima et carne perfectum sine peccato suscipiens hominem, manens quod erat, assumens quod non erat, aequalis Patri secundum divinitatem, minor Patri secundum humanitatem, habens in una persona duarum naturarum proprietates; naturae enim in illo duae, Deus et homo, non autem duo filii et dii duo, sed idem una persona in utraque natura; perferens passionem et mortem pro nostra salute, non in virtute divinitatis, sed in infirmitate humanitatis, descendit ad inferos, ut sanctos, qui ibidem tenebantur, erueret, devictoque mortis imperio resurrexit; assumptus deinde in caelos venturus est in futuro ad iudicium vivorum et mortuorum; cuius morte et sanguine mundati remissionem peccatorum consecuti sumus, resuscitandi ab eo in die novissima in ea qua nunc vivimus carne et in ea qua resurrexit idem Dominus forma, percepturi ab ipso, alii pro iustitiae meritis vitam aeternam, alii pro peccatis supplicii aeterni sententiam.

Haec est catholicae Ecclesiae fides, hanc confessionem conservamus atque tenemus, quam quisquis firmissime custodierit perpetuam salutem habebit.

On the Apocalypse of John as a Book of Sacred Scripture

(cap. 17) Apocalypsim librum multorum conciliorum auctoritas et synodica sanctorum praesulum Romanorum decreta Iohannis Evangelistae esse perscribunt et inter divinos libros recipiendum constituerunt. Et quia plurimi sunt, qui eius auctoritatem non recipiunt eumque in ecclesia Dei praedicare contemnunt, si quis eum deinceps aut non receperit aut a Pascha usque ad Pentecosten Missarum tempore in ecclesia non praedicaverit, excommunicationis sententiam habebit.

all things, was generated before all ages from the substance of the Father; and, in the latter times, for the redemption of the world, he descended from the Father, he who never ceased being with the Father; he truly became incarnate by the Holy Spirit and the Virgin Mary, the glorious holy Mother of God, and he alone was born from her. The same Lord Jesus Christ, one of the Holy Trinity, receiving the complete soul and flesh of man but without sin, remains what he was and assumes what he was not: equal to the Father in regard to divinity, less than the Father in regard to humanity, having in one Person the properties of the two natures; for in him (are) two natures, God and man, not, however, two sons and two gods, but the same Person in both natures; he underwent his Passion and death for our salvation, not in the power of divinity, but in the weakness of humanity; he descended into hell to free the holy ones being held there, and, after having conquered the rule and domination of death, he rose again, ascended then into heaven, and, in the future, he will come to judge the living and the dead. Cleansed by his death and blood, we have attained remission of sins in order to be resurrected by him in the last days in that flesh in which we now live and likewise in the form in which the Lord was resurrected: some receiving eternal life from him for merits of justice; others, the sentence of eternal punishment because of their sins.

This is the faith of the Catholic Church. This is the profession of faith we conserve and hold; and whoever will guard it with great firmness will have eternal salvation.

(Chap. 17) The authority of numerous councils and synodal decrees of holy Roman prelates ascribe the book of the Apocalypse to John, the Evangelist, and have established that it is to be accepted among the divine books. And since there are many who do not admit its authority and despise its proclamation in the Church of God, whoever henceforth will not accept it or proclaim it in church during the Mass from the time of Easter until Pentecost will receive the judgment of excommunication. 486

487: Letter Scripta fraternitatis to Patriarch Sergius of Constantinople, 634

This letter and that which follows led to posing the question of the orthodoxy of Honorius I, whom the Third Council of Constantinople, in session 13, March 28, 681, censured with an anathema (*550). The letter Scripta fraternitatis was read in session 12 of the council and the subsequent one in session 13, and that one in the original Latin text. It is disputed whether the text that has come down to us is the original Latin text (as judges H. Quentin, Note sur les originaux latins des lettres des papes Honorius, S. Agathon, et Léon II relatives au Monothélisme [Rome, 1920]) or a retranslation from the Greek. The Greek text of the letter is ed. by G. Kreuzer, Die Honoriusfrage . . ., Pápste und Papsttum 8 (Stuttgart, 1975), 32–46 (here, 33–42).

Ed.: MaC 11:538D–542D / HaC 3:1319B–1322E / PL 80:471B–473C (= letter 4). —Reg.: JR 2018.

The Two Wills and Operations in Christ

Duce Deo pervenimus usque ad mensuram rectae fidei, quam apostoli veritatis Scripturarum sanctarum funiculo extenderunt: Confitentes Dominum Iesum

With God as a leader, we shall arrive at the measure 487 of the right faith that the apostles of the truth have extended by means of the slender rope of the Sacred

Christum, mediatorem Dei et hominum [cf. 1 Tim 2:5], operatum divina media humanitate Verbo Dei naturaliter [gr.: καθ' ὑπόστασιν] unita, eundemque operatum humana ineffabiliter atque singulariter assumpta carne discrete [gr.: ἁδιαρέτως], inconfuse atque inconvertibiliter plena divinitate ..., ut nimirum stupenda mente mirabiliter manentibus utrumque naturarum differentiis cognoscatur [caro passibilis divinitati] uniri....

Unde et unam voluntatem fatemur Domini nostri Iesu Christi, quia profecto a divinitate assumpta est nostra natura, non culpa; illa profecto, quae ante peccatum creata est, non quae post praevaricationem vitata. Christus enim ... sine peccato conceptus de Spiritu Sancto etiam absque peccato est partus de sancta et immaculata Virgine Dei genitrice, nullum experiens contagium vitatae naturae.... Nam lex alia in membris, aut voluntas diversa non fuit vel contraria Salvatori, quia super legem natus est humanae condicionis....

Quia Dominus Iesus Christus, Filius ac Verbum Dei, “per quem facta sunt omnia” [Io 1:3], ipse sit unus operator divinitatis atque humanitatis, plenae sunt sacrae litterae luculentius demonstrantes. Utrum autem propter opera divinitatis et humanitatis, una an geminae operationes debeant derivatae dici vel intelligi, ad nos ista pertinere non debent; reliquentes ea grammaticis, qui solent parvulis exquisita derivando nomina venditare. Nos enim non unam operationem vel duas Dominum Iesum Christum eiusque Sanctum Spiritum sacris litteris percepimus, sed multiformiter cognovimus operatum.

488: Letter Scripta dilectissimi filii to Sergius of Constantinople, 634

According to C. Silva Tarouca, the letter is not authentic: Greg 12 (1931): 44–46.

Ed.: MaC 11:579D–582A / HaC 3:1351E–1354B / PL 80:475A–C (= letter 5). —Reg.: JR 2024, with additions.

The Two Operations in Christ

... Quantum ad dogma ecclesiasticum pertinet, quae tenere vel praedicare debemus propter simplicitatem hominum et amputandas inextricabiles quaestionum, ambages ..., non unam vel duas operationes in mediatore Dei et hominum definire, sed utrasque naturas in uno Christo unitate naturali copulatas, cum alterius communicatione operantes atque operatrices confiteri debemus, et divinam quidem, quae Dei sunt, operantem, et humanam, quae carnis sunt, exsequentem: non divise, neque confuse, aut convertibiliter, Dei naturam in hominem et humanam in Deum conversam edocentes: sed naturarum differentias integras confitentem....

Scriptures. Confessing that the Lord Jesus Christ, the mediator of God and of men [cf. 1 Tim 2:5], has performed divine (works) through the medium of the humanity naturally [Gr.: hypostatically] united to the Word of God and that the same one performed human works, because flesh had been assumed ineffably and particularly by the full divinity [Gr.: in-] distinctly, unconfusedly, and unchangeably ... so that truly it may be recognized that by a wonderful design [passible flesh] is united [to the Godhead] while the differences of both natures marvelously remain....

Hence, we confess one will of our Lord Jesus Christ also, because surely our nature, not our guilt, was assumed by the Godhead, that certainly which was created before sin, not that which was vitiated after the transgression. For Christ ... was conceived of the Holy Spirit without sin and was also born of the holy and immaculate Virgin Mother of God without sin, experiencing no contagion of our vitiated nature.... For there was no other law in his members or a will different from or contrary to the Savior, because he was born above the law of the human nature....

There are extensive works of sacred literature pointing out very clearly that the Lord Jesus Christ, the Son and the Word of God by whom all things were made [Jn 1:3], is himself the one operator of divinity and of humanity. But whether, on account of the works of divinity and of humanity, one or two operations ought to be said or understood to be derived, such (questions) should not concern us, leaving them to the grammarians, who are accustomed to sell to children words acquired by derivation. For in sacred literature we have perceived that the Lord Jesus Christ and his Holy Spirit (have) operated not one operation or two, but we have learned that (he) operated in many ways.

... So far as the doctrine of the Church is concerned and what we should hold and teach, because of the simplicity of men and in order to put an end to the inextricable obscurities of the controversies,... we ought not to define one or two operations in the Mediator between God and man, but confess that each of the two natures, joined by a unity of nature in the one Christ, operates and acts in common with the other, that is, the divine performs what is of God, and the human accomplishes what is of the flesh: teaching that, without division and without confusion or alteration, the nature of God is transferred into man and the human is transferred into Auferentes ergo . . . scandalum novellae adinventionis, non nos oportet unam vel duas operationes definientes praedicare; sed pro una, quam quidam dicunt, operatione oportet nos unum operatorem Christum Dominum in utrisque naturis veridice confiteri: et pro duabus operationibus, ablato geminae operationis vocabulo, ipsas potius duas naturas, id est divinitatis et carnis assumptae, in una persona unigeniti Dei Patris inconfuse, indivise, atque inconvertibiliter nobiscum praedicare propria operantes.

God, but confessing the complete differences of the natures. . . .

Eliminating, therefore, . . . the scandal of the new invention, we should not preach by defining one or two operations; but, in place of the one operation, which some affirm, we should, in truth, profess the one Christ, the Lord, who acts in both natures; and in place of the two operations, and doing away with the term double operation, one should, rather, proclaim with us that the two natures themselves, namely, that of the divinity and of the flesh assumed, operate according to what is proper to them in the one Person of the only begotten Son of God the Father, in a manner that is without confusion or division or change.

490-493: Sixth Synod of TOLEDO, begun January 9, 638

Ed.: Bruns 1:250f. / MaC 10:661D-663B / HaC 3:601D-603A (= chap. 1) / Hn § 180 / CdLuc 553₈-555₈ / CVis 233-35.

The Trinity and the Son of God, the Incarnate Redeemer

Credimus et confitemur sacratissimam et omnipotentissimam Trinitatem, Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum, unum Deum solum non solitarium, unius essentiae, virtutis, potestatis, maiestatis uniusque naturae, discretam inseparabiliter personis, indiscretam essentialiter substantia deitatis creatricem omnium creaturarum; Patrem ingenitum, increatum, fontem et originem totius divinitatis; Filium a Patre intemporaliter ante omnem creaturam sine initio genitum, non creatum; nam nec Pater umquam sine Filio nec Filius existit sine Patre, sed tamen Filius Deus de Patre Deo, non Pater Deus de Filio Deo, Pater Filii non Deus de Filio; ille autem Filius Patris et Deus de Patre, per omnia coaequalis Patri, Deus verus de Deo vero; Spiritum vero Sanctum neque genitum neque creatum, sed de Patre Filioque procedentem utriusque esse Spiritum; ac per hoc substantialiter unum sunt, quia et unus ab utroque procedit. In hac autem Trinitate tanta est unitas substantiae, ut pluralitate careat et aequalitatem teneat, nec minor in singulis quam in omnibus, nec maior in omnibus quam in singulis maneat personis.

We believe and profess that the most holy and omnipotent Trinity, the Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, 490 is one sole God but not solitary: of one essence, strength, power, majesty, and of one single nature, differentiated indivisibly in the Persons and essentially undifferentiated in the divine substance, the Creator of all creatures. The Father (is) ungenerated and uncreated; he is the source and origin of the entire Divinity; the Son (is) generated, not created, by the Father outside of time, before all creatures and without a beginning; for never was the Father without the Son nor the Son without the Father; but yet the Son is God from God the Father, (and) the Father is not God from God the Son; the Father of the Son is not God from the Son; this one (the Son), however, (is) Son of the Father and God from the Father, co-equal to the Father in all things, true God from true God. The Holy Spirit, however, is neither generated nor created, but the Spirit is of both, proceeding from the Father and the Son; and through this they are one in substance as there is but one who proceeds from both. In this Trinity, however, so great is the unity of substance that plurality is absent and equality is maintained; and there remains in the Persons no less in the singular than in the all; nor is there more in the all than in the singular.

Ex his igitur tribus divinitatis personis solum Filium fatemur ad redemptionem humani generis propter culparum debita, quae per inoboedientiam Adae originaliter et nostro libero arbitrio contraxeramus, resolvenda, a secreto Patris arcanoque prodiisse, et hominem sine peccato de sancta semper virgine Maria assumpsisse, ut idem Filius Dei Patris esset filius hominis, Deus perfectus et homo perfectus, ut homo et Deus esset unus Christus naturis in duabus, in persona

Therefore, of these three Persons of the Divinity, 491 we acknowledge that only the Son came forth from the secret and mystery of the Father for the redemption of the human race in order to cancel the debts of the sins that we contracted at the beginning through the disobedience of Adam and later by means of our own free will; and (he) assumed from the holy ever-virgin Mary the man without sin; and this same Son of God the Father is also the Son of man, perfect God and perfect man; the one unus, ne quaternitas trinitati accederet, si in Christo persona geminata esset. Ergo a Patre et Spiritu Sancto inseparabiliter discretus est persona, ab homine autem assumpto natura; item cum eodem homine unus exstat persona, cum Patre et Spiritu Sancto natura, ac sicut diximus, ex duabus naturis et una persona unus est Dominus noster Iesus Christus, in forma divinitatis aequalis Patri, in forma servi minor Patre; hinc enim est vox eius in Psalmo [21:11]: “De ventre matris meae Deus meus es tu”. Natus itaque a Deo sine matre, natus a virgine sine patre solus, “Verbum caro factum est et habitavit in nobis” [Jo 1:14]; et cum tota cooperata sit Trinitas formationem suscepti hominis, quoniam inseparabilia sunt opera Trinitatis, solus tamen accepit hominem in singularitate personae, non in unitate divinae naturae, in id quod est proprium Filii, non quod commune Trinitati; nam si naturam hominis Deique alteram in altera confudisset, tota Trinitas corpus assumpsisset, quoniam constat naturam Trinitatis esse unam, non tamen personam.

492 Hic igitur Dominus Iesus Christus missus a Patre, suscipiens quod non erat, nec amittens quod erat, inviolabilis de suo, mortalis de nostro, venit in hunc mundum peccatores salvos facere et credentes iustificare, faciensque mirabilia, traditus est propter delicta nostra, mortuus est propter expiationem nostram, resurrexit propter iustificationem nostram, cuius livore sanati [Is 53:5], cuius morte Deo Patri reconciliati, cuius resurrectione sumus resuscitati; quem etiam venturum in fine exspectamus saeculorum et cum resurrectione omnium aequissimo suo iudicio redditurum iustis praemia et impiis poenas.

493 Ecclesiam quoque catholicam credimus sine macula in opere et absque ruga [cf. Eph 5:23–27] in fide corpus eius esse, regnumque habituram cum Capite suo omnipotente Christo Iesu, postquam hoc corruptibile induerit incorruptionem et mortale immortalitatem [1 Cor 15:53] “ut sit Deus omnia in omnibus” [ib. 15:28].

Hac fide corda purificantur [cf. Act 15:9], hac haereses exstirpantur, in hac omnis Ecclesia collocata iam in regno caelesti et degens in saeculo praesenti gloriatur, et non est in alia fide salus: “Nec enim nomen aliud est sub caelo datum hominibus, in quo oporteat nos salvos fieri” [Act 4:12].

Christ is man and God in two natures and in one Person. Nor is there any resemblance to a “quaternity” in the Trinity if in Christ the Person was doubled. Therefore, he is inseparably distinct, by Person, from the Father and the Holy Spirit; from the humanity he assumed, however, (he is distinct) by nature. Likewise, with this humanity, he is one in Person; with the Father and the Holy Spirit he is (one) in nature; and, as we have said, our Lord Jesus Christ is the only one of two natures and in one Person: equal to the Father in the form of divinity, less than the Father in the form of a servant. It is on this basis (that we must understand) his words in the Psalm [22:11]: “From the womb of my mother, you are my God.” And in this manner, he alone is born of God without a mother and born of the Virgin Mary without a father. “The Word was made flesh and dwelt among us” [Jn 1:14]. Though the entire Trinity cooperated in the formation of his assumed humanity—since the works of the Trinity are inseparable—yet he alone, in the singularity of Person, not in the unity of the divine nature, became man; in this is something special to the Son, not something common to the Trinity: for if the nature of man had been confused with the nature of God, the entire Trinity would have assumed a body since, as we know, the nature of the Trinity is one, but not, however, the Person.

This Lord Jesus Christ, then, was sent by the Father; receiving what he was not without losing what he was, indestructible by virtue of what was his own, yet mortal in virtue of what was ours, he came into this world to save sinners and justify believers; and he performed miracles, was handed over because of our offenses, and died for the sake of our expiation; he rose again on behalf of our justification; (we are) healed by means of his stripes [Is 53:5], reconciled with God the Father by his death, resurrected by his Resurrection. We also await his return at the end of the ages; and, at the resurrection of all, with his most just judgment, rewards will be rendered to the righteous and punishments to the wicked.

We also believe that the Catholic Church, free of blemish in works and (free of) wrinkle [cf. Eph 5:23–27] in faith, is his body and that she will reign with her Head, the omnipotent Christ Jesus, after this corruptible reality has put on incorruptibility and mortality immortality [1 Cor 15:53] so that God will be all in all [ibid., 15:28].

By means of this faith, hearts are purified [cf. Acts 15:9] and heresies extinguished. In (this faith), the whole Church dwells already in the celestial kingdom, and her glory shines forth even in the present age; and there is salvation in no other faith: “For there is no other name given to men under heaven by means of which we are saved” [Acts 4:12].

SEVERINUS: May 28–August 2, 640

JOHN IV: December 24, 640–October 12, 642

496–498: Letter Dominus qui dixit to Emperor Constantine III (Defense of Pope Honorius), Spring 641

This is a retranslation from the Greek; the Latin original is lost.

Ed.: PL 80:603B–606B; 129:562C–565C (= Anastasius Bibliothecarius, Collectanea ad Iohannem diaconum) / MaC 10:683B–685E / HaC 3:611A–613C. —Reg.: CIPL 1729; JR 2042.

The Meaning of the Words of Honorius in Regard to the Two Wills

Sergius rev. mem. patriarcha praedicto sanctae record. Romanae urbis pontifici [Honorio] significavit, quod quidam in Redemptore nostro Domino Iesu Christo duas contrarias dicerent voluntates; quo praefatus papa comperto rescripsit ei, quia Salvator noster, sicut esset monadicus unus, ita et mirabiliter super omne genus hominum conceptus et natus esset. Ex sancta quoque ipsius incarnata dispensatione docebat, quia Redemptor noster, sicut esset Deus perfectus, ita esset et homo perfectus: ut, quam primus homo per praevaricationem amisit, sine aliquo peccato natus primae imaginis nobilem originem renovaret. Natus ergo est secundus Adam nullum habens nascendo vel cum hominibus conversando peccatum; etenim Verbum caro factum in similitudine carnis peccati omnia nostra suscepit, nullum reatus vitium ferens ex traduce praevaricationis exortum....

Ergo unus et solus est sine peccato mediator Dei et hominum homo Christus Iesus [cf. 1 Tim 2:5], qui in mortuis liber conceptus et natus est. In dispensatione itaque sanctae carnis suae duas numquam habuit contrarias voluntates, nec repugnavit voluntati mentis eius voluntas carnis ipsius....

Unde scientes, quod nullum in eo, cum nasceretur et conversaretur, esset omnino peccatum, decenter dicimus et veraciter confitemur, unam voluntatem in sanctae ipsius dispensationis humanitate, et non duas contrarias mentis et carnis praedicamus, secundum quod quidam haeretici velut in puro homine delirare noscuntur.

Secundum hunc igitur modum ... [Honorius papa Sergio] scripsisse dignoscitur, quia in Salvatore nostro duae voluntates contrariae, id est in membris ipsius [cf. Rm 7:23], penitus non consistunt, quoniam nihil vitii traxit ex praevaricatione primi hominis....

Sed ne quis nonnumquam minus intellegens [Honorium] reprehendat, quamobrem de humana tantum natura et non etiam de divina natura docere sciatur: ... debet qui super hoc ambigit scire, quoniam ad hoc facta est responsio ad iam dicti patriarchae interrogationem. Praeterea et hoc fieri solet, ut scilicet ubi est vulnus, ibi medicinale occurrat auxilium. Nam et beatus Apostolus

The patriarch Sergius, of venerable memory, indicated to the aforesaid pontiff of the city of Rome, [Honorius] of holy memory, that certain people were saying that there were two contrary wills in our Lord and Redeemer, Jesus Christ; after having learned this, the aforesaid pope wrote back to him that our Savior is a single unity, just as, too, he was thus conceived and born in a miraculous way beyond any human order. Likewise, because of his holy dispensation in the flesh, he taught that our Savior, as he was perfect God and perfect man, was born without sin so that he might restore the noble original state that the first man lost through his transgression. Therefore, the second Adam was born, without having any sin, either by birth or by contact with men; and, in fact, the incarnate Word, in likeness to sinful flesh, assumed all that is ours without bearing any guilt of the sin arising from the inheritance of the transgression....

The one and sole sinless mediator between God and men is thus the man Christ Jesus [cf. 1 Tim 2:5], who was conceived and born free among the dead. Thus in the dispensation of his sacred flesh, he never had two contrary wills, nor did the will of his flesh resist the will of his mind....

Therefore, knowing that there was no sin at all in him when he was born and lived, we fittingly say and truthfully confess one will in the humanity of his sacred dispensation; and we do not preach two contrary wills, of mind and of flesh, as in a pure man, in the manner certain heretics are known to rave.

In this way, therefore, ... [Pope Honorius] evidently wrote [to Sergio] that, in our Savior, two contrary wills do not exist at all, that is, in his members [cf. Rom 7:23], since he contracted no defect from the transgression of the first man....

But, in order that no one, devoid of understanding, might reprove [Honorius] for seeming to speak only of a human nature and not also of a divine nature, ... whoever disputes this should understand that the response was already made to the inquiry of the above-mentioned patriarch. Furthermore, of course, the help of medicine is usually applied to the place where the wound is located. For the blessed apostle likewise is known to have done this often, adapting himself to the custom of his hearers; sometimes, indeed, when teaching about the supreme nature (of Christ), he is completely silent about the human nature; but sometimes when speaking of his human economy, he does not touch on the mystery of his divinity....

hoc saepe fecisse dignoscitur, se secundum auditorum consuetudinem praeparans; et aliquando quidem de suprema natura docens, de humana penitus tacet; aliquando vero de humana dispensatione disputans, mysterium divinitatis eius non tangit....

Praedictus ergo decessor meus docens de mysterio incarnationis Christi dicebat, non fuisse in eo, sicut in nobis peccatoribus, mentis et carnis contrarias voluntates. Quod quidam ad proprium sensum convertentes, divinitatis eius et humanitatis unam eum voluntatem docuisse suspicati sunt, quod veritati omnimodis est contrarium.

Therefore, my aforementioned predecessor, while teaching on the mystery of Christ's Incarnation, said that there were not in him, as in us sinners, contrary wills of mind and flesh. Because certain people have transformed this to their own way of thinking, they have supposed that he taught one will of (Christ's) humanity and divinity, which is altogether contrary to the truth.

THEODORE I: November 24, 642–May 14, 649

MARTIN I: July 5 (?), 649–June 17, 653 (September 16, 655)

(He was sent into exile on June 17, 653, and he died on September 16, 655. While he was still living, Eugene I was elected his successor on August 10, 654.)

500–522: LATERAN Synod, October 5–31, 649

This synod was called in opposition to the Monothelites. The acts are conserved both in Latin and in Greek. The Latin text, though, is probably a translation from a Greek original that goes back essentially to Maximus the Confessor (R. Riedinger, in Paradosis 27 [Fribourg, 1982], 111–21). In what follows, both the Latin and the Greek texts are given. Serving as the exemplar for the important canons 10 and 11 was the formula coined in 645 by Maximus the Confessor in Disputatio cum Pyrrho Constantinopolitano: “The same one was endowed with the will and capacity to do what pertained to our salvation according to his two natures” (κατ’ ἄμφω ... τὰς αὐτοῦ φύσεις θελητικὸς ἦν ὁ αὐτὸς καὶ ἐνεργητικὸς τῆς ἡμῶν σωτηρίας; PG 91:289C; cf. also 320C).

Ed. [Creed; Canons]: ACOe, 2nd ser., 1:364–87 / MaC 10:1149DE 9 (Greek), 1150DE (Latin); 10:1151B–1162A / HaC 3:920E–921A, 919E; 922B–925D / Hn § 181 and p. 238n.

Session 5, October 31, 649

a. Profession of Faith

The Two Wills and Operations in Christ

[The profession of faith is almost a repetition of that of Chalcedon (*301f.); there is added, though, the following passage, which is inserted just after the words:] He is not split or divided into two Persons, but he is one and the same only begotten Son, God the Word, the Lord Jesus Christ / οὐκ εἰς δύο πρόσωπα μεριζόμενον ἢ διαιρούμενον, ἀλλ’ ἓνα καὶ τὸν αὐτὸν υἱὸν μονογενῆ Θεὸν λόγον, κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν, / non in duas personas partitum aut divisum, sed unum eundemque Filium et unigenitum Deum Verbum Dominum Iesum Christum:

[Versio latina]

et duas eiusdem sicuti naturas unitas inconfuse, ita et duas naturales voluntates, divinam et humanam, in approbatione perfecta et indiminuta eundem veraciter esse perfectum Deum et hominem perfectum secundum veritatem, καὶ τούτου δύο καθάπερ τὰς φύσεις ἠνωμένας ἀσυγχύτως, ἀδιαιρέτως, οὕτω καὶ δύο τὰ κατὰ φύσιν θελήματα θεῖόν τε καὶ ἀνθρώπινον, καὶ δύο τὰς φυσικὰς ἐνεργείας, θεῖαν τε καὶ ἀνθρωπίνην, εἰς

[Versia graeca]

[Latin version]

and as (we profess) his two natures united without confusion, so also (we profess) his two natural wills, divine and human, in order to confirm perfectly and absolutely that one and the same Jesus Christ, our Lord and God, is truly and as (we profess) his two natures united without confusion and separation, so also (we profess) his two natural wills, divine and human, and two natural operations, divine and human, in order to confirm perfectly and absolutely

[Greek version]

eundem atque unum
Dominum nostrum et Deum Iesum Christum, utpote volentem et operan-tem divine et humane nostram salutem,

πίστωσιν ἐντελεῖ καὶ ἀπαράλειπτον, τοῦ, Θεὸν φύσει τέλειον ἀληθῶς, μόνης δίχα τῆς ἁμαρτίας,
τὸν αὐτὸν καὶ ἓνα κύριον ἡμῶν καὶ Θεὸν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν ὑπάρχειν, ὡς θέλοντά τε καὶ ἐνεργο-ῦντα θεϊκῶς ἅμα καὶ ἀνθρωπικῶς τὴν ἡμῶν σωτηρίαν, perfect God and truly perfect man inasmuch as he willed and worked out our salvation in a divine and human manner, that the one and the same Jesus Christ, our Lord and God, is truly perfect

God according to his nature inasmuch as, with the sole exception of sin,
he willed and worked out our salvation in a manner at once both divine and human,

[after which the profession of faith of Chalcedon continues:] as formerly the prophets ... about him ... / καθάπερ ἄνωθεν οἱ προφῆται περὶ αὐτοῦ ... / sicut superius prophetae de eo...

b. Canons

Condemnation of Errors concerning the Trinity and Christ

Can. 1. Si quis secundum sanctos Patres non confitetur proprie et veraciter Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum, trinitatem in unitate et unitatem in trinitate, hoc est, unum Deum in tribus subsistentiis consubstantialibus et aequalis gloriae, unam eandemque deitatem, naturam, substantiam, virtutem, potentiam, regnum, imperium, voluntatem, operationem, inconditam, sine initio, incomprehensibilem, immutabilem, creatricem omnium et protectricem, condemnatus sit.

α'. Εἴ τις οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ κατὰ τοὺς ἁγίους πατέρας κυρίως καὶ ἀληθῶς πατέρα καὶ υἱὸν καὶ πνεῦμα ἅγιον, τριάδα ἐν μονάδι, καὶ μονάδα ἐν τριάδι, τουτέστιν ἓνα Θεὸν ἐν τρισὶν ὑποστάσεσιν ὁμοουσίους καὶ ὁμοδόξους, μίαν καὶ τὴν αὐτὴν τῶν τριῶν θεότητα, φύσιν, οὐσίαν, δύναμιν, κυριότητα, βασιλείαν, ἐξουσίαν, θέλησιν, ἐνέργειαν, δεσποτείαν, ἄκτιστον, ἀναρχον, ἄπειρον, ἀναλλοίωτον, δημιουργικὴν τῶν ὄντων, καὶ προνοητικὴν, καὶ συνεκτικὴν, εἴη κατάκριτος.

Can. 1. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, Trinity in unity and unity in Trinity, that is, one God in three consubstantial hypostases equal in glory, and for the three one and the same Godhead, nature, substance, strength, power, kingship, authority, will, operation, uncreated, without beginning, incomprehensible, immutable, creator, and protector of all things, let him be condemned.

Can. 1. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, Trinity in unity and unity in Trinity, that is, one God in three consubstantial hypostases equal in glory, and for the three one and the same Godhead, nature, essence, power, lordship, kingship, authority, will, operation, and sovereignty; uncreated, without beginning, infinite, immutable, creator of all beings and holding them together in his providence, let him be condemned.

501

Can. 2. Si quis secundum sanctos Patres non confitetur proprie et secundum veritatem ipsum unum sanctae et consubstantialis et venerandae Trinitatis Deum Verbum e caelo descendisse, et incarnatum ex Spiritu Sancto et Maria semper virgine, et hominem factum, crucifixum carne, propter nos sponte passum sepultumque, et resurrexisse tertia die, et ascendisse in caelos, atque sedentem in β'. Εἴ τις οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ κατὰ τοὺς ἁγίους πατέρας κυρίως καὶ ἀληθῶς αὐτὸν τὸν ἓνα τῆς ἁγίας καὶ ὁμοουσίου καὶ προσκυνητῆς τριάδος Θεὸν λόγον κατελθόντα ἐκ τῶν οὐρανῶν, καὶ σαρκωθέντα ἐκ πνεύματος ἁγίου, καὶ Μαρίας τῆς παναγίας ἀειπαρθένου καὶ ἐνανθρωπήσαντα, σταυρωθέντα τε καὶ σαρκὶ δι' ἡμᾶς καὶ τὴν ἡμῶν σωτηρίαν ἐκουσίως, καὶ παθόντα καὶ ταφέντα

Can. 2. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly that God the Word himself, one of the holy, consubstantial, and adorable Trinity, descended from heaven and became incarnate from the Holy Spirit and Mary ever virgin and was made man, was crucified in the flesh, of his own free will suffered for us and was buried and rose again on the third day and ascended

Can. 2. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly that God the Word himself, one of the holy, consubstantial, and adorable Trinity, descended from heaven, became incarnate from the Holy Spirit and from the most holy Mary ever virgin and was made man; that he was crucified and of his own free will suffered in the flesh for us and our salvation and dextera Patris, et venturum iterum cum gloria paterna cum assumpta ab eo atque animata intellectualiter carne eius, iudicare vivos et mortuos, condemnatus sit.

502

καὶ ἀναστάντα τῇ τρίτῃ ἡμέρᾳ, καὶ ἀνεληθόντα εἰς τοὺς οὐρανοὺς, καὶ καθήμενον ἐν δεξιᾷ τοῦ πατρὸς, καὶ ἦξοντα πάλιν σὺν τῇ πατρικῇ αὐτοῦ δόξῃ, μεθ' ἧς προσείληφε νοερώς ἐψυχωμένης σαρκὸς κρῖναι ζῶντας καὶ νεκρούς, εἴη κατάκριτος.

into heaven and sits at the right hand of the Father and will, in the glory of the Father, come again with his flesh assumed by him and intellectually animated, to judge the living and the dead, let him be condemned.

was buried, that he rose again on the third day and ascended into heaven, that he is seated at the right hand of the Father and will, in the glory of the Father, come again with the flesh assumed by him and intellectually animated, to judge the living and the dead, let him be condemned.

503 Can. 3. Si quis secundum sanctos Patres non confitetur proprie et secundum veritatem Dei genitricem sanctam semperque virginem et immaculatam Mariam, utpote ipsum Deum Verbum specialiter et veraciter, qui a Deo Patre ante omnia saecula natus est, in ultimis saeculorum absque semine concepisse ex Spiritu Sancto, et incorruptibiliter eam genuisse, indissolubili permanente et post partum eiusdem virginitate, condemnatus sit.

γ'. Εἴ τις οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ κατὰ τοὺς ἁγίους πατέρας κυρίως καὶ ἀληθῶς θεοτόκον τὴν ἁγίαν ἀειπάρθενον ἄχραντον Μαρίαν ὡς αὐτὸν κυρίως καὶ ἀληθῶς τὸν ἐκ Θεοῦ πατρὸς γεννηθέντα πρὸ πάντων τῶν αἰώνων Θεὸν λόγον ἐπ' ἐσχάτων τῶν αἰώνων ἀσπόρως συλλαβοῦσαν ἐκ πνεύματος ἁγίου, καὶ ἀφθόρως γεννήσασαν ἀλύτου μεινάσης αὐτῆς καὶ μετὰ τόκον τῆς παρθενίας, εἴη κατάκριτος.

Can. 3 If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly that holy Mary, ever virgin and immaculate, is Mother of God, since she conceived really and truly of the Holy Spirit, without seed, God the Word himself, who, before all ages, was born of God the Father, and that, in the latter age, she gave birth to him without corruption, her virginity remaining equally inviolate after his birth, let him be condemned.

Can. 3. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly that holy Mary, ever virgin and immaculate, is Mother of God, since in this latter age she conceived really and truly, without human seed from the Holy Spirit, God the Word himself, who before the ages was born of God the Father, and gave birth to him without corruption, her virginity remaining equally inviolate after his birth, let him be condemned.

504 Can. 4. Si quis secundum sanctos Patres non confitetur proprie et secundum veritatem ipsius et unius Domini nostri et Dei Iesu Christi duas natiuitates, tam ante saecula ex Deo et Patre incorporaliter et sempiternaliter, quamque de sancta virgine semper Dei genitrice Maria corporaliter in ultimis saeculorum, atque unum eundemque Dominum nostrum et Deum Iesum Christum consubstantialem Deo et Patri secundum deitatem, et consubstantialem homini et matri secundum humanitatem, atque eundem passibilem carne, et impassibilem deitate, δ'. Εἴ τις οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ κατὰ τοὺς ἁγίους πατέρας κυρίως καὶ ἀληθῶς τοῦ αὐτοῦ καὶ ἑνὸς κυρίου ἡμῶν καὶ Θεοῦ Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ τὰς δύο γεννήσεις ὑπάρχειν, τὴν τε πρὸ αἰώνων ἐκ τοῦ Θεοῦ καὶ πατρὸς ἀσωμάτως, καὶ αἰδίως, καὶ τὴν ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας ἀειπαρθένου Μαρίας σαρκικῶς ἐπ' ἐσχάτων τῶν αἰώνων καὶ τὸν αὐτὸν καὶ ἕνα κύριον ἡμῶν καὶ Θεὸν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν ὁμοούσιον τῷ Θεῷ καὶ πατρὶ κατὰ τὴν θεότητα, καὶ ὁμοούσιον τῇ παρθένῳ καὶ μητρὶ κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα, καὶ τὸν αὐτὸν παθητὸν σαρκί, ἀπαθῆ θεότητι,

Can. 4. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly two births of our one Lord and God Jesus Christ, one incorporeal and eternal from God the Father before all ages, the other corporeal and at the end of the ages from the holy, ever-virgin, Mother of God, Mary, in this latter age, and (who does not confess) one and the same Jesus Christ, our Lord and God, consubstantial with the Father as to his divinity and consubstantial with man and the Mother as to his humanity, subject to suffering in the flesh while he is impassible in his divinity, limited in his

Can. 4. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly two births of our one Lord Jesus Christ himself, one incorporeal and eternal from God the Father before all ages, the other, corporeal and in this latter age, from holy Mary, ever virgin, Mother of God; and (who does not confess) one and the same Jesus Christ our Lord and God, consubstantial with the Father as to his divinity, consubstantial with the Virgin and Mother as to his humanity, subject to suffering in his flesh while he is impassible in his divinity, limited in his flesh while he is circumscriptum corpore, incircumscriptum deitate, eundem inconditum et conditum, terrenum et caelestem, visibilem et intellegibilem, capabilem et incapabilem, ut toto homine eodemque et Deo totus homo reformaretur, qui sub peccato cecidit, condemnatus sit.

περιγραπτόν σώματι, ἀπερίγραπτον πνεύματι, τὸν αὐτὸν ἄκτιστον καὶ κτιστόν, ἐπίγειον καὶ οὐράνιον, ὁρώμενον καὶ νοούμενον, χωρητόν καὶ ἀχώρητον, ἵνα ὅλων ἀνθρώπων τῷ αὐτῷ καὶ Θεῷ, ὅλος ἄνθρωπος ἀναπλασθῇ ὁ πεσὼν ὑπὸ τὴν ἁμαρτίαν, εἴη κατάκριτος.

flesh, while he is unlimited in his divinity, at once uncreated and created, earthly and heavenly, visible and intellectually perceptible, comprehensible and incomprehensible, so that all mankind, which had fallen prey to sin, might be restored by one who is fully man and God at the same time, let him be condemned.

unlimited in his spirit, at once created and uncreated, earthly and heavenly, visible and intellectually perceptible, comprehensible and incomprehensible, so that all mankind, which had fallen prey to sin, might be restored by one who is fully man and God at the same time, let him be condemned.

Can. 5. Si quis secundum sanctos Patres non confitetur proprie et secundum veritatem unam naturam Dei Verbi incarnatam, per hoc quod incarnata dicitur nostra substantia perfecte in Christo Deo et indimnitate, absque tantummodo peccato significata, condemnatus sit.

ε'. Εἴ τις οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ κατὰ τοὺς ἁγίους πατέρας κυρίως καὶ ἀληθῶς μίαν φύσιν τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγου σεσαρκωμένην, διὰ τοῦ σεσαρκωμένην εἰπεῖν, τῆς καθ' ἡμᾶς οὐσίας ἐντελῶς ἐν αὐτῷ Χριστῷ τῷ Θεῷ, καὶ ἀπαρλείπτως, μόνης δίχα τῆς ἁμαρτίας σημαίνειν, εἴη κατάκριτος.

Can. 5. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly one incarnate nature of God the Word in this way, that our substance has become incarnate perfectly and absolutely in Christ God, only without sin, let him be condemned.

Can. 5. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly "one incarnate nature of God the Word", with "incarnate" meaning that our substance is incarnate perfectly and absolutely in Christ, who is God, sin only being excepted, let him be condemned.

505

Can. 6. Si quis secundum sanctos Patres non confitetur proprie et secundum veritatem, ex duabus et in duabus naturis substantialiter unitis inconfuse et indivise unum eundemque esse Dominum et Deum Iesum Christum, condemnatus sit.

ζ'. Εἴ τις οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ κατὰ τοὺς ἁγίους πατέρας κυρίως καὶ ἀληθῶς ἐκ δύο φύσεων, θεότητος καὶ ἀνθρωπότητος, καὶ ἐν δυοῖς φύσεσι, θεότητι καὶ ἀνθρωπότητι, καθ' ὑπόστασιν ἡνωμένας ἀσυγχύτως καὶ ἀδιαιρέτως τὸν αὐτὸν καὶ ἕνα κύριον ἡμῶν καὶ Θεὸν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν ὑπάρχειν, εἴη κατάκριτος.

Can. 6. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly that one and the same Lord and God, Jesus Christ, is from two natures and in two natures substantially united without confusion or division, let him be condemned.

Can. 6. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly that one and the same Lord and God, Jesus Christ, is from two natures, the divinity and the humanity, and in two natures, the divinity and the humanity, united according to the hypostasis without confusion or division, let him be condemned.

506

Can. 7. Si quis secundum sanctos Patres non confitetur proprie et secundum veritatem substantialem differentiam naturarum inconfuse et indivise in eo salvatam, condemnatus sit.

ζ'. Εἴ τις οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ κατὰ τοὺς ἁγίους πατέρας κυρίως καὶ ἀληθῶς τὴν καθ' οὐσίαν τῶν φύσεων διαφορὰν μετὰ τὴν ἀφραστον ἔνωσιν ἐξ ὧν ὁ εἷς καὶ μόνος ὑπάρχει Χριστὸς ἀσυγχύτως καὶ ἀδιαιρέτως ἐν αὐτῷ σωζομένην, εἴη κατάκριτος.

Can. 7. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly that the substantial distinction of the natures is preserved in him, without confusion or division, let him be condemned.

Can. 7. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly that, after their ineffable union by which the one and only Christ exists, the essential distinction of the natures is preserved in him without confusion or division, let him be condemned.

507

- 508 Can. 8. Si quis secundum sanctos Patres non confitetur proprie et secundum veritatem naturarum substantialem unionem indivise et inconfuse in eo cognitam, condemnatus sit.
- η'. Εἴ τις οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ κατὰ τοὺς ἁγίους πατέρας κυρίως καὶ ἀληθῶς τὴν κατὰ σύνθεσιν ἥτοι καθ' ὑπόστασιν τῶν φύσεων ἔνωσιν ἐξ ὧν ὁ εἷς καὶ μόνος ὑπάρχει Χριστὸς ἀδιαιρέτως ἐν αὐτῷ καὶ ἀσυγχύτως γνωριζομένην, εἴη κατάκριτος.
- Can. 8. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly that the substantial union of the natures is recognized in him without confusion or division, let him be condemned.
- Can. 8. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly that the union of the natures by synthesis, that is, according to the hypostasis, by which the one and only Christ exists, is recognized in him without confusion or division, let him be condemned.
- 509 Can. 9. Si quis secundum sanctos Patres non confitetur proprie et secundum veritatem naturales proprietates deitatis eius et humanitatis indimute in eo et sine deminoratione salvatas, condemnatus sit.
- θ'. Εἴ τις οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ κατὰ τοὺς ἁγίους πατέρας κυρίως καὶ ἀληθῶς τὰς φυσικὰς ιδιότητας τῆς θεότητος τοῦ Χριστοῦ καὶ τῆς ἀνθρωπότητος ἀνελλιπῶς ἐν αὐτῷ καὶ ἀμειώτως σωζομένης εἰς πίστῳσιν ἀληθῆ, τοῦ, τὸν αὐτὸν Θεὸν τέλειον καὶ ἄνθρωπον τέλειον κατὰ φύσιν ὑπάρχειν, εἴη κατάκριτος.
- Can. 9. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly that the natural properties of his divinity and of his humanity are preserved unimpaired and without diminution in him, let him be condemned.
- Can. 9. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly that the natural properties of the divinity of Christ and of his humanity are fully preserved in him, unimpaired and undiminished, by which is truly confirmed the fact that the same is perfect God and perfect man by nature, let him be condemned.
- 510 Can. 10. Si quis secundum sanctos Patres non confitetur proprie et secundum veritatem duas unius eiusdemque Christi Dei nostri voluntates cohaerenter unitas, divinam et humanam, ex hoc quod per utramque eius naturam voluntarius naturaliter idem consistit nostrae salutis, condemnatus sit.
- ι'. Εἴ τις οὐκ ὁμολογεῖ κατὰ τοὺς ἁγίους πατέρας κυρίως καὶ ἀληθῶς, δύο τοῦ αὐτοῦ καὶ ἐνὸς Χριστοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ τὰ θελήματα συμφυῶς ἠνωμένα θεῖόν τε καὶ ἀνθρώπινον διὰ τὸ καθ' ἑκατέραν αὐτοῦ φύσιν θελητικὸν κατὰ φύσιν τὸν αὐτὸν ὑπάρχειν τῆς ἡμῶν σωτηρίας, εἴη κατάκριτος.
- Can. 10. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly two wills, divine and human, intimately united in one and the same Christ, our God, since it is one and the same who, by each of his natures, naturally wills our salvation, let him be condemned.
- Can. 10. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly two wills, the divine and the human, intimately united in one and the same Christ God, since it is one and the same who, by each of his two natures, naturally wills our salvation, let him be condemned.
- 511 Can. 11. Si quis secundum sanctos Patres non confitetur proprie et secundum veritatem duas unius eiusdemque Christi Dei nostri operationes cohaerenter unitas, divinam et humanam, ab eo quod per utramque eius naturam operator naturaliter idem exsistit nostrae salutis, condemnatus sit.
- ια'. Εἴ τις οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ κατὰ τοὺς ἁγίους πατέρας κυρίως καὶ ἀληθῶς δύο τοῦ αὐτοῦ καὶ ἐνὸς Χριστοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ τὰς ἐνεργείας συμφυῶς ἠνωμένας, θεῖαν καὶ ἀνθρωπίνην διὰ τὸ καθ' ἑκατέραν αὐτοῦ φύσιν ἐνεργητικὸν τὸν αὐτὸν ὑπάρχειν τῆς σωτηρίας ἡμῶν, εἴη κατάκριτος.
- Can. 11. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly two operations, the divine and the human, intimately united in one and the same Christ our God, since through each of his two natures he naturally is one and the same operator of our salvation, let him be condemned.
- Can. 11. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly two operations, the divine and the human, intimately united in one and the same Christ God, since it is one and the same who through each of his two natures works out our salvation, let him be condemned.

Can. 12. Si quis secundum scelerosos haereticos unam Christi Dei nostri voluntatem confitetur et unam operationem, in peremptionem sanctorum Patrum confessionis, et abnegationem eiusdem Salvatoris nostri dispensationis, condemnatus sit.

Can. 13. Si quis secundum scelerosos haereticos in Christo Deo in unitate substantialiter salvatis et a sanctis Patribus nostris pie praedicatis duabus voluntatibus et duabus operationibus, divina et humana, contra doctrinam Patrum, et unam voluntatem atque unam operationem confitetur, condemnatus sit.

Can. 14. Si quis secundum scelerosos haereticos cum una voluntate et una operatione, quae ab haereticis impie confitetur, et duas voluntates pariterque et operationes, hoc est, divinam et humanam, quae in ipso Christo Deo in unitate salvantur, et a sanctis Patribus orthodoxe in ipso praedicantur, denegat et respuit, condemnatus sit.

Can. 15. Si quis secundum scelerosos haereticos devirilem operationem, quod Graeci dicunt θεαν-ιβ'. Εἴ τις ὁμολογεῖ κατὰ τοὺς ἑναγεῖς αἰρετικούς τῆς τε θεότητος καὶ τῆς ἀνθρωπότητος τοῦ Χριστοῦ μίαν φύσιν, ἢ μίαν θέλησιν, ἢ μίαν ἐνέργειαν, εἰς ἀνατροπὴν μὲν τῆς τῶν ἁγίων πατρῶν ὁμολογίας, ἀθέτησιν δὲ τῆς αὐτοῦ τοῦ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν οἰκονομίας, εἴη κατάκριτος.

ιγ'. Εἴ τις κατὰ τοὺς ἑναγεῖς αἰρετικούς ταῖς ἐπὶ Χριστοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ καθ' ἕνωσιν οὐσιωδῶς σωζομέναις, καὶ τοῖς ἁγίοις πατράσιν ἡμῶν εὐσεβῶς κηρυττομέναις δύο θελήσει καὶ δύο ἐνεργείαις, θεῖα τε καὶ ἀνθρωπίνη, ἐπιδιατάττεται συνομολογεῖν αὐταῖς παρὰ τὴν ἐκείνων διδασκαλίαν καὶ μίαν θέλησιν, καὶ μίαν ἐνέργειαν, εἴη κατάκριτος.

ιδ'. Εἴ τις κατὰ τοὺς ἑναγεῖς αἰρετικούς τῇ μιᾷ θελήσει καὶ τῇ μιᾷ ἐνεργείᾳ τῇ παρ' αὐτῶν τῶν αἰρετικῶν ἐπὶ Χριστοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ δυσσεβῶς ὁμολογουμένη, καὶ τὰς δύο θελήσεις καὶ τὰς δύο ἐνεργείας, τὴν θεῖαν καὶ τὴν ἀνθρωπίνην, τὰς ἐπ' αὐτοῦ Χριστοῦ καὶ τοῦ Θεοῦ καθ' ἕνωσιν φυσικῶς σωζομένας, καὶ ἐκ τῶν ἁγίων πατρῶν ὀρθόδοξως ἐπ' αὐτοῦ κηρυττομένας συνεξαρνεῖται καὶ συναποβάλλεται, εἴη κατάκριτος.

ιε'. Εἴ τις κατὰ τοὺς ἑναγεῖς αἰρετικούς τὴν θεανδρικήν ἐνέργειαν, μίαν ἀνοήτως ἐκδέχεται,

Can. 12. If anyone, following the impious heretics, confesses one will and one operation of Christ our God, destroying thereby what the holy Fathers confess and denying the same dispensation of our Savior, let him be condemned.

Can. 13. If anyone, following the impious heretics, against the doctrine of the Fathers, confesses also one will and one operation, although two wills and two operations, divine and human, have been substantially preserved in union in Christ God and have been piously preached by our holy Fathers, let him be condemned.

Can. 14. If anyone, following the impious heretics, confesses their profane doctrine of one will and one operation and denies and rejects both two wills and in like manner (two) operations, that is, the divine and the human, preserved in unity in the very Christ God, as is professed about him by the holy Fathers according to orthodox doctrine, let him be condemned.

Can. 15. If anyone, following the impious heretics, foolishly admits the divine-human operation

Can. 12. If anyone, following the impious heretics, confesses only one nature or one will or one operation of divinity and humanity in the Christ, thereby reversing what the holy Fathers confess and denying the dispensation of our Savior, let him be condemned.

Can. 13. If anyone, following the impious heretics, against the two wills and operations, the divine and the human, which have been, in Christ God, substantially preserved in union and piously proclaimed to us by our holy Fathers, should require, with the (heretics) and contrary to the doctrine of the holy Fathers, profession of only one will and only one operation, let him be condemned.

Can. 14. If anyone, following the infamous heretics, confesses their profane doctrine of one will and one operation in the Christ God and denies and rejects the two wills and two operations, the divine and the human, preserved in unity, according to nature, in the Christ God, as is professed about him by the holy Fathers according to orthodox doctrine, let him be condemned.

Can. 15. If anyone, following the impious heretics, foolishly admits the divine-human operation δορκήν, unam operationem insipienter suscipit, non autem duplicem esse confitetur secundum sanctos Patres, hoc est divinam et humanam, aut ipsam deivirilis quae posita est, novam vocabuli dictionem unius esse designativam, sed non utriusque mirificae et gloriosae unionis demonstrativam, condemnatus sit.

ἀλλ' οὐχὶ διπλὴν αὐτὴν ὁμολογεῖ κατὰ τοὺς ἁγίους πατέρας, τουτέστι, θεῖαν καὶ ἀνθρωπίνην, ἢ τὴν ἐπ' αὐτῇ τῇ θεανδρικῇ καινὴν ῥῆσιν, μιᾶς εἶναι σημαντικὴν ἐνεργείας, ἀλλ' οὐχὶ τῆς ἑκατέρων παραδόξου καὶ ὑπερφυοῦς ἐνώσεως δηλωτικὴν, εἴη κατάκριτος.

that the Greeks call “theandric” (θεανδρικῇ) as being one operation but does not confess, following the holy Fathers, that it is twofold, that is, divine and human, or that the new appellation “divine-human” that has been introduced designates one (operation), but does not rather manifest the wonderful and glorious union of both, let him be condemned.

that the Greeks call theandric as being one operation, but does not confess, following the holy Fathers, that it is twofold, that is, divine and human, or (if he professes) that the new appellation “theandric” that has been introduced designates one operation only but does not rather manifest the wonderful and glorious union of the two operations, let him be condemned.

516 Can. 16. Si quis secundum scelerosos haereticos in peremptione salvatis in Christo Deo essentialiter in unitione, et sanctis Patribus pie praedicatis duabus voluntatibus et duabus operationibus, hoc est, divina et humana, dissensiones et divisiones insipienter mysterio dispensationis eius innectit, et propterea evangelicas et apostolicas de eodem Salvatore voces non uni eidemque personae et essentialiter tribuit eidem ipsi Domino et Deo nostro Iesu Christo secundum beatum Cyrillum, ut ostendatur Deus esse et homo idem naturaliter, condemnatus sit.

ἰς'. Εἴ τις κατὰ τοὺς ἐναγεῖς αἰρετικούς ἐπ' ἀναίρεσει τῶν ἐπὶ Χριστοῦ τοῦ Θεοῦ καθ' ἕνωσιν σωζομένων οὐσωδῶς καὶ τοῖς ἁγίοις πατράσιν εὐσεβῶς κηρυττομένων, δύο θελήσεων καὶ δύο ἐνεργειῶν, θείας καὶ ἀνθρωπίνης, διχονοίας καὶ διαιρέσεις ἀφρόνως τῷ κατ' αὐτῶν μυστηρίῳ προστρίβεται, καὶ διὰ τοῦτο τὰς εὐαγγελικὰς καὶ ἀποστολικὰς περὶ αὐτοῦ τοῦ σωτῆρος φωνάς, οὐχ ἐνὶ καὶ τῷ αὐτῷ τῷ κυρίῳ ἡμῶν καὶ Θεῷ Ἰησοῦ Χριστῷ κατὰ Κύριλλον τὸν ἀοίδιμον εἰς πίστῳσιν τοῦ Θεοῦ εἶναι φύσει καὶ ἄνθρωπον ἀληθῶς τὸν αὐτόν, εἴη κατάκριτος.

Can. 16. If anyone, following the impious heretics who seek to destroy the two wills and the two operations, divine and human, preserved essentially in unity in Christ God and piously proclaimed by the holy Fathers, foolishly connects opposition and division with the mystery of his dispensation and for this reason does not attribute the evangelical and apostolic words about the same Savior to one and the same person and essentially to the same Lord and God, our Jesus Christ, following blessed Cyril, so that he is shown to be by nature God and likewise man, let him be condemned.

Can. 16. If anyone, following the impious heretics who seek to destroy the two wills and the two operations, the divine and the human, preserved essentially in unity in Christ God and piously proclaimed by the holy Fathers, foolishly introduces oppositions and divisions into the mystery and for this reason does not refer the evangelical and apostolic sayings concerning the Savior to the same Jesus Christ our Lord and God following the illustrious Cyril in order to confirm the fact that one and the same is by nature truly God and truly man, let him be condemned.

517 Can. 17. Si quis secundum sanctos Patres non confitetur proprie et secundum veritatem omnia, quae tradita sunt et praedicata sanctae catholicae et apostolicae Dei Ecclesiae, perindeque a sanctis Patribus et venerandis universalibus quinque Conciliis usque ad unum apicem verbo et mente, condemnatus sit.

ἰς'. Εἴ τις οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ κατὰ τοὺς ἁγίους πατέρας κυρίως καὶ ἀληθῶς πάντα τὰ παραδοθέντα καὶ κηρυχθέντα τῇ ἀγίᾳ τοῦ Θεοῦ καθολικῇ καὶ ἀποστολικῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ παρ' αὐτῶν τε τῶν ἁγίων πατρῶν, καὶ τῶν ἐγκρίτων οἰκουμενικῶν πέντε συνόδων, ἄχρι μιᾶς κεραίας λόγῳ καὶ διανοίᾳ, εἴη κατάκριτος.

Can. 17. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly, in word and mind, even to the last point, all that has been handed down and proclaimed to the holy, catholic, and apostolic Church of God by the holy Fathers and by the five venerable universal councils, let him be condemned.

Can. 17. If anyone does not, following the holy Fathers, confess properly and truly, in word and mind, to the last point, all that has been handed down and proclaimed to the holy, catholic, and apostolic Church of God by the holy Fathers and by the five venerable ecumenical councils, let him be condemned.

Can. 18. Si quis secundum sanctos Patres consonanter nobis pariterque fide non respuit et anathematizat anima et ore omnes, quos respuit et anathematizat nefandissimos haereticos cum omnibus impiis eorum conscriptis usque ad unum apicem sancta Dei Ecclesia catholica et apostolica, hoc est, sanctae et universales quinque Synodi et consonanter omnes probabiles Ecclesiae Patres, —id est, Sabellium, Arium, Eunomium, Macedonium, Apollinarem, Polemonem, Eutychem, Dioscurum, Timotheum Aelurum, Severum, Theodosium, Colluthum, Themistium, Paulum Samosatenum, Diodorum, Theodorum, Nestorium, Theodulum Persam, Origenem, Didymum, Evagrium, et compendiose omnes reliquos haereticos ...¹—si quis igitur ... impiissima haereseos illorum dogmata et ea, quae pro illis aut in definitione eorum a quolibet impie conscripta sunt, et denominatos haereticos, Theodorum dicimus, Cyrum et Sergium, Pyrrhum et Paulum, non respuit et anathematizat, ... aut si quis aliquem de his, qui ab illis vel similibus eorum ... depositi sunt aut condemnati, utpote similia eis minime credentem, sed

τη. Εἴ τις κατὰ τοὺς ἁγίους πατέρας συμφώνως ἡμῖν καὶ ὁμοδόξως οὐκ ἀποβάλλεται καὶ ἀναθεματίζει ψυχῆ τε καὶ στόματι πάντας, οὓς ἀποβάλλεται καὶ ἀναθεματίζει δυσωνύμους αἵρετικοὺς μετὰ πάντων τῶν συγγραμμάτων ἄχρι μιᾶς κεραιᾶς ἢ ἁγία τοῦ Θεοῦ καθολικὴ καὶ ἀποστολικὴ ἐκκλησία, ταῦτόν δὲ λέγειν αἱ ἅγιοι καὶ οἰκουμενικαὶ πέντε σύνοδοι, καὶ αὐτοὶ πάντες ὁμόφρονες, οἱ ἔγκριτοι τῆς ἐκκλησίας πατέρες,

—ἦτοι Σαβέλλιον, Ἄρειον, Εὐνόμιον, Μακεδόنيον, Ἀπολλινάριον, Πολέμωνα, Εὐτυχεᾶ, Διόσκορον, Τιμόθεον τὸν Αἰλουρον, Σεβήρον, Θεόδωσον, Κόλλουθον, Θεμιστιον, Παῦλον τὸν Σαμοσατέα, Διόδωρον, Θεόδωρον, Νεστόριον, Θεόδουλον τὸν Πέρσην, Ὠριγένην, Δίδυμον, Εὐάγριον, καὶ ἅπλως τοὺς ἄλλους ἅπαντας αἵρετικούς ...¹—

εἴ τις οὖν ... τὰ δυσσεβῆ τῆς αὐτῶν αἵρέσεως δόγματα, καὶ τὰ ὑπὲρ αὐτῶν, ἢ πρὸς ἐκδίκησιν αὐτῶν τινὶ τῶν πάντων ἀσεβῶς γεγραμμένα, καὶ αὐτοὺς τοὺς εἰρημένους αἵρετικούς, Θεόδωρον φημέν καὶ Κῦρον Σέργιον τε καὶ Πύρρον καὶ Παῦλον οὐκ ἀποβάλλεται καὶ ἀναθεματίζει ... ἢ εἴ τις τινὰ τῶν παρ' αὐτῶν, ἢ τῶν τὰ ὅμοια αὐτοῖς φρονούντων ... καθαιρεθέντων ἢ κατακριθέντων,

Can. 18. If anyone, following the holy Fathers, in harmony with us and likewise with the faith, does not reject and anathematize in his soul and with his lips all those whom the holy, catholic, and apostolic Church of God—that is, the five holy and universal councils and in accordance with all the approved Fathers of the Church—rejects and anathematizes as most abominable heretics, together with all their impious writings down to the last detail, that is, Sabellius, Arius, Eunomius, Macedonius, Apollinaris, Polemon, Eutyches, Dioscurus, Timothy Aelurus, Severus, Theodosius, Colluthus, Themistius, Paul of Samosata, Diodorus, Theodore, Nestorius, Theodulus the Persian, Origen, Didymus, Evagrius, and, in brief, all the remaining heretics ...¹

If anyone, therefore, ... does not reject and anathematize all these most impious doctrines of their heresy, and those matters that have been impiously written by anyone in their favor or in explanation of them, and the named heretics, that is, Theodore, Cyrus and Sergius, Pyrrhus and Paul, or if anyone holds as condemned or deposed one of those who were deposed or condemned by them or

Can. 18. If anyone, following the holy Fathers, in harmony with us and in the same faith, does not reject and anathematize in his soul and with his lips all those whom the holy, catholic, and apostolic Church of God—that is, the five holy and ecumenical councils and all whom the Fathers of the Church themselves recognized as thinking in the same way—rejects and anathematizes as impious heretics, together with all their impious writings down to the last detail, namely, Sabellius, Arius, Eunomius, Macedonius, Apollinaris, Polemon, Eutyches, Dioscurus, Timothy Aelurus, Severus, Theodosius, Colluthus, Themistius, Paul of Samosata, Diodorus, Theodore, Nestorius, Theodulus the Persian, Origen, Didymus, Evagrius, and, in brief, all the other heretics ...¹

If anyone, therefore, ... does not reject and anathematize the impious doctrines of their heresies and what has been impiously written by anyone in their favor or defense, and those said heretics themselves, that is, Theodore and Cyrus, Sergius and Pyrrhus and Paul ..., or if anyone holds as condemned or deposed one of those who by them or by anyone believing something similar to them ... were condemned or de-

518

519

520

*519 ¹ Also mentioned are the Monothelites Theodore of Pharan, Cyrus of Alexandria, Sergius, Patriarch of Constantinople, and his successors, Pyrrhus and Paul; as well as the edict of Emperor Heraclius called Ekthesis, composed by Sergius in 638 in favor of the Monothelites; and the Typos of Constans II, in which the Ekthesis is indeed retracted but which imposes silence on the adherents of the Dyothelite doctrine.

sanctorum Patrum nobiscum confitentem doctrinam, uti condemnatum habet aut omnino depositum, sed non arbitratur ... primum et orthodoxum et catholicae Ecclesiae propugnatores, ... illos autem impios atque detestabilia eorum pro hoc iudicia vel sententias vacuas et invalidas atque infirmas, magis autem profanas et execrabiles vel reprobabiles arbitratur, huiusmodi condemnatus sit.

ὡς μὴ τὰ αὐτῶν φρονοῦντα, ἀλλὰ τὰ τῶν ἁγίων πατρῶν σὺν ἡμῖν ὁμολογοῦντα, καθηρημένον ἔχει τὸ σύνολον ἢ κατακεκριμένον, ἀλλ' οὐχὶ ... εὐσεβῆ καὶ ὀρθόδοξον ἡγήται, καὶ τῆς καθολικῆς ἐκκλησίας ὑπέρμαχον ... ἐκείνους δὲ τοὺς δυσσεβεῖς καὶ τὰς ἀνόμους αὐτῶν περὶ τοῦτου κρίσεις, ἧτοι ψήφους ἐώλους καὶ ἀκύρους καὶ ἀβεβαίους ὀρίζεται, μᾶλλον δὲ βεβήλους καὶ ἐπαράτους καὶ ἀποβλήτους, ὁ τοιοῦτος εἶη κατάκριτος.

by persons like them, ... inasmuch as the one condemned does not believe at all like them but with us confesses the doctrine of the holy Fathers and, instead of judging such a one as pious and orthodox and a defender of the Catholic Church, ... determines such ones (to be) impious and their judgments in this regard detestable and their opinions vain and invalid and weak or, even more, impious and execrable and worthy of condemnation, let such a person be condemned.

posed for not believing the same things as they but with us confesses the doctrine of the holy Fathers and, instead ... of judging such a one as pious and orthodox and a defender of the Catholic Church, ... determines such ones to be impious and their judgments in this regard unjust and their opinions empty, invalid, and weak or, even more, as impious, execrable, and worthy of condemnation, let such a person be condemned.

521 Can. 19. Si quis ea, quae scelerosi haeretici sapiunt, indubitanter professus atque intellegens, per inanem proterviam dicit, haec pietatis esse dogmata, quae traderunt ab initio speculatores et ministri verbi, hoc est dicere, sanctae et universales quinque Synodi, calumnians utique ipsos sanctos Patres et memoratas sanctas quinque Synodos, in deceptione simplicium, vel susceptione suae profanae perfidiae, huiusmodi condemnatus sit.

ἰθ'. Εἴ τις τὰ τῶν ἐναγῶν αἰρετικῶν ὁμολογουμένως φρονοῦν καὶ δοξάζων ἐκ προπετοῦς ἀνοίας ταῦτα λέγει τῆς εὐσεβείας ὑπάρχειν τὰ δόγματα, ἃ παραδεδώκασι οἱ ἀπ' ἀρχῆς αὐτόπται καὶ ὑπηρεταὶ τοῦ λόγου γενόμενοι, ταῦτον δὲ λέγειν αἱ ἅγιοι καὶ οἰκουμενικαὶ πέντε σύνοδοι, συκοφαντῶν αὐτοὺς τε τοὺς ἁγίους πατέρας, καὶ αὐτὰς τὰς ἁγίας οἰκουμενικὰς πέντε συνόδους εἰς ἀπάτην τῶν ἀκεραιωτέρων, ἧτοι παραδοχὴν τῆς ἐαυτοῦ βεβήλου κακοπιστίας, ὁ τοιοῦτος εἶη κατάκριτος.

Can. 19. If anyone openly professing and thinking what the impious heretics hold, through vain impudence, says that these are teachings of piety that the observers and ministers of the Word—that is, the five holy and universal councils—have handed down from the beginning, assuredly calumniating the holy Fathers themselves and the five holy councils mentioned, in order to deceive the simple or in defense of their own impious treachery, let such a person be condemned.

Can. 19. If anyone, openly thinking and teaching what the impious heretics hold, with rash stupidity says that these are teachings of piety that the observers and ministers of the Word—that is, the five holy and ecumenical councils—have handed down from the beginning, calumniating these same holy Fathers and these same five holy ecumenical councils in order to deceive the simple or else to defend his own erroneous and impious faith, let such a person be condemned.

522 Can. 20. Si quis secundum scelerosos haeticos quocumque modo ... terminos removens illicite, quos posuerunt firmius sancti catholicae Ecclesiae Patres, id est sanctae et universales quinque Synodi, novitates temere exquirere, et fidei alterius expositiones, aut libellos, aut epistolas, aut conscripta, aut κ'. Εἴ τις κατὰ τοὺς ἐναγεῖς αἰρετικούς, καθ' οἷον δήποτε τρόπον ... ὅρια μετακινῶν ἀθεμίτως, ἃ ἔθεντο παγίως οἱ ἅγιοι τῆς καθολικῆς ἐκκλησίας πατέρες, ταῦτον δὲ λέγειν αἱ ἅγιοι καὶ οἰκουμενικαὶ πέντε σύνοδοι, καινοτομίας τολμηρῶς ἐπινοεῖ, καὶ πίστewς ἑτέρας ἐκθέσεις, ἢ τύπους, ἢ νόμους,

Can. 20. If anyone, following the impious heretics in any manner whatsoever, by any word whatsoever, illicitly moves beyond the bounds firmly established by the holy Fathers of the Catholic Church—that is, the five holy and universal councils—and rashly devises novelties and expositions of

Can. 20. If anyone, following the impious heretics in any manner whatsoever, illicitly moves beyond the bounds firmly established by the holy Fathers of the Catholic Church—that is, the five holy and ecumenical councils—and rashly devises novelties and expositions of another faith subscriptions, aut testimonia falsa, aut synodos, aut gesta monumentorum, aut ordinationes vacuas ecclesiasticae regulae incognitas aut loci servaturas incongruas et irrationabiles, et compendiose, si quid aliud impiissimis haereticis consuetum est agere, per diabolicam operationem tortuose et callide agit contra pias orthodoxorum catholicae Ecclesiae, hoc est dicere, paternas eius et synodales praedicationes, ad eversionem sincerissimae in Dominum Deum nostrum confessionis, et usque in finem sine poenitentia permanet haec impie agens, huiusmodi in saecula saeculorum condemnatus sit, “et dicat omnis populus: fiat, fiat” [Ps 105:48].

ἢ ὄρους, ἢ λιβέλλους, ἢ ἀναφοράς, ἢ ἐπιστολάς, ἢ συγγραφάς, ἢ ὑπογραφάς, ἢ μαρτυρίας ψευδεῖς, ἢ συνόδους, ἢ πράξεις ὑπομημάτων, ἢ χειροτονίας ἐώλους καὶ τῷ ἐκκλησιαστικῷ κανόνι μὴ ἐγνωσμένας, ἢ τοποτηρησίας, ἢ γουν τοποτηρητάς ἀθέσμους καὶ ἀκανονίστους, καὶ ἀπλῶς εἴτιπερ ἄλλο τοῖς ἀσεβέσιν αἰρετικοῖς εἴθισται πράττειν, ἐκ διαβολικῆς ἐνεργείας σκολιᾶς καὶ πανούργως ποιεῖ κατὰ τῶν εὐσεβῶν καὶ ὀρθοδόξων τῆς καθολικῆς ἐκκλησίας, ταῦτόν δὲ λέγειν τῶν πατρικῶν αὐτῆς καὶ συνοδικῶν κηρυγμάτων, πρὸς ἀνατροπὴν τῆς εἰλικρινοῦς εἰς τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν καὶ Θεὸν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν ὁμολογίας καὶ μέχρι τέλους ἀμετανοήτως διατελεῖ τὰ τοιαῦτα δυσσεβῶς ἐνεργῶν, ὁ τοιοῦτος εἰς τοὺς αἰῶνας τῶν αἰώνων εἴη κατάκριτος· «καὶ ἐρεῖ πᾶς λαός· γένοιτο, γένοιτο» [Ps 105:48].

another faith, or books or letters or writings or subscriptions or false testimonies or synods or records of hearings or void ordinations not recognized by ecclesiastical canons, or unsuitable and arbitrary representatives; and in brief, does whatever else the most impious heretics are used to doing or, through diabolical operations, acts in a cunning and crooked manner against the pious pronouncements of the orthodox (teachers) of the Catholic Church—that is, of her Fathers and synods—in order to destroy the sincere profession (of faith) to the Lord our God, and (whoever) persists until the end without repentance, impiously doing these things, let such a person be condemned forever, “and let all the people say: Amen!” [Ps 106:48].

or formulas or laws or statutes or books or reports or letters or writings or subscriptions or false witnesses or synods, or records of hearings or ordinations that are invalid and not recognized by ecclesiastical canons or illicit and non-canonical representations or representatives and, in brief, does whatever else the impious heretics are used to doing or, through diabolical operations, acts in a cunning and crooked manner against the pious and orthodox pronouncements of the Catholic Church—that is, of her Fathers and councils—in order to destroy the sincere profession (of faith) to our Lord and God, Jesus Christ, and persists until the end, without repentance, in impiously doing these things, let him be condemned forever; “and let all the people say: Amen!” [Ps 106:48].

EUGENE I: August 10, 654–June 2 (3?), 657

VITALIAN: July 30, 657–January 27, 672

ADEODATUS II: April 11, 672–June 17 (16?), 676

525–541: Eleventh Synod of TOLEDO, begun November 7, 675: Profession of Faith

This profession of faith, formerly attributed to Eusebius of Vercelli (PL 12:959–68), was drawn up, according to J. Madoz, by the synod itself, the creeds of the fourth and sixth synods of Toledo (633 and 638) serving as the principal sources; cf. * 485, 490–493. The opinion of some that this synod was confirmed by Innocent III is based on an erroneous explanation of the word authenticum; cf. H. Lennerz: ZKTh 48 (1924): 322–24.

Ed.: J. Madoz, Le Symbole du XIe concile de Tolède (Louvain, 1938), 16–26 / KüA 74–83 / Hn § 182 / MaC 11:132E–137B / HaC 3:1020A–1023E / CdLuc 643–50; cf. 971–74: appendix of variants / CVis, 346–54.

The Divine Trinity

(1) Confitemur et credimus sanctam atque ineffabilem Trinitatem, Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum, unum Deum naturaliter esse unius substantiae, unius naturae, unius quoque maiestatis atque virtutis.

(1) We confess and believe that the holy and ineffable Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, is one God by nature, of one substance, of one nature as also of one majesty and power. 525

(2) Et Patrem quidem non genitum, non creatum, sed ingenitum profiteremur. Ipse enim a nullo originem ducit, ex quo et Filius nativitatem et Spiritus Sanctus processionem accepit. Fons ergo ipse et origo est totius divinitatis. (3) Ipse quoque Pater est essentiae suae, qui de ineffabili substantia Filius [Pater, essentia quidem ineffabilis, substantiae suae Filium] ineffabiliter genuit nec tamen aliud quam quod ipse est, genuit: Deus Deum, lux lucem; ab ipso est ergo “omnis paternitas in caelo et in terra” [Eph 3:15].

526 (4) Filium quoque de substantia Patris sine initio ante saecula natum, nec tamen factum esse fatemur: quia nec Pater sine Filio, nec Filius aliquando exstitit sine Patre. (5) Et tamen non sicut Filius de Patre, ita Pater de Filio, quia non Pater a Filio, sed Filius a Patre generationem accepit. Filius ergo Deus de Patre, Pater autem Deus, sed non de Filio; Pater quidem Filii, non Deus de Filio: ille autem Filius Patris et Deus de Patre. Aequalis tamen per omnia Filius Deo Patri: quia nec nasci coepit aliquando, nec desiit.

(6) Hic etiam unius cum Patre substantiae creditur, propter quod et ὁμοούσιος Patri dicitur, hoc est eiusdem cum Patre substantiae; ὅμος enim graece unum, οὐσία vero substantia dicitur, quod utrumque coniunctum sonat ‘una substantia’. Nec enim de nihilo, neque de aliqua alia substantia, sed de Patris utero, id est, de substantia eius idem Filius genitus vel natus esse credendus est.

(7) Sempiternus ergo Pater, sempiternus et Filius. Quod si semper Pater fuit, semper habuit Filium, cui Pater esset: et ob hoc Filium de Patre natum sine initio confitemur, (8) Nec enim eundem Filium Dei, pro eo, quod de Patre sit genitus, “desectae naturae portiunculam”¹ nominamus; sed perfectum Patrem, perfectum Filium sine diminutione, sine desectione genuisse asserimus, quia solius divinitatis est inaequalem Filium non habere.

(9) Hic etiam Filius Dei natura est Filius, non adoptione,² quem Deus Pater nec voluntate nec necessitate genuisse credendus est; quia nec ulla in Deo necessitas capit [al. cadit], nec voluntas sapientiam praevenit.

(2) And we profess that the Father is not begotten, not created, but unbegotten. For he himself, from whom the Son has received his birth and the Holy Spirit his procession, has his origin from no one. He is therefore the source and origin of the whole Godhead. (3) He is also the Father of his own essence, he who from his ineffable substance in an ineffable way has begotten the Son and yet did not beget something different from what he himself is [he, the Father, that is, his ineffable essence, also begot in an ineffable way the Son from his substance and yet did not beget something different from what he himself is]: God (has begotten) God, light (has begotten light). From him, therefore, is “all fatherhood in heaven and on earth” [cf. Eph 3:15, Vulg.].

(4) We also confess that the Son was born, but not made, from the substance of the Father, without beginning, before all ages, for at no time did the Father exist without the Son, nor the Son without the Father. (5) Yet the Father (is) not from the Son, as the Son is from the Father, because the Father was not generated by the Son but the Son by the Father. The Son, therefore, is God from the Father, and the Father is God, but not from the Son. (He is) indeed the Father of the Son, not God from the Son; but the latter is the Son of the Father and God from the Father. Yet in all things the Son is equal to God the Father, for he has never begun or ceased to be born.

(6) We also believe that he is of one substance with the Father; wherefore he is called ὁμοούσιος with the Father, that is, of the same being as the Father, for ὅμοβ means “one”, and οὐσία means “being”, and joined together they mean “one being”. We must believe that the Son is begotten or born, not from nothing or from any other substance, but from the womb of the Father, that is, from his substance.

(7) Therefore, the Father (is) eternal, and the Son (is) also eternal. If he was always Father, he always had a Son, whose Father he was, and therefore we confess that the Son was born from the Father without beginning. (8) We do not call the same Son of God a “part of a divided nature”,¹ because he was generated from the Father, but we assert that the perfect Father has begotten the perfect Son, without diminution or division, for it pertains to the Godhead alone not to have an unequal Son.

(9) This Son of God is also Son by nature, not by adoption;² of him we must also believe that God the Father begot him neither by an act of will nor out of necessity, for in God there is no necessity, nor does will precede wisdom.

*526 ¹ Cf. Vigiliius of Thapsus, Contra Arianos, Sabellianos et Photinianos dialogus II, 13 (PL 62:206A).

² This is directed against the Bonosians, who confessed the Son of God in his divine nature only as “adopted son”, while the later “Adoptionists” would affirm this of the human nature.

(10) Spiritum quoque Sanctum, qui est tertia in Trinitate persona, unum atque aequalem cum Deo Patre et Filio credimus esse Deum, unius substantiae, unius quoque esse naturae: non tamen genitum vel creatum, sed ab utrisque procedentem, amborum esse Spiritum. (11) Hic etiam Spiritus Sanctus nec ingenitus nec genitus creditur: ne aut si ingenitum dixerimus, duos Patres dicamus, aut si genitum, duos Filios praedicare monstemur: qui tamen nec Patris tantum nec Filii tantum, sed simul Patris et Filii Spiritus dicitur. (12) Nec enim de Patre procedit in Filium, vel de Filio procedit ad sanctificandam creaturam, sed simul ab utrisque processisse monstratur; quia caritas sive sanctitas amborum esse agnoscitur. (13) Hic igitur Spiritus Sanctus missus ab utrisque sicut Filius [a Patre] creditur; sed minor a Patre et Filio non habetur, sicut Filius propter assumptam carnem minorem se Patre et Spiritu Sancto esse testatur.

(14) Haec est sanctae Trinitatis relata narratio: quae non triplex, sed Trinitas et dici et credi debet. Nec recte dici potest, ut in uno Deo sit Trinitas, sed unus Deus Trinitas. (15) In relativis vero personarum nominibus Pater ad Filium, Filius ad Patrem, Spiritus Sanctus ad utrosque refertur: quae cum relative tres personae dicantur, una tamen natura vel substantia creditur. (16) Nec sicut tres personas, ita tres substantias praedicamus, sed unam substantiam, tres autem personas. (17) Quod enim Pater est, non ad se, sed ad Filium est; et quod Filius est, non ad se, sed ad Patrem est; similiter et Spiritus Sanctus non ad se, sed ad Patrem et Filium relative refertur: in eo quod Spiritus Patris et Filii praedicatur. (18) Item cum dicimus: Deus, non ad aliquid dicitur, sicut Pater ad Filium vel Filius ad Patrem vel Spiritus Sanctus ad Patrem et Filium, sed ad se specialiter dicitur Deus.

(19) Nam et si de singulis personis interrogemur, Deum necesse est fateamur. Deus ergo Pater, Deus Filius, Deus Spiritus Sanctus singulariter dicitur: nec tamen tres dii, sed unus est Deus. (20) Item et Pater omnipotens et Filius omnipotens et Spiritus Sanctus omnipotens singulariter dicitur: nec tamen tres omnipotentes, sed unus omnipotens, sicut et unum lumen, unumque principium praedicatur. (21) Singulariter ergo, et unaquaeque persona plenus Deus et totae tres personae unus Deus confitetur [sic!] et creditur: una illis vel indivisa atque aequalis Deitas, maiestas sive potestas, nec minoratur in singulis, nec augetur in tribus; quia nec minus aliquid habet, cum unaquaeque persona Deus singulariter dicitur, nec amplius, cum totae tres personae unus Deus enuntia[n]tur.

(10) We also believe that the Holy Spirit, the third Person in the Trinity, is God, one and equal with God the Father and the Son, of one substance and of one nature, not, however, begotten or created, but proceeding from both, and that he is the Spirit of both. (11) Of this Holy Spirit, we also believe that he is neither unbegotten nor begotten, for if we called him unbegotten, we would assert two Fathers, or if begotten, we would appear to preach two Sons. Yet he is called the Spirit, not of the Father alone or of the Son alone, but of both Father and Son. (12) For he does not proceed from the Father to the Son, or from the Son to sanctify creatures, but he is shown to have proceeded from both at once, because he is known as the love or the sanctity of both. (13) Hence we believe that the Holy Spirit is sent by both, as the Son is sent by the Father. But he is not less than the Father and the Son, in the way in which the Son, on account of the body that he has assumed, testifies that he is less than the Father and the Holy Spirit.

(14) This is the way of speaking about the Holy Trinity as it has been handed down: one must not call it or believe it to be threefold, but Trinity. Nor can it properly be said that in the one God there is the Trinity, but the one God is the Trinity. (15) In the relative names of the Persons the Father is related to the Son, the Son to the Father, and the Holy Spirit to both. While they are called three Persons in view of their relations, we believe in one nature or substance. (16) Although we profess three Persons, we do not profess three substances, but one substance and three Persons. (17) For the Father is Father not with respect to himself but to the Son, and the Son is Son not to himself but in relation to the Father; and likewise the Holy Spirit is not referred to himself but is related to the Father and the Son, inasmuch as he is called the Spirit of the Father and the Son. (18) So when we say “God”, this does not express a relationship to another, as of the Father to the Son or of the Son to the Father or of the Holy Spirit to the Father and the Son, but “God” refers to himself only.

(19) For, if we are asked about the single Persons, we must confess that each is God. Therefore, we say that the Father is God, the Son is God, the Holy Spirit is God, (each one distinctly); yet there are not three gods, but one God. (20) Similarly, we say that the Father is almighty, the Son is almighty, the Holy Spirit is almighty, (each one) distinctly; yet there are not three almighty ones, but one Almighty, as we profess one light and one principle. (21) Hence we confess and believe that each Person distinctly is fully God, and the three Persons together are one God. Theirs is an undivided and equal Godhead, majesty, and power, which is neither diminished in the single Persons nor increased in the three. For it is not less when each Person is called God separately, nor is it greater when all three Persons are called one God.

530 (22) Haec ergo sancta Trinitas, quae unus et verus est Deus, nec recedit a numero, nec capitur numero. In relatione enim personarum numerus cernitur; in divinitatis vero substantia, quid numeratum sit, non comprehenditur. Ergo [in] hoc solum numerum insinuant, quod ad invicem sunt; et in hoc numero carent, quod ad se sunt. (23) Nam ita huic sanctae Trinitati unum naturale convenit nomen, ut in tribus personis non possit esse plurale. Ob hoc ergo credimus illud in sacris litteris dictum: “Magnus Dominus noster et magna virtus eius et sapientiae eius non est numerus” [Ps 146:5].

(24) Nec quia tres has personas esse diximus unum Deum, eundem esse Patrem quem Filium, vel esse Filium eum, qui est Pater, aut eum, qui Spiritus Sanctus est, vel Patrem vel Filium dicere poterimus. (25) Non enim ipse est Pater qui Filius, nec Filius ipse qui Pater, nec Spiritus Sanctus ipse qui est vel Pater vel Filius; cum tamen ipsum sit Pater quod Filius, ipsum Filius quod Pater, ipsum Pater et Filius quod Spiritus Sanctus: id est, natura unus Deus. (26) Cum enim dicimus non ipsum esse Patrem quem Filium, ad personarum distinctionem refertur. Cum autem dicimus ipsum esse Patrem quod Filium, ipsum Filium quod Patrem, ipsum Spiritum Sanctum quod Patrem et Filium, ad naturam, qua Deus est, vel substantiam pertinere monstratur, quia substantia unum sunt: personas enim distinguimus, non deitatem separamus.

531 (27) Trinitatem igitur in personarum distinctione agnoscimus; unitatem propter naturam vel substantiam profitemur. Tria ergo ista unum sunt, natura scilicet, non persona. (28) Nec tamen tres istae personae separabiles aestimandae sunt, cum nulla ante aliam, nulla post aliam, nulla sine alia vel exstiterit, vel quidpiam operasse aliquando credatur. (29) Inseparabiles enim inveniuntur et in eo quod sunt, et in eo quod faciunt: quia inter generantem Patrem et generatum Filium vel procedentem Spiritum Sanctum nullum fuisse credimus temporis intervallum, quo aut genitor genitum aliquando praecederet, aut genitus genitori deesset, aut procedens Spiritus Patre vel Filio posterior appareret. (30) Ob hoc ergo inseparabilis et inconfusa haec Trinitas a nobis et praedicatur et creditur. Tres igitur personae istae dicuntur, iuxta quod maiores definiunt, ut agnoscantur, non ut separentur. (31) Nam si attendamus illud, quod Scriptura sancta dicit de Sapientia: “Splendor est lucis aeternae” [Sap 7:26]: sicut splendorem luci videmus inseparabiliter inhaerere, sic confitemur Filium a Patre separari non posse. (32) Tres ergo illas unius atque

(22) This Holy Trinity, which is the one true God, is not without number; yet it is not comprised by number, because in the relationships of the Persons there appears number, but in the substance of the Godhead nothing is comprised that could be counted. Therefore they imply number only insofar as they are mutually related, but they lack number insofar as they are by themselves. (23) For one name referring to its nature so fits this Holy Trinity that it cannot be used in the plural with relation to the three Persons. This then is, in our faith, the meaning of the saying in Holy Scripture: “Great is our Lord, abundant in power, and of his wisdom there is no number” [Ps 147:5].

(24) However, though we have said that these three Persons are one God, we are not allowed to say that the same one is the Father who is the Son, or that he is the Son who is the Father, or that he who is the Holy Spirit is either the Father or the Son. (25) For he is not the Father who is the Son, nor is the Son he who is the Father, nor is the Holy Spirit he who is the Father or the Son, even though the Father is that which the Son is, the Son that which the Father is, the Father and the Son that which the Holy Spirit is, that is, one God by nature. (26) For, when we say: he who is the Father is not the Son, we refer to the distinction of Persons; but when we say: the Father is that which the Son is, the Son that which the Father is, and the Holy Spirit that which the Father is and the Son is, this clearly refers to the nature or substance whereby God exists, since in substance they are one; for we distinguish the Persons, but we do not divide the Godhead.

(27) Hence, we recognize the Trinity in the distinction of Persons, and we profess the unity on account of the nature or substance. Thus the three are one by nature, not as Person. (28) Nevertheless these three Persons are not to be considered separable since, according to our belief, none of them ever existed or acted before another, after another, without another. (29) For they are inseparable both in what they are and in what they do, because, according to our faith, between the Father who generates and the Son who is generated or the Holy Spirit who proceeds, there has not been an interval of time when the one who generates would precede the one who is generated or (when) the begotten one would have been lacking to the one who begets or (when) the Holy Spirit in his proceeding would appear later than Father or Son. (30) For this reason we profess and believe that this Trinity is inseparable and distinct. We say, therefore, of these three Persons, as our forefathers defined it, that they should be acknowledged, not separated. (31) For if we listen to what Holy Scripture says about Wisdom: “She is a reflection of eternal inseparabilis naturae personas sicut non confundimus, ita separabiles nullatenus praedicamus.

(33) Quando quidem ita nobis hoc dignata est ipsa Trinitas evidenter ostendere, ut etiam in his nominibus, quibus voluit sigillatim personas agnosci, unam sine altera non permittat intelligi: nec enim Pater absque Filio cognoscitur, nec sine Patre Filius invenitur. (34) Relatio quippe ipsa vocabuli personalis personas separari vetat, quas etiam, dum non simul nominat, simul insinuat. Nemo autem audire potest unumquodque istorum nominum, in quo non intelligere cogatur et alterum. (35) Cum igitur haec tria sint unum et unum tria, est tamen unicuique personae manens sua proprietates. Pater enim aeternitatem habet sine nativitate, Filius aeternitatem cum nativitate, Spiritus vero Sanctus processionem sine nativitate cum aeternitate.¹

light” [Wis 7:26], we see that, as the reflection belongs inseparably to the light, so too, according to our confession, the Son cannot be separated from the Father. (32) Therefore, neither do we confuse these three Persons whose nature is one and inseparable, nor do we preach that they are in any way separable.

(33) The Holy Trinity itself has indeed deigned 532 clearly to reveal it to us: in these names by which he wanted the single Persons to be known, it is impossible to understand one Person without the other; one cannot conceive of the Father without the Son, nor can the Son be found without the Father. (34) Indeed, the very relationship expressed in the personal names forbids us to separate the Persons, for, though the personal names do not name them together, they imply them. No one can hear any one of these names without necessarily understanding also the other. (35) While then these Three are One and this One Three, each of the Persons retains his own characteristics: the Father has eternity without birth; the Son has eternity with birth; the Holy Spirit has procession with eternity but without birth.¹

The Incarnation

(36) De his tribus personis solam Filii personam pro liberatione humani generis hominem verum sine peccato de sancta et immaculata Maria Virgine credimus assumpsisse, de qua novo ordine novaque nativitate est genitus; novo ordine, quia invisibilis divinitate, visibilis monstratur in carne; nova autem nativitate est genitus, quia intacta virginitas et virilem coitum nescivit et foecundatam per Spiritum Sanctum carnis materiam ministravit. (37) Qui partus Virginis nec ratione colligitur, nec exemplo monstratur; quod si ratione colligitur, non est mirabile; si exemplo monstratur, non erit singulare.¹ (38) Nec tamen Spiritus Sanctus Pater esse credendus est Filii, pro eo quod Maria eodem Spiritu Sancto obumbrante concepit: ne duos patres Filii videamur asserere, quod utique nefas est dici.

(36) Of these three Persons we believe that only the 533 Person of the Son has assumed a true human nature, without sin, from the holy and immaculate Virgin Mary, for the liberation of the human race. He was begotten from her in a new order and by a new birth: in a new order, because, invisible in his divinity, he is shown visible in the flesh; by a new birth, because an inviolate virginity, without knowing the contact of man, supplied the matter of his body, being made fruitful by the Holy Spirit. (37) This virgin birth is neither grasped by reason nor illustrated by example. Were it grasped by reason, it would not be wonderful; were it illustrated by example, it would not be unique.¹ (38) Yet we must not believe that the Holy Spirit is the Father of the Son because Mary conceived by the overshadowing of the same Holy Spirit, lest we should seem to affirm that the Son has two fathers—which it is certainly impious to say.

(39) In quo mirabili conceptu, aedificante sibi Sapientia domum [cf. Prv 9:1], “Verbum caro factum est et habitavit in nobis” [Jo 1:14]. Nec tamen Verbum ipsum ita in carne conversum atque mutatum est, ut desisteret Deus esse, qui homo esse voluisset; sed ita Verbum caro factum est, ut non tantum ibi sit Verbum Dei et hominis caro, sed etiam rationalis hominis anima; atque hoc totum et Deus dicatur propter Deum et homo propter hominem.

(39) In this wonderful conception by which Wisdom 534 built herself a house [cf. Prov 9:1], “the Word became flesh and dwelt among us” [Jn 1:14]. The Word himself, however, was neither transformed nor changed in the flesh in such a way that he who willed to be man would have ceased to be God; but the Word became flesh in such a way that in him there is not only the Word of God and the flesh of man, but also a rational human soul, and that this whole is called God on account of God and man on account of man.

*532 ¹ Cf. Isidore of Seville, Differentiae II, 3, no. 7 (PL 83:71B).

*533 ¹ Cf. Augustine, letter 137, chap. 2, no. 8 (CSEL 44:107_{10f} / PL 33:519).

(40) In quo Dei Filio duas credimus esse naturas; unam divinitatis, alteram humanitatis, quas ita in se una Christi persona univit, ut nec divinitas ab humanitate, nec humanitas a divinitate possit aliquando seiungi. (41) Unde perfectus Deus, perfectus et homo in unitate personae unus est Christus; nec tamen, quia duas diximus in Filio esse naturas, duas causabimus in eo esse personas; ne Trinitati, quod absit, accedere videatur quaternitas. (42) Deus enim Verbum non accepit personam hominis, sed naturam, et in aeternam personam divinitatis temporalem accepit substantiam carnis.

535 (43) Item cum unius substantiae credamus esse Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum, non tamen dicimus, ut huius Trinitatis unitatem Maria Virgo genuerit, sed tantummodo Filium, qui solus naturam nostram in unitate personae suae assumpsit. (44) Incarnationem quoque huius Filii Dei tota Trinitas operasse credenda est, quia inseparabilia sunt opera Trinitatis. Solus tamen Filius formam servi accepit [cf. Phil 2:7] in singularitate personae, non in unitate divinae naturae, in id quod est proprium Filii, non quod commune Trinitati: (45) quae forma illi ad unitatem personae coaptata est, id est ut Filius Dei et Filius hominis unus sit Christus. Item idem Christus in his duabus naturis, tribus exstat substantiis: Verbi, quod ad solius Dei essentiam referendum est, corporis et animae, quod ad verum hominem pertinet.

536 (46) Habet igitur in se geminam substantiam divinitatis suae et humanitatis nostrae. (47) Hic tamen per hoc quod de Deo Patre sine initio prodiit, natus tantum; nam neque factus, neque praedestinatus accipitur; per hoc tamen quod de Maria Virgine natus est, et natus et factus et praedestinatus esse credendus est. (48) Ambae tamen in illo generationes mirabiles, quia et de Patre ante saecula sine matre est genitus, et in fine saeculorum de matre sine patre est generatus; qui tamen secundum quod Deus est, creavit Mariam, secundum quod homo, creatus est a Maria: ipse et pater Mariae matris et filius.

(49) Item per hoc quod Deus, est aequalis Patri; per hoc quod homo, minor est Patre. (50) Item et maior et minor seipso esse credendus est: in forma enim Dei etiam ipse Filius se ipso maior est, propter humanitatem assumptam, qua divinitas maior est; in forma autem servi se ipso minor est, id est, humanitate, quae minor divinitate accipitur. (51) Nam sicut per assumptam carnem non tantum a Patre, sed a seipso minor accipitur, ita secundum divinitatem, qua est aequalis Patri, et

(40) In this Son of God we believe that there are two natures, one divine, the other human, which the one Person of Christ has so united in himself that the divinity can never be separated from the humanity nor the humanity from the divinity. (41) Christ, therefore, is perfect God and perfect man in the unity of one Person. By asserting that there are two natures in the Son, we do not, however, set up two Persons in him, lest—which God forbid—the Trinity should seem to become a quaternity. (42) For God the Word did not take the person of man but his nature; he took the temporal substance of the flesh into the eternal Person of the Divinity.

(43) Likewise, we believe that the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit are one substance; we do not, however, say that the Virgin Mary gave birth to the unity of this Trinity, but only to the Son, who alone assumed our nature in the unity of his Person. (44) We must also believe that the entire Trinity brought about the Incarnation of the Son of God, because the works of the Trinity are inseparable. However, only the Son took the form of a servant [cf. Phil 2:7] in the singleness of person, not in the unity of the divine nature; he took it into what is proper to the Son, not into what is common to the Trinity. (45) This form has been joined to him in the unity of person, so that the Son of God and the Son of man are one Christ. Thus, the same Christ in his two natures consists of three substances: that of the Word, which must be referred to the essence of God alone, that of the body and of the soul, which belong to the true man.

(46) He has therefore in himself the double substance of his divinity and of our humanity. (47) By the fact that he has come forth from the Father without a beginning, he is said only to be born, not to be made or predestined; but by the fact that he was born from the Virgin Mary, we must believe that he was born and made and predestined. (48) Yet, in him both births are wonderful, because he was begotten from the Father without a mother before all ages, and in the end of the ages he was generated from a mother without a father. He who inasmuch as he is God created Mary, inasmuch as he is man was created from Mary. He is at once the Father and the Son of his Mother Mary.

(49) Similarly, by the fact that he is God, he is equal to the Father; by the fact that he is man, he is less than the Father. (50) Likewise, we must believe that he is both greater and less than himself: for in the form of God the Son himself is greater than himself because of the humanity that he has assumed and to which the divinity is superior; but in the form of the servant he is less than himself, that is, in his humanity, which is recognized as inferior to the divinity. (51) For, while by the flesh that ipse et Pater maior est homine, quem sola Filii persona assumpsit.

(52) Item in eo, quod quaeritur, utrum posset Filius sic aequalis et minor esse Spiritu Sancto, sicut Patri nunc aequalis, nunc minor Patre creditur esse, respondemus: Secundum formam Dei aequalis est Patri et Spiritui Sancto, secundum formam servi minor est et a Patre et a Spiritu Sancto: quia nec Spiritus Sanctus nec Deus Pater, sed sola Filii persona suscepit carnem, per quam minor esse creditur illis personis duabus. (53) Item hic Filius a Deo Patre et Spiritu Sancto inseparabiliter discretus creditur esse persona, ab homine autem assumpto natura. Item cum homine exstat persona; cum Patre vero et Spiritu Sancto natura divinitatis sive substantia.

(54) Missus tamen Filius non solum a Patre, sed a Spiritu Sancto missus esse credendus est: in eo quod ipse per prophetam dicit: "Et nunc Dominus misit me et Spiritus eius" [cf. Is 48:16]. (55) A seipso quoque missus accipitur: pro eo quod inseparabilis non solum voluntas, sed operatio totius Trinitatis agnoscitur. (56) Hic enim, qui ante saecula unigenitus est vocatus, temporaliter primogenitus factus est: unigenitus propter deitatis substantiam, primogenitus propter assumptae carnis naturam.

he has assumed he is recognized not only as less than the Father but also as less than himself, according to the divinity he is co-equal with the Father; both he and the Father are greater than the man whom the Person of the Son alone assumed.

(52) Likewise, to the question whether the Son might be equal to and less than the Holy Spirit, as we believe him to be now equal to, now less than the Father, we answer: According to the form of God, he is equal to the Father and to the Holy Spirit; according to the form of the servant, he is less than both the Father and the Holy Spirit. For neither the Holy Spirit nor the Father but only the Person of the Son has assumed the flesh by virtue of which he is believed to be less than those two Persons. (53) Similarly, we believe that this Son is distinct though inseparable from God the Father and the Holy Spirit as a Person and distinct by nature from the humanity that he has assumed. Again, with his human nature he is one Person; but with the Father and the Holy Spirit he is one in the nature or substance of the Godhead.

(54) Yet we must believe that the Son was sent not only by the Father but also by the Holy Spirit, for he himself says through the prophet: "And now the Lord God and his Spirit has sent me" [Is 48:16]. (55) He is also understood to be sent by himself, because not only the will but also the action of the whole Trinity is believed to be inseparable. (56) For he who before all ages was called the Only-Begotten became the firstborn in time: he is the Only-Begotten on account of the substance of the Godhead, the firstborn on account of the nature of flesh that he has assumed.

The Redemption

(57) In qua suscepti hominis forma iuxta evangelicam veritatem sine peccato conceptus, sine peccato natus, sine peccato mortuus creditur, qui solus pro nobis "peccatum est factus" [cf. 2 Cor 5:21], id est, sacrificium pro peccatis nostris. (58) Et tamen passionem ipsam, salva divinitate sua, pro delictis nostris sustinuit, mortique adiudicatus et cruci veram carnis mortem excepit, tertio quoque die virtute propria sua suscitatus e sepulchro surrexit.

(57) In the form of man that he assumed, we believe, according to the truth of the Gospel, that he was conceived without sin, he who alone "was made sin" [cf. 2 Cor 5:21] for our sake, that is, who became sacrifice for our sins. (58) And yet he endured his Passion for our offenses without losing his divinity. Condemned to death, he has experienced on the Cross a real death in the flesh, and on the third day, restored to life by his own power, he rose from the grave.

The Destiny of Man after Death

(59) Hoc ergo exemplo Capitis nostri confitemur veram fieri resurrectionem carnis omnium mortuorum. (60) Nec in aërea vel qualibet alia carne (ut quidam delirant) surrecturos nos credimus, sed in ista, qua vivimus, consistimus et movemur. (61) Peracto huius sanctae resurrectionis exemplo idem Dominus noster atque Salvator paternam ascendendo sedem repetiit, de

(59) Thus, according to the example of our Head, we confess that there is a true resurrection of the flesh for all the dead. (60) And we do not believe that we shall rise in ethereal or any other flesh, as some foolishly imagine, but in this very flesh in which we live and are and move. (61) After having given an example of this holy resurrection, our Lord and Savior by his Ascension qua numquam per divinitatem discessit. (62) Illic ad dexteram Patris sedens, exspectatur in finem saeculorum iudex omnium vivorum et mortuorum.

(63) Inde cum sanctis omnibus veniet ad faciendum iudicium, reddere unicuique mercedis propriae debitum, prout quisque gesserit in corpore positus sive bonum, sive malum [cf. 2 Cor 5:10]. (64) Ecclesiam sanctam catholicam pretio sui sanguinis comparatam cum eo credimus in perpetuum regnaturam. (65) Intra cuius gremium constituti unum baptisma credimus et confitemur in remissionem omnium peccatorum. (66) Sub qua fide et resurrectionem mortuorum veraciter credimus et futuri saeculi gaudia exspectamus. (67) Hoc tantum orandum nobis est et petendum, ut, cum peracto finitoque iudicio tradiderit Filius regnum Deo Patri [cf. 1 Cor 15:24], participes nos efficiat regni sui, ut per hanc fidem, qua illi inhaesimus, cum illo sine fine regnemus.

541 (68) Haec est confessionis nostrae fides exposita, per quam omnium haereticorum dogma perimitur, per quam fidelium corda mundantur, per quam etiam ad Deum gloriose acceditur...

returned to the throne of his Father from which in his divine nature he had never departed. (62) There, seated at the right hand of the Father he is awaited till the end-time as judge of all living and the dead.

(63) From there he shall come with all the saints to pass judgment and to render to each one the reward due to one, according to what each one has done while in the body, whether good or evil [cf. 2 Cor 5:10]. (64) We believe that the holy Catholic Church, which he purchased at the price of his own blood, will reign with him forever. (65) Taken up into her bosom, we believe in and profess one baptism for the remission of all sins. (66) By this faith we truly believe in the resurrection of the dead and look forward to the joys of the world to come. (67) This only must we pray and beg for, that when the Son, having completed the judgment, will have delivered the kingdom to God the Father [cf. 1 Cor 15:24], he may make us share in his kingdom, so that through this faith by which we have adhered to him, we may reign with him forever.

(68) This is the exposition of our profession of faith by which the doctrine of all the heretics is destroyed, by which the hearts of the faithful are cleansed, and by which we ascend gloriously to God...

DONUS: November 2, 676–April 11, 678

AGATHO: June 27, 678–January 10, 681

542–545: Letter Consideranti mihi to the Emperors, March 27, 680

On the same day, two letters were sent to Constantinus IV Pogonatus: one written in the name of the pope himself (*542–545) and the other as a synodal letter (*546–548). Both were read at the Third Council of Constantinople in session 4 (November 15, 680) and approved by the council Fathers. Their acceptance was recommended to the emperor in session 18 with the following words: “The high prince of the apostles has struggled with us; for we have had in his imitator and successor to the See a benefactor who by letter has expounded the divine mystery to us. This ancient city of Rome has sent you a profession of faith written by God ... and Peter has spoken through Agatho, and with the Almighty Co-ruler you have decided likewise, pious Emperor, you who have been appointed by God” (Summus nobiscum concertabat Apostolorum princeps; illius enim imitatore[m] et sedis successorem habuimus fautorem et divini sacramenti illustrantem per litteras. Confessionem tibi a Deo scriptam illa Romana antiqua civitas obtulit ... et per Agathonem Petrus loquebatur, et cum omnipotenti corregnatore pius imperator simul decernebas tu, qui a Deo decretus es; MaC 11:666CD / HaC 3:1422E–1423A).

Ed.: MaC 11:238C–239B, 243CE / HaC 3:1078E–1079C, 1083B–D / PL 87:1165D–1168B, 1172C–1173A (= letter 1) / Hn § 236. —Reg.: JR 2109.

The Divine Trinity

542 Hic igitur status est evangelicae atque apostolicae fidei regularisque traditionis, ut confitentes sanctam et inseparabilem Trinitatem, id est Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum, unius esse deitatis, unius naturae et substantiae sive essentiae, unius eam praedicemus et naturalis voluntatis virtutis, operationis, dominationis, maiestatis, potestatis et gloriae. Et quidquid de eadem sancta Trinitate essentialiter dicitur, singulari numero tamquam de una natura trium consubstantialium personarum comprehendamus regulari ratione hoc instituti.

This is therefore the state of the evangelical and apostolic faith and binding tradition that we confess, that the holy and inseparable Trinity, that is, the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, is of one deity, of one nature and substance or essence; and we also proclaim that (the Trinity) is of one natural will, one strength, operation, lordship, majesty, power, and glory. And whatever is said essentially of this same Holy Trinity, we, instructed in this by binding doctrine, understand it in the singular, as of the one nature of the three consubstantial Persons.

The Incarnate Word of God

Cum vero de uno earumdem trium personarum ipsius sanctae Trinitatis, Filio Dei, Deo Verbo, et de mysterio adorandae eius secundum carnem dispensationis confitemur, omnia duplicia unius eiusdemque Domini Salvatoris nostri Iesu Christi secundum evangelicam traditionem asserimus, id est, duas eius naturas praedicamus, divinam scilicet et humanam, ex quibus et in quibus etiam post admirabilem atque inseparabilem unionem subsistit. Et unamquamque eius naturam, proprietatem naturalem habere confitemur, et habere divinam omnia quae divina sunt et humanam omnia quae humana sunt absque ullo peccato. Et utrasque unius eiusdem Dei Verbi incarnati, id est, humanati, inconfuse, inseparabiliter, immutabiliter esse cognoscimus, sola intelligentia, quae unita sunt, discernente, propter confusionis dumtaxat errorem. Aequaliter enim et divisionis et commistionis detestamur blasphemiam.

Cum duas autem naturas duasque naturales voluntates et duas naturales operationes confitemur in uno Domino nostro Iesu Christo, non contrarias eas nec adversas ad alterutram dicimus . . . nec tamquam separatas in duabus personis vel subsistentiis, sed duas dicimus eundemque Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum, sicut naturas, ita et naturales in se voluntates et operationes habere, divinam scilicet et humanam: divinam quidem voluntatem et operationem habere ex aeterno cum coessentiali Patre communem; humanam temporaliter ex nobis cum nostra natura susceptam. . . .

Porro apostolica Christi Ecclesia . . . ex proprietatibus naturalibus unamquamque harum Christi naturarum perfectam esse cognoscit, et quidquid ad proprietates naturarum pertinet, duplicia omnia confitemur, quia ipse Dominus noster Iesus Christus et Deus perfectus est et homo perfectus est et ex duabus et in duabus naturis. . . .

Consequenter itaque . . . duas etiam naturales voluntates in eo et duas naturales operationes esse confitemur et praedicat. Nam si personalem quisquam intelligat voluntatem, dum tres personae in sancta Trinitate dicuntur, necesse est, ut et tres voluntates personales et tres personales operationes (quod absurdum est et nimis profanum) dicerentur. Sin autem, quod fidei christianae veritas continet, naturalis voluntas est, ubi una haec natura dicitur sanctae et inseparabilis Trinitatis, consequenter et una naturalis voluntas et una naturalis operatio intelligenda est. Ubi vero in una persona Domini nostri Iesu Christi Mediatoris Dei et hominum [cf. 1 Tim 2:5] duas naturas, id est divinam et humanam, confitemur, in quibus et post admirabilem adunationem consistit, sicut duas unius eiusdemque naturas, ita et duas naturales voluntates duasque naturales operationes eius regulariter confitemur.

When, however, we make a profession of faith in one of these same three Persons of this Holy Trinity, the Son of God, God the Word, and in the mystery of his adorable salvific acts in the flesh, in accord with the evangelical tradition, we declare in a twofold manner everything that belongs to that one and same Lord, our Savior Jesus Christ, that is, we confess his two natures, namely, divine and human, from which and in which he exists after the wondrous and inseparable union. We confess also that each one of his natures has its own natural properties: the divine has everything belonging to the divine nature, and the human has all that belongs to human nature, without any sin. And we acknowledge that both (natures) belong without any confusion, inseparably and immutably, to one and the same incarnate God, the Word become man; only intelligence distinguishes what is united in order to avoid the error of confusion. Equally we detest the blasphemy of separation and of confusion. 543

When we, however, confess two natures and two natural wills and two natural operations in our one Lord Jesus Christ, we affirm that they are not against or contrary to one another . . . , nor are they as if separated in two persons or subsistences [hypostases]. Rather we affirm that just as there are two natures in our Lord Jesus Christ, so does he have two natural wills and two operations, namely, divine and human; the divine will and operation he has in common from eternity with his co-essential Father; the human he has temporally from us with our assumed nature. . . . 544

Moreover, the apostolic Church of Christ . . . knows by virtue of the natural properties that each one of these natures of Christ is perfect and whatever belongs to the properties of the natures is confessed to be twofold, because our Lord Jesus Christ himself is perfect God and perfect man from two and in two natures. . . . 545

Consequently, therefore, . . . she confesses and preaches two natural wills and two natural operations in him. For if anyone understood will as personal, since three Persons are spoken of in the Holy Trinity, it would be necessary to say that there are three personal wills and three personal operations (which is absurd and exceedingly profane). But since the truth of the Christian faith maintains that the will is natural, where this one nature is predicated of the holy and inseparable Trinity, it follows that one natural will and one natural operation are to be understood. Where, however, in the one Person of our Lord Jesus Christ, Mediator between God and man [cf. 1 Tim 2:5], we confess two natures, namely, divine and human, in which after the wondrous union he exists as one and the same in two natures, so we also confess two natural wills and two natural operations.

546–548: Synod of ROME: Synodal Letter Omnium bonorum spes to the Emperors, March 27, 680

Cf. *542° H. Quentin maintains that the Latin text is not translated back from the Greek but is the original text (Note sur les originaux latins des lettres des papes Honorius, S. Agathon, et Léon II relatives au Monothélisme [Rome, 1920], 6). The Greek text of the letter is edited by G. Kreuzer, Die Honoriusfrage . . ., Pápste und Papsttum 8 (Stuttgart, 1975), 32–46 (here 33–42).

Ed.: MaC 11:290A–291D / HaC 3:119A–1122A / PL 87:1220C–1221D (= letter 3) / Hn § 184. —Reg.: JR 2110.

The Divine Trinity

- 546 Credentes in Deum Patrem . . . et in Filium eius . . . et in Spiritum Sanctum, Dominum et vivificatorem, ex Patre procedentem, cum Patre et Filio coadorandum et conglorificandum: Trinitatem in unitate, et unitatem in Trinitate, unitatem quidem essentiae, Trinitatem vero personarum sive subsistentiarum; Deum Patrem confitentes, Deum Filium, Deum Spiritum Sanctum, non tres deos, sed unum Deum, Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum; non trium nominum subsistentiam, sed trium subsistentiarum unam substantiam; quorum una essentia sive substantia vel natura, id est, una deitas, una aeternitas, una potestas, unum imperium, una gloria, una adoratio, una essentialis eiusdem sanctae et inseparabilis Trinitatis voluntas et operatio, quae omnia condidit, dispensat et continet.
- (We) believe in God the Father . . . and in his Son . . . and in the Holy Spirit, the Lord and Giver of life, who proceeds from the Father, and with the Father and the Son is to be adored and glorified: Trinity in unity and unity in Trinity, a unity indeed of essence, but a Trinity of Persons or subsistences [hypostases]; (we) confess God the Father, God the Son, God the Holy Spirit, not three gods, but one God, Father and Son and Holy Spirit; not a subsistence [hypostasis] of three names, but one substance of three subsistences [hypostases]; the one essence or substance or nature of these (three Persons) is one Deity, one eternity, one power, one lordship, one glory, one adoration, one essential will and operation of the same holy and inseparable Trinity who creates, orders, and sustains all things.

The Incarnate Word of God

- 547 Confitemur autem unum eiusdem sanctae coessentialis Trinitatis, Deum Verbum, qui ante saecula de Patre natus est, in ultimis saeculorum temporibus pro nobis nostraque salute descendisse de caelis, et incarnatum de Spiritu Sancto et sancta, immaculata semperque virgine gloriosa Maria, domina nostra, vere et proprie Dei genitrice, secundum carnem scilicet ex ea natum et vere hominem factum, eundem Deum verum eundemque hominem verum, Deum quidem ex Deo Patre, hominem autem ex virgine matre, incarnatum ex ea carne animam habente rationalem et intellectualem; consubstantialem eundem Deo Patri secundum Deitatem, consubstantialemque nobis eundem ipsum secundum humanitatem, et per omnia similem nobis absque solo peccato, crucifixum pro nobis sub Pontio Pilato, passum sepultumque et resurgentem. . . .
- Moreover, we confess that one of this same holy and co-essential Trinity, God the Word, who was born of the Father before all ages, in the last times of this world came down from heaven for us and for our salvation and was incarnate by the Holy Spirit and the holy and immaculate and ever-virgin and glorious Mary, our Lady, truly and properly the Mother of God according to the flesh, actually born from her and made true man, the same being true God and true man, God indeed from God the Father, but man from the virgin Mother, incarnate from her flesh, having a rational and intellectual soul; the same consubstantial with God the Father according to divinity and consubstantial with us according to humanity and like to us in all things except sin, crucified for us under Pontius Pilate, suffered and buried and risen. . . .
- 548 Unum quippe eundemque Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum, Filium Dei unigenitum, ex duabus et in duabus substantiis inconfuse, incommutabiliter, indivise, inseparabiliter subsistere cognoscimus, nusquam sublata differentia naturarum propter unionem, sed potius salva proprietate utriusque naturae et in unam personam unamque subsistentiam concurrente, non in dualitatem personarum dispertitum vel diversum, neque in unam compositam naturam confusum: sed unum eundemque Filium unigenitum, Deum Verbum, Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum,¹ neque alium in alio, neque alium et alium, sed eundem ipsum in duabus naturis, id
- We acknowledge, indeed, that one and the same our Lord Jesus Christ, the only begotten Son of God, from two and in two substances subsists, without confusion, without change, without division, without separation, the difference of natures never destroyed on account of the union, but rather the property of each nature preserved and concurring in one Person and in one subsistence [hypostasis]; not dispersed or divided into a duality of persons or confused into one composite nature: but we also acknowledge after the subsistent [hypostatic] union, one and the same only begotten Son, God the Word, our Lord Jesus Christ,¹ neither the one in the other nor the est, in Deitate et humanitate, et post subsistentialem adunationem cognoscimus: quia neque Verbum in carnis naturam conversum est, neque caro in Verbi naturam transformata est: permansit enim utrumque, quod naturaliter erat: differentiam quippe adunatarum in eo naturarum sola contemplatione discernimus, ex quibus inconfuse, inseparabiliter et incommutabiliter est compositus: unus enim ex utrisque et per unum utraque, quia simul sunt et altitudo deitatis et humilitas carnis, servante utraque natura etiam post adunationem sine defectu proprietatem suam, et “operante utraque forma cum alterius communione quod proprium habet: Verbo operante quod Verbi est, et carne exsequente quod carnis est: quorum unum coruscat miraculis, aliud succumbit iniuriis” [*294].

*548 ¹ “Unum quippe . . . Christum” (We acknowledge . . . Christ) is taken with a few modifications from the creed of Chalcedon; cf. *302.

Unde consequenter, sicut duas naturas, sive substantias, id est deitatem et humanitatem, inconfuse, indivise, incommutabiliter eum habere veraciter confitemur, ita quoque et duas naturales voluntates et duas naturales operationes habere, utpote perfectum Deum et perfectum hominem, unum eundemque ipsum Dominum Iesum Christum [*501–522] pietatis nos regula instruit, quia hoc nos apostolica atque evangelica traditio, sanctorumque Patrum magisterium, quos sancta apostolica atque catholica Ecclesia et venerabiles Synodi suscipiunt, instituisse monstratur.

one and the other, but the very same in two natures, that is, in the divinity and in the humanity: because neither has the Word been changed into the nature of the flesh, nor has the flesh been transformed into the nature of the Word; for each remains what by nature it was; indeed, we discern in contemplation alone a difference of the united natures in that from which it is composed without confusion, separation, and change: for one from both and both through one, because there is simultaneously present both the majesty of the Deity and the humility of the flesh, each nature, even after the union, preserving without defect its own property, “and each form operating in communion with the other what it has as its own; the Word operating what is of the Word, and the flesh accomplishing what is of the flesh; the one shines forth in miracles, the other succumbs to injuries” [*294].

Thus, it follows that as we truly confess that he has two natures or substances, that is, the deity and the humanity without confusion, without division, without change, so also he has both two natural wills and two natural operations, for the rule of piety instructs us that the one and same Lord Jesus Christ is perfect God and perfect man [*501–522], because it is shown that the apostolic and evangelic tradition and the teaching (Magisterium) of the holy Fathers, accepted by the holy, apostolic, and Catholic Church and venerable synods, have taught us this.

Third Council of CONSTANTINOPLE (Sixth Ecumenical): November 7, 680–September 16, 681

Convoked by the emperor, it condemned the Monothelites and Pope Honorius; cf. *487f. Taking place in the “trullus”, namely, the meeting hall of the imperial palace, it is also described as the “Trullan Synod”; however, this designation is most often used for the synod held there in 692 (“Quinisextum”). Leo II recognized the decisions of this council in several letters; cf. *561 and 563. In the Fides papae of the Liber diurnus Romanorum pontificum (formula 84 Codex Vaticanus), the following condemnation of Honorius is presented in the profession of faith: “[The council Fathers] have restrained under the bond of perpetual anathema the following authors of a truly novel doctrine: Sergius, Pyrrhus ... along with Honorius, who extended favor to their distorted assertions” ([Patres Concilii] auctores vero novi dogmatis Sergium, Pyrrhum ... una cum Honorio, qui pravis eorum adsertionibus fomentum impedit, ... nexu perpetuae anathematis devinxerunt; ed. by H. Foerster [Bern, 1958], 155, according to folio 78v. Cf. the parallel texts, pp. 230_{3f}, 12_f, and 349).

Ed. [*550–552; 553–559]: MaC 11:553D–556C; 636C–640C / HaC 3:1331D–1334A; 1397E–1401D. —[only *553–559]: HN § 149 / COeD, 3rd ed., 124–30.

550–552: Session 13, March 28, 681

Condemnation of the Monothelites and of Pope Honorius I

Ἀνακρίναντες τὰς ὡς ἀπὸ Σεργίου τοῦ γενομένου πατριάρχου ταύτης τῆς θεοφυλάκτου καὶ βασιλίδος πόλεως γραφείσας δογματικὰς ἐπιστολάς πρὸς τε Κῦρον τὸν τῆνικαῦτα γερόμενον ἐπίσκοπον τοῦ Φάσιδος, καὶ Ὀνώριον τὸν γερόμενον πάπαν τῆς πρεσβυτέρας Ῥώμης, ὡσαύτως δὲ καὶ τὴν ἀπ’ ἐκείνου, τουτέστιν Ὀνωρίου, πρὸς αὐτὸν Σέργιον ἀντιγραφείσαν ἐπιστολήν [cf. *487]· καὶ ταύτας

After having investigated the dogmatic letters written 550 by Sergius, the former patriarch of the God-protected and imperial city, to Cyrus, who was at that time the bishop of Phasis, and to Honorius, then pope of elder Rome, and in like manner also the letter written in reply by that one, that is, Honorius, to the same Sergius [cf. *487], and after having discovered that these are entirely alien to the apostolic teachings and to the decisions of εὐρηκότες πάντη ἀλλοτρίας τυγχανούσας τῶν ἀποστολικῶν διδαγμάτων καὶ τῶν ὀρισθέντων ὑπὸ τῶν ἁγίων συνόδων καὶ πάντων τῶν ἐκκρίτων ἁγίων πατέρων, ἐπομένας δὲ ταῖς τῶν αἰρετικῶν ψευδοδιδασκαλίαις, ταύτας πάντη ἀποβαλλόμεθα καὶ ὡς ψυχοφθόρους βδελυττόμεθα.

551 Ὡν δέ, τουτέστι τῶν αὐτῶν, τὰ ἀσεβῆ ἀποστρεφόμεθα δόγματα, τούτων καὶ τὰ ὀνόματα ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐκκλησίας ἐκβληθῆναι ἐκρίναμεν, τουτέστι Σεργίου ... τοῦ ἀρξαμένου περὶ τοῦ τοιοῦτου ἀσεβοῦς συγγράφεσθαι δόγματος, Κύρου τοῦ Ἀλεξανδρείας, Πύρρου, Παύλου καὶ Πέτρου καὶ αὐτῶν προεδρευσάντων ἐν τῷ θρόνῳ τῆς θεοφυλάκτου ταύτης πόλεως καὶ τὰ ὅμοια ἐκείνοις φρονησάντων· εἶτα δὲ καὶ Θεοδώρου τοῦ τῆς Φαράν γενομένου ἐπισκόπου· ὧν πάντων προγεγραμμένων προσώπων ἐπεμνήθη ἐν τῇ πρὸς τὸν ... βασιλέα ἀναφορᾷ [cf. *542–545] Ἀγάθων ὁ ἁγιώτατος καὶ τρισμακάριστος τῆς πρεσβυτέρας Ῥώμης πάπας, καὶ ἀπεβάλλετο ὡς ἐναντίως τῆς ὀρθοδόξου ἡμῶν πίστεως φρονήσαντας, οὓς καὶ ἀναθέματι καθυποβληθῆναι ὀρίζομεν.

552 Πρὸς τούτοις δὲ συνεκβληθῆναι ἐκ τῆς ἁγίας τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐκκλησίας καὶ συναναθεματισθῆναι συνείδομεν καὶ Ὁνώριον, τὸν γενόμενον πάπαν τῆς πρεσβυτέρας Ῥώμης διὰ τὸ εὐρηκέναι ἡμᾶς διὰ τῶν γενομένων παρ' αὐτοῦ γραμμάτων πρὸς Σέργιον κατὰ πάντα τῇ ἐκείνου γνώμῃ ἐξακολουθήσαντα καὶ τὰ αὐτοῦ ἀσεβῆ κυρώσαντα δόγματα.

553–559: Session 18, September 16, 681

Definition on the Two Wills and Operations in Christ

553 Ἦτις παροῦσα ἁγία καὶ οἰκουμενικὴ σύνοδος πιστῶς δεξαμένη καὶ ὑπταίς χερσὶν ἀσπασαμένη τὴν τε τοῦ ἁγιώτατου καὶ μακαριωτάτου πάπα τῆς πρεσβυτέρας Ῥώμης Ἀγάθωνος γενομένην ἀναφορὰν πρὸς τὸν εὐσεβέστατον καὶ πιστότατον ἡμῶν βασιλέα Κωνσταντῖνον, τὴν ἀποβαλλομένην ὀνομασί τούς κηρῦξαντας καὶ διδάξαντας, ὡς προοδηλωται, ἐν θέλημα καὶ μίαν ἐνέργειαν ἐπὶ τῆς ἐνσάρκου οἰκονομίας Χριστοῦ τοῦ ἀληθινοῦ Θεοῦ ἡμῶν [cf. *542–545]· ὡσαύτως δὲ προσηκαμένη καὶ τὴν ἐκ τῆς ὑπὸ τὸν αὐτὸν ἁγιώτατον πάπαν ἱεραῖς συνόδου τῶν ἑκατὸν εἴκοσι πέντε θεοφιλῶν ἐπισκόπων ἑτέραν συνοδικὴν ἀναφορὰν πρὸς τὴν αὐτοῦ θεόσοφον γαληνότητα [cf. *546–548], οἷά τε συμφωνούσας τῇ τε ἁγίᾳ ἐν Χαλκηδόνι συνόδῳ [cf. *300–306] καὶ τῷ τόμῳ τοῦ πανιέρου καὶ μακαριωτάτου πάπα τῆς αὐτῆς πρεσβυτέρας Ῥώμης Λέοντος, τῷ σταλέντι πρὸς Φλαυιανόν, τὸν ἐν ἁγίοις [cf. *290–295], ὃν καὶ στήλην ὀρθοδοξίας ἢ τοιαύτη σύνοδος ἀπεκάλεσεν.

the holy councils and to all the eminent holy Fathers but instead follow the false teachings of the heretics, these we entirely reject and loathe as soul-destroying.

As to these selfsame ones whose impious teachings we have rejected, we have also judged it necessary to banish their names from the holy Church of God, that is, (the names) of Sergius, ... who began to write about this impious doctrine, of Cyrus of Alexandria, of Pyrrhus, of Paul, and of Peter and of those who have presided on the throne of this God-protected city and the same for those who have been like-minded. Then also (the name) of Theodore who was bishop of Pharan. All these aforementioned persons were mentioned by Agatho, the most holy and thrice-blessed pope of elder Rome, in his letter to the ... emperor [*542–545] and rejected by him as having thought in a way contrary to our orthodox faith; and we determine that they are also subject to anathema.

Along with these we have seen fit to banish from the holy Church of God and to anathematize also Honorius, the former pope of the elder Rome, because we have discovered in the letters written by him to Sergius that he followed in everything the opinion of that one and confirmed his impious dogma.

This same holy and universal council, here present, faithfully accepts and welcomes with open hands the report of Agatho, most holy and most blessed pope of elder Rome, that came to our most reverend and most faithful emperor Constantine, which rejected by name those who proclaimed and taught, as has been already explained, one will and one principle of action in the incarnate dispensation of Christ our true God [cf. *542–545]; and likewise, it approves as well the other synodal report to his God-taught serenity, from the synod of 125 bishops dear to God meeting under the same most holy pope [cf. *546–548], as according with the holy council at Chalcedon [cf. *300–306] and with the Tomus of the all-holy and most blessed Leo, pope of the same elder Rome, which was sent to Flavian [cf. *290–295], who is among the saints and whom that council called a pillar of orthodoxy.

Ἔτι μὴν καὶ ταῖς συνοδικαῖς ἐπιστολαῖς ταῖς γραφεύσαις παρὰ τοῦ μακαρίου Κυρίλλου κατὰ Νεστορίου τοῦ δυσσεβοῦς πρὸς τοὺς τῆς ἀνατολῆς ἐπισκόπους· ἐπομένη τε ταῖς τε ἁγίαις καὶ οἰκουμενικαῖς πέντε συνόδοις, καὶ τοῖς ἁγίοις καὶ ἐγκρίτοις πατράσι, καὶ συμφώνως ὀρίζουσα ὁμολογεῖ τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν, τὸν ἀληθινὸν Θεὸν ἡμῶν, τὸν ἕνα τῆς ἁγίας ὁμοουσίου καὶ ζωαρχικῆς Τριάδος, τέλειον ἐν θεότητι, καὶ τέλειον τὸν αὐτὸν ἐν ἀνθρωπότητι, Θεὸν ἀληθῶς, καὶ ἄνθρωπον ἀληθῶς, αὐτὸν ἐκ ψυχῆς λογικῆς καὶ σώματος· ὁμοούσιον τῷ πατρὶ κατὰ τὴν θεότητα, καὶ ὁμοούσιον ἡμῖν τὸν αὐτὸν κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα· κατὰ πάντα ὅμοιον ἡμῖν χωρὶς ἁμαρτίας [cf. Hbr 4:15].

Τὸν πρὸ αἰῶνων μὲν ἐκ τοῦ πατρὸς γεννηθέντα κατὰ τὴν θεότητα, ἐπ' ἐσχάτων δὲ τῶν ἡμερῶν τὸν αὐτὸν δι' ἡμᾶς καὶ διὰ τὴν ἡμετέραν σωτηρίαν ἐκ πνεύματος ἁγίου καὶ Μαρίας τῆς παρθένου, τῆς κυρίας καὶ κατὰ ἀλήθειαν Θεοτόκου, κατὰ τὴν ἀνθρωπότητα· ἕνα καὶ τὸν αὐτὸν Χριστόν υἱὸν κύριον μονογενῆ ἐν δύο φύσεσιν ἀσυγχύτως, ἀτρέπτως, ἀχωρίστως, ἀδιαρέτως γνωριζόμενον, οὐδαμοῦ τῆς τῶν φύσεων διαφορᾶς ἀνηρημένης διὰ τὴν ἔνωσιν, σωζομένης δὲ μᾶλλον τῆς ιδιότητος ἑκατέρας φύσεως, καὶ εἰς ἓν πρόσωπον, καὶ μίαν ὑπόστασιν συντρεχούσης, οὐκ εἰς δύο πρόσωπα μεριζόμενον ἢ διαιρούμενον, ἀλλ' ἕνα καὶ τὸν αὐτὸν υἱὸν μονογενῆ Θεοῦ λόγον κύριον Ἰησοῦν Χριστόν, καθάπερ ἄνωθεν οἱ προφῆται περὶ αὐτοῦ, καὶ αὐτὸς ἡμᾶς Ἰησοῦς ὁ Χριστὸς ἐξεπαίδευσε, καὶ τὸ τῶν ἁγίων πατέρων ἡμῖν παραδέδωκε σύμβολον.¹

Καὶ δύο φυσικὰς θελήσεις ἦτοι θελήματα ἐν αὐτῷ, καὶ δύο φυσικὰς ἐνεργείας ἀδιαιρέτως, ἀτρέπτως, ἀμερίστως, ἀσυγχύτως κατὰ τὴν τῶν ἁγίων πατέρων διδασκαλίαν ὁσαύτως κηρύττομεν· καὶ δύο μὲν φυσικὰ θελήματα οὐκ ὑπεναντία, μὴ γένοιτο, καθὼς οἱ ἀσεβεῖς ἔφησαν αἰρετικοί, ἀλλ' ἐπόμενον τὸ ἀνθρώπινον αὐτοῦ θέλημα, καὶ μὴ ἀντιπίπτον, ἢ ἀντιπαλαῖον, μᾶλλον μὲν οὖν καὶ ὑποτασσόμενον τῷ θείῳ αὐτοῦ καὶ πανσθενεῖ θελήματι· ἔδει γὰρ τὸ τῆς σαρκὸς θέλημα κινήθῃναι, ὑποταγῆναι δὲ τῷ θελήματι τῷ θεϊκῷ κατὰ τὸν πάνσοφον Ἀθανάσιον·¹ ὡσπερ γὰρ ἡ αὐτοῦ σὰρξ, σὰρξ τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγου λέγεται καὶ ἔστιν, οὕτω καὶ τὸ φυσικὸν τῆς σαρκὸς αὐτοῦ θέλημα ἴδιον τοῦ Θεοῦ λόγου λέγεται καὶ ἔστι, καθά φησιν αὐτός· «ὅτι καταβέβηκα ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, οὐχ ἵνα ποιῶ τὸ θέλημα τὸ ἐμόν, ἀλλὰ τὸ θέλημα τοῦ πέμψαντός με πατρός» [Io 6:38], ἴδιον λέγων

These, moreover, agree with the synodal letters written 554 by the blessed Cyril against the impious Nestorius and to the bishops of the East. Following the five holy and ecumenical councils and the holy and accepted Fathers, and defining in unison, (the council) professes our Lord Jesus Christ our true God, one of the holy Trinity, which is of one same being and is the source of life, to be perfect in divinity and perfect in humanity, the same truly God and truly man, of a rational soul and a body; consubstantial with the Father as regards his divinity and the same consubstantial with us as regards his humanity and like us in all respects except for sin [cf. Heb 4:15].

(He was) begotten before the ages from the Father as 555 regards his divinity, and in the last days the same for us and for our salvation from the Holy Spirit and the Virgin Mary, who is properly and truly called Mother of God, as regards his humanity; one and the same Christ, Son, Lord, only begotten, acknowledged in two natures that undergo no confusion, no change, no separation, no division; at no point was the difference between the natures taken away through the union, but rather the property of both natures is preserved and comes together in a single person and hypostasis; he is not parted or divided into two persons but is one and the same only begotten Son, Word of God, Lord Jesus Christ, just as the prophets taught from the beginning about him, and as Jesus the Christ himself instructed us, and as the creed of the holy Fathers handed it down to us.¹

We likewise proclaim in him, according to the 556 teaching of the holy Fathers, two natural volitions or wills and two natural actions, without division, without change, without separation, without confusion. The two natural wills are not—by any means—opposed to each other as the impious heretics assert; but his human will is compliant; it does not resist or oppose but rather submits to his divine and almighty will. For, as the wise Athanasius says,¹ it was necessary that the will of the flesh move itself, but also that it be submitted to the divine will; because, just as his flesh is said to be and is the flesh of God the Word, so too the natural will of his flesh is said to be and is God the Word's very own, as he himself declares: "I have come down from heaven, not to do my own will, but the will of him who sent me" [Jn 6:38]. He calls the will of his flesh his own will because the flesh also has become his own. For *555 ¹ From τέλειον ἐν θεότητι (perfect in divinity [*554]) to here, the formulation is taken almost literally from the definition of Chalcedon (*301f.).

*556 ¹ Athanasius of Alexandria, Tractatus in illud "Nunc anima mea turbata est" [Jn 12:27] (lost).

θέλημα αὐτοῦ τὸ τῆς σαρκός, ἐπεὶ καὶ ἡ σὰρξ ἰδία αὐτοῦ γέγονεν· ὄν γὰρ τρόπον ἢ παναγία καὶ ἄμωμος ἐψυχωμένη αὐτοῦ σὰρξ θεοθεΐσα οὐκ ἀνηρέθη, ἀλλ' ἐν τῷ ἰδίῳ αὐτῆς ὄρω τε καὶ λόγῳ διέμεινε, οὕτω καὶ τὸ ἀνθρώπινον αὐτοῦ θέλημα θεωθὲν οὐκ ἀνηρέθη, σέσωσται δὲ μᾶλλον, κατὰ τὸν θεολόγον Γρηγόριον λέγοντα· «τὸ γὰρ ἐκείνου θέλειν, τὸ κατὰ τὸν σωτήρα νοούμενον οὐδὲ ὑπεναντίον Θεῷ, θεωθὲν ὄλον.»²

557 Δύο δὲ φυσικὰς ἐνεργείας ἀδιαίρετως, ἀτρέπτως, ἀμερίστως, ἀσυγχύτως ἐν αὐτῷ τῷ κυρίῳ ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστῷ τῷ ἀληθινῷ Θεῷ ἡμῶν δοξάζομεν, τουτέστι θείαν ἐνεργείαν καὶ ἀνθρωπίνην ἐνεργείαν κατὰ τὸν θεηγόρον Λέοντα τρανέστατα φάσκοντα· «ἐνεργεῖ γὰρ ἑκάτερα μορφή μετὰ τῆς θατέρου κοινωνίας ὅπερ ἴδιον ἔσχηκε, τοῦ μὲν λόγου κατεργαζομένου τοῦτο ὅπερ ἐστὶ τοῦ σώματος, τοῦ δὲ σώματος ἐκτελοῦντος ὅπερ ἐστὶ τοῦ σώματος» [*294]. Οὐ γὰρ δήπου μίαν ἄσομεν φυσικὴν τὴν ἐνεργείαν Θεοῦ καὶ ποιήματος, ἵνα μῆτε τὸ ποιηθὲν εἰς τὴν θείαν ἀναγάγωμεν οὐσίαν, μῆτε μὴν τῆς θείας φύσεως τὸ ἐξαιρετόν εἰς τὸν τοῖς γεννητοῖς πρόποντα καταγάγωμεν τόπον· ἐνὸς γὰρ καὶ τοῦ αὐτοῦ τὰ τε θαύματα καὶ τὰ πάθη γινώσκομεν κατ' ἄλλο καὶ ἄλλο τῶν, ἐξ ὧν ἐστὶ, φύσεων, καὶ ἐν αἷς τὸ εἶναι ἔχει, ὡς ὁ θεοσπέσιος ἔφησε Κύριλλος.¹

558 Πάντοθεν γοῦν τὸ ἀσύγχυτον καὶ ἀδιαίρετον φυλάττοντες, συντόμῳ φωνῆ τὸ πᾶν ἐξαγγέλλομεν· ἓνα τῆς ἁγίας Τριάδος καὶ μετὰ σάρκωσιν τὸν κύριον ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦν Χριστὸν τὸν ἀληθινὸν Θεὸν ἡμῶν εἶναι πιστεύοντες, φάμεν δύο αὐτοῦ τὰς φύσεις ἐν τῇ μιᾷ αὐτοῦ διαλαμπουσᾶς ὑποστάσει, ἐν ἣ τὰ τε θαύματα, καὶ τὰ παθήματα δι' ὅλης αὐτοῦ τῆς οἰκονομικῆς ἀναστροφῆς, οὐ κατὰ φαντασίαν, ἀλλὰ ἀληθῶς ἐπεδείξατο, τῆς φυσικῆς ἐν αὐτῇ τῇ μιᾷ ὑποστάσει διαφορᾶς γνωριζομένης τῷ μετὰ τῆς θατέρου κοινωνίας ἑκατέραν φύσιν θέλειν τε καὶ ἐνεργεῖν τὰ ἴδια καθ' ὄν δὴ λόγον καὶ δύο φυσικὰ θελήματα τε καὶ ἐνεργείας δοξάζομεν πρὸς σωτηρίαν τοῦ ἀνθρώπινου γένους καταλλήλως συντρέχοντα.

559 Τούτων τοίνυν μετὰ πάσης πανταχόθεν ἀκριβείας τε καὶ ἐμμελείας παρ' ἡμῶν διατυπωθέντων, ὀρίζομεν ἕτεραν πίστιν μηδενὶ ἐξεῖναι προφέρειν, ἧγουν συγγράφειν ἢ συντιθέναι ἢ φρονεῖν ἢ διδάσκειν ἕτερας· τοὺς δὲ τολμῶντας ἢ συντιθέναι πίστιν ἕτεραν ἢ προκομίζειν ἢ διδάσκειν, ἢ παραδιδόναι ἕτερον σύμβολον τοῖς ἐθέλουσιν ἐπιστρέφειν εἰς ἐπίγνωσιν τῆς ἀληθείας ἐξ Ἑλληνισμοῦ ἢ ἐξ Ἰουδαϊσμοῦ, ἢ γοῦν ἐξ αἰρέσεως οἷας οὖν, ἢ καινοφωνίαν, ἢ τοῦ just as his most holy and immaculate flesh, animated by his soul, has not been destroyed by being divinized but remained in its own state and kind, so also his human will has not been destroyed by being divinized. It has rather been preserved, according to the words of Gregory the theologian: “For his will—referring to that of the Savior—being fully divinized, is not opposed to God.”²

In the same our Lord Jesus Christ, our true God, we glory in proclaiming two natural actions, without division, without change, without separation, without confusion, namely, a divine action and a human action, as Leo, the master in matters related to God, asserts with utmost clarity: “For each of the two natures performs the function proper to it in communion with the other: the Word does what pertains to the Word and the flesh what pertains to the flesh” [*294]. For we do not in any way admit one natural action of God and the creature, so as neither to raise to the divine essence what is created nor to lower the sublime divine nature to the level proper to creatures. For we know that both the miracles and the sufferings belong to one and the same, according to the different natures of which he consists and in which he has his being, as the admirable Cyril has said.¹

Therefore, preserving entirely what is neither fused nor divided, we proclaim the entire matter in this concise utterance: Believing that one of the Holy Trinity, who after the Incarnation is our Lord Jesus Christ, is our true God, we say that his two natures shine forth in his one hypostasis. In it, throughout his entire human existence in the flesh, he made manifest his miracles and his sufferings, not in mere appearance, but in reality. The difference of natures in that same and unique hypostasis is recognized by the fact that each of the two natures wills and performs what is proper to it in communion with the other. Thus, we glory in proclaiming two natural wills and actions concurring together for the salvation of the human race.

These things, therefore, having been determined by us with all caution and diligence, we declare that no one is permitted to introduce or to describe or to compare or to study or otherwise to teach another faith. But whoever presumes to compare or to introduce or to teach or to pass on another creed to those wishing to turn from the belief of the Gentiles or of the Jews or from any heresy whatsoever to the acknowledgment of truth, or who (presumes) to introduce a novel doctrine or an invented λέξεως ἐφεύρεσιν πρὸς ἀνατροπὴν εἰσάγειν τῶν νυνὶ παρ' ἡμῶν διορισθέντων· τούτους, εἰ μὲν ἐπίσκοποι εἶεν, ἢ κληρικοί, ἄλλοτρίους εἶναι τοὺς ἐπισκόπους τῆς ἐπισκοπῆς καὶ τοὺς κληρικούς τοῦ κλήρου· εἰ δὲ μονάζοντες εἶεν ἢ λαϊκοί, ἀναθεματίζεσθαι αὐτούς.

*556 ² Gregory Nazianzen, Oratio 30, 12 (PG 36:117C).

*557 ¹ The words seem to repeat, in a rather free manner, the doctrinal content in particular of the synodal letter to Nestorius, nos. 8–9 (ACOe 1/1/1, 38); of anathemas 4 and 9 (*255, 260); of the letter to John of Antioch (*271–273); of the Scholia de incarnatione Unigeniti (Florilegium Cyrillianum 112f.: ACOe 1/V/1, 229); and of the Thesaurus de Trinitate (PG 75:388). There are also similarities with the third anathema of the Council of Constantinople II (*423).

expression in order to subvert those things that now have been determined by us, (we declare) these, if they be bishops or clerics, are to be removed from the episcopal or the clerical state; if monks or laymen are involved, they are to be anathematized.

LEO II: August 17, 682–July 3, 683

561–563: Letter Regi regum to Emperor Constantine IV, ca. August 682

After the papal legates returned to Rome from Constantinople, Leo II then sent the following letter to the emperor as well as letters to the bishops of Spain (Cum diversa sint) and to Ervigius, the king of Spain (Cum unus exstet) (MaC 11:1050E–1053B, 1055E–1058C / PL 96:413A–415C, 418B–420D / CdLuc 350–54, 357–61. —JR 2119–20), in which he recognized the Third Council of Constantinople. In these, he also mentioned the condemnation of Honorius: “Those who truly showed themselves to be enemies opposed to the purity of the apostolic tradition ... were punished with condemnation: i.e., Theodore of Pharan ... along with Honorius, who did not immediately extinguish the flame of the heretical teaching, as would befit the apostolic authority, but supported it by his negligence” (Qui vero adversum apostolicae traditionis puritatem perduelliones exstiterant, ... condemnatione mulctati sunt: i.e., Theodorus Pharan ... cum Honorio, qui flammam haeretici dogmatis non, ut decuit Apostolicam auctoritatem, incipientem exstinxit, sed negligendo cofovit) (letter to the bishops of Spain); “along with these, Honorius of Rome, who allowed the immaculate rule of apostolic tradition that he had received from his predecessors to be stained” (una cum eis Honorius Romanus, qui immaculatam apostolicae traditionis regulam, quam a praedecessoribus suis accepit, maculari consensit) (letter to Ervigius).

Ed.: MaC 11:727D–731D / HaC 3:1471C–1475B / PL 96:404B–408B (= letter 3). —Reg.: JR 2118.

Confirmation of the Decisions of the Third Council of Constantinople against the Monothelites and Pope Honorius I

Cognovimus enim, quod sancta et universalis et magna sexta Synodus [Constantinopolitana III] eadem, quae et universum concilium assidens huic Sanctae Sedi Apostolicae [Romanum a. 680] ... senserit, ... atque concorditer nobiscum confessa est:

Unum esse de sancta et inseparabili Trinitate nostrum Dominum Iesum Christum, ex duabus et in duabus naturis inconfuse, inseparabiliter, indivise consistentem, ut vere Deum perfectum et hominem perfectum eundem ipsum, salvaque proprietate uniuscuiusque in eo convenientium naturarum, eundem ipsum divina operatum ut Deum et humana inseparabiliter operatum ut hominem, absque solo peccato: et duas idcirco naturales voluntates duasque naturales operationes eum habere veraciter praedicavit, per quae principaliter et naturarum eius veritas demonstratur, usque ad cognoscendam profecto differentiam, quarum sunt naturarum, ex quibus et in quibus unus idemque Dominus noster Iesus Christus consistit; per quae revera probavimus, hanc sanctam ... sextam Synodum ... apostolicam praedicationem inoffenso pede fuisse secutam, sanctorumque et universalium quinque conciliorum definitionibus in omnibus consentientem, nihil super statuta orthodoxae fidei augentem aut minuentem, sed regiam et evangelicam semitam rectissime gradientem, et in his atque per eos sacrorum dogmatum lima et probabilium catholicae Ecclesiae Patrum doctrina servata est...

Indeed, We have learned that the holy and great 561 sixth universal council [the third of Constantinople] has judged in the same way as the entire synod [of Rome, 680] gathered around this holy Apostolic See ... and together with us has professed:

That our Lord Jesus Christ is one of the holy and undivided Trinity and that he exists from and in two natures, without confusion, separation, or division; so that, as one and the same, he is truly perfect God and perfect man, with the properties of each of the two natures joined in him being preserved; that, as one and the same, he accomplished divine things as God and human things inseparably as man, with the sole exception of sin: and for this reason, [the council] proclaimed that he truly has two natural wills and two natural operations, through which the reality of his two natures is especially evident so that we clearly recognize the difference of the natures from which and in which our one and the same Lord Jesus Christ exists; and because of this we have indeed recognized that this holy ... sixth council ... has followed, without fail, the apostolic preaching, in accord on all points with the decrees of the five holy and universal councils, and in no way has it added to or taken away anything from the determinations of the orthodox faith; but, rather, it has advanced most correctly on the royal and evangelical path, and, in and through (these decisions), the formulation of sacred dogmas and the doctrine of the esteemed Fathers of the Catholic Church have been preserved...

562 Et quia [Synodus Constantinopolitana] definitionem rectae fidei ... plenissime praedicavit, quam et Apostolica Sedes beati Petri Apostoli ... veneranter suscepit, idcirco et Nos, et per Nostrum officium haec veneranda Sedes Apostolica concorditer ac unanimiter his quae definita sunt ab ea, consentit et beati Petri auctoritate confirmat....

563 Pariterque anathematizamus novi erroris inventores, id est Theodorum Pharanitanum episcopum, Cyrum Alexandrinum, Sergium, Pyrrhum ... necnon et Honorium, qui hanc apostolicam Ecclesiam non apostolicae traditionis doctrina lustravit, sed profana proditione immaculatam fidem subvertere conatus est [graeca recensio: τῆ βεβήλω προδοσία μιανθῆναι τὴν ἄσπιλον παρεχώρησε].

And because [the Council of Constantinople] proclaimed the definition of the true faith ... in all its fullness, as the Apostolic See of the blessed apostle Peter ... has accepted with reverence; for this reason, We and, through Our office, this venerable Apostolic See give Our consent, harmoniously and unanimously, to those things which the council has determined, and we confirm them by the authority of blessed Peter....

And, we in like manner, anathematize the inventors of the new error: namely, Theodore, Bishop of Pharan, Cyrus of Alexandria, Sergius, Phyrus ... and also Honorius, who did not purify this apostolic Church by the doctrine of the apostolic tradition, but rather attempted to subvert the immaculate faith by profane treason [Greek version: he allowed the immaculate (Church) to be stained by profane treason].

BENEDICT II: June 26, 684–May 8, 685

564: Fourteenth Synod of TOLEDO: November 14–20, 684

King Ervigius of Spain satisfied the desire of Pope Leo II (cf. the letter mentioned in *561) and convoked this synod to confirm the decisions made at the Third Council of Constantinople against the Monothelites.

Ed.: Bruns 1:351f. / PL 84:508A–509A / MaC 11:1089C–1090C / HaC 3:1755C–1756B / CdLuc 732f. / CVis 445f.

The Properties of the Two Natures in Christ

564 (c. 8) At nunc nos ... [fidelibus] praedicamus, brevi admodum definitione collecta, ut in una enim Christi Filii Dei persona duarum naturarum individuas proprietates agnoscant, sicut indivisas atque inseparabiles, ita inconfusas et inconvertibiles permanere, unam deitatis, alteram hominis, unam qua ex Deo Patre est genitus, alteram qua ex Maria virgine generatus. Utraque ergo ei generatio plena, utraque perfecta, nihil minus ex deitate habens, nihil imperfectum ex humanitate suscipiens, non naturarum geminatione divisus, non persona geminatus, sed plenus Deus plenusque homo absque omni peccato in singularitate personae unus est Christus.

Unus igitur in utraque natura consistens et divinitatis signis effulget et humanitatis passionibus subiacet. Nec enim alter ex Patre, alter ex matre est genitus, cum tamen aliter de Patre, aliter de matre sit natus: ipse tamen in utroque naturarum genere non divisus, sed unus idemque et Dei et hominis filius; ipse vivit moriens, ipse moritur vivens; ipse impassibilis patiens, ipse passioni non subiacens nec deitate succumbens nec humanitate passioni se subtrahens; habens ex deitatis natura non posse mori, habens ex humanitatis substantia et nolle et posse mori; ex una immortalis habetur, ex altera mortalium condicione resolvitur; habens in aeterna divinitatis voluntate quo susceptum hominem sumeret, (Chap. 8) But now we ... make known [to the faithful], summarizing very briefly, that they must recognize that the indivisible properties of the two natures in the one Person of Christ, Son of God, remain indivisible and inseparable as well as without confusion or change, the one of the divinity, the other of humanity, the one in which he was generated from God the Father, the other in which he was born from the Virgin Mary. Both of these births, therefore, are complete; both are perfect; he, not having anything less of the divinity and taking nothing imperfect from humanity, is not divided by the two natures, nor is he twofold in his Person, but, as complete God and complete man apart from any sin, he is one Christ in the singularity of Person.

Existing thus one in the two natures, he is resplendent with signs of divinity and subject to the sufferings of humanity. Indeed, he was not generated as one from the Father and another from the Mother, though he was born differently from the Father and the Mother; nevertheless, he is not divided in the twofold forms of nature, but he is one and the same Son of God and Son of man; he himself lives although he dies and dies although he lives; he is himself incapable of suffering although he suffers; he does not yield to suffering; he is neither subject to it in divinity nor does he remove himself from it in humanity; from the nature of divinity he has the inability to die; from the substance of humanity, he has the wish not to habens in suscepti hominis voluntate, ut humana voluntas Deo subdita esset. Unde et ipse dicit ad Patrem: “Pater, non mea voluntas, sed tua fiat” [Lc 22:42], alteram videlicet ostendens voluntatem divinitatis qua susceptus est homo, alteram hominis qua oboediendum est Deo.

(c. 9) Et ideo secundum harum duarum differentiam naturarum, duarum quoque inseparabilium proprietates praedicandae sunt voluntatum et operum.

(c. 10) . . . Si quis igitur Iesu Christo Dei Filio ex utero Mariae virginis nato aliquid aut divinitatis imminuit aut de suscepta humanitate subducit, excepta sola lege peccati, et eum non verum Deum hominemque perfectum in una persona subsistentem sincerissime credit, anathema sit.

die and yet the ability to die. On the basis of one, he has immortality; on the basis of the other, he is subject to the condition of mortals; in the eternal will of divinity, he has assumed what pertains to men; in the human will assumed, he has made it subject to God. Therefore, he says to the Father: “Father, not my will but yours be done” [Lk 22:42], thus clearly showing that the one is the will of God by which the man has been assumed, and the other that of man in which God must be obeyed.

(Chap. 9) And therefore, in accordance with the difference of these two natures, the distinct properties of the two inseparable wills and activities must also be proclaimed.

(Chap. 10) . . . Therefore, if anyone, concerning Jesus Christ, the Son of God, born from the womb of the Virgin Mary, should either take away from the divinity or subtract anything from the humanity, except only the law of sin, and does not believe sincerely that he exists as true God and complete man in one Person, let him be anathema.

JOHN V: July 23, 685–August 2, 686

CONON: October 21, 686–September 21, 687

SERGIUS I: December 15, 687–September 8, 701

566–567: Fifteenth Synod of TOLEDO, begun May 11, 688: Apology of Julian

The Fourteenth Synod of Toledo (684) had accepted a work of Julian, Archbishop of Toledo and Primate of Spain (d. 690), entitled Apologia fidei verae (written against the Monothelites). In this, there were two doctrinal propositions that Benedict II found objectionable: first of all, that the will generates the will, as also wisdom, wisdom, and second, that, in Christ, there are three substances. Julian, however, adhered to his censured opinions and wrote a second apology, the Liber responsionis fidei nostrae. That this work was supported in the acts of the Fifteenth Synod of Toledo is easily understood by the fact that Julian was presiding. Pope Sergius I, it is said, may have approved this clarification of Julian. Contradicting the Spanish Fathers, the syndol acts of the subsequent Synod of Frankfurt refuted the second doctrinal proposition of Julius (*613). It must be acknowledged that it corresponds neither to cogent logic nor to ecclesiastical custom to place, as it were, on the same level of being a complete substance (the divine nature) and two incomplete substances (the soul and the body of the human nature).

Ed.: MaC 12:10E–12D / HaC 3:1761B–1762D / PL 96:525A–529B / CdLuc 741–46 / CVis 453–56.

Explanation on the Divine Trinity and the Incarnation

(1) . . . Invenimus, quod in libro illo Responsionis fidei nostrae, quem per Petrum regionarium Romanae Ecclesiae miseramus, id primum capitulum iam dicto papae [Benedicto II] incaute visum fuisset a nobis positum, ubi nos secundum divinam essentiam diximus: “Voluntas genuit voluntatem, sicut et sapientia sapientiam”; quod vir ille in incuriosa lectionis transcurusione praeteriens existimavit, haec ipsa nomina iuxta relativum, aut secundum comparisonem humanae mentis nos posuisse: et ideo ipsa renotatione sua ita nos admonere iussus est, dicens: “Naturali ordine cognoscimus, quia verbum ex mente originem ducit, sicut ratio et voluntas, et converti non possunt, ut dicatur: quia sicut verbum et voluntas de mente procedit, ita et mens de verbo aut voluntate”;

(1) . . . We have learned that in this book Liber responsionis fidei nostrae, which we had sent to the Roman Church through the regent, Peter, it seemed to the above-mentioned pope [Benedict II] that we had written the first chapter in an imprudent manner, where, with respect to divine essence, we said: “Will begot will, as also wisdom, wisdom”; because this man skipped over this hastily in a careless reading, he thought that we had used these expressions in a relative sense or according to a comparison with the human mind; and so he was induced to warn us in his response by saying: “In the natural order we recognize that the word takes its origin from the mind, just as reason and will, and these terms cannot be reversed by saying: as the word and the will et ex ista comparatione visum est Romano Pontifici, voluntatem ex voluntate non posse dici.

Nos autem non secundum hanc comparationem humanae mentis, nec secundum relativum, sed secundum essentiam diximus: Voluntas ex voluntate, sicut et sapientia ex sapientia. Hoc enim est Deo esse, quod velle: hoc velle, quod sapere. Quod tamen de homine dici non potest. Aliud quippe est homini id, quod est sine velle, et aliud velle etiam sine sapere. In Deo autem non est ita, quia simplex ita natura est, et ideo hoc est illi esse, quod velle, quod sapere....

567 (4) Ad secundum quoque retractandum capitulum transeuntes, quo idem Papa incaute nos dixisse putavit, tres substantias in Christo Dei Filio profiteri: sicut nos non pudebit, quae sunt vera defendere, ita forsitan quosdam pudebit, quae vera sunt ignorare. Quis enim nesciat, unumquemque hominem duabus constare substantiis, animae scilicet et corporis? [Provocatur ad 2 Cor 4:16 et Ps 62:2] ...

(5) Contra quam regulam invenimus item in Scripturis aut carne plerumque nominata totum hominem posse intelligi aut anima sola interdum nominata totius hominis perfectionem agnosci. Quapropter natura divina humanae sociata naturae possunt et tres proprie et duae tropice appellari substantiae. Sed aliud est, cum per proprietatem totus homo exprimitur, aliud, cum a parte totus intelligitur. Est enim quidam modus locutionis, qui frequenter in Scripturis divinis positus invenitur, quo significatur a parte totum: hic etiam tropus apud grammaticos “synecdoche” dicitur.

proceed from the mind, just so the mind proceeds from the word or the will”; and from this comparison it seemed to the Roman pontiff that the will cannot be said to be from the will.

However, it was not in the sense of this comparison with the human mind or in a relative sense; on the contrary, it was according to the essence that we said: Will from will, as also wisdom from wisdom. For God, in fact, “to be” is the same as “to will”, and “to will” the same as “to know”. Nevertheless, this cannot be said with regard to man. In fact, for man it is one thing for him to be without willing and something else for him to will without even knowing. In God, however, this is not so, because his nature is so simple that for him “to be” is the same thing as “to will” and “to know”....

(4) Passing on also to the review of the second chapter, in which the same pope thought we had, in an imprudent manner, professed three substances in Christ, the Son of God: just as we will not be ashamed to defend things that are true, others perhaps will be ashamed not to know things that are true. For who does not know that every man consists of two substances: namely, the soul and the body? [Reference is made to 2 Cor 4:16 and Ps 63:2.] ...

(5) Contrary to this rule, we likewise find in Scripture that one can understand the total man by what is generally called the flesh or that the perfection of the entire man is acknowledged when sometimes only the soul is named. Wherefore, the divine nature associated with the human nature can also be called both three substances in a proper sense and two substances in a figurative sense. But it is one thing when the whole man is expressed through a distinct property and something else when the whole is understood from a part. For there is a mode of speech that is frequently found in divine Scripture by which the whole is indicated by a part: this also is called “synecdoche” among grammarians.

568–575: Sixteenth Synod of TOLEDO, begun May 2, 693: Profession of Faith

This creed depends, to a large extent, on that of the Eleventh Synod of Toledo (*525–541). In *573, the position of Julian of Toledo presented in *566 is defended.

Ed.: J. Madoz, El símbolo del concilio XVI de Toledo, Estudios Onienses I, 3 (Madrid, 1946), 22–29 / MaC 12:64D–68D / HaC 3:1789E–1793C / CdLuc 772₂₆–779 / CVis 489–96.

The Divine Trinity

568 (art. 1) Credimus et confitemur omnium creaturarum, quae trinis rerum machinis continentur, auctricem atque conservatricem individuum Trinitatem: (2) id est Patrem, qui est totius fons et origo divinitatis; Filium, qui est plena imago Dei propter expressam in se paternae claritatis unionem, ante omnium saeculorum eventum ex Patris intimo ineffabiliter genitus; Spiritum vero Sanctum ex Patre Filioque absque aliquo initio procedentem.

(Art. 1) We believe and profess the undivided Trinity as the author and preserver of all creatures that are contained in the threefold structure of things: (2) that is, the Father, who is the source and origin of the entire divinity; the Son, who is the complete image of God because of the unity with the Father’s glory expressed in him, ineffably generated before the coming of all ages from the innermost core of the Father; and the Holy Spirit, who proceeds from the Father and the Son without any beginning.

(3) Qui tres, quamquam personarum secernantur distinctione, numquam tamen separantur potentiae maiestate: inseparabilis nempe aequalitatis eorum insinuatur divinitas. Et tamen, quamvis Pater genuerit Filium, nec ideo Filius sit idem qui Pater, neque Pater sit ipse qui Filius, sed nec Spiritus Sanctus Pater sit Filiusque, sed tantum Patris Filiique Spiritus eidem Patri et Filio etiam ipse coequalis. (4) Nequaquam in hac sancta Trinitate quicquam creatum servum famulumque convenit credi, nec adventitium vel subintroductum tamquam ei aliquando acciderit, quod constat eam aliquando minime habuisse, condecet autumari....

(6) Quarum tamen personarum, quamvis in hoc, quod ad se sunt, nulla possit separabilitas inveniri, in hoc vero, quod ad distinctionem adinet, sunt quaedam, quae specialius unicuique possint pertinere personae: scilicet, quod Pater a nullo originem sumpsit, Filius Patre generante existit, Spiritus quoque Sanctus ex Patris Filiique unione procedit....

(10) Et ista dicentes non personarum confundimus proprietates, nec unionem substantiae separamus; nihil etiam in eadem sancta Trinitate maius aut minus credere oportet nihilque etiam imperfectum atque mutabile....

(12) Idcirco sunt quaedam, quae in hac sancta Trinitate indiscrete oporteat confiteri. In hoc etenim, quod ad se sunt Pater et Filius et Spiritus Sanctus, indiscrete unus Deus credendus est Pater cum Filio et Spiritu Sancto. Quod vero ad relativum adinet, discrete personarum trium est praedicanda proprietas, Evangelista praedicante: Ite, docete omnes gentes in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti [cf. Mt 28:19]. Relativum etenim dicitur, quod una ad aliam persona referatur; nam quando dicitur Pater, Filii nihilominus persona signatur, et cum dicitur Filius, Pater ei sine dubio inesse monstratur.

(13) At nunc, quoniam Spiritus Sancti vocabulum, quo non tota Trinitas significatur, sed tertia quae est in Trinitate persona, quomodo secundum relativum ad Patris Filiique referatur personam, nequaquam apertissime pateat pro eo scilicet, quia sicut dicimus Spiritum Sanctum Patris, non consequenter dicimus Patrem Spiritus Sancti, ne Filius Spiritus Sanctus intellegatur; in aliis tamen vocabulis, quibus eiusdem Sancti Spiritus signatur persona, ad relativum pertinere dinoscitur. (14) Igitur "donum" specialiter Spiritum Sanctum accipimus, quae in sancta praenoscitur Trinitate tertia esse persona pro eo quod a Patre Filioque, cum quibus unius essentiae

(3) While these three are separated by the distinction of Persons, they are not separated in the majesty of power: their divinity has in fact been shown to be of inseparable equality. And though the Father generated the Son, the Son is not, for all that, the same as the Father, nor is the Father the same as the Son; and just so the Holy Spirit is neither the Father nor the Son, but only the Spirit of the Father and the Son, and he is himself co-equal to the Father and the Son. (4) It is not proper in any way to believe that in this Holy Trinity there is anything created, slave or servant; nor may it be claimed that at any time something may have been added or secretly introduced (to the Trinity) that might constitute something it did not possess at one time....

(6) Although, in these Persons, in what way they are in relation to themselves, one may never discover any possibility of division, nevertheless, in what concerns distinction, there are traits that pertain in a special way to each Person; namely, that the Father has not taken his origin from anyone, that the Son exists as being generated from the Father, and the Holy Spirit proceeds from the union of the Father and the Son....

(10) And by saying that we do not confuse the distinct properties of the Persons; neither do we separate the unity of the substance: and in no way should we believe that in this Holy Trinity there is anything greater or lesser or anything imperfect or changeable....

(12) Therefore, what is in this Holy Trinity must be confessed as indivisible. In fact, with respect to what the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit are for themselves, the Father must be believed without distinction as one God with the Son and the Holy Spirit. But, with respect to relation, the properties of the three Persons must be distinctly proclaimed, as the Evangelist preached: Go, therefore, teaching all the nations in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit [cf. Mt 28:19]. One speaks of relation, in fact, insofar as one Person refers to another; for when one says "Father", the Person of the Son is still signified, and when one says "Son", it is shown, without doubt, that the Father inheres in him.

(13) But now, with the term Holy Spirit, by which the entire Trinity is not signified, but the third Person who is in the Trinity, it is by no means completely clear how, in a relational sense, it refers to the Person of the Father and the Son, since, as we speak of the Holy Spirit of the Father, we do not correspondingly speak of the Father of the Holy Spirit, since the Holy Spirit is not understood as Son; nevertheless, in the other names by which the Person of the Holy Spirit is designated, it is obvious that they pertain to the relation. (14) Thus, in a special way, it is as "gift" that we understand the Holy Spirit, who we know to be the third Person of the Holy Trinity, since he is given to the faithful by the Father and the Son with whom, we believe, he is of one essence in all things; wherefore, when the “gift of the giver” and the “giver of the gift” are spoken of, it is without doubt the relation that is being declared; this, to avoid censure, must also be believed of the term “Holy Spirit” itself.

per omnia creditur, fidelibus condonetur: quapropter cum dicitur “donum donatoris” et “donator doni”, relativum haud dubie declaratur: quod etiam de ipso vocabulo Spiritus Sancti inculpabiliter est credendum.

Christ, the Incarnate Son of God

571 (16) Unde, licet inseparabilia sint opera Trinitatis, tamen fideliter profiteamur ..., quod non tota Trinitas susceperit carnem, sed solus Filius Dei, qui est ante saecula ex Dei Patris substantia genitus, in fine saeculorum de virgine Maria evangelio est teste enixus, qui ait: “Verbum caro factum est et habitavit in nobis” [Io 1:14]... (18) ... Angeli oraculum, cum Spiritum Sanctum superventurum in ea dicit, et virtutem Altissimi, qui est Dei Patris Filius, obumbraturum eam praemonuit [cf. Lc 1:35], eiusdem Filii carni totam Trinitatem cooperatricem esse monstravit. (19) Quae scilicet virgo sicut ante conceptionem obtinuit virginitatis pudorem, ita post partum nullam sensit integritatis corruptionem; nam virgo concepit, virgo peperit, et post partum incorruptelae pudorem sine interceptione obtinuit. ...

(16) Wherefore, although the works of the Holy Trinity are inseparable, we nevertheless profess in faith ... that the entire Trinity has not assumed flesh, but only the Son of God who was generated from the substance of the Father before all ages and, in the last of the ages, was born of the Virgin Mary, according to the clear witness of the Gospel, which says: “The Word became flesh and dwelt among us” [Jn 1:14]... (18) ... The oracle of the angel, when he says the Holy Spirit will come upon her and the power of the most high, who is the Son of God the Father, will overshadow her [cf. Lk 1:35], shows that the entire Trinity cooperates with the flesh of the Son. (19) As the Virgin, of course, preserved the purity of virginity before conception, accordingly after birth she experienced no corruption of her integrity; for she conceived as a virgin, she gave birth as a virgin, and after birth, she preserved the purity of incorruption without subtraction. ...

572 (22) Ipse vero Dei Filius ab ingenito Patre genitus, a vero verus, a perfecto perfectus, ab uno unus, a toto totus, Deus sine initio, perfectum hominem de sancta et inviolata Maria semper virgine adsumpsisse est manifestus. (23) Cui etiam, sicut hominis perfectionem adscribimus, ita duas ei voluntates inesse, unam divinitatis suae, aliam humanitatis nostrae, nihilominus credimus: (24) quod etiam per quatuor Evangelistarum oracula eiusdem Redemptoris nostri affatu evidentissime declaratur; sic enim fatus est dicens: “Pater mi, si possibile est, transeat a me calix iste; verumtamen non sicut ego volo, sed sicut tu” vis [Mt 26:39]; et iterum: Non veni voluntatem meam facere, sed voluntatem eius, qui misit me [cf. Io 6:38]... .

(22) It is thus evident that the same Son of God, begotten of the unbegotten Father, truth from truth, perfect from perfect, one from one, whole from whole, God without beginning, has assumed a complete humanity from the holy and inviolate ever-virgin Mary. (23) As we also ascribe to him the completeness of man, in the same manner, we still believe that there are two wills in him, one of his divinity, the other of our humanity; (24) this is also made most evident by the words of the four evangelists when our Redeemer speaks; for he speaks thus: “My Father, if it is possible, let this cup pass from me; nevertheless, not as I will but as you will” [Mt 26:39]; and in another passage: I have come, not to do my own will, but the will of the one who sent me [cf. Jn 6:38]... .

(25) Quibus etiam adlocutionibus demonstrat suam voluntatem ad hominem retulisse se adsumptum, Patris ad divinitatem, in qua est idem unus et aequalis cum Patre: quippe quantum ad divinitatis adinet unitatem, non est alia voluntas Patris, alia Filii; una enim est voluntas, ubi una persistit divinitas. Quantum autem ad hominis naturam adsumpti alia est voluntas deitatis suae, alia etiam humanitatis nostrae. (26) Proinde in hoc quod ait: “Non sicut ego volo, sed sicut tu” [Mt 26:39], patule ostendit non velle id fieri quod voluntate humani loquebatur affectus, sed propter quod ad terras paterna

(25) By these words, he also shows that he has referred his will to the man he assumed and the Father’s (will) to the divinity, in which he is one and equal to the Father: since in regard to the unity of the divinity, there is not one will of the Son and another of the Father; for there is only one will where there is one divinity. However, in regard to the nature of the man assumed, the will of his divinity is other than the will of our humanity. (26) Hence, in saying: “Not as I will, but as you will” [Mt 26:39], he clearly shows that what he wanted to happen was not that which he was voluntate descenderat, cuius tamen Patris voluntas nequaquam contraria Filii voluntati exstitit, quia quibus est divinitas una, non potest esse voluntas diversa; et ubi in natura nihil potest diversitatis accidere, ibi nihilominus enumerantur generaliter aliqua numerosa.

(27) Igitur huius voluntatis sanctae vocabulum, quamvis per comparativam similitudinem Trinitatis, qua dicitur memoria, intelligentia et voluntas, ad personam Sancti referatur Spiritus, secundum hoc autem, quod ad se dicitur, substantialiter praedicatur. (28) Nam voluntas Pater, voluntas Filius, voluntas Spiritus Sanctus, quemadmodum Deus est Pater, Deus est Filius, Deus est Spiritus Sanctus, et multa alia similia, quae secundum substantiam dici ab his, qui catholicae fidei veridici cultores existunt, nulla ratione ambiguntur. (29) Et sicut est catholicum dici Deum de Deo, lumen de lumine, lucem de luce, ita verae fidei est proba adsertio, voluntatem dici de voluntate, sicut sapientiam de sapientia, essentiam de essentia: et veluti Deus Pater genuit Filium Deum, ita voluntas Pater genuit Filium voluntatem. (30) Itaque quamquam secundum essentiam Pater voluntas, Filius voluntas, Spiritus Sanctus voluntas, non tamen secundum relativum unus esse credendus est, quoniam alius est Pater qui refertur ad Filium, alius Filius qui refertur ad Patrem, alius Spiritus Sanctus qui pro eo quod de Patre Filioque procedit, ad Patrem Filiumque refertur: non aliud, sed alius; quia quibus est unum esse in deitatis natura, his est in personarum distinctione specialis proprietatis. . . .

saying when moved according to his human will but that for which, according to the will of the Father, he had come down to earth; the will of the Father, nevertheless, was in no way opposed to the will of the Son: for those who have only one divinity cannot have a diverse will; and where in nature no diversity can occur, nevertheless, one can enumerate, in a general way, things that can be numbered.

(27) Therefore, this term “holy will”—although 573 it refers to the Person of the Holy Spirit through a comparable analogy, according to which the Trinity is called memory, intelligence, and will—when used of itself, is predicated according to the substance. (28) For the Father ⟨is⟩ will; the Son ⟨is⟩ will; the Holy Spirit ⟨is⟩ will; just as the Father is God, the Son is God, the Holy Spirit is God, and many other similar things that are said about the substance without any hesitation by those who are true adherents of the Catholic faith. (29) And just as it is Catholic to say: God from God, light from light, splendor from splendor, so it is a proper affirmation of the Catholic faith to say “will from will”, just like “wisdom from wisdom”, “essence from essence”: and just as God the Father begot God the Son, so the Will, the Father, begot the Will, the Son. (30) Therefore, although, according to essence, the Father ⟨is⟩ will; the Son ⟨is⟩ will; the Holy Spirit ⟨is⟩ will, nevertheless, we must not believe that they are one according to relation; for the Father is one as he relates to the Son; the Son is another as he relates to the Father; and the Holy Spirit, who, because he proceeds from the Father and the Son, is another as he relates to the Father and the Son; not something other; but another; because they who have one being in the nature of the divinity have a particular property in the distinction of Persons. . . .

The Resurrection of the Dead

(35) Exemplum nobis sua resurrectione impendens, sicut ille vivificans nos post duos dies tertio vivus resurrexit a mortuis, sic nos etiam in huius saeculi fine resurrekturos usquequaque credamus. Non in aëria, vel in phantasticae visionis umbra, ut quorundam improbanda opinio praestruit,¹ sed in veridicae carnis substantia, in qua nunc sumus et vivimus, ac tempore iudicii coram Christo et sanctis angelis eius adstantes unusquisque referet corporis sui propria, prout gessit, sive bonum, sive malum [cf. 2 Cor 5:10], recepturus ab eo aut pro propriis actibus interminabilis beatitudinis regnum, aut pro suis sceleribus perpetuae damnationis interitum.

Just as he gave us an example by his own Resurrection 574 and as, giving us life, after two days he rose on the third, alive from the dead, we believe at all times that at the close of this age we too will be resurrected, not as thin air or some shadowy phantasm, as the condemnable opinion of some affirms,¹ but in the substance of the real flesh in which we now are and live; and at the time of judgment, standing before Christ and the holy angels, each will give an account of what he has done in his body, whether good or bad [cf. 2 Cor 5:10], and will receive from him a kingdom of endless bliss for his good actions or everlasting damnation for his evil deeds.

*574 ¹ Directed against Patriarch Eutychius of Constantinople; cf. Gregory the Great, Moralia XIV, 56, no. 72 (M. Adriaen: CpChL 143A [1979]: 743f. / PL 75:1977f.).

The Excellence and Necessity of the Church of Christ

575 (36) Huius etenim fidei Ecclesia sancta catholica, baptismatis aqua abluta, Christi sanguine pretioso redempta, quae neque in fide habet rugam neque maculosi perfert operis notam [cf. Eph 5:23–27], insignibus pollet, virtutibus claret, Sanctique Spiritus donis referta coruscat. (37) Quae etiam cum Iesu Christo Domino nostro capite suo, cuius corpus esse nequaquam ambigitur, est perenniter regnatura, atque omnes, qui nunc in ea minime consistunt sive constiterint aut ab ea recesserunt sive recesserint aut peccata in ea relaxari diffidentiae malo negaverint, nisi paenitudinis ope ad eam redierint et quaeque Nicaena Synodus . . . , Constantinopolitanus conventus . . . , Epheseni primi concilii amplecti auctoritas sanxit atque Chalcedone sanctorum unanimitas vel reliquorum conciliorum sive etiam omnium venerabilium Patrum in fide sana recte viventium edicta custodire praecipunt, absque aliquo dubietatis naevo non crediderint, perpetuae damnationis sententia ulciscuntur atque in fine saeculi cum diabolo eiusque sociis ignivomis rogis cremabuntur.

(36) The holy Catholic Church who has this faith, cleansed by the water of baptism, redeemed by the precious blood of Christ, having no wrinkle in faith and bearing no blemish of impure work [cf. Eph 5:23–27], is in fact rich in signs of eminence, brilliant in virtues, and resplendent in the gifts of the Holy Spirit. (37) She, indeed, will reign forever with her head, Jesus Christ, our Lord, whose body, without doubt, she is; and all those now who are not at all in her or will not be in her or have departed or will depart from her, or those who, in the evil of mistrust, might have denied that sins are remitted in her, those who, unless they return to her with the help of penance and believe, without any mark of doubt, all that the Council of Nicaea . . . , the assembly of Constantinople, . . . and the authority of the First Council of Ephesus resolved to embrace, as well as the edicts that the unanimous will of the holy Fathers at Chalcedon or the other councils or, likewise, all the venerable Fathers who lived justly in sound faith prescribe to observe, these will be punished by the sentence of everlasting damnation, and they will be burned on flaming pyres with the devil and his associates until the end of time.

JOHN VI: October 30, 701–January 11, 705

JOHN VII: March 1, 705–October 18, 707

SISINNIUS: January 15–February 4, 708

CONSTANTINE I: March 25, 708–April 9, 715

GREGORY II: May 19, 715–February 11, 731580: Letter Desiderabilem mihi to Boniface, November 22, 726

Ed.: M. Tangl, Die Briefe des hl. Bonifatius und Lullus, MGH Epistulae selectae I (Berlin, 1916), 46 (= letter 26) / E. Dümmler, S. Bonifatii et Lulli epistolae, MGH Epistulae III (Berlin, 1892), 276_{27–32} (= letter 26: the numbering of the letters in the editions of Tangl and Dümmler always correspond) / P. Jaffé, Monumenta Moguntina, Bibliotheca rerum Germanicarum III (Berlin, 1866), 90 / PL 89:525CD. —Reg.: JR 2174; BoeW 1:4, no. 20.

The Form and Minister of Baptism

580 Quosdam baptizatos absque interrogatione symboli ab adulteris et indignis presbyteris fassus es. In his tua dilectio teneat antiquum morem Ecclesiae: quia, quisquis in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti baptizatus est, rebaptizari liceat minime; non enim in nomine baptizantis, sed in nomine Trinitatis huius gratiae donum percepit. Et teneatur, quod Apostolus dicit: Unus Deus, una fides, unum baptisma [cf. Eph 4:5]. Doctrinam vero spiritualem talibus studiosius ut impertias demandamus.

You have said that some without the profession of the Creed were baptized by adulterous and unworthy priests. In these cases may your love hold to the ancient custom of the Church: that whoever has been baptized in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit may in no case be rebaptized; for not in the name of the one baptizing, but in the name of the Trinity has one received the gift of this grace. And let that which the apostle says be observed: One God, one faith, one baptism [cf. Eph 4:5]. But we recommend that to such you teach more zealously the spiritual doctrine.

581: Letter Τά γράμματα to Emperor Leo III, between 726 and 730

This letter, erroneously attributed in the past to Gregory III, is, at least in substance, authentic (E. Caspar). It is directed to [Emperor] Leo III Isaurus, nicknamed “the Iconoclast”.

Ed.: E. Caspar, Papst Gregor II. und der Bilderstreit, in ZKG 52 (1933): 77_{156–71} (in Greek only) / MaC 12:966A–C (Greek); 965 (Latin) / HaC 4:8AB: 7AB / BarAE, at year 726, no. 28.

The Veneration of Sacred Images

Καὶ λέγεις, ὅτι πέτρας καὶ τοίχους καὶ σανίδια προσκυνοῦμεν. Οὐχ, ὡς λέγεις, ἐστί, βασιλεῦ, ἀλλ’ εἰς ὑπόμνησιν ἡμῶν καὶ εἰς διέγερσιν καὶ τὸν νοῦν ἡμῶν τὸν παχὺν καὶ χονδρὸν ἄνω ἀναφέροντα, δι’ ὧν τὰ ὀνόματα καὶ δι’ ὧν ἡ ἐπίκλησις καὶ δι’ ὧν οἱ χαρακτῆρες· καὶ οὐκ ὡς θεοὺς, ὡς λέγεις σύ. Μὴ γένοιτο. Οὐ γὰρ ἔχομεν τὰς ἐλπίδας εἰς αὐτά. Καὶ εἰ μὲν ἐστὶν εἰκῶν τοῦ Κυρίου, λέγομεν· Κύριε Ἰησοῦ Χριστέ Υἱὲ τοῦ Θεοῦ, βοήθησον καὶ σῶσον ἡμᾶς. Εἰ δὲ τῆς ἀγίας αὐτοῦ μητρός, λέγομεν· ἅγια θεοτόκε, μήτηρ τοῦ Κυρίου, πρέσβευε εἰς τὸν Υἱόν σου τὸν ἀληθινὸν Θεὸν ἡμῶν εἰς τὸ σῶσαι τὰς ψυχὰς ἡμῶν. Εἰ δὲ μάρτυρος· ἅγιε Στέφανε πρωτομάρτυς, ὁ ἐκχύσας τὸ αἷμα ὑπὲρ Χριστοῦ ὡς ἔχων παρρησίαν· πρέσβευε ὑπὲρ ἡμῶν. Καὶ ἐπὶ παντὸς μάρτυρος μαρτυρήσαντος οὕτως λέγομεν, τοιαύτας εὐχὰς ἀναπέμπομεν δι’ αὐτῶν. Καὶ οὐκ ἔστιν, ὡς λέγεις, βασιλεῦ, θεοὺς τοὺς μάρτυρας ὀνομάζοντες.

And you claim that we worship rocks and walls and wooden panels. It is not as you say, Emperor; rather, it is for remembrance on our part and to rouse us, for the lifting up of our mind, sluggish and weak as it is—that is the reason for the names and the invocation and the images; and not as gods, as you claim. Far from it! For our hopes are not based on them. And if there is an image of the Lord, we say, “Lord Jesus Christ, Son of God, help us and save us.” Or if there is one of his holy Mother, we say, “Holy God-bearer, Mother of the Lord, intercede with your Son, our true God, for the salvation of our souls.” Or if it is one of a martyr: “St. Stephen the Protomartyr, who poured out (your) blood for the sake of Christ, intercede for us, as one who can speak easily with him.” And in the case of every martyr who gave witness, we speak in this way; we send up prayers of this sort through them. And it is not the case, as you claim, Emperor, that we call the martyrs gods. 581

GREGORY III: March 18, 731–November 28 (29?), 741582–583: Letter Magna nos habuit to Bishop Boniface, ca. 732

Ed.: Tangl: MGH Epistulae selectae I, 50f. (= letter 28) / Dümmler: MGH Epistulae III, 279_{23f.}, 34f. [= *583] / Jaffé, Monumenta Moguntina 93 / PL 89:577BC / Gratian, Decretum, p. III, dist. 4, c. 52 [Frdb 1:1382] [= *582]; Gratian, Decretum, p. II, cs. 13, q. 2, c. 21 [Frdb 1:728] [= *583]. —Reg.: JR 2239; BoeW 1:4, no. 21.

Baptism of Questionable Validity

Eosdemque, quos a paganis baptizatos esse asseruisti, si ita habetur, ut denuo baptizes in nomine Trinitatis, mandamus.... Nam et eos, qui se dubitant fuisse baptizatos an non, vel qui a presbytero Iovi mactanti et immolaticias carnes vescenti, ut baptizentur praecipimus.

As for what concerns those whom you assert have been baptized by pagans, if that is the case, then we order you to baptize them again in the name of the Trinity.... For those who doubt whether they have been baptized or not or who have been baptized by a priest sacrificing to Jupiter or eating sacrificial food, we order that they, too, be again baptized. 582

The Sacrifice of the Mass for the Dead

Pro obeuntibus quippe consuluisse dinosceris, si liceat oblationes offerre. Sancta sic tenet Ecclesia, ut quisque pro suis mortuis vere christianis offerat oblationes atque presbyter eorum faciat memoriam. Et quamvis omnes peccatis subiaceamus, congruit, ut sacerdos pro mortuis catholicis memoriam faciat et intercedat. Non tamen pro impiis, quamvis christiani fuerint, tale quid agere licebit.

You indeed have asked for counsel as to whether it is permitted to offer oblations for the dead. The holy Church maintains that each person may offer oblations for his truly Christian dead and that the priest may commemorate them. And although we are all subject to sin, it is fitting that the priest should commemorate and intercede for deceased Catholics. Nevertheless, it will not be permitted to do so for the impious, even if they were Christians. 583

ZACHARY: December 10 (3?), 741–March 22 (15?), 752586: Letter Suscipientes sanctissimae fraternitatis to Archbishop Boniface of Mainz, November 5, 744

This is the reply to a lost letter of Boniface.

Ed.: Tangl: MGH Epistulae selectae I, 107 (= letter 58) / Dümmler: MGH Epistulae III, 315_{24–38} / Jaffé, Monumenta Moguntina 135 (= letter 49) / PL 89:928BC (= letter 6). —Reg.: JR 2271; BoeW 1:10, no. 47.

Simony

- 586 (§ 2) Repperimus [in Bonifatii litteris ad papam] . . . , quod talia a te nobis referantur, quasi Nos corruptores simus canonum et Patrum rescindere traditiones quaeramus, ac per hoc, quod absit, cum nostris clericis in simoniacam haeresim incidamus, accipientes et compellentes quorum pallia tribuimus, ut nobis praemia largiantur, expetentes ab illis pecunias. . . . [Admonetur Bonifatius, ne tale quid iterum scribat], quia fastidiosum a Nobis et iniuriosum suscipitur, dum illud Nobis ingeritur quod Nos omnino detestamur. Absit enim a Nobis et a Nostris clericis, ut donum, quod per Spiritus Sancti gratiam suscepimus, pretio venundemus . . . anathematizantes namque omnes, quicumque ausi fuerint donum Sancti Spiritus pretio venundare.
- (§ 2) We have discovered [in a letter of Boniface to the pope] . . . that you are reporting such things about Us as if We were corruptors of the canons and were seeking to rescind the traditions of the Fathers and that by this—may God forbid!—We were falling, with our clergy, into the heresy of simony, by accepting ⟨financial rewards⟩ and compelling those whose pallia We confer to reward Us, seeking money from them. . . . [Boniface is exhorted not to write any such thing again], because We consider it presumptuous and offensive for Us to be accused of that which We altogether detest. Indeed, far be it from Us and Our clergy to sell for money what We have received by the grace of the Holy Spirit. . . . We in fact anathematize all who dare to sell a gift of the Holy Spirit for money.

587: Synod of ROME, Session 3, October 25, 745

Clement, a priest from Scotland, was accused in Rome by Boniface in the following manner: “He is introducing Judaism: he judges that it is licit for a Christian, if he should so desire, to take as his wife the widow of his dead brother. He contradicts the faith of the holy Fathers by saying that Christ, the Son of God, when he descended into hell, freed all those who were held captive in hell, the faithful and the unfaithful, those who adore God as well as those who worship idols. He affirms many other horrible things touching on God’s predestination in contradiction to the Catholic faith” (Judaismum inducens iustum esse iudicat Christiano, ut, si voluerit, viduam fratris defuncti accipiat uxorem. Qui contra fidem sanctorem Patrum contendit dicens, quod Christus Filius Dei descendens ad inferos omnes quos inferni carcer detinuit, inde liberasset, credulos et incredulos, laudatores Dei simul et cultores idolorum. Et multa alia horribilia de praedestinatione Dei contraria fidei catholicae adfirmat; in M. Tangl: MGH Epistulae selectae I, 112_{19–25}). —A similar error, namely, that Christ, in descending into hell, had saved all those who confessed him as God, Gregory I had already rejected by denying the salvation of those who had only a dead faith (letter Memor bonitatis to the presbyter George, May 567: MGH Epistulae I, 458 = Registrum epistolarum VII, 15 / PL 77:869f.; JR 1461).

Ed.: Tangl: MGH Epistulae selectae I, 118 (= letter 59) / Dümmler: MGH Epistulae III, 321_{34–39} / PL 89:835D. —Reg.: A. Werminghoff, in NArch 24 (1899): 466f.; BoeW 1:13, no. 58.

Descent of Christ into Hell

- 587 . . . Clemens, qui per suam stultitiam sanctorum Patrum statuta respuit vel omnia synodalia acta, inferens etiam Christianis iudaismum, dum praedicet fratris defuncti accipere uxorem, insuper et Dominum Iesum Christum descendentem ad inferos omnes pios et impios exinde praedicat abstraxisse, ab omni sit sacerdotali officio nudatus et anathematis vinculo obligatus.
- . . . Clement, who by his stupidity rejects the decisions of the holy Fathers and all the synodal acts and who introduces Judaism even for Christians when he preaches that it is licit to assume the wife of a dead brother and who, moreover, preaches that the Lord Jesus Christ, in descending into hell, delivered from there all the pious and the impious, is stripped of all priestly function and bound by the chain of anathema.

588: Letter Virgilius et Sedonius to Archbishop Boniface of Mainz, July 1, 746 (745?)

Ed.: Tangl: MGH Epistulae selectae I, 141 (= letter 68) / Dümmler: MGH Epistulae III, 336_{19–25} / Jaffé, Monumenta Moguntina 167f. (= letter 58) / PL 89:929C (= letter 7) / Gratian, Decretum, p. III, dist. 4, c. 86 (Frdb 1:1390). —Reg.: JR 2276; A. Brackmann, Germania Pontificia 1/1 (Berlin, 1910), 7, no. 1; BoeW 1:15, no. 66.

The Intention and Form Required for Baptism

Retulerunt quippe, quod fuerit in eadem provincia sacerdos, qui latinam linguam penitus ignorabat et, dum baptizaret, nesciens latini eloquii, infringens linguam diceret: “Baptizo te in nomine Patria et Filia et Spiritus Sancti”. Ac per hoc tua reverenda fraternitas consideravit rebaptizare. Sed ... si ille qui baptizavit, non errorem introducens aut haeresim, sed pro sola ignorantia Romanae locutionis infringendo linguam, ut supra fati sumus, baptizans dixisset, non possumus consentire, ut denuo baptizentur....

For they have reported that there was a priest in that province who was so completely ignorant of the Latin language that when he was baptizing, because of his ignorance of the Latin speech, distorting the language, said: “Baptizo te in nomine Patria et Filia et Spiritus Sancti.” And on account of this your honored brotherhood has considered rebaptizing. But ... if that one who baptized, in baptizing, spoke the contorted language as we said above, not in order to introduce an error or a heresy, but through mere ignorance of the Roman speech, we do not agree that they should be baptized a second time....

589: Letter Sacris liminibus to Archbishop Boniface of Mainz, May 1, 748

Ed.: Tangl: MGH Epistolae selectae I, 173¹⁹⁻²⁶, 175³⁻⁸ (= letter 80) / Dümmler: MGH Epistolae III, 357¹⁰⁻²⁴, 358⁹⁻¹³ / Jaffé, Monumenta Moguntina 186f. (= letter 66) / PL 89:943D, 944C (= letter 11) / Gratian, Decretum, p. III, dist. 4, c. 83 (Frdb I:1389f.). —Reg.: JR 2286, with additions; BoeW 1:16f., no. 70.

The Intention and Form of Baptism

In illa [Anglorum synodo] tale decretum et iudicium firmissime praeceptum et diligenter demonstratum esse dignoscitur, ut quicumque sine invocatione Trinitatis lotus fuisset, quod sacramentum regenerationis non haberet. Quod omnino verum est; quia si mersus in fonte baptismatis quis fuerit sine invocatione Trinitatis, perfectus non est, nisi fuerit in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti baptizatus.... Hoc quoque observari in supradicta synodo sacerdotes, ut, qui vel unam de Trinitate personam in baptismo non nominaret, illud baptismum esse non posse, quod pro certo verum est, quia qui unum ex sancta Trinitate confessus non fuerit, perfectus Christianus esse non potest.

In this [synod of the English], it is clearly evident that this decree and judgment were commanded in a most firm manner; and it was diligently demonstrated that whoever was purified without the invocation of the Trinity did not receive the sacrament of regeneration. This is absolutely true, for anyone immersed in the fountain of baptism without the invocation of the Trinity is not perfected unless he has been baptized in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit.... The priests in the above-mentioned synod wished that it likewise be observed that if anyone in baptism fails to name even one Person of the Trinity, that cannot be a baptism, which is surely true, since whoever has not confessed one (Person) of the Holy Trinity cannot be a perfect Christian.

(STEPHEN II: March 23–25, 752)

(He died the day before his consecration and, therefore, according to ancient custom, is not numbered among the popes.)

STEPHEN II (III): March 26, 752–April 26, 757

592: Responses from Quiercy (Oise), 754

These were given in a monastery in France while the pope was spending time in Quiercy. Worth noting also are the responses concerning marriages and their incomplete divorce.

Ed.: PL 89:1027BC / MaC 12:561D / HaC 3:1988AB. —Reg.: JR 2315.

The Form of Baptism

(Resp. XIV.) De illo presbytero, qui baptizavit isto modo sic rustice: In nomine Patris mergo et Filii mergo et Spiritus Sancti mergo, et ipse presbyter nescit, si

(Answer 14). Concerning that priest who baptized in such a crude manner: In the name of the Father, I immerse, and of the Son, I immerse, and of the Holy episcopus fuit qui eum benedixit: hic, qui ordinationem suam ignorat, omnino abiiciendus est . . . ; infantes vero illi, quos baptizavit, licet rustice, quia in nomine sanctae Trinitatis sunt baptizati, in eo permaneant baptismo.

Spirit, I immerse; and who himself, as priest, does not know if it was the bishop who blessed him: this one, who is ignorant of his own ordination, is to be completely deposed . . . ; but the infants he baptized, even though in a crude manner, since they were baptized in the name of the Holy Trinity, should remain in this baptism.

PAUL I: May 29, 757–June 28, 767
STEPHEN III (IV): August 7, 768–January 24, 772

ADRIAN I: February 9, 772–December 25, 795

595–596: Letter Institutio universalis to the Spanish Bishops, between 785 and 791

A copy of the letter is preserved in the Codex Carolinus (letter 95, MGH / letter 83, PL). The text regarding predestination (*596) is also found verbatim in the letter of Adrian I Audientes orthodoxam to Bishop Egila of Elvira (Granada) (MGH Epistulae III, 644–47 = Codex Carolinus, letter 96 / PL 98:343; cf. JR 2445). It is taken from a lost work of Fulgentius of Ruspe: his letter to Eugippius. Ed. [*595; 596]: W. Gundlach: MGH Epistulae III, 637^{33–37}; 644–26 / PL 98:376AB; 383B–384A. —Reg.: JR 2479.

The Errors of the Adoptionists

595 . . . De partibus vestris pervenit ad nos lugubre capitulum, quod quidam episcopi ibidem degentes, videlicet Eliphandus et Ascaricus cum aliis eorum consentaneis, Filium Dei adoptivum confiteri non erubescunt, quod nullus quamlibet haeresiarcha talem blasphemiam ausus est oblatrare, nisi perfidus ille Nestorius, qui purum hominem Dei confessus est Filium. . . .

. . . And then from your country a plaintive chapter came to us that certain bishops living there, namely, Elipandus and Ascaricus, with others agreeing with them, do not blush to confess the Son of God as adopted; no heretical leader, however great, has dared to utter such blasphemy, except that perfidious Nestorius, who has declared that the Son of God is pure man. . . .

Predestination

596 Illud autem, quod alii ex ipsis dicunt, quod praedestinatio ad vitam sive ad mortem in Dei sit potestate et non nostra; isti dicunt “Ut quid conamur vivere, quod in Dei est potestate?”; alii iterum dicunt: “Ut quid rogamus Deum, ne vincamur tentatione, quod in nostra est potestate, quasi libertate arbitrii?”

As for that, however, which some of these say, that predestination to life or to death is in the power of God and not in ours; they say: “Why do we try to live, because it is in the power of God?” Again, others say: “Why do we ask God that we may not be overcome by temptation, since it is in our power, as in the freedom of will?”

Revera enim nullam rationem reddere vel accipere valent, ignorantes beati Fulgentii episcopi ad Eugipium presbyterum contra sermonem cuiusdam Pelagiani opuscula directa. . . . “Opera ergo misericordiae ac iustitiae praeparavit Deus in aeternitate incommutabilitatis suae . . . ; praeparavit ergo iustificandis hominibus merita; praeparavit iisdem glorificandis et praemia; malis vero non praeparavit voluntates malas aut opera mala, sed praeparavit eis iusta et aeterna supplicia. Haec est aeterna praedestinatio futurorum operum Dei, quam, sicut nobis apostolica doctrina semper insinuari cognoscimus, sic etiam fiducialiter praedicamus.”

For truly they are unable to give or accept any reason, being ignorant of the writings of blessed Fulgentius to the presbyter Eugippius, directed against the discourses of a certain Pelagian . . . : “Therefore, God in the eternity of his changelessness has prepared works of mercy and justice . . . ; but for men who are to be justified, he has prepared merits; he has prepared rewards for those who are to be glorified; but for the wicked he has not prepared evil wills or evil works, but he has prepared for them just and eternal punishments. This is the eternal predestination of the future works of God, which as we have always acknowledged to be taught to us by apostolic doctrine, so also faithfully we proclaim.”

Second Council of NICAEA (Seventh Ecumenical): September 24–October 23, 787

As a result of the initiative of Empress Irene, iconoclasm, which had been incited in the Byzantine Empire by Leo III in 726, was gradually repressed and, in this council, the doctrine of the Church on sacred images was solemnly declared. Because of an unfortunate Latin translation, its teaching came to be resisted at the Synod of Frankfurt.

600–603: Session 7, October 13, 787

The definition, drawn up during session 7, was solemnly proclaimed in session 8 of October 23.

Ed.: MaC 13:377C–380B / COeD, 3rd ed., 135₃₆–137₃₄ / HaC 4:456A–D.

Definition concerning Sacred Images

... Τὴν βασιλικὴν ὡσπερ ἐρχόμενοι τρίβον, ἐπακολουθοῦντες τῇ θεηγόρῳ διδασκαλίᾳ τῶν ἁγίων πατέρων ἡμῶν, καὶ τῇ παραδόσει τῆς καθολικῆς ἐκκλησίας· τοῦ γὰρ ἐν αὐτῇ οἰκήσαντος ἁγίου πνεύματος εἶναι ταύτην γινώσκομεν· ὀρίζομεν σὺν ἀκριβείᾳ πάσῃ καὶ ἐμμελείᾳ, παραπλησίως τῷ τύπῳ τοῦ τιμίου καὶ ζωοποιοῦ σταυροῦ ἀνατίθεσθαι τὰς σεπτὰς καὶ ἁγίας εἰκόνας, τὰς ἐκ χρωμάτων καὶ ψηφίδος καὶ ἐτέρας ὕλης ἐπιτηδείως ἐχούσης, ἐν ταῖς ἁγίαις τοῦ Θεοῦ ἐκκλησίαις, ἐν ἱεροῖς σκεύεσι καὶ ἐσθῆσι, τοίχοις τε καὶ σανίσιν, οἴκοις τε καὶ ὁδοῖς· τῆς τε τοῦ κυρίου καὶ Θεοῦ καὶ σωτῆρος ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ εἰκόνας, καὶ τῆς ἀχράντου δεσποίνης ἡμῶν τῆς ἁγίας Θεοτόκου, τιμίων τε ἀγγέλων, καὶ πάντων ἁγίων καὶ ὁσίων ἀνδρῶν.

Ὅσα γὰρ συνεχῶς δι’ εἰκονικῆς ἀνατυπώσεως ὁρᾶνται, τοσοῦτον καὶ οἱ ταύτας θεώμενοι διανίστανται πρὸς τὴν τῶν πρωτοτύπων μνήμην τε καὶ ἐπιτόθησιν, καὶ ταύταις ἀσπασμὸν καὶ τιμητικὴν προσκύνησιν ἀπονέμειν, οὐ μὴν τὴν κατὰ πίστιν ἡμῶν ἀληθινὴν λατρείαν, ἣ πρέπει μόνῃ τῇ θεῖᾳ φύσει· ἀλλ’ ὄν τρόπον τῷ τύπῳ τοῦ τιμίου καὶ ζωοποιοῦ σταυροῦ καὶ τοῖς ἁγίοις εὐαγγελίοις, καὶ τοῖς λοιποῖς ἱεροῖς ἀναθήμασι, καὶ θυμαμάτων καὶ φώτων προσαγωγῆν πρὸς τὴν τούτων τιμὴν ποιεῖσθαι, καθὼς καὶ τοῖς ἀρχαίοις εὐσεβῶς εἶδισται. «Ἡ γὰρ τῆς εἰκόνας τιμὴ ἐπὶ τὸ πρωτότυπον διαβαίνει»,¹ καὶ ὁ προσκυνῶν τὴν εἰκόνα προσκυνεῖ ἐν αὐτῇ τοῦ ἐγγραφομένου τὴν ὑπόστασιν.

Οὕτω γὰρ κρατύνεται ἡ τῶν ἁγίων πατέρων ἡμῶν διδασκαλία, εἴτουν παράδοσις τῆς καθολικῆς ἐκκλησίας, τῆς ἀπὸ περάτων εἰς πέρατα δεξαμένης τὸ εὐαγγέλιον· οὕτω τῷ ἐν Χριστῷ λαλήσαντι Παύλῳ [cf. 2 Cor 2:17] καὶ πάσῃ τῇ θεῖᾳ ἀποστολικῇ ὁμηγύρῃ καὶ πατρικῇ ἀγιότητι ἐξακολουθοῦμεν κρατοῦντες τὰς παραδόσεις [cf. 2 Th 2:15], ἃς παρελήφαμεν· οὕτω τοὺς ἐπινικίους τῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ προφητικῶς κατεπάδομεν ὕμνους· «Χαῖρε σφόδρα, θύγατερ Σιών, κήρυσε, θύγατερ Ἱερουσαλήμ· τέρπου καὶ εὐφραίνου ἐξ ὅλης τῆς καρδίας σου· περιεῖλε κύριος ἐκ σοῦ τὰ ἀδικήματα τῶν ἀντικειμένων σοι, λελύτρωσαι ἐκ χειρὸς ἐχθρῶν σου· κύριος βασιλεὺς ἐν μέσῳ σου· οὐκ ὄψει κακὰ οὐκέτι» [So 3:14s: Septg.] καὶ εἰρήνην ἐπὶ σοὶ εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα χρόνον.

... We, continuing on the royal path and following 600 the divinely inspired teaching of our holy Fathers and the tradition of the Catholic Church (which we recognize, in fact, as that of the Holy Spirit dwelling in her) define, with all precision and care, that, just like the figure of the precious and life-giving Cross, so also venerable and holy images—whether painted, in mosaic, or those made of any other suitable material—are to be placed in the holy churches of God, on sacred vessels and vestments, on walls and panels, in homes and along roads: namely, the image of our Lord God and Savior, Jesus Christ; of our undefiled Lady, the holy Mother of God; of the venerable angels; and of all the saints and pious men.

In fact, the more frequently these are seen through 601 iconic representation, the more those who contemplate them are moved to remember and long for their original models and to give them salutation and respectful veneration. This, however, is not actual worship, which, according to our faith, is reserved to the divine nature alone. But as it is done for the figure of the glorious and life-giving Cross, the holy Gospels, and all other sacred objects, let these images be honored with an offering of incense and light, according to long-standing pious custom. For “the honor rendered to the image passes on to the original”,¹ and he who venerates an image venerates in it the person whom the image represents.

And so the teaching of our holy Fathers is strengthened, 602 that is, the tradition of the Catholic Church, which has embraced the gospel from one end of the earth to the other. We, thus, follow Paul, who spoke in Christ [cf. 2 Cor 2:17], and the entire divine apostolic college and the holiness of the Fathers, holding fast to the traditions we have received [cf. 2 Thess 2:15]. And so we sing prophetically the hymns celebrating the victory of the Church: “Rejoice exceedingly, O daughter of Zion, sing forth, O daughter of Jerusalem: be joyful and happy with all your heart. The Lord has taken away the injustices of your enemies. He has redeemed you from the power of your foes. The Lord is king in your midst; no more evil shall you see” [cf. Zeph 3:14f.: LXX], and peace (shall be) in you forever and ever.

¹ 601 Basil the Great, De Spiritu Sancto 18, no. 45 (B. Pruche: SC 17bis, 2nd ed. [Paris, 1968], 406_{19f.} / PG 32:149C); this is considered the “classic passage” for the veneration of sacred images.

603 Τους οὖν τολμώντας ἑτέρως φρονεῖν ἢ διδάσκειν ἢ κατὰ τοὺς ἐναγεῖς αἰρετικούς τὰς ἐκκλησιαστικὰς παραδόσεις ἀθετεῖν, καὶ καινοτομίαν τινὰ ἐπινοεῖν, ἢ ἀποβάλλεσθαι τι ἐκ τῶν ἀνατεθειμένων τῆ ἐκκλησία, εὐαγγέλιον, ἢ τύπον τοῦ σταυροῦ, ἢ εἰκονικὴν ἀναζωγράφειν, ἢ ἅγιον λείψανον μάρτυρος· ἢ ἐπινοεῖν σκολιῶς καὶ πανούργως πρὸς τὸ ἀνατρέφαι ἐν τι τῶν ἐνθέσμων παραδόσεων τῆς καθολικῆς ἐκκλησίας· ἔτι γε μὴν ὡς κοινοῖς χρῆσθαι τοῖς ἱεροῖς κειμηλίοις ἢ τοῖς εὐαγέσι μοναστηρίοις· ἐπισκόπους μὲν ὄντας ἢ κληρικούς καθαιρεῖσθαι προστάσσομεν, μονάζοντας δὲ ἢ λαϊκοὺς τῆς κοινωνίας ἀφορίζεσθαι.

604–609: Session 8, October 23, 787

Ed. [*604; 605–609]: MaC 13:419E–421A; 416A–C / HaC 4:488CD; 484C–E. [*604; 606–609]: COeD, 3rd ed., 140^{18–42}; 137^{28–1383}.

The Election into Holy Orders

604 Πᾶσαν ψῆφον γινομένην παρὰ ἀρχόντων ἐπισκόπου ἢ πρεσβυτέρου ἢ διακόνου ἄκυρον μένειν κατὰ τὸν κανόνα [Canones Apostolorum 30] τὸν λέγοντα· Εἴ τις ἐπίσκοπος κοσμικοῖς ἄρχουσι χρῆσάμενος, δι' αὐτῶν ἐγκρατῆς ἐκκλησίας γένηται, καθαιρεῖσθω καὶ ἀφορίζεσθω, καὶ οἱ κοινωνοῦντες αὐτῷ πάντες. Δεῖ γὰρ τὸν μέλλοντα προβιβάζεσθαι εἰς ἐπισκοπὴν ὑπὸ ἐπισκόπων ψηφίζεσθαι, καθὼς παρὰ τῶν ἁγίων πατέρων τῶν ἐν Νικαίᾳ ὄρισται ἐν τῷ κανόνι [can. 4] τῷ λέγοντι· Ἐπίσκοπον προσήκει μάλιστα μὲν ὑπὸ πάντων τῶν ἐν τῇ ἐπαρχίᾳ καθίστασθαι. Εἰ δὲ δυσχερὲς εἴη τὸ τοιοῦτο, ἢ διὰ κατεπείγουσαν ἀνάγκην, ἢ διὰ μῆκος ὁδοῦ, ἔξ ἅπαντος τρεῖς ἐπὶ τὸ αὐτὸ συναγομένους, συμπῆφων γινομένων καὶ τῶν ἀπόντων καὶ συντιθεμένων διὰ γραμμάτων, τότε τὴν χειροτονίαν ποιεῖσθαι, τὸ δὲ κύριον τῶν γινομένων δίδοσθαι καθ' ἐκάστην ἐπαρχίαν τῷ μητροπολίτῃ.

Those, therefore, who dare to think or teach otherwise, or who, by following the accursed heretics, despise the traditions of the Church, or who invent some novelty or reject any of the consecrated objects offered to the Church: either the Gospel or the figure of the Cross, a painted image or the sacred relics of a martyr; or who devise perverse and cunning ways of overturning any of the legitimate traditions of the Catholic Church; or who even make profane use of sacred vessels or venerable monasteries: these, if they are bishops or clerics, we order to be deposed; if, however, they are monks or laymen, they are to be excommunicated.

Every election of a bishop, priest, or deacon made by secular rulers is to remain invalid, according to the canon [Canones Apostolorum 30] that says: “If any bishop, having recourse to secular rulers, takes possession of a church through them, let him be deposed, and let all those who enter communion with him be excommunicated.” For it is necessary that the one being elevated to the office of bishop be elected by bishops, as was decided by the holy Fathers who met at Nicaea, in the canon [can. 4] that says: Indeed, it is especially fitting that a bishop be ordained by all (the bishops) of the province. If, however, this is difficult, either because of some pressing necessity or because of the length of the journey, nevertheless, let at least three (bishops) join together in the same place, and, with the absent ones giving their support and their consent in writing, the consecration may take place. The authority, however, over what is done in each province is granted to the metropolitan bishop.

Sacred Images, the Humanity of Christ, and Ecclesiastical Tradition

605 Ἡμεῖς τὰς σεπτὰς εἰκόνας ἀποδεχόμεθα· ἡμεῖς τοὺς μὴ οὕτως ἔχοντας τῷ ἀναθέματι καθυποβάλλομεν. . .

We accept the veneration of images; those who do not believe in this way, we place under anathema. . .

606 Εἴ τις Χριστὸν τὸν Θεὸν ἡμῶν περιγραφτὸν οὐχ ὁμολογεῖ κατὰ τὸ ἀνθρώπινον, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω. . .

If anyone does not admit that Christ, our God, is circumscribed according to his humanity, let him be anathema. . .

607 Εἴ τις τὰς εὐαγγελικὰς ἐξηγήσεις τὰς στηλογραφικῶς γινομένας οὐ προσίεται, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

If anyone does not permit the narration of the Gospels with the aid of images, let him be anathema.

608 Εἴ τις οὐκ ἀσπάζεται ταύτας εἰς ὄνομα τοῦ Κυρίου οὕσας καὶ τῶν ἁγίων αὐτοῦ, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

If anyone does not honor these (images made) in the name of the Lord and his saints, let him be anathema.

609 Εἴ τις πᾶσαν παράδοσιν ἐκκλησιαστικὴν ἔγγραφον ἢ ἄγραφον ἀθετεῖ, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω. . .

If anyone rejects all ecclesiastical tradition, written or unwritten, let him be anathema. . .

610–611: Letter Si tamen licet to the Bishops of Spain, between 793 and 794

Ed. [*610; 611]: A. Werminghoff: MGH Leges III = Concilia 2/I (1904), 123^{6–9}; 123^{15–39} / MaC 13:865D–866D / HaC 4:866B–867A. —Reg.: JR 2482.

The Error of Adoptionism

Materia autem causalis perfidiae inter cetera reicienda de adoptione Iesu Christi Filii Dei secundum carnem falsis argumentationibus digesta, perfidorum verborum ibi stramina in composito calamo legebantur. Hoc catholica Ecclesia numquam credidit, numquam docuit, numquam male credentibus assensum praebeuit. . . .

Ipse enim [Christus] de se innotuit, cuius filius esset, cum Patris nomen se assertit hominibus adnuntiasset. Ait enim: “Manifestavi nomen tuum hominibus, quos dedisti mihi de mundo” [Io 17:6]. Nomen paternum tunc manifestavit hominibus, cum se Patris Filium verum et non putativum, proprium innotuit et non adoptivum. Sed notandum quod dicitur: “hominibus, quos dedisti mihi”. Non enim isti ex illis hominibus, quos ei Pater dederat et immo quos ille cum Patre ante mundi constitutionem elegerat, qui eum adoptivum et non proprium Filium confiterentur, quasi alienus aliquando a Patre fuerit aut per carnis extraneus ab eo factus esset adsumptionem, cum, ut Verbum caro fieret, una exstiterit Patris Filiique voluntas, sicut scriptum est: “Ut facerem voluntatem tuam; Deus meus, volui” [Ps 39:9].

Hinc alias dicit: “Ascendo ad Patrem meum et Patrem vestrum” [Io 20:17], Distincte enim dixit “meum” et “vestrum”, eius videlicet non per gratiam, sed per naturam, noster vero per gratiam adoptionis. Porro numquam non fuit Filius, quia numquam non fuit Pater. Semper eum et ubique distincte Patrem suum appellat. “Pater” inquit “meus usque modo operatur, et ego operor” [Io 5:17], et rursus: “Pater, clarifica Filium tuum, ut Filius tuus clarificet te” [Io 17:1], et: “Pater meus quod dedit mihi, maius omnibus est” [Io 10:29].

Quodsi secundum eorum callidam tergiversationem cuncta, quae protulimus, ad divinitatem tantummodo Filii Dei referenda opinantur, dicant, ubi umquam communi affectu dixerit nobiscum “Pater noster”. “Scit enim” inquit “Pater vester, quid vobis opus sit” [Mt 6:8]. Non ait “noster”, quasi nobiscum adoptatus per gratiam. Et alibi “Estote ergo et vos perfecti, sicut et Pater vester caelestis perfectus est” [Mt 5:48]. Cur non dixit “noster”? Quia aliter noster et aliter suus. Hinc rursus ait: “Si vos, cum sitis mali, nostis bona dare filiis vestris, quanto magis Pater vester de caelo dabit spiritum bonum petentibus se?” [Lc 11:13] et cetera. Hinc Paulus, vas electionis, ait: “Proprio Filio suo non pepercit Deus, sed pro nobis omnibus tradidit illum” [Rm 8:32]. Scimus enim, quia non est traditus secundum divinitatem, sed secundum id quod homo verus erat.

The foundation for the errors concerning the adoption of Jesus Christ, the Son of God according to the flesh, is to be rejected like others since it rests on false argumentation; the chaff of perfidious words of an unseemly pen can be read there. The Catholic Church has never believed, never taught, never given assent to those who wrongly believe (this). . . .

In fact, he himself [Christ] made known whose Son he was when he announced to men the name of the Father. Indeed, he said: “I have manifested your name to the men whom you gave me out of the world” [Jn 17:6]. He then manifested the Father’s name to men when he made himself known as the true, not putative, the real, not adoptive, Son of the Father. But what is said must be noted: “to the men whom you gave me”. In fact, among those whom the Father had given him and those whom he indeed, with the Father, had chosen before the creation of the world are not those who have confessed an adoptive and not real Son, as though at some point he was separated from the Father, or that, by assuming flesh, he removed himself from him; whereas, it was (through) one will of the Father and the Son that the Word became flesh, as it is written: “I delight to do your will, O my God” [Ps 40:8].

For this reason, he says elsewhere: “I am ascending to my Father and your Father” [Jn 20:17]. Indeed, he distinctly says “my” and “your”, his, of course, not through grace but through nature; ours, however, through the grace of adoption. Furthermore, there never was a time when the Son did not exist because there never was a time when the Father did not exist. Always and everywhere, he clearly calls him his Father. “My Father”, he says, “is at work until now, and I am at work” [Jn 5:17]; and again: “Father, glorify your Son, so that your Son may glorify you” [Jn 17:1]; and: “My Father, who has given them to me, is greater than all” [Jn 10:29].

But if, in their clever subterfuge, they suppose that all we have set forth refers only to the divinity of the Son of God, let them say where, in a state common with us, he has ever said, “our Father”. “Your Father”, he says, “knows indeed what you need” [Mt 6:8]. He does not say “our” as if he, like us, had been adopted by grace. And in another place: “Be perfect, therefore, as your Father in heaven is perfect” [Mt 5:48]. Why does he not say “our”? Because (the Father) is ours in one way and his in a different way. Hence, he says again: “If you, who are evil, know how to give good things to your children, how much more will your Father in heaven give the Holy Spirit to those who ask him?” [Lk 11:13], et cetera. Thus, Paul, the vessel of election, says: “God did not spare his only Son but handed him over for us all” [Rom 8:32]. We, indeed, know that he was handed over, not according to his divinity, but according to the fact that he was true man.

612–615: Synod of FRANKFURT (Main), ca. June 794

King Charlemagne wished for this synod to be ecumenical and equal to the Second Council of Nicaea (cf. *600). He, therefore, made sure that two legates were sent from the Apostolic See. In their presence, the heresy of adoptionism—which under Charlemagne’s presidency the Synod of Regensburg (792) had rejected already—was again condemned. Earlier, a letter of the bishops of Spain and Gaul in favor of adoptionism, composed by Archbishop Elipandus of Toledo in 792/793, had been sent to the bishops of the Frankish kingdom (MGH Concilia 2/I, 111–19 / PL 101:1321D–1331B). This letter was refuted in great detail in the letter of the Synod of Frankfurt. Moreover, because of an erroneous translation of the decrees of the Second Council of Nicaea, the Synod of Frankfurt rejected the veneration of images (Capitulary, can. 2; ed. as *615, Libri Carolini de imaginibus: MGH Concilia 2, suppl. / PL 98:989–1248); but Adrian I took the position in favor of the Second Council of Nicaea (PL 89:1247–92).

Ed. [Synodal letter]: A. Werminghoff: MGH Leges III = Concilia 2/I, 144₄₋₉, 149₁₆₋₃₂, 150_{1f}, 152₂₋₆ / PL 101:1332C, 1337C–1338B, 1340B / MaC 13:884E–885A, 890B–891A, 893B / HaC 4:883DE, 888D–889B, 891B. —[Capitulary, can. 1]: MGH, ibid., 165₂₁₋₂₅ / MaC 13:909C / HaC 4:904C / PL 97:191B. —Reg.: A. Werminghoff, in NArch 24 (1899): 472f.

a. Synodal Letter of the Bishops of the Kingdom of the Franks to the Bishops of Spain*Refutation of Adoptionism* 612 ... Invenimus enim in libelli vestri principio scriptum, quod posuistis vos: “Confitemur et credimus Deum Dei Filium ante omnia tempora sine initio ex Patre genitum, coaeternum et consubstantialem, non adoptione, sed genere”. Item post pauca eodem loco legebatur: “Confitemur et credimus eum factum ex muliere, factum sub lege [cf. Gal 4:4], non genere esse Filium Dei, sed adoptione, non natura, sed gratia”. Ecce serpens inter pomifera paradisi latitans ligna, ut incautos quosque decipiat. ...

613 Quod etiam in sequentibus adiunxistis, in professione Nicaeni symboli non invenimus dictum, “in Christo duas naturas et tres substantias” [cf. *567], et “homo deificus” et “Deus humanatus”. Quid est natura hominis, nisi anima et corpus? Vel quid est inter naturam et substantiam, ut tres substantias necesse sit nobis dicere, et non magis simpliciter, sicut sancti Patres dixerunt, confiteri Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum Deum verum et verum hominem in una persona?

Mansit vero persona Filii in sancta Trinitate, cui personae humana accessit natura, ut esset una persona, Deus et homo, non homo deificus et humanatus Deus, sed Deus homo et homo Deus: propter unitatem personae unus Dei Filius, et idem hominis Filius, perfectus Deus, perfectus homo.

Perfectus homo non est nisi anima et corpore ..., nec negamus et nos, Christo haec tria veraciter inesse, divinitatem scilicet, animam et corpus. Sed quia vere Deus et homo dicitur, in Dei nomine totum quod Dei est designatur, in hominis vero totum quicquid hominis est intelligitur. Ideo sufficit, in eo unam perfectam divinitatis et alteram perfectam humanitatis confiteri substantiam. ... Consuetudo ecclesiastica solet in Christo duas substantias nominare, Dei videlicet et hominis. ...

... For in the beginning of your little book we have found written what you have laid down: “We confess and we believe that God, the Son of God before all ages without beginning, was begotten from the Father, co-eternal and consubstantial, not by adoption but by birth.” Likewise, after a few words in the same place we read: “We confess and we believe that he was made from a woman, made under the law [cf. Gal 4:4], that not by birth is he the Son of God but by adoption; not by nature but by grace.” Behold the serpent hiding among the fruit-bearing trees of paradise, that he may deceive every unwary one. ...

Likewise, we have not found mentioned in Nicaea’s creed what you subsequently added: that there are “two natures and three substances in Christ” [cf. *567], “man deified” and “God humanized”. What is the nature of man if not soul and body? Or what distinction is there between nature and substance that requires us to say three substances and not to confess, more simply, our Lord Jesus Christ true God and true man in one Person, as the holy Fathers have said?

The Person of the Son remained in the Holy Trinity, however, and to this Person the human nature was joined, so that there was one Person, God and man, not man deified and God humanized, but the God-man and the man-God: by means of the unity of the Person, one Son of God and the same the Son of man, perfect God, perfect man.

A complete man does not exist without soul and body ...; and we do not deny that these three truly are in Christ, namely, divinity, soul, and body. But since he is indeed called God and man: in the name of “God” all that is of God is designated; and in (the name) of “man”, truly everything that is of man is understood. It, therefore, suffices to confess in him both the perfect substance of divinity and the perfect substance of humanity. ... Ecclesiastical custom is wont to name two substances in Christ, namely, that of God and that of man. ...

Si ergo Deus verus est, qui de Virgine natus est, quomodo tunc potest adoptivus esse vel servus? Deum enim nequaquam audetis confiteri servum vel adoptivum: et si eum propheta servum nominasset, non tamen ex condicione servitutis, sed ex humilitatis oboedientia, qua factus est Patri “oboediens usque ad mortem” [Phil 2:8].

If, therefore, he is true God, who was born of the Virgin, how then can he be adopted or a servant? For by no means do you dare to confess God a servant or one adopted; and if the prophet called him servant, it is not, however, from the condition of servitude but from the obedience of humility, by which he was made obedient to the Father even unto death [Phil 2:8]. 614

b. Capitulary of the Synod

Condemnation of the Adoptionists

Can. 1. ... In primordio capitulorum exortum est de impia ac nefanda haeresi Eliphandi, Toletanae sedis episcopi, et Felicis, Orgellitanae, eorumque sequacibus, qui male sentientes in Dei Filio asserebant adoptionem: quam omnes qui supra sanctissimi Patres et respuentes una voce contradixerunt atque hanc haeresim funditus a sancta Ecclesia eradicandam statuerunt.

Can. 1. ... In the beginning of the chapters, they began with the impious and abominable heresy of Elipandus, Bishop of Toledo, and of Felix of Urgel and of their followers, who, in their false thinking, affirmed an adoption in the Son of God: how all the above (mentioned) most holy Fathers contradicted this and rejected it unanimously and determined that this heresy must be thoroughly eradicated from the holy Church. 615

LEO III: December 27, 795–June 12, 816

616–619: Synod of FRIULI, 796 or 797: Profession of Faith

This took place under the leadership of Paulinus, Patriarch of Aquileia, in Cividale del Friuli (Venice).

Ed. [*616–618; 619]: A. Werminghoff: MGH Leges III = Concilia 2/I, 187₂₄–188₅; 188_{19–34} / PL 99:293B–294A; 294CD / MaC 13:842E–843C; 843E–844B. —Reg.: A. Werminghoff, in NArch 24 (1899): 474.

The Divine Trinity

[Post Symbolum Constantinopolitanum sequitur:] Sanctam autem, perfectam, inseparabilem et ineffabilem veramque Trinitatem, id est Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum, individuam confiteor in unitate naturae, quia trinus et unus est Deus: trinus nimirum per distinctionem personarum; unus vero per substantiam inseparabilem deitatis. Has igitur tres personas ... non putativas vel quasi suspicabiles tantum, sed veras, subsistentes, coaeternas, coaequales credimus et consubstantiales....

[After the creed of Constantinople, there follows:] 616 I profess, however, the holy, perfect, inseparable, ineffable, and true Trinity; namely, the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit, inseparable in the unity of nature, because God is triune and one: triune certainly through the distinction of Persons, but one through the inseparable substance of divinity. We believe, therefore, that these three Persons ... are not merely putative or as if conjectural, but true, subsistent, co-eternal, co-equal, and consubstantial....

Nam Pater verus Deus, vere et proprie Pater est, qui genuit ex se, id est ex sua substantia, intemporaliter et sine initio verum Filium, coaeternum, consubstantialem et coaequalem sibi.

For the Father, as true God, is truly and properly 617 Father, who generated from himself, that is, from his substance, outside of time, and without beginning, the true Son, co-eternal, consubstantial, and co-equal to himself.

Et Filius verus Deus, vere et proprie est Filius, qui ante omnia saecula genitus est de Patre intemporaliter et absque ullo initio.... Et numquam fuit Pater sine Filio, nec Filius sine Patre....

And the Son, as true God, is truly and properly Son, who was generated from the Father before all ages outside of time and without any beginning.... And never was the Father without the Son or the Son without the Father....

Spiritus namque Sanctus verus Deus, vere et proprie Spiritus Sanctus est: non genitus nec creatus, sed ex Patre Filioque intemporaliter et inseparabiliter procedens. Consubstantialis, coaeternus et aequalis Patri Filioque semper est, erat et erit. Et numquam fuit Pater aut Filius sine Spiritu Sancto, nec Spiritus Sanctus sine Patre et Filio.

And the Holy Spirit, as true God, is truly and properly the Holy Spirit: not generated or created, but proceeding outside of time and inseparably from the Father and the Son. He always is, was, and will be consubstantial, co-eternal, and co-equal to the Father and the Son. And never was the Father or the Son without the Holy Spirit or the Holy Spirit without the Father and the Son.

618 Et idcirco inseparabilia sunt semper opera Trinitatis, et nihil est in sancta Trinitate diversum aliquid aut dissimile vel inaequale: non divisum naturaliter, non confusum personaliter, nihil maius aut minus, non anterior, non posterior, non inferior, non superior; sed una et aequalis potestas, par gloria, sempiterna et coaeterna consubstantialisque maiestas. . . .

And therefore all the works of the Trinity are always inseparable, and there is nothing in the Holy Trinity that is contrary or dissimilar or unequal; there is no division in the nature and no confusion in the Persons; there is neither greater nor lesser, neither before nor after, neither superior nor inferior; but only one equal power, equal glory, and everlasting, co-eternal, and consubstantial majesty. . . .

Christ, the Natural, Not Adopted, Son of God

619 De hac autem ineffabili Trinitate sola Verbi persona, id est Filius, . . . descendit de caelis, unde numquam recesserat. Incarnatus est de Spiritu Sancto et ex semper virgine Maria verus homo factus est, verusque permanet Deus.

From this ineffable Trinity only the Person of the Word, that is, the Son, . . . came down from heaven, from which he never departed. He became incarnate by the Holy Spirit and became true man from the ever-virgin Mary, and (he) remains true God.

Nec obfuit humana et temporalis nativitas divinae illi et intemporalis nativitati, sed in una Christi Iesu persona verus Dei verusque hominis Filius, non alter hominis Filius, alter Dei, sed unus idemque Dei hominisque Filius, in utraque natura, divina scilicet et humana, Deus verus et homo verus, non putativus Dei Filius, sed verus; non adoptivus, sed proprius, quia numquam fuit propter hominem quem adsumpsit a Patre alienus.

And the human and temporal birth was not opposed to the divine nativity outside of time, but in the one Person of Jesus Christ, (there is) the true Son of God and the true Son of man, not one Son of man and another of God, but one and the same is the Son of God and of man in the two natures, namely, the divine and the human, true God and true man; not the putative Son of God, but the true; not the adopted, but (the Father's) very own, for never was he alien to the Father because of the humanity he assumed.

Solus enim sine peccato natus est homo, quoniam solus est incarnatus de Spiritu Sancto et immaculata Virgine novus homo. Consubstantialis Deo Patri in sua, id est divina; consubstantialis etiam matri, sine sorde peccati, in nostra, id est humana natura. Et ideo in utraque natura proprium eum et non adoptivum Dei Filium confitemur, quia inconfusibiliter et inseparabiliter adsumpto homine unus idemque est Dei et hominis Filius. Naturaliter Patri secundum divinitatem, naturaliter matri secundum humanitatem; proprius tamen Patri in utroque. . . .

For he alone is born man without sin since he alone became incarnate as the new man from the Holy Spirit and the immaculate Virgin. (He is) consubstantial with God the Father in his own, that is, the divine (nature) and consubstantial also with his Mother, without the stain of sin, in ours, that is, the human nature. And so in each nature we confess that he is the true not the adopted Son of God, since, having assumed humanity, without confusion or separation, one and the same is the Son of God and the Son of man. Naturally of the Father according to divinity and naturally of the Mother according to humanity; yet still the very own (Son) of the Father in both (natures). . . .

STEPHEN IV (V): June 22, 816–January 24, 817

PASCHAL I: January 25, 817–February 11, 824

EUGENE II: February / May 824–August 827

VALENTINE: August–September 827

GREGORY IV: September (?) 827–January 844

SERGIUS II: January 844–January 27, 847

LEO IV: April 10, 847–July 17, 855

620: Synod of PAVIA, 850

Ed.: W. Hartmann, MGH Leges IV = Concilia 3 (1984), 223_{15–29} / MaC 14:932E–933B / HaC 5:27A–C.

The Sacrament of the Anointing of the Sick

(8) Illud quoque salutare sacramentum, quod commendat Iacobus Apostolus dicens: “Infirmatur quis in vobis? ... remittetur ei” [Jac 5:14s], solerti praedicatione populis innotescendum est: magnum sane ac valde appetendum mysterium, per quod, si fideliter poscitur, et peccata remittuntur, et consequenter corporalis salus restituitur. ... Hoc tamen sciendum, quia, si is, qui infirmatur, publicae paenitentiae mancipatus est, non potest huius mysterii consequi medicinam, nisi prius reconciliatione percepta communionem corporis et sanguinis Christi meruerit. Cui enim reliqua sacramenta interdicta sunt, hoc uno nulla ratione uti conceditur.

(8) That saving sacrament also that James the apostle 620 commends, saying: “If anyone is sick ... it will be remitted him” [Jas 5:14f.], must be made known to the people by skillful teaching; a truly great mystery and one exceedingly to be sought, through which, if the faithful ask, and their sins are forgiven, it may even follow that health of body is restored. ... This, however, must be known, that, if he who is sick has not been freed from public penance, he cannot receive the remedy of this mystery, unless first by the prescribed reconciliation he has merited the communion of the Body and Blood of Christ. He to whom the other sacraments have been restricted is by no means permitted to use this one.

621–624: Synod of QUIERCY, May 853

This synod took place under the presidency of Archbishop Hinkmar of Reims in Quiercy (Oise). It opposed the doctrine of double predestination of the monk Gottschalk of Orbais. Gottschalk had already been condemned in 848 by a synod of Mainz and in 849 in Quiercy.

Ed.: W. Hartmann, MGH Leges IV = Concilia 3 (1984), 297^{7–32} / MaC 14:920D–921C / HaC 5:18C–19B / PL 125:63C–64A; moreover, single chapters are presented and explained in Hinkmar’s De praedestinatione Dei et libero arbitrio posterior dissertatio: PL 125:129D–130A (= chap. 1), 183C (= chap. 2), 211C (= chap. 3), 282B (= chap. 4). —Reg.: NArch 26/III (1901): 619.

Free Will of Man and Predestination

Cap. 1. Deus omnipotens hominem sine peccato rectum cum libero arbitrio condidit, et in paradiso posuit, quem in sanctitate iustitiae permanere voluit. Homo libero arbitrio male utens peccavit et cecidit, et factus est “massa perditionis”¹ totius humani generis. Deus autem bonus et iustus elegit ex eadem massa perditionis secundum praescientiam suam quos per gratiam praedestinavit [Rm 8:29s; Eph 1:11] ad vitam, et vitam illis praedestinavit aeternam: ceteros autem, quos iustitiae iudicio in massa perditionis reliquit, perituros praescivit, sed non ut perirent praedestinavit; poenam autem illis, quia iustus est, praedestinavit aeternam. Ac per hoc unam Dei praedestinationem tantummodo dicimus, quae aut ad donum pertinet gratiae aut ad retributionem iustitiae.

Chap. 1. The omnipotent God created man upright, 621 without sin, and with free will, and he placed (man), whom he wished to remain in the holiness of justice, in paradise. Man, using his free will badly, sinned and fell and became the “mass of perdition” of the entire human race. The just and good God, however, chose from this same mass of perdition according to his foreknowledge those whom through grace he predestined to life [Rom 8:29ff.; Eph 1:11], and he predestined for these eternal life; the others, whom by the judgment of justice he left in the “mass of perdition”,¹ however, he knew would perish; but he did not predestine that they would perish; because he is just, however, he predestined eternal punishment for them. And on account of this we speak of only one predestination of God, which pertains either to the gift of grace or to the retribution of justice.

Cap. 2. Libertatem arbitrii in primo homine perdidimus, quam per Christum Dominum nostrum recepimus: et habemus liberum arbitrium ad bonum, praeventum et adiutum gratia, et habemus liberum arbitrium ad malum, desertum gratia. Liberum autem habemus arbitrium, quia gratia liberatum et gratia de corrupto sanatum.

Chap. 2. The freedom of will that we lost in the first 622 man, we have received back through Christ our Lord; and we have free will for good, preceded and aided by grace, and we have free will for evil, abandoned by grace. But we have free will because it has been liberated by grace and healed from corruption by grace.

Cap. 3. Deus omnipotens “omnes homines” sine exceptione “vult salvos fieri” [1 Tim 2:4], licet non omnes salventur. Quod autem quidam salvantur, salvantis est donum: quod autem quidam pereunt, pereuntium est meritum.

Chap. 3. The omnipotent God wishes “all men” 623 without exception “to be saved” [1 Tim 2:4], although not all may be saved. That some, however, are saved is the gift of the one who saves; that some, however, perish is the fault of those who perish.

*621 ¹ Cf. Augustine, letter 190, chap. 3, no. 9 (CSEL 57:144 / PL 33:859f.); De dono perseverantiae 14, no. 35 (PL 45:1014).

624 Cap. 4. Christus Iesus Dominus noster, sicut nullus homo est, fuit vel erit, cuius natura in illo assumpta non fuerit, ita nullus est, fuit vel erit homo, pro quo passus non fuerit; licet non omnes passionis eius mysterio redimantur. Quod vero omnes passionis eius mysterio non redimuntur, non respicit ad magnitudinem et pretii copiositatem, sed ad infidelium et ad non credentium ea fide, “quae per dilectionem operatur” [Gal 5:6], respicit partem; quia poculum humanae salutis, quod confectum est infirmitate nostra et virtute divina, habet quidem in se, ut omnibus prosit: sed si non bibitur, non medetur.

Chap. 4. Just as there is not, nor has been, nor will be any man whose nature has not been assumed by Christ Jesus our Lord, so also there is not, nor has been, nor will be any man for whom he has not suffered; even if not all are redeemed by the mystery of his Passion. That not all, however, are redeemed by the mystery of his Passion concerns neither the greatness nor the fullness of the price, but, rather, the part of those who are unfaithful and those who do not believe with that faith “which works through love” [Gal 5:6]; for the cup of human salvation, which was forged by our infirmity and by divine strength, contains within itself what is beneficial for all; but if one does not drink from it, he is not healed.

625–633: Synod of VALENCE, January 8, 855

This synod was occasioned by the controversies about the doctrine of predestination. The synodal acts of the Synod of Quiercy under the leadership of Hinkmar (*621–624) defended predestination only to blessed life. Among those upholding double predestination in a strict Augustinian sense were Florus of Lyon (cf. PL 119:101f.), Prudentius of Troyes, and Bishop Remigius of Lyon. Prudentius of Troyes, it is true, rejected the erroneous opinion of John Scotus Eriugena (cf. his work De praedestinatione, written in 851), but he drew up a list of “counter-chapters” in opposition to the chapters of the Synod of Quiercy. Bishop Remigius of Lyon presided over the Synod of Valence, which in a similar manner opposed the Synod of Quiercy. After the differences over terminology were resolved and the error of Hinkmar’s opponents about his position was corrected, the participants of the Synod of Valence, at the Synod of Langres of 859, removed those words directed against the Synod of Quiercy in canon 4 of Valence [shown within brackets in *631]. Subsequently, at the Synod of Toul in 860, the two sides were reconciled and accepted the synodal letter of Hinkmar as well as the chapters of Quiercy and those of Valence.

Ed.: Hartmann, MGH Leges IV = Concilia 3 (1984), 352₁₆–356₂₆ / MaC 15:3B–7A / HaC 5:89A–91C. —Reg.: NArch 26/III (1901): 621.

Predestination

625 Can. 1. ... Novitates vocum et praesumptivas garrulitates, unde potius inter fratres contentionum et scandalorum fomes excitari potest, quam aedificatio ulla timoris Dei succrescere, cum studio omni devitamus. Indubitanter autem doctoribus pie et recte tractantibus verbum veritatis, ipsisque sacrae Scripturae lucidissimis expositoribus, id est Cypriano, Hilario, Ambrosio, Hieronymo, Augustino, ceterisque in catholica pietate quiescentibus, reverenter auditum et obtemperanter intellectum submittimus, et pro viribus, quae ad salutem nostram scripserunt, amplectimur. Nam de praescientia Dei, et de praedestinatione, et de quaestionibus aliis, in quibus fratrum animi non parum scandalizati probantur, illud tantum firmissime tenendum esse credimus, quod ex maternis Ecclesiae visceribus nos hausisse gaudemus.

Can. 1. ... With every effort, we avoid novelties of expression and presumptuous chattering, which can ignite the fuel for contention and scandals between brothers rather than increase any edification in the fear of God. Without hesitation, however, we submit our hearing with reverence and our intellect with obedience to the doctors who piously and correctly discuss the word of truth as well as those most luminous expositors of Sacred Scripture: namely, Cyprian, Hilary, Ambrose, Jerome, Augustine, and the others who repose in Catholic piety, and with all our strength, we embrace what they have written for our salvation. For, with regard to the foreknowledge of God and predestination and other questions, about which the minds of the brethren seem to have experienced no small scandal, we believe we should hold most firmly only to that which we rejoice in having drawn from the maternal womb of the Church.

626 Can. 2. “Deum praescire et praescisse aeternaliter et bona, quae boni erant facturi, et mala, quae mali sunt gesturi”,¹ quia vocem Scripturae dicentis habemus: “Deus aeternae, qui absconditorum es cognitor, qui nosti omnia antequam fiant” [Dn 13:42], fideliter tenemus; et placet tenere, “bonos praescisse omnino per gratiam suam bonos futuros, et per eandem gratiam aeterna praemia

Can. 2. We faithfully hold that “God foreknows and has foreknown eternally both the good deeds that good men will do and the evil that evil men will do”,¹ because we have that word of Scripture which says: “Eternal God, who are the witness of all things hidden, who knew all things before they are” [Dan 13:42]; and it seems right to hold “that the good certainly have known that through accepturos: malos praescisse per propriam malitiam malos futuros, et per suam iustitiam aeterna ultione damnandos”:² ut secundum Psalmistam: “Quia potestas Dei est, et Domini misericordia, ut reddat unicuique secundum opera sua” [Ps 61:12s], et sicut apostolica doctrina se habet: “His quidem, qui secundum patientiam boni operis gloriam et honorem et incorruptionem quaerunt, vitam aeternam: his autem, qui ex contentione, et qui non acquiescunt veritati, credunt autem iniquitati, ira et indignatio, tribulatio et angustia in omnem animam hominis operantis malum” [Rm 2:7–10].

*626 ¹ Florus of Lyon, Sermo de praedestinatione (PL 119:96D–97A).

In eodem sensu idem alibi: “In revelatione”, inquit, “Domini nostri Iesu Christi de caelo cum angelis virtutis eius, in igne flammae dantis vindictam his, qui non noverunt Deum, et qui non oboediunt evangelio Domini nostri Iesu Christi, qui poenas dabunt in interitu aeternas, . . . cum venerit glorificari in Sanctis suis et admirabilis fieri in omnibus, qui crediderunt” [2 Th 1:7–10].

Nec prorsus ulli malo praescientiam Dei imposuisse necessitatem, ut aliud esse non posset, sed quod ille futurus erat ex propria voluntate, sicuti Deus, qui novit omnia antequam fiant, praescivit ex sua omnipotenti et incommutabili maiestate. “Nec ex praedicio eius aliquem, sed ex merito propriae iniquitatis credimus condemnari.”¹ “Nec ipsos malos ideo perire, quia boni esse non potuerunt; sed quia boni esse noluerunt, suoque vitio in massa damnationis vel merito originali vel etiam actuali permanserunt.”²

Can. 3. Sed et de praedestinatione Dei placuit, et fideliter placet, iuxta auctoritatem apostolicam, quae dicit: “An non habet potestatem figulus luti ex eadem massa facere aliud vas in honorem, aliud vero in contumeliam?” [Rm 9:21] ubi et statim subiungit: “Quod si volens Deus ostendere iram et notam facere potentiam suam, sustinuit in multa patientia vasa irae aptata sive praeparata in interitum, ut ostenderet divitias gratiae suae in vasa misericordiae, quae praeparavit in gloriam” [Rm 9:22s]: fidenter fatemur praedestinationem electorum ad vitam, et praedestinationem impiorum ad mortem: in electione tamen salvandorum misericordiam Dei praecedere meritum bonum: in damnatione autem periturorum meritum malum praecedere iustum Dei iudicium. “Praedestinatione autem Deum ea tantum his grace they would be good and that through the same grace they would receive eternal rewards; that the wicked have known that through their own malice they would do evil deeds and that through his justice they would be condemned with eternal punishment”;² as, according to the Psalmist: “For power belongs to God, and mercy to the Lord, so that he may render to each according to his works” [Ps 62:12f.], and as apostolic doctrine holds: “Eternal life, indeed, to those who, by perseverance in good works, seek glory and honor and incorruption; but to those who, out of rebellion, do not submit to the truth but assent to iniquity: wrath and indignation, tribulation and anguish for every human soul doing evil” [Rom 2:7–10].

In the same sense, this same one (Paul) says elsewhere: “In the revelation of our Lord Jesus (who comes) from heaven with the angels of his power, taking vengeance in flaming fire on those who do not know God and do not obey the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ; (these) will suffer eternal punishments in ruin . . . when he comes to be glorified in his saints and to be marveled at in all those who have believed” [2 Thess 1:7–10].

Furthermore, God’s foreknowledge has not placed a 627 necessity on any wicked man, so that he could not be otherwise; but what this one would be by his own will, he foreknew as God, who, from his omnipotent and immutable majesty, knows all things before they come to be. “Neither do we believe that anyone is condemned by a previous judgment on his (God’s) part but by reason of his own iniquity.”¹ “Nor (do we believe) that the wicked thus perish because they were not able to be good; but because they were unwilling to be good, they have remained by their own vice in the mass of damnation either by reason of original sin or even by actual sin.”²

Can. 3. But also with regard to predestination, we have 628 decided and faithfully maintain, according to the apostolic authority, which says: “Or has not the potter power over the clay, from the same lump, to make one vessel unto honor, but another unto dishonor?” [Rom 9:21], where also he immediately adds: “What if God, willing to show his wrath and to make known his power, endured with much patience vessels of wrath fitted or prepared for destruction, so that he might show the riches of his grace on the vessels of mercy, which he has prepared unto glory” [Rom 9:22f.]: so we faithfully confess the predestination of the elect to life and the predestination of the impious to death; in the election, however, of those who are to be saved, the mercy of God precedes the merited good. In the condemnation, however, of those who are to be lost, statuisse, quae ipse vel gratuita misericordia vel iusto iudicio facturus erat”¹ secundum Scripturam dicentem: “Qui fecit, quae futura sunt” [Is 45:11: Septg.]: in malis vero ipsorum malitiam praescivisse, quia ex ipsis est, non praedestinasse, quia ex illo non est.

*626 ² Ibid. (97B).

*627 ¹ Cf. ibid. (99B).

² Ibid. (100A).

629 Poenam sane malum meritum eorum sequentem, uti Deum, qui omnia prospicit, praescivisse et praedestinasse, quia iustus est, apud quem est, ut sanctus Augustinus¹ ait, de omnibus omnino rebus tam fixa sententia quam certa praescientia. Ad hoc siquidem facit Sapientis dictum: “Parata sunt derisoribus iudicia, et mallei percutientes stultorum corporibus” [Prv 19:29].

De hac immobilitate praescientiae et praedestinationis Dei, per quam apud eum futura iam facta sunt, etiam apud Ecclesiasten bene intelligitur dictum: “Cognovi, quod omnia opera, quae fecit Deus, perseverent in perpetuum. Non possumus his addere nec auferre, quae fecit Deus, ut timeatur” [Ecl 3:14]. “Verum aliquos ad malum praedestinos esse divina potestate”, videlicet ut quasi aliud esse non possint, “non solum non credimus, sed etiam si sunt, qui tantum mali credere velint, cum omni detestatione”, sicut Arausica Synodus, “illis anathema dicimus” [*397].

630 Can. 4. Item de redemptione sanguinis Christi, propter nimium errorem, qui de hac causa exortus est, ita ut quidam, sicut eorum scripta indicant, etiam pro illis impiis, qui a mundi exordio usque ad passionem Domini in sua impietate mortui aeterna damnatione puniti sunt, effusum eum definiant, contra illud propheticum: “Ero mors tua, o mors, morsus tuus ero, inferne” [Os 13:14]: illud nobis simpliciter et fideliter tenendum ac docendum placet iuxta evangelicam et apostolicam veritatem, quod pro illis hoc datum pretium teneamus, de quibus ipse Dominus noster dicit: “Sicut Moyses exaltavit serpentem in deserto, ita exaltari oportet Filium hominis, ut omnis, qui credit in ipso, non pereat, sed habeat vitam aeternam. Sic enim Deus dilexit mundum, ut Filium suum unigenitum daret: ut omnis, qui credit in eum, non pereat, sed habeat vitam aeternam” [Io 3:14–16], et Apostolus: “Christus”, inquit, “semel oblatum est ad multorum exhaurienda peccata” [Hbr 9:28].

the evil they have deserved precedes the just judgment of God. “In predestination, however, (we believe) that God has determined only those things that he himself would do either in his gratuitous mercy or in his just judgment”,¹ according to Scripture, which says: “He has done the things that are to be done” [Is 45:11 LXX]; in regard to evil men, however, we believe that God foreknew their malice, because it is from them, but that he did not predestine it, because it is not from him.

Certainly, as God, who foresees all things, he foreknew and predestined the punishment that follows their demerit, since he is just and before him, as St. Augustine¹ says, there is for absolutely everything a fixed decree as well as certain foreknowledge. To this, in fact, the saying of Wisdom applies: “Judgments are prepared for scorers, and striking hammers for the bodies of fools” [Prov 19:29].

Concerning this unchangeableness of the foreknowledge and of the predestination of God, through which in him future things have already taken place, even in Ecclesiastes the saying is well understood: “I know that whatever God does endures forever. Nothing can be added to it, nor anything taken from it; God has made it so, in order that men should fear before him” [Eccles 3:14]. “But we do not only not believe the saying that some have been predestined to evil by divine power”, namely, as if they could not be different, “but even if there are those who wish to believe such malice, with all detestation”, like the Synod of Orange, “we say anathema to them” [*397].

Can. 4. Likewise, concerning the redemption by the blood of Christ: because of the great error that has arisen on this subject, so that some, as their writings indicate, declare that it has been shed even for those impious ones who from the beginning of the world even up to the Passion of our Lord have died in their wickedness and have been punished by eternal damnation, contrary to these prophetic words: “O death, I will be your death, O hell, I will be your bite” [Hos 13:14], it seems right that we should simply and faithfully hold and teach according to the evangelical and apostolic truth, because we hold this price to have been paid for those concerning whom our Lord himself says: “As Moses lifted up the serpent in the desert, so it is necessary that the Son of man be lifted up, that all who believe in him may not perish but may have eternal life. For God so loved the world that he gave his only begotten Son: that all who believe in him may not perish but may have eternal life” [Jn 3:14–16], and the apostle: “Christ”, he said, “was offered once to take away the sins of many” [Heb 9:28].

*628 ¹ Cf. ibid. (99D).

*629 ¹ Cf. Augustine, De praedestinatione sanctorum 17, 34 (PL 44:986).

Porro capitula [- quattuor, quae a concilio fratrum nostrorum minus prospecte suscepta sunt, propter inutilitatem vel etiam noxietatem, et errorem contrarium veritati: sed et alia -] XIX syllogismis ineptissime conclusa et, licet iactetur, nulla saeculari litteratura nitentia, in quibus commentum diaboli potius quam argumentum aliquod fidei deprehenditur, a pio auditu fidelium penitus explodimus, et ut talia et similia caveantur per omnia, auctoritate Spiritus Sancti interdicens: novarum etiam rerum introductores, ne districtius feriantur, castigandos esse censemus.

Can. 5. Item firmissime tenendum credimus, quod omnis multitudo fidelium “ex aqua et Spiritu Sancto” [Io 3:5] regenerata, ac per hoc veraciter Ecclesiae incorporata, et iuxta doctrinam apostolicam in morte Christi baptizata [Rm 6:3], in eius sanguine sit a peccatis suis abluta: quia nec in eis potuit esse vera regeneratio, nisi fieret et vera redemptio: cum in Ecclesiae sacramentis nihil sit cassum, nihil ludificatorium, sed prorsus totum verum, et ipsa sui veritate ac sinceritate subnixum.

Ex ipsa tamen multitudine fidelium et redemptorum alios salvari aeterna salute, quia per gratiam Dei in redemptione sua fideliter permanent, ipsius Domini sui vocem in corde ferentes: “Qui ... perseveraverit usque in finem, hic salvus erit” [Mt 10:22 et 24:13]; alios, quia noluerunt permanere in salute fidei, quam initio acceperunt, redemptionisque gratiam potius irritam facere prava doctrina vel vita, quam servare elegerunt, ad plenitudinem salutis et ad perceptionem aeternae beatitudinis nullo modo pervenire. [Provocatur ad Rm 6:3; Gal 3:27; Hbr 10:22s, 26, 28s.]

Can. 6. Item de gratia, per quam salvantur credentes, et sine qua rationalis creatura numquam beate vixit, et de libero arbitrio per peccatum in primo homine infirmato, sed per gratiam Domini Iesu fidelibus eius redintegrato et sanato, id ipsum constantissimi et fide plena fatemur, quod sanctissimi Patres auctoritate sacrarum Scripturarum nobis tenendum reliquerunt, quod Africana [*222], quod Arausica [*370–397] Synodus professa est, quod beatissimi Pontifices Apostolicae Sedis [*238–249] catholica fide tenuerunt: sed et de natura et gratia, in aliam partem nullo modo declinare praesumentes.

Furthermore, we completely remove from the pious hearing of the faithful the [four] chapters [that were unwisely accepted by the council of our brothers, because of their uselessness or even their harmfulness and error contrary to the truth; but also the other] nineteen chapters, which were developed from completely inadequate reasoning, and which—even if they boast of it—are not grounded in any worldly learning, and within which one is more likely to find an invention of the devil than any argument of faith; and in order that (the faithful) may be protected in every way from these and other similar (matters), we forbid (them) by the authority of the Holy Spirit; we also believe that those who introduce such novelties are to be chastised so as not to be even more severely punished.

Can. 5. Likewise, we believe that we must hold most firmly that all the multitude of the faithful—who have been regenerated “from water and the Holy Spirit” [Jn 3:5] and, by this, truly incorporated into the Church and, according to the apostolic doctrine, baptized into the death of Christ [Rom 6:3—have been absolved from their sins in his blood; for there could not have been true regeneration in these unless there had also been a true redemption; since in the sacraments of the Church there is nothing vain, nothing deceptive, but all is absolutely true and supported by its own truth and sincerity.

Moreover, from this very multitude of the faithful and the redeemed some are preserved in eternal salvation, because through the grace of God they remain faithfully in their redemption, bearing in their hearts the voice of their God himself: “He who ... perseveres even unto the end will be saved” [Mt 10:22; 24:13]; the others, because they were unwilling to remain in the safety of faith, which in the beginning they received, and because they chose by wrong teaching or by a wrong life to make void rather than to preserve the grace of redemption, in no way come to the fullness of salvation and the attainment of eternal beatitude. [Reference is made to Rom 6:3; Gal 3:27; Heb 10:22f., 26, 28f.]

Can. 6. Likewise, concerning grace, through which those who believe are saved and without which never has a rational creature lived happily, and concerning free will weakened through sin in our first parents, but reintegrated and healed through the grace of our Lord Jesus for his faithful, we most constantly and in complete faith confess the same that the most holy Fathers by the authority of the Sacred Scriptures have left for us to hold, which the Synod of Africa [*222] and the Synod of Orange [*370–397] have professed, which the most blessed pontiffs of the Apostolic See [*238–249] in the Catholic faith have held; but also concerning nature and grace, we presume in no manner to change to another way.

Ineptas autem quaestiunculas, et aniles pene fabulas [1 Tim 4:7], Scotorumque pultes puritati fidei nauseam inferentes, quae periculosissimis et gravissimis temporibus, ad cumulum laborum nostrorum, usque ad scissionem caritatis miserabiliter et lacrimabiliter succreverunt, ne mentes christianae inde corrumpantur et excidant a simplicitate et castitate fidei, quae est in Christo [2 Cor 11:3] Iesu, penitus respuimus, et ut fraterna caritas cavendo a talibus auditum castiget, Domini Christi amore monemus.

But foolish little questions and old wives' tales [1 Tim 4:7] and the gruel of the followers of Scotus (Eriugena) (which brings nausea to the purity of faith) have grown in these most dangerous and difficult times, straining our labors up to the point of severing charity in a miserable and lamentable manner; thus, in order that Christian minds not be corrupted and deviate from the simplicity and purity of the faith, which is in Christ Jesus [2 Cor 11:3], we completely reject (these) and admonish, in the love of the Lord Christ, that fraternal charity, being on its guard against such things, refrain from listening (to them).

BENEDICT III: July 855–April 17, 858

NICHOLAS I: April 24, 858–November 13, 867

635–637: Synod of ROME, 862

The quoted articles are also attributed to the Synod of Rome of 863, yet this seems to be erroneous. The first two articles are also transmitted separately, inserted in the letter of Nicholas I Quae apud Constantinopolitanam urbem to the bishops of Asia and Libya of November 13, 866 (according to MGH) and in his letter His ita se habentibus to Emperor Michael in 863 (according to the most ancient editions).

Ed. [Chaps. 1–2, others 7–8]: E. Perels: MGH Epistolae VI (1925), 560₃₄–561₅ (= letter 98) / MaC 15:182E–183A; 611A–612A; 658E–659A / HaC 5:140E–141A / PL 119:795AB; 855BC. —[Chap. 9, others 4]: MaC 15:659B / PL 119:795B. —Reg.: NArch 26/III (1901): 630; JR after 2692.

The Errors of the Theopassionists

635 Cap. 1 (7). Veraciter quidem credendum est et omnimodis profitendum, quia Dominus noster Iesus Christus Deus et Dei Filius passionem crucis tantummodo secundum carnem sustinuit, deitate autem impassibilis mansit, ut apostolica docet auctoritas et sanctorum Patrum luculentissime doctrina ostendit.

Chap. 1 (7). Truly indeed we must believe and in every way profess that our Lord Jesus Christ, God and Son of God, suffered the Passion of the Cross only according to the flesh; in his divinity, however, he remained impassible, as the apostolic authority teaches and the doctrine of the holy Fathers most clearly shows.

636 Cap. 2 (8). Hi autem, qui aiunt, quia Redemptor noster et Dominus Iesus Christus et Dei Filius passionem crucis secundum deitatem sustinuit, quod impium est et catholicis mentibus execrabile, anathema sint.

Chap. 2 (8). Those, however, who say that our Redeemer and Lord, Jesus Christ and Son of God, endured the Passion of the Cross according to his divinity, since this is impious and detestable to Catholic minds, let them be anathema.

The Efficacy of Baptism

637 Cap. 9 (4). Omnibus enim, qui dicunt, quod hi, qui sacrosancti fonte baptismatis credentes in Patrem et Filium Sanctumque Spiritum renascuntur, non aequaliter originali abluantur delicto, anathema sit.

Chap. 9 (4). All, in fact, who say that those who are reborn in the most holy font of baptism believing in the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit are not equally cleansed from original sin, let them be anathema.

638–642: Letter Proposueramus quidem to Emperor Michael, September 28, 865

This was written in reference to the schism of Photius.

Ed.: E. Perels: MGH Epistolae VI (1925), 465_{15f.}, 466_{22f.} [= *638]; 470_{4-7.}, 471_{12-15.} [= *639]; 474₃₃–475₁₀ [= *640]; 480_{25-29.}, 481₇₋₁₄ [= *641]; 485₃₀–486₁₅ [= *642]; (= letter 88) / PL 119:938D–960D (= letter 86). —Reg.: JR 2796, with additions.

The Independence of the Church and of the Apostolic See

... Neque ab Augusto neque ab omni clero neque a regibus neque a populo iudex iudicabitur....¹ “Prima Sedes non iudicabitur a quouam....”²

Ubinam legis, imperatores antecessores vestros in synodalibus conventibus interfuisse, nisi forsitan in quibus de fide tractatum est, quae universalis est, quae omnium communis est, quae non solum ad clericos, verum etiam ad laicos et ad omnes omnino pertinet Christianos? ... Quanto magis ad potioris auctoritatis iudicium tendit querimonia, tanto adhuc amplius maius culmen petendum est, quousque gradatim perveniatur ad eam Sedem, cuius causa aut a se, negotiorum meritis exigentibus, in melius commutatur, aut solius Dei sine quaestione reservatur arbitrio.

Porro si Nos non audieritis, restat, ut sitis apud Nos necessario, quales Dominus noster Iesus Christus hos haberi praecepit, qui Ecclesiam Dei audire contempserint, praesertim cum Ecclesiae Romanae privilegia, Christi ore in beato Petro firmata, in Ecclesia ipsa disposita, antiquitas observata et a sanctis universalibus synodis celebrata atque a cuncta Ecclesia iugiter venerata, nullatenus possint minui, nullatenus infringi, nullatenus commutari, quoniam fundamentum quod Deus posuit, humanus non valet amovere conatus, et quod Deus statuit, firmum validumque consistit.... Ista igitur privilegia huic sanctae Ecclesiae a Christo donata, a synodis non donata, sed iam solummodo celebrata et venerata, ... Nos cogunt Nosque compellunt, “omnium habere sollicitudinem ecclesiarum” Dei [cf. 2 Cor 11:28]....

Quoniam, cum secundum canones, ubi est maior auctoritas, iudicium inferiorum sit deferendum, ad dissolvendum scilicet vel ad roborandum: patet profecto Sedis Apostolicae, cuius auctoritate maior non est, iudicium a nemine fore retractandum [*cf. 232], “neque cuiquam de eius liceat iudicare iudicio. Siquidem ad illam de qualibet mundi parte canones appellari voluerunt; ab illa autem nemo sit appellare permissus....”¹

Ergo de iudicio Romani praesulis non retractando, quia nec mos exigit, quod diximus comprobato, non negamus eiusdem Sedis sententiam posse in melius commutari, cum aut sibi subreptum aliquid fuerit, aut ipsa pro consideratione aetatum vel temporum seu gravium

... Neither by the emperor nor by all the clergy nor by kings nor by the people will the judge be judged....¹ “The first See will not be judged by anyone....”²

Where have you ever read that your former rulers were present in synodal meetings, unless perchance in those in which (matters) concerning faith were discussed, which is universal, which is common to all, which pertains not only to the clergy but even to the laity and certainly to all Christians? ... The greater the complaint that is brought to the judgment of a more powerful authority, so much the higher authority must be sought, until gradually it comes to this See, whose cause is either from itself changed for the better, as the merits of the matters demand, or left without question to the will of God alone.

Furthermore, if you do not listen to Us, it necessarily follows that for Us you are to be considered, as our Lord Jesus Christ commands, as those who refuse to listen to the Church of God, especially since the privileges of the Roman Church, built on Blessed Peter by the word of Christ, deposited in the Church herself, observed in ancient times and celebrated by the sacred universal councils and venerated jointly by the entire Church, can by no means be diminished, by no means infringed upon, by no means changed; for the foundation that God has established, no human effort has the power to destroy, and what God has determined remains firm and strong.... These privileges, therefore, which were given to this holy Church by Christ, not by the councils, but only celebrated and venerated (by them) thereafter ... constrain and compel Us “to have solicitude for all of the churches of God” [cf. 2 Cor 11:28]....

Since, according to the canons, where there is a greater authority, the judgment of the inferiors must be brought to it to be annulled or to be substantiated, certainly it is evident that the judgment of the Apostolic See, of whose authority there is none greater, is to be refused by no one [*cf. 232]. “For the canons wished appeal to be made to it from any part of the world; from it, however, no one may be permitted to appeal....”¹

Therefore, if what We have said about the judgment of the Roman bishop being no longer open for reconsideration—because this is as custom, too, demands—has been established, We do not deny that the judgment of this See can be changed for the better,

*638 ¹ These words are cited as those of Pope Sylvester I; cf. the inauthentic constitution of Pope Sylvester I or chapters 3 and 20 of the supposed Second Synod of Rome (PL 8:833D [834D] and 840D). These are collected in Gratian, Decretum, p. II, cs. 9, q. 3, c. 13 (FrdB 1:1610).

² From the acts of the supposed Synod of Sinuessa (Latinum), which is the work of a plagiarist around the year 500; cf. CIPL 1679. Cf. also the Liber pontificalis: ed. L. Duchesne, vol. 1 (Paris, 1886), 72, 162f., and LXXIV–LXXV.

*641 ¹ Gelasius I, letter Valde mirati to the bishops of Dardania (Serbia), February 1, 495, no. 5 (Thl 399).

necessitatum dispensatorie quiddam ordinare decreverit, quoniam et egregium Apostolum Paulum quaedam fecisse dispensatorie legimus, quae postea reprobasse dinoscitur; quando tamen illa, Romana videlicet Ecclesia, discretissima consideratione fieri delegerit, non quando ipsa, quae bene sunt diffinita, retractari reuerit. . . .

642 Vos autem, quaesumus, nolite praeiudicium Dei Ecclesiae irrogare: illa quippe nullum imperio vestro praeiudicium infert, cum magis pro stabilitate ipsius aeternam divinitatem exoret et pro incolumitate vestra et perpetua salute iugi devotione precetur. Nolite, quae sua sunt, usurpare; nolite, quae ipsi soli commissa sunt, velle surripere, scientes, quia tanto nimirum a sacris debet omnis mundanarum rerum administrator esse remotus, quanto quemlibet ex catalogo clericorum et militantium Deo nullis convenit negotiis saecularibus implicari.

Denique hi, quibus tantum humanis rebus et non divinis praeesse permissum est, quomodo de his, per quos divina ministrantur, iudicare praesumant, penitus ignoramus. Fuerunt haec ante adventum Christi, ut quidam typice reges simul et sacerdotes exsisterent; quod sanctum Melchisedech fuisse sacra prodit historia [cf. Gn 14:18], quodque in membris suis diabolus imitatus, utpote qui semper quae divino cultui conveniunt sibimet tyrannico spiritu vindicare contendit, ut pagani imperatores iidem et “maximi pontifices” dicerentur. Sed cum ad verum ventum est eundem regem atque pontificem, ultra sibi nec imperator iura pontificatus arripuit, nec pontifex nomen imperatorium usurpavit.

Quoniam idem “Mediator Dei et hominum homo Christus Iesus” [1 Tim 2:5] sic actibus propriis ei dignitatibus distinctis officia potestatis utriusque discrevit, propria volens medicinali humilitate sursum efferri, non humana superbia rursus in inferna demergi, ut et christiani imperatores pro aeterna vita pontificibus indigerent, et pontifices pro cursu temporalium tantummodo rerum imperialibus legibus uterentur: quatenus spiritalis actio carnalibus distaret incursibus, et ideo militans Deo minime se negotiis saecularibus implicaret [cf. 2 Tim 2:4], ac vicissim non ille rebus divinis praesidere videretur, qui esset negotiis saecularibus implicatus: ut et modestia utriusque ordinis curaretur, ne extolleretur utroque suffultus, et competens qualitatibus actionum specialiter professio aptaretur.

when either something has eluded it or when, by the consideration of time and circumstance or grave necessity, it has decided to regulate something itself by dispensation, for we read that the illustrious apostle Paul made certain dispensations that, as we know, he later condemned; nevertheless, (this is only in the case) when that one, namely, the Church of Rome, after the most careful consideration, has determined that it be done, not when that same See has refused to have well-defined matters reviewed again. . . .

We beseech you, however, to inflict no injury on the Church of God, for she brings no injury to your authority, since she, in fact, begs the eternal divinity for its stability and prays with constant devotion for your well-being and eternal salvation. Do not usurp what belongs to her or desire to seize what has been entrusted to her alone; for you know that just as it is not proper for a member of the clergy, one dedicated to the service of God, to involve himself in secular affairs, just so every administrator of worldly matters must certainly be removed from things that are sacred.

Finally, We do not in any way know how those permitted to preside only over human matters, and not things divine, dare to stand in judgment over those who administer divine affairs. Before the coming of Christ, it happened that some, in a typological manner, were at the same time kings and priests; and sacred history records how that holy Melchisedech was such [cf. Gen 14:18], and the devil has imitated this in his members, inasmuch as he always strives, in a tyrannical way, to claim for himself those things that pertain to divine worship, so that pagan emperors were at the same time also called “supreme pontiffs”. But as soon as it came to (be a matter of) the (one who was) at once true king and pontiff, the emperor no longer arrogated to himself the rights of the pontiff, nor did the pontiff usurp the name of the emperor.

For the same “mediator of God and man, the man Christ Jesus” [1 Tim 2:5] has separated the functions of the two powers according to their proper activities and distinct dignities—wishing that these be lifted up by their own salutary humility and not cast down again into the infernal regions by human pride—so that Christian emperors might need the pontiffs for eternal life and the pontiffs might utilize imperial laws for the course of purely temporal affairs: so that spiritual action might be far from carnal assaults and, therefore, the one who is in the service of God might not involve himself in any way in secular affairs [cf. 2 Tim 2:4]; and, in turn, the one involved in secular affairs might not be seen to preside over divine matters: thus care might be shown for the modesty of the two orders and so that they might not exalt themselves based on what belongs to the other, and thus (each) profession might be specifically adopted to correspond to the nature of its actions.

643–648: Responses Ad consulta vestra to the Bulgarians, November 13, 866

These are the responses to the delegation of Bogoris, Prince of the Bulgarians, who, together with his people, had accepted the Christian faith.

Ed.: E. Perels: MGH Epistulae VI (1925), 570–99 (= letter 99) / MaC 15:403B–429B / HaC 5:355A–384B / PL 119:980C–1015B (= letter 97). —Reg.: JR 2812, with additions.

The Essential Form of Marriage

Cap. 3. ... Sufficiat secundum leges solus eorum consensus, de quorum coniunctionibus agitur; qui consensus si solus in nuptiis forte defuerit, cetera omnia, etiam cum ipso coitu celebrata, frustrantur, Ioanne Chrysostomo magno doctore testante, qui ait: “Matrimonium non facit coitus, sed voluntas.”¹

Chap. 3. ... According to the laws, let the consent alone suffice for those whose union is in question; and if, by chance, this consent alone is lacking in the marriage, everything else is vain, even if solemnized by intercourse itself, as attested to by the great Doctor John Chrysostom, who said: “What makes a marriage is not intercourse, but the will.”¹

The Form and Minister of Baptism

Cap. 15. Interrogates, utrum homines illi, qui hoc ab illo [pseudopresbytero] bapisma receperunt, Christiani sint an iterum baptizari debeant. Sed si in nomine summae ac individuae Trinitatis baptizati fuere, Christiani profecto sunt, et eos, a quocumque Christiano baptizati sunt, iterato baptizari non convenit; quoniam ... “baptismum ... sive ab adultero vel a fure fuerit datum, ad percipientem munus pervenit illibatam” [*356]....

Chap. 15. You ask whether those persons who received baptism from this [pseudo-priest] are Christians or whether they ought to be baptized again. If they have been baptized in the name of the most exalted and indivisible Trinity, they are certainly Christians, and it is not proper that those who have been baptized by any Christian whatsoever be baptized again; for ... “baptism ... , even if administered by an adulterer or a thief, comes as an unblemished gift to the one who receives it” [*356]....

Et ideo malus bona ministrando non aliis, sed sibi detrimenti cumulum ingerit, ac per hoc certum est, quia quos ille Graecus baptizavit, nulla portio laesionis attingit, propter illud: “Hic est qui baptizat” [Io 1:33], id est Christus, et iterum: “Deus incrementum dat” [I Cor 3:7], subauditur: et non homo.

An evil person by ministering blessings brings an accumulation of harm not upon others but upon himself, and by this it is certain that no portion of injury touched those whom that Greek baptized, because: “It is he who baptizes” [Jn 1:33], that is, Christ, and again: “God gives the increase” [I Cor 3:7], and “not man” is understood.

Cap. 71. Non potest aliquis, quantumcumque pollutus sit, sacramenta divina pulluere, quae purgatoria cunctarum remedia contagionum existunt. Nec potest solis radius per cloacas et latrinas transiens aliquid exinde contaminationis attrahere; proinde qualiscumque sacerdos sit, quae sancta sunt coinquinare non potest; idcirco ab eo, usquequo episcoporum iudicio reprobetur, communio percipienda est: quoniam mali bona ministrando se tantummodo laedunt, et cerea fax accensa sibi quidem detrimentum praestat, aliis vero lumen in tenebris administrat.... Sumite igitur intrepide ab omni sacerdote Christi mysteria, quoniam omnia in fide purgantur.

Chap. 71. No one, no matter how polluted he may be, can pollute the divine sacraments, which are purifying remedies for all contaminations. Just as a ray of the sun passing through sewers and latrines cannot contract any contamination from that, in the same way, whatever may be the character of a priest, he cannot pollute what is holy; therefore, until he is condemned by a judgment of bishops, one should receive communion from him; for, in administering good things, evil men harm only themselves; and a lighted wax torch does, indeed, cause loss to itself, but to others it furnishes light in the darkness.... Therefore, receive the mysteries of Christ from every priest without fear, since in the faith all things are purified.

Cap. 104. A quodam Iudaeo, nescitis utrum christiano an pagano, multos in patria vestra baptizatos asseritis, et quid de his sit agendum consulitis. Hi profecto, si in nomine sanctae Trinitatis vel tantum in nomine

Chap. 104. You say that in your country many (have been) baptized by a certain Jew (you do not know whether he is Christian or pagan), and you are asking what should be done about them. If they were truly baptized

*643 ¹ Pseudo-John Chrysostom, Opus imperfectum in Matthaem, hom. 32, 9 (PG 56:802); cf. Digesta L 17, juridical rule 30 (P. Krüger and T. Mommsen, 11th ed. [Berlin, 1908], 921).

Christi, sicut in Actibus Apostolorum [2:38; 19:5] legimus, baptizati sunt (unum quippe idemque est, ut sanctus exponit Ambrosius),¹ constat eos non esse denuo baptizandos: sed primum, utrum christianus aut paganus ipse Iudaeus exstiterit, vel si postmodum factus fuerit christianus, investigandum est, quamvis non praetereundum esse credamus, quid beatus de baptismo dicat Augustinus:² “Iam satis” inquit “ostendimus ad baptismum, qui verbis evangelicis consecratur, non pertinere cuiusquam vel dantis vel accipientis errorem, sive de Patre sive de Filio sive de Spiritu Sancto aliter sentiat quam doctrina caelestis insinuat”, et iterum: “Sunt etiam quidam ex eo numero, qui adhuc nequiter vivunt aut etiam in haeresibus vel in gentilium superstitionibus iaceant, et tamen etiam illic ‘novit Dominus, qui sunt eius’ [2 Tim 2:19]. Namque in illa ineffabili praescientia multi, qui foris videntur, intus sunt.”

Et alio loco: “Etiam corde tardiores, quantum existimo, intelligunt baptismum Christi nulla perversitate hominis sive dantis sive accipientis posse violari”; et rursus: “Potest tamen” ait “tradere separatus, sicut potest habere separatus, sed quam perniciose tradere; ille autem cui tradit potest salubriter accipere, si ipse non separatus accipiat”.

in the name of the Holy Trinity or only in the name of Christ, as we read in the Acts of the Apostles [2:38; 19:5] (for it is one and the same thing, as St. Ambrose¹ explains), it is clear that they should not be baptized again: but first it should be investigated whether this Jew was Christian or pagan, or if he later became Christian, although we believe one should not neglect what St. Augustine² says about baptism: “We already have demonstrated sufficiently”, he says, “that for a baptism consecrated by the words of the Gospel, it does not matter if there is error on the part of either the minister or the recipient, whether he thinks differently about the Father, the Son, or the Holy Spirit than the celestial doctrine teaches”, and again: “There are also some in this number who live scandalously or even persist in heresies or Gentile superstitions, and yet even there ‘the Lord knows those who are his’ [2 Tim 2:19]. For in that ineffable foreknowledge, many who seem to be outside are within.”

And in another place: “Even those more slow of mind understand, I think, that the baptism of Christ cannot be violated by any human perversity, whether of the minister or the recipient”; and again: “Nevertheless,” he says, “a person separated (from the Church) can administer it, just as one who is separated (from the Church) can accept it, but how pernicious it is to administer it; the one, however, to whom he bestows it can receive it in a salutary way if he himself does not receive it as separated.”

Freedom from Coercion in the Acceptance of the Faith

647 Cap. 41. De iis autem, qui christianitatis bonum suscipere renuunt, ... nihil aliud scribere possumus vobis, nisi ut eos ad fidem rectam monitis, exhortationibus et ratione illos potius quam vi, quod vane sapiant, convincatis....

Porro illis violentia, ut credant, nullatenus inferenda est. Nam omne quod ex voto non est, bonum esse non potest [affertur Ps 53:8; 118:108; 27:7]; ultronea quippe Deus obsequia et exhiberi tantum ab ultroneis praecipit: nam si vim inferre voluisset, nullus omnipotentiae illius resistere potuisset.

Chap. 41. With regard to those who refuse to receive the good of Christianity, ... We cannot write anything else to you except that you should convince them of the correct faith more through admonitions, exhortations, and reasoning, rather than (convince them) by force that their thought is vain. ...

Furthermore, violence is never in any way to be inflicted upon them in order that they may believe. For whatever is not from an inner desire cannot be good [reference is made to Ps 54:8; 119:108; 28:7]; God, in fact, prescribes a voluntary submission to be offered and only by those who are willing: for if he had wished to employ force, no one could have resisted his omnipotence.

The Confession of a Crime Cannot Be Extorted by Force

648 Cap. 86. Si fur vel latro deprehensus fuerit, et negaverit quod ei impingitur, asseritis apud vos, quod

Chap. 86. You say that among you, if a thief or robber has been apprehended and denies the accusations made

*646 ¹ See Ambrose, De Spiritu Sancto I, 3, nos. 42–44 (PL 16:713B–715A). For the interpretation of this phrase, cf. O. Faller, Die Taufe im Namen Jesu bei Ambrosius: Festschrift 75 Jahre Stella Matutina I (Feldkirch/Vorarlberg, 1931), 139–50; G. Bareille: DThC 2/I (1905), 184.

² Four passages of Augustine follow, De baptismo contra Donatistas IV, 15, no. 22; V, 27, no. 38; VI, 5, no. 7 (CSEL 51:247, 295, 297, 302 / PL 43:168, 196, 197, 200).

iudex caput eius verberibus tundat et aliis stimulis ferreis, donec veritatem depromat, ipsius latera pungat; quam rem nec divina lex nec humana prorsus admittit, cum non invita, sed spontanea debeat esse confessio, nec sit violenter elicienda, sed voluntarie proferenda; denique, si contigerit vos etiam illis poenis illatis nihil de his, quae passo in crimen obiiciuntur, penitus invenire, nonne saltem tunc erubescitis, et quam impie iudicetis agnoscitis?

Similiter autem, si homo criminatus, talia passus sustinere non valens, dixerit se perpetrasse quod non perpetravit: ad quem, rogo, tantae impietatis magnitudo revolvitur nisi ad eum, qui hunc talia cogit mendaciter confiteri? Quamvis non confiteri noscatur, sed loqui, qui hoc ore profert, quod corde non tenet! . . .

Porro cum liber homo crimine fuerit appetitus, nisi iam pridem repertus est alicuius sceleris reus, aut tribus testibus convictus poenae succumbit, aut si convinci non potuerit, ad Evangelium sacrum, quod sibi obicitur, minime commisisse iurans absolvitur, et deinceps huic negotio finis imponitur, quemadmodum crebro dictus Apostolus gentium attestatur: “Omnis” inquit “controversiae eorum finis ad confirmationem est iuramentum” [Hbr 6:16].¹

against him, the judge strikes his head with whips and pricks his flanks with other iron prods until he produces the truth; such a thing neither divine nor human law allows in any way, since a confession must not be unwilling but spontaneous, nor should it be elicited violently, but freely offered; accordingly, if it happened that, even after having inflicted these torments, you find none of the things about which the tortured one was accused, then would you not at least feel shame and recognize how impiously you judge?

But in like manner, if an accused man, subjected to (such torture) and not able to endure it, says that he committed that which he did not commit: upon whom, I ask, should the magnitude of such impiety fall if not on the one who forced such a man to confess this falsely? One knows, however, that he who professes with his mouth what he does not have in his heart is not confessing but (only) speaking! . . .

Moreover, when a free man has been apprehended for a crime and—unless he has already been found guilty previously of some evil deed or, convicted by three witnesses, he submits to the penalty or unless he could not be convicted—he swears on the holy Gospel that is placed before him that he has not in any way committed (the crime), he is (thus) absolved, and henceforth an end is put to this affair, just as the apostle to the Gentiles, frequently cited, testifies, when he says: “In all their disputes an oath is final for confirmation” [Heb 6:16].¹

ADRIAN II: December 14, 867–December 14, 872

Fourth Council of CONSTANTINOPLE (Eighth Ecumenical): October 5, 869–February 28, 870

The council was called together to decide the question of Photius, who in 859 had provoked a schism. The original Greek text of the acts has been lost, but we have the entire Latin translation made by the librarian Anastasius as well as an abbreviated Greek version. The Latin version contains twenty-seven canons, and the Greek version only fourteen. To a large extent, they correspond to the following pattern: Greek canons 1–8 (= Latin 1–8); 9–10 (= 10–11); 11 (= 14); 12 (= 17); 13 (= 21); 14 (= 27). The council was recognized as ecumenical only by the Latin Church and not before the twelfth century.

Ed.: MaC 16:160A–174D (Latin); 397D–405C (Greek) / HaC 5:899A–909C; 1097D–1104D / COeD, 3rd ed., 166–82 / PL 129:150B–160A.

650–664: Session 10, February 28, 870: Canons

Tradition as Criterion of Faith

| [Vs. Anastasii Bibliothecarii] | [Recensio graeca abbreviata] | [Version of the Librarian Anastasius] | [Abbreviated Greek Version] | 650 |
|--|--|--|--|-----|
| Can. 1. Per aequam et regiam divinae iustitiae | α'. Τὴν εὐθεΐαν καὶ βασιλικὴν ὁδὸν τῆς | Can. 1. Wishing to walk without hindrance | 1. Wishing to walk without hindrance along the | |

*648 ¹ This determination is in sharp contrast to the legislation introduced by Innocent IV against the heretics. Cf. his constitution Cum adversus of February 22, 1244 (BullTau 3:503b–505a), in which he confirms the most severe laws of Emperor Frederick II as well as the constitution Ad extirpanda of May 15, 1252 (BullTau 3:552b–558b), which, in rule 25, orders that which Nicholas I rejects, namely, the imprisonment of heretics and “forcing them, under threat of dismemberment and the peril of death, . . . to admit their errors and to accuse others . . . , as thieves and brigands are compelled” (cogere citra membri diminutionem et mortis periculum . . . errores suos fateri et accusare alios . . . , sicut coguntur fures et latrones) (ibid., 556a).

viam inoffense incedere volentes, veluti quasdam lampades semper lucentes et illuminantes gressus nostros, qui secundum Deum sunt, sanctorum Patrum definitiones et sensus retinere debemus.

θείας δικαιοσύνης ἀπροσκόπτως βαδίζειν ἐθέλοντες, ὅϊόν τινας πυρσούς ἀειλαμπεῖς τοὺς τῶν ἁγίων πατέρων ὕρους κρατεῖν ὀφείλομεν· along the right and royal path of divine justice, we must retain the definitions and understanding of the holy Fathers as ever-burning lamps illuminating our steps, which are in accordance with God.

right and royal path of divine justice, we must retain the definitions of the holy Fathers as ever-burning lamps.

651 Quapropter et has ut “secunda eloquia” secundum magnum et sapientissimum Dionysium¹ arbitrantes et existimantes, etiam de eis cum divino David promptissime canamus: “Mandatum Domini lucidum illuminans oculos” [Ps 18:9; citatur et Ps 118:105; Prv 6:23; Is 26:9: Septg.]... Luci enim veraciter assimilatae sunt divinorum canonum hortationes et dehortationes, secundum quod discernitur melius a peiore et expediens atque proficuum ab eo, quod non expedire, sed et obesse dignoscitur.

τοιγαροῦν τοὺς ἐν τῇ καθολικῇ καὶ ἀποστολικῇ ἐκκλησίᾳ παραδοθέντας θεσμούς παρά τε τῶν ἁγίων καὶ πανευφήμων ἀποστόλων, παρά τε ὀρθόδοξων συνόδων οἰκουμενικῶν τε καὶ τοπικῶν ἢ καὶ πρὸς τινος θεηγόρου πατρὸς διδασκάλου τῆς ἐκκλησίας τηρεῖν καὶ φυλάττειν ὁμολογοῦμεν·

Therefore, judging and esteeming these, according to the great and most wise Dionysius,¹ as a second word (of God), let us, with the divine David, sing of them most readily: “The commandment of the Lord is bright, illuminating the eyes” [Ps 19:9; also cited: Ps 119:105; Prov 6:23; Is 26:9 LXX].... For truly the exhortations and interdictions of the divine canons are comparable to light, for, in accordance with them, the better is discerned from the worse, and what is expedient and profitable is distinguished from what is not expedient and indeed harmful.

There, we profess to keep and guard the rules that have been handed down in the catholic and apostolic Church by the holy and illustrious apostles and by the universal and local orthodox synods or by any Father, teacher of the Church, speaking the word of God.

652 Igitur regulas, quas sanctae catholicae et apostolicae Ecclesiae tam a sanctis famosissimis Apostolis quam ab orthodoxorum universalibus necnon et localibus conciliis vel etiam a quolibet de illoquo Patre ac magistro Ecclesiae traditae sunt, servare ac custodire profitemur; his et propriam vitam et mores regentes et omnem sacerdotii catalogum, sed et omnes, qui Christiano censentur vocabulo, poenis et damnationibus et e diverso receptionibus ac iustificationibus, quae per illas prolatae sunt et

Therefore we profess to keep and guard the rules that have been handed down for the holy, catholic, and apostolic Church by the holy and illustrious apostles as well as by the universal and also the local councils of the orthodox or even by any Father or Doctor of the Church, who is a spokesman for God;

regulating our own life and morals by these canons, we decree that the entire assembly of priests as well as those known by the name Christian are canonically subject to the penalties and condemnations and, conversely, to definitae, subiici canonicè decernentes;

*651 ¹ Cf. Pseudo-Dionysius the Areopagite, De ecclesiastica hierarchia 1, nos. 4 and 5 (PG 3:375–78).

tenere quippe traditiones, quas accepimus sive per sermonem sive per epistolam [cf. 2 Th 2:15] Sanctorum, qui antea fulserunt, Paulus admonet aperte, magnus Apostolus.

Can. 3. Sacram imaginem Domini nostri Iesu Christi et omnium Liberatoris et Salvatoris, aequo honore cum libro sanctorum Evangeliorum adorari decernimus.

Sicut enim per syllabarum eloquia, quae in libro feruntur, salutem consequemur omnes, ita per colorum imaginariam operationem et sapientes et idiotae cuncti ex eo, quod in promptu est, perfruuntur utilitate; quae enim in syllabis sermo, haec et scriptura, quae in coloribus est, praedicat et commendat; et dignum est, ut secundum congruentiam rationis et antiquissimam traditionem propter honorem, quia ad principalia ipsa referentur, etiam derivative iconae honorentur et adorentur aequè ut sanctorum sacer Evangeliorum liber atque typus pretiosae crucis.

Si quis ergo non adorat iconam Salvatoris Christi, non videat formam eius, quando veniet in gloria paterna glorificari et glo-κρατεῖν γὰρ τὰς παραδόσεις, ἃς παρελάβομεν εἴτε διὰ λόγου, εἴτε δι' ἐπιστολῶν [cf. 2 Thess 2,15] τῶν προγενεστέρως διαλαμπάντων ἁγίων, παρεγγυᾷ διαῤῥήθηδην Παῦλος ὁ μέγας ἀπόστολος.

The Veneration of Sacred Images

γ'. Τὴν ἱερὰν εἰκόνα τοῦ κυρίου ἡμῶν Ἰησοῦ Χριστοῦ ὁμοτίμως τῇ βίβλῳ τῶν ἁγίων εὐαγγελίων προσκυνεῖσθαι θεοσπίζομεν.

Ὡςπερ γὰρ διὰ τῶν ἐμφερομένων ἐν αὐτῇ συλλαβῶν τῆς σωτηρίας ἐπιτυγχάνουσιν ἅπαντες, οὕτω διὰ τῆς τῶν χρωμάτων εἰκονουργίας καὶ σοφοὶ καὶ ἰδιῶται πάντες τῆς ὠφελείας ἐκ τοῦ προχείρου παραπολαύουσιν· ἅπερ γὰρ ὁ ἐν συλλαβῇ λόγος, ταῦτα καὶ ἡ ἐν χρώμασι γραφῇ καταγγέλλει τε καὶ παρίστησιν.

Εἴ τις οὖν οὐ προσκυνεῖ τὴν εἰκόνα τοῦ σωτῆρος Χριστοῦ, μὴ ἴδῃ ἐν τῇ δευτέρᾳ παρουσίᾳ τὴν τοῦτου μορφήν.

the pardons and vindications that have been brought forth and determined by these;

for the great apostle Paul expressly admonishes (us) to hold to the traditions we have received either orally or by letter from the saints [cf. 2 Thess 2:15] who have shined forth previously.

Can. 3. We decree that the sacred image of our Lord Jesus Christ, the Liberator and Savior of all people, must be venerated with honor equal to that given to the book of the holy Gospels.

For, just as through the written words that are contained in the book we all shall obtain salvation, so through the iconic influence of the colors both the wise and the simple benefit from what is before them; for as speech announces and recommends in syllables, so too does writing that consists in colors.

It is only right, then, in accordance with true reason and very ancient tradition, that images should be honored and venerated in a derivative way because of the honor that is given to their archetypes, and it should be equal to that given to the sacred book of the holy Gospels and the representation of the precious Cross.

If, therefore, anyone does not venerate the image of Christ the Savior, let him not see his face when he comes in his Father's glory

For the great apostle Paul expressly exhorted us [2 Thess 2:15] to hold the traditions that we have received either orally or by a letter of the saints who have shined forth previously.

3. We decree that the sacred image of our Lord Jesus Christ must be venerated with honor equal to that given to the book of holy Gospels. 653

For just as through the words contained in (the book) all are led to salvation, so also through the iconic influence of the colors both the wise and the simple benefit from what is displayed before them. For, indeed, what speech (presents) in syllables the painting likewise announces and represents in colors. 654

If, therefore, anyone does not venerate the image of Christ the Savior, let him not see his form in the Second Coming. 655

rificare sanctos suos [cf. 2 Th 1:10]; sed alienus sit a communione ipsius et claritate; to be glorified and to glorify his saints [cf. 2 Thess 1:10], but let him be cut off from his communion and splendor.

656 similiter autem et imaginem intemeratae matris eius et Dei genitricis Mariae; insuper et iconas sanctorum Angelorum depingimus, quemadmodum eos figurat verbis divina Scriptura; sed et laudabilissimorum Apostolorum, Prophetarum, martyrum et sanctorum virorum, simul et omnium Sanctorum, et honoramus et adoramus.

Et qui sic se non habent, anathema sint a Patre et Filio et Spiritu Sancto.

Ὅμοίως δὲ καὶ τὴν εἰκόνα τῆς ἀχράντου μητρὸς αὐτοῦ καὶ τὰς εἰκόνας τῶν ἁγίων ἀγγέλων, καθὼς αὐτοὺς χαρακτηρίζει διὰ τῶν λογίων ἡ ἅγια γραφή, καὶ προσέειπε τῶν ἁγίων πάντων καὶ τιμῶμεν καὶ προσκυνοῦμεν· καὶ οἱ μὴ οὕτως ἔχοντες ἀνάθεμα ἔστωσαν.

Similarly the image of Mary, his immaculate Mother and Mother of God; we also paint images of the holy angels just as divine Scripture depicts them in words; we also honor and venerate those <images> of the highly renowned apostles, prophets, martyrs, and holy men as well as those of all the saints.

And let those who do not hold thus be anathema from the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit.

Likewise we honor and venerate the image of his immaculate Mother and the images of the holy angels, just as they are represented by the words of Sacred Scripture, and also <the images> of all the saints.

And let those who do not conduct themselves in this way be anathema.

The Uniqueness of the Human Soul

657 Can. 11. Veteri et Novo Testamento unam animam rationabilem et intellectualem habere hominem docente et omnibus deo-quis Patribus et magistris Ecclesiae eandem opinionem asseverantibus: in tantum impietatis quidam, malorum inventionibus dantes operam, devenerunt, ut duas eum habere animas impudenter dogmatizare et quibusdam irrationabilibus conatibus ... propriam haeresim confirmare pertentent.

ἰ. (10) Τῆς παλαιᾶς τε καὶ καινῆς διαθήκης μίαν ψυχὴν λογικὴν τε καὶ νοερὰν διδασκούμενης ἔχειν τὸν ἄνθρωπον, καὶ πάντων τῶν θεηγόρων πατέρων καὶ διδασκάλων τῆς ἐκκλησίας τὴν αὐτὴν δόξαν κατεμπεδούντων, εἰσὶ τινες οἱ δύο ψυχὰς ἔχειν αὐτὸν δοξάζοντες, καὶ τισὶν ἀσυλλογίστοις ἐπιχειρήμασι τὴν ἰδίαν κρατύνουσι αἵρεσιν·

Can. 11. Even though the Old and the New Testaments teach that man has one rational and intellectual soul, and all the Fathers and Doctors of the Church, who are spokesmen of God, affirm the same belief, certain individuals, devoting their efforts to inventing evils, have reached such a degree of impiety that they impudently declare as dogma that man has two souls, and by irrational efforts ... they strive to reinforce their heresy.

10. Even though the Old and New Testaments teach that man has one rational and intellectual soul, and all the Fathers and Doctors of the Church, who are spokesmen for God, affirm the same belief, some individuals think that man has two souls, and they reinforce their heresy by irrational demonstrations.

658 Itaque sancta haec et universalis Synodus ... talis impietatis inventores et patratores et his similia sentientes magna voce anathematizat, et definit atque promulgat, neminem prorsus

ἢ τοίνυν ἅγια καὶ οἰκουμένη αὕτη σύνοδος τοὺς τῆς τοιαύτης ἀσεβείας γεννήτορας καὶ τοὺς ὁμοφρονοῦντας αὐτοῖς ἀναθεματίζει μεγαλοφώνως·

Therefore, this holy and universal council ... anathematizes with a mighty voice the inventors and perpetrators of such impiety and those of similar views; and it defines and makes known that no one

Therefore, this holy and ecumenical council anathematizes with a mighty voice the originators of such impiety and those who share their point of view;

And if anyone in the future dares to speak the habere vel servare quoquo modo statuta huius impietatis auctorum.

Si autem quis contraria gerere praesumpserit huic sanctae et magnae Synodo, anathema sit et a fide atque cultura Christianorum alienus.

εἰ δέ τις τὰ ἐναντία τοῦ λοιποῦ τολμήσει λέγειν, ἀνάθεμα ἔστω.

is to have or preserve in any way the ordinances of the authors of this impiety.

But if anyone dares to act in opposition to this holy and great council, let him be anathema and be excluded from the faith and worship of Christians.

contrary, let him be anathema.

The Liberty of Ecclesiastical Governance

Can. 12. Apostolicis et synodicis canonibus promotiones et consecrationes episcoporum et potentia et praeceptione principum factas penitus interdicens, concordantes definimus et sententiam nos quoque proferrimus, ut, si quis episcopus per versutiam vel tyrannidem principum huiusmodi dignitatis consecrationem susceperit, deponatur omnimodis, utpote qui non ex voluntate Dei et ritu ac decreto ecclesiastico, sed ex voluntate carnalis sensus ex hominibus et per homines Dei domum possidere voluit vel consensit.

Can. 17. Illud autem tamquam perosum quiddam ab auribus nostris repulimus, quod a quibusdam imperitis dicitur, non posse synodum absque principali praesentia celebrari: cum nusquam sacri canones convenire saeculares principes in conciliis sanxerint, sed solos antistites. Unde nec interfuisse illos synodis, exceptis conciliis universalibus, invenimus: neque enim fas est, saeculares principes spectatores fieri rerum, quae sacerdotibus Dei nonnumquam eveniunt...

ιβ'. (12) Ἦλθεν εἰς τὰς ἡμῶν ἀκοάς, τὸ μὴ δύνασθαι ἄνευ ἀρχοντικῆς παρουσίας σύνδοτον γενέσθαι. Οὐδαμοῦ δὲ οἱ θεῖοι κανόνες συνέρχεσθαι κοσμικοῦς ἄρχοντας ἐν ταῖς συνόδοις νομοθετοῦσιν, ἀλλὰ μόνους τοὺς ἐπισκόπους· ὅθεν οὐδὲ πλὴν τῶν οἰκουμενικῶν συνόδων τὴν παρουσίαν αὐτῶν γεγενημένην εὐρίσκομεν. Οὐδὲ γὰρ θεμιτὸν ἔστι γίνεσθαι θεατὰς τοὺς κοσμικοὺς ἄρχοντας τῶν τοῖς ἱερεῦσι τοῦ Θεοῦ συμβαινόντων πραγμάτων.

Can. 12. [the Greek text no longer exists] Since the apostolic and synodal canons absolutely forbid the nominations and consecrations of bishops accomplished by the power and rule of secular rulers, we declare and also make known our decision, in accord with the canons, that if any bishop, through the craftiness or tyranny of secular rulers, has received the consecration of his dignity in this way, he must be completely deposed, since he is one who has wished or consented to possess the house of God, not from the will of God and the discipline and decree of the Church, but from a desire of carnal inclination, from men and through men. 659

Can. 17 [Latin]. Moreover, we cast aside from our ears as something poisonous what is said by certain ignorant men, (namely,) that it is not possible to hold a synod without the presence of the civil ruler, since the sacred canons have never ordered secular leaders to meet in councils, but only bishops. Thus neither do we find that they were present in synods, ecumenical councils excepted: for neither is it right that secular rulers be witnesses of affairs that sometimes come before the priests of God...

12. [Greek] There came to our ears the statement that a synod cannot be held without the presence of the civil ruler. But nowhere do the sacred canons order secular leaders to meet in synods, but only bishops. Thus neither do we find that they were present, except in ecumenical councils. For it is not right that secular rulers be witnesses of affairs that sometimes come before the priests of God. 660

The Primacy of the Roman See

Can. 21. Dominicum sermonem, quem Christus sanctis Apostolis et discipulis suis dixit, quia: "Qui vos recipit, me recipit" [Mt 10:40]; "et qui vos spernit, me spernit" [Lc 10:16], ad omnes etiam, qui post eos secundum ipsos facti sunt Summi Pontifices et pastorum principes in Ecclesia catholica dictum esse credentes, definimus, neminem prorsus mundi potentium quemquam eorum,

The word of God that Christ spoke to his holy apostles and disciples: "Who receives you, receives me" [Mt 10:40]; "and whoever rejects you, rejects me" [Lc 10:16], we believe was addressed also to all those who, after them and in accordance with them, became supreme pontiffs and leaders of the pastors in the Catholic Church. We, therefore, determine that absolutely none of the 661

qui patriarchalibus sedibus praesunt, inhonorare aut movere a proprio throno tentare, sed omni reverentia et honore dignos iudicare; praecipue quidem sanctissimum Papam senioris Romae, deinceps autem Constantinopolios patriarcham, deinde vero Alexandriae ac Antiochiae atque Hierosolymorum; sed nec alium quemcunque conscriptiones contra sanctissimum Papam senioris Romae ac verba complicare et componere sub occasione quasi diffamatorum quorundam criminum; quod et nuper Photius fecit et multo ante Dioscorus.

ruling powers of this world shall dishonor or attempt to remove from his throne any of those who occupy patriarchal sees, but they must judge them worthy of all reverence and honor; especially the most holy pope of elder Rome; and also, in order of succession, the patriarch of Constantinople, then indeed those of Alexandria, Antioch, and Jerusalem; no one, however, is to compose or prepare any writings and discourses against the most holy pope of elder Rome under the pretext, as it were, of supposed crimes committed; something Photius did recently and Dioscorus much earlier.

662 Quisquis autem tanta iactantia et audacia usus fuerit, ut secundum Photium vel Dioscorum in scriptis vel sine scriptis iniurias quasdam contra sedem Petri, Apostolorum principis, moveat, aequallem et eandem quam illi condemnationem recipiat.

ιγ'. (13) Εἴ τις τοσαύτη τὸ λμη χρῆσαιτο, ὥστε κατὰ τὸν Φώτιον καὶ Διόσκορον ἐγγράφως ἢ ἀγράφως παροινίας τινὰς κατὰ τῆς καθέδρας Πέτρου, τοῦ κορυφαίου τῶν ἀποστόλων, κινεῖν, τὴν αὐτὴν ἐκείνοις δεχέσθω κατάκρισιν·

But whoever, like Photius and Dioscorus, will manifest such insolence and audacity that he promotes injuries of some sort against the See of Peter, the chief of the apostles, whether in writing or not, let him receive a condemnation equal to and identical to theirs.

13. Whoever, like Photius and Dioscorus, will manifest such audacity that he promotes inquiries against the See of Peter, the chief of the apostles, whether in writing or not, let him receive a condemnation identical to theirs.

663 Si vero quis aliqua saeculi potestate fruens vel potens, pellere tentaverit praefatum Apostolicae cathedrae Papam aut aliorum patriarcharum quemquam, anathema sit.

But if anyone, making use of some secular power or authority, should attempt to expel the above-mentioned pope of the Apostolic See or one of the other patriarchs, let him be anathema.

664 Porro si Synodus universalis fuerit congregata, et facta fuerit etiam de sancta Romanorum Ecclesia quaevis ambiguitas et controversia, oportet venerabiliter et cum convenienti reverentia de proposita quaestione sciscitari et solutionem accipere aut proficere aut profectum facere, non tamen audacter sententiam dicere contra Summos senioris Romae Pontifices.

εἰ δὲ συγκροτηθεῖσιν συνόδου οἰκουμενικῆς γένηται τις καὶ περὶ τῆς ἐκκλησίας τῶν Ῥωμαίων ἀμφιβολία, ἔξεστιν εὐλαβῶς καὶ μετὰ τῆς προσηκούσης αἰδοῦς διαπυθάνεσθαι περὶ τοῦ προκειμένου ζητήματος καὶ δέχεσθαι τὴν λύσιν καὶ ἢ ὠφελεῖσθαι, ἢ ὠφελεῖν, μὴ μέντοι θρασέως ἀποφέρεσθαι κατὰ τῶν τῆς πρεσβυτέρας Ῥώμης ἱεραρχῶν.

But if an ecumenical council is assembled and there appears some doubt or controversy even with regard to the holy Church of the Romans, it is necessary, with great respect and proper reverence, to investigate the point of controversy and procure a solution, either by helping or by obtaining help, yet not by audaciously pronouncing a judgment against the supreme pontiffs of elder Rome.

But if an ecumenical council is assembled and there appears some doubt with regard to the Church of the Romans, one can, with prudence and the proper reverence, investigate the point of controversy and find a solution, either by obtaining help or by helping, yet not by having the audacity to cast an accusation against the bishops of elder Rome.

JOHN VIII: December 14, 872–December 16, 882

668: Letter Unum est to the Princes of Sardinia, ca. September 873

Ed.: E. Caspar, Fragmenta registri Johannis VIII, no. 27: MGH Epistulae VII (Berlin, 1928), 289₂₋₁₀ / S. Löwenfeld, Epistolae Pontificum Romanorum ineditae (Leipzig, 1885), 28, no. 50 (= Collectio Britannica, 26). —Reg.: JR 2983; P. Ewald, in NArch (1879): 306, no. 26.

The Elimination of Human Slavery

Unum est, unde vos modicum paterno more debeamus monere; quod nisi emendaveritis, grande peccatum incurritis, et ob hoc, sicut speratis, non lucra, sed magis vobis dam[p]na augebitis. Igitur Graecorum studiis, sicut didicimus, multi a paganis captivi sublatis in vestris partibus venundantur et a vestratibus empti sub iugo servitutis tenentur; cum constet pium et sanctum esse, veluti Christianos decet, ut, cum eos vestrates ab ipsis Graecis emerint, pro amore Christi liberos esse dimittant, et non ab hominibus, sed ab ipso Domino nostro Iesu Christo mercedem accipiant. Unde vos exhortamur et paterno amore praecipimus, ut, cum captivos aliquos ab ipsis redemeritis, pro salute animae vestrae liberos eos abire sinatis.

There is one matter on which We must, in a fatherly way, give you some warning; if you do not correct it, you commit a grave sin, and because of this, you will increase, not profits, as you hope, but rather losses. As We have learned at the instigation of the Greeks, many who were held captive by the pagans are then sold in your regions and, after having been purchased by your compatriots, are held under the yoke of slavery, even though it is established as pious and holy, as is fitting among Christians, that your compatriots, when they have bought them from the Greeks, should set them free for the love of Christ and that they receive their reward, not from men, but from our Lord Jesus Christ himself. We therefore exhort and command you with paternal love that, if you have purchased any captives from them, you allow them to go free for the salvation of your soul. 668

MARINUS I: December 16, 882–May 15, 884

ADRIAN III: May 17, 884–September 885

STEPHEN V (VI): September 885–September 14, 891670: Letter Consuluisti de infantibus to Archbishop Ludbert of Mainz, between 887 and 888

Ludbert (or Liutbert) was perhaps led to pose this question by canon 35 of the Synod of Worms in 868 (MaC 15:876A).

Ed.: E. Caspar: Fragmenta registri Stephani V, no. 25: MGH Epistulae VII (Berlin, 1928), 347₂₁–348₈ / P. Jaffé, Monumenta Moguntina (cf. *580^o), 335, no. 13 / PL 129:797B–D / MaC 18:25D / Gratian, Decretum, p. II, cs. 2, q. 5, c. 20 (Frdb 1:462f.). This letter is cited in part by Alexander III in condemning investigations carried out with red-hot irons and similar means in his letter Constituti a Domino to the Archbishop of Uppsala, September 10, 1171 or 1172 (BullTau 2:736ab / BullCocq 2:412a / PL 200:859A). —Reg.: P. Ewald, in NArch 5 (1879): 406, no. 24; JR 3443; BoeW 1:82, no. 64.

Rejection of Trials by Ordeal

Consuluisti de infantibus, qui in uno lecto cum parentibus dormientes mortui reperiuntur, utrum ferro candente aut aqua fervente seu alio quolibet examine parentes se purificare debeant eos non oppressisse. Monendi namque sunt et protestandi parentes, ne tam tenellos secum in uno collocent lecto, ne negligentia qualibet proveniente suffocentur vel opprimantur, unde ipsi homicidii rei inveniantur. Nam ferri candentis vel aquae ferventis examinatione confessionem extorqueri a quolibet sacri non censent canones; et quod sanctorum Patrum documento sancitum non est, superstitiosa adinventione non est praesumendum.

You have consulted us on the subject of little infants who, sleeping in the same bed with their parents, are discovered to be dead: Should the parents, by either a burning fire or boiling water or by some other means, exonerate themselves from having suffocated them. The parents, first of all, should be warned and cautioned not to place such delicate ones in the same bed with them, lest, when some imprudence occurs, the [babies] might be smothered or crushed, and, thus, the parents themselves might be found culpable of homicide. On the other hand, the sacred canons do not approve of a confession being extorted from anyone by means of burning fire or boiling water; and what is not sanctioned by the teachings of the holy Fathers should not to be presumed by a superstitious invention. 670

Spontanea enim confessione vel testium approbatione publicata delicta, habito prae oculis Dei timore, commissa sunt regimini nostro iudicare; occulta vero et

The crimes made public by means of spontaneous confession or by the testimony of witnesses have been entrusted to our judgment, since the fear of God was incognita illius sunt iudicio relinquenda, “qui solus novit corda filiorum hominum” [cf. 3 Rg 8:39].

Hi autem qui probantur vel confitentur talis reatus se noxios, tua eos castiget moderatio, quia si conceptum in utero qui per abortum deleverit, homicida est, quanto magis qui unius saltem diei puerulum peremerit, homicidam se esse excusare nequibit?

made public; but what is hidden and unknown must be left to the judgment of the One “who alone knows the hearts of the sons of men” [cf. 1 Kings 8:39].

Those, however, who are proven or who confess (to being) guilty of such a crime, your lordship should punish; for since it is homicide for a (child) conceived in the womb to be destroyed by abortion, how much more will the one who has killed a little baby of a least one day old be unable to excuse himself of being a murderer?

FORMOSUS: October 6, 891–April 4, 896
 BONIFACE VI: April 896
 STEPHEN VI (VII): May 896–August 897
 ROMANUS: August–November 897
 THEODORE II: December 897
 JOHN IX: January 898–January 900
 BENEDICT IV: January (February?) 900–July 903
 LEO V: July–September 903
 SERGIUS III: January 29, 904–April 14, 911
 ANASTASIUS III: April 911–June 913
 LANDO: July 913–February 914
 JOHN X: March 914–May 928
 LEO VI: May–December 928
 STEPHEN VII (VIII): December 928–February 931
 JOHN XI: February/March 931–December 935
 LEO VII: January 3, 936–July 13, 939
 STEPHEN VIII (IX): July 14, 939–October 942
 MARINUS II: October 30, 942–May 946
 AGAPITUS II: May 10, 946–December 955
 JOHN XII: December 16, 955–May 14, 964
 (Because of the deposition of John XII [December 4, 963] and Benedict V [June 23, 964] the list of popes is split. Since there is a controversy about which pope is legitimate at any one time, both are given.)
 LEO VIII December 6 (4?), 963–March 1, 965
 BENEDICT V: May 22, 964–July 4, 966
 JOHN XIII: October 1, 965–September 6, 972
 BENEDICT VI: January 19, 973–June 974
 BENEDICT VII: October 974–July 10, 983
 JOHN XIV: December 983–August 20, 984

JOHN XV: August 985–March 996

675: Encyclical Cum conventus esset to the Bishops and Abbots of France and Germany, February 3, 993

The Church’s most ancient process of canonization is treated here, by which, at a synod at the Lateran on January 31, 993, Bishop Ulrich of Augsburg/Lech (d. 973) was added to the number of the saints.

Ed.: BullTau 1:460a / BullCocq 1:288b / MaC 19:170E–171A / HaC 6/I, 727CD / PL 137:845D–846A. —Reg.: A. Brackmann, Germania Pontificia 2/I (Berlin, 1923), 30f., no. 6; JR 3848.

The Veneration of Saints

675 (2) ... Communi consilio decrevimus, memoriam illius, id est sancti Udalrici episcopi, affectu piissimo, devotione fidelissima venerandam: quoniam sic

(2) ... By common deliberation, we have decreed that his memory, namely, that of the holy Bishop Ulrich, should be venerated with most pious affection and faith-adoramus et colimus reliquias martyrum et confessorum, ut eum, cuius martyres et confessores sunt, adoremus; honoramus servos, ut honor redundet in Dominum, qui dixit: “Qui vos recipit, me recipit” [Mt 10:40]: ac proinde nos qui fiduciam nostrae iustitiae non habemus, illorum precibus et meritis apud clementissimum Deum iugiter adiuvemur, quia divina saluberrima praecepta, et sanctorum canonum ac venerabilium Patrum instabant efficaciter documenta omnium ecclesiarum pio considerationis intuitu, immo apostolici moderaminis annisu, utilitatum commoditatem atque firmitatis perficere integritatem, quatenus memoria Udalrici iam praefati venerabilis episcopi divino cultui dicata existat, et in laudibus Dei devotissime persolvendis semper valeat proficere.

ful devotion: for we so venerate and honor the relics of the martyrs and confessors in order that we may venerate him whose martyrs and confessors they are; we honor the servants so that honor may redound to the Lord, who said: “Whoever receives you, receives me” [Mt 10:40]; and, thus, we, who have not confidence in our own justice, may always, by their prayers and merits, receive support before the most merciful God; for the most salutary divine precepts and the teachings of the holy canons and the venerable fathers—taking into pious consideration the opinions of all the churches and through the support of apostolic guidance—zealously insisted that we arrive at appropriate benefits and complete firmness so that the memory of the already mentioned venerable bishop, Ulrich, might be dedicated to divine worship and be ever advantageous in glorifying God most devoutly.

GREGORY V: May 3, 996–February 18, 999

SYLVESTER II: April 2, 999–May 12, 1003

JOHN XVII: June–December 1003

JOHN XVIII: January 1004–July 1009

SERGIUS IV: July 31, 1009–May 12, 1012

BENEDICT VIII: May 18, 1012–April 9, 1024

JOHN XIX: April/May 1024–1032

BENEDICT IX: 1032–1044

(Deposed for the first time in 1044; after have regained his seat a second and third time, in 1045 and in 1047, he was deposed once again.)

SYLVESTER III: January 20–February 10, 1045

BENEDICT IX: April 10–May 1, 1045

GREGORY VI: May 5, 1045–December 20, 1046

CLEMENT II: December 25, 1046–October 9, 1047

BENEDICT IX: November 8, 1047–July 17, 1048

DAMASUS II: July 17–August 9, 1048

LEO IX: February 12, 1049–April 19, 1054

680–686: Letter Congratulamur vehementer to Peter, Patriarch of Antioch, April 13, 1053

When Peter of Antioch requested a profession of faith, Leo IX had offered his own. A similar collection of articles of faith is found in Statuta Ecclesiae Antiqua (*325).

Ed.: PL 143:771C–773A / C. Will, Acta et scripta quae de controversiis Ecclesiae Graecae et Latinae saeculi XI compositae exstant (Leipzig, 1861), 170f. / MaC 19:662B–663C / HaC 6/I, 953C–954D. —Reg.: JR 4297, with additions.

Profession of Faith

Firmiter ... credo sanctam Trinitatem, Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum, unum Deum omnipotentem esse, totamque in Trinitate deitatem coessentialem et consubstantialem, coaeternam et coomnipotentem, uniusque voluntatis, potestatis et maiestatis: creatorem omnium creaturarum, ex quo omnia, per quem omnia, in quo omnia [Rm 11:36], quae sunt in caelo et in terra, visibilia et invisibilia, Credo etiam singulas quasque in sancta Trinitate personas unum Deum verum, plenum et perfectum.

I firmly believe ... that the Holy Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, is one almighty God and that the entire divinity in the Holy Trinity is co-essential and consubstantial, co-eternal and equally omnipotent, of one will, power, and majesty: the Creator of all creatures, from whom, through whom, and in whom all things (are) [Rm 11:36], those in heaven and on earth, those visible and invisible. I also believe that the individual Persons in the Holy Trinity (are) one, true, complete, and perfect God. 680

681 Credo quoque ipsum Dei Patris Filium, Verbum Dei aeternaliter natum ante omnia tempora de Patre, consubstantialem, coomnipotentem et coequalem Patri per omnia in divinitate, temporaliter natum de Spiritu Sancto ex Maria semper virgine, cum anima rationali: duas habentem natiuitates, unam ex Patre aeternam, alteram ex matre temporalem: duas voluntates et operationes habentem: Deum verum et hominem verum: proprium in utraque natura atque perfectum: non commixtionem atque divisionem passum, non adoptivum, neque phantasticum: unicum et unum Deum, Filium Dei in duabus naturis, sed in unius personae singularitate: impassibilem et immortalem divinitate, sed in humanitate pro nobis et pro nostra salute passum vera carnis passione et sepultum, ac resurrexisse a mortuis die tertia vera carnis resurrectione: propter quam confirmandam cum discipulis, nulla indigentia cibi, sed sola voluntate et potestate, comedis: die quadragesimo post resurrectionem cum carne, qua surrexit, et anima ascendisse in caelum et sedere in dextera Patris, inde decimo die misisse Spiritum Sanctum, et inde, sicut ascendit, venturum iudicare vivos et mortuos, et redditurum unicuique secundum opera sua.

682 Credo etiam Spiritum Sanctum, plenum et perfectum verumque Deum, a Patre et Filio procedentem, coequalem et coessentialem et coomnipotentem et coaeternum per omnia Patri et Filio, per prophetas locutum.

683 Hanc sanctam et individuum Trinitatem non tres Deos, sed in tribus personis et in una natura sive essentia unum Deum omnipotentem, aeternum, invisibilem et incommutabilem ita credo et confiteor, ut Patrem ingenitum, Filium unigenitum, Spiritum Sanctum nec genitum nec ingenitum, sed a Patre et Filio procedentem, veraciter praedicem.

684 [Varia:] Credo sanctam, catholicam et apostolicam, unam esse veram Ecclesiam, in qua unus datur baptismus et vera omnium remissio peccatorum. Credo etiam veram resurrectionem eiusdem carnis, quam nunc gesto, et vitam aeternam.

685 Credo etiam Novi et Veteris Testamenti, legis et Prophetarum et Apostolorum unum esse auctorem, Deum et Dominum omnipotentem. Deum praedestinasse solummodo bona, praescivisse autem bona malaque. Gratiam Dei praevenire et subsequi hominem credo et profiteor, ita tamen, ut liberum arbitrium rationali creaturae non denegem. Animam non esse partem Dei, sed ex nihilo creatam, et absque baptisate originali peccato obnoxiam, credo et praedico.

I believe also that the Son of God the Father, the Word of God, was born eternally before all time from the Father, consubstantial, co-omnipotent, and co-equal to the Father in all things in divinity; born of the Holy Spirit from the ever-virgin Mary in time, with a rational soul, having two nativities, the one from the Father, eternal, the other from the Mother, in time; having two wills and operations, true God and true man, proper and complete in each of the natures, not having undergone commixture or division; not adopted or imaginary; the one and only God, the Son of God, in two natures, but in the singularity of one, unique person: impassible and immortal in his divinity, but in his humanity, for us and our salvation, he suffered a true passion in the flesh and was buried; and, on the third day, he rose again from the dead by a true resurrection of the flesh; to confirm this, he ate with his disciples, not out of a need for food, but only out of his will and power; on the fortieth day after the Resurrection, he ascended into heaven with the flesh in which he arose and his soul to sit at the right hand of the Father, from where, on the tenth day, he sent the Holy Spirit, and from where he will come, as he ascended, to judge the living and the dead, and he will render to each one according to his works.

I also believe the Holy Spirit, who has spoken through the prophets, is full, complete, and true God, proceeding from the Father and Son, in every way co-equal and co-essential to and equally omnipotent and eternal as the Father and the Son.

I believe and confess that this holy and indivisible Trinity is not three Gods, but in three Persons and in one nature or essence (is) one God, almighty, eternal, invisible, and unchangeable, as I proclaim in truth that the Father is not begotten, the Son is only-begotten, and the Holy Spirit is neither begotten nor unbegotten but proceeds from the Father and the Son.

[Variations:] I believe that the holy, catholic, and apostolic (Church) is the one, true Church, in which is given the one baptism and the true remission of all sins. I believe also in the true resurrection of the same flesh that I now bear and in life eternal.

I believe also that there is one author of the New and Old Testament, of the law both of the prophets and of the apostles, namely, the omnipotent God and Lord. (I believe) that God predestined only the good things, but that he foreknew the good and the evil. I believe and profess that the grace of God precedes and follows man, yet in such a manner that I do not deny free will to the rational creature. I also believe and declare that the soul is not a part of God but was created from nothing and without baptism is subject to original sin.

Porro anathematizo omnem haeresim extolentem se adversus sanctam Ecclesiam catholicam, pariterque eum, quicumque aliquas scripturas praeter eas, quas catholica Ecclesia recipit, in auctoritate habendas esse crediderit vel veneratus fuerit.

Quattuor Concilia omnimode recipio et velut quattuor evangelia veneror: quia per quattuor partes mundi universalis Ecclesia, in his tanquam in quadro lapide, fundata consistit [cf. *472].... Pari modo recipio et veneror reliqua tria Concilia.... Quidquid supradicta septem sancta et universalia Concilia senserunt et collaudaverunt, et sentio et collaudo, et quoscumque anathematizaverunt, anathematizo.

Furthermore, I anathematize every heresy that rises 686 against the holy Catholic Church and equally anyone who believes that it is necessary to regard as authoritative or who has venerated other scriptures beyond those that the Catholic Church accepts.

I completely accept the four councils, and I venerate them as I do the four Gospels; because the universal Church in the four parts of the world has been established upon these as upon a four-squared stone [cf. *472].... In the same manner I accept and venerate the other three councils.... Whatever the above-mentioned seven holy and universal councils have held and approved, I also hold and approve, and whomever they have anathematized, I anathematize.

687–688: Letter Ad splendidum nitentis to Peter Damian, 1054

Peter Damian had written a work dedicated to Leo IX entitled Liber Gomorrhianus (PL 145:159–90) in which he demanded very severe penalties for the “most unclean life” (vitam spurcissimam) of certain clerics. Leo IX, in approving this demand, has left us a very rare document of the ecclesiastical Magisterium of that period concerning sexual deviation.

Ed.: MaC 19:686A–C / PL 145:159D–160C (the letter precedes the work of Peter Damian). —Reg.: JR 4311.

On the Evil of Sexual Deviations

... Oportet, sicut desideras, Apostolicam Nostram interponamus auctoritatem, quatenus scrupulosam legentibus auferamus dubietatem, et constet omnibus certum, Nostro iudicio placuisse quaecumque continet ipse libellus [Gomorrhianus] diabolico igni velut aqua oppositus. Igitur ne caenosae libidinis impunita licentia pervagetur, necesse est Apostolicae severitatis congrua reprehensione refellatur, et tamen aliquod tentamentum in austeritate ponatur.

... It is necessary, as you desire, that We should 687 interpose Our apostolic authority in order to remove from readers any scrupulous doubt and so that it should be clear to all that what this book [the Liber Gomorrhianus], opposed to the diabolic fire like water, contains has pleased Our judgment. Therefore, lest the unrestrained license of filthy lust should spread abroad, it is necessary that it be repelled by a suitable reprimand of apostolic severity and that some attempt at more austere discipline should be made (with them).

Ecce omnes illi, qui quavis quattuor generum¹ quae dicta sunt foeditate polluuntur, prospecta aequitatis censura ab omnibus immaculatae Ecclesiae gradibus tam sacrorum canonum quam Nostro iudicio depelluntur. Sed Nos humanius agentes eos qui vel propriis manibus vel inter se egerunt semen, vel etiam inter femora profuderunt, et non longo usu nec cum pluribus, si voluptatem refrenaverint et digna paenitudine probrosa commissa luerint, admitti ad eosdem gradus, in quibus in scelere manentes, non permanentes, fuerant, divinae miserationi confisi, volumus atque etiam iubemus; ablata aliis spe recuperationis sui ordinis, qui vel per longa tempora secum sive cum aliis vel cum pluribus, brevi licet tempore, quolibet duorum foeditatis genere, quae descriperas, maculati vel, quod est horrendum dictu et auditu, in terga prolapsi sunt. Contra quod Nostrum

Those who are polluted by impurity of any of the 688 four kinds mentioned¹ are expelled from all the grades of the immaculate Church both by the appropriate censure envisaged by the sacred canons as well as by Our judgment. But We, proceeding with much clemency and trusting in the divine mercy, will and indeed command that those who have brought forth the seed either by their own hands or among themselves or who have even shed it between the legs, but not by long habit nor with many people, if they restrain their desire and wash away their shameful deeds by worthy repentance, should be admitted to the same grades that they would not have retained forever if they had remained in their pollution; but We withdraw any hope of recovering their order from those others who have been stained by either of the two sorts of impurity that you have described, whether during

*688 ¹ Peter Damian distinguishes “four different kinds” (chap. 1: PL 145:161C): “some offend against nature by themselves; some with the hands of others; some between the loins, and, lastly, others by the completion of the act” (alii siquidem secum, alii aliorum manibus, alii inter femora, alii denique consummato actu contra naturam delinquent).

Apostolicae sanctionis decretum si quis ausus fuerit vel iudicare vel latrare, ordinis sui se noverit periculo agere.

a long period alone or with others, or even for a short period with many people, or who, horrible to say or hear, have sinned in the back (of others). If anyone shall dare to judge or complain against this Our decree of apostolic sanction, let him know that he acts in peril of his order.

VICTOR II: April 16, 1055–July 28, 1057
STEPHEN IX (X): August 3, 1057–March 29, 1058

NICHOLAS II: December 6, 1058–July 27, 1061

690: Synod of ROME, 1059

Berengar of Tours had already been condemned in many synods: in 1050 at synods in Rome and Vercelli, in 1051 at Paris, in 1054 at Tours. The formula given below, signed at the synod of Rome in 1059, had been composed by Cardinal Humbert of Silva Candida. Berengar, however, soon fell away from this faith and thus had to be compelled again, in 1078 and 1079, to make a profession of faith before Gregory VII (cf. *700).

Ed.: MaC 19:900A–C / HaC 6/I, 1064CD / PL 150:410D–411A (= Lanfranc of Canterbury, Liber de corpore et sanguine Domini adversus Berengarium Turonensem 2) / Gratian, Decretum, p. III, dist. 2, c. 42 (Frdb 1:328f.).

Profession of Faith in the Eucharist Prescribed for Berengar

Ego Berengarius . . . cognoscens veram et apostolicam fidem, anathematizo omnem haeresim, praecipue eam, de qua hactenus infamatus sum: quae adstruere conatur, panem et vinum, quae in altari ponuntur, post consecrationem solummodo sacramentum, et non verum corpus et sanguinem Domini nostri Iesu Christi esse, nec posse sensualiter, nisi in solo sacramento, manibus sacerdotum tractari vel frangi vel fidelium dentibus atteri. Consentio autem sanctae Romanae Ecclesiae et Apostolicae Sedi, et ore et corde profiteor de sacramento dominicae mensae eam fidem me tenere, quam dominus et venerabilis papa Nicolaus et haec sancta Synodus auctoritate evangelica et apostolica tenendam tradidit mihi que firmavit: scilicet panem et vinum, quae in altari ponuntur, post consecrationem non solum sacramentum, sed etiam verum corpus et sanguinem Domini nostri Iesu Christi esse, et sensualiter, non solum sacramento, sed in veritate, manibus sacerdotum tractari et frangi et fidelium dentibus atteri, iurans per sanctam et homousion Trinitatem et per haec sacrosancta Christi evangelia. Eos vero, qui contra hanc fidem venerint, cum dogmatibus et sectatoribus suis, aeterno anathemate dignos esse pronuntio.

I, Berengar, . . . knowing the true and apostolic faith, anathematize all heresy, especially that with which I have hitherto been blamed: which dares to affirm that the bread and wine that are placed on the altar, after the consecration, are only a sacrament and not the true Body and Blood of our Lord Jesus Christ and that they cannot sensibly, except in sacrament alone, be touched or broken by the hands of priests or ground by the teeth of the faithful. I am in accord with the holy Roman Church and with the Apostolic See and with mouth and heart profess concerning the sacrament of the Lord's table that I hold that faith which the venerable lord Pope Nicholas and this holy synod, by evangelical and apostolic authority, have handed down to be held and have confirmed to me: namely, that the bread and wine that are placed on the altar, after the consecration, are not only a sacrament, but also the true Body and Blood of our Lord Jesus Christ and that they are sensibly, not only in sacrament but in truth, touched and broken by the hands of priests and ground by the teeth of the faithful, swearing by the holy and consubstantial Trinity and by these most holy Gospels of Christ. And those who may go against this faith, together with their doctrines and followers, I declare to be worthy of eternal anathema.

691–694: LATERAN Synod, April 1060

In forming a judgment on simony (opposed already at the Council of Chalcedon, chap. 2 [*304], and in the Canones Apostolorum 30), from the tenth century on, a new and more serious consideration emerged: whether or not the ordinations of simoniacs were valid. Among those who denied the validity, the leader, without doubt, was Cardinal Humbert of Silva Candida, who exerted a great influence on Leo IX. On the other side, defending the validity, the most prominent was Peter Damian, who relied chiefly on the reasoning earlier used by Augustine in reference to the baptism of heretics. The documents of the popes on this problem are not consistent. Accordingly, the question to decide is whether the imposition of the hands in the reacceptance of simoniacs is only a rite of reconciliation (as presumably in *694) or a real ordination.

Ed. [*691–694]: L. Weiland: MGH Constitutiones et Acta publica imperatorum et regum (= Leges IV) I (Hannover, 1893), 550f. —[*691–693, repeated at the Lateran Synod of 1063]: MaC 19:899B–D, 1024D–1025A. —[*694]: MaC 19:906BC / HaC

6/I, 1063D–1064A, 1138E–1139B; 1068BC. —[*691 and 693; 694]: Gratian, Decretum, p. II, cs. 1, q. 1, c. 109f.; c. 107 (Frdb 1:401, 400).

Ordinations by Simoniacs

Dominus papa Nicolaus synodo in basilica Constantiniana praesidens dixit: (§ 1) Erga simoniacos nullam misericordiam in dignitate servanda habendam esse decernimus; sed iuxta canonum sanctiones et decreta sanctorum Patrum eos omnino damnamus, ac deponendos esse apostolica auctoritate sancimus.

(§ 2) De iis autem, qui non per pecuniam, sed gratis sunt a simoniaco ordinati, quia quaestio a longo tempore est diutius ventilata, omnem nodum dubietatis absolvimus: ita ut super hoc capitulo neminem deinceps ambigere permittamus. . . . Eos, qui usque modo gratis sunt a simoniaco consecrati, . . . in acceptis ordinibus manere permittimus. . . .

Ita tamen auctoritate sanctorum Apostolorum Petri et Pauli omnimodis interdiciamus, ne aliquando aliquis successorum Nostrorum ex hac Nostra permissione regulam sibi vel alicui assumat vel praefigat: quia non hoc auctoritas antiquorum Patrum iubendo aut concedendo promulgavit, sed temporis nimia necessitas permittendum a Nobis extorsit.

(§ 3) De cetero autem si quis hinc in posterum ab eo, quem simoniaco esse non dubitat, se consecrari permiserit, et consecrator et consecratus non disparem damnationis sententiam subeat, sed uterque depositus paenitentiam agat et privatus a propria dignitate persistat.

(§ 5) Nicolaus episcopus episcopis omnibus: Statuimus decretum de simoniaca tripartita haeresi, id est de simoniaco simoniace ordinatoribus vel ordinatis, et de simoniaco simoniace a non simoniaco, et simoniaco non simoniace a simoniaco:

Simoniaco simoniace ordinati vel ordinatorum secundum ecclesiasticos canones a proprio gradu decedant. Simoniaco quoque simoniace a non simoniaco ordinati similiter ab officio male accepto removeantur. Simoniacos autem non simoniace a simoniaco ordinatorum misericorditer per manus impositionem pro temporis necessitate concedimus in officio permanere.

Lord Pope Nicholas, presiding at the synod in the Basilica of Constantine, said: (§ 1) We judge that there should be no mercy shown toward the simoniacs with regard to the preservation of their rank; on the contrary, according to the sanctions of the canons and decrees of the holy Fathers, we condemn them completely, and, by apostolic authority, we decree that they are to be deposed.

(§ 2) Concerning those, however, who have been ordained by the simoniacs, not through money, but freely—for (this) question has long been debated—we are removing every knot of doubt, so that based on this chapter from henceforth let us permit no one to be uncertain. . . . We allow to remain in the orders received . . . those who have been freely ordained by the simoniacs. . . .

Thus, in the same way, by the authority of the holy apostles Peter and Paul, We completely forbid any of Our successors to deduce or establish a rule for himself or others on the basis of this permission of Ours: for it is not the authority of the ancient Fathers that has promulgated this by command or concession; rather, the extreme necessity of the times has forced Us to permit it.

(§ 3) Concerning the rest, however, if anyone from now on allows himself to be ordained by one who without any doubt is a simoniac, both the one ordained and the one ordaining are to be placed under the same judgment of condemnation, and both are to be deposed, do penance, and remain deprived of their rank (of ordination).

(§ 5) Bishop Nicholas to all the bishops: We have promulgated a decree on the threefold simoniac heresy, that is, on the simoniacs who, by means of simony, have ordained or been ordained; on the simoniacs (who have been ordained) by simony but not by simoniacs; and on the simoniacs (who have been ordained) without simony by simoniacs:

The simoniacs ordained or ordaining by simony must fall from their state according to the ecclesiastical canons. And the simoniacs ordained in a simoniac manner but not by simoniacs must likewise be removed from the office badly received. We mercifully concede, however, because of the necessity of the times, that simoniacs ordained without simony by simoniacs may remain in office through the imposition of hands.

ALEXANDER II: October 1, 1061–April 21, 1073

695: Letter Super causas to Bishop Rainaldo of Como, 1063

Ed.: MaC 19:983BC / PL 146:1406C–1407A (= letter 122); 161:695B (= Ivo of Chartres, Decretum, p. X, c. 15). —Reg.: JR 4505; P. Ewald, in NArch 5 (1880): 337 (= Alexander, letter 49).

Rejection of Trials by Ordeal

Super causas Guillandi [Gissandi] presbyteri tui de morte episcopi sui, praedecessoris tui, infamati, in medium consuluimus. . . . Si certi accusatores defuerint, tunc dictante iustitia, sine omni controversia, presbyter quaecumque ob hoc iniuste amisit, ac sacerdotium accipiat et integra beneficia, purgationem tamen antea, duobus sibi sacerdotibus iunctis, ubi accusator cessaverit, eumdem ex se praebere tuo committimus arbitrio.

Vulgarem denique ac nulla canonica sanctione fultam legem, ferventis scilicet sive frigidae aquae ignitique ferri contactum aut cuiuslibet popularis inventionis (quia fabricante haec sunt omnino ficta invidia) nec ipsum exhibere nec aliquo te modo volumus postulare, immo apostolica auctoritate prohibemus firmissime.

In the matter of your priest Guilandus [Gisandus], accused of killing his bishop, your predecessor, We have taken common counsel. . . . If credible accusers are lacking, then justice dictates without question that the priest should receive whatever he has unjustly lost, both his priesthood and all his benefices; but We leave to your judgment whether, in the absence of an accuser, the said priest should first of his own volition exonerate himself before two priests associated with him.

Finally, the popular law of contact with boiling or freezing water and hot iron, supported by no canonical sanction, and any other law of popular invention (since they have all been generated through specious malevolence) are things We do not wish you to employ or in any way to require; indeed, We most firmly prohibit it by apostolic authority.

698: Letter Licet ex to Prince Landolfo of Benevento, 1065

Ed.: S. Löwenfeld, Epistolae Pontificum Romanorum ineditae (Leipzig, 1885), 52, no. 105 (= Collectio Britannica, letter 39). —Reg.: JR 4581; P. Ewald, in NArch 5 (1880): 336 (= Alexander, letter 39).

Tolerance of the Religious Persuasions of Others

Licet ex devotionis studio non dubitamus procedere, quod nobilitas tua Iudaeos ad christianitatis cultum disponit adducere, tamen quia id inordinato videris studio agere, necessarium duximus, admonendo tibi litteras nostras dirigere. Dominus enim noster Iesus Christus nullum legitur ad sui servitium violenter coegisse, sed humili exhortatione, reservata unicuique proprii arbitrii libertate, quoscumque ad vitam praedestinavit aeternam non iudicando, sed proprium sanguinem fundendo ab errore revocasse. . . .

Item beatus Gregorius, ne eadem gens ad fidem violentia trahatur, in quadam sua epistola interdicat.¹

Although We have no doubt it stems from the zeal of devotion that Your Nobility arranges to lead Jews to the worship of Christendom, We have nonetheless thought it necessary to send you Our letter by way of admonishment, since you seem to do it with a zeal that is inordinate. For we do not read that our Lord Jesus Christ violently forced anyone into his service, but that by humble exhortation, leaving to each person his own freedom of choice, he recalled from error whomsoever he had predestined to eternal life, doing so not by judging them, but by shedding his own blood. . . .

Likewise, the blessed Gregory forbids, in one of his letters, that the said people should be drawn to the faith by violence.¹

GREGORY VII: April 22, 1073–May 25, 1085700: Synod of ROME: Profession of Faith of Berengar of Tours, February 11, 1079

See *690.

—Ed.: E. Caspar, Das Register Gregors VII, 2 (Berlin, 1923), 426f. (= Gregory, Register VI, 17a) / MaC 20:524DE / HaC 6/I, 1585B / PL 148:811CD (= Sixth Synod of Rome); 150:411BC (= Lanfranc of Canterbury, Liber de corpore et sanguine Domini 2). —Reg.: JR, after 5102.

*698 ¹ Various letters of Gregory I can be cited regarding this subject; cf. especially *480; moreover, the letters Scribendi to Bishops Virgilius of Arles and Theodore of Marseille of June 3, 591, and Supplicaverunt to Bishops Bacaudas and Agnellus, September or October 591 (MGH Epistulae I, 71f., 105 / PL 77:509–11, 457). Not all popes had the same outlook; among the most lamentable documents, one could mention the constitution of Paul IV, Cum nimis absurdum of July 14, 1555, which, among other provisions, established the Jewish “ghetto” of Rome (BullTau 6:498f.). Nor can the perspective of Gregory I be easily reconciled with the severe manner by which Jews at times were forced to hear theologians preach to them (cf. Gregory XIII, Sancta Mater, September 1, 1584: BullTau 8:487f.).

The Eucharistic Presence of Christ

Ego Berengarius corde credo et ore confiteor, panem et vinum, quae ponuntur in altari, per mysterium sacrae orationis et verba nostri Redemptoris substantialiter converti in veram et propriam ac vivificatricem carnem et sanguinem Iesu Christi Domini nostri et post consecrationem esse verum Christi corpus, quod natum est de Virgine et quod pro salute mundi oblatum in cruce pendit, et quod sedet ad dexteram Patris, et verum sanguinem Christi, qui de latere eius effusus est, non tantum per signum et virtutem sacramenti, sed in proprietate naturae et veritate substantiae. Sicut in hoc Brevi continetur et ego legi et vos intelligitis, sic credo, nec contra hanc fidem ulterius docebo. Sic me Deus adiuvet et haec sancta Dei Evangelia.

I, Berengar, in my heart believe and with my lips 700 confess that through the mystery of the sacred prayer and the words of our Redeemer the bread and wine that are placed on the altar are substantially changed into the true and proper and living flesh and blood of Jesus Christ, our Lord, and that after consecration it is the true body of Christ that was born of the Virgin and that, offered for the salvation of the world, was suspended on the Cross and that sits at the right hand of the Father, and the true blood of Christ, which was poured out from his side not only through the sign and power of the sacrament, but in its proper nature and in the truth of its substance. I believe what this exposition contains, as I have read and you understand, and I will no longer teach anything against this faith. So help me God and these holy Gospels of God.

VICTOR III: May 24, 1086–September 16, 1087

URBAN II: March 12, 1088–July 29, 1099

701: Letter Debent subditi to Bishop Peter of Pistoia and Abbot Rusticus of Vallombrosa, 1088

This letter is an important document on the question of “reordination”. Wezelo (or Guezelo, and otherwise), Archbishop of Mainz, who had himself been ordained “by heretics”, could not, according to the judgment of Urban II, validly perform any ordinations and, therefore, Dai[m]bert, who had been ordained a deacon by him, was considered to lack valid orders. The pope himself eventually bestowed the diaconate on him.

Ed.: S. Löwenfeld, Epistolae Pontificum Romanorum ineditae (Leipzig, 1885), 61f. (= Collectio Britannica, Urban, letter 30) / PL 161:1148CD (= Ivo of Chartres, Panormia III, 81) / P. Jaffé, Monumenta Moguntina (cf. *580^o), 373, no. 30 / Gratian, Decretum, p. 1, cs. 1, q. 7, c. 24 (Frdb 1:436f.). —Reg.: JR 5383; P. Ewald, in NArch 5 (1880): 360f., no. 30; BoeW 1:223, no. 22 (cf. nos. 6 and 7).

The Nullity of an Ordination Received from a Simoniac

... Daibertum a Guezelone licet simoniaco non simoniace eiusdem confessione reperimus in diaconum ordinatum, et beati Innocentii papae sententia constat declaratum, quod Guezelon haereticus, quem constat ab haereticis ordinatum, quia nihil habuit, dare nihil potuit ei, cui manus imposuit. Nos igitur tanti Pontificis auctoritate firmati, Damasi papae testimonio roborati, qui ait: “Reiterari oportere, quod male actum est”, Daibertum, ab haereticis corpore et spiritu digressum atque utilitati Ecclesiae pro viribus insudantem, ex integro, Ecclesiae necessitate ingruente, diaconum constituimus. Quod non reiterationem existimari censemus, sed tantum integram diaconii dationem, quoniam quidem, ut praediximus, qui nihil habuit, nihil dare potuit.

... By his own confession We find that Daimbert was 701 ordained deacon, not simoniacally, though by Guezelo, a simoniac; and by the ruling of blessed Pope Innocent it was declared that Guezelo, being a heretic, known to have been ordained by heretics, could give nothing to the one on whom he laid hands because he himself had nothing. We, therefore, confirmed by the authority of so great a pontiff and strengthened by the witness of Pope Damasus, who said: “What is wrongly done ought to be repeated”, have made Daimbert a deacon again, the needs of the Church requiring it, and he having abandoned the heretics in body and spirit and now working to the best of his ability for the good of the Church. We do not deem this to be a reiteration, but simply a full giving of the diaconate, because, as We have said, he who has nothing can give nothing.

702: Letter Gaudemus filii to Lanzo, Rudolf, and Others, February 1, 1091

Poppo, Archdeacon of Trier, designated successor of Hermann, Bishop of Metz, had been ordained deacon by Egilbert, the schismatic archbishop of Trier, who was a supporter of the antipope Clement III and of Emperor Henry IV.

Ed.: MaC 20:706A / PL 151:327CD (= letter 47). —Reg.: JR 5442.

The Nullity of an Ordination Received from a Simoniac

- 702 Illud sane omni modo requirendum est, utrum [Poppo] per manus Trevirensis illius dicti archiepiscopi simoniace fuerit in diaconem ordinatus. Quidquid enim ab eo extraordinarie indigneque suscepit, Nos Sancti Spiritus iudicio irritum esse censemus, ut eosdem ordines ab aliquo sortiatur episcopo catholico praesenti auctoritate praecipimus. Talis enim ordinator, cum nihil habuerit, dare nihil potuit.
- What is to be thoroughly examined in every way is whether [Poppo] was simoniacally ordained deacon by the hands of that said archbishop of Trier. For whatever was received from him extraordinarily or unworthily, We by the judgment of the Holy Spirit deem to be invalid, and We order by the authority present (in us) that he receive the same orders from some Catholic bishop. For such an ordainer, since he had nothing, could give nothing.

703: Synod of BENEVENTO, begun March 18, 1091

Ed.: MaC 20:738E / cf. Gratian, Decretum, p. I., dist. 60, c. 4 (Frdb 1:227). —Reg.: JR, after 5444.

The Sacramental Character of the Diaconate

- 703 Can. 1. Nullus deinceps in episcopum eligatur, nisi qui in sacris ordinibus religiose inventus est. Sacros autem ordines dicimus diaconatum ac presbyteratum. Hos siquidem solos primitiva legitur Ecclesia habuisse; super his solum praeceptum habemus Apostoli.
- Can. 1. Henceforth, let no one be chosen bishop except one found living piously in holy orders. Moreover, we call holy orders the diaconate and the priesthood, since we read that the primitive Church had only these; for these alone do we have a precept of the apostle.

PASCHAL II: August 14, 1099–January 21, 1118704: LATERAN Synod, Lent 1102

Bishops from Italy and Germany were present at this synod, which was concerned with the Truce of God and Emperor Henry IV, the adversary of the pope in the investiture controversy. It prescribed the following formula for all the Metropolitans of the Western Churches.

Ed.: MaC 20:1147CD / HaC 6/II, 1863A.

Obedience toward the Church

- 704 Anathematizo omnem haeresim et praecipue eam, quae statum praesentis Ecclesiae perturbat, quae docet et adstruit: anathema contemnendum et Ecclesiae ligamenta spernenda esse. Promitto autem oboedientiam Apostolicae Sedis Pontifici Domino Paschali eiusque successoribus sub testimonio Christi et Ecclesiae, affirmans quod affirmat, damnans quod damnat sancta et universalis Ecclesia.
- I anathematize every heresy and especially the one that disturbs the state of the present Church and that teaches and affirms that one should disregard an anathema and spurn the regulations of the Church. Moreover, I promise obedience to Paschal, the supreme pontiff of the Apostolic See, and to his successors under the testimony of Christ and the Church, affirming what the holy and universal Church affirms and condemning what she condemns.

705: Synod of GUASTALLA, October 22, 1106

This synod was held by the pope himself at Guastalla (between Verona and Mantua).

Ed.: L. Weiland: MGH Constitutiones et Acta publica imperatorum et regum (= Leges IV) 1 (Hannover, 1893), 565 / MaC 20:1209E–1210D / HaC 6/II, 1883A.

Heretical and Simoniacal Ordinations

- 705 (4) Per multos iam annos regni Teutonici latitudo ab Apostolicae Sedis unitate divisa est. In quo nimirum
- (4) For many years now, the broad expanse of the Teutonic kingdom has been separated from the unity of schismate tantum periculum factum est, ut, quod eum dolore dicimus, vix pauci sacerdotes aut clerici catholici in tanta terrarum latitudine reperiantur. Tot igitur filiis in hac strage iacentibus, christianae pacis necessitas exigit, ut super hos materna Ecclesiae viscera aperiantur.

Patrum itaque nostrorum exemplis et script[ur]is instructi, qui diversis temporibus Novatianos, Donatistas et alios haereticos in suis ordinibus susceperunt: praefati regni episcopos in schismate ordinatos, nisi aut invasores aut simoniaci aut criminosi comprobentur, in officio episcopali suscipimus. Id ipsum de clericis cuiuscumque ordinis constituimus, quos vita scientiaeque commendat.

the Apostolic See. Indeed, the danger in this schism has become so great that (and we say this with sadness) only a few priests or Catholic clergy are found in such a wide extent of lands. Therefore, because so many sons have been thrust into this havoc, the necessity of Christian peace demands that the maternal womb of the Church be open to them.

Instructed, therefore, by the examples and writings of our Fathers, who in various times received in their orders the Novatianists, the Donatists, and other heretics, we receive in the episcopal office the bishops of the above-mentioned kingdom who were ordained in schism, unless they are proven to be usurpers, simoniacs, or criminals. We decree the same thing for the clerics of any order who are recommended by their life and knowledge.

706–708: LATERAN Synod, March 7, 1110

Canon 10 of this synod contains chapters 1, 2, and 4 of the synod of Piacenza, held March 1–7, 1095, under the presidency of Urban II. Canon 15 corresponds to chapter 13 of the synod of 1095.

Ed. [all as the Lateran Synod]: J. von Pflugk-Hartung, Acta Pontificum Romanorum inedita 2 (Stuttgart, 1884), 197f. (no. 238). —[only *706]: Weiland, MGH Constitutiones et Acta publica imperatorum et regum, 569_{3f.} (= can. 4 of the Lateran Synod) / MaC 21:9A. —[*707f. as the Synod of Piacenza]: Weiland, MGH Constitutiones et Acta publica imperatorum et regum, 561_{13–23}, 563_{8f.} / MaC 20:805A–C, 806D.

Plundering of Shipwrecks and Simony

Can. 9 (al. 4). Quicumque res naufragorum diripiunt, ut raptores et fratrum necatores ab Ecclesiae liminibus excludantur.

Can. 9 (others, 4). Whosoever plunders the goods of the shipwrecked is to be excluded from the confines of the Church as robbers and murderers of their brethren. 706

Can. 10 (1). Quae de simoniis statuta sunt, Nos quoque Sancti Spiritus iudicio ex apostolica auctoritate firmamus. (2) Quidquid igitur vel in sacris ordinibus vel in ecclesiasticis rebus data vel promissa pecunia, acquisitum est, Nos irritum esse et nullas unquam vires obtinere censemus. (4) Qui vero scienter se a simoniis consecrari, immo exsecrari passi sunt, eorum consecrationem omnino irritam decernimus.

Can. 10 (Synod of Piacenza 1). What has been laid down concerning simoniacs, We also confirm by the judgment of the Holy Spirit and the apostolic authority. (2) Whatever, therefore, either in sacred orders or in ecclesiastical affairs, has been acquired either by the giving or by the promising of money, We deem to be invalid and never to have any force. (4) We declare the consecration of those who have knowingly allowed themselves to be consecrated, or rather accursed, by simoniacs to be altogether invalid. 707

Can. 15 (13). Illud quoque praecipimus, quod pro chrismate, baptismo et sepultura nihil unquam exigatur.

Can. 15 (Synod of Piacenza 13). We also decree that nothing is ever to be demanded for confirmation, baptism, and burial. 708

GELASIUS II: January 24, 1118–January 28, 1119

CALLISTUS II: February 2, 1119–December 13, 1124

First LATERAN Council (Ninth Ecumenical): March 18–27 (April 6?), 1123

Among other things, the council enacted statutes against lay investiture and for a reformation of the clergy. Its ecumenical character has been frequently questioned, and its Acta are missing. The statutes, transmitted only in collections of canons, are especially concerned with lay investiture. In this regard, canon 4 (also listed as 8–9; *712) upholds the liberty of the Church.

Ed.: L. Weiland, MGH Constitutiones et Acta publica imperatorum et regum, 575 / MaC 21:282B–E / HaC 6/II, 1111C–E / COeD, 3rd ed., 190f.

710-712: Canons, March 27, 1123*Simony, Celibacy, Investiture*

- 710 Can. 1. “Sanctorum Patrum exempla sequentes” et officii nostri debita innovantes, “ordinari quemquam per pecuniam in Ecclesia Dei vel promoveri, auctoritate Sedis Apostolicae modis omnibus prohibemus. Si quis vero in Ecclesia ordinationem vel promotionem taliter acquisierit, acquisita prorsus careat dignitate.”¹
- Can. 1. “Following the examples of the holy Fathers” and renewing a duty of our office, “by the authority of the Apostolic See, we entirely forbid anyone to be ordained or promoted in the Church of God for money. If indeed anyone in the Church has obtained ordination or promotion in this way, let him be totally deprived of the dignity obtained.”¹
- 711 Can. 3 (al. 7). Presbyteris, diaconibus vel subdiaconibus concubinarum et uxoribus contubernia penitus interdicimus et aliarum mulierum cohabitationem, praeter quas Synodus Nicaena [can. 3]¹ propter solas necessitudinum causas habitare permisit, videlicet matrem, sororem, amitam vel materam aut alias huiusmodi, de quibus nulla valeat iuste suspicio oriri.²
- Can. 3 (others, 7). We absolutely forbid priests, deacons, or subdeacons to live with concubines and wives or to cohabit with other women, except those whom the Council of Nicaea [can. 3]¹ permitted to dwell with them solely on account of necessity, namely, a mother, sister, paternal or maternal aunt, or other such persons, about whom no suspicion could justly arise.²
- 712 Can. 4 (al. 8). Praeterea iuxta beatissimi Stephani papae sanctionem¹ statuimus, ut laici, quamvis religiosi sint, nullam tamen de ecclesiasticis rebus aliquid disponendi habeant facultatem; sed secundum Apostolorum Canones [can. 38, al. 39]² omnium negotiorum ecclesiasticorum curam episcopos habeat et ea velut Deo contemplante dispenset. (Al. can. 9) Si quis ergo principum aut laicorum aliorum dispensationem vel donationem rerum sive possessionum ecclesiasticarum sibi vindicaverit, ut sacrilegus iudicetur.
- Can. 4 (others, 8). We further resolve, in accordance with the statute of the most blessed Pope Stephen,¹ that lay persons, however religious they may be, have no power to dispose of any ecclesiastical business; but following the Apostolic Canons [can. 38; in others, 39],² let the bishop have the care of all ecclesiastical matters, and let him manage them as in the sight of God (in others, can. 9). Therefore, if any prince or other lay person should arrogate to himself the disposition or donation of ecclesiastical things or possessions, let him be regarded as sacrilegious.

HONORIUS II: December 15, 1124–February 13, 1130

INNOCENT II: February 14, 1130–September 24, 1143

Second LATERAN Council (Tenth Ecumenical), begun April 4, 1139

This council ended the schism of Anacletus II and condemned the errors of Petrobrusianism (followers of the wandering preacher Peter of Bruys) and Arnold of Brescia. Its ecumenical character is disputed.

Ed.: MaC 21:526C–532C / HaC 6/II, 1208B–1212C / COeD, 3rd ed., 197, 200, 202. —[only *717]: Gratian, Decretum, p. II, cs. 33, dist. 5, c. 8 (Frdb 1:1242).

715-718: Canons*Simony and Usury*

- 715 Can. 2. Si quis praebendam, vel prioratum, seu decanatum, aut honorem, vel promotionem aliquam ecclesiasticam, seu quodlibet sacramentum ecclesiasticum, utpote chrisma vel oleum sanctum,
- Can. 2. If anyone has acquired, through payment, a prebend, priory, deanery, or any ecclesiastical honor or preferment, or a holy thing of the Church of any kind, such as chrism or holy oil, or the consecrations of altars

*710 ¹ Synod of Toulouse held in July 1119 under the presidency of Callistus II, can. 1 (MaC 21:226CD).

*711 ¹ Can. 3 of Nicaea (Turner 1/II [1904], 116f.; cf. Synod of Elvira, can. 27 [*118]).

² This provision is also directed against the errors of the Nicolaitans, who maintained on principle that it was impossible to observe celibacy and that it was harmful to morals.

*712 ¹ Pseudo-Isidore, Second Letter of Stephen, chap. 12 (P. Hinschius, Decretales Pseudo-Isidorianae [Leipzig, 1863], 186).

² Canones Apostolorum 38 (39) (Turner 1/II [1899], 26; Bruns 1:6).

consecrationes altarium vel ecclesiarum, interveniente execrabili ardore avaritiae per pecuniam acquisivit: honore male acquisito careat, et emptor atque venditor et interventor nota infamiae percillantur. Et nec pro pastu, nec sub obtentu alicuius consuetudinis ante vel post a quoquam aliquid exigatur, vel ipse dare praesumat: quoniam simoniacum est; sed libere et absque immutatione aliqua, collata sibi dignitate atque beneficio perfruatur.¹

Can. 13. Porro detestabilem et probrosam, divinis et humanis legibus per Scripturam in Veteri et in Novo Testamento abdicatam, illam, inquam, insatiabilem foeneratorum rapacitatem damnamus, et ab omni ecclesiastica consolatione sequestramus, praecipientes, ut nullus archiepiscopus, nullus episcopus vel cuiuslibet ordinis abbas, seu quivis in ordine et clero, nisi cum summa cautela usurarios recipere praesumat, sed in tota vita infames habeantur et, nisi resipuerint, christiana sepultura priventur.¹

or churches, where the execrable passion of avarice has been the motive, let him be deprived of the honor that he wrongly acquired; and let the buyer and seller and intermediary be stigmatized with the mark of infamy. And let nothing be demanded for sustenance or under the pretext of any custom from anyone before or afterward, nor should the person himself presume to give anything, since this is simony; but let him enjoy freely and without any diminution the dignity and benefice that has been conferred on him.¹

Can. 13. Furthermore, we condemn that practice 716 accounted despicable and blameworthy by divine and human laws, denounced by Scripture in the Old and New Testaments, namely, the ferocious greed of moneylenders; and we sever them from every comfort of the Church, forbidding any archbishop or bishop, or an abbot of any order whatever or anyone in clerical orders, to dare to receive usurers, unless they do so with extreme caution; but let them be held infamous throughout their whole lives and, unless they repent, be deprived of a Christian burial.¹

False Confession and the Existence of the Sacraments

Can. 22. “Sane quia inter cetera unum est, quod sanctam maxime perturbat Ecclesiam, falsa videlicet paenitentia, confratres nostros et presbyteros admonemus, ne falsis paenitentiis laicorum animas decipi et in infernum pertrahi patiantur. Falsam autem paenitentiam esse constat, cum spretis pluribus, de uno solo paenitentia agitur: aut cum sic agitur de uno, ut non discedatur ab alio. Unde scriptum est: ‘Qui totam legem observaverit, offendat autem in uno, factus est omnium reus’ [Jac 2:10]: scilicet quantum ad vitam aeternam. Sicut enim, si peccatis esset omnibus involutus, ita, si in uno tantum maneat, aeternae vitae ianuam non intrabit.

Falsa etiam fit paenitentia, cum paenitens ab officio vel curiali vel negotiali non recedit, quod sine peccato agi nulla ratione praevallet; aut si odium in corde gestetur, aut si offenso cuilibet non satisfiat, aut si offendenti offensus non indulgeat, aut si arma quis contra iustitiam gerat.”¹

Can. 22. “Because there is one thing that conspicuously 717 causes great disturbance to holy Church, namely, false penance, we warn our brothers in the episcopate and priests not to allow the souls of the laity to be deceived or dragged off to hell by false penances. It is agreed that a penance is false when many sins are disregarded and a penance is performed for one only or when it is done for one sin in such a way that the penitent does not renounce another. Thus it is written: ‘Whoever keeps the whole law but fails in one point has become guilty of all of it’ [Jas 2:10]: this evidently pertains to eternal life. Therefore, just as a person who is entangled in all sins will not enter the gate of eternal life, so also if a person remains in one sin.

“False penance also occurs when the penitent does not resign a position at a court or in business that cannot be carried on without sin, or if hate is harbored in his heart, or if the person does not make amends to whomever he offended, or if an injured party does not pardon the offender, or if anyone unjustly carries arms.”¹

*715 ¹ The intention thereby was to prevent anyone, in order to escape the danger of simony, from being able to demand a commission instead of an actual sale.

*716 ¹ This sanction seems to have been interpreted by many as a prohibition applying only to usurers, so that the one who receives money against interest could be exempt. This, however, was expressly rejected by Alexander III (Gregory IX, Decretales, I, V, tit. 19, c. 4; Frdb 2:812f.), even when done in order to free the faithful held captive by the Saracens. The same pope (c. 5) rejects the restriction according to which one need only restore interests received after the decree of the Lateran Council, and finally he decides (c. 9) that even heretics and foreigners are obligated to restitution. Cf. also, in the same title 19, the decrees of Innocent III, who insists on the observance of these canons.

*717 ¹ From the synod held at Amalfi under Urban II in 1089, can. 16 (MaC 20:724CD). What “false penance” is, is described also in can. 5 of the Fifth Synod of Rome, held under Gregory VII (MaC 20:510AB / Gratian, Decretum, p. II, cs. 33, dist. 5, c. 6: Frdb 1:1241).

718 Can. 23. “Eos autem, qui religiositatis speciem simulantes, Domini corporis et sanguinis sacramentum, baptisma puerorum, sacerdotium et ceteros ecclesiasticos ordines et legitimarum damnant foedera nuptiarum, tanquam haereticos ab Ecclesia Dei pellimus et damnamus et per potestates exteras coerceri praecipimus. Defensores quoque ipsorum eiusdem damnationis vinculo innodamus.”¹

Can. 23. “Those who, simulating a kind of religiosity, condemn the sacrament of the Lord’s Body and Blood, the baptism of children, the priesthood and other ecclesiastical orders, and legitimate marriages, we expel from the Church of God and condemn as heretics and prescribe that they be constrained by the secular powers. We also bind up their defenders in the fetter of the same condemnation.”¹

721–739: Synod of SENS, begun June 2, 1140 (1141?)

Peter Abelard (or Baiolard and variants) had already been censured by the Synod of Soissons in 1121 for a variety of errors, and his treatise De unitate et trinitate divina was condemned. The Synod of Sens, which took place either June 2–3, 1140, or May 26, 1141, demanded that he retract a series of statements taken from his writings by Bernard of Clairvaux without granting to him an opportunity to explain them. As a consequence, Abelard appealed to the pope and wrote an Apologia, preserved only in fragments (Codex Latinus Monacensis 28363; edited by P. Ruf and M. Grabmann, cited below, 10–18), in which the nineteen propositions condemned by the synod are explained. The list of Abelard’s errors sent to Rome by the synod is preserved in an older version [cf. the text that follows] as well as in a more recent one. The numbering in the two versions is slightly different.

Also preserved are the fourteen Capitula haeresum Petri Abaelardi (E.M. Buytaert, CpChL.CM 12 [1969]: 473–80 / PL 182:1049–54): these, though, are not an abbreviated listing of the propositions condemned by the synod; rather, they are those of a private collection (cf. E.M. Buytaert, CpChL.CM 12 [1969]: 458–67; J. Rivière, cited below). The Capitula are only in partial agreement with the propositions of the official text: capitula 3, 4, 5, 7, 8, 10, 11, and 14 correspond to propositions 6, 3, 4, 7, 8, 13, 9–10, and 14; in certain respects, capitula and propositions 1, 2, and 12 correspond; cap. 13 indirectly refers to propositions 16 and 19; the remaining capitula (6 and 9) have nothing to do with the propositions of the synod. Worth noting is cap. 9: “That the body of the Lord did not fall into [or upon] the earth” (Quod corpus Domini non cadit in terram).

In reply to the nineteen propositions and the letter (no. 190), or Tractatus contra quaedam capitula errorum Abaelardi ad Innocentium II of Bernard of Clairvaux (Sancti Bernardi Opera 8, ed. by J. Leclercq and H.M. Rochais [Rome, 1977], 17–40 / PL 182:1053–72), sent to Rome, the pope responded with the letter Testante Apostolo of July 16, 1140 (1141?), to Bishop Henry of Sens: “The chapters, sent to Us by your discretion, and all the teachings of the same Peter, We have condemned along with their author by the authority of the sacred canons, and, on him, as a heretic, We have imposed perpetual silence” (Destinata Nobis a vestra discretionem capitula et universa ipsius Petri dogmata sanctorum canonum auctoritate cum suo auctore damnavimus, eique tamquam haeretico perpetuum silentium imposuimus; BullCocq 2:250bf / BullTau 2:450a / PL 179:517A; cf. JR 8148).

Ed.: P. Ruf and M. Grabmann, Ein neuaufgefundenes Bruchstück der Apologia Abaelards (SbBayAk Philosophisch-historische Abteilung 1930, no. 5), 10f. / J. Rivière, Les “Capitula” d’Abélard condamnés au Concile de Sens, in RechThAM 5 (1933): 16f. / MaC 21:568C–570A / Sancti Bernardi Opera 8, 39f. / HaC 6/II, 1224E / DuPIA 1/I, 21a.

Errors of Peter Abelard

- | | | | |
|------------|---|----|--|
| 721 | 1. Quod Pater sit plena potentia, Filius quaedam potentia Spiritus Sanctus nulla potentia. | 1. | The Father is full power, the Son a certain power, and the Holy Spirit no power. |
| 722 | 2. Quod Spiritus Sanctus non sit de substantia Patris, immo anima mundi. | 2. | The Holy Spirit is not from the Father’s substance but rather the soul of the world. |
| 723 | 3. Quod Christus non assumpsit carnem, ut nos a iugo diaboli liberaret. | 3. | Christ did not assume flesh in order to free us from the yoke of the devil. |
| 724 | 4. Quod neque Deus et homo, neque haec persona quae Christus est, sit tertia persona in Trinitate. | 4. | Neither the God-and-man nor this person who is Christ is the third Person in the Trinity. |
| 725 | 5. Quod liberum arbitrium per se sufficiat ad aliquod bonum. | 5. | Free will is sufficient in and of itself for any good. |
| 726 | 6. Quod ea solummodo potest Deus facere, quae facit, vel dimittere, quae dimittit, vel eo modo tantum, vel eo tempore, et non alio. | 6. | God can only do those things that he does or permit those things that he permits either only in this way or at this time and no other. |
| 727 | 7. Quod Deus nec debeat nec possit mala impedire. | 7. | God neither should nor can prevent evil. |
| 728 | 8. Quod non contraximus culpam ex Adam, sed poenam tantum. | 8. | From Adam we have not contracted guilt but only punishment. |

¹ 718 Taken almost literally from the Synod of Toulouse held under Callistus II in 1119 (MaC 21:234AB). The canon is directed in particular against Peter of Bruys.

- | | | |
|---|--|-----|
| 9. Quod non peccaverunt, qui Christum ignorantes crucifixerunt. | 9. They did not sin who crucified Christ without knowing it. | 729 |
| 10. Quod non sit culpa adscribendum, quicquid fit per ignorantiam. | 10. No guilt may be ascribed to whatever is done in ignorance. | 730 |
| 11. Quod in Christo non fuerit spiritus timoris Domini. | 11. In Christ there was not the spirit of the fear of the Lord. | 731 |
| 12. Quod potestas ligandi atque solvendi Apostolis tantum data sit, et non successoribus eorum. | 12. The power of binding and loosing was given only to the apostles and not to their successors. | 732 |
| 13. Quod propter opera nec melior nec peior efficiatur homo. | 13. Man becomes neither better nor worse on account of works. | 733 |
| 14. Quod ad Patrem, quia ab alio non est, proprie vel specialiter attineat omnipotentia, non etiam sapientia et benignitas. | 14. Omnipotence pertains to the Father in a proper and special sense because he is from no one else, but not likewise wisdom and goodness. | 734 |
| 15. Quod etiam castus timor excludatur a futura vita. | 15. Even pious fear is excluded from the future life. | 735 |
| 16. Quod diabolus immittat suggestiones per appositionem lapidum vel herbarum. | 16. The devil introduces suggestions through the apposition of stones and herbs. | 736 |
| 17. Quod adventus in fine saeculi posset attribui Patri. | 17. The coming at the end of time may be attributed to the Father. | 737 |
| 18. Quod anima Christi per se non descendit ad inferos, sed per potentiam tantum. | 18. The soul of Christ did not descend into hell in and of itself but only by means of its power. | 738 |
| 19. Quod neque opus neque voluntas neque concupiscentia neque delectatio, quae movet eam, peccatum sit, nec debemus eam velle extinguere. | 19. Neither the work nor the will nor the concupiscentia nor the pleasure that moves it is a sin, nor should we wish to extinguish it. | 739 |

741: Letter Apostolicam sedem to the Bishop of Cremona, date uncertain

Ed.: PL 179:624D–625A / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. III, tit. 43, c. 2 (Frdb 2:648; here attributed to Innocent III). —Reg.: JR 8272.

The Baptism of Desire

Presbyterum, quem sine unda baptismatis extremum diem clausisse significasti, quia in sanctae matris Ecclesiae fide et Christi nominis confessione perseveravit, ab originali peccato solutum et caelestis patriae gaudium esse adeptum asserimus incunctanter. Lege super octavum librum Augustini de civitate Dei,¹ ubi inter cetera legitur: “Baptismus invisibiliter ministratur, quem non contemptus religionis, sed terminus necessitatis excludit.” Librum etiam beati Ambrosii *de obitu Valentiniani*² idem asserentis revolve. Sopitis ergo quaestionibus, doctorum Patrum sententias teneas, et in ecclesia tua iuges preces hostiasque Deo offerri iubeas pro presbytero memorato.

The presbyter who, you said, ended (his) final days without the water of baptism we declare without hesitation to have been freed from original sin and to have attained the joy of the heavenly fatherland since he persevered in the faith of Holy Mother Church and in the confession of Christ’s name. In addition, read in the eighth book of Augustine’s De civitate Dei,¹ where, among other things, it says: “Baptism is administered invisibly when it is impeded, not by the contempt of religion, but by the barrier of necessity.” Likewise, go back to the book of blessed Ambrose, De obitu Valentiniani,² where he upholds the same thing. The questions having thus been put to rest, hold to the judgments of the learned Fathers, and, in your church, ask that continual prayers and sacrifices be offered for the above-mentioned presbyter.

*741 ¹ This actually corresponds with Augustine, De civitate Dei XIII, 7 (B. Dombart and A. Kalb: CpChL 48 [1955]: 389f. / CSEL 40/1:622f. / PL 41:381); one would need to cite: Augustine, De baptismo contra Donatistas IV, 22, no. 29 (CSEL 51:257₁₄ / PL 43:173).

² Ambrose, De obitu Valentiniani 51 (CSEL 73:354 / PL 16:1374BC).

CELESTINE II: September 26, 1143–March 8, 1144

LUCIUS II: March 12, 1144–February 15, 1145

EUGENE III: February 15, 1145–July 8, 1153

745: Synod of Reims, begun March 21, 1148

After the dissolution of a council conducted by Eugene III himself, a consistory began on March 29, 1148, in which the cause of Gilbert de la Porrée was discussed. The bishop of Poitiers was accused of holding the errors summarized in the four following chapters:

1. The divine essence, substance, and nature that is called the divinity, goodness, wisdom, greatness of God, and whatever is of that kind, is not God but the form by which God is. (Quod divina essentia, substantia et natura, quae dicitur divinitas, bonitas, sapientia, magnitudo Dei, et quaeque similia, non sit Deus, sed forma qua est Deus.)

2. The three Persons, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, are not one God or one substance or one anything. (Quod nec unus Deus nec una substantia nec unum aliquid sint tres personae, Pater et Filius et Spiritus Sanctus.)

3. The three Persons are three through three unities and distinct through three properties, which are not the same as the Persons themselves; but they are three eternal, different by number both from each other and from the divine substance. (Quod tres personae tribus unitatibus sint tria, et distinctae proprietatibus tribus, quae non hoc sint quod ipsae personae, sed sint tria aeterna, differentia numero tam a se invicem quam a substantia divina.)

4. The divine nature is not incarnate and did not take on human nature. (Quod divina natura non sit incarnata nec naturam humanam. suscepit.)

Gilbert succeeded, through his subtle defense, in having the pope not condemn these chapters as heresy; he merely noted, as to the first chapter, what is given in the text below and recorded by the historian Otto of Freising.

When the synod was over, Gilbert's enemies, with Abbot Bernard of Clairvaux at their head, framed a profession of faith and certain other measures against Gilbert in order to extract a condemnation of him from the pope, but without success. The profession of faith was recorded neither in the synodal acts nor in the register of the Roman pontiff and is therefore not an official document of the ecclesiastical Magisterium.

Ed.: Otto von Freising, Gesta Friderici imperatoris I, 57, in the edition of G. H. Pertz: MGH Scriptores (Folianten) 20 (Hannover, 1868), 384₃₂₋₃₄ = chap. 61 in the edition of G. Waitz: MGH Scriptores rerum Germanicarum in usum scholarum XIV, 3rd ed. (Hannover and Leipzig, 1912), 87 / MaC 21:726E. —For the chapter attributed to Gilbert, see PL 185:617A.

The Holy Trinity

- 745 “De primo tantum [capitulo] Romanus Pontifex diffinivit, ne aliqua ratio in theologia inter naturam et personam divideret, neve Deus divina essentia diceretur ex sensu ablativi tantum, sed etiam nominativi.”
- “Concerning the first [chapter] only, the Roman pontiff reached the decision that no concept in theology causes a division between nature and person, and for this reason one speaks of God as the divine essence not only in an ablative sense, but also in the nominative.”

ANASTASIUS IV: July 12, 1153–December 3, 1154

ADRIAN IV: December 4, 1154–September 1, 1159

ALEXANDER III: September 7, 1159–August 30, 1181

747: Synod of TOURS, begun May 19, 1163

This synod was presided over by Alexander III himself. Besides the discussion on the Christology of Peter Lombard (cf. *749f.), upon which no decision was made, the item worth noting is the prohibition of a concealed form of earning interest on a loan called vadum (or vadimonium mortuum) (“death security”; in French: mort gage); the abuse of the contract is called antichresis, or “use deposit”. To the creditor some income-producing property is given as a pledge (for example, land or a vineyard), and in such a manner that all the income from the property during the entire time of the pledge is consigned to the creditor, even after the value of the loaned capital is reached or exceeded. According to the synod, justice demands that the proceeds from the deposited property be counted toward the amount of the loaned capital.

Ed.: MaC 21:1176DE / HaC 6/II, 1597AB / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. V, tit. 19, c. 1 (Frdb 2:811); ibid., c. 2, the prohibition against a concealed type of usury is pronounced also for the laity.

Usury

- 747 (Cap. 2) Plures clericorum, et quod maerentes dicimus, eorum quoque qui praesens saeculum professione vocis
- (Chap. 2) Many of the clergy and, as We are sorry to say, many also of those who by profession of vows and et habitu reliquerunt, dum communes usuras, quasi manifestius damnatas, exhorrent, commodata pecunia indigentibus possessiones eorum in pignus accipiunt, et provenientes fructus percipiunt ultra sortem.

Idcirco generalis Concilii decrevit auctoritas, ut nullus amodo constitutus in clero vel hoc vel aliud genus usurae exercere praesumat. Et si quis hactenus alicuius possessionem data pecunia sub hac specie vel condicione in pignus acceperit, si sortem suam, deductis expensis, de fructibus iam perceperit, absolute possessionem restituat debitori. Si autem aliquid minus habet, eo recepto, possessio libere ad dominum revertatur.

Quodsi post huiusmodi constitutum in clero quisquam exstiterit qui detestandis usurarum lucris insistat, ecclesiastici officii periculum patiat, nisi forte Ecclesiae beneficium fuerit, quod redimendum ei hoc modo de manu laici videatur.

⟨religious⟩ habit have abandoned the present world, while they abhor common usury as something clearly condemned, take the goods of the poor in pledge when they lend them money and take the fruits deriving from those goods beyond the principal ⟨amount loaned⟩.

Therefore the authority of the general council has decreed that henceforth no one who is a member of the clergy shall presume to exercise this or any other form of usury. And if anyone, on lending money, has hitherto held another's possessions in pledge on this pretext or condition, he should restore the possession absolutely to the debtor, provided he has already received back his capital from the fruits, with expenses deducted. If he has received less, then when the difference has been made up, the possession should return freely to its owner.

If, after this decree, there is any member of the clergy who goes on making detestable profits from usury, he shall suffer the risk of his ecclesiastical office, unless it be a benefice of the Church that he intended to redeem from the hand of a layman in the manner described.

748: Letter Ex litteris tuis to the Resident Sultan in Iconium, 1169

The letter is an instruction in the Catholic faith, which the prince of the Seljuks said he wished to embrace.

Ed.: PL 207:1077A–1078A (under the works of Petrus of Blois) / MaC 21:898AB.

The Incorruption of the Body of Mary after Death

[Maria] concepit nempe sine pudore, peperit sine dolore, et hinc migravit sine corruptione, iuxta verbum angeli, immo Dei per angelum, ut plena, non semiplena, gratiae esse probaretur et Deus Filius eius antiquum quod pridem docuit mandatum fideliter adimpleret, videlicet patrem et matrem honore praevinire, et ne caro Christi virginea, quae de carne matris virginis assumpta fuerat, a tota discreparet.

[Mary] indeed conceived without shame, gave birth without pain, and went hence without corruption, according to the word of the angel, or rather ⟨the word⟩ of God through the angel, so that she should be proved to be full, not merely half filled, with grace and ⟨so that⟩ God her Son should faithfully fulfill the ancient commandment that he had formerly given, namely, to treat one's father and mother with honor, and that thus the virginal flesh of Christ, which had been taken from the flesh of his virgin Mother, should not be totally different from her own. 748

749: Letter Cum in nostra to Archbishop William of Sens, May 28, 1170

As P. Glorieux (Miscellanea Lombardiana [Novara, 1957], 137–47) has shown, Peter Lombard nowhere formally taught the “christological nihilism” with which he was charged, but he gave grounds for suspicion by a somewhat unhappy application of Abelard's method of “Sic et Non”.

Ed.: DenCh 1:4 (no. 3) / PL 200:685BC (= letter 744) / MaC 22:239AB. —Reg.: JR 11806.

The Error of Peter Lombard regarding the Humanity of Christ

Cum in Nostra esses olim praesentia constitutus, tibi viva voce iniunximus, ut suffraganeis tuis Parisius tibi ascitis ad abrogationem pravae doctrinae Petri quondam Parisiensis episcopi, qua dicitur quod Christus secundum quod est homo, non est aliquid, omnino intenderes et efficacem operam adhiberes. Inde siquidem est, quod fraternitati tuae per Apostolica scripta mandamus, quatenus ... suffraganeos tuos Parisius convoces et una cum illis et aliis viris religiosis et prudentibus

When you were once in Our presence, We enjoined upon you verbally that, with your suffragans assembled in Paris, you should work insistently to suppress the false doctrine of Peter, sometime bishop of Paris, by which it is said that Christ, insofar as he is man, is not anything. Hence it is that We command Your Fraternity by apostolic writing ... to summon your suffragans to Paris and, together with them and other religious and prudent men, seek to suppress thoroughly the aforesaid doctrine 749

praescriptam doctrinam studeas penitus abrogare et a magistris et scholaribus ibidem in theologia studentibus Christum sicut perfectum Deum, sic et perfectum hominem ex anima et corpore consistentem praecipias edoceri.

and that you command the masters and students studying theology there to teach that Christ, just as he is perfect God, is also perfect man consisting of soul and body.

750: Letter Cum Christus to Archbishop William of Reims, February 18, 1177

This pertains to a letter regarding the same matter as *749, addressed to the same bishop, transferred in the meantime to another see (Reims).

Ed.: DenCh 1:8f. (no. 9) / MaC 21:1081CD / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. V, tit. 7, c. 7 (Frdb 2:779). —Reg.: JR 12785.

Error regarding the Humanity of Christ

750 Cum Christus perfectus Deus perfectus sit homo, mirum est, qua temeritate quisquam audet dicere, quod Christus non sit aliquid secundum quod est homo. Ne autem tanta possit in Ecclesia Dei abusus suboriri vel error induci, fraternitati tuae per Apostolica scripta mandamus, quatenus . . . auctoritate Nostra sub anathemate interdicas, ne quis de cetero dicere audeat, Christum non esse aliquid secundum quod homo, quia sicut verus Deus, ita verus est homo ex anima rationali et humana carne subsistens.

Since Christ is perfect God and perfect man, it is remarkable that anyone would dare to say with such boldness that Christ is nothing insofar as he is man. In order that such contempt may not arise or an error be introduced in the Church of God, We command Your Fraternity through apostolic writings that, . . . by virtue of Our authority and on pain of anathema, you forbid anyone henceforth from saying that Christ is nothing insofar as he is man, because just as he is true God, so also he is true man, consisting of a rational soul and human flesh.

Third LATERAN Council (Eleventh Ecumenical), March 5–19 (22?), 1179

The council issued statutes pertaining to the schism that had existed since 1159 and that was overcome definitively only in 1180. It also took measures against lapses in ecclesiastical discipline and the heresies of the time, in particular, the heresies of the Albigensians. We do not possess the Acta (Acts) of the Council.

751: Session 3, March 19 or 22: Chapter

Ed.: MaC 22:224B / HaC 6/II, 1678C / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. III, tit. 35, c. 2 (Frdb 2:596) / COeD, 3rd ed., 217.

Simony

751 Cap. 10. Monachi non pretio recipiantur in monasterio. . . . Si quis autem exactus pro sua receptione aliquid dederit, ad sacros ordines non ascendat. Is autem, qui acceperit, officii sui privatione mulctetur.¹

Chap. 10. Monks may not be accepted into monasteries for money. . . . But if anyone, after having been expelled, paid something in order to be taken back, let him not be elevated to holy orders. The one who accepted (this money), moreover, is to be punished by the deprivation of his office.¹

753: Letter In civitate tua to the Archbishop of Genoa, date uncertain

Ed.: MaC 22:343DE / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. V, tit. 19, c. 6 (Frdb 2:813). —Reg.: JR 13965.

Illicit Sales Contract

753 In civitate tua dicis saepe contingere, quod quidam piper, seu cinnamomum, seu alias merces comparant, quae tunc ultra quinque libras non valent, et promittunt se illis, a quibus illas merces accipiunt, sex libras statuto termino soluturos. Licet autem contractus huiusmodi ex tali forma non possit censeri nomine usurarum,

In your city you say that it often happens that when certain ones are purchasing pepper or cinnamon or other wares that at that time are not the value of more than five pounds, they also promise to those from whom they receive these wares that they will pay six pounds at a stated time. However, although a contract of this kind nihilominus tamen venditores peccatum incurrunt, nisi dubium sit, merces illas plus minusve solutionis tempore valituras: et ideo cives tui salutis suae bene consulere, si a tali contractu cessarent, cum cogitationes hominum omnipotenti Deo nequeant occultari.

*751 ¹ Already addressed at the Synod of Amalfi of 1089 under Urban II, can. 7 (MaC 20:723C).

according to such a form cannot be considered under the name of usury, yet nevertheless the sellers incur sin, unless there is a doubt that the wares would be of more or less value at the time of payment. Therefore, your citizens would take good care of their salvation if they would desist from this type of contract because the thoughts of men cannot be hidden from Almighty God.

754: Letter Ex publico instrumento to the Bishop of Brescia, date uncertain

Ed.: MaC 22:284E–285B / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. III, tit. 32, c. 7 (Frdb 2:581). —Reg.: JR 13787.

The Bond of Matrimony

Quia praefata mulier, licet a praefato viro desponsata fuerit, adhuc tamen, sicut asserit, ab ipso est incognita, fraternitati tuae per apostolica scripta praecipiendo mandamus, quatenus, si praedictus vir mulierem ipsam carnaliter non cognoverit, et eadem mulier, sicut ex parte tua Nobis proponitur, ad religionem transire voluerit, recepta ab ea sufficienti cautione, quod vel ad religionem transire vel ad virum suum redire infra duorum mensium spatium debeat, ipsam contradictione et appellatione cessante a sententia [excommunicationis], qua tenetur, absolvas ita, quod, si ad religionem transierit, uterque restituat alteri, quod ab eo noscitur recepisse, et vir ipse, ea religionis habitum assumente, ad alia vota licentiam habeat transeundi. Sane quod Dominus in Evangelio dicit, non licere viro, nisi ob causam fornicationis uxorem suam dimittere [Mt 5:32; 19:9], intelligendum est, secundum interpretationem sacri eloquii, de his, quorum matrimonium carnali copula est consummatum, sine qua matrimonium consummari non potest, et ideo, si praedicta mulier non fuit a viro suo cognita, licitum est ei ad religionem transire.

Since the aforementioned woman, although betrothed to the aforementioned man, still—as is asserted—has not known him (carnally) up till now, We direct Your Fraternity, by apostolic letter, that if the aforementioned man has not known this woman carnally, and the same woman (as you have made known to Us) wishes to enter religious life: after having received from her a sufficient guarantee that, in the space of two months, she either enters religious life or returns to her husband, that you absolve her, relinquishing any opposition or appeal to a sentence of [excommunication] by which she is bound, so that, if she does enter religious life, each may restore to the other what they are known to have received; and the man himself, if she assumes the religious habit, has permission to contract another marriage. For truly, what the Lord says in the Gospel, namely, that it is not permitted for a man to renounce his wife, except in the case of fornication [Mt 5:32; 19:9] should be understood, according to the interpretation of the holy Word, in reference to those whose marriage is consummated by carnal union, without which marriage cannot be consummated; and, therefore, if the above-mentioned woman was not known [carnally] by her husband, (she is) permitted to enter religious life. 754

755–756: Letter (Fragments) Verum post to the Archbishop of Salerno, date uncertain

Ed.: [*755, 756]: MaC 22:283AB; 288BC / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. III, tit. 32, c. 2; l. IV, tit. 4, c. 3 (Frdb 2:579, 681). —Reg.: JR 14091.

The Effect of Matrimonial Consent

Post consensum legitimum de praesenti licitum est alteri, altero etiam repugnante, eligere monasterium, sicut Sancti quidem de nuptiis vocati fuerunt, dummodo carnalis commixtio non intervenerit inter eos: et alteri remanenti, si commonitus continentiam servare noluerit, licitum est ad secunda vota transire; quia cum non fuissent una caro simul effecti, satis potest unus ad Deum transire, et alter in saeculo remanere.

After legitimate consent de praesenti [at the present time] is given, it is permitted for the one, even with the other resisting, to choose the monastery, as indeed some saints were called from marriage, as long as carnal union has not taken place between them; and if the one remaining, after being advised, does not wish to maintain continence, he is permitted to enter into a second marriage; for since they did not become one flesh, the one can pass over fully to God and the other remain in the world. 755

- 756 Si [inter virum et mulierem] legitimus consensus ... interveniat de praesenti, ita quidem, ut unus alterum in suo mutuo consensu verbis consuetis expresse recipiat, ... sive sit iuramentum interpositum sive non, non licet mulieri alii nubere. Et si nupserit, etiamsi carnalis copula sit secuta, ab eo separari debet, et, ut ad primum redeat, ecclesiastica districtione compelli, quamvis alii aliter sentiant, et aliter etiam a quibusdam praedecessoribus nostris sit aliquando iudicatum.
- If [between a man and a woman] legitimate consent ... de praesenti [at the present time] takes place, so that the one expressly receives the other as his (spouse) by mutual consent with the accustomed words ... whether or not an oath is introduced, it is not permitted for the woman to marry another. And if she has married (another), even if sexual union has taken place, she must be separated from him and be compelled by ecclesiastical rigor to return to the first, even if others may think otherwise and even if at times some of Our predecessors might have judged otherwise.

757–758: Letter (Fragments) to Bishop Pontius of Clermont (?), date uncertain

Ed.: Gregory IX, Decretales, l. III, tit. 42, c. 1–2 (Frdb 2:644). —[only *757]: MaC 21:1101B [second form]. —Reg.: JR 14200.

The Form of Baptism

- 757 Si quis sane puerum ter in aqua immerserit in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti, Amen, et non dixerit: “Ego baptizo te in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti, Amen”, non est puer baptizatus.
- Certainly if someone immerses a child in water three times in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, Amen, and does not say: “I baptize you in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, Amen”, the child is not baptized.
- 758 De quibus dubium est, an baptizati fuerint, baptizantur his verbis praemissis: “Si baptizatus es, non te baptizo; sed, si nondum baptizatus es, ego te baptizo, etc.”
- But those for whom there is a doubt whether they were baptized are to be baptized with these words preceding: “If you are baptized, I do not baptize you; but if you are not yet baptized, I baptize you, etc.”

LUCIUS III: September 1, 1181–November 25, 1185

760–761: Synod of VERONA, late October–early November 1184

The pope himself presided over the synod. The following anathema was repeated in many bulls during the thirteenth century (see, for example, PoR 8445, 9675, 10043).

Ed.: MaC 22:477A–C / HaC 6/II, 1878D–E / BullTau 3:20b–21a / BullCocq 3:9bf. / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. V, tit. 7, c. 9 (Frdb 2:780). —Reg.: JR 15109.

Condemnation of the Errors of Lay Sects regarding the Power of the Hierarchy

- 760 ... Omnem haeresim, quocumque nomine censeatur, pro huius Constitutionis seriem auctoritate apostolica condemnamus: In primis ergo Catharos et Patarinos et eos qui se Humiliatos vel Pauperes de Lugduno, falso nomine, mentiuntur, Passaginos, Iosepinos, Arnaldistas, perpetuo decernimus anathemati subiacere.
- ... All heresy, by whatever name it is known, we condemn by apostolic authority according to this constitution: In the first place, therefore, the Cathari and Patarini and those who lyingly call themselves by the false name of Humiliati or Poor Men of Lyon, the Passagini, Josephini, and Arnoldists we decree to be subject to perpetual anathema.
- 761 Et quoniam nonnulli sub specie pietatis ... auctoritatem sibi vindicant praedicandi ... , omnes, qui vel prohibiti vel non missi, praeter auctoritatem ab Apostolica Sede vel episcopo loci susceptam publice vel privatim praedicare praesumpserint, et universos, qui de sacramento corporis et sanguinis Domini nostri Iesu Christi vel de baptismo seu de peccatorum confessione, matrimonio vel reliquis ecclesiasticis sacramentis aliter sentire aut docere non metuunt, quam sacrosancta Romana Ecclesia praedicat et observat, et generaliter quoscumque eadem Romana
- And since some, under an appearance of piety ... claim for themselves authority to preach ... , we bind by the same bond of perpetual anathema all those who, whether banned or not commissioned, shall presume to preach, publicly or privately, without having received authority from the Apostolic See or the bishop of the place and all those who have no fear of thinking or teaching otherwise than the holy Roman Church preaches and observes concerning the sacrament of the Body and Blood of our Lord Jesus Christ or concerning baptism or the

The Eucharist as a Memorial of Christ

846 In institutione quidem huius sacramenti dixit ipse Apostolis: “Hoc facite in meam commemorationem” [Lc 22:19], ut praecipuum et insigne memoriale sui amoris eximii, quo nos dilexit, esset nobis hoc praecelsum et venerabile sacramentum. Memoriale, inquam, mirabile . . . , in quo innovata sunt signa et mirabilia immutata, in quo habetur omne delectamentum . . . , in quo utique vitae suffragium consequimur et salutis. Hoc est memoriale . . . salvificum, in quo gratam redemptionis nostrae recensemus memoriam, in quo a malo retrahimur et in bono confortamur et ad virtutum et gratiarum proficimus incrementa, in quo profecto proficimus ipsius corporali praesentia Salvatoris.

Alia namque, quorum memoriam agimus, spiritu mentequae complectimur, sed non propter hoc realem eorum praesentiam obtinemus. In hac vero sacramentali Christi commemoratione Iesus Christus praesens sub alia quidem forma, in propria vero substantia est nobiscum. Adscensus enim in caelum dixit Apostolis et eorum sequacibus: “Ecce ego vobiscum sum omnibus diebus usque ad consummationem saeculi” [Mt 28:20], benigna ipsos promissione confortans, quod remaneret et esset cum eis etiam praesentia corporali.

In the institution of this sacrament he himself said to the apostles: “Do this in memory of me” [Lk 22:19], so that this high and venerable sacrament should be for us a prime and outstanding memorial of his extraordinary love, by which he has loved us. A wondrous memorial, I say, . . . in which the signs are renewed and the marvels are changed, in which all delight is contained . . . , in which we indeed receive support for life and salvation. This is . . . the saving memorial in which we recall with gratitude the memory of our redemption, in which we are withdrawn from evil and strengthened in good and go forward to an increase of virtues and graces, in which we really go forward through the bodily presence of the Savior himself.

For the other things we commemorate we embrace in mind and spirit, but we do not thereby obtain their real presence. But in this sacramental memorial of Christ, Jesus Christ is present with us in another form: in fact, in his own substance. For when he was about to go up into heaven, he said to the apostles and their successors: “Behold I am with you all days, even to the end of the world” [Mt 28:20], comforting them by a kind promise that he would remain and be with them even in his bodily presence.

The Eucharist as Food for the Soul

847 . . . Transcendens omnem plenitudinem largitatis, omnem modum dilectionis excedens, attribuit se in cibum. O singularis et admiranda liberalitas, ubi donator venit in donum, et datum est idem penitus cum datore! . . .

Dedit igitur nobis se in pabulum, ut, quia per mortem homo corruerat, et per cibum relevaretur ad vitam. . . . Gustus sauciavit, et gustus sanavit. Vide, quia, unde vulnus est ortum, prodiit et medela, et, unde mors subiit, exinde vita evenit. De illo siquidem gustu dicitur: “Quacumque die comederis, morte morieris” [Gn 2:17]; de isto vero legitur: “Si quis comederit ex hoc pane, vivet in aeternum” [Io 6:52]. . . .

Decens quoque liberalitas exstitit et conveniens operatio, ut Verbum Dei aeternum, quod rationabili creaturae cibum est et refectio, factum caro, se rationabili creaturae carni et corpori, homini videlicet, in edulium largiretur. . . . Hic panis sumitur, sed vere non consumitur; manducatur, sed non transmutatur, quia in edentem minime transformatur, sed, si digne recipitur, sibi recipiens conformatur.

. . . Transcending the very fullness of generosity, exceeding every form of love, he gave himself as food. O singular and wondrous liberality, where the giver becomes the gift and what is given is entirely the same as the giver! . . .

He therefore gave himself to us as food, so that man, since he had gone to ruin by death, should by this food be lifted up to life. . . . A taste wounded, and a taste healed. See how, whence the wound arose, the cure too came forth, and, whence death made approach, thence life proceeds. For if indeed it is said of taste: “On whatever day you shall eat, you shall die of death” [Gen 2:17]; it is of it also that we read: “If anyone shall eat of this bread, he will live forever” [Jn 6:51]. . . .

There was also a suitable liberality and a fitting manner of proceeding in the fact that the eternal Word of God, who is the food and refreshment of the rational creature, should, when made flesh, give himself in edible form to a rational creature of flesh and body, namely, man. . . . This bread is taken but, truly, not consumed; it is eaten but not changed; for it is not transformed into the eater; rather, if worthily received, the recipient is conformed to it.

way of life. The condemnation of his work, which appears in this constitution, was repeated numerous times: cf. the letters: Veri solis to King Louis XII of France, October 17, 1256; Non sine multa to the bishops of France, Burgundy, etc., October 19, 1256; Quidam Scripturae to the bishops of Tours, Rouen, and Paris, October 21, 1256, and others (DenCh 1:333–38, 353 = nos. 289–92, 308; cf. PoR 16585, 16589f., 16808).

Ed.: DenCh 1:331–33 (no. 288) / BullTau 3:645b–646a. —Reg.: PoR 16565.

The Errors of William of Saint-Amour concerning the Mendicants

[Libello Guilelmi] studiose perlecto et mature et districte examinato, Nobisque de hoc plenaria facta relatione ab eis, quod in ipso quaedam perversa et reproba, contra potestatem et auctoritatem Romani Pontificis et coepiscoporum suorum, et nonnulla contra illos, qui propter Deum sub artissima paupertate mendicant, mundum cum suis opibus voluntaria inopia superantes;

alia vero contra eos, qui salutem animarum zelantes ardent, et sacris studiis procurantes, multos in Ecclesia Dei operantur spirituales profectus, et magnum faciunt ibi fructum;

quaedam autem contra salutarem pauperum seu mendicantium religiosorum statum, sicut sunt dilecti filii Fratres Praedicatores, et Minores, qui vigore spiritus, saeculo cum suis divitiis derelicto, ad solam caelestem patriam tota intentione suspirant;

necon et alia plura inconvenientia, digna utique con- futatione ac confusione perpetua, manifeste comperimus contineri;

quodque etiam idem libellus magni scandali seminarium, et multae turbationis materia existebat, et inducebat etiam dispendium animarum, cum retraheret a devotione solita, et consueta eleemosynarum largitione, ac a conversione, et religionis ingressu fideles:

Nos libellum eumdem, qui sic incipit: “Ecce videntes clamabunt foris”, quique secundum ipsius titulum Tractatus brevis de periculis novissimorum temporum nuncupatur, tamquam iniquum, scelestum et execrabilem, et institutiones ac documenta in eo tradita, utpote prava, falsa et nefaria, de Fratrum Nostrorum consilio, auctoritate Apostolica reprobamus et in perpetuum condemnamus ...

[The treatise of William] was carefully read and properly and rigorously examined, and they provided Us with a complete report about it, because it contains some wicked and perverse things:

against the power and authority of the Roman pontiff and his fellow bishops; and some (things) also against those who, on behalf of God, beg in the strictest poverty, having conquered the world and its riches through voluntary poverty;

and other (things), in fact, against those who, animated by an ardent zeal for the salvation of souls, and diligent for sacred studies, produce much spiritual progress in the Church of God and in doing so bring forth much fruit;

other (things), indeed, against the wholesome state of the poor or mendicant religious, like the dear sons, the Preaching Friars (the Dominicans) and the Friars Minor (the Franciscans), who, by the power of the spirit, have abandoned the world and its riches and with all their heart yearn only for their heavenly homeland; and We also find clearly within it many other indecencies that are certainly worthy of repression and perpetual shame;

and also because this same treatise has been a source of great scandal and an occasion of much disturbance and likewise has induced a loss of souls, since it has drawn the faithful away from familiar devotion, the customary giving of alms, as well as conversion and entrance into religious life:

(therefore) We, on the advice of Our brothers, with apostolic authority, reject and condemn forever as iniquitous, wicked, and detestable this same treatise, which begins: “Ecce videntes clamabunt foris” (Behold, seeing they will cry out in public), and which bears the title, Tractatus brevis de periculis novissimorum temporum (Brief treatise on the dangers of most recent times); and (we condemn) the instructions and teachings contained within it as evil, false, and impious....

URBAN IV: August 29, 1261–October 2, 1264

846–847: Bull Transiturus de hoc mundo, August 11, 1264

By this constitution directed to all the bishops of the Church, the feast of Corpus Christi was introduced.

Ed.: BullTau 3:705b–706b / BullCocq 3/I, 415 / MaC 23:1077B–1078D / also quoted completely in the constitution Si Dominum of Clement V (Constitutiones, l. III, tit. 16, c. 1; Frdb 2:1175f.). —Reg.: PoR 18998.

ordinati per eos, propter nimiam ipsorum multitudinem, in sic susceptis ordinibus tolerentur.

837 20 (§ 16). Quia vero secundum Apostolum, mulier mortuo viro ab ipsius est lege soluta, ut nubendi cui vult in Domino liberam habeat facultatem [cf. Rm 7:2; 1 Cor 7:39], secundas, et tertias, ac ulteriores etiam nuptias Graeci non reprehendant aliquatenus, nec condemnent, sed potius illas approbent inter personas, quae alias licite ad invicem matrimonio iungi possunt.

21. Secundo tamen nubentes presbyteri nullatenus benedicant.

838 [De sorte defunctorum] 23 (§ 18). Denique cum Veritas in Evangelio asserat, quod si quis in Spiritum Sanctum blasphemiam dixerit, neque in hoc saeculo, neque in futuro dimittetur ei [cf. Mt 12:32]; per quod datur intellegi quasdam culpas in praesenti, quasdam vero in futuro saeculo relaxari, et Apostolus dicat, quod “uniuscuiusque opus, quale sit, ignis probabit”, et “cuius opus arserit, detrimentum patietur; ipse autem salvus erit; sic tamen quasi per ignem” [1 Cor 3:13, 15], et ipsi Graeci vere ac indubitanter credere ac affirmare dicantur, animas illorum, qui, suscepta paenitentia, ea non peracta, vel qui sine mortali peccato, cum venialibus tamen et minutis decedunt, purgari post mortem, et posse suffragiis Ecclesiae adiuvari: Nos, quia locum purgationis huiusmodi dicunt non fuisse sibi ab eorum doctoribus certo et proprio nomine indicatum, illum quidem iuxta traditiones et auctoritates sanctorum Patrum “Purgatorium” nominantes volumus, quod de cetero apud ipsos isto nomine appelletur. Illo enim transitorio igne peccata utique, non tamen criminalia seu capitalia, quae prius per paenitentiam non fuere remissa, sed parva et minuta purgantur, quae post mortem etiam gravant, si in vita fuerunt relaxata.

839 24 (§ 19). Si quis autem absque paenitentia in peccato mortali decedit, hic procul dubio aeternae gehennae ardoribus perpetuo cruciatur.

25 (§ 20). Animae vero parvulorum post baptismi lavacrum, et adultorum etiam in caritate decedentium, qui nec peccato, nec ad satisfactionem aliquam pro ipso tenentur, ad patriam protinus transvolant sempiternam.

those to be ordained. But let those who already have been so ordained by them, because of their exceedingly great number, be kept in the orders thus received.

20 (§ 16). But because, according to the apostle, a woman, after her husband dies, is loosed from his bond, so that she has the free authority of marrying whom she wishes in the Lord [cf. Rom 7:2; 1 Cor 7:39], the Greeks should not in any way censure or condemn a second, third, or even more marriages; on the contrary, they should rather approve them between persons who otherwise can be united to one another licitly in marriage.

21. Nevertheless, priests should not in any way bless those who marry a second time.

[The fate of the deceased] 23 (§ 18). Finally, because the Truth in the Gospel affirms that if anyone speaks blasphemy against the Holy Spirit he will not be forgiven either in this age or the age to come [cf. Mt 12:32]—by which it is understood that some sins are to be loosed in the present age and others in the future age—and, as the apostle says: “The work of each one, whatever it may be, will be tested by fire”, and “he whose work is burned up will suffer loss; though he himself will be saved but only as through fire” [1 Cor 3:13, 15]; and because it is said that the Greeks themselves, truly and without doubt, believe and affirm that the souls of those who die after receiving penance but without having performed it, or who die without mortal sin but with venial and slight sin, are purified after death and can be assisted by the suffrages of the Church: because they say that a certain and proper name was not indicated to them by their doctors for such a place of purgation; and because, according to the tradition and authority of the holy Fathers we call it “purgatory”; we wish that from henceforth it be called by this name among them. For indeed this temporary fire purifies sins, not however mortal or capital (sins) that were not previously remitted by penance, but small and minor (sins) that still weigh down after death even if during life they were forgiven.

24 (§ 19). But if anyone dies in mortal sin without repentance, beyond any doubt, he will be tortured forever by the flames of everlasting hell.

25 (§ 20). But the souls of little children after the cleansing of baptism—as well as (the souls) of adults who, having died in (the state of) charity, are bound neither by sin nor to any satisfaction for sin—ascend immediately into the everlasting homeland.

ALEXANDER IV: December 12, 1254–May 25, 1261

840–844: Constitution Romanus Pontifex de summi, October 5, 1256

When a quarrel erupted over the right of teaching between the University of Paris and the emerging mendicant orders (O.P., O.F.M.), William of Saint-Amour, in his treatise De periculis novissimorum temporum (appeared in 1255), harshly attacked the mendicant

4 (§ 5). Soli autem episcopi consignent chrismate in frontibus baptizatos, quia huius unctio non debet nisi per episcopos exhiberi. Quoniam soli Apostoli, quorum vices gerunt episcopi, per manus impositionem, quam confirmatio vel frontis chrismatio repraesentat, Spiritum Sanctum tribuisse leguntur [cf. Act 8:14-25].

5. Singuli quoque episcopi in suis ecclesiis, in die Coenae Domini, possunt, secundum formam Ecclesiae, chrisma conficere, ex balsamo quidem et oleo olivarum. Nam Spiritus Sancti donum in chrismatis unctio confertur. Et columba utique, quae ipsum designat Spiritum, olivae ramum ad arcam legitur retulisse. Sed si suum antiquum ritum in hoc Graeci potius servare voluerint, videlicet quod patriarcha una cum archiepiscopis et episcopis eius suffraganeis, et archiepiscopi cum suffraganeis suis, simul chrisma conficiant, in tali eorum consuetudine tolerentur.

6. Nullus autem per sacerdotes vel confessores pro satisfactione paenitentiae unctio aliqua solummodo inungatur.

7. Infirmis vero iuxta verbum Iacobi Apostoli [Jac 5:14s] unctio exhibeatur extrema.

8 (§ 6). Porro in appositione aquae, sive frigidae, sive calidae, vel tepidae, in altaris sacrificio, suam si velint consuetudinem Graeci sequantur, dummodo credant et asserant, quod servata canonis forma, conficiatur pariter de utraque.

9. Sed Eucharistiam in die Coenae Domini consecratam usque ad annum, praetextu infirmorum, ut de illa videlicet ipsos communicent, non reservent. Liceat tamen eis, pro infirmis ipsis, corpus Christi conficere, ac per quindecim dies, et non longiori temporis spatio, conservare; ne per diutinam ipsius reservationem, alteratis forsitan speciebus, reddatur minus habile ad sumendum: licet veritas et efficacia semper eadem omnino remaneat, nec ulla umquam diuturnitate, seu volubilitate temporis evanescat.

18 (§ 14). De fornicatione autem, quam solutus cum soluta committit, quin sit mortale peccatum, non est aliquatenus ambigendum, cum tam fornicarios, quam adulteros a regno Dei Apostolus asserat alienos [cf. 1 Cor 6:9s].

19 (§ 15). Ad haec volumus et expresse praecipimus, quod episcopi Graeci septem ordines secundum morem Ecclesiae Romanae de cetero conferant, cum hucusque tres de minoribus circa ordinandos neglexisse, vel praetermississe dicantur. Illi tamen, qui iam sunt taliter

4 (§ 5). Only bishops, however, should seal the baptized on the foreheads with chrism, since this anointing should be conferred only by bishops. For we read that only the apostles, whom the bishops succeed, conferred the Holy Spirit with the imposition of hands, an imposition that confirmation, or the chrismation of the forehead, represents [cf. Acts 8:14-25].

5. In their own churches, individual bishops can, on the day of the Lord's Supper, prepare chrism from balsam and olive oil according to the formula of the Church. For the gift of the Holy Spirit is conferred in the anointing with chrism. And indeed, as we read, the dove, which signifies the Spirit himself, brought back the olive branch to the ark. But if in this matter the Greeks would rather preserve their own ancient rite, namely, that the patriarch together with the archbishops and their suffragan bishops, and the archbishops with their suffragans, prepare the chrism at the same time, let this custom of theirs be tolerated.

6. For the satisfaction of penance, however, no one should be merely anointed by some oil by priests or confessors.

7. But according to the word of the apostle James [Jas 5:14f.], extreme unction should be conferred upon the sick.

8 (§ 6). Furthermore, when the water is added in the sacrifice of the altar, be it hot, cold, or lukewarm, the Greeks should follow their own custom if they wish, as long as they believe and confess that, having preserved the form of the canon, (the sacrifice) is realized equally by one kind or the other.

9. But let them not preserve the Eucharist consecrated on the day of the Lord's Supper for a year on the pretext of the sick, that is, in order to give them communion from it. It may be permitted them, however, on behalf of the sick themselves, to consecrate the body of Christ and to preserve it for fifteen days, but not for a longer period of time, lest through its long preservation, perchance by a change in the species, it be rendered less suitable to receive, although the truth and its efficacy always remain entirely the same, and never by any length of time or the mutability of time do they grow weak.

18 (§ 14). Moreover concerning fornication that an unmarried man commits with an unmarried woman, there must not be any doubt at all that it is a mortal sin, since the apostle declares that fornicators like adulterers are cast out from the kingdom of God [cf. 1 Cor 6:9f.].

19 (§ 15). In addition to this We wish and We expressly command that the Greek bishops in the future confer the seven orders according to the custom of the Roman Church, since they are said to have neglected or to have omitted hitherto three of the minor ones with respect to tempore fuerint valiturae, verisimiliter dubitatur: non debet ex hoc usurarius reputari.

Ratione huius dubii etiam excusatur, qui pannos, granum, vinum, oleum vel alias merces vendit, ut amplius, quam tunc valeant, in certo termino recipiat pro eisdem, si tamen ea tempore contractus non fuerat venditurus.

they are then worth more, it can be reasonably doubted whether at the time of payment they will be worth more or less: because of this he should not be considered a usurer.

By reason of this doubt he also is excused who sells clothing, grain, wine, oil, or other wares so that at a set time he receives for them more than they are worth at that time, if, however, he had not intended so to sell them at the time of the contract.

829: Letter Cum sicut ex to Archbishop Sigurd of Trondheim (Norway), July 8, 1241

Ed.: BarAE, at year 1241, no. 42 / C. C. A. Lange and C. R. Unger, Diplomatarium Norvegicum 1/I (Christiania, 1847), 21, no. 26. —Reg.: PoR 11048.

The Matter of Baptism

829 Cum, sicut ex tua relatione didicimus, nonnunquam propter aquae penuriam infantes terrae tuae contingat in cerevisia baptizari: tibi tenore praesentium respondemus, quod cum secundum doctrinam evangelicam oporteat ex aqua et Spiritu Sancto renasci [cf. Io 3:5], non debent reputari rite baptizati, qui in cerevisia baptizantur.

Since, as we have learned from your report, it sometimes happens that, because of a lack of water, infants in your land are baptized with beer, we respond to you in the following manner: since, according to the teaching of the Gospel, one must be born again of water and the Holy Spirit [cf. Jn 3:5], those who are baptized in beer must not be considered as rightly baptized.

CELESTINE IV: October 25–November 10, 1241

INNOCENT IV: June 25, 1243–December 7, 1254

First Council of LYON (Thirteenth Ecumenical): June 28–July 17, 1245

Aside from the preliminary session of June 26, this council was carried out in three solemn sessions (June 28, July 5 and 17). It issued decrees against Emperor Frederick II, against the Saracens, and on behalf of the recovery of the Holy Land. In reality, there were no dogmatic decisions.

830–839: Letter Sub catholica professione to the Bishop of Tusculum, the Legate of the Apostolic See among the Greeks, March 6, 1254

Ed.: CollLac 2:446C–448C / BullTau 3:581a–583a / BullLux 1:100b–101b / BullCocq 3/I, 340b–341b / MaC 23:579D–582C. —Reg.: PoR 15265; E. Berger, Les Registres d'Innocent IV 3 (Paris, 1897), 381, no. 7338.

The Rites and Doctrine that the Greeks Should Follow

830 § 3 (al. § 4). 1. Circa haec itaque sic deliberatio Nostra resedit, ut Graeci eiusdem regni in unctionibus, quae circa baptismum fiunt, morem Ecclesiae Romanae teneant et observent.

2. Ritus vero seu consuetudo, quam habere dicuntur, unguendi per totum baptizantium corpora, si tolli sine scandalo, vel removeri non potest, cum, sive fiat sive non, quantum ad baptismi efficaciam vel effectum non multum referat, toleretur.

3. Nec refert etiam, utrum in frigida, vel calida aqua baptizent, cum parem vim et effectum in utraque baptismum habere asseverare dicantur.

§ 3 (others § 4). 1. Regarding this matter, therefore, Our consideration has led Us to decide that the Greeks of this same kingdom (Cyprus), in the anointings that are done in connection with baptism, are to maintain and observe the custom of the Roman Church.

2. If, however, the rite or custom they are said to have, namely, of completely anointing the bodies of those to be baptized, cannot be eliminated or removed without scandal, it may be tolerated, since, whether it is done or not done, it is of little importance with respect to the efficacy or the effect of baptism.

3. Also, it does not matter whether they baptize in cold water or hot water since, as they are said to affirm, the baptism has the same power and the same effect in either case.

825: Letter Consultationi tuae to the Archbishop of Bari, November 12, 1231

Ed.: Gregory IX, Decretales, l. I, tit. 11, c. 16 (Frdb 2:124) / BarAE, at year 1231, no. 30. —Reg.: PoR 8832.

The Sacramental Character Received in Ordination

Consultationi tuae taliter respondemus, quod eos, qui extra tempora statuta sacros ordines receperunt, characterem non est dubium recepisse, quos pro transgressione huiusmodi, primo eis paenitentia imposita competenti, sustinere poteris in susceptis ordinibus ministrare.

To your inquiry We reply in this way: Those who have received sacred orders outside the established times have without a doubt received the character, and, having first imposed a suitable penance on them for a transgression of this sort, you may allow them to minister in the orders received.

825

826: Letter Presbyter et diaconus to Bishop Olaf of Lund, December 9, 1232

Ed.: Gregory IX, Decretales, l. I, tit. 16, c. 3 (Frdb 2:135). —Reg.: PoR 9056; L. Auvray, Les Registres de Grégoire IX, vol. 1 (Paris, 1896), 581, no. 988.

The Matter and Form of Ordination

Presbyter et diaconus cum ordinantur, manus impositionem tactu corporali, ritu ab Apostolis introducto [cf. 1 Tim 4:14; 5:22; 2 Tim 1:6; Act 6:6], recipiunt; quod si omissum fuerit, non est aliquatenus iterandum, sed statuto tempore ad huiusmodi ordines conferendos, caute supplendum quod per errorem exstitit praetermissum. Suspendio autem manuum debet fieri, cum oratio super caput effunditur ordinandi.

When a priest and a deacon are ordained, according to the rite introduced by the apostles [cf. 1 Tim 4:14; 5:22; 2 Tim 1:6; Acts 6:6], they receive the imposition of hands by bodily contact; but if this was omitted, it must not be repeated in any manner, but at the time established for the conferring of such orders, what was omitted by error must be prudently supplied. The hands, however, must be raised when the prayer is proclaimed over the head of the one being ordained.

826

827: Decree (in Fragments) Si condiciones, between 1227 and 1234

Ed.: Gregory IX, Decretales, l. IV, tit. 5, c. 7 (Frdb 2:684) / MaC 23:141A (= Fragment no. 104). —Reg.: PoR 9664.

The Invalidity of a Conditional Marriage

Si condiciones contra substantiam coniugii inserantur, puta, si alter dicat alteri: “contraho tecum, si generationem prolis evites”, vel: “donec inveniam aliam honore vel facultatibus digniorem”, aut: “si pro quaestu adulterandam te tradas”: matrimonialis contractus, quantumcumque sit favorabilis, caret effectu; licet aliae condiciones appositae in matrimonio, si turpes aut impossibiles fuerint, debeant propter eius favorem pro non adiectis haberi.

If conditions contrary to the nature of marriage are inserted, for example, if one says to the other: “I contract marriage with you if you avoid the generation of children”, or “until I find another more worthy by reason of reputation or riches”, or “if you hand yourself over to adultery for profit”, the matrimonial contract, however favorable it may be, is deprived of effect; although other conditions added to the marriage, if they are disgraceful or impossible, should be considered as not added because of the favor (of marriage in the eyes of the law).

827

828: Letter Naviganti vel to Brother R., between 1227 and 1234

Ed.: Gregory IX, Decretales, l. V, tit. 19, c. 19 (Frdb 2:816) / MaC 23:131E–132A (= Fragment no. 69). —Reg.: PoR 9678.

Usury

Naviganti vel eunti ad nundinas certam mutuans pecuniae quantitatem, eo quod suscipit in se periculum, recepturus aliquid ultra sortem usurarius [non?] est censendus.

Whoever lends a sum of money to someone going to market by sea or by land, and—because he has assumed a risk for himself—intends to receive something beyond the capital, should [not?] be considered a usurer.

828

Ille quoque, qui dat X solidos, ut alio tempore totidem sibi grani, vini et olei mensurae reddantur: quae, licet tunc plus valeant, utrum plus vel minus solutionis

Likewise, he who gives ten solidi (= gold coins) so that at another time he may have just as many measures of grain, wine, and oil paid back to him, and, even though

Preserving Theological Terminology and Tradition

824 ... Et quidem theologicus intellectus quasi vir habet praeesse cuilibet facultati et quasi spiritus in carnem dominium exercere ac eam in viam dirigere rectitudinis, ne aberret....

Sane tacti dolore cordis intrinsecus [cf. Gn 6:6] amaritudine repleti sumus absynthii [cf. Lam 3:15], quod ... quidam apud vos... "positos a Patribus terminos" [cf. Prv 22:28] profana transferre satagunt novitate; caelestis paginae intellectum, sanctorum Patrum studiis certis expositionum terminis limitatae, quos transgredi non solum est temerarium, sed profanum, ad doctrinam philosophicam naturalium inclinando, ad ostentationem scientiae, non profectum aliquem auditorum, ut sic videantur non theodoti seu theologi, sed theophanti.

Cum enim theologiam secundum approbatas traditiones Sanctorum exponere debeant et non carnalibus armis, sed "Deo potentibus destruere omnem altitudinem extollentem se adversus scientiam Dei, et captivum in obsequium Christi omnem reducere intellectum" [2 Cor 10:4s]: ipsi doctrinis variis et peregrinis abducti [cf. Hbr 13:9] redigunt caput in caudam [cf. Dt 28:13, 44] et ancillae cogunt famulari reginam, videlicet documentis terrenis caeleste, quod est gratiae, tribuendo naturae.

Profecto, scientiae naturalium plus debito insistentes, ad infirma et egena elementa mundi ... reversi et eis denuo servientes [cf. Gal 4:9] tamquam imbecilles in Christo, "lacte, non solido cibo" [Hbr 5:12] vescuntur, et videntur cor nequaquam gratia stabilisse [cf. Hbr 13:9]; propter quod "spoliati gratuitis et in suis naturalibus vulnerati",¹ ad memoriam non reducunt illud Apostoli ...: "Profanas vocum novitates et falsi nominis scientiae opinionens devota, quam quidam appetentes exciderunt a fide" [1 Tim 6:20s]....

Et dum fidem conantur plus debito ratione adstruere naturali, nonne illam reddunt quodammodo inutilem et inanem? Quoniam "fides non habet meritum, cui humana ratio praebet experimentum."² Credit denique intellecta natura, sed fides ex sui virtute gratuita intellegentia credita comprehendit, quae audax et improba penetrat, quo naturalis nequit attingere intellectus.

... And the theological intellect must preside just as man does over all of his faculties and as the spirit exercises dominion over the flesh and directs it on the path of rectitude, so that it does not go astray....

We are in truth touched inwardly with sorrow of heart [cf. Gen 6:6] and filled with the bitterness of wormwood [cf. Lam 3:15] because ... some among you ... are diligently working to move beyond the boundaries set by the Fathers [cf. Prov 22:28] through impious novelty; for they bend the understanding of the heavenly Scripture—which has been defined by fixed boundaries of interpretation by the efforts of the holy Fathers, which it is not only rash but also profane to transgress—to the philosophical doctrine of natural things in order to show off their knowledge and not for any benefit to their hearers; in this way they appear, not as those learned about God or theologians, but as those who defame God.

For, although they ought to explain theology according to the approved traditions of the saints, not by carnal weapons but by weapons "of divine power, capable of destroying every arrogant power that sets itself against the knowledge of God and taking every thought captive in obedience toward Christ" [cf. 2 Cor 10:4f.]: they instead, "led astray by diverse and strange teachings" [cf. Heb 13:9], reduce the "head to the tail" [cf. Deut 28:13, 44], and they force the queen to serve the maidservant, that is, the celestial (to serve) the earthly doctrines, by attributing to nature what belongs to grace.

Indeed, occupying themselves with the knowledge of natural things more than they ought, having returned ... to the weak and needy elements of the world and serving them again [cf. Gal 4:9], as weak in Christ they feed on "milk not solid food" [Heb 5:12f.], and they seem by no means to have established their heart in grace [cf. Heb 13:9]; this is why, "despoiled of the (gifts) of grace and wounded in their (gifts) of nature",¹ they do not call to mind that (saying) of the apostle ...: "Avoid profane novelties of expression and opinions of knowledge falsely so-called; by seeking these, some have fallen from the faith" [1 Tim 6:20]....

And when they strive more than is due to support faith by natural reason, do they not thereby render it in a certain way useless and vain? For "faith has no merit if human reason supplies the proof."² Nature, accordingly, believes what is understood, but faith grasps what it believes through comprehension given it by grace; faith penetrates, with courage and boldness, what the natural intellect cannot attain.

*824 ¹ Peter Lombard, Sententiae, I, II, dist. 25, c. 7; alluded to in Ambrose of Milan, Expositio evangelii secundum Lucam VII, 73 = on Lk 10:30 (M. Adriaen: CpChL 14 [1957]: 238f. / CSEL 32/IV:312f. / PL 15:1806A); in Augustine, Quaestiones evangeliorum II, q. 19 (A. Mutzenbecher: CpChL 44B [1980]: 62f. / PL 35:1340); the Venerable Bede, In Lucae evangelium expositio III, 10 (D. Hurst: CpChL 120 [1960]: 222 / PL 92:468D).

² Gregory I the Great, In Evangelia homilae, I, II, hom. 26, no. 1 (PL 76:1197C).

extendatur indulgentia ultra annum ...; ac deinde in anniversario dedicationis tempore 40 dies de iniunctis paenitentis indulgentia remissio non excedat. Hunc quoque dierum numerum indulgentiarum litteris praecipimus moderari, quae pro quibuslibet causis aliquoties conceduntur, cum Romanus Pontifex, qui plenitudinem obtinet potestatis, hoc in talibus moderamen consueverit observare.

We therefore decree that when a basilica is dedicated, the indulgence shall not be for more than one year ...; and for the anniversary of the dedication the remission of penances imposed is not to exceed forty days. We order that the letters of indulgence, which are granted for various reasons at different times, are to fix this number of days, since the Roman pontiff himself, who possesses the plenitude of power, is accustomed to observe this moderation in such things.

820: Chapter 63. Simony

Ed.: MaC 22:1051BC / HaC 7:66E–67A / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. V, tit. 3, c. 39 (Frdb 2:765) / COeD, 3rd ed., 264.

... In plerisque locis et a plurimis personis quasi columbas in templo vendentibus fiunt exactiones et extorsiones turpes et pravae pro consecrationibus episcoporum, benedictionibus abbatum et ordinibus clericorum: estque taxatum, quantum sit isti vel illi quantumve alteri vel alii persolvendum; et, ad cumulum damnationis maioris, quidam turpitudinem et pravitatem huiusmodi nituntur defendere per consuetudinem longo tempore observatam.

... In many places, and by many persons, as if selling 820 doves in the Temple, disgraceful and evil exactions and extortions are made for the consecrations of bishops, the blessings of abbots, and the ordinations of clerics: and a fixed scale lays down how much this or that is or how much is to be paid to this or that person; and, to heap up greater damnation, some persons try to defend disgraces and evils of this sort as a custom observed for a long time.

Tantum igitur abolere volentes abusum, consuetudinem huiusmodi, quae magis dicenda est corruptela, penitus reprobamus: firmiter statuentes, ut pro iis sive conferendis sive collatis nemo aliquid quocumque praetextu exigere ac extorquere praesumat. Alioquin et qui receperit et qui dederit huiusmodi pretium omnino damnatum, cum Giezi [cf. 4 Rg 5:20–27] et Simone [cf. Act 8:9–24] condemnetur.

Wishing therefore to abolish so great an abuse, We entirely condemn this custom, which is better called corruption: laying down firmly that, for conferring or receiving these things, no one should presume to demand and extort anything, on any pretext. Otherwise, let both he who receives and he who gives an altogether damnable payment of this sort be condemned with Gehazi [cf. 2 Kings 5:20–27] and Simon [cf. Acts 8:9–24].

HONORIUS III: July 18, 1216–March 18, 1227

822: Letter Perniciosus valde to Archbishop Olaf of Uppsala, December 13, 1220

Ed.: Gregory IX, Decretales, l. III, tit. 41, c. 13 (Frdb 2:643). —Reg.: PoR 6441.

The Water Mixed with Wine in the Sacrifice of the Mass

Perniciosus valde, sicut audivimus, in tuis partibus inolevit abusus, videlicet, quod in maiore quantitate de aqua ponitur in sacrificio quam de vino: cum secundum rationabilem consuetudinem Ecclesiae generalis plus in ipso sit de vino quam de aqua ponendum. Ideoque fraternitati tuae per Apostolica scripta mandamus, quatenus id non de cetero facias nec in tua provincia fieri patiaris.

An exceedingly pernicious abuse, as We have heard, 822 has arisen in your area, namely, that in the sacrifice water is being used in greater measure than wine; when according to the reasonable custom of the general Church more of wine than of water should be used. Therefore, We command Your Fraternity, by apostolic letter, that henceforth you no longer do this and that you do not allow it to be done in your province.

GREGORY IX: March 19, 1227–August 22, 1241

824: Letter Ab Aegyptiis argentea to the Theologians of Paris, July 7, 1228

A few older editions present a mutilated text beginning with the words “Tacti dolore”.

Ed.: DenCh 1:114–16 (no. 59) / L. Auvray, Les Registres de Grégoire IX, vol. 1 (Paris, 1896), 117–20 (no. 203). —Reg.: PoR 8231; Auvray, as above.

816: Chapter 41. The Need for Good Faith in All Prescriptions

Ed.: MaC 22:1027AB / HaC 7:50C / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. II, tit. 26, c. 20 (Frdb 2:393) / COeD, 3rd ed., 253.

The Good Faith Needed in Every Prescription

816 Quoniam “omne quod non est ex fide, peccatum est” [Rm 14:23], synodali iudicio diffinimus, ut nulla valeat absque bona fide praescriptio tam canonica quam civilis, cum generaliter sit omni constitutioni atque consuetudini derogandum, quae absque mortali peccato non potest observari. Unde oportet, ut, qui praescribit, in nulla temporis parte rei habeat conscientiam alienae.

Since “whatever does not proceed from faith is sin” [Rom 14:23], and since in general any constitution or custom that cannot be observed without mortal sin is to be disregarded, we therefore define by this synodal judgment that no prescription, whether canonical or civil, is valid without good faith. It is therefore necessary that the person who prescribes should at no stage be aware that the object belongs to someone else.

817: Chapter 51. The Prohibition of Clandestine Marriages

Ed.: MaC 22:1038DE / HaC 7:58B / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. IV, tit. 3, c. 3 (Frdb 2:680) / COeD, 3rd ed., 258.

The Illicitness of Clandestine Marriages

817 Praedecessorum Nostrorum inhaerendo vestigiis, clandestina coniugia penitus inhibemus; prohibentes etiam, ne quis sacerdos talibus interesse praesumat. Quare specialem quorundam locorum consuetudinem ad alia generaliter prorogando statuimus, ut, cum matrimonia fuerint contrahenda, in ecclesiis per presbyteros publice proponantur, competenti termino praefinito, ut infra illum, qui voluerit et valuerit, legitimum impedimentum opponat. Et ipsi presbyteri nihilominus investigent, utrum aliquod impedimentum obsistat. . . .

Following in the footsteps of Our predecessors, We altogether prohibit clandestine marriages, prohibiting also that any priest should presume to be present at them. Wherefore, extending the special custom of certain places to others in general, We establish that when marriages are to be contracted, they should be publicly announced in the churches by the priests, with a suitable period being fixed within which anyone who is willing and able may raise a legitimate impediment. And the priests themselves should nonetheless investigate whether any impediment stands in the way. . . .

818–819: Chapter 62. The Relics of the Saints

Ed.: MaC 22:1049AB / HaC 7:65AB / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. III, tit. 45, c. 2; V, 38, 14 (Frdb 2:650, 889) / COeD, 3rd ed., 263f.

The Disgraceful Manner of Treating Relics

818 Cum ex eo, quod quidam Sanctorum reliquias exponunt venales et eas passim ostendunt, christianae religioni detractum sit saepius, ne in posterum detrahatur, praesenti decreto statuimus, ut antiquae reliquiae amodo extra capsam nullatenus ostendantur nec exponantur venales. Inventas autem de novo nemo publice venerari praesumat, nisi prius auctoritate Romani Pontificis fuerint approbatae. Praelati vero de cetero non permittant illos, qui ad eorum ecclesias causa venerationis accedunt, vanis figmentis aut falsis decipi documentis, sicut et in plerisque locis occasione quaestus fieri consuevit.

The Christian religion is frequently disparaged because certain people put saints’ relics up for sale and display them indiscriminately. In order that it may not be disparaged in the future, We ordain by this present decree that henceforth ancient relics shall not be displayed outside a reliquary or be put up for sale. As for newly discovered relics, let no one presume to venerate them publicly unless they have previously been approved by the authority of the Roman pontiff. Prelates, moreover, should not in the future allow those who come to their churches, in order to venerate, to be deceived by lying stories or false documents, as has commonly happened in many places on account of the desire for profit.

The Abuse of Indulgences

819 . . . Quia per indiscretas et superfluas indulgentias, quas quidem ecclesiarum praelati facere non verentur, et claves Ecclesiae contemnuntur et paenitentialis satisfactio enervatur, decernimus, ut, cum dedicatur basilica, non

. . . Because the keys of the church are brought into contempt and satisfaction through penance loses its force through indiscriminate and excessive indulgences, which certain prelates of churches do not fear to grant,

812–814: Chapter 21. The Obligation of Confession, the Secret Imposed on Priests, and the Reception of Communion during Easter Time

Ed.: MaC 22:1007E–1010C / HaC 7:35f. / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. V, tit. 38, c. 12 (Frdb 2:887) / COeD, 3rd ed., 245.

The Obligation of Annual Confession and Easter Communion

Omnis utriusque sexus fidelis, postquam ad annos discretionis pervenerit, omnia sua solus peccata saltem semel in anno fideliter confiteatur proprio sacerdoti, et iniunctam sibi paenitentiam pro viribus studeat adimplere, suscipiens reverenter ad minus in Pascha Eucharistiae sacramentum, nisi forte de consilio proprii sacerdotis ob aliquam rationabilem causam ad tempus ab eius perceptione duxerit abstinendum: alioquin et vivens ab ingressu ecclesiae arceatur et moriens christiana careat sepultura. Unde hoc salutare statutum frequenter in ecclesiis publicetur, ne quisquam ignorantiae caecitate velamen excusationis assumat.

Si quis autem alieno sacerdoti voluerit iusta de causa sua confiteri peccata, licentiam prius postulet et obtineat a proprio sacerdote, cum aliter ille ipsum non possit absolvere vel ligare.

All the faithful of either sex, after they have reached the age of discernment, should individually confess all their sins in a faithful manner to their own priest at least once a year, and let them take care to do what they can to perform the penance imposed on them. Let them reverently receive the sacrament of the Eucharist at least at Easter unless they think, for a good reason and on the advice of their own priest, that they should abstain from receiving it for a time. Otherwise they shall be barred from entering a church during their lifetime and they shall be denied a Christian burial at death. Let this salutary decree be frequently published in churches, so that nobody may find the pretense of an excuse in the blindness of ignorance.

If any persons wish, for good reasons, to confess their sins to another priest, let them first ask and obtain the permission of their own priest; for otherwise the other priest will not have the power to absolve or to bind them.

The Obligations of the Confessor

Sacerdos autem sit discretus et cautus, ut more periti medici superinfundat vinum et oleum [cf. Lc 10:34] vulneribus sauciati, diligenter inquirens et peccatoris circumstantias et peccati, quibus prudenter intelligat, quale debeat ei praebere consilium et cuiusmodi remedium adhibere, diversis experimentis utendo ad sanandum aegrotum.

Caveat autem omnino, ne verbo aut signo aut alio quovis modo aliquatenus prodat peccatorem: sed si prudentiore consilio indiguerit, illud absque ulla expressione personae caute requirat, quoniam qui peccatum in paenitentiali iudicio sibi detectum praesumpserit revelare, non solum a sacerdotali officio deponendum decernimus, verum etiam ad agendam perpetuam paenitentiam in arctum monasterium detrudendum.

The priest shall be discerning and prudent, so that like a skilled doctor he may pour wine and oil [cf. Lk 10:34] over the wounds of the injured one. Let him carefully inquire about the circumstances of both the sinner and the sin, so that he may prudently discern what sort of advice he ought to give and what remedy to apply, using various means to heal the sick person.

Let (the confessor) take absolute care not to betray the sinner through word or sign, or in any other way whatsoever. In case he needs expert advice, he may seek it, without, however, in any way indicating the person. For we decree that he who presumes to reveal a sin that has been manifested to him in the tribunal of penance is not only to be deposed from the priestly office but also to be consigned to a closed monastery for perpetual penance.

815: Chapter 22. The Sick Should Be More Concerned with the Soul than with the Body

Directed primarily at sexual acts that were recommended in particular for curing psychological diseases. Thus Claudius Galen, De venereis, in Opera omnia, ed. by K. G. Kühn, vol. 5 (Leipzig, 1823), 912f.; De locis affectis V, 5 (in Opera omnia, ed. by K. G. Kühn, vol. 8 [1824], 417f.). See the praise of Archbishop Thomas of York (d. 1114) in the Gesta S. Anselmi, in Acta Sanctorum. April, vol. 2 (Antwerp, 1675), 949aC, n. h, and in Eadmer, Historia Novorum (PL 159:483CD, note).

Ed.: MaC 22:1011A / HaC 7:38C / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. V, tit. 38, c. 13 (Frdb 2:888) / COeD, 3rd ed., 246.

Illicit Means of Obtaining Health

... Ceterum cum anima sit multo pretiosior corpore, sub interminatione anathematis prohibemus, ne quis medicorum pro corporali salute aliquid aegroto suadeat, quod in periculum animae convertatur.

... Furthermore, since the soul is much more precious than the body, we prohibit under threat of anathema that any doctor should recommend to a sick person anything that could tend to endanger the soul.

missi, praeter auctoritatem ab Apostolica Sede vel catholico episcopo loci susceptam, publice vel privatim praedicationis officium usurpare praesumpserint” [*761], excommunicationis vinculo innodentur: et nisi quantocius resipuerint, alia competenti poena plectantur.

those who have been forbidden or not sent to preach, and yet dare publicly or privately to usurp the office of preaching without having received the authority of the Apostolic See or the Catholic bishop of the place” [*761], be bound with the bond of excommunication and, unless they repent very quickly, be punished by another suitable penalty.

810: Chapter 4. The Insolence of the Greeks toward the Latins

Already on October 23, 867, in his letter to the bishops in office during the reign of Charles the Bald (PL 119:1152D–1161A; JR 2879), Nicholas I had complained about the Greeks because of their contempt for the sacramental rites of the Latin Church.

Ed.: MaC 22:989f. / HaC 7:21–23 / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. III, tit. 42, c. 6 (Frdb 2:647f.) / COeD, 3rd ed., 235f.

Contempt for the Sacramental Rites of the Latin Church

810 Licet Graecos, in diebus nostris ad oboedientiam Sedis Apostolicae revertentes, fovere ac honorare velimus, mores ac ritus eorum, in quantum cum Domino possumus, sustinendo, in his tamen illis deferre nec volumus nec debemus, quae periculum generant animarum et ecclesiasticae derogant honestati. Postquam enim Graecorum ecclesia cum quibusdam complicibus et fautoribus suis ab oboedientia Sedis Apostolicae se subtraxit, in tantum Graeci coeperunt abominari Latinos, quod inter alia, quae in derogationem eorum impie committebant, si quando sacerdotes Latini super eorum celebrassent altaria, non prius ipsi sacrificare volebant in illis, quam ea tamquam per hoc inquinata lavissent; baptizatos etiam a Latinis ipsi Graeci rebaptizare ausu temerario praesumebant: et adhuc, sicut accepimus, quidam hoc agere non verentur.

Volentes ergo tantum scandalum ab Ecclesia Dei amovere, sacro suadente Concilio districte praecipimus, ut talia de cetero non praesumant, conformantes se tamquam oboedientiae filii sacrosanctae Romanae Ecclesiae matri suae, ut sit “unum ovile et unus pastor” [Jo 10:16].

Si quis autem quid tale praesumpserit, excommunicationis mucrone percussus ab omni officio et beneficio ecclesiastico deponatur.

Although We would wish to cherish and honor the Greeks who in our days are returning to the obedience of the Apostolic See by preserving their customs and rites as much as We can in the Lord, nevertheless We neither want nor ought to defer to them in matters that bring danger to souls and detract from the Church’s honor. For, after the Greek Church together with certain associates and supporters withdrew from the obedience of the Apostolic See, the Greeks began to detest the Latins so much that, among other wicked things that they committed out of contempt for them, when Latin priests celebrated on their altars they would not offer sacrifice on them until they had washed them, as if the altars had been defiled thereby. The Greeks even had the temerity to rebaptize those baptized by the Latins; and some, as We are told, still do not fear to do this.

Wishing, therefore, to remove such a great scandal from God’s Church, We strictly order, on the advice of this sacred council, that henceforth they do not presume to do such things but rather conform themselves like obedient sons to the holy Roman Church, their mother, so that there may be one flock and one shepherd [Jn 10:16].

If anyone, however, does dare to do such a thing, let him be struck with the sword of excommunication and be deprived of every ecclesiastical office and benefice.

811: Chapter 5. The Dignity of the Patriarchs

Ed.: MaC 22:989–992 / HaC 7:23f. / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. V, tit. 33, c. 23 (Frdb 2:866) / COeD, 3rd ed., 236.

The Primacy of the Roman See

811 Antiqua patriarchalium sedium privilegia renovantes, sacra universali Synodo approbante, sancimus, ut post Romanam Ecclesiam, quae disponente Domino super omnes alias ordinariae potestatis obtinet principatum, utpote mater universorum Christi fidelium et magistra, Constantinopolitana primum, Alexandrina secundum, Antiochena tertium, Hierosolymitana quartum locum obtineant.

Renewing the ancient privileges of the patriarchal sees, We decree, with the approval of this sacred universal council, that after the Roman Church, which through the Lord’s disposition has a primacy of ordinary power over all other churches inasmuch as she is the mother and teacher of all Christ’s faithful, the Church of Constantinople shall have the first place, the Church of Alexandria the second place, the Church of Antioch the third place, and the Church of Jerusalem the fourth place, each maintaining her own rank.

Patris indivisibilis sit, utpote simplex omnino. Sed nec dici potest, quod Pater in Filium transtulerit suam substantiam generando, quasi sic dederit eam Filio, quod non retinuerit ipsam sibi; alioquin desiisset esse substantia. Patet ergo, quod sine ulla diminutione Filius nascendo substantiam Patris accepit, et ita Pater et Filius habent eandem substantiam: et sic eadem res est Pater et Filius, nec non et Spiritus Sanctus ab utroque procedens.

Cum vero Veritas pro fidelibus suis orat ad Patrem: "Volo", inquit, "ut ipsi sint unum in nobis, sicut et nos unum sumus" [Jo 17:22]: hoc nomen "unum" pro fidelibus quidem accipitur, ut intelligatur unio caritatis in gratia, pro personis vero divinis, ut attendatur identitatis unitas in natura, quemadmodum alibi Veritas ait: "Estote perfecti, sicut et Pater vester caelestis perfectus est" [Mt 5:48], ac si diceret manifestius: "Estote perfecti" perfectione gratiae, "sicut Pater vester caelestis perfectus est" perfectione naturae, utraque videlicet suo modo: quia inter creatorem et creaturam non potest tanta similitudo notari, quin inter eos maior sit dissimilitudo notanda.

Si quis igitur sententiam vel doctrinam praefati Ioachim in hac parte defendere vel approbare praesumpserit, tamquam haereticus ab omnibus confutetur.

In nullo tamen propter hoc Florensi monasterio, cuius ipse Ioachim exstitit institutor, volumus derogari: quoniam ibi et regularis est institutio, et observantia salutaris: maxime, cum ipse Ioachim omnia scripta sua Nobis assignari mandaverit, Apostolicae Sedis iudicio approbanda seu etiam corrigenda, dictans epistolam,¹ quam propria manu subscripsit, in qua firmiter confitetur, se illam fidem tenere, quam Romana tenet Ecclesia, quae disponente Domino cunctorum fidelium mater est et magistra.

Reprobamus etiam et condemnamus perversissimum dogma impii Almarici, cuius mentem sic pater mendacii excaecavit, ut eius doctrina non tam haeretica censenda sit, quam insana.

809: Chapter 3. Concerning the Heretics [Waldensians]

Ed.: MaC 22:990A / HaC 7:22C / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. V, tit. 7, c. 13, § 6 (Frdb 2:788) / COeD, 3rd ed., 234f.

The Necessity of the Canonical Mission

Quia vero "nonnulli sub specie pietatis, virtutem eius (iuxta quod ait Apostolus) abnegantes [cf. 2 Tim 3:5], auctoritatem sibi vindicant praedicandi, cum idem Apostolus dicat: 'Quomodo praedicabunt, nisi mittantur?' [Rm 10:15], omnes, qui prohibiti vel non the Father is indivisible, being entirely simple. Nor can one say that in generating, the Father transferred his substance to the Son, as though he gave it to the Son in such a way as not to retain it for himself, for so he would have ceased to be substance. It is therefore clear that the Son, being born, received the substance of the Father without any diminution, and thus Father and Son have the same substance. Thus, the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit who proceeds from both are the same reality.

When, then, he who is the Truth prays to the Father 806 for his faithful "that they may be one in us as we also are one" [Jn 17:22], the word "one" as applied to the disciples is to be taken in the sense of a union of charity in grace but in the case of the Divine Persons, in the sense of a unity of identity in nature. In the same way, on another occasion the Truth says: "You must be perfect as your heavenly Father is perfect" [Mt 5:48] as though he were saying more explicitly: "You must be perfect" in the perfection of grace "as your heavenly Father is perfect" in the perfection of nature, that is, each in his own way. For between Creator and creature no similitude can be expressed without implying a greater dissimilitude.

Anyone, therefore, who presumes to defend or approve the opinion or doctrine of the above-mentioned Joachim in this matter should be rejected by all as a heretic.

By this, however, We do not intend anything to the 807 detriment of the monastery of Fiore, which Joachim founded, because there both the instruction is according to rule and the observance is healthy; especially since Joachim ordered all his writings to be handed over to Us, to be approved or corrected according to the judgment of the Apostolic See. He dictated a letter,¹ which he signed with his own hand, in which he firmly confesses that he holds the faith held by the Roman Church, which is by God's plan the mother and teacher of all the faithful.

We also reject and condemn that most perverse 808 doctrine of the impious Amalric, whose mind the father of lies blinded to such an extent that his teaching is to be regarded as mad more than as heretical.

"There are some who, holding to the form of religion 809 (but) denying its power (as the apostle says) [cf. 2 Tim 3:5], claim for themselves the authority to preach, whereas the same apostle says, 'How shall they preach unless they are sent?' [Rom 10:15]. Let therefore all natura: quamvis concedat, quod Pater et Filius et Spiritus Sanctus sunt una essentia, una substantia unaque natura. Verum unitatem huiusmodi non veram et propriam, sed quasi collectivam et similitudinariam esse fatetur, quemadmodum dicuntur multi homines unus populus, et multi fideles una Ecclesia iuxta illud: “Multitudinis credentium erat cor unum et anima una” [Act 4:32]; et: “Qui adhaeret Deo, unus spiritus est” [1 Cor 6:17] cum illo; item: “Qui . . . plantat, et qui rigat, unum sunt” [1 Cor 3:8]; et: Omnes “unum corpus sumus in Christo” [Rm 12:5]; rursus in libro Regum: “Populus meus et populus tuus unum sunt” [3 Rg 22:5; Vulgata; cf. Rt 1:16].

*807 ¹ The Protestatio of Joachim of Fiore, written in A.D. 1200 (DuPIA 1/I:121ab).

Ad hanc autem suam sententiam astruendam illud potissimum verbum inducit, quod Christus de fidelibus inquit in Evangelio: “Volo, Pater, ut sint unum in nobis, sicut et nos unum sumus, ut sint consummati in unum” [Io 17:22s]. Non enim, ut ait, fideles Christi sunt unum, id est quaedam una res, quae communis sit omnibus, sed hoc modo sunt unum, id est una Ecclesia, propter catholicae fidei unitatem, et tandem unum regnum, propter unionem indissolubilis caritatis, quemadmodum in canonica Ioannis Apostoli epistola legitur: Quia “tres sunt, qui testimonium dant in caelo, Pater, et Filius, et Spiritus Sanctus: et hi tres unum sunt” [1 Io 5:7], statimque subiungitur: “Et tres sunt, qui testimonium dant in terra: Spiritus, aqua et sanguis: et hi tres unum sunt” [1 Io 5:8], sicut in quibusdam codicibus invenitur.

804 Nos autem, sacro approbante Concilio, credimus et confitemur cum Petro Lombardo, quod una quaedam summa res est, incomprehensibilis quidem et ineffabilis, quae veraciter est Pater, et Filius, et Spiritus Sanctus; tres simul personae, ac singillatim quaelibet earundem: et ideo in Deo solummodo Trinitas est, non quaternitas; quia quaelibet trium personarum est illa res, videlicet substantia, essentia seu natura divina: quae sola est universorum principium, praeter quod aliud inveniri non potest: et illa res non est generans, neque genita, nec procedens, sed est Pater, qui generat, et Filius, qui gignitur, et Spiritus Sanctus, qui procedit: ut distinctiones sint in personis, et unitas in natura.

805 Licet igitur “alius sit Pater, alius Filius, alius Spiritus Sanctus, non tamen aliud”:¹ sed id, quod est Pater, est Filius, et Spiritus Sanctus idem omnino; ut secundum orthodoxam et catholicam fidem consubstantiales esse credantur. Pater enim ab aeterno Filium generando, suam substantiam ei dedit, iuxta quod ipse testatur: “Pater quod dedit mihi, maius omnibus est” [Io 10:29].

Ac dici non potest, quod partem substantiae suae illi dederit, et partem ipse sibi retinuerit, cum substantia nature, though he agrees that Father, Son, and Holy Spirit are one essence, one substance, and one nature. But this unity he conceives, not as true and proper, but, so to say, as collective and by similitude, just as many people are called one nation and many faithful one Church, as in the texts: “The multitude of believers had but one heart and one soul” [Acts 4:32, Vulg.], and “he who is united to the Lord becomes one Spirit with him” [1 Cor 6:17]; and again: “He who plants and he who waters are one” [1 Cor 3:8], and “we all are one body in Christ” [Rom 12:5]; and in the book of Kings: “My people and your people are one” [Kings 22:5, Vulg.; cf. Ruth 1:16].

To support his doctrine, he relies mainly on the word that Christ spoke in the Gospel about the faithful: “I will, Father, that they be one in us as we are one, that they may be perfectly one” [Jn 17:22f.]. This is how he argues: Christ’s faithful are one, not as one reality that is common to all, but they are one in this way, namely, one Church on account of the unity of the faith and, finally, one kingdom on account of the bond of indissoluble charity. So we read in the canonical Epistle of the apostle John (as it is found in some codices): “There are three who give testimony in heaven, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, and the three are one” [1 Jn 5:7, Vulg.], and immediately it is added: “And there are three that give testimony on earth, the Spirit, the water, and the blood, and these three are one” [1 Jn 5:8, Vulg.].

We therefore, with the approval of the sacred council, believe and confess with Peter the Lombard that there is one highest, incomprehensible, and ineffable reality, which is truly Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; the three Persons together, and each Person distinctly; therefore in God there is only Trinity, not a quaternity, because each of the Persons is that reality, that is, that divine substance, essence, or nature which alone is the beginning of all things, apart from which nothing else can be found. This reality is neither generating nor generated nor proceeding, but it is the Father who generates, the Son who is generated, and the Holy Spirit who proceeds, so that there be distinctions between the Persons but unity in nature.

Hence, though “the Father is one Person, the Son another Person, and the Holy Spirit another Person”,¹ yet there is not another reality but what the Father is, this very same reality is also the Son, this the Holy Spirit, so that in the orthodox and Catholic faith we believe them to be of one substance. For the Father gives his substance to the Son, generating him from eternity, as he himself testifies: “That which my Father has given me is greater than all” [Jn 10:29, Vulg.].

One cannot say that he gave him a part of his substance and retained a part for himself, since the substance of est sacrificium Iesus Christus, cuius corpus et sanguis in sacramento altaris sub speciebus panis et vini veraciter continentur, transsubstantiatis pane in corpus, et vino in sanguinem potestate divina: ut ad perficiendum mysterium unitatis accipiamus ipsi de suo, quod accepit ipse de nostro. Et hoc utique sacramentum nemo potest conficere, nisi sacerdos, qui rite fuerit ordinatus, secundum claves Ecclesiae, quas ipse concessit Apostolis eorumque successoribus Iesus Christus.

*805 ¹ Cf. Gregory Nazianzen, letter (101) to Cledonius I, 20–21 (P. Galley: SC 208 [1974]: 44–46 / PG 37:180AB).

Sacramentum vero baptismi (quod ad Dei invocationem et individuae Trinitatis, videlicet Patris, et Filii, et Spiritus Sancti, consecratur in aqua) tam parvulis, quam adultis in forma Ecclesiae a quocunque rite collatum proficit ad salutem.

Et si post susceptionem baptismi quisquam prolapsus fuerit in peccatum, per veram potest semper paenitentiam reparari. Non solum autem virgines et continentes, verum etiam coniugati, per rectam fidem et operationem bonam placentes Deo, ad aeternam merentur beatitudinem pervenire.

priest himself, Jesus Christ, is also the sacrifice. His Body and Blood are truly contained in the sacrament of the altar under the appearances of bread and wine, the bread being transubstantiated into the body by the divine power and the wine into the blood, to the effect that we receive from what is his what he has received from what is ours in order that the mystery of unity may be accomplished. Indeed, no one can perform this sacrament except the priest duly ordained according to (the power of) the keys of the Church, which Jesus Christ himself conceded to the apostles and their successors.

The sacrament of baptism (which is celebrated in water at the invocation of God and of the undivided Trinity, that is, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit) conduces to the salvation of children as well as of adults when duly conferred by anyone according to the Church's form.

After receiving baptism, anyone who shall have lapsed into sin can always be restored through true penance. Not only virgins and the continent, but also married persons, by pleasing God through right faith and good work, merit to attain to eternal happiness.

803–808: Chapter 2. The False Doctrine of Joachim of Fiore

The Cistercian abbot Joachim of Fiore (d. 1202) in his work De unitate Trinitatis (since lost) had fought against the sayings of Peter Lombard (cited below) extracted from the Sententiae l. I, dist. 5. Three other works by Joachim, Concordia Novi et Veteris Testamenti, Expositio in Apocalypsim, and Psalterium decem chordarum, which were published by his disciples under the collective title Evangelium aeternum and contained the doctrine of the three ages of the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, were later discredited when the friar Gerard of Borgo San Donnino wrote his Liber introductorius in Evangelium aeternum (1254) and attached it as a commentary to the edition of the writings of Joachim. In 1254, theologians from Paris extracted thirty-one heretical propositions from these works (DenCh 1:272–75). Alexander IV limited himself to condemning the Concordia of Joachim together with the Liber introductorius (October 23, 1255).

At the council, the errors of the Parisian theologian Amalric or Almaric of Bene (near Chartres) were also rejected; a list of his errors is found in DenCh 1:71f. (no. 12); DuPIA 1/I (1724): 126b–131b. Among others, Almaric held the following theses:

(1) That God is everything. – (2) That every Christian must believe that he is a member of Christ and that no one can be saved who does not believe this any more than if he did not believe that Christ was born or suffered or some article of the faith. – (3) That for those constituted in charity no sin is to be imputed.

[(1) Quod Deus est omnia. – (2) Quod quilibet Christianus teneatur credere se esse membrum Christi, nec aliquem posse salvari qui hoc non crederet, non minus quam si non crederet Christum esse natum et passum vel alios fidei articulos. – (3) Quod in caritate constitutis nullum peccatum imputetur.]

Ed.: DenCh 1:81 (no. 22) [*808] / MaC 22:982A–986D / HaC 7:17–19 / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. I, tit. 1, c. 2 (Frdb 2:6f.) / COeD, 3rd ed., 231–33.

The Trinity

Damnamus ergo et reprobamus libellum seu tractatum, quem Abbas Ioachim edidit contra Magistrum Petrum Lombardum, de unitate seu essentia Trinitatis, appellans ipsum haereticum et insanum pro eo, quod in suis dixit Sententiis: “Quoniam quaedam summa res est Pater, et Filius, et Spiritus Sanctus, et illa non est generans, neque genita, neque procedens.”

Unde asserit, quod ille non tam Trinitatem, quam quaternitatem astruebat in Deo, videlicet tres personas, et illam communem essentiam quasi quartam; manifeste protestans, quod nulla res est, quae sit Pater et Filius et Spiritus Sanctus; nec est essentia, nec substantia, nec

We condemn and reject the booklet or tract written 803 by Abbot Joachim against Master Peter the Lombard on the unity and essence of the Trinity, calling him heretical and insane, because in his Sententiae he says: “There is a supreme reality, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit, which is neither generating, nor born, nor proceeding.”

Thus, Joachim asserts that he (Peter) does not teach a Trinity but a quaternity of God, that is, three persons and that common essence as a fourth. Joachim clearly professes that there is no such reality that is Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; there is no essence or substance or

Definition against the Albigensians and the Cathars

800 Firmiter credimus et simpliciter confitemur, quod unus solus est verus Deus, aeternus, immensus et incommutabilis, incomprehensibilis, omnipotens et ineffabilis, Pater et Filius et Spiritus Sanctus: tres quidem personae, sed una essentia, substantia seu natura simplex omnino: Pater a nullo, Filius a Patre solo, ac Spiritus Sanctus pariter ab utroque: absque initio, semper ac sine fine: Pater generans, Filius nascens, et Spiritus Sanctus procedens: consubstantiales et coaequales et coomnipotentes et coaeterni: unum universorum principium: creator omnium visibilium et invisibilium, spiritualium et corporalium: qui sua omnipotenti virtute simul ab initio temporis utramque de nihilo condidit creaturam, spiritualem et corporalem, angelicam videlicet et mundanam: ac deinde humanam, quasi communem ex spiritu et corpore constitutam. Diabolus enim et alii daemones a Deo quidem natura creati sunt boni, sed ipsi per se facti sunt mali. Homo vero diaboli suggestionem peccavit.

Haec sancta Trinitas, secundum communem essentiam individua, et secundum personales proprietates discreta, primo per Moysen et sanctos Prophetas aliosque famulos suos, iuxta ordinatissimam dispositionem temporum, doctrinam humano generi tribuit salutarem.

801 Et tandem unigenitus Dei Filius Iesus Christus, a tota Trinitate communiter incarnatus, ex Maria semper Virgine Spiritus Sancti cooperatione conceptus, verus homo factus, ex anima rationali et humana carne compositus, una in duabus naturis persona, viam vitae manifestius demonstravit. Qui cum secundum divinitatem sit immortalis et impassibilis, idem ipse secundum humanitatem factus est passibilis et mortalis: quin etiam pro salute humani generis in ligno crucis passus et mortuus, descendit ad infernos, resurrexit a mortuis et ascendit in caelum: sed descendit in anima, et resurrexit in carne: ascenditque pariter in utroque: venturus in fine saeculi, iudicaturus vivos et mortuos, et redditurus singulis secundum opera sua, tam reprobis quam electis: qui omnes cum suis propriis resurgent corporibus, quae nunc gestant, ut recipiant secundum opera sua, sive bona fuerint sive mala, illi cum diabolo poenam perpetuam, et isti cum Christo gloriam sempiternam.

802 Una vero est fidelium universalis Ecclesia, extra quam nullus omnino salvatur,¹ in qua idem ipse sacerdos

We firmly believe and confess without reservation that there is only one true God, eternal, infinite, and unchangeable, incomprehensible, almighty, and ineffable, the Father, the Son, and the Holy Spirit; three Persons, indeed, but one essence, substance, or nature entirely simple. The Father is from no one, the Son from the Father only, and the Holy Spirit equally from both. Without beginning, always, and without end, the Father begets, the Son is born, and the Holy Spirit proceeds. They are of the same substance and fully equal, equally almighty, and equally eternal. (They are) the one principle of the universe, the creator of all things, visible and invisible, spiritual and corporeal, who by his almighty power from the beginning of time made at once out of nothing both orders of creatures, the spiritual and the corporeal, that is, the angelic and the earthly, and then the human creature, who, as it were, shares in both orders, being composed of spirit and body. For the devil and the other demons were indeed created by God naturally good, but they became evil by their own doing. As for man, he sinned at the suggestion of the devil.

This Holy Trinity, undivided according to its common essence and distinct according to the proper characteristics of the Persons, communicated the doctrine of salvation to the human race, first through Moses, the holy prophets, and its other servants, according to a well-ordered disposition of times.

Finally, the only begotten Son of God, Jesus Christ, whose Incarnation is the common work of the whole Trinity, conceived from Mary ever Virgin with the cooperation of the Holy Spirit, made true man, composed of a rational soul and a human body, one Person in two natures, showed the way of life more clearly. Though immortal and impassible according to his divinity, he, the very same, became passible and mortal according to his humanity. He also suffered and died on the wood of the Cross for the salvation of the human race; he descended into hell, rose again from the dead, and ascended into heaven; but he descended in the soul, rose again in the body, and ascended equally in both. He shall come at the end of time to judge the living and the dead and to render to each one according to his works, to the reprobate as well as to the elect. All of them will rise again with their own bodies which they now bear to receive according to their works, whether these have been good or evil, the ones perpetual punishment with the devil and the others everlasting glory with Christ.

There is indeed one universal Church of the faithful outside of which no one at all is saved¹ and in which the ¹ 802 Cyprian of Carthage, letter (73) to Jubaianus, chap. 21 (CSEL 3/II:795_{3f}; PL 3:1169A): "Salus extra Ecclesiam non est" (There is no salvation outside the Church; cf. *3866–3873).

Remanentes in saeculo et sua possidentes, eleemosynas et cetera beneficia ex rebus suis agentes, praecepta Domini servantes salvari fatemur et credimus. Decimas, primitias et oblationes ex praecepto Domini credimus clericis persolvendas.

We confess and believe that those who remain in this world and hold their own possessions will be saved in giving alms and other benefits from what they possess and in observing the commandments of the Lord. We believe that tithes, first fruits, and oblations are to be offered to the clergy, according to the precept of the Lord.

798: Letter In quadam nostra to Bishop Ugo of Ferrara, March 5, 1209

Ed.: PL 216:16B–17D / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. III, tit. 41, c. 8 (Frdb 2:640f.) —Reg.: PoR 3684.

The Water in Wine for the Mass

In quadam Nostra decretali epistola [*784] asseris te legisse, illud fuisse nefarium opinari, quod quidam dicere praesumpserunt, in sacramento videlicet Eucharistiae aquam in phlegma converti; nam de latere Christi non aquam, sed humorem aquaticum mentiuntur existiisse. Licet autem hoc magnos et authenticos viros sensisse recenseas, quorum opinionem dictis et scriptis hactenus es secutus, ex quo tamen Nos in contrarium sentimus, Nostrae compelleris sententiae consentire. . . .

Nam si non fuisset aqua, sed phlegma, quod de latere Salvatoris exivit, ille, qui vidit et testimonium veritati perhibuit [cf. Io 19:35], profecto non “aquam”, sed “phlegma”, dixisset. . . .

Restat igitur, ut qualiscumque fuerit illa aqua, sive naturalis sive miraculosa, sive de novo divina virtute creata sive de componentibus ex parte aliqua resoluta procul dubio vera fuit.

You say that you read in one of Our decretal letters [*784] that it was impious to think what certain ones have dared to say, namely, that in the sacrament of the Eucharist the water is changed into phlegm; for they falsely assert that it was not water that came forth from the side of Christ but some watery liquid. But even if you recall that important and reliable men have thought this, whose opinion you have followed up until now in speech and in writing, nevertheless, because We have judged to the contrary, you are compelled to give assent to Our opinion. . . .

For if it was not water but phlegm that flowed from the side of the Savior, then the one who saw and gave testimony to the truth [cf. Jn 19:35] would certainly have said, not water, but phlegm. . . .

It remains, therefore, that whatever type this water was, whether natural or miraculous, whether newly created by divine power or derived from the components of some parts, beyond any doubt, it was true water.

799: Letter Licet apud to Bishop Henry of Strasbourg, January 9, 1212

Innocent III condemned duels and trials by ordeal in several other letters; cf. the two letters to the archbishop of Besançon of November 13, 1202, and March 22, 1208 (PL 214:1106A–C; 215:1372C; PoR 1759; 3342), the letter to a judge in Torres (Sardinia) of July 3, 1204 (PL 215:394C; PoR 2268), and the letter to a canon of Bourges in 1208 (PL 215:1381CD; PoR 3585), as well as the Fourth Lateran Council, chap. 18 (MaC 22:1007AB).

Ed.: PL 216:502CD (= letter XIV, 138); 217:214CD (= Supplement, letter 166). —Reg.: A. Hessel and M. Krebs, Regesten der Bischöfe von Strassburg 2 (Innsbruck, 1928), no. 785; PoR 4358.

Trials by Ordeal

Licet apud iudices saeculares vulgaria exercentur iudicia, ut aquae frigidae vel ferri candentis sive duelli, huiusmodi tamen iudicia Ecclesia non admisit, cum scriptum sit in lege divina: “Non tentabis Dominum Deum tuum” [Dt 6:16; Mt 4:7].

Although among secular judges common trials are used, such as those of cold water or hot iron or duels, the Church does not admit these kinds of trials, since it is written in the divine law: “You shall not put the LORD your God to the test” [Deut 6:16; Mt 4:7].

Fourth LATERAN Council (Twelfth Ecumenical): November 11–30, 1215

In three solemn sessions (November 11, 20, and 30), the council approved resolutions for recovery of the Holy Land, for reformation of the Church, and against the heresies named below.

800–802: Chapter 1. The Catholic Faith

Ed.: MaC 22:981f. / HaC 7:15–17 / BarAE, at year 1215, nos. 8–10 / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. I, tit. 1, c. 1 (Frdb 2:5f.) / COeD, 3rd ed., 230f.

Eucharistiae facere, haeticus est et perditionis Core et suorum complicitum est particeps atque consors [Nm 16], et ab omni sancta Romana Ecclesia segregandus.

Peccatoribus vere paenitentibus veniam concedi a Deo credimus et eis libentissime communicamus.

Unctionem infirmorum cum oleo consecrato veneramur.

Coniugia carnalia esse contrahenda, secundum Apostolum [cf. 1 Cor 7] non negamus, ordinarie vero contracta disiungere omnino prohibemus. Hominem quoque cum sua coniuge salvari credimus et fatemur, nec etiam secunda et ulteriora matrimonia condemnamus.

795 Carnium perceptionem minime culpamus. Non condemnamus iuramentum, imo credimus puro corde, quod cum veritate et iudicio et iustitia licitum sit iurare. [Additum a. 1210: De potestate saeculari asserimus, quod sine peccato mortali potest iudicium sanguinis exercere, dummodo ad inferendam vindictam non odio, sed iudicio, non incaute, sed consulte procedat.]

796 Praedicationem necessariam valde et laudabilem esse credimus, tamen ex auctoritate vel licentia Summi Pontificis vel praelatorum permissione illam credimus exercendam. In omnibus vero locis, ubi manifesti haeretici manent et Deum et fidem sanctae Romanae Ecclesiae abdicant et blasphemant, credimus, quod disputando et exhortando modis omnibus secundum Deum debeamus illos confundere et eis verbo Dominico, veluti Christi et Ecclesiae adversariis, fronte usque ad mortem libera contraire.

Ordines vero ecclesiasticos et omne quod in sancta Romana Ecclesia sancitum legitur aut canitur, humiliter collaudamus et fideliter veneramur.

797 Diabolum non per condicionem, sed per arbitrium malum factum esse credimus.

Corde credimus et ore confitemur huius carnis quam gestamus, et non alterius, resurrectionem.

Iudicium quoque per Iesum Christum futurum et singulos pro iis quae in hac carne gesserunt, recepturos vel poenas vel praemia, firmiter credimus et affirmamus.

Eleemosynas sacrificium ceteraque beneficia fidelibus posse prodesse defunctis credimus.

so we firmly believe and declare that whosoever without the preceding episcopal ordination, as we said above, believes and contends that he can offer the sacrifice of the Eucharist is a heretic and is a participant and companion of the perdition of Korah and his followers [Num 16] and he must be segregated from the entire holy Roman Church.

To sinners truly penitent, we believe that forgiveness is granted by God, and with them we communicate most gladly.

We venerate the anointing of the sick with the consecrated oil.

We do not deny that marriage can be contracted following what is said by the apostle [cf. 1 Cor 7]; but we strictly forbid that those rightly contracted be broken. We believe and confess that a man can be saved even if he has a wife, and we do not condemn a second marriage or even subsequent marriages.

We do not in any way condemn the eating of meat. Nor do we condemn (the taking of) an oath; on the contrary, we believe with a pure heart that it is permitted to swear (an oath) according to truth, judgment, and justice. [In the year 1210, the following was added: With regard to the secular power, we affirm that it can exercise a judgment of blood without mortal sin provided that in carrying out the punishment it proceeds, not out of hatred, but judiciously, not in a precipitous manner, but with caution.]

We believe that preaching is exceedingly necessary and praiseworthy, yet that it must be exercised by the authority or license of the supreme pontiff or by the permission of prelates. But in all places where manifest heretics remain and renounce and blaspheme God and the faith of the holy Roman Church, we believe that, by disputing and exhorting in all ways according to God, we should confound them and, even unto death, oppose them openly with the word of God as adversaries of Christ and the Church.

But ecclesiastical orders and everything that in the holy Roman Church is read or sung as holy we humbly praise and faithfully venerate.

We believe that the devil became evil, not by his constitution, but by his free choice.

In our hearts we believe and with our lips we confess the resurrection of this flesh that we bear and not that of another.

We firmly believe and affirm that there will also be a judgment by Jesus Christ and that individuals will receive either punishments or rewards, according to what they did in this flesh.

We believe that alms, sacrifices, and other acts of kindness can benefit the deceased faithful.

carnis suae passione, mortuus vera corporis sui morte, et resurrexit vera carnis suae resurrectione et vera animae ad corpus resumptione; in qua postquam manducavit et bibit, ascendit in caelum, sedet ad dexteram Patris et in eadem venturus est iudicare vivos et mortuos.

Corde credimus et ore confitemur unam Ecclesiam non haereticorum, sed sanctam Romanam catholicam, apostolicam, extra quam neminem salvari credimus.

Sacramenta quoque, quae in ea celebrantur, inaeestimabili atque invisibili virtute Spiritus Sancti cooperante, licet a peccatore sacerdote ministrentur, dum Ecclesia eum recipit, in nullo reprobamus, nec ecclesiasticis officiis vel benedictionibus ab eo celebratis detrahimus, sed benevolo animo tamquam a iustissimo amplectimur, quia non nocet malitia episcopi vel presbyteri neque ad baptismum infantis neque ad Eucharistiam consecrandam nec ad cetera ecclesiastica officia subditis celebrata.

Approbamus ergo baptismum infantum, qui si defuncti fuerint post baptismum, antequam peccata committant, fatemur eos salvari et credimus; et in baptisate omnia peccata, tam illud originale peccatum contractum quam illa, quae voluntarie commissa sunt, dimitti credimus.

Confirmationem ab episcopo factam, id est impositionem manuum, sanctam et venerande esse accipiendam censemus.

Sacrificium, id est panem et vinum, post consecrationem esse verum corpus et verum sanguinem Domini nostri Iesu Christi, firmiter et indubitanter corde puro credimus et simpliciter verbis fidelibus affirmamus, in quo nihil a bono maius nec a malo minus perfici credimus sacerdote; quia non in merito consecrantis, sed in verbo efficitur Creatoris et in virtute Spiritus Sancti. Unde firmiter credimus et confitemur, quod quantumcumque quilibet honestus, religiosus, sanctus et prudens sit, non potest nec debet Eucharistiam consecrare nec altaris Sacrificium conficere, nisi sit presbyter, a visibili et tangibili episcopo regulariter ordinatus. Ad quod officium tria sunt, ut credimus, necessaria: scilicet certa persona, id est presbyter ab episcopo, ut praediximus, ad illud proprie officium constitutus, et illa sollemnia verba, quae a sanctis Patribus in canone sunt expressa, et fidelis intentio proferentis; ideoque firmiter credimus et fatemur, quod quicumque sine praecedenti ordinatione episcopali, ut praediximus, credit et contendit, se posse sacrificium birth in the flesh. He ate and drank, slept and rested when he was tired from walking. He suffered a true passion in the flesh, died his own true bodily death, rose again by a true resurrection of his flesh and the true resumption of his body by his soul. He ate and drank in (his risen flesh), and then ascended to heaven and is seated at the right hand of the Father. (In the same flesh) he will come to judge the living and the dead.

We believe with our heart and confess with our tongue 792 the one Church, not of heretics, but the holy Roman, catholic, and apostolic (Church) outside which we believe that no one is saved.

Furthermore, we do not reject the sacraments that 793 are conferred in the Church, in cooperation with the inestimable and invisible power of the Holy Spirit, even though these sacraments be administered by a sinful priest, as long as he is recognized by the Church. And we do not disparage ecclesiastical duties and blessings performed by such a one; but we accept them with benevolence, as we would those performed by the most just man. For the evil life of a bishop or a priest has no harmful effect on either the baptism of an infant or the consecration of the Eucharist or other ecclesiastical duties performed for the faithful.

We therefore approve the baptism of infants. We 794 profess and believe that they are saved if they die after baptism before having committed any sins. And we believe that all sins are remitted in baptism, the original sin that has been contracted as well as those committed voluntarily.

We decree that confirmation performed by a bishop, that is, by the imposition of hands, is holy and must be received reverently.

We firmly believe without any doubt and with a pure heart, and we affirm simply in faithful words, that the sacrifice, namely, of bread and wine, is, after the consecration, the true Body and Blood of our Lord Jesus Christ and that nothing more is accomplished by a good priest and nothing less by a bad priest because this is not realized by the merits of the one who consecrates but by the word of the Creator and the power of the Holy Spirit. For this reason, we firmly believe and confess that no person, no matter how honest, religious, holy, and prudent he may be, can or should consecrate the Eucharist or carry out the Sacrifice of the Altar unless he is a priest ordained according to the rules by a visible and tangible bishop. We believe three things are necessary for this office: namely, a specific person, that is, a priest, who, as we said above, has been properly constituted for this office by a bishop; those solemn words that are expressed by the Fathers in the canon; and the faithful intention of the one who pronounces (these words). And offendere, qui sic fraudulentè illud praesumpserit simulare; cum ille culpam vitando, dum facit, in solius misericordis Dei manum incidat, iste vero culpam faciendo, dum vitat, non solum Deo, cui non veretur illudere, sed et populo, quem decipit, se adstringat.

approached it irreverently, nevertheless, the one who presumes to simulate (the Mass) in such a fraudulent manner seems, without doubt, to offend in a more grievous manner; for the first, in seeking to avoid a sin while he commits one, falls by himself into the hands of the merciful God; but the second, who commits a sin while he avoids one, makes himself accountable not only to God, whom he does not fear to mock, but also to the people whom he deceives.

790–797: Letter Eius exemplo to the Archbishop of Tarragona, December 18, 1208

This letter contains the profession of faith of Durandus of Osca or Huesca (Aragon), a Waldensian who returned to the Catholic Church in 1207. The formula is repeated in a letter of May 12, 1210, to the archbishop of Tarragona and his suffragan bishops (PL 216:274D) and, in a slightly abbreviated form, in a letter of June 14, 1210 (PL 216:289C–293A; PoR 4014), in which the conversion of Bernhard Prim from the Waldensians is announced. Today, based on the research of A. Dondaine and J. Leclercq, it is certain that Waldes himself, at a synod in Lyon between 1179 and 1181, swore by a similar oath in the presence of the Cardinal Legate Henry, Bishop of Albano; this formula of the profession of faith (ed. by A. Dondaine in ArchFrPr 16 [1946]: 231f. / K.-V. Selge, Der ersten Waldenser 2 [Berlin, 1967], 3–6) was doubtless the model for those that followed.

Ed.: PL 215:1510C–1513A (= letter XI, 196). —Reg.: PoR 3571.

Profession of Faith Prescribed for the Waldensians

790 Pateat omnibus fidelibus, quod ego Durandus de Osca ... et omnes fratres nostri corde credimus, fide intelligimus, ore confitemur et simplicibus verbis affirmamus:

Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum tres personas esse, unum Deum totamque Trinitatem coessentialem et consubstantialem et coaeternalem et omnipotentem, et singulas quasque in Trinitate personas plenum Deum, sicut in “Credo in Deum” [Symbolum Apostolicum *30], in “Credo in unum Deum” [Symbolum Constantinopolitanum *150] et in “Quicumque vult” [Symbolum pseudo-Athanasianum *75s] continetur.

Patrem quoque et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum unum Deum, de quo nobis sermo, esse creatorem, factorem, gubernatorem et dispositorem omnium corporalium et spiritualium, visibilium et invisibilium, corde credimus et ore confitemur.

Novi et Veteris Testamenti unum eundemque auctorem credimus esse Deum, qui in Trinitate, ut dictum est, permanens, de nihilo cuncta creavit; Iohannemque Baptistam ab eo missum esse sanctum et iustum et in utero matris suae Spiritu Sancto repletum.

791 Incarnationem divinitatis non in Patre neque in Spiritu Sancto factam, sed in Filio tantum, corde credimus et ore confitemur; ut qui erat in divinitate Dei Patris Filius, Deus verus ex Patre, esset in humanitate hominis filius, homo verus ex matre, veram carnem habens ex visceribus matris et animam humanam rationabilem, simul utriusque naturae, id est Deus et homo, una persona, unus Filius, unus Christus, unus Deus cum Patre et Spiritu Sancto, omnium auctor et rector, natus ex virgine Maria vera carnis nativitate; manducavit et bibit, dormivit et fatigatus ex itinere quievit, passus est vera

Let it be known to all the faithful that I, Durandus of Osca, ... and all our brothers believe with our heart, understand by faith, confess with our tongue, and affirm with simple words:

The Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit are three Persons, one God, and the entire Trinity is of the same essence, the same substance, co-eternal and omnipotent, and each single Person of the Trinity is fully God, as is contained in the “I believe in God” [Apostles’ Creed, *30], in the “I believe in one God” [Constantinopolitan Creed, *150], and in the “Whoever wishes” [Pseudo-Athanasian Creed, *75f.].

We believe with our heart and confess with our tongue that Father, Son, and Holy Spirit are one God, concerning whom we are speaking, creator, maker, ruler, and provider of all things, corporeal and spiritual, visible and invisible.

We believe that one and the same God is author of the Old and the New Testaments, who existing in the Trinity, as it is said, created all things from nothing; and that John the Baptist, sent by him, was holy and just and in the womb of his mother (was) filled with the Holy Spirit.

We heartily believe and we proclaim that the Incarnation of the Godhead has taken place, not in the Father or the Holy Spirit, but only in the Son; so that he who in his divinity was the Son of God the Father, true God from the Father, became in his humanity son of man, true man from a mother, with a true flesh taken from the womb of his mother and a rational human soul. (Subsisting) at once in two natures, as God and as man, he is one Person, one Son, one Christ; one God with the Father and the Holy Spirit and with them creator and ruler of all, he was born of the Virgin Mary by a true omnes gentes in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus sancti” [Mc 16:15; Mt 28:19], eademque dicat de elemento: “Nisi quis renatus fuerit ex aqua et Spiritu sancto, non intrabit in regnum caelorum” [Jo 3:5], dubitare non debes, illos veram non habere baptismum, in quibus non solum utrumque praedictorum, sed eorum alterum est omissum.

word: “Go into the whole world, baptizing all the nations in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit” [cf. Mk 16:15; Mt 28:19]; and, with respect to the element, the same one says: “Unless one has been born again of water and the Holy Spirit, he will not enter into the kingdom of heaven” [Jn 3:5], you should not doubt that they lack a true baptism not only when both of the above-mentioned (things) are omitted but also when one of them is omitted.

788: Letter Debitum officii pontificalis to Bishop Berthold (or Betrand) of Metz, August 28, 1206

Ed.: PL 215:986A (= letter IX, 159) / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. III, tit. 42, c. 4 (Frdb 2:646f.). —Reg.: PoR 2875.

The Minister of Baptism and the Baptism of Desire

Sane per tuas Nobis litteras intimasti, quod quidam Iudaeus in mortis articulo constitutus, cum inter Iudaeos tantum existeret, in aquam seipsum immersit dicendo: “Ego baptizo me in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti.” Nunc autem quaeris, utrum idem Iudaeus in devotione christianae fidei perseverans debeat baptizari.

By your letter, you prudently informed me that a certain Jew, when he was at the point of death and because he lived only among Jews, immersed himself in water while saying: “I baptize myself in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit.” Now you ask whether the same Jew, who perseveres in the Christian faith, must be rebaptized. 788

Nos autem fraternitati tuae taliter respondemus, quod, cum inter baptizantem et baptizatum debeat esse discretio, sicut ex verbis Domini colligitur evidenter, dicentis Apostolis: “Baptizate omnes gentes in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus sancti” [Mt 28:19], memoratus Iudaeus est denuo ab alio baptizandus, ut ostendatur, quod alius est, qui baptizatur, et alius, qui baptizat. . . .

We respond to your Fraternity, however, in this way: since there should be a distinction between the one who baptizes and the one who is baptized, as is clearly discerned from the words of the Lord, when he says to the apostles: “Baptize all nations in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit” [Mt 28:19], the Jew in question must be baptized again by another, in order to show that one person is the one who is baptized, and another is the one who baptizes. . . .

Quamvis, si talis continuo decessisset, ad patriam protinus evolasset propter sacramenti fidem, etsi non propter fidei sacramentum.

If, however, such a person had died immediately, he would have entered into his heavenly home without delay because of his faith in the sacrament, even if not because of the sacrament of faith.

789: Letter De homine qui to the Leaders of the Roman Fraternity, September 22, 1208

Ed.: PL 215:1463C–1464A (=letter XI, 146) / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. III, tit. 41, c. 7 (Frdb 2:640). —Reg.: PoR 3503.

Simulated Celebration of the Mass

Quaesivistis enim a Nobis, quid de incauto presbytero videatur, qui cum se sciat in mortali crimine constitutum, missarum sollemnia, quae non potest propter necessitatem quamlibet intermittere, propter sui facinoris conscientiam dubitat celebrare . . . peractisque ceteris circumstantiis missam celebrare se fingit, et suppressis verbis, quibus conficitur corpus Christi, panem et vinum tantummodo pure sumit. . . .

For you have asked Us what We think about the careless priest who, when he knows that he is in mortal sin, hesitates because of the consciousness of his guilt to celebrate the solemnity of the Mass, which he, however, cannot omit on account of necessity . . . and, when the other details have been accomplished, pretends to celebrate Mass; and after suppressing the words by which the body of Christ is effected, he only consumes mere bread and wine. . . . 789

Cum ergo falsa sint abicienda remedia, quae veris sunt periculis graviora: licet is, qui pro sui criminis conscientia reputat se indignum, ab huiusmodi sacramento reverenter debeat abstinere ac ideo peccet graviter, si se ingerat irreverenter ad illud, gravius tamen procul dubio videtur

Since, therefore, false remedies that are more serious than true dangers must be rejected: although the one who judges himself unworthy because of an awareness of his guilt should reverently abstain from such a sacrament, and, for this reason, he would sin grievously if he Illud autem est nefarium opinari, quod quidam dicere praesumpserunt, aquam videlicet in phlegma converti....

Verum inter opiniones praedictas illa probabilior iudicatur, quae asserit, aquam cum vino in sanguinem transmutari [cf. *798].

It is impious, however, to think what some have presumed to say, namely, that water is changed into phlegm....

But among the opinions mentioned above, the one judged the more probable is that which affirms that the water is changed into blood with the wine [cf. *798].

785: Letter Cum venisset to Archbishop Basil of Tarnovo (Bulgaria), February 25, 1204

The prohibition of priests from administering confirmation is merely that of ecclesiastical law, as is plainly seen in the repeated practice of permitting its administration by simple priests, using chrism, however, blessed by the bishop; cf. *1318, 2588. A similar prohibition for priests of the Latin Rite (!) is found in Innocent III's letter to his representative in Constantinople Quanto de benignitate of November 16, 1199 (PL 214:772BC; PoR, 868).

Ed.: PL 215:285CD (= letter VII, 3); Gregory IX, Decretales, l. I, tit. 15, c. 1, § 7 (Frdb 2:133). —Reg.: PoR 2138.

The Minister of Confirmation

785 Per frontis chrismationem manus imposito designatur, quae alio nomine dicitur confirmatio, quia per eam Spiritus Sanctus ad augmentum datur et robur. Unde cum ceteras unctiones simplex sacerdos vel presbyter valeat exhibere, hanc non nisi summus sacerdos, id est episcopus, debet conferre, quia de solis Apostolis legitur, quorum vicarii sunt episcopi, quod per manus impositionem Spiritum Sanctum dabant [cf. Act 8:14–25].

The imposition of the hands is designated by the anointing of the forehead that by another name is called confirmation, because through it the Holy Spirit is given for an increase (of grace) and strength. Therefore, although a simple priest or presbyter is able to give other anointings, this one, only the highest priest, that is the bishop, should confer, because only in reference to the apostles, whose vicars the bishops are, do we read that they bestowed the Holy Spirit by the imposition of the hands [cf. Acts 8:14–25].

786: Letter Ex parte tua to Archbishop Andrew of Lund, January 12, 1206

Ed.: PL 215:774A / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. III, tit. 32, c. 14 (Frdb 2:584). —Reg.: PoR 2651.

The Dissolution of a Ratified Marriage by the Profession of Vows

786 Nos nolentes a praedecessorum Nostrorum vestigiis in hoc articulo subito declinare, qui respondere consulti, antequam matrimonium sit per carnalem copulam consummatum, licere alteri coniugum, reliquo etiam inconsulto, ad religionem transire, ita quod reliquus extunc legitime poterit alteri copulari: hoc ipsum tibi consulimus observandum.

On this matter, We do not wish to deviate suddenly from the footsteps of Our predecessors, who, having been consulted, responded that before marriage is consummated by sexual union, it is permitted for one of the parties, even without consulting the other, to enter into religious life, so that the remaining party could subsequently marry another legitimately: We advise you to observe the same thing.

787: Letter Non ut apponeres to Archbishop Thorias of Trondheim (Norway), March 1, 1206

Ed.: PL 215:813A (= letter IX, 5) / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. III, tit. 42, c. 5 (Frdb 2:647). —Reg.: PoR 2696.

Baptismal Matter

787 Postulasti, utrum parvuli sint pro Christianis habendi, quos, in articulo mortis constitutos, propter aquae penuriam et absentiam sacerdotis, aliquorum simplicitas in caput ac pectus ac inter scapulas pro baptismo salivae conspersione linivit. Respondemus, quod cum in baptismo duo semper, videlicet “verbum et elementum”,¹ necessario requirantur, iuxta quod de verbo Veritas ait: “Euntes in mundum universum, baptizate

You asked whether children should be considered Christians who, being in danger of death (and) due to the lack of water and the absence of a priest, were by the simplicity of some smeared with a sprinkling of saliva on the head and the chest and between the shoulders as a way of baptism. We answer that, because two things are always required for baptism by necessity, namely, “the word and the element”,¹ the Truth says with respect to the *787 ¹ Augustine, In evangelium Iohannis, tract. 80, no. 3 (R. Willems: CpChL 36 [1954]: 529 / PL 35:1840).

Sane multa tam de verbis quam de factis dominicis invenimus ab Evangelistis ommissa, quae Apostoli vel supplevisse verbo vel facto expressisse leguntur. . . .

Ex eo autem verbo, de quo movit tua fraternitas quaestionem, videlicet “mysterium fidei”, munimentum erroris quidam trahere putaverunt, dicentes in sacramento altaris non esse corporis Christi et sanguinis veritatem, sed imaginem tantum, et speciem et figuram, pro eo, quod Scriptura interdum commemorat, id, quod in altari suscipitur, esse sacramentum et mysterium et exemplum. Sed tales ex eo laqueum erroris incurunt, quod nec auctoritates Scripturae convenienter intelligunt, nec sacramenta Dei suscipiunt reverenter, Scripturas et virtutem Dei pariter nescientes [cf. Mt 22:29]. . . .

Dicitur tamen “mysterium fidei”, quoniam et aliud ibi creditur, quam cernatur, et aliud cernitur, quam credatur. Cernitur enim species panis et vini, et creditur veritas carnis et sanguinis Christi, ac virtus unitatis et caritatis. . . .

The Elements of the Eucharist

Distinguendum est tamen subtiliter inter tria, quae sunt in hoc sacramento discreta, videlicet formam visibilem, veritatem corporis et virtutem spiritualem. Forma est panis et vini, veritas carnis et sanguinis, virtus unitatis et caritatis. Primum est ‘sacramentum et non res’. Secundum est ‘sacramentum et res’. Tertium est ‘res et non sacramentum’. Sed primum est sacramentum geminae rei. Secundum autem est sacramentum unius, et alterius res existit. Tertium vero est res gemini sacramenti. Credimus igitur, quod formam verborum, sicut in canone reperitur, et a Christo Apostoli, et ab ipsis eorum acceperint successores. . . .

Water in Wine for the Mass

Quaesivisti etiam, utrum aqua cum vino in sanguinem convertatur. Super hoc autem opiniones apud scholasticos variantur. Aliquibus enim videtur, quod, cum de latere Christi duo praecipua fluxerint sacramenta, redemptionis in sanguine ac regenerationis in aqua, in illa duo vinum et aqua, quae commiscetur in calice, divina virtute mutantur. . . . Alii vero tenent, quod aqua cum vino transsubstantiatur in sanguinem, cum in vinum transeat mixta vino. . . . Praeterea potest dici, quod aqua non transit in sanguinem, sed remanet prioris vini accidentibus circumfusa. . . .

Surely there are many words and deeds of the Lord that have been omitted in the Gospels; of these we read that the apostles have supplemented them by their words and expressed them in their actions. . . .

But, in the words that are the object of your inquiry, Brother, namely, the words “Mystery of faith”, some have thought to find support for their error; they say that in the sacrament of the altar it is not the reality of the Body and Blood of Christ that is (there) but only an image, an appearance, a symbol, since Scripture sometimes mentions that what is received at the altar is sacrament, mystery, figure. These people fall into such error because they neither understand correctly the testimony of the Scriptures nor receive respectfully the divine sacraments, ignorant of both the Scriptures and the power of God [cf. Mt 22:29]. . . .

Yet, the expression “Mystery of faith” is used, because here what is believed differs from what is seen, and what is seen differs from what is believed. For what is seen is the appearance of bread and wine, and what is believed is the reality of the flesh and blood of Christ and the power of unity and love. . . .

We must, however, distinguish accurately between 783 three (elements) that in this sacrament are distinct; namely, the visible form, the reality of the body, and the spiritual power. The form is of bread and wine; the reality is the flesh and blood; the power is for unity and charity. The first is “sacrament and not reality”; the second is “sacrament and reality”; the third is “reality and not sacrament”. But, the first is the sacrament of a twofold reality; the second is the sacrament of one (element) and the reality of the other; the third is the reality of a twofold sacrament. Therefore, we believe that the apostles have received from Christ the words of the formula found in the canon, and their successors have received them from the apostles. . . .

You have asked (also) whether the water with the wine is changed into the blood. Regarding this, however, 784 opinions among the scholastics vary. For it seems to some that, since from the side of Christ two special sacraments flowed—of the redemption in the blood and of regeneration in the water—into those two the wine and water, which are mixed in the chalice, are changed by divine power. . . . But others hold that the water with the wine is transubstantiated into the blood; when mixed with the wine, it passes over into the wine. . . . Furthermore, it can be said that water does not change into blood but remains surrounded by the accidents of the original wine. . . .

Dicimus distinguendum, quod peccatum est duplex: originale scilicet et actuale: originale, quod absque consensu contrahitur, et actuale, quod committitur cum consensu. Originale igitur, quod sine consensu contrahitur, sine consensu per vim remittitur sacramenti; actuale vero, quod cum consensu contrahitur, sine consensu minime relaxatur... Poena originalis peccati est carentia visionis Dei, actualis vero poena peccati est gehennae perpetuae cruciatus...

781 Id est religioni christianae contrarium, ut semper invitus et penitus contradicens ad recipiendam et servandam Christianitatem aliquis compellatur. Propter quod inter invitum et invitum, coactum et coactum alii non absurde distinguunt, quod is, qui terroribus atque suppliciis violenter attrahitur, et, ne detrimentum incurrat, baptismi suscipit sacramentum, talis quidem sicut et is, qui fecte ad baptismum accedit, characterem suscipit Christianitatis impressum et ipse tamquam conditionaliter volens, licet absolute non velit, cogendus est ad observantiam fidei christianae...

Ille vero, qui numquam consentit, sed penitus contradicit, nec rem nec characterem suscipit sacramenti, quia plus est expresse contradicere, quam minime consentire: sicut nec ille notam alicuius reatus incurrit, qui contradicens penitus et reclamans thurificare idolis cogitur violenter.

Dormientes autem et amentes, si prius quam amentiam incurrerent aut dormirent, in contradictione persisterent: quia in eis intellegitur contradictionis propositum perdurare, etsi fuerint sic immersi, characterem non suscipiunt sacramenti; secus autem si prius catechumeni exstitissent et habuissent propositum baptizandi; unde tales in necessitatis articulo consuevit Ecclesia baptizare. Tunc ergo characterem sacramentalis imprimi operatio, cum obicem voluntatis contrariae non invenit obsistentem.

782–784: Letter Cum Marthae circa to Archbishop John of Lyon, November 29, 1202

Ed.: PL 214:1119A–1122B (= letter V, 121) / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. III, tit. 41, c. 6 (Frdb 2:637–39). —Reg.: PoR 1779.

The Sacramental Form of the Eucharist

782 Quaesivisti siquidem, quis formae verborum, quam ipse Christus expressit, cum in corpus et sanguinem suum panem transsubstantiavit et vinum, illud in canone Missae, quo Ecclesia utitur generalis, adiecerit, quod nullus Evangelistarum legitur expressisse... In canone Missae sermo iste videlicet “mysterium fidei” verbis ipsis interpositus invenitur...

respect to their use until (the children) attain the state of adulthood...

We say that two kinds of sin must be distinguished, original and actual: original, which is contracted without consent, and actual, which is committed with consent. Thus original sin, which is contracted without consent is remitted without consent by the power of the sacrament (of baptism); but actual sin, which is committed with consent, is by no means remitted without consent... The punishment of original sin is the deprivation of the vision of God, but the punishment of actual sin is the torment of eternal hell...

It is contrary to the Christian religion to force others into accepting and practicing Christianity if they are always unwilling and totally opposed. Wherefore, some, not without reason, distinguish between unwilling and unwilling, forced and forced. For whoever are violently drawn by fear of punishments and receive the sacrament of baptism to avoid harm to themselves, such persons just like those who come to baptism in bad faith, receive the imprint of the Christian character; and, since they gave their consent conditionally though not absolutely, they are to be held to the observance of the Christian faith...

But the one who never consents and is absolutely unwilling receives neither the reality nor the character of the sacrament because express dissent is something more than not consenting at all: just as one does not incur the mark of any culpability who, totally contradicting and protesting, is violently forced to offer incense to idols.

The sleeping and the insane, however, if they persisted in their opposition before they went insane or fell asleep: since the decision to oppose is known to endure in them, even if they are baptized in such a state, they do not receive the character of the sacrament; it is something different, however, if previously they were catechumens and had the intention to be baptized; this is why the Church has the custom of baptizing such ones in case of necessity. Then, accordingly, the act of the sacrament impresses the character, since it does not encounter the obstacle of an opposing will resisting it.

You have asked who has added to the words of the formula used by Christ himself when he transubstantiated the bread and wine into his Body and Blood the words that are found in the canon of the Mass generally used by the Church but that none of the evangelists has recorded... Namely, in the canon of the Mass, we find the words “Mystery of faith” inserted into the words of Christ...

Qui autem secundum ritum suum legitimam repudiavit uxorem, cum tale repudium Veritas in Evangelio reprobaverit, numquam ea vivente licite poterit aliam, etiam ad fidem Christi conversus, habere, nisi post conversionem ipsius illa renuat cohabitare cum ipso, aut etiamsi consentiat, non tamen absque contumelia creatoris, vel ut eum pertrahat ad mortale peccatum, in quo casu restitutionem petenti, quamvis de iniusta spoliatione constaret, restitutio negaretur: quia secundum Apostolum frater aut soror non est in huiusmodi subiectus servituti [cf. 1 Cor 7:15].

Quod si conversum ad fidem et illa conversa sequatur, antequam propter causas praedictas legitimam ille ducat uxorem, eam recipere compelletur. Quamvis quoque secundum evangelicam veritatem, qui duxerit dimissam, moechatur [Mt 19:9]: non tamen dimissor poterit obicere fornicationem dimissae, pro eo, quod nupsit alii post repudium, nisi alias fuerit fornicata.

Moreover, he who according to his rite puts away a lawful wife, since Truth in the Gospel has condemned such a repudiation, never while she lives, even after being converted to the faith of Christ, can he have another wife, unless after his conversion she refuses to live with him, or even though she does consent, it is nevertheless not without insulting the Creator or inducing {her husband} to mortal sin. In this case, the one seeking restitution of rights, even if unjust deprivation was established, should be denied restitution: for, according to the apostle, the brother or sister is not subject to any obligation in such a case [cf. 1 Cor 7:15].

But if her conversion follows his conversion to the faith before (for the above-mentioned reasons) he takes a legitimate wife, he would be compelled to receive her back again. Although, according to the truth of the Gospel, he who marries a woman put aside commits adultery [Mt 19:9]; nevertheless, the one who is dismissing will not be able to reproach the one dismissed with fornication for the reason that, after the repudiation, she married another (unless she otherwise committed fornication).

780–781: Letter Maiores Ecclesiae causas to Archbishop Humbert of Arles, late 1201

Ed.: Gregory IX, Decretales, l. III, tit. 42, c. 3 (Frdb 2:644–46). —Reg.: PoR 1479.

The Effect of Baptism, Especially Its Character

... Asserunt enim, parvulis inutiliter baptisma conferri... Respondemus, quod baptisma circumcisioni successit... Unde, sicut anima circumcisi de populo suo non peribat [cf. Gn 17:14], sic, qui ex aqua fuerit et Spiritu sancto renatus, regni caelorum introitum obtinebit [cf. Io 3:5]...

Etsi originalis culpa remittebatur per circumcisionis mysterium, et damnationis periculum vitabatur, non tamen perveniebatur ad regnum caelorum, quod usque ad mortem Christi fuit omnibus obseratum; sed per sacramentum baptismi Christi sanguine rubricati culpa remittitur, et ad regnum caelorum etiam pervenitur, cuius ianuam Christi sanguis fidelibus suis misericorditer reseravit. Absit enim, ut universi parvuli pereant, quorum quotidie tanta multitudo moritur, quin et ipsius misericors Deus, qui neminem vult perire, aliquod remedium procuraverit ad salutem...

Quod oppositum inducunt, fidem aut caritatem aliasque virtutes parvulis, utpote non consentientibus, non infundi, a plerisque non conceditur absolute... aliis asserentibus, per virtutem baptismi parvulis quidem culpam remitti, sed gratiam non confieri; nonnullis vero dicentibus, et dimitti peccatum, et virtutes infundi, habentibus illas quoad habitum [cf. *904], non quoad usum, donec perveniant ad aetatem adultam...

... For they affirm that baptism is uselessly conferred on children... We reply that baptism has succeeded circumcision... Therefore, just as the soul of the one circumcised was not cut off from his people [cf. Gen 17:14], it follows that “the one who has been reborn from water and the Holy Spirit will obtain entrance into the kingdom of heaven” [cf. Jn 3:5]...

Even though original sin was remitted by the mystery of circumcision and the danger of damnation avoided, nevertheless, one could not enter into the kingdom of heaven, which remained closed to all until the death of Christ; but through the sacrament of baptism, made red by the blood of Christ, guilt is remitted and one also reaches the kingdom of heaven, whose gate the blood of Christ mercifully opened to his people. Indeed, it is unthinkable that all the little children, of whom so great a multitude dies every day, should perish without the merciful God, who wishes no one to perish, having provided them also with some means of salvation...

What the adversaries allege, namely, that neither faith nor charity nor the other virtues are infused into little babies, since they do not give their consent, is not conceded in an absolute sense by most...; others assert that, by the virtue of baptism, guilt indeed is remitted but grace is not conferred; quite a few others, however, say that sin is pardoned and the virtues are infused, but they are possessed as a disposition [cf. *904] and not with

777-779: Letter Gaudemus in Domino to the Bishop of Tiberius, early 1201

Ed.: Gregory IX, Decretales, l. IV, tit. 9, c. 8 (Frdb 2:723f.) / PL 216:1269C-1271A. —Reg.: PoR 1325.

The Marriages of Pagans and the Pauline Privilege

777 Utrum pagani uxores accipientes in secundo vel tertio vel ulteriore gradu sibi coniunctas sic coniuncti debeant post conversionem suam insimul remanere vel ab invicem separari, edoceri per scriptum Apostolicum postulasti.

Super quo fraternitati tuae taliter respondemus, quod, cum sacramentum coniugii apud fideles et infideles existat, quemadmodum ostendit Apostolus dicens: “Si quis frater infidelem habet uxorem, et haec consentit habitare cum eo, non illam dimittat” [cf. 1 Cor 7:12]; et in praemissis gradibus a paganis quoad eos matrimonium licite sit contractum, qui constitutionibus canonicis non arctantur (Quid enim ad nos, secundum Apostolum eundem, “de his, qui foris sunt, iudicare?” [cf. 1 Cor 5:12]): in favorem praesertim christianae religionis et fidei, a cuius perceptione per uxores se deseritantes viri possunt facile revocari, fideles huiusmodi matrimonialiter copulati libere possunt et licite remanere coniuncti, cum per sacramentum baptismi non solvantur coniugia, sed crimina dimittantur.

778 Quia vero pagani circa plures insimul feminas affectum dividunt coniugalem, utrum post conversionem omnes, vel quam ex omnibus retinere valeant, non immerito dubitatur. Verum absonum hoc videtur et inimicum fidei christianae, cum ab initio una costa in unam feminam sit conversa, et Scriptura divina testetur, quod “propter hoc relinquet homo patrem et matrem et adhaerebit uxori suae, et erunt duo in carne una” [Eph 5:31; Gn 2:24; cf. Mt 19:5]; non dixit: “tres vel plures”, sed “duo”; nec dixit: “adhaerebit uxoris”, sed: “uxori”. Nec ulli unquam licuit insimul plures uxores habere, nisi cui fuit divina revelatione concessum, quae mos quandoque, interdum etiam fas censetur, per quam sicut Iacob a mendacio, Israelitae a furto, et Samson ab homicidio, sic et Patriarchae et alii viri iusti, qui plures leguntur simul habuisse uxores, ab adulterio excusantur.

Sane veridica haec sententia probatur etiam de testimonio Veritatis testantis in Evangelio: “Quicumque dimiserit uxorem suam, nisi ob fornicationem, et aliam duxerit, moechatur” [Mt 19:9; cf. Mc 10:11]. Si ergo uxore dimissa duci alia de iure non potest, fortius et ipsa retenta: per quod evidenter apparet, pluralitatem in utroque sexu, cum non ad imparia iudicentur, circa matrimonium reprobandam.

You asked to be instructed, by means of an apostolic writing, whether pagans who take wives in the second, third, or further degree of consanguinity, being thus united, should remain together or be separated after their conversion.

On this matter, We respond in the following way to Your Fraternity: Since the sacrament of marriage exists between believers and unbelievers, as shown by the apostle saying: “If any brother has a wife who is an unbeliever, and she consents to live with him, he should not divorce her” [cf. 1 Cor 7:12]; and (since), with respect to the aforementioned degrees (of consanguinity), marriage is lawfully contracted by pagans, who are not bound by canonical determinations (for what have we to do, the same apostle says, “with judging outsiders?” [cf. 1 Cor 5:12]): in favor, especially, of the Christian religion and faith, from whose reception husbands could easily be dissuaded by wives fearing desertion, believers who are joined by this kind of matrimonial bond can freely and lawfully remain united, since marriages are not dissolved by the sacrament of baptism but sins are forgiven.

But since pagans divide their conjugal affection among many women at the same time, there is just cause to question whether after conversion they should retain some or all of them. But this (practice) seems to be contrary and hostile to the Christian faith, since in the beginning one rib was changed into one woman, and divine Scripture testifies that, “for this reason, a man shall leave his father and mother and cling to his wife, and the two shall become one flesh” [Eph 5:31; Gen 2:24; cf. Mt 19:5]; it does not say “three or more”, but two; nor did it say “he will cling to wives”, but to “the wife”. No one was ever permitted to have several wives at one time unless this was granted to him by divine revelation, as was sometimes considered a custom and occasionally even a duty by means of which, just as Jacob was exonerated from mendacity, the Israelites from theft, and Samson from homicide, so also the patriarchs and other just men, who we read had several wives at once, were excused from adultery.

This opinion is also manifested as certainly true by the witness of the Truth, who testifies in the Gospel: “Whoever dismisses his wife, except in the case of fornication, and marries another, commits adultery” [Mt 19:9; cf. Mk 10:11]. If, therefore, when (one’s) wife has been dismissed, another wife cannot be taken according to the law, all the more reason should (one’s wife) be retained; from which, it is clearly shown that for both sexes—since they are not judged differently—plurality with respect to marriage must be condemned.

orbis commissus, sed singulis singulae provinciae vel Ecclesiae potius deputatae.

... [Simile argumentum allegoricum deducitur ex Mt 14:28–31:] Per hoc quod Petrus super aquas maris incescit, super universos populos se potestatem accepisse monstravit.

Pro eo Dominus se orasse fatetur, inquiring in articulo passionis: “Ego pro te rogavi, Petre, ut non deficiat fides tua. Et tu aliquando conversus, confirma fratres tuos” [Lc 22:32], ex hoc innuens manifeste, quod successores ipsius a fide catholica nullo umquam tempore deviant, sed revocarent magis alios et confirmarent etiam haesitantes, per hoc sic ei confirmandi alios potestatem indulgens, ut aliis necessitatem imponeret obsequendi....

Huic praeterea dictum ... legisti: “Quodcumque ligaveris super terram, erit ligatum et in caelis; et quodcumque solveris super terram, erit solutum et in caelis” [Mt 16:19]. Quod si omnibus etiam Apostolis simul dictum esse reperias, non tamen aliis sine ipso, sed ipsi sine aliis attributam esse cognosces ligandi et solvendi a Domino facultatem, ut quod non alii sine ipso, ipse sine aliis posset ex privilegio sibi collato a Domino et concessa plenitudine potestatis....

[Petrus] vidit caelum apertum et descendens vas quoddam velut linteum magnum quattuor initiis in terram de caelo submitti, quod omnia quadrupedia et serpentina terrae ac caeli volatilia continebat [Act 10:9–12].... Et vox ad eum est facta secundo: “Quod Deus purificavit, tu commune ne dixeris.” Per quod innuitur manifeste, quod Petrus praelatus fuerit populis universis, cum vas illud orbem, et universitas contentorum in eo universas significet tam Iudaeorum quam gentium nationes....

776: Letter Ex parte tua to the Bishop of Modena, 1200

Ed.: Gregory IX, Decretales, l. IV, tit. 4, c. 5 (Frdb 2:681f.) / PL 216:1264AB. —Reg.: PoR 1238.

Form of the Sacrament of Marriage

In matrimoniis de cetero contrahendis illud te volumus observare, ut, postquam inter legitimas personas consensus legitimus intervenerit de praesenti, qui sufficit in talibus iuxta canonicas sanctiones, et, si solus defuerit, cetera, etiam cum ipso coitu celebrata, frustrantur, si personae iunctae legitime cum aliis postea de facto contrahant, quod prius de iure factum fuerat, non poterit irritari.

the whole world was committed to none of them, but rather individual provinces or churches were deputed to each one.

... [A similar allegorical argument is deduced from Mt 14:28–31:] Through the fact that Peter walked upon the waters of the sea, he showed himself to have received power over all peoples.

The Lord confesses at the time of the Passion that he prayed for him: “I have prayed for you, Peter, that your faith may not fail; and when you have turned again, strengthen your brethren” [Lk 22:32], by this manifestly indicating that his successors would never at any time deviate from the Catholic faith, but rather they would recall others and also strengthen the hesitant, thereby conceding him the power of strengthening others in such a way as to impose on others the necessity of obeying....

To him it is said furthermore, ... as you have read: “Whatever you bind on earth shall be bound in heaven, and whatever you loose on earth shall be loosed in heaven” [Mt 16:19]. If you find this said also to all the apostles at once, it is not to the others without him; rather, you will recognize that the power of binding and loosing is given to him without the others by the Lord, so that what the others without him (cannot do), he without the others is able to do from the privilege given to him by the Lord and the concession of the fullness of power....

He [Peter] saw heaven opened and a vessel like a great sheet let down to earth from heaven by its four corners, which contained all four-footed beasts and serpents of the earth and the birds of heaven [Acts 10:9–12].... And a voice came to him a second time: “What God has cleansed, you must not call defiled.” By which it is manifestly indicated that Peter would be set over all peoples, for the vessel signifies the world, and the fullness of things contained in it signifies all the nations, whether of Jews or of Gentiles....

For marriages contracted in the future, We wish you to observe this: after legitimate consent de praesenti (at the present time) has occurred between legitimate persons (which, according to canonical norms, suffices for such cases, and if this alone is lacking, all the rest is in vain, even if carnal union itself has taken place), if persons thus legitimately united should afterward contract marriage de facto with others, what previously had taken place according to the law cannot be rendered void.

775

776

774-775: Letter Apostolicae Sedis primatus to the Patriarch of Constantinople, November 12, 1199

This document is not only testimony to the primacy of the Roman pontiff, but also an outstanding specimen of mediaeval reasoning on the subject, from the pen of one of the most eminent popes of that period. A similar doctrine is expressed in his letters to Gregory, Catholicos of the Armenians, on November 23, 1199, and to Leo, King of the Armenians, on November 24, 1199 (PL 214:776D-778B; 779A-780B; PoR 781, 878).

Ed.: PL 214:758D-761B (= letter II, 209); 216:1186CD-1188D. —Reg.: PoR 862.

The Primacy of the Roman See

774 Apostolicae Sedis primatus, quem non homo, sed Deus, immo verius Deus homo constituit, multis quidem et evangelicis et apostolicis testimoniis comprobatur, a quibus postmodum constitutiones canonicae processerunt, concorditer asserentes sacrosanctam Ecclesiam in beato Petro Apostolorum principe consecratam quasi magistram et matrem ceteris praeeminere. Hic enim ... audire promeruit: 'Tu es Petrus ... tibi dabo claves regni caelorum' [Mt 16:18s].

Nam licet primum et praecipuum Ecclesiae fundamentum sit unigenitus Dei Filius Iesus Christus, iuxta quod dicit Apostolus: "Quia fundamentum positum est, praeter quod aliud poni non potest, quod est Christus Iesus" [1 Cor 3:11], secundum tamen et secundarium Ecclesiae fundamentum est Petrus, etsi non tempore primus, auctoritate tamen praecipuus inter ceteros, de quibus Paulus Apostolus inquit: "Iam non estis hospites et advenae, sed estis cives sanctorum et domestici Dei, superaedificati supra fundamentum Apostolorum et Prophetarum" [Eph 2:20]....

Huius etiam primatum Veritas per se ipsam expressit, cum inquit ad eum: "Tu vocaberis Cephas" [Jo 1:42]: quod etsi 'Petrus' interpretetur, 'caput' tamen exponitur, ut sicut caput inter cetera membra corporis, velut in quo viget plenitudo sensuum, obtinet principatum, sic et Petrus inter Apostolos et successores ipsius inter universos Ecclesiarum praelatos praerogativa praeccellerent dignitatis, vocatis sic ceteris in partem sollicitudinis, ut nihil eis de potestatis plenitudine deperiret. Huic Dominus oves suas pascendas vocabulo tertio repetito commisit, ut alienus a grege dominico censeatur, qui eum etiam in successoribus suis noluerit habere pastorem. Non enim inter has et illas oves distinxit, sed simpliciter inquit: "Pascite oves meas" [Jo 21:17], ut omnes omnino intelligantur ei esse commissae.

... [Explicatur allegorice Jo 21:7:] Cum enim mare mundum designet [iuxta Ps 103:25] ... , per hoc, quod Petrus se misit in mare, privilegium expressit pontificii singularis, per quod universum orbem susceperat gubernandum, ceteris Apostolis ut vehiculo navis contentis, cum nulli eorum universus fuerit

The primacy of the Apostolic See, which not man but God, or more truly the God-man, constituted, is attested by many witnesses both evangelical and apostolic, from which the canonical dispositions subsequently came forth, unanimously asserting that the holy Church consecrated in blessed Peter, Prince of the Apostles, is preeminent among the others as a teacher and mother. For he in fact ... was worthy to hear: "You are Peter ... I will give you the keys of the kingdom of heaven" [Mt 16:18-19].

For although the first and foremost foundation of the Church is the only begotten Son of God, Jesus Christ, according to what the apostle says, "For no other foundation can any one lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ" [1 Cor 3:11], nonetheless the second and secondary foundation of the Church is Peter, though not first in time, yet foremost in authority among the others, of whom the apostle Paul says: "You are no longer strangers and sojourners, but you are fellow citizens with the saints and members of the household of God, built upon the foundation of the apostles and prophets" [Eph 2:19-20]....

Truth itself expresses his primacy when he says to him: "You shall be called Cephas" [Jn 1:42]: which, although translated as "Peter", is expounded as meaning "head", so that just as the head has the primacy among the other members of the body as the place in which the fullness of the senses dwells, so Peter among the apostles, and his successors among all the prelates of the Church, excel by the prerogative of their dignity, the others being called into a share in solicitude, in such a way that none of the fullness of their power is lost. To him the Lord committed his sheep to be shepherded by a thrice-repeated word, so that anyone who wishes not to have him as his shepherd, even in his successors, should be deemed an alien to the Lord's flock. For he made no distinction between these sheep and those, but said simply: "Feed my sheep" [Jn 21:17], so that absolutely all should be understood to have been committed to him.

... [Explaining allegorically Jn 21:7:] For since the sea signifies the world [according to Ps 104:25] ... , by the fact that Peter threw himself into the sea, the privilege of the unique pontifical authority is expressed, through which he took up the whole world to be governed, while the other apostles were contained within the ship, since

772–773: Constitution Licet perfidia Iudaeorum, September 15, 1199

This constitution is like a “Magna Carta” of tolerance toward the Jews. It had been preceded, however, by the popes mentioned in the text and by the Third Lateran Council (1179), where it says in chap. 26: Jews are “to be supported only by kindness” on the part of Christians (pro sola humanitate foveri: COeD, 3rd ed., 224₆ / MaC 22:321D; cf. also the beginning, chap. 1—which does not actually belong to the Lateran Council: MaC 22:355E–356C; JR 13973). The constitution was repeated and confirmed by Honorius III (November 7, 1217: PoR 5616), Gregory IX (May 3, 1235: PoR 9893), Innocent IV (October 22, 1246, and July 5, 1247: PoR 12315, 12596), and others.

Ed.: PL 214:864C–865B (= letter II, 302). —Reg.: PoR 834.

Tolerance toward Men of Another Faith

Licet perfidia Iudaeorum sit multipliciter improbanda, quia tamen per eos fides nostra veraciter comprobatur, non sunt a fidelibus graviter opprimendi. . . . Sicut ergo Iudaeis non debet esse licentia in synagogis suis, ultra quam permissum est lege, praesumere, ita in his, quae sunt illis concessa, nullum debent praeiudicium sustinere.

Nos ergo, licet in sua magis velint duritia perdurare quam vaticinia prophetarum et Legis arcana cognoscere atque ad christianae fidei notitiam pervenire, quia tamen Nostrae postulant defensionis auxilium, ex christianae pietatis mansuetudine, praedecessorum Nostrorum felicitis memoriae Calixti [II], Eugenii [III], Alexandri [III], Clementis [III] et Caelestini [III] Romanorum Pontificum vestigiis inhaerentes, ipsorum petitionem admittimus eisque protectionis Nostrae clypeum indulgemus.

Statuimus enim, ut nullus Christianus invitos vel nolentes eos ad baptismum per violentiam venire compellat; sed si eorum quilibet sponte ad Christianos fidei causa confugerit, postquam voluntas eius fuerit patefacta, sine qualibet efficiatur calumnia Christianus. Veram quippe christianitatis fidem habere non creditur, qui ad Christianorum baptismum non spontaneus sed invitatus cognoscitur pervenire. Nullus etiam Christianus sine potestatis terrae iudicio personas eorum nequiter laedere vel res eorum violenter auferre praesumat aut bonas quas hactenus in ea, in qua habitant regione, habuerint consuetudines immutare. Praeterea, in festivitatum suarum celebratione quisquam fustibus vel lapidibus eos ullatenus non perturbet, nec aliquis ab eis indebita servitia exigere vel extorquere contendat nisi ea, quae ipsi praeteritis facere temporibus consueverunt. Ad haec, malorum hominum pravitati et avaritiae obviantes, decernimus, ut nemo coemeterium Iudaeorum mutilare audeat vel minuere, sive obtentu pecuniae corpora effodere iam humata.

. . . [Excommunicantur ii, qui hoc decretum violant.] Eos autem dumtaxat huius protectionis praesidio volumus communiri, qui nihil machinari praesumpserint in subversionem fidei christianae.

Although the faithlessness of the Jews is worthy 772 of blame in many ways, they are not to be gravely oppressed by the faithful, since through them our faith is nonetheless truly vindicated. . . . Just as the Jews ought not to have license to go farther in their synagogues than is permitted by law, so likewise in those things that are permitted them, they ought not to suffer any prejudice.

Therefore, although they choose to remain in their hardness rather than to understand the utterances of the prophets and the hidden meaning of the law and to come to knowledge of the Christian faith, since they seek the help of Our defense, We, in the gentleness of Christian piety, admit their petition and concede them the shield of Our protection, following in the footsteps of the Roman pontiffs, Our predecessors of happy memory, Callistus [II], Eugenius [III], Alexander [III], Clement [III], and Celestine [III].

We in fact decree that no Christian should compel 773 them by violence to come to baptism reluctantly or unwillingly; but if any one of them of his own accord flees for refuge to Christians for the sake of the faith, after his wish has been made known, he should without any abuse be made a Christian. For he who is known to come to the baptism of Christians, not spontaneously, but reluctantly is certainly not believed to have true faith in Christianity. Further, no Christian, without a judgment of the earthly power, should wickedly presume to harm their persons or to carry off their goods by violence or to change the good customs they have hitherto had in the region in which they live. Furthermore, in the celebration of their feasts, let no one disturb them in any way by beating or stoning, nor should anyone try to demand or extract from them undue services, apart from those they have been accustomed to perform in times past. In addition, forestalling the evil and avarice of bad men, We decree that none should dare to violate or belittle the cemeteries of the Jews or to dig up bodies already buried, in search of money.

. . . [Those who violate this decree are excommunicated.] We wish, however, that only those who have not presumed to plot anything directed toward the subversion of the Christian faith be secured with the assistance of this protection.

habere in libellis suis et prudentius se posse id eloqui, submurmurant in occulto.

Licet autem desiderium intelligendi divinas Scripturas et secundum eas studium adhortandi reprehendum non sit, sed potius commendandum, in eo tamen apparent merito arguendi, quod tales occulta conventicula sua celebrant, officium sibi praedicationis usurpant, sacerdotum simplicitatem eludunt et eorum consortium asperrantur qui talibus non inhaerent. Deus enim ... in tantum odit opera tenebrarum, ut [Apostolis] ... praeceperit dicens: "Quod dico vobis in tenebris, dicite in lumine, et quod in aure auditis, praedicate super tecta" [Mt 10:27]; per hoc manifeste denuntians, quod evangelica praedicationis non in occultis conventiculis, sicut haeretici faciunt, sed in ecclesia iuxta morem catholicum est publice proponenda....

771 Arcana vero fidei sacramenta non sunt passim omnibus exponenda, cum non passim ab omnibus possint intelligi, sed eis tantum qui ea fidei possunt concipere intellectu. Propter quod simplicioribus inquit Apostolus: "Quasi parvulis in Christo lac potum dedi vobis, non escam" [1 Cor 3:2]....

Tanta est enim divinae Scripturae profunditas, ut non solum simplices et illiterati, sed etiam prudentes et docti non plene sufficiant ad ipsius intelligentiam indagandam. Propter quod dicit Scriptura: "Quia multi defecerunt scrutantes scrutiny" [Ps 63:7]. Unde recte fuit olim in lege divina statutum, ut bestia, quae montem [Sinai] tetigerit, lapidetur [cf. Hbr 12:20; Ex 19:12s], ne videlicet simplex aliquis vel et indoctus praesumat ad sublimitatem Scripturae sacrae pertingere vel eam aliis praedicare. Scriptum est enim: "Altiora te ne quaesieris" [Sir 3:22]. Propter quod dicit Apostolus: "Non plus sapere quam oportet sapere, sed sapere ad sobrietatem" [Rm 12:3].

Sicut enim multa sunt membra corporis, omnia vero membra non eundem actum habent, ita multi sunt ordines in Ecclesia, sed non omnes idem habent officium, quia secundum Apostolum "alios quidem Dominus dedit apostolos, alios prophetas, alios autem doctores etc." [Eph 4:11]. Cum igitur doctorum ordo sit quasi praecipuus in Ecclesia, non debet sibi quisquam indifferenter praedicationis officium usurpare.

despise the simplicity of their priests; and when (these priests) propose the words of salvation to them, they secretly murmur that they have something better in their writings and that they can express it more wisely.

But even though the desire to understand the divine Scriptures and the eagerness to exhort in accordance with them should not be criticized but rather commended, nevertheless, in this case, it is clear that these people are justifiably rebuked, because they conduct their own secret gatherings and they arrogate to themselves the office of preaching; they ridicule the simplicity of priests, and they refuse to be associated with those who are not engaged in such things. God, in fact, ... so despised such works of darkness that ... he issued the command [to the apostles], saying: "What I tell you in the dark, utter in the light, and what you hear whispered, proclaim from the housetops" [Mt 10:27], indicating clearly by this that evangelical preaching is to be offered, not in secret gatherings, as is done by the heretics, but publicly in the Church, according to Catholic custom....

The hidden mysteries of the faith, however, should not be explained everywhere to all, since they cannot be understood everywhere by all, but only to those who are able to grasp them with faithful understanding. This is why the apostle says to the more simple: "As little children in Christ, I fed you with milk, not solid food" [1 Cor 3:2]....

Indeed, so great is the depth of the divine Scripture that not only the simple and illiterate but even the wise and the learned are not fully able to probe its meaning. Because of this, Scripture says: "For many who seek to discern are lacking discernment" [Ps 64:7]. Wherefore, it was once rightfully established in the divine law that a beast who touched the mountain [Sinai] should be stoned [cf. Heb 12:20; Ex 19:12f.], for clearly no simple or unlearned person should presume to touch the sublimity of Sacred Scripture or preach it to others. For Scripture says: "Do not seek things too high for you" [Sir 3:22]. This is why the apostle says: "Do not understand more than what is necessary to understand, but understand with sobriety" [Rom 12:3].

Just as the members of the body are many but not all the members have the same function, so there are many orders in the Church, but not all have the same duty; for, according to the apostle: "Some the Lord has appointed as apostles, others as prophets, still others teachers", etc. [Eph 4:11]. Therefore, since the order of teachers is, as it were, primary in the Church, no one should indiscriminately arrogate to himself the office of preaching.

Nos igitur consultationi tuae de communi fratrum Nostrorum consilio respondentes distinguimus, licet quidam praedecessor Noster [Caelestinus III] sensisse aliter videatur, an ex duobus infidelibus alter ad fidem catholicam convertatur, vel ex duobus fidelibus alter labatur in haeresim vel decadat in gentilitatis errorem. Si enim alter infidelium coniugum ad fidem catholicam convertatur, altero vel nullo modo, vel saltem non sine blasphemia divini nominis, vel ut eum pertrahat ad mortale peccatum, ei cohabitare volente: qui relinquitur, ad secunda, si voluerit, vota transibit; et in hoc casu intelligimus, quod ait Apostolus: “Si infidelis discedit, discedat: frater enim vel soror non est servituti subiectus in huiusmodi” [I Cor 7:15]. Et canonem etiam, in quo dicitur: Quod “contumelia creatoris solvit ius matrimonii circa eum, qui relinquitur.”¹

Si vero alter fidelium coniugum vel labatur in haeresim vel transeat ad gentilitatis¹ errorem, non credimus, quod in hoc casu is, qui relinquitur, vivente altero possit ad secundas nuptias convolare, licet in hoc casu maior appareat contumelia creatoris. Nam etsi matrimonium verum quidem inter infideles existat, non tamen est ratum: inter fideles autem verum quidem et ratum existit: quia sacramentum fidei, quod semel est admissum, numquam amittitur, sed ratum efficit coniugii sacramentum, ut ipsum in coniugibus illo durante perduret.

770–771: Letter Cum ex iniuncto to the Inhabitants of Metz, July 12, 1199

Ed.: PL 214:695C–697A (= letter II, 141): 216:1210B–1211D / Gregory IX, Decretales, I, V, tit. 7, c. 12 (Frdb 2:785f.) / BullTau 3:159a–160b / BullCocq 3:91. —Reg.: PoR 780.

The Necessity of the Magisterium of the Church for the Interpretation of Scripture

Significavit Nobis venerabilis frater Noster episcopus Metensis per litteras suas, quod tam in dioecesi quam urbe Metensi laicorum et mulierum multitudo non modica, tracta quodammodo desiderio Scripturarum, Evangelia, Epistolas Pauli, Psalterium, Moralia Iob et plures alios libros sibi fecit in Gallico sermone transferri; ... [quo vero factum est,] ut secretis conventionibus talia inter se laici et mulieres eructare praesumant et sibi invicem praedicare: qui etiam aspersionem eorum consortium, qui se similibus non immiscent. ... Quidam etiam ex eis simplicitatem sacerdotum suorum fastidiunt; et cum ipsis per eos verbum salutis proponitur, se melius

We, therefore, responding to your inquiry, in conformity with the common advice of Our brothers, even though one of Our predecessors [Celestine III] seems to have thought otherwise, make a distinction (between two cases): when there are two unbelievers and one converts to the Catholic faith, or when there are two believers and one lapses into heresy or falls into the error of the heathens. For if, indeed, one of the two unbelieving spouses converts to the Catholic faith, and the other does not wish to live together in any manner, or at least not without blaspheming the divine name or leading the other into mortal sin, the one who is abandoned, if wishing to, may enter into a second marriage, and in this case, We understand what was said by the apostle: “If the unbelieving partner separates, let it be so: in such cases, the brother or sister is not bound” [I Cor 7:15]. And likewise, (We understand) the canon that says: “The insult to the Creator dissolves the juridical bond of marriage for the one who is thus abandoned.”¹

But if one of the believing spouses either falls into heresy or lapses into the error of the heathens,¹ We do not believe that in this case the abandoned one can enter into a second marriage while the other (spouse) is living, even though in this case a greater insult to the Creator may be evident. For even if, in fact, a true marriage exists between unbelievers, it is still not ratified. Between believers, however, a true and ratified marriage exists, because the sacrament of faith (baptism) once conferred is never lost, and indeed it makes the sacrament of marriage ratified so that it (the marriage itself) endures in the spouses as long as (the baptism) endures.

769

770

*768 ¹ Cf. Gratian, Decretum, p. II, cs. 28, q. 2, c. 2 (Frdb 1:1090).

*769 ¹ In this case, Celestine III had applied the Pauline Privilege.

GREGORY VIII: October 21–December 17, 1187
 CLEMENT III: December 19, 1187–March 1191
 CELESTINE III: March 30, 1191–January 8, 1198

INNOCENT III: January 8, 1198–July 16, 1216

766: Letter Cum apud sedem to Archbishop Humbert of Arles, July 15, 1198

Ed.: PL 214:304CD (= letter I, 333); Gregory IX, Decretales, l. IV, tit. 1, c. 23 (cf. 25) (Frdb 2:669f.). —Reg.: PoR 329.

The Sacramental Form of Marriage

766 Consuluisti Nos, utrum mutus et surdus alicui possint matrimonialiter copulari. Ad quod fraternitati tuae taliter respondemus, quod, cum prohibitorium sit edictum de matrimonio contrahendo, ut quicumque non prohibetur, per consequentiam admittatur, et sufficiat ad matrimonium solus consensus illorum, de quorum quarumque coniunctionibus agitur: videtur, quod, si talis velit contrahere, sibi non possit vel debeat denegari, cum, quod verbis non potest, signis valeat declarare.

You have asked Us whether the mute and the deaf can be united to each other in marriage. To this question We respond to Your Fraternity thus: Since the edict of prohibition concerning the contracting of marriage is that whoever is not prohibited is consequently permitted, and for marriage only the consent of those whose union is concerned suffices, it seems that, if such a one wishes to contract (a marriage), it cannot and it ought not to be denied him, since what he cannot declare by words he can declare by signs.

767: Letter Sicut universitatis to Consul Acerbus of Florence, October 30, 1198

Ed.: PL 216:1186AB (= Innocent, Decretales, Prima collectio, tit. 2) / PL 214:377AB (= letter I, 401). —Reg.: PoR 403.

The Twofold Supreme Power on Earth

767 Sicut universitatis conditor Deus duo magna luminaria in firmamento caeli constituit, luminare maius, ut praeesset diei, et luminare minus, ut praeesset nocti, sic ad firmamentum universalis Ecclesiae, quae caeli nomine nuncupatur, duas magnas instituit dignitates: maiorem, quae quasi diebus animabus praeesset, et minorem, quae quasi noctibus praeesset corporibus, quae sunt pontificalis auctoritas et regalis potestas.

As God, the founder of the universe, constituted two great lights in the firmament of heaven, a greater light to preside over the day and a lesser light to preside over the night, so in the firmament of the universal Church, which is called by the name of “heaven”, he instituted two great dignities: the greater, as if to preside over the day of souls, and the lesser, as if to preside over the night of bodies, which are the pontifical authority and the royal power.

Porro sicut luna lumen suum a sole sortitur, quae revera minor est illo quantitate simul et qualitate, situ pariter et effectum, sic regalis potestas ab auctoritate pontificali suae sortitur dignitatis splendorem; cuius conspectui quanto magis inhaeret, tanto maiori lumine decoratur, et quo plus ab eius elongatur aspectu, eo plus deficit in splendore.

Furthermore, as the moon draws its light from the sun and is in fact lesser than it in both greatness and quality, in position as in effect, so the royal power draws the splendor of its dignity from the pontifical authority; the more it remains in its sight, the greater the light with which it is endowed, and the more it is removed from its vision, the more it declines in splendor.

768–769: Letter Quanto te magis to Bishop Ugo of Ferrara, May 1, 1199

Ed.: PL 214:588D–589B (= letter II, 50); 216:1267D–1268B / Gregory IX, Decretales, l. IV, tit. 19, c. 7 (Frdb 2:722f.). —Reg.: PoR 684.

The Bond of Marriage and the Pauline Privilege

768 Tua Nobis fraternitas suis litteris intimavit, quod altero coniugum ad haeresim transeunte, qui relinquitur, ad secunda vota desiderat convolare et filios procreare, quod utrum possit fieri de iure, per tuas Nos duxisti litteras consulendos.

Your Fraternity has made known to Us by his letter that, because one of the spouses passed over into heresy, the abandoned one wishes to enter into a second marriage and procreate children; and by your letter you asked Us to consider whether this may be done according to the law.

Ecclesia vel singuli episcopi per dioeceses suas cum consilio clericorum vel clerici ipsi, Sede vacante, cum consilio, si oportuerit, vicinorum episcoporum haereticos iudicaverint, pari vinculo perpetui anathematis innodamus.

confession of sins, matrimony, or the other sacraments of the Church and in general all those who have been judged to be heretics by the same Roman Church or by individual bishops in their dioceses with the counsel of their clergy, or by the clergy themselves, when a see is vacant, with the counsel, if opportune, of the neighboring bishops.

762: Letter Dilectae in Christo to Bishop Simon of Meaux, date uncertain

Ed.: S. Löwenfeld, Epistulae Pontificum Romanorum ineditae (Leipzig, 1885), 220 (no. 364) / MaC 21:1102D–1103A (attributed to Alexander III) . —Reg.: JR 14017.

Castration

... Priorissa et conventus de Colonantia a Sede Apostolica quaesierunt, si iuvenis quidam, conversus earum, genitalibus destitutus, in presbyterum possit de permissione canonum ordinari.

Nos itaque in hoc articulo distinctionem volentes canonicam observari, fraternitati tuae per Apostolica scripta mandamus, quatenus inquiras diligentius veritatem, si ab hostibus sectus fuerit vel a medicis aut nesciens carnis vitio reluctari ipse sibi manum iniecerit. Priores enim admittunt canones [cf. *128a], si alias idonei sint, tertium velut homicidam sui statuunt puniendum.

... The prioress and convent of Colonantia have asked of the Apostolic See if a certain youth who is a lay brother of theirs, lacking his genitals, can be ordained to the priesthood with the approval of the canon law. 762

We, therefore, wishing to observe the canonical distinction on this point, mandate Your Fraternity by apostolic writing to inquire diligently after the truth so as to know whether he was cut by enemies or by doctors or, not knowing how to struggle against the vice of the flesh, he laid hands upon himself. The canons admit the former cases (cf. *128a), if they are otherwise suitable, but they provide that the third is to be punished as a homicide against himself.

URBAN III: November 25, 1185–October 19/20, 1187

764: Letter Consuluit nos to a Priest of Brescia, date uncertain

Ed.: Gregory IX, Decretales, l. V, tit. 19, c. 10 (Frdb 2:814). —Reg.: JR 15726

Usury

Consuluit Nos tua devotio, an ille in iudicio animarum quasi usurarius debeat iudicari, qui non alias mutuo traditurus, eo proposito mutuum pecuniam credit, ut, licet omni conventionem cessante, plus tamen sorte recipiat; et utrum eodem reatu criminis involvatur, qui, ut vulgo dicitur, non aliter parabolam iuramenti concedit, donec, quamvis sine exactione, emolumentum aliquod inde percipiat; et an negotiator poena consimili debeat condemnari, qui merces suas longe maiore pretio distrahit, si ad solutionem faciendam prolixioris temporis dilatio prorogetur, quam si ei in continenti pretium persolvatur.

Verum quia, quid in his casibus tenendum sit, ex evangelio Lucae manifeste cognoscitur, in quo dicitur: “Date mutuum, nihil inde sperantes” [Lc 6:35]: huiusmodi homines pro intentione lucri, quam habent, cum omnis usura et superabundantia prohibeatur in lege, iudicandi sunt male agere, et ad ea, quae taliter sunt accepta, restituenda in animarum iudicio efficaciter inducendi.

Your Reverence has consulted Us as to whether, in the judgment of souls, someone should be regarded as a usurer who, while not disposed to make loans in other circumstances, lends money with the intention that—even though there is no agreement—he nevertheless will receive more than his capital; or whether the same state of guilt is involved if someone, as is commonly said, does not grant a promissory note unless (even though without requiring it) he receives some profit from it; and whether a merchant should be condemned with the same punishment if he sells his merchandise at a much higher price when the time allowed for the payment is much longer than when the price of purchase is paid to him right away. 764

Since indeed what should be adhered to in such cases is clearly known from the Gospel of Luke, when it says: “Lend without expecting anything in return” [Lk 6:35]: it must be judged that men of this kind are doing evil by reason of their intention for profit, for every type of usury and excessive profit is prohibited by law, and in the judgment of souls, they must be induced, with zeal, to restore those things that they have acquired in this manner.

CLEMENT IV: February 5, 1265–November 29, 1268849: Letter Quanto sincerius to Archbishop Maurinus of Narbonne, October 28, 1267

Ed.: DenCh 1:470 (no. 417; cf. the answer of Maurinus, DenCh 1:470, no. 418) / E. Martène, Thesaurus novus anecdotorum 2 (Paris, 1717), 536E–537B (no. 549). —Reg.: PoR 20154.

The Real Presence of Christ in the Eucharist

[Pervenit ad Nostrum auditum quod tu...] dixisti corpus Domini nostri Iesu Christi sanctissimum essentialiter in altari non esse, sed tantum sicut signatum sub signo, et hanc celebrem esse opinionem Parisius adiecisti. Repsit autem hic sermo ... et ad Nos postremo perveniens scandalizavit Nos plurimum, nec facile Nobis existit credere talia te dixisse, quae haeresim continent manifestam et illius sacramenti derogant veritati, in quo fides eo negotiatur utilius, quo sensum superat, intellectum captivat et suis legibus subiicit rationem....

Firmiter teneas, quod communiter tenet Ecclesia ..., sub speciebus scilicet panis et vini post sacra verba iuxta ritum Ecclesiae ore sacerdotis prolata, esse vere, realiter et essentialiter corpus et sanguinem Domini nostri Iesu Christi, licet localiter sit in caelo.

[It has come to Our hearing that you ...] have said that the most holy body of our Lord Jesus Christ is not on the altar essentially, but only as a thing signified is in a sign, and you have gone on to say that this is a well-known opinion in Paris. This saying has spread abroad ... and, finally reaching Us, has scandalized Us greatly; nor is it easy for Us to believe you to have said such things, which contain manifest heresy and detract from the reality of that sacrament, in which faith conducts itself all the more profitably, the more it overcomes the senses, captures the intellect, and subjects reason to its laws....

You should firmly hold what the Church holds in common ..., that is, that under the appearances of bread and wine, after the sacred words uttered by the mouth of the priest according to the rite of the Church, the Body and Blood of our Lord Jesus Christ are truly, really, and essentially (present), even though in terms of place he is in heaven.

GREGORY X: September 1, 1271–January 10, 1276Second Council of LYON (Fourteenth Ecumenical): May 7–July 17, 1274

The object of the discussions, among others, was union with the Greeks. The reproach, rejected in *850, that the Roman Church teaches that the Father and the Son are two distinct origins of the Holy Spirit was repeated shortly afterward by some Orientals. In the letter Etsi Christus salvator, of March 4, 1443, this accusation was once more refuted by Eugene IV (G. Hofmann: TD ser. theol. 22, 2nd ed. [1951], 45–47, no. 10 / MaC 31B:1751E–1752E). In session 4, in the presence of the pope, the profession of faith of the Greek emperor Michael Palaeologus was read from his letter Quoniam missi sunt. This formula of the profession of faith had already been sent by Clement IV in 1267 to the same emperor for endorsement (cf. Magnitudinis tuae litteras, ed. by E. Martène and U. Durand, Veterum scriptorum et monumentorum ... collectio 7 [Paris, 1733], 204–6; cf. also Gregory X's letter Qui miseratione of October 24, 1272 [MaC 24:42–49]). On August 1, 1385, this formula was prescribed by Urban VI for Greeks coming into the Catholic Church. A similar profession of faith was published by Patriarch John XI Bekkos of Constantinople and his synod in April 1277 (MaC 24:186E–190B / PG 141:945D–950A).

850: Session 2, May 18, 1274: Constitution on the Most High Trinity and the Catholic Faith

Ed.: MaC 24:81B–D / HaC 7:705A–C / Boniface VIII, Decretales (Liber sextus), l. 1, tit. 1, c. 1 (Frdb 2:937) / COeD, 3rd ed., 314. —Reg.: PoR 20950.

The Procession of the Holy Spirit

Fideli ac devota professione fatemur, quod Spiritus Sanctus aeternaliter ex Patre et Filio, non tanquam ex duobus principiis, sed tanquam ex uno principio, non duabus spirationibus, sed unica spiratione procedit; hoc professa est hactenus, praedicavit et docuit, hoc firmiter tenet, praedicat, proficitur et docet sacrosancta Romana Ecclesia, mater omnium fidelium et magistra; hoc habet

We confess faithfully and devoutly that the Holy Spirit proceeds eternally from Father and Son, not as from two principles, but from one, not by two spirations, but by one only. This the holy Roman Church, the mother and teacher of all the faithful, has so far professed, preached, and taught; this she continues to hold, to preach, to profess, and to teach. This is the unchangeable and true orthodoxorum Patrum atque Doctorum, Latinorum pariter et Graecorum incommutabilis et vera sententia.

Sed quia nonnulli propter irrefragabilis praemissae veritatis ignorantiam in errores varios sunt prolapsi, Nos huiusmodi erroribus viam praecludere cupientes, sacro approbante Concilio, damnamus et reprobamus, qui negare praesumpserint, aeternaliter Spiritum Sanctum ex Patre et Filio procedere, sive etiam temerario ausu asserere, quod Spiritus Sanctus ex Patre et Filio, tanquam ex duobus principiis, et non tanquam ex uno, procedat.

doctrine of the orthodox Fathers and Doctors, both Latin and Greek. However, some have fallen into various errors out of ignorance of the above indisputable truth.

Therefore, in order to forestall such errors, with the approval of the holy council, We condemn and disapprove those who presume to deny that the Holy Spirit proceeds eternally from Father and Son or who rashly dare to assert that the Holy Spirit proceeds from Father and Son as from two principles, not from one.

851–861: Session 4, July 6 1274, Letter of Emperor Michael to Pope Gregory

Ed.: MaC 24:70A–74A / HaC 7:694C–698A / BullTau 4:26b–28a / BullCocq 3/II, 12a–13a.

The Profession of Faith of Emperor Michael Paleologus

851 [Professio generalis] Credimus sanctam Trinitatem, Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum, unum Deum omnipotentem totamque in Trinitate deitatem, coessentialem et consubstantialem, coaeternam et coomnipotentem, unius voluntatis, potestatis et maiestatis, creatorem omnium creaturarum, a quo omnia, in quo omnia, per quem omnia, quae sunt in caelo et in terra, visibilia, invisibilia, corporalia et spiritualia. Credimus singulam quamque in Trinitate personam unum verum Deum, plenum et perfectum.

[General profession] We believe in the Holy Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, one almighty God; and that in the Trinity the whole Godhead is the same essence, the same substance, equally eternal and equally almighty, of one will, one power and majesty. (This Trinity is) the creator of all things created, from whom, in whom, by whom all things exist in heaven and on earth, the visible and the invisible, the corporeal and the spiritual. We believe that each single person in the Trinity (is) the one true God, fully and perfectly.

852 Credimus ipsum Filium Dei, Verbum Dei, aeternaliter natum de Patre, consubstantialem, coomnipotentem et aequalem per omnia Patri in divinitate, temporaliter natum de Spiritu Sancto et Maria semper Virgine, cum anima rationali; duas habentem natiuitates, unam ex Patre natiuitatem aeternam, alteram ex matre temporalem: Deum verum et hominem verum, proprium in utraque natura atque perfectum, non adoptivum, nec phantasticum, sed unum et unicum Filium Dei, in duabus et ex duabus naturis, divina scilicet et humana, in unius personae singularitate, impassibilem et immortalem divinitate, sed in humanitate pro nobis et salute nostra passum vera carnis passione, mortuum et sepultum, et descendisse ad inferos, ac tertia die resurrexisse a mortuis vera carnis resurrectione, die quadragesima post resurrectionem cum carne, qua resurrexit, et anima ascendisse in caelum et sedere ad dextram Dei Patris, inde venturum iudicare vivos et mortuos, et redditurum unicuique secundum opera sua, sive bona fuerint sive mala.

We believe in the Son of God, Word of God, eternally born from the Father, of the same substance, equally almighty and in all things equal to the Father in divinity; born in time, from the Holy Spirit and from Mary ever Virgin, with a rational soul. He has two births, one an eternal birth from the Father, the other a temporal birth from a mother. He is true God and true man, real and perfect in both natures; neither an adoptive son nor an apparent son, but the one and only son of God, in and from two natures, that is, the divine and the human, in the unity of one Person. He is impassible and immortal in his divinity, but in his humanity he suffered for us and for our salvation a true bodily Passion; he died, was buried, descended into hell, and on the third day rose again from the dead by a true bodily Resurrection. Forty days after his Resurrection he ascended into heaven with his risen body and his soul; he is seated at the right hand of God the Father, wherefrom he shall come to judge the living and the dead and to render to each one according to his works, whether these have been good or evil.

853 Credimus et Spiritum Sanctum, plenum et perfectum verumque Deum ex Patre Filioque procedentem, coaequalem et consubstantialem et coomnipotentem et coaeternum per omnia Patri et Filio. Credimus hanc sanctam Trinitatem non tres Deos, sed unicum Deum omnipotentem, aeternum et invisibilem et incommutabilem.

We believe also (in) the Holy Spirit, fully, perfectly, and truly God, proceeding from the Father and the Son, fully equal, of the same substance, equally almighty and equally eternal with the Father and the Son in all things. We believe that this Holy Trinity (is) not three gods but one only God, almighty, eternal, invisible, and immutable.

Credimus sanctam catholicam et apostolicam unam esse veram Ecclesiam, in qua unum datur sanctum baptisma et vera omnium remissio peccatorum. Credimus etiam veram resurrectionem huius carnis, quam nunc gestamus, et vitam aeternam. Credimus etiam Novi et Veteris Testamenti, Legis, ac Prophetarum et Apostolorum, unum esse auctorem Deum ac Dominum omnipotentem.

[Additio specialis contra errores Orientalium] Haec est vera fides catholica, et hanc in supradictis articulis tenet et praedicat sacrosancta Romana Ecclesia. Sed propter diversos errores, a quibusdam ex ignorantia et ab aliis ex malitia introductos, dicit et praedicat:

Eos, qui post baptismum in peccata labuntur, non rebaptizandos, sed per veram paenitentiam suorum consequi veniam peccatorum.

[De sorte defunctorum] Quod si vere paenitentes in caritate decesserint, antequam dignis paenitentiae fructibus de commissis satisfecerint et omissis: eorum animas poenis purgatoriis seu catharteriis, sicut nobis frater Iohannes [Parastron, O.F.M.] explanavit, post mortem purgari: et ad poenas huiusmodi relevandas prodesse eis fidelium vivorum suffragia, Missarum scilicet sacrificia, orationes et eleemosynas et alia pietatis officia, quae a fidelibus pro aliis fidelibus fieri consueverunt secundum Ecclesiae instituta.

Illorum autem animas, qui post sacrum baptismum susceptum nullam omnino peccati maculam incurrerunt, illas etiam, quae post contractam peccati maculam, vel in suis manentes corporibus, vel eisdem exutae, prout superius dictum est, sunt purgatae, mox in caelum recipi.

Illorum autem animas, qui in mortali peccato vel cum solo originali decedunt, mox in infernum descendere, poenis tamen disparibus puniendas.

Eadem sacrosancta Ecclesia Romana firmiter credit et firmiter asseverat, quod nihilominus in die iudicii omnes homines ante tribunal Christi cum suis corporibus comparebunt, reddituri de propriis factis rationem [cf. Rm 14:10s].

Tenet etiam et docet eadem sancta Romana Ecclesia, septem esse ecclesiastica sacramenta, unum scilicet baptismum, de quo dictum est supra; aliud est sacramentum confirmationis, quod per manuum impositionem episcopi conferunt, chrismando renatos; aliud est paenitentia, aliud Eucharistia, aliud sacramentum ordinis, aliud est matrimonium, aliud extrema unctio, quae secundum doctrinam beati Iacobi infirmantibus adhibetur.

We believe that the holy, catholic, and apostolic Church is the one true Church, in which are given one holy baptism and the true forgiveness of all sins. We believe also (in) the true resurrection of this body that we now bear and in the life eternal. We believe also that God, the Lord almighty, is the one author of the New Testament and the Old, of the law, the prophets, and the apostles.

[Added especially against the errors of the Orientals] Such is the true Catholic faith, which in the above-mentioned articles the most Holy Roman Church holds and preaches. But, because of various errors, introduced by some through ignorance and by others out of malice, she says and preaches:

Those who after baptism lapse into sin must not be rebaptized but must obtain pardon for their sins through true penance.

[The fate of the deceased] If, being truly repentant, they die in charity before having satisfied by worthy fruits of penance for their sins of commission and omission, their souls are cleansed after death by purgatorial and purifying penalties, as Brother John [Parastron, O.F.M.] has explained to us; and to alleviate such penalties the acts of intercession of the living faithful benefit them, namely, the sacrifices of the Mass, prayers, alms, and other works of piety that the faithful are wont to do for the other faithful according to the Church's institutions.

As for the souls of those who, after having received holy baptism, have incurred no stain of sin whatever and those souls who, after having contracted the stain of sin, have been cleansed, either while remaining still in their bodies or after having been divested of them as stated above, they are received immediately into heaven.

As for the souls of those who die in mortal sin or with original sin only, they go down immediately to hell, to be punished, however, with different punishments.

The same most Holy Roman Church firmly believes and firmly asserts that nevertheless on the Day of Judgment all human persons will appear with their bodies before the judgment seat of Christ to render an account of their own deeds [cf. Rom 14:10f.].

The same Holy Roman Church also holds and teaches that there are seven sacraments of the Church: one is baptism, which has been mentioned above; another is the sacrament of confirmation, which bishops confer by the laying on of hands while they anoint the reborn; then penance, the Eucharist, the sacrament of orders, matrimony, and extreme unction, which, according to the doctrine of the Blessed James, is administered to the sick.

Sacramentum Eucharistiae ex azymo conficit eadem Romana Ecclesia, tenens et docens, quod in ipso sacramento panis vere transsubstantiatur in corpus et vinum in sanguinem Domini nostri Iesu Christi.

De matrimonio vero tenet, quod nec unus vir plures uxores simul, nec una mulier permittitur habere plures viros. Soluta vero legitimo matrimonio per mortem coniugum alterius, secundas et tertias deinde¹ nuptias successive licitas esse dicit, si impedimentum canonicum aliud ex causa aliqua non obsistat.

Ipsa quoque sancta Romana Ecclesia summum et plenum primatum et principatum super universam Ecclesiam catholicam obtinet; quem se ab ipso Domino in beato Petro Apostolorum principe sive vertice, cuius Romanus Pontifex est successor, cum potestatis plenitudine recepisse veraciter et humiliter recognoscit. Et sicut prae ceteris tenetur fidei veritatem defendere: sic et si quae de fide subortae fuerint quaestiones, suo debent iudicio definiri. Ad quam potest gravatus quilibet super negotiis ad ecclesiasticum forum pertinentibus appellare: et in omnibus causis ad examen ecclesiasticum spectantibus ad ipsius potest iudicium recurri: et eidem omnes ecclesiae sunt subiectae, ipsarum praelati oboedientiam et reverentiam sibi dant. Ad hanc autem sic potestatis plenitudo consistit, quod ecclesias ceteras ad sollicitudinis partem admittit; quarum multas et patriarchales praecipue diversis privilegiis eadem Romana Ecclesia honoravit, sua tamen observata praerogativa tum in generalibus conciliis, tum in aliquibus aliis semper salva.

The same Roman Church carries out the sacrament of the Eucharist with unleavened bread; she holds and teaches that in this sacrament the bread is truly transubstantiated into the body of our Lord Jesus Christ, and the wine into his blood.

As regards matrimony, she holds that neither is a man allowed to have several wives at the same time nor a woman several husbands. But, when a legitimate marriage is dissolved by the death of one of the spouses, she declares that a second and afterward a third marriage¹ are successively licit, if no other canonical impediment goes against it for any reason.

The Holy Roman Church possesses also the highest and full primacy and authority over the universal Catholic Church, which she recognizes in truth and humility having received with fullness of power from the Lord himself in the person of Blessed Peter, the chief or head of the apostles, of whom the Roman pontiff is the successor. And, as she is bound above all to defend the truth of faith, so too, if any questions should arise regarding the faith, they must be decided by her judgment. Anyone accused in matters pertaining to the forum of the Church may appeal to her; and in all causes within the purview of ecclesiastical inquiry, recourse may be had to her judgment. To her all the Churches are subject; their prelates give obedience and reverence to her. Her fullness of power, moreover, is so firm that she admits the other Churches to a share in her solicitude. The same Roman Church has honored many of those Churches, and chiefly the Patriarchal Churches, with various privileges, her own prerogative being, however, always observed and safeguarded both in general councils and in some other matters.

INNOCENT V: January 21–June 22, 1276

ADRIAN V: July 11–August 18, 1276

JOHN XXI: September 8, 1276–May 20, 1277

NICHOLAS III: November 25, 1277–August 22, 1280

MARTIN IV: February 22, 1281–March 28, 1285

HONORIUS IV: April 2, 1285–April 3, 1287

NICHOLAS IV: February 22, 1288–April 4, 1292

CELESTINE V: July 5–December 13, 1294

BONIFACE VIII: December 24, 1294–October 11, 1303

866: Bull Saepe sanctam Ecclesiam, August 1, 1296

The bull condemns an association of lay people who called themselves “Brethren of the High (or New or Free) Spirit”. They professed an extreme quietism and rejected all external obedience to the Church. A document that shows more fully what they thought is the Determinatio of Albert the Great, drawn up ca. 1260–1262; in it are listed ninety-seven errors of this sort found in the diocese of Augsburg.

*860 ¹ As in the version signed by the emperor; the version of Clement IV (1267) reads: “tertias et deinceps nuptias” (third and subsequent marriages).

Ed.: BullTau 4:134b–135a / BullCocq 3/II, 81b. —Reg.: PoR 24378.

Errors of the Lay Sect of the Brethren of the New Spirit

Accepimus namque, quod nonnullae personae se contra sanctam catholicam Ecclesiam erigentes, etiam sexus feminei, dogmatizant se ligandi et solvendi claves habere, paenitentias audiunt et a peccatis absolvunt, conventicula non solum diurna faciunt, sed nocturna, in quibus de suis pravitatibus conferunt, ... et praedicare praesument; tonsura clericali contra ritum Ecclesiae abutentes, Spiritum Sanctum se dare per impositionem manuum mentiuntur; et exhibendam [supple: reverentiam? oboedientiam?] soli Deo et non alteri cuiuscumque fuerit condicionis, dignitatis et status. Efficaciores etiam illas orationes affirmant, quae a nudatis toto corpore offeruntur; ... et in dicta sancta Ecclesia ligandi atque solvendi fore abnegant potestatem. ... Quapropter huiusmodi sectam ... damnatam et haereticam nuntiamus.

We have learned, in fact, that some persons, even some of the female sex, rising up against the holy Catholic Church, are teaching that they have the keys of binding and loosing; they hear confessions and absolve from sins; they hold assemblies not only by day but by night, in which they take counsel about their evil doings, ... and they presume to preach; misusing the clerical tonsure, contrary to the rite of the Church, they lyingly say that they give the Holy Spirit through the laying on of hands; and that [add the missing word: reverence? obedience?] is to be shown only to God and not to another, of whatever condition, dignity, or state he may be. They also say that prayers are more efficacious that are offered by people with their whole body naked; ... and they deny that the power of binding and loosing exists in the said holy Church. ... Wherefore we proclaim this sect ... condemned and heretical.

866

868: Bull Antiquorum habet, February 22, 1300

With this bull, the first celebration of a “holy year” was announced, to which was joined a plenary indulgence. Such a remission of the entire [temporal] punishment for sins was not, however, anything new. Already, the Synod of Clermont, convoked in 1095 by Urban II, had decreed (chap. 2) that whoever “will have set out for Jerusalem in service of devotion alone, not for the attainment of honor or wealth, but for the liberation of the Church of God, this journey may be counted as complete penance” (pro sola devotione, non pro honoris vel pecuniae adeptione, ad liberandam Ecclesiam Dei Ierusalem profectus fuerit, iter illud pro omni paenitentia reputetur; MaC 20:816E). Apparently Alexander II, in 1063, had already granted a similar plenary indulgence to Christian soldiers fighting against the Saracens (cf. S. Löwenfeld, Epistulae Pontificum Romanorum ineditae 43 [no. 82]).

—Ed.: BullTau 4:156b–157a / Extravagantes communes, l. V, tit. 9, c. 1 (Frdb 2:1303f.). —Reg.: PoR 24917.

Indulgences

Antiquorum habet fida relatio, quod accedentibus ad honorabilem basilicam principis Apostolorum de Urbe concessae sunt magnae remissiones et indulgentiae peccatorum.

Nos igitur ... huiusmodi remissiones et indulgentias omnes et singulas ratas et gratas habentes, ipsas auctoritate Apostolica confirmamus et approbamus. ...

Nos de omnipotentis Dei misericordia et eorundem Apostolorum eius meritis et auctoritate confisi, de fratrum Nostrorum consilio et Apostolica plenitudine potestatis omnibus ... ad basilicas ipsas accedentibus reverenter, vere paenitentibus et confessis ... in huiusmodi praesenti et quolibet centesimo secuturo annis non solum plenam et largiorem, immo plenissimam omnium suorum concedemus et concedimus veniam peccatorum.

A trustworthy record of the ancients reports that those who came to the honorable basilica of the Prince of the Apostles in the city were granted copious remissions of sins and indulgences.

We, therefore, ... holding such remissions and indulgences, all and individually, as valid and pleasing, confirm and approve them by apostolic authority. ...

Confident in the mercy of God almighty and in the merits and authority of his same apostles, with the counsel of Our brothers and in the fullness of apostolic power, We grant and will grant to all those who ... approach these basilicas with reverence and having confessed and truly done penance ... in this present time and in any of the centennial years that follow, not only a full and generous, but indeed the most complete pardon of all their sins.

868

870–875: Bull Unam sanctam, November 18, 1302

This bull was occasioned by the controversy between the pope and King Philip IV of France over the legal rights of the king in regard to the temporal goods of the clergy. Since the bull claims an unlimited and direct power of the pope over the king even in temporal matters, it led to much agitation and frequently gave offense. Within the bull, there is missing a distinction that Boniface

VIII himself had explicitly made in the presence of the French legate on June 24, 1302: the king, like any other believer, is subject to the spiritual power of the pope only “with regard to sins” (ratione peccati). On the same occasion, the pope protested that he had been unjustly attacked as if “We had demanded that the king should recognize that his rule as king is from Us. For forty years. We have been experienced in the law, and We know that two powers have been ordained by God. Who, therefore, should or could believe that such foolishness, such stupidity was or is in Our head? We say that in no way do We wish to usurp the jurisdiction of the king, and thus Our brother from Porto has said” (Nos mandaverimus regi, quod recognosceret regnum a Nobis. Quadraginta anni sunt, quod Nos sumus experti in iure, et scimus, quod duae sunt potestates ordinatae a Deo; quis ergo debet credere vel potest, quod tanta fatuitas, tanta insipientia sit vel fuerit in capite Nostro? Dicimus quod in nullo volumus usurpare iurisdictionem regis, et sic frater Noster Portuensis dixit). The brother from Porto is in fact Cardinal Matthew of Aquasparta, O.F.M., who probably composed this bull (cf. J. B. Lo Grasso, cited below, no. 489; the words of Matthew of Aquasparta, ibid., no. 488).

The so-called “theory of the two swords” mentioned here—often cited in connection with Bernard of Clairvaux’s De consideratione ad Eugenium III, I, IV, c. 3 (Opera 3, ed. by J. Leclercq and H. M. Rochais (Rome, 1963), 453–55/ PL 182:776C)—comes from the patristic age. The definition in the concluding phrase of the bull (*875) is to be explained in light of the antecedent and subsequent doctrine of the Church. Thomas Aquinas found, within the context of the closing statement, an emphasis on the necessity of the Church for salvation (Contra errores Graecorum 32, Parma ed. 15 [1865], 257a / in the Mandonnet ed., Opuscula omnia 3 [Paris, 1927], 325 / Marietti ed., Opuscula theologica 1 [Turin], 328, no. 1077). The strictness of this bull was eased by Clement V in the brief Meruit, of February 1, 1306 (published in Lo Grasso, cited below, no. 498; Frdb 2:1300). Its definition was confirmed at the Fifth Lateran Council: sess. 11, December 19, 1516 (MaC 32:968E).

Ed.: J. B. Lo Grasso, Ecclesia et Status: De mutuis officiis et iuribus fontes selecti, 2nd ed. (Rome, 1952), nos. 491–97: this is the first critical edition of this bull. Since the original text was been lost, it is based on a copy conserved among the records of Boniface VIII: Vatican Archives, Register of the Roman pontiffs, vol. 50 (years 7–9), fol. 387 / Extravagantes communes. I, I, tit. 8, c. 1 (Frdb 2:1245). —Reg.: PoR 25189.

The Unity of the Church

870 Unam sanctam Ecclesiam catholicam et ipsam apostolicam urgente fide credere cogimur et tenere, nosque hanc firmiter credimus et simpliciter confitemur, extra quam nec salus est nec remissio peccatorum . . . ; quae unum corpus mysticum repraesentat, cuius corporis caput Christus, Christi vero Deus. In qua “unus Dominus, una fides et unum baptisma” [Eph 4:5]. Una nempe fuit diluvii tempore arca Noe, unam Ecclesiam praefigurans, quae in uno cubito consummata unum, Noe videlicet, gubernatorem habuit et rectorem, extra quam omnia subsistentia super terram legimus fuisse deleta.

871 Hanc autem veneramus et unicam, dicente Domino in Propheta: “Erue a framea, Deus, animam meam, et de manu canis unicam meam” [Ps 21:21]. Pro anima enim, id est pro se ipso, capite simul oravit et corpore, quod corpus unicam scilicet Ecclesiam nominavit, propter sponsi, fidei, sacramentorum et caritatis Ecclesiae unitatem. Haec est “tunica” illa Domini “inconsutilis” [Io 19:23], quae scissa non fuit, sed sorte provenit.

872 Igitur Ecclesiae unius et unicae unum corpus, unum caput, non duo capita quasi monstrum, Christus videlicet et Christi vicarius Petrus Petrique successor, dicente Domino ipsi Petro: “Pasce oves meas” [Io 21:17]. “Meas”, inquit, et generaliter, non singulariter has vel illas: per quod commisisse sibi intelligitur universas. Sive ergo Graeci sive alii se dicant Petro eiusque successoribus non esse commissos: fateantur necesse est se de ovibus Christi non esse, dicente Domino in Ioanne, “unum ovile, unum et unicum esse pastorem” [Io 10:16].

That there is only one, holy, catholic, and apostolic Church we are compelled by faith’s urging to believe and hold, and we firmly believe in her and sincerely confess her outside of whom there is neither salvation nor remission of sins . . . ; and she represents the one mystical body. Of this body, Christ (is) the head, but the (head) of Christ (is) God. In her (there) is “one Lord, one faith, and one baptism” [Eph 4:5]. Indeed, at the time of the flood there was one ark of Noah, prefiguring the one Church, which, made complete in one cubit, had one governor and ruler, that is, Noah; and outside of her, we read, all things subsisting on earth were destroyed.

We, indeed, however, venerate her as unique, since the Lord says in the prophet, “Save my soul, God, from the sword and my only one from the power of the dog” [Ps 22:21]. For he prayed simultaneously for the soul, that is, for himself, the head, and the body, because he named the body “unique”, that is, the Church, on account of the unity of the Church’s spouse, faith, sacraments, and love. She is that “unstitched tunic” [Jn 19:23], which was not ripped, but was brought forth by lot.

This one and unique Church, therefore, (has) not two heads, like a monster, but one body and one head, namely, Christ, and his vicar, Peter’s successor, for the Lord said to Peter himself: “Feed my sheep” [Jn 21:17]. “My”, he said in general, not individually, meaning these or those; whereby it is understood that he confided all his sheep to him. If, therefore, Greeks or others should say that they were not confided to Peter and his successors, let them necessarily confess that they are not among Christ’s sheep; for the Lord said in John: “There shall be one fold and one, unique shepherd” [Jn 10:16].

The Spiritual Power of the Church

In hac eiusque potestate duos esse gladios, spirituales scilicet et temporales, evangelicis dictis instruemur [Adducuntur Lc 22:38 et Mt 26:52]. . . .

Uterque ergo est in potestate Ecclesiae, spiritualis scilicet gladius et materialis. Sed is quidem pro Ecclesia, ille vero ab Ecclesia exercendus. Ille sacerdotis, is manu regum et militum, sed ad nutum et patientiam sacerdotis. Oportet autem gladium esse sub gladio, et temporalem auctoritatem spirituali subiici potestati. . . . Spirituales et dignitate et nobilitate terrenam quamlibet praecellere potestatem, oportet tanto clarius nos fateri, quanto spiritualia temporalia antecellunt. . . . Nam Veritate testante, spiritualis potestas terrenam potestatem instituere habet, et iudicare,¹ si bona non fuerit. . . .

Ergo si deviat terrena potestas, iudicabitur a potestate spirituali; sed, si deviat spiritualis minor, a suo superiore; si vero suprema, a solo Deo, non ab homine poterit iudicari, testante Apostolo: “Spiritualis homo iudicat omnia, ipse autem a nemine iudicatur” [1 Cor 2:15].

Est autem haec auctoritas, etsi data sit homini et exerceatur per hominem, non humana, sed potius divina potestas, ore divino Petro data, sibi que suisque successoribus in ipso Christo, quem confessus fuit petra firmata, dicente Domino ipsi Petro: “Quodcumque ligaveris” etc. [Mt 16:19]. Quicumque igitur huic potestati a Deo sic ordinatae “resistit, Dei ordinationi resistit” [Rm 13:2], nisi duo, sicut Manichaeus, fingat esse principia, quod falsum et haereticum iudicamus, quia, testante Moyse, non in principiis, sed “in principio caelum Deus creavit et terram” [Gn 1:1].

Porro subesse Romano Pontifici omni humanae creaturae declaramus, dicimus, diffinimus omnino esse de necessitate salutis.

We are taught by the Gospel sayings that in his power there are two swords, that is, the spiritual and the temporal [reference is made to Lk 22:38; Mt 26:52]. . . .

Both are therefore in the Church’s power, that is, the spiritual sword and the material (sword). But the latter is to be employed for the Church, the former by the Church; the former (is by the hand) of the priest, the latter by the hand of kings and warriors, but at the priest’s will and forbearance. Sword, however, should be subordinate to sword, and temporal power to spiritual. . . . The spiritual should surpass any temporal power whatsoever in dignity and nobility, and we should confess this the more clearly insofar as spiritual things surpass temporal things. . . . For Truth bears witness that the spiritual power has to establish earthly power and judge it,¹ if it has not been good. . . .

Therefore, if earthly power strays, it will be judged by the spiritual power; but, if a lower spiritual power deviates, (it will be judged) by its superior; if the highest deviates, it can be judged by God alone, not a man, as the apostle testifies: “The spiritual man judges all things, but he is judged by no one” [1 Cor 2:15].

This authority, however, although given to man and exercised through man, is not human but rather divine power, given to Peter by the divine mouth and confirmed for him and his successors in Christ himself, whom he, as the rock, confessed, as the Lord said to Peter himself: “Whatever you bind”, and so on [Mt 16:19]. Whoever therefore resists this power ordained by God “resists what God has ordained” [Rm 13:2], unless, like a Manichaean, he imagines that there are two first principles [duo principia], which we judge false and heretical, because, as Moses witnesses, not in the beginnings [in principiis], but “in the beginning [in principio] God created heaven and earth” [cf. Gen 1:1].

Furthermore we declare, state, and define that it is absolutely necessary for the salvation of all human creatures that they submit to the Roman pontiff.

BENEDICT XI: October 22, 1303–July 7, 1304

880: Constitution Inter cunctas sollicitudines, February 17, 1304

The decree of the Fourth Lateran Council, chap. 21 (*812), required the faithful to confess at least one time each year to their own parish priest; otherwise, they were free to choose their own confessors. By means of the bull Ad fructus uberes, of December 13, 1281, Martin IV had granted to the mendicant orders the right to hear confessions independent of the permission of the Ordinary. Some parish priests began to insist that confessions made to the mendicants be repeated to the parish priests. Boniface VIII revoked the privilege granted by Martin IV (Super cathedram, February 18, 1300). However, Benedict XI, himself a Dominican, renewed the privilege by means of this bull, yet he still commended the repetition of confession. Shortly afterward, by the initiative of the Council of Vienne (Dudum a Bonifacio, May 6, 1312), the constitution [of Boniface VIII] was once again abrogated. This, however, did not terminate the controversy: cf. *921–924.

*873 ¹ Hugh of St. Victor, De sacramentis, lib. II, p. II, c. 4, no. 4 (PL 176:418C).

Ed.: C. Grandjean, Les Registres de Benoît XI (Paris, 1905), 718, no. 1170 / Extravagantes communes I. V, tit. 7, c. 1 (Frdb 2:1298f.). —Reg.: Grandjean, as cited above; PoR 25370.

Repetition of Confession

- 880 ... Licet ... de necessitate non sit, iterum eadem confiteri peccata, tamen, quia propter erubescendum, quae magna est paenitentiae pars, ut eorundem peccatorum iteretur confessio, reputamus salubre: districte iniungimus, ut Fratres [Praedicatores et Minores] ipsi confitentes attente moneant, et in suis praedicationibus exhortentur, quod suis sacerdotibus saltem semel confiteantur in anno, asserendo, id ad animarum profectum procul dubio pertinere.
- ... Although ... it is not necessary to confess the same sins a second time, nevertheless, because of the shame that is a large part of repentance, We consider it of benefit to repeat the confession of the same sins: We strongly enjoin the Brothers [Preachers and Minors] carefully to advise those confessing and in their sermons exhort that they confess to their own priests at least once in a year, declaring that without doubt this pertains to the advancement of souls.

CLEMENT V: June 5, 1305–April 20, 1314

Council of VIENNE (Fifteenth Ecumenical): October 16, 1311–May 6, 1312

The Acts of this council are, for the most part, lost. Above all else, Clement had three aims in mind for this council: (1) the judgment of the Templars [or Knights of the Temple], who were suppressed by the bull Vox in excelso (ed. by C.J. von Hefele, in ThQ 48 [1866]: 63–76), which was advanced at the meeting of March 22, 1312, and solemnly promulgated on April 3 in the second session; (2) assistance for the Holy Land; (3) a reform of the discipline of the Church, especially in regard to the poverty of the mendicant orders. In addition, the dogmatic errors of the “Spirituals” were condemned.

891–908: Session 3, May 6, 1312

a. Constitution Ad nostrum qui

The communities of the Beghards and the Beguines had already been suspected of heresy at numerous synods in Germany (e.g., at the Synods of Trier of 1227 and 1310 as well as the Synods of Mainz of 1259 and 1310). Some of them had been influenced by the doctrines of the Brethren of the Free Spirit (cf. *866).

Ed.: Clementinae [= Clement V, Constitutiones], I. V, tit. 3, c. 3 (Frdb 2:1183) / MaC 25:410A–D / HaC 7:1358E–1359B / CoeD, 3rd ed., 383₂₇–384₆.

Errors of the Beghards and the Beguines on the State of Perfection

- 891 (1) Quod homo in vita praesenti tantum et talem perfectionis gradum potest acquirere, quod reddetur penitus impeccabilis et amplius in gratia proficere non valebit: nam, ut dicunt, si quis semper posset proficere, posset aliquis Christo perfectior inveniri.
- (1) Man in the present life can acquire so great and such a degree of perfection that he will be rendered inwardly sinless and that he will not be able to advance farther in grace; for, as they say, if anyone could always advance, he could become more perfect than Christ.
- 892 (2) Quod ieiunare non oportet hominem nec orare, postquam gradum perfectionis huiusmodi fuerit assecutus; quia tunc sensualitas est ita perfecte spiritui et rationi subiecta, quod homo potest libere corpori concedere quidquid placet.
- (2) It is not necessary for man to fast or to pray after he has attained a degree of such perfection; because then his sensuality is so perfectly subject to the spirit and to reason that man can freely grant to the body whatever it pleases.
- 893 (3) Quod illi, qui sunt in praedicto gradu perfectionis et spiritu libertatis, non sunt humanae subiecti oboedientiae, nec ad aliqua praecepta Ecclesiae obligantur; quia, ut asserunt, “ubi spiritus Domini, ibi libertas” [2 Cor 3:17].
- (3) Those who are in the aforementioned degree of perfection and in that spirit of liberty are not subject to human obedience, nor are they bound to any precepts of the Church, because (as they assert) “where the spirit of the Lord is, there is liberty” [2 Cor 3:17].
- 894 (4) Quod homo potest ita finalem beatitudinem secundum omnem gradum perfectionis in praesenti assequi, sicut eam in vita obtinebit beata.
- (4) In the present life, man can attain final beatitude according to every degree of perfection just as he will obtain it in the blessed life.

(5) Quod quaelibet intellectualis natura in se ipsa naturaliter est beata, quodque anima non indiget lumine gloriae, ipsam elevante ad Deum videndum et eo beate fruendum.

(6) Quod se in actibus exercere virtutum est hominis imperfecti, et perfecta anima licentiat a se virtutes.

(7) Quod mulieris osculum, cum ad hoc natura non inclinet, est mortale peccatum; actus autem carnalis, cum ad hoc natura inclinet, peccatum non est, maxime cum tentatur exercens.

(8) Quod in elevatione corporis Iesu Christi non debent assurgere nec eidem reverentiam exhibere: asserentes, quod esset imperfectionis eisdem, si a puritate et altitudine suae contemplationis tantum descenderent, quod circa ministerium seu sacramentum Eucharistiae aut circa passionem humanitatis Christi aliqua cogitent.

[Censura:] Nos sacro approbante Concilio sectam ipsam cum praemissis erroribus damnamus et reprobamus omnino inhibentes districtius, ne quis ipsos de cetero teneat, approbet vel defendat.

(5) Any intellectual nature in its own self is naturally blessed, and the soul does not need the light of glory raising it to see God and to enjoy him beatifically. 895

(6) It is characteristic of the imperfect man to train himself in acts of virtue, and the perfect soul dismisses virtues from itself. 896

(7) To kiss a woman, when nature does not incline to this, is a mortal sin; but the carnal act, when nature inclines to this, is not a sin, especially when the one who does it is tempted. 897

(8) In the elevation of the body of Jesus Christ, (the perfect) should neither rise up nor manifest reverence for it, because for them, as they maintain, it would be a sign of imperfection to descend so far from the purity and height of their contemplations as to give some thought to the minister or the sacrament of the Eucharist or the Passion of Christ's humanity. 898

[Censure:] With the approval of the sacred council, we condemn and completely reject this sect together with the aforementioned errors, and we severely prohibit anyone in the future from holding, approving, or defending them. 899

b. Constitution Fidei catholicae

Some doctrines of Peter John Olivi (Olieu), O.F.M., the guide of the Spirituals, had already been examined in 1274 at the request of the general of his order. On that occasion, his denounced books were burned. In 1282–1283, his writings were once again censured by seven [theological] masters from Paris. They declared thirty-four of his propositions to be “bad sounding” (male sonantes) and “dangerous” (periculosas), and they composed a list of twenty-two dogmatic propositions that he was obliged to endorse. Affirming his fidelity to the Church, Peter died on March 14, 1298. However, the dispute surrounding his teachings continued until the Council of Vienne brought to completion the process begun by the papal curia in 1309.

Olivi's position regarding the wounds in the side of Christ (*901) is found in his Postilla in Johannem (not conserved in its original form: all of the shocking segments have been removed; likewise, the passages that offended the censor have been suppressed; cf. F. Ehrle, in ArchLKGMA 3 [1887]: 489–91). On the teachings regarding the human soul (*902), cf. his Quaestiones in Sententias, 1. II, q. 51, 56, 59 (ed. by B. Jansen, vol. 2 [Quarrachi, 1924], 104–26, 136–98 [cf. 302–4, 518–68]). On the effect of baptism (*903f.), cf. the Quaestio de merito Christi (Codex Vaticanus Burghesianus 173, fols. 54–60).

Ed.: Clementinae, 1. I, tit. 1, c. 1 (Frdb 2:1133f.) / MaC 25:410E–411D / HaC 7:1359C–1360A / COeD, 3rd ed., 360f.

Errors Attributed to Peter John Olivi

[De duabus naturis Christi.] Fidei catholicae fundamento, praeter quod, teste Apostolo, nemo potest aliud ponere [cf. 1 Cor 3:11], firmiter inhaerentes, aperte cum sancta matre Ecclesia confitemur, unigenitum Dei Filium in iis omnibus, in quibus Deus Pater existit, una cum Patre aeternaliter subsistentem, partes nostrae naturae simul unitas, ex quibus ipse in se verus Deus existens fieret verus homo, humanum videlicet corpus passibile et animam intellectivam seu rationalem, ipsum corpus vere per se et essentialiter informantem, assumpsisse ex tempore in virginali thalamo ad unitatem suae hypostasis et personae.

[The two natures of Christ] In adhering firmly to the foundation of the Catholic faith, besides which, as the apostle testifies, no one can lay any other [1 Cor 3:11], we openly confess, with Holy Mother Church, that the only begotten Son of God, eternally subsisting one with the Father in everything in which the Father exists as God, assumed in time in the virginal womb (of Mary), in the unity of his hypostasis and person, the parts of our nature simultaneously united, by which he, existing in himself as true God, became true man: namely, (with) a human body capable of suffering and an intellectual or rational soul truly informing, through itself and essentially, (his) very body. 900

901 [De vulnere lateris Christi.] Et quod in hac assumpta natura ipsum Dei Verbum pro omnium operanda salute non solum affigi cruci et in ea mori voluit, sed etiam emisso iam spiritu perforari lancea sustinuit latus suum, ut exinde profluentibus undis aquae et sanguinis [cf. Io 19:34] formaretur unica et immaculata ac virgo sancta mater Ecclesia, coniux Christi, sicut de latere primi hominis soporati Eva sibi in coniugium est formata [cf. Gn 2:21s], ut sic certae figurae primi et veteris Adae, qui secundum Apostolum “est forma futuri” [Rm 5:14], in nostro novissimo Adam [cf. I Cor 15:45], id est Christo, veritas responderet.

Haec est, inquam, veritas, illius praegrans aquilae vallata testimonio, quam propheta vidit Ezechiel [cf. Ez 1:4–28] animalibus ceteris evangelicis transvolantem, beati Iohannis videlicet, Apostoli et Evangelistae, qui sacramenti huius rem gestam narrans et ordinem in Evangelio suo dixit: “Ad Iesum autem cum venissent, ut viderunt eum iam mortuum, non fregerunt eius crura, sed unus militum lancea latus eius aperuit, et continuo exivit sanguis et aqua; et qui vidit, testimonium perhibuit, et verum est testimonium eius, et ille scit, quia vera dicit, ut et vos credatis” [Io 19:33–35].

Nos igitur ad tam praeclarum testimonium ac sanctorum Patrum et Doctorum communem sententiam apostolicae considerationis, ad quam dumtaxat haec declarare pertinet, aciem convertentes, sacro approbante Concilio, declaramus, praedictum Apostolum et Evangelistam Ioannem rectum in praemissis factae rei ordinem tenuisse, narrando, quod Christo “iam mortuus unus militum lancea latus eius aperuit”.

902 [De anima ut forma corporis.] Porro doctrinam omnem seu positionem temere asserentem, aut vertentem in dubium, quod substantia animae rationalis seu intellectivae vere ac per se humani corporis non sit forma, velut erroneam ac veritati catholicae inimicam fidei, praedicto sacro approbante Concilio reprobamus: definientes, ut cunctis nota sit fidei sinceræ veritas ac pracludatur universis erroribus aditus, ne subintrent, quod quisquis deinceps asserere, defendere seu tenere pertinaciter praesumpserit, quod anima rationalis seu intellectiva non sit forma corporis humani per se et essentialiter, tamquam haereticus sit censendus.

903 [De effectu baptismi.] Ad hoc baptismum unicum baptizatos omnes in Christo regenerans est, sicut unus Deus ac fides unica [cf. Eph 4:5] ab omnibus fideliter confitendum, quod celebratum in aqua in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti credimus esse tam adultis quam parvulis communiter perfectum remedium ad salutem.

[The wounds in the side of Christ.] And that in this assumed nature the Word of God willed for the salvation of all not only to be nailed to the Cross and to die on it, but also, having already breathed forth his spirit, to permit his side to be pierced by a lance, so that from the outflowing of water and blood [cf. Jn 19:34] there might be formed the one, immaculate, and holy virginal Mother Church, the Bride of Christ, as from the side of the first man in his sleep Eve was fashioned as his wife [cf. Gen 2:21f.], so that to the specific figure of the first and old Adam, who according to the apostle [Rom 5:14] is “a type of the one who was to come”, the truth might correspond in our last Adam [cf. I Cor 15:45], that is to say, in Christ.

This, I say, is the truth, confirmed by the testimony of that very great eagle that the prophet Ezekiel [cf. Ezek 1:4–28] saw flying above the other evangelical animals, namely, blessed John, the apostle and evangelist, who, in describing the reality and order of this mystery, said in his Gospel: “But when they came to Jesus and saw that he was already dead, they did not break his legs. But one of the soldiers pierced his side with a spear, and at once there came out blood and water. He who saw it has borne witness—his testimony is true, and he knows that he tells the truth—that you also may believe” [Jn 19:33–35].

We, therefore, directing our apostolic attention, to which alone it belongs to define these things, to such splendid testimony and to the common opinion of the holy Fathers and Doctors, declare with the approval of the sacred council that the said apostle and evangelist, John, observed the right order of events in saying that when Christ was “already dead one of the soldiers opened his side with a spear”.

[The soul as the form of the body.] Furthermore, with the approval of the holy council We reject as erroneous and contrary to the truth of the Catholic faith any doctrine or opinion that rashly asserts that the substance of the rational and intellectual soul is not truly and of itself the form of the human body or that calls this into doubt. In order that the truth of the pure faith may be known to all and the path to error barred, We define that from now on whoever presumes to assert, defend, or obstinately hold that the rational and intellectual soul is not of itself and essentially the form of the human body is to be censured as heretic.

[The effect of baptism.] All are faithfully to profess that there is one baptism that regenerates all those baptized in Christ, just as there is one God and one faith [cf. Eph 4:5]. We believe that when baptism is administered in water in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, it is a perfect means of salvation for both adults and children.

Verum quia quantum ad effectum baptismi in parvulis reperiuntur doctores quidam theologi opiniones contrarias habuisse, quibusdam ex ipsis dicentibus, per virtutem baptismi parvulis quidem culpam remitti, sed gratiam non conferri, aliis econtra asserentibus, quod et culpa iisdem in baptismo remittitur, et virtutes ac informans gratia infunduntur quoad habitum [cf *780], etsi non pro illo tempore quoad usum:

Nos autem attendentes generalem efficaciam mortis Christi, quae per bapisma applicatur pariter omnibus baptizatis, opinionem secundam, quae dicit, tam parvulis quam adultis conferri in baptismo informantem gratiam et virtutes, tamquam probabiliorem, et dictis Sanctorum et doctorum modernorum theologiae magis consonam et concordem, sacro approbante Concilio duximus eligendam.

c. Constitution Ex gravi ad Nos

Ed.: Clementinae, l. V, tit. 5, c. 1 (Frdb 2:1184) / MaC 25:411DE / HaC 7:1360A / COeD, 3rd ed., 384f.

Usury

... Si quis in illum errorem inciderit, ut pertinaciter affirmare praesumat, exercere usuras non esse peccatum, decernimus eum velut haereticum puniendum.

Yet because, as regards the effect of baptism in children, it is found that certain theologians have held contrary opinions, some saying that by baptism guilt is indeed remitted in infants but grace is not conferred, others on the contrary asserting that both guilt is remitted and the virtues and sanctifying grace are infused with regard to habit [cf. *780] though for the time being not with regard to use:

We, considering the general efficacy of Christ's death, which through baptism is applied in like manner to all the baptized, choose, with the approval of the sacred council, the second opinion, which says that sanctifying grace and the virtues are conferred in baptism on both infants and adults, as more probable and more in harmony with the words of the saints and of modern doctors of theology.

... If, indeed, someone has fallen into the error of presuming to affirm pertinaciously that the practice of usury is not sinful, We decree that he is to be punished as a heretic.

d. Constitution Exivi de paradiso

Chapter 6 of the rule of St. Francis, approved by Honorius III, stipulated that all property, whether private or common, is to be excluded except for the simple "use" of things. The bull attempted to resolve the dispute among the Friars Minor regarding the interpretation of this point of the rule. Blamed, most of all, was Peter John Olivi, who had defended a spiritualist concept of the religious poverty: "It is heretical to say that in the vow of evangelical poverty 'poor usage' is not to be included" (Haereticum est dicere, in voto paupertatis evangelicae, usum pauperem non includi; Codex Vaticanus Burghesianus 358, fol. 193rb).

Ed.: Clementinae, l. V, tit. 11, c. 1 (Frdb 2:1198f.) / BullFr 5:85 / COeD, 3rd ed., 400₁₆₋₃₁.

Error on the Obligation of the (Franciscan) Vow of Poverty

... Succrevit non parum scrupulosa quaestio inter fratres, videlicet: utrum ex suae professione regulae obligentur ad arctum et tenuem sive pauperem usum rerum; quibusdam ex ipsis credentibus et dicentibus quod, sicut quoad dominium rerum habent ex voto abdicationem arctissimam, ita ipsis quoad usum arctitudo maxima et exilitas est indicta; aliis in contrarium asserentibus, quod ex professione sua ad nullum usum pauperem qui non exprimatur in regula obligantur, licet teneantur ad usum moderatum temperantiae, sicut et magis ex concedenti, quam ceteri christiani.

Volentes itaque conscientiarum praedictorum fratrum providere quieti et his altercationibus finem dare, declarando dicimus, quod fratres Minores ex professione suae regulae specialiter obligantur ad arctos usus seu pauperes, qui in ipsorum regula continentur, et eo obligationis modo, sub quo continet seu ponit

... A question of no little difficulty has sprung up among the brethren, namely: whether by the profession of their rule they are bound to a restricted and meager or poor use of things, some ... saying that, just as by their vow they make the strictest possible abdication as regards the ownership of things, so as regards use, the greatest restriction and meagerness is declared binding on them in the same way; others asserting, on the contrary, that they are not bound by their profession to any restricted use beyond what is expressed in the rule, although they are bound to the moderate use dictated by temperance and, fittingly, more so than other Christians.

Wishing therefore to provide for the tranquility of the consciences of the aforesaid brethren and to put an end to these arguments, We make the declaration that the Friars Minor by the profession of their rule are specially obliged to the restricted or poor use of things contained in their rule and by the kind of obligation under which the rule regula dictos usus. Dicere autem, sicut aliqui asserere perhibentur, quod haereticum sit, tenere usum pauperem includi vel non includi sub voto evangelicae paupertatis, praesumptuosum et temerarium iudicamus.

contains or puts such use. But to say, as some are alleged to have said, that it is heretical to hold that this poor use is or is not included under their vow of evangelical poverty, We judge to be presumptuous and rash.

JOHN XXII: August 7, 1316–December 4, 1334

910-916: Constitution Gloriosam Ecclesiam, January 23, 1318

The Friars Minor were divided over the interpretation of the rule of St. Francis pertaining to the “poor use” of things. The “Conventuals” allowed common property, fixed revenues, and possession of immovable property. The “Spirituals” rejected these. Some of the Spirituals, with the approval of Celestine V, left the community in 1294 and established their own congregation: “the Poor Hermits”, who were also popularly called the “Fraticelli”. The abolition of the decrees of Celestine V by Boniface VIII (April 8, 1295) deprived them of their independence. They refused the reunification desired by Clement V (Exivi de paradiso, May 6, 1312 [cf. *908]) and John XXII (Sancta Romana Ecclesia, December 30, 1317). Since they identified their rule and their interpretation with the Gospel itself, they described John XXII (who had conceded certain mitigations) as an enemy of the Gospel who had consequently lost all juridical authority and sacerdotal power. Their errors, at least in part, were taken from the Postilla super Apocalypsim of Peter John Olivi, condemned by the pope on February 8, 1326. Since this is not yet published, recourse can be made, in its place (according to J. Koch, ThQ 113 [1932]: 145–47), to the extracts of the eight censors who, in 1319–1320, drafted a votum on the Postilla. This votum was published by S. Baluzi and I.D. Mansi, Miscellanea 2 (Lucca, 1761), 258–70. On proposition 1, cf. the votum, art. 5, 7, 9, 17; cf. 12, 18f.; on proposition 5, cf. the votum, art. 3f., 9, 16, 22.

Ed.: BullTau 4:263b–266a / BullCocq 3/II, 162a–163b / BullFr 5:139–41 (no. 302) / DuPIA 1/I, 291ab.

The Church and the Sacraments, against the Fraticelli

910 § 12. ... Praedicti temeritatis atque impietatis filii, ut habet fide digna relatio, ad eam sunt mentis inopiam devoluti, quod adversus praeclarissimam et saluberrimam christianae fidei veritatem impie sentiunt, sacramenta Ecclesiae veneranda contemnunt et in gloriosum Ecclesiae Romanae primatum, cunctis nationibus percellendum, ab ipso conterendi citius impetu caeci furoris impingunt.

§ 12. ... The sons of the above-mentioned rashness and impiety have been driven to this weakness of mind, that they think impiously in opposition to the most renowned and salutary truth of the Christian faith; they condemn the sacraments of the Church, which should be venerated, and in an attack of blind fury they, who should be crushed by it, press against the glorious primacy of the Roman Church, saying that it ought to be overthrown by all nations.

911 (1) § 14. Primus itaque error, qui de istorum officina tenebrosa prorumpit, duas fingit ecclesias, unam carnalem, divitiis pressam, effluentem divitiis, sceleribus maculatam, cui Romanum praesulem aliosque inferiores praelatos dominari asserunt; aliam spiritualem, frugalitate mundam, virtute decoram, paupertate succinctam, in qua ipsi soli eorumque complices continentur, cui etiam ipsi spiritualis vitae merito, si qua fides est adhibenda mendaciis, principantur.

(1) § 14. Thus, the first error that breaks forth from their dark workshop invents two churches, the one carnal, packed with riches, overflowing with riches, stained with crimes, which they declare the Roman prefect and other inferior prelates dominate; the other spiritual, cleansed by frugality, beautiful in virtue, bound by poverty, in which only they and their companions are included and which they, because of the merit of their spiritual life, rule, if any faith should be given to lies.

912 (2) § 16. Secundus error, quo praedictorum insolentium conscientia maculatur, venerabiles Ecclesiae sacerdotes aliosque ministros sic iurisdictionis et ordinis clamit auctoritate desertos, ut nec sententias ferre, nec sacramenta conficere, nec subiectum populum instruere valeant vel docere, illos fingentes omni ecclesiastica potestate privatos, quos a sua perfidia viderint alienos: quia apud ipsos solos (ut ipsi somniant) sicut spiritualis vitae sanctitas, sic auctoritas perseverat, in qua re Donatarum sequuntur errorem. ...

(2) § 16. The second error, by which the conscience of the above-mentioned insolent is stained, cries out that the venerable priests of the Church and other ministers of jurisdiction and orders are so devoid of authority that they cannot pass sentences or perform the sacraments or instruct or teach the subject people, imagining that these have been deprived of all ecclesiastical power, whom they see as free of their own heresy; because only in themselves (as they themselves vainly think) do the sanctity of a spiritual life and, likewise, authority remain; and in this matter they are following the error of the Donatists. ...

(3) § 18. Tertius istorum error in Waldensium errore coniurat, quoniam et ii et illi in nullum eventum asserunt fore iurandum, dogmatizantes mortalis criminis contagione pollui et poena teneri, quos contigerit iuramenti religione constringit.

(4) § 20. Quarta huiusmodi impiorum blasphemia de praedictorum Waldensium venenato fonte prorumpens, sacerdotes rite etiam et legitime secundum formam Ecclesiae ordinatos, quibuslibet tamen criminibus pressos, non posse conficere vel conferre ecclesiastica sacramenta confingit.

(5) § 22. Quintus error sic istorum hominum mentes obcaecat, ut Evangelium Christi in se solis hoc in tempore asserant esse completum, quod hactenus (ut ipsi somniant) obiectum fuerat, immo prorsus exstinctum.

§ 24. Multa sunt alia, quae isti praesumptuosi homines contra coniugii venerabile sacramentum garrere dicuntur, multa, quae de cursu temporum et fine saeculi somniant, multa, quae de Antichristi adventu, quem iamiam instare asserunt, flebili vanitate divulgant. Quae omnia, quia partim haeretica, partim insana, partim fabulosa cognoscimus, damnanda potius cum suis auctoribus, quam stilo prosequenda aut refellenda censemus. . . .

(3) § 18. The third error of these men conspires with the error of the Waldensians, since the one and the other maintain that an oath is never to be made under any circumstance, teaching that those who happen to be bound by the obligation of an oath are polluted by the contagion of mortal sin and subject to punishment. 913

(4) § 20. The fourth blasphemy of such wicked men, breaking forth from the poisoned fount of the Waldensian teachings, pretends that priests rightly and even legitimately ordained according to the form of the Church, yet weighed down by any sins, cannot consecrate or confer the ecclesiastical sacraments. 914

(5) § 22. The fifth error so blinds the minds of these that they declare that the Gospel of Christ has been fulfilled in them alone at this time, because up to now (as they foolishly think) it has been concealed or indeed entirely extinct. 915

§ 24. There are many other things that these very presumptuous men are said to babble against the venerable sacrament of matrimony; many things that they foolishly believe concerning the course of time and the end of time; many things that they propagate with lamentable vanity concerning the coming of the Antichrist, which they declare even now to be close at hand. All these things, because we recognize them as partly heretical, partly senseless, partly fabulous, we decree must be condemned together with their authors rather than pursued or refuted with a pen. . . . 916

921–924: Constitution Vas electionis, July 24, 1321

In the controversy regarding the faculty of the mendicants to hear confessions, John de Polliaco (Pouilly), professor at the University of Paris, defended, in opposition to the mendicant friars, the exclusive right of the parish priests. He was prosecuted before the papal curia of Avignon. His error was based on a false understanding of the Church. The condemned propositions are taken from his response at Avignon to his censured articles: proposition 1 responds to art. 3; propositions 2 and 3 respond to art. 4; the text is supplied by J. Koch, in ThQ 113 (1932): 148f. His retraction is published in DenCh 2:245 (no. 799). These same errors, reappearing a century later, were once again condemned by Eugene IV in his constitution Gregis nobis, of January 16, 1447 (BullTau 5:85f.).

Ed.: DenCh 2:243f. (no. 798) / Extravagantes communes, l. V, tit. 3, c. 2 (Frdb 2:1291) / MaC 25:576E–577A.

The Errors of John de Polliaco on Jurisdiction over Penitents

(1) Quod confessi fratribus, habentibus licentiam generalem audiendi confessiones, tenentur eadem peccata, quae confessi fuerant, iterum confiteri proprio sacerdoti.

(2) Quod stante Statuto [*Concilii Lateranensis IV, 812] “Omnis utriusque sexus” edito in concilio generali ita Romanus Pontifex non potest facere, quod parochiani non teneantur confiteri omnia peccata sua semel in anno proprio sacerdoti, quem dicit esse parochialem curatum; immo nec Deus posset hoc facere: quia, ut dicebat, implicat contradictionem.

(1) That they who have confessed to friars having the general permission of hearing confessions are bound to confess again to their own priest those same sins that have been confessed. 921

(2) As long as the existing statute Omnis utriusque sexus of the general council [*Fourth Lateran Council, 812] stands, the Roman pontiff cannot bring it about that parishioners are not bound to confess all their sins once a year to their own priest, who is said to be the pastor of the parish; on the contrary, not even God can do this because, as was said, this implies a contradiction. 922

- 923 (3) Quod Papa non potest dare generalem potestatem audiendi confessiones, immo nec Deus, quin confessus habenti generalem licentiam teneatur iterum confiteri suo proprio sacerdoti, quem dicit esse (ut praemittitur) parochialem curatum.
- (3) That the pope cannot give the general power of hearing confessions, indeed, neither can God, without the one who has confessed to one having general power being bound to confess these same sins again to his own priest, who, it says (as We have already indicated), is the parish curate.
- 924 [Censura:] ... Comperimus, praemissos articulos doctrinam non sanam, sed periculosam multum et veritati contrariam continere. Quos etiam articulos omnes et singulos idem magister Ioannes ... revocavit... Omnes articulos et quemlibet eorum tamquam falsos et erroneos et a doctrina sana devios auctoritate Apostolica damnamus et reprobamus de fratrum Nostrorum consilio ..., doctrinam ipsis contrarium veram esse et catholicam asserentes....
- [Censure:]... We have found that the aforementioned articles contain a doctrine that is not sound but very dangerous and contrary to the truth. These articles—each and every one of them—the same Master John ... retracted.... On the advice of Our brothers, in virtue of (Our) apostolic authority, We condemn and reject all these articles and each of them as false and erroneous and inconsistent with sound doctrine ... while affirming the doctrine contrary to them to be true and catholic....

925–926: Letter Nequaquam sine dolore to the Armenians, November 21, 1321

The text included here is an almost literal repetition of the profession of faith of Michael Palaeologus [*857–858]: worth noting, though, is the addition “and in diverse places” (ac locis disparibus, *926), which would suggest limbo. Certain older editions present a text that confirms this. Namely, after the words “to be punished, though, with different pains and in different places” (poenis tamen ac locis disparibus puniendas), there follows: “that is to say, the souls of infants are subjected in limbo to the pain of loss (of everlasting beatitude), but not of sense” (nimirum puerorum animas poena damni, non sensus, in limbo afficiendas); this, however, is a marginal gloss later inserted into the text of the bull, as the edition of F. Segarra clearly shows.

Ed.: F. Segarra, in EstEcl 5 (1926): 441 / BarAE, at year 1321, no. 11.

The Destiny of the Dead

- 925 [Docet Romana Ecclesia] ... illorum vero animas, qui post sacramentum baptismatis susceptum nullam omnino peccati maculam incurrerunt, illas etiam, quae post contractam peccati maculam vel in suis manentes corporibus vel eisdem exutae sunt purgatae, in caelum mox recipi.
- [The Roman Church teaches] ... Truly the souls of those who, after receiving the sacrament of baptism, have not fallen into any stain of sin at all, as well as those who, after having contracted the stain of sin, are purified—either while they remain in their bodies or after they have departed them—are immediately received into heaven.
- 926 Illorum autem animas, qui in mortali peccato vel cum solo originali decedunt, mox in infernum descendere, poenis tamen ac locis disparibus puniendas.
- The souls, however, of those who die in mortal sin or with original sin only descend immediately into hell; to be punished, though, with different pains and in different places.

930–931: Constitution Cum inter nonnullos, November 12, 1323

The assertion repudiated in this bull was first designated as heretical by the inquisitor John de Belna, O.P., in 1321. In opposition to this censure, the Spiritual Franciscans appealed to the pope, invoking, in particular, the decree Exiit qui seminavit of Nicholas III of August 14, 1279, which reads: “We affirm that such a renunciation of ownership of all things, whether private or in common, for the sake of God is meritorious and holy: as also Christ has taught by his word and confirmed by his example in showing the way of perfection” (Dicimus quod abdicatio proprietatis huiusmodi omnium rerum tam in speciali quam in communi propter Deum meritoria est et sancta: quam et Christus, viam ostendens perfectionis, verbo docuit et exemplo firmavit; Boniface VIII, Decretales [= Liber Sextus] 1. V, tit. 12, c. 3 [Frdb 2:1109–21 / BullFr 3:407AB]).

The General Chapter of the Order of Friars Minor held in Perugia in 1322 defended this affirmation. The acrimonious discussions regarding the evangelical and perfect poverty of Christ and the Friars Minor resulted in numerous declarations by John XXII, among which the following bull is prominent because of the binding force of its teaching. A violent controversy ensued. In his bull Quia quorundam of November 10, 1324, and Quia vir reprobus of November 16, 1329, John XXII defended his opinion against the reproach of heresy.

Ed.: John XXII, Extravagantes communes, tit. 14, c. 4 (Frdb 2:1229f.) / DuPIA 1/1 (1724): 295b–296a / BullFr 5:256–59.

Error of the Spirituals on the Poverty of Christ

Cum inter nonnullos viros scholasticos saepe contingat in dubium revocari, utrum pertinaciter affirmare, Redemptorem nostrum ac Dominum Iesum Christum eiusque Apostolos in speciali non habuisse aliqua nec in communi etiam, haereticum sit censendum, diversa et adversa etiam sententibus circa illud:

Nos,

huic concertationi finem imponere cupientes, assertionem huiusmodi pertinacem

—cum Scripturae sacrae, quae in plerisque locis ipsos nonnulla habuisse asserit, contradicat expresse, ipsamque Scripturam sacram, per quam utique fidei orthodoxae probantur articuli, quoad praemissa fermentum aperte supponat continere mendacii, ac per consequens,

quantum in ea est, eius in totum fidem evacuans, fidem catholicam reddat, eius probationem adimens, dubiam et incertam—deinceps erroneam fore censendam et haereticam, de fratrum Nostrorum consilio hoc perpetuo declaramus edicto.

Rursus in posterum pertinaciter affirmare, quod Redemptori nostro praedicto eiusque Apostolis, iis quae ipsos habuisse Scriptura sacra testatur, nequaquam ius ipsis utendi competierit, nec illa vendendi seu donandi ius habuerint aut ex ipsis alia acquirendi, quae tamen ipsos de praemissis fecisse Scriptura sacra testatur seu ipsos potuisse facere supponit expresse; cum talis assertio ipsorum usum et gesta evidenter includat, in praemissis non iusta

—quod utique de usu, gestis seu factis Redemptoris nostri Dei Filii sentire nefas est, sacrae Scripturae contrarium et doctrinae catholicae inimicum—assertionem ipsam pertinacem, de fratrum Nostrorum consilio, deinceps erroneam fore censendam merito ac haereticam declaramus.

Since often it happens among certain men of the schools that the doubt is renewed as to whether it should be considered heretical to affirm obstinately that our Redeemer and Lord Jesus Christ and his apostles did not possess anything, either personally or even in common; and since there are diverse and even conflicting opinions regarding this:

We declare, desiring to put an end to this dispute, on the advice of Our brothers, by means of this perpetual edict, that this kind of obstinate assertion

—since it expressly contradicts the Sacred Scriptures, which affirm in many places that ⟨Jesus and the apostles⟩ did possess certain things; and it openly implies that Sacred Scripture itself, by which the articles of the orthodox faith are indeed authenticated, contains the ferment of mendacity regarding the above-mentioned things; and, as a consequence, by completely destroying ⟨Scripture's⟩ credibility with respect to what is in it

⟨it⟩ makes the catholic faith doubtful and uncertain by taking away its authentication—will henceforth be considered erroneous and heretical.

And likewise, ⟨it must be considered heretical⟩ to affirm obstinately that our above-named Redeemer and his apostles did not possess in any way the right to use those things which Sacred Scripture testifies they did possess and that they did not have the right to sell or give away or to acquire other things with these, even though Sacred Scripture testifies that they did these above-mentioned things or clearly implies that they could have done them;

because such an assertion, which is unjustifiable in its premises, obviously includes the practice and actions of ⟨Jesus and the apostles⟩, —and since, in any case, to think that in regard to the practice, actions, or deeds of our Redeemer, the Son of God, is impious, contrary to Sacred Scripture, and opposed to Catholic doctrine—we declare, on the advice of Our brothers, that this obstinate assertion will henceforth be justly considered erroneous and heretical.

941–946: Constitution Licet iuxta doctrinam to the Bishop of Worcester, October 23, 1327

This bull rejects the errors of extreme regalism contained in Defensor pacis of the Parisian professor Marsilius of Padua. The book was completed in June 1324, but it was published only in 1326. Whether John of Janduno was the coauthor is uncertain. The propositions of the bull do not report the erroneous assertions in a literal manner but only according to their sense. There are two listings: first in the principal part of the bull and then, with some slight variations, at the conclusion of the bull. The assertions are condemned in this final form, and, therefore, the following text presents them according to this second version. Under each of the statements, there is noted the corresponding passage of the source. Cf. the critical editions of R. Scholz, MGH Fontes iuris Germanici, in usum scholarum separatim editi (Hannover, 1932), and of C. W. Prévité-Orton (Cambridge, 1928). By the order of Benedict XII, Defensor pacis was again subjected to an examination that Clement VI concluded in 1343 by rejecting 240 theses. Ed.: DuPLA 1/I (1724): 304b–309b; cf. 397b / BarAE, at year 1327, nos. 29–33.

Errors of Marsilius of Padua on the Constitution of the Church

- 941 (1) Quod illud, quod de Christo legitur in Evangelio beati Matthaei [Mt 17:27], quod ipse solvit tributum Caesari, quando staterem sumptum ex ore piscis illis qui petebant didrachma iussit dari, hoc fecit non condescensive e liberalitate suae pietatis, sed necessitate coactus.¹ (1) What is read about Christ in the Gospel of Blessed Matthew [Mt 17:27], (namely,) that he paid tribute to Caesar when he ordered the coin that had been taken from the mouth of the fish be given to those who asked for a double drachma, he did, not through condescension, out of the generosity of his piety, but because he was forced by necessity.¹
- 942 (2) Quod beatus Petrus Apostolus non fuit plus caput Ecclesiae quam quilibet aliorum Apostolorum, nec habuit plus auctoritatis, quam habuerunt alii Apostoli, et quod Christus nullum caput dimisit Ecclesiae, nec aliquem fecit vicarium suum.¹ (2) Blessed Peter, the apostle, was not head of the Church any more than the other apostles, nor did he have any more authority than the other apostles, and Christ did not provide any head for his Church or appoint anyone his vicar.¹
- 943 (3) Quod ad Imperatorem spectat, corrigere Papam et punire, ac instituere et destituere.¹ (3) It is the emperor’s duty to correct and punish the pope and also to install and remove him.¹
- 944 (4) Quod omnes sacerdotes, sive sit Papa, sive archiepiscopus, sive sacerdos simplex quicumque, sunt aequalis auctoritatis et iurisdictionis ex institutione Christi; sed quod unus habet plus alio, hoc est secundum quod Imperator concessit plus vel minus et, sicut concessit, revocare potest.¹ (4) Because of the institution of Christ, all priests, whether pope, archbishop, or simple priest, have equal authority and jurisdiction; but what one has more than another corresponds to what the emperor has granted more or less, and just as he has granted, he can also revoke.¹
- 945 (5) Quod Papa vel tota Ecclesia simul sumpta nullum hominem quantumcumque sceleratum potest punire punitioe coactiva, nisi Imperator daret eis auctoritatem.¹ (5) The pope, or the Church taken as a whole, cannot punish anyone—no matter how wicked he may be—with a compulsory penalty unless the emperor gives them authority.¹
- 946 [Censura: Articulos praedictos] ... velut sacrae Scripturae contrarios et fidei catholicae inimicos, haereticos, seu haereticales et erroneos, necnon et praedictos Marsilium et Ioannem haereticos, immo haeresiarchas fore manifestos et notorios sententialiter declaramus. [Censure: The above-mentioned articles] ... We declare, by way of judgment, (that they are) contrary to Sacred Scripture and opposed to the Catholic faith, heretical, or analogous to heresy, and erroneous; likewise (we declare) the above-mentioned Marsilius and John to be heretics, indeed, manifest and notorious arch-heretics.

950–980: Constitution In agro dominico, March 27, 1329

Meister Eckhart, O.P. (in Latin also Echardus and Ekkardus [according to himself], Aychardus and otherwise), was obliged to respond to questions about his doctrine for the first time on September 26, 1326, by order of Henry of Virneburg, Archbishop of Cologne. At first forty-nine articles were censured and, later, fifty-nine others. The Acts of this accusation were edited by A. Daniels, in BeitrGPhThMA 23/V (1923), and by G. Théry, in ArchHDLMA 1 (1926): 157–268. The appeal of Eckhart to the pope (February 13, 1327) was impeded by his adversaries; however, his cause was taken to the Avignon curia. From that, we have an “Avignon theological votum” (henceforth abbreviated as “Av.v.”) (edited by F. Pelster, in BeitrGPhThMA suppl. 3 = Aus der Geisteswelt des Mittelalters 2 [Münster, 1935], 1109–24), in which all the propositions are treated (even if in a sequence different from those marked by “cf. Av.v.”) that would later, after the death of Eckhart, be condemned in a bull of John XXII. On April 15, 1329, the [same] pope was content to send a copy of this bull to the archbishop of Cologne so that it would be published only within his diocese and ecclesiastical province.

*941 ¹ Cf. dictio II, c. 4, §§ 10–11 (Scholz 168–72).

*942 ¹ Cf. d. II, c. 15, §§ 3–4; c. 16, §§ 5, 8, 9; c. 22, § 5; c. 28 (Scholz 327–29, 340–46, 423f., 528–75).

*943 ¹ Cf. d. II, c. 8, §§ 7, 9; c. 21, § 5; c. 22, § 11; d. III, c. 2, § 41 (Scholz 225–31, 406–8, 430, 611).

*944 ¹ Cf. d. II, c. 15, § 4; c. 16, § 5; d. III, c. 2, § 17 (Scholz 328f., 340–42, 606).

*945 ¹ Cf. d. II, c. 5, §§ 4–6; d. III, c. 2, §§ 7, 14, 15, 16, 18, 30; cf. also d. I, c. 19, § 12 (Scholz 182–92, 604–8; 135f.).

Ed.: M. H. Laurent, Autour du procès de Maître Eckhart: Les Documents des Archives Vaticanes, doc. 8, in DivThomPI 39 (1936): 436–44 / H. Denifle, in ArchLKGMA 2 (1886): 636–40 / DuPIA 1/I, 312b–314a.

In the research of the sources of the propositions of this bull, besides H. Denifle (ArchLKGMA 2 [1886]: 684), the most noteworthy are J. Koch (ThQ 113 [1932]: 152–56; ArchFrPr 30 [1960]: 52) and M. H. Laurent, O.P. (in the edition noted above). The listing of the propositions has, generally speaking, followed the edition Meister Eckhart: Die deutschen und lateinischen Werke, published under the sponsorship of the Dt. Forschungsgemeinschaft (Stuttgart and Berlin, 1936ff.; the publication has not been completed [the following abbreviations apply to the two sections: Die deutschen Werke = DW, Die lateinischen Werke = LW]).

Aa' = Expositio libri Genesis, 1st ed., ed. by K. Weiss: LW 1 (1937ff.) [propositions 1, 3].

Ab' = Liber parabolarum Genesis, or Expositio libri Genesis, 2nd ed., ed. by K. Weiss: LW 1 [16f.].

B' = Expositio libri Exodi, ed. by K. Weiss: LW 2 (1954) [23].

C' = Expositio libri Sapientiae, ed. by J. Koch: LW 2 (1958ff.) ; G. Théry, Le Commentaire de maître Eckhart sur le livre de la Sagesse, in ArchHDLMA 3 (1928): 321–443; 4 (1929): 233–394 [19].

D' = Expositio sancti Evangelii secundum Johannem, ed. by K. Christ and J. Koch: LW 3 (1936ff.) [2, 4–7, 18, 25].

E' = Benedictus, or Buch der göttlichen Tröstung with the sermon Vom edeln Menschen, ed. by J. Quint: DW 5 (1952ff.) [13 (?), 14, 20 (?), 24].

Fa' = Sermon Iusti vivent in aeternum, ed. by J. Quint: DW 1 (Stuttgart, 1936ff.), no. 6 [8–10, 22].

Fb' = Sermon In hoc apparuit, DW 1, no. 5a [11].

Fc' = Sermon Surge, illuminare, Iherusalem, DW 1, no. 14 [21].

Fd' = Sermon Omne datum optimum, DW 1, no. 4 [26].

Fe' = Sermon Quasi stiller matutina, DW 1, no. 9 [Appendix 2].

Ff' = Sermon Vidi supra montem, DW 1, no. 13 [Appendix 1].

Fg' = Sermon Sant Paulus sprichet: "intuot iu", DW 1, no. 24 [12].

G' = Reden der Unterscheidung, ed. by J. Quint: DW 5 (1961) / E. Diederichs, 7th ed. (Bonn, 1925) [15].

Errors of Eckhart on the Relation of the World and Man

Ex inquisitione ... auctoritate ... Coloniensis archiepiscopi prius facta et tandem auctoritate Nostra in Romana curia renovata comperimus, evidenter constare per confessionem¹ eiusdem Ekardi, quod ipse praedicavit, dogmatizavit et scripsit viginti sex articulos, tenorem qui sequitur continentes:

(1) Interrogatus quandoque, quare Deus mundum non prius produxerit, respondit tunc, sicut nunc, quod Deus non potuit primo¹ producere mundum, quia res non potest agere, antequam sit; unde quam cito Deus fuit, tam cito mundum creavit.²

(2) Item concedi potest mundum fuisse ab aeterno.¹

(3) Item simul et semel, quando Deus fuit, quando Filium sibi coaeternum per omnia coaequalem Deum genuit, etiam mundum creavit.¹

(4) Item in omni opere, etiam malo, malo, inquam, tam poenae quam culpae, manifestatur et relucet aequaliter gloria Dei.¹

From the inquiry ... on the authority ... of the archbishop of Cologne made previously, and later renewed in the Roman curia by Our own authority, We have found that it is evidently established by the confession¹ of the same Eckhart that he preached, maintained, and wrote twenty-six articles, the tenor of which is as follows:

(1) When asked once why God did not create the world sooner, he responded then as he responds now that God could not produce the world at the beginning¹ because a thing cannot act before it is; as a consequence, as soon as God was, he created the world.²

(2) Likewise, it can be conceded that the world has existed from eternity.¹

(3) Likewise, at once and at the very moment when God was, when he generated the Son—co-eternal and co-equal with him in every way—he also created the world.¹

(4) Likewise, in every work, even evil, the evil, I say, both of punishment and of guilt, the glory of God manifests itself and shines forth equally.¹

*950 ¹ Namely, before the tribunal of Avignon (cf. Av.v.).

*951 ¹ In Eckhart, correctly: prius (earlier).

² Aa' 1:1 (LW 1:50₂₅; 1:190₅₋₉ / Denifle: ArchLKGMA 2 [1886]: 474, 553₁₁₋₁₅); cf. Av.v.; but the argumentation ("because ...") is foreign to Eckhart.

*952 ¹ D' 1:38 (LW 3:181₇ / cf. Denifle, as above, 636f.); cf. Av.v. 2.

*953 ¹ Aa' 1:1 (LW 1:190_{11f}; cf. 1:51_{2ff} / Denifle 474, 553₁₅₋₁₈); cf. Av.v. 3.

*954 ¹ D' 9:3 (LW 3, no. 494 / Denifle 637); cf. Av.v. 7.

- 955 (5) Item vituperans quempiam vituperio ipso peccato vituperii laudat Deum, et quo plus vituperat et gravius peccat, amplius Deum laudat.¹
- (5) Likewise, anyone who injures another with an insult praises God by the very sin of insulting, and the more he insults and the more gravely he sins, the more he praises God.¹
- 956 (6) Item Deum ipsum quis blasphemando Deum laudat.¹
- (6) Likewise, when one blasphemes God himself, he praises God.¹
- 957 (7) Item quod petens hoc aut hoc, malum petit et male, quia negationem boni et negationem Dei petit, et orat Deum sibi negari.¹
- (7) Likewise, whoever asks for this or that asks for evil and [does so] wickedly because he asks for the negation of the good and the negation of God, and he prays to God to deny himself.¹
- 958 (8) Qui non intendunt res, nec honores, nec utilitatem, nec devotionem internam, nec sanctitatem, nec praemium, nec regnum caelorum, sed omnibus his renuntiaverunt, etiam quod suum est, in illis hominibus honoratur Deus.¹
- (8) In those men who do not seek after wealth or honors or utility or interior devotion or sanctity or reward or the kingdom of heaven, but renounce all these things, even that which is theirs, God is honored.¹
- 959 (9) Ego nuper cogitavi, utrum ego vellem aliquid recipere a Deo vel desiderare: ego volo de hoc valde bene deliberare, quia ubi ego essem accipiens a Deo, ibi essem ego sub eo vel infra eum, sicut unus famulus vel servus, et ipse sicut dominus in dando, et sic non debemus esse in aeterna vita.¹
- (9) Recently I have considered whether I would wish to receive or to wish for anything from God; I wish to deliberate exceedingly well about this, because when I was receiving from God, then I was under him or below him, as a servant or slave, and he (was) as a master in giving, and thus we ought not to be in eternal life.¹
- 960 (10) Nos transformamur totaliter in Deum et convertimur in eum; simili modo sicut in sacramento panis convertitur in corpus Christi, sic ego convertor in eum, quod ipse operatur me suum esse unum, non simile. Per viventem Deum verum est, quod ibi nulla est distinctio.¹
- (10) We are transformed completely into God and changed into him; just as in the sacrament the bread is changed into the body of Christ, so, in a similar manner, I am changed into him, because he himself makes me one with, not like, his being. By the living God, it is true that there is then no distinction.¹
- 961 (11) Quidquid Deus Pater dedit Filio suo unigenito in humana natura, hoc totum dedit mihi. Hic nihil excipio, nec unionem nec sanctitatem, sed totum dedit mihi sicut sibi.¹
- (11) Whatever God the Father gave to his only begotten Son in human nature, all this he has given to me; here I except nothing, neither union nor sanctity, but he has given all to me as to himself.¹
- 962 (12) Quidquid dicit sacra Scriptura de Christo, hoc etiam totum verificatur de omni bono et divino homine.¹
- (12) Whatever Sacred Scripture says about Christ, all this also is verified with respect to every good and divine man.¹
- 963 (13) Quidquid proprium est divinae naturae, hoc totum proprium est homini iusto et divino; propter hoc iste homo operatur, quidquid Deus operatur, et creavit una cum Deo caelum et terram, et est generator Verbi aeterni, et Deus sine tali homine nesciret quidquam facere.¹
- (13) All that is proper to the divine nature is also completely proper to the just and divine man; this is why this man performs all that God performs, and together with God he created heaven and earth and is the generator of the eternal Word, and, without such a man, God would not have known how to do anything.¹
- 964 (14) Bonus homo debet sic conformare voluntatem suam voluntati divinae, quod ipse velit quidquid Deus
- (14) The good man ought to so conform his will to the divine will that he may will all that God wills: and

*955 ¹ D' 9:3 (LW 3, no. 494 / Denifle 637); cf. Av.v. 8.

*956 ¹ D' 9:3 (LW 3, no. 494 / Denifle 637); cf. Av.v. 9.

*957 ¹ D' 16:23 (LW 3, no. 611 / Denifle 637f.); cf. Av.v. 14.

*958 ¹ Fa' (DW 1:100₄₋₆); cf. propositions of Cologne, series 2, 35; cf. Av.v. 15.

*959 ¹ Fa' (DW 1:112₆₋₉); cf. propositions of Cologne, series 2, 40; cf. Av.v. 16.

*960 ¹ Fa' (DW 1:110_{8-1112,6-7}); cf. Av.v. 20.

*961 ¹ Perhaps Fb' (DW 1:77₁₁₋₁₇); cf. Av.v. 21.

*962 ¹ Cf. Fg' (DW 1:421₁₋₄₂₂); cf. Av.v. 22.

*963 ¹ It seems to deal with either a sermon or a summary of E' (for the first part, cf. DW 5:43₁₉); cf. Av.v. 23.

vult. Quia Deus vult aliquo modo me peccasse, nollem ego, quod ego peccata non commissem, et haec est vera paenitentia.¹

(15) Si homo commisisset mille peccata mortalia, si talis homo esset recte dispositus, non deberet velle se ea non commisisse.¹

(16) Deus proprie non praecipit actum exteriorem.¹

(17) Actus exterior non est proprie bonus nec divinus, nec operatur ipsum Deus proprie neque parit.¹

(18) Afferamus fructum actuum non exteriorum, qui nos bonos non faciunt, sed actuum interiorum, quos Pater in nobis manens facit et operatur.¹

(19) Deus animas amat, non opus extra.¹

(20) Quod bonus homo est unigenitus Filius Dei.¹

(21) Homo nobilis est ille unigenitus Filius Dei, quem Pater aeternaliter genuit.¹

(22) Pater generat me suum filium et eundem filium. Quidquid Deus operatur, hoc est unum; propter hoc generat ipse me suum filium sine omni distinctione.¹

(23) Deus est unus omnibus modis et secundum omnem rationem, ita ut in ipso non sit invenire aliquam multitudinem in intellectu vel extra intellectum.¹ Qui enim duo videt vel distinctionem videt, Deum non videt, Deus enim unus est extra numerum et supra numerum, nec ponit in unum cum aliquo.² Sequitur [scilicet loco posteriore]: nulla igitur distinctio in ipso Deo esse potest aut intelligi.³

(24) Omnis distinctio est a Deo aliena, neque in natura neque in personis; probatur: quia natura ipsa est una et hoc unum, et quaelibet persona est una et idipsum unum, quod natura.¹

(25) Cum dicitur: “Simon, diligis me plus his?” [Io 21:15], sensus est, id est plus quam istos, et bene quidem, sed non perfecte. In primo enim et secundo et plus et minus et gradus est et ordo, in uno autem nec gradus est since God, in some manner, wills me to have sinned, I would not will not to have committed sins, and this is true repentance.¹

(15) If man had committed a thousand mortal sins, if such a man were rightly disposed, he ought not to wish that he had not committed them.¹ 965

(16) Properly speaking, God does not command an exterior act.¹ 966

(17) An exterior act is not properly good or divine, neither does God properly operate it or produce it.¹ 967

(18) We bring forth the fruit, not of exterior actions that do not make us good, but of interior actions that the Father abiding in us does and operates.¹ 968

(19) God loves souls, not exterior work.¹ 969

(20) A good man is the only begotten Son of God.¹ 970

(21) A noble man is that only begotten Son of God whom the Father has begotten from eternity.¹ 971

(22) The Father begot me his son and the same son. Whatever God does, it is one; this is why he begot me his son without any distinction.¹ 972

(23) God is one in every manner and from every point of view, so that in himself, no multiplicity may be found in the intellect or outside the intellect;¹ for whoever sees duality or a distinction does not see God, for God is one outside number and beyond number, and he cannot be placed in unity with another.² As a consequence [namely, in a subsequent place], no distinction can exist or be understood in God himself.³ 973

(24) All distinction is foreign to God, either in nature or in persons; the proof: because nature itself is one and this One, and each person is one and this very One, which <is> nature.¹ 974

(25) When it is said: “Simon, do you love me more than these?” [Jn 21:15f.], the meaning is: That is, more than <you love> these, and indeed well, but not perfectly. For in the first and the second and more and less there is

*964 ¹ E' (DW 5:22_{5-8,10}); cf. Av.v. 28.

*965 ¹ Cf. G' (DW 5:233₄₋₆ / Diederichs 20₃₂₋₃₇); cf. Av.v. 27.

*966 ¹ Ab' (LW 1, no. [of Ab'] 165 / Denifle 638); cf. Av.v. 10.

*967 ¹ Ab' (LW 1, no. [of Ab'] 165 / Denifle 638); cf. Av.v. 11.

*968 ¹ D' 18:16 (LW 3, no. 646 / Denifle 638); cf. Av.v. 12.

*969 ¹ C' 11:27 (LW 2, no. [of C'] 226 / Théry: ArchHDLMA 4 [1929]: 320_i); cf. Av.v. 13.

*970 ¹ Perhaps E' (DW 5:44_{19,26}); cf. Av.v. 17.

*971 ¹ Fc' (DW 1:239_{4f.}); cf. Av.v. 18.

*972 ¹ Fa' (DW 1:109_{6f.}, 110_{1f.}); cf. Av.v. 19.

*973 ¹ “Deus est unus ... extra intellectum” (God is one ... outside intellect): Maimonides, Dux neutrorum (Paris, 1520), fol. 18v₁₆₋₁₉.

² In Eckhart, one reads: “nec potest in numerum poni cum aliquo” (nor can he be put in number with anything).

³ B' 15:3 (LW 2:65₂₋₆, 66₆ / Denifle 638); cf. Av.v. 24.

*974 ¹ E' (DW 5:114₂₁₋₁₁₅); cf. Av.v. 25.

nec ordo. Qui igitur diligit Deum plus quam proximum, bene quidem, sed nondum perfecte.¹

976 (26) Omnes creaturae sunt unum purum nihil: non dico, quod sint quid modicum vel aliquid, sed quod sint unum purum nihil.¹

Obiectum praeterea exstitit dicto Ekardo, quod praedicaverat alios duos articulos sub his verbis:

977 (1) Aliquid est in anima, quod est increatum et increabile; si tota anima esset talis, esset increata et increabilis, et hoc est intellectus.¹

978 (2) Quod Deus non est bonus neque melior neque optimus; ita male dico, quandocumque voco Deum bonum, ac si ego album vocarem nigrum.¹

979 [Censura:] ... Quia ... invenimus primos quindecim memoratos articulos et duos etiam alios ultimos tam ex suorum sono verborum quam ex suarum connexionem sententiarum errorem seu labem haeresis continere, alios vero undecim, quorum primus incipit "Deus non praecipit" etc. [prop. 16], reperimus nimis male sonare et multum esse temerarios de haeresique suspectos, licet cum multis expositionibus et suppletionibus sensum catholicum formare valeant vel habere:

ne articuli huiusmodi seu contenta in eis corda simplicium, apud quos praedicati fuerunt, ultra inficere valeant, ...

Nos ... praefatos quindecim primos articulos et duos alios ultimos tamquam haereticos, dictos vero alios undecim tamquam male sonantes, temerarios, et suspectos de haeresi, ac nihilominus libros quoslibet seu opuscula eiusdem Ekardi, praefatos articulos seu eorum aliquem continentes, damnamus et reprobamus expresse...

980 Porro ... volumus notum esse, quod, prout constat per publicum instrumentum inde confectum, praefatus Ekardus in fine vitae suae fidem catholicam profitens praedictos viginti sex articulos, quos se praedicasse confessus exstitit, necnon quaecumque alia per eum scripta et docta ... , quae possent generare in mentibus fidelium sensum haereticum vel erroneum ac verae fidei inimicum, quantum ad illum sensum revocavit ac etiam reprobavit ..., determinationi Apostolicae Sedis et Nostrae tam se quam scripta sua et dicta omnia summittendo.¹

both a degree and a rank; in oneness, however, there is no degree or rank. Therefore, he who loves God more than his neighbor, (loves) indeed well but not yet perfectly.¹

(26) All creatures are one pure nothing; I do not say that they are something ordinary or anything, but that they are one pure nothing.¹

In addition, the above-mentioned Eckart is accused of having preached two other articles under these words:

(1) There is something in the soul that is uncreated and incapable of being created; if the entire soul were such, it would be uncreated and incapable of being created; and this is the intellect.¹

(2) God is not good or better or best; whenever I call God good, I am just as wrong as if I were to call white black.¹

[Censure:] ... Since We ... have found that the first fifteen articles mentioned and also the final two, as much from the tenor of their words as from the connection of their ideas, contain error or the stain of heresy, but that the other eleven, the first of which begins, "God does not command", etc. [prop. 16], We have discerned to be very evil-sounding, quite rash, and suspect of heresy, even if with many clarifications and additions they might be able to form or have a Catholic sense:

so that articles of this kind or their contents cannot continue to corrupt the hearts of the simple where they have been preached, ...

We expressly condemn and reject ... the above-named first fifteen articles and the final two as heretical; and the other eleven named (We condemn and reject) as evil-sounding, rash, and suspect of heresy, and likewise any books or treatises of the aforementioned Eckhart containing the above-named articles or one of them. ...

Furthermore, ... We want it known as established by a public document thereupon drawn up that the aforementioned Eckhart, at the end of his life, professing the Catholic faith, retracted and condemned, as to their sense, the above-named twenty-six articles that he confessed to have preached and also all the other things that he wrote or taught ... that could have given rise to a heretical or erroneous meaning or something inimical to the true faith in the minds of the faithful ..., submitting both himself as well as his writings and all others things said to the determination of Our own and Apostolic See.¹

*975 ¹ D' 21:15 (LW 3, no. 728 / Denifle 639); cf. Av.v. 26.

*976 ¹ Fd' (DW 1:69₈-70₁); cf. Av.v. 6.

*977 ¹ Ff' (DW 1:220₄₋₅); cf. Av.v. 4.

*978 ¹ Fe' (DW 1:148₅₋₇); cf. Av.v. 5.

*980 ¹ In Cologne, on February 13, 1327, Eckhart indeed declared publicly that he would retract all that could be found in his affirmations or writings that might be erroneous (cf. Laurent, in DivThomPI 39 [1936]: 344-46, doc. V / Denifle, in ArchLKGMA 2 [1886]: 630-33), but the words of the bull seem to refer to a later revocation not known to us.

990-991: Bull Ne super his, December 3, 1334

Contrary to the already then common theological understanding, John XXII upheld the opinion that the souls of the dead, remaining “under the altar of God” (cf. Rev 6:9), enjoyed only the vision of the human nature of Christ and came to enjoy the fullness of beatitude only after the general judgment. He presented this thesis above all in three homilies: November 1 and December 15, 1331, and January 5, 1332. The first two were edited by Mariano Prados, S.J., in ArchTGran 23 [1960]: 155–84; for the manuscripts, cf. DenCh 2:414. In the second homily, the pope explains that the vision of God is the reward given (according to Augustine, Enarrationes in Psalmos 90, sermo 2, no. 13 [CpChL 39:1277₁₃₋₁₅ / PL 37:1170A]) only to man who, as a subject, has body and soul united in the resurrection, not prior to this as a soul separated from the body. In the third homily, he maintains that both the demons and reprobate humans enter into the eternal punishment of hell only after the general judgment. In 1333, John XXII also wrote a short treatise in support of his position.

King Philip VI of France initiated an examination. It began on December 19, 1333. Subsequently, the pope also convoked a commission of cardinals and theologians, which induced him to declare to the consistory on January 3, 1334, that he would retract his thesis since it was found to be in opposition to the common doctrine of the Church. On December 3, 1334, one day before his death, in the presence of the college of cardinals, he solemnly retracted his thesis with the words handed down in this bull, which was published by his successor, Benedict XII.

Ed.: DenCh 2:440f. (no. 987) / a quite different text in DuPIA 1/I (1724): 320b–321a / MaC 25:568E–569C / HaC 7:1405B–D.

Retraction of John XXII on the Beatitude of the Saints

Ne super his, quae de animabus purgatis separatis a corporibus (an citra resumptionem corporum divinam essentiam illa visione, videlicet quam vocat facialem Apostolus, videant) tam per Nos quam per nonnullos alios in praesentia Nostra recitando sacram Scripturam ac originalia dicta Sanctorum vel alias ratiocinando saepius dicta sunt, aliter quam per Nos dicta et intellecta fuerint et intelligantur ac dicantur, auribus valeant fidelium inculcari, ecce quod Nostram intentionem, quam cum sancta Ecclesia catholica circa haec habemus et habuimus, serie praesentium ut sequitur declaramus.

Fatemur siquidem et credimus, quod animae purgatae separatae a corporibus sunt in caelo, caelorum regno et paradiso et cum Christo in consortio angelorum congregatae et vident Deum de communi lege ac divinam essentiam facie ad faciem clare, in quantum status et condicio compatitur animae separatae.

Si vero alia vel aliter circa materiam huiusmodi per Nos dicta fuerint quoquomodo, illa in habitu fidei catholicae diximus ac recitando et conferendo dixisse asserimus et volumus esse dicta. Insuper si qua alia sermocinando, conferendo, dogmatizando, docendo seu alio quovis modo diximus circa ea quae fidem concernunt catholicam, sacram Scripturam aut bonos mores, ea in quantum sunt consona fidei catholicae, determinationi Ecclesiae, sacrae Scripturae ac bonis moribus, approbamus, alias autem illa haberi volumus pro non dictis, et ea minime approbamus, sed in quantum essent a praemissis fide catholica, determinatione Ecclesiae, sacra Scriptura vel bonis moribus aut aliquo ipsorum dissonantia, reprobamus et nihilominus omnia dicta et scripta Nostra de quacumque materia ubicumque et in quocumque loco ac in quocumque statu, quem habemus

In order that those things often said—both by Us 990 and by certain others in Our presence—on the subject of the purified souls separated from the body (whether before the resurrection of the bodies they can see the divine essence with that vision which the apostle calls face to face)—by citing Sacred Scripture and the original sayings of the saints or other modes of reasoning—should not impress the ears of the faithful otherwise than as was said or understood by Us or as is being said and understood (by Us), so We now earnestly declare as follows, in the context of the present (writing) Our opinion that We, together with the holy Catholic Church, have and have had regarding this matter.

We therefore confess and believe that the purified 991 souls separated from the body are gathered together in heaven, in paradise and the kingdom of the heaven, with Christ in the company of the angels, and that they, according to the common precept, clearly see God and the divine essence face to face, insofar as the state and the condition of the separated soul allows.

But if, in any way, other things may have been said, or (said) in another manner, by Us on this subject, We have said them in the disposition of the Catholic faith, and We affirm to have said them thus in discoursing and discussing, and We wish to have said (them) thus. Furthermore, if We, in what pertains to the Catholic faith, Sacred Scripture, or good morals, have said other things in preaching, discoursing, formulating a doctrine, teaching, or in any other way, these, insofar as they are in conformity with the Catholic faith, the Church’s way of thinking, Sacred Scripture, and good morals, We approve; other things, however, We wish to consider as though they were not said, and We do not in any way approve them; rather, insofar as these might not have been in accord with what We have mentioned—the Catholic faith, the Church’s way of thinking, Sacred Scripture, vel habuerimus hactenus, submittimus determinationi Ecclesiae ac successorum Nostrorum.

or good morals or any of these—We reject them; and likewise We submit to the judgment of the Church and Our successors all that We have said or written on any subjects wherever and in whatever place and in whatever situation We have or may have had up until now.

BENEDICT XII: December 20, 1334–April 25, 1342

1000–1002: Constitution Benedictus Deus, January 29, 1336

Regarding the occasion of this definition, cf. *990°. Benedict XII had already, as a cardinal, composed an extensive work, De statu animarum sanctarum ante generale iudicium (Archivum Vaticanum latinum 4006, fols. 16A–218B; cf. J.-M. Vidal, in RHE 6 [1905]: 788). In opposition to his predecessor, he defended the common theological opinion on this question. Before defining the matter, he commissioned a group of theologians to make a detailed examination of the problem.

Ed.: BullTau 4:346b–347a / BullCocq 3/II, 214ab / DuPIA 1/I (1724): 321b–322a / Benedict XII, Acta, ed. by A. L. Tăutu (Codex Iuris Canonici Orientalis, Fontes III, 8 [Vatican, 1958]), 12f.

The Destiny of Man after Death

1000 [Visio Dei beatifica.] Hac in perpetuum valitura Constitutione auctoritate Apostolica diffinimus: quod secundum communem Dei ordinationem animae sanctorum omnium, qui de hoc mundo ante Domini Nostri Iesu Christi passionem decesserunt, nec non sanctorum Apostolorum, martyrum, confessorum, virginum et aliorum fidelium defunctorum post sacrum ab eis Christi baptismum susceptum, in quibus nihil purgabile fuit, quando decesserunt, nec erit, quando decedent etiam in futurum, vel si tunc fuerit aut erit aliquid purgabile in eisdem, cum post mortem suam fuerint purgatae, ac quod animae puerorum eodem Christi baptismo renatorum et baptizandorum cum fuerint baptizati, ante usum liberi arbitrii decedentium, mox post mortem suam et purgationem praefatam in illis, qui purgatione huiusmodi indigebant, etiam ante resumptionem suorum corporum et iudicium generale post ascensionem Salvatoris Domini nostri Iesu Christi in caelum, fuerunt, sunt et erunt in caelo, caelorum regno et paradiso caelesti cum Christo, sanctorum Angelorum consortio congregatae, ac post Domini Iesu Christi passionem et mortem viderunt et vident divinam essentiam visione intuitiva et etiam faciali, nulla mediante creatura in ratione obiecti visi se habente, sed divina essentia immediate se nude, clare et aperte eis ostendente, quodque sic videntes eadem divina essentia perfruuntur, necnon quod ex tali visione et fruitione eorum animae, qui iam decesserunt, sunt vere beatae et habent vitam et requiem aeternam, et etiam illorum, qui postea decedent, eandem divinam videbunt essentiam ipsaque perfruuntur ante iudicium generale;

[The beatific vision of God.] By this constitution, which is to remain in force forever, We, with apostolic authority, define the following:

according to the general disposition of God, the souls of all the saints who departed from this world before the Passion of our Lord Jesus Christ and also of the holy apostles, martyrs, confessors, virgins, and other faithful who died after receiving the holy baptism of Christ—provided they were not in need of any purification when they died, or will not be in need of any when they die in the future, or else, if they then needed or will need some purification, after they have been purified after death—and again the souls of children who have been reborn by the same baptism of Christ or will be when baptism is conferred on them, if they die before attaining the use of free will:

all these souls, immediately after death and, in the case of those in need of purification, after the purification mentioned above, since the Ascension of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ into heaven, already before they take up their bodies again and before the general judgment, have been, are, and will be with Christ in heaven, in the heavenly kingdom and paradise, joined to the company of the holy angels.

Since the Passion and death of the Lord Jesus Christ, these souls have seen and see the divine essence with an intuitive vision and even face to face, without the mediation of any creature by way of object of vision; rather the divine essence immediately manifests itself to them, plainly, clearly, and openly, and in this vision they enjoy the divine essence.

Moreover, by this vision and enjoyment the souls of those who have already died are truly blessed and have eternal life and rest. Also the souls of those who will die in the future will see the same divine essence and will enjoy it before the general judgment.

ac quod visio huiusmodi divinae essentiae eiusque fruitio actus fidei et spei in eis evacuant, prout fides et spes propriae theologiae sunt virtutes; quodque, postquam inchoata fuerit vel erit talis intuitiva ac facialis visio et fruitio in eisdem, eadem visio et fruitio sine aliqua intermissione seu evacuatione praedictae visionis et fruitionis continuata exstitit et continuabitur usque ad finale iudicium et ex tunc usque in sempiternum.

[Infernum.—Iudicium generale.] Diffinimus insuper, quod secundum Dei ordinationem communem animae decedentium in actuali peccato mortali mox post mortem suam ad inferna descendunt, ubi poenis infernalibus cruciantur, et quod nihilominus in die iudicii omnes homines “ante tribunal Christi” cum suis corporibus comparebunt, reddituri de factis propriis rationem, “ut referat unusquisque propria corporis, prout gessit, sive bonum sive malum” [2 Cor 5:10].

Such a vision and enjoyment of the divine essence do away with the acts of faith and hope in these souls, inasmuch as faith and hope are properly theological virtues. 1001

And after such intuitive and face-to-face vision and enjoyment have or will have begun for these souls, the same vision and enjoyment have continued and will continue without any interruption and without end until the Last Judgment and from then on forever.

[Hell and the general judgment.] Moreover, We 1002 define that according to the general disposition of God, the souls of those who die in actual mortal sin go down into hell immediately after death and there suffer the pain of hell. Nevertheless, on the Day of Judgment all will appear with their bodies “before the judgment seat of Christ” to give an account of their personal deeds, “so that each one may receive good or evil, according to what he has done in the body” [2 Cor 5:10].

1006–1020: Libellus Cum dudum to the Armenians, August 1341

The significance of this document consists in the clarification of Catholic doctrine. The writing goes back to a study done without official mandate. The 117 accusations that it contains cannot be imputed to the Armenian Church as a whole. The Armenians objected to the writing and in 1345 (1344?) assembled at a synod in Sis in order to refute every single article; cf. MaC 25:1185–1270, where the text of the articles is also found. – In the Latin text, “Armeni”, which is found in the source, is retained in place of the more usual form, “Armenii”.

Ed.: Benedict XII, Acta, ed. by A. L. Tăutu (Codex Iuris Canonici Orientalis, Fontes III, 8 [Vatican, 1958]), 121–43 / E. Martène, Veterum scriptorum et monumentorum amplissima collectio 7 (Paris, 1733), 318B–385B / BarAE, at year 1341, nos. 50–69.

The Imputed Errors of the Armenians

4. Item quod Armeni dicunt et tenent, quod peccatum primorum parentum personale ipsorum tam grave fuit, quod omnes eorum filii ex semine eorum propagati usque ad Christi passionem merito dicti peccati personalis ipsorum damnati fuerunt et in inferno post mortem detrusi, non propter hoc, quod ipsi ex Adam aliquod peccatum originale contraxerint, cum dicant pueros nullum omnino habere originale peccatum, nec ante Christi passionem nec post; sed dicta damnatio ante Christi passionem eos sequebatur ratione gravitatis peccati personalis, quod commiserunt Adam et Eva, transgrediendo divinum praeceptum eis datum: sed post Domini passionem, in qua peccatum primorum parentum deletum fuit, pueri, qui nascuntur ex filiis Adam, non sunt damnationi addicti, nec in inferno ratione dicti peccati sunt detrudendi, quia Christus totaliter peccatum primorum parentum delevit in sua passione.

5. Item quod quidam magister Armenorum vocatus Mechitritz, qui interpretatur paraclitus, de novo introduxit et docuit, quod anima humana filii propagatur ab anima patris sui, sicut corpus a corpore, et angelus etiam unus ab alio; quia cum anima humana rationalis existens, et

4. And likewise, the Armenians say and hold that the personal sin of our first parents themselves was so serious that all of their children propagated from their seed up to the Passion of Christ have been deservedly condemned for the aforesaid personal sin, and they have been thrust into hell after death, not because they themselves have contracted some original sin from Adam, since they say that children have no original sin at all, neither before the Passion of Christ nor after, but that the aforementioned condemnation before the Passion of Christ followed them by reason of the gravity of the personal sin that Adam and Eve committed by transgressing the divine precept that had been given to them; but after the Passion of our Lord, by which the sin of our first parents was erased, the children who are born from the sons of Adam are not subject to this condemnation, nor are they to be thrust into hell by reason of the aforesaid sin, because Christ erased entirely the sin of our first parents in his Passion. 1006

5. Likewise, a certain teacher of the Armenians called Mechitritz, which is translated as paraclite, has again introduced and taught that the human soul of the son is propagated from the soul of his father, as the body from his body; and also one angel from another, 1007 angelus existens intellectualis naturae, sint quaedam lumina spiritualia, ex se ipsis propagant alia lumina spiritualia....

- 1008 6. Item dicunt Armeni, quod animae puerorum, qui nascuntur ex christianis parentibus post Christi passionem, si moriantur antequam baptizentur, vadunt ad paradysum terrestrem, in quo fuit Adam ante peccatum; animae vero puerorum, qui nascuntur ex parentibus non christianis post Christi passionem et moriuntur sine baptismo, vadunt ad loca, ubi sunt animae parentum ipsorum.
- 1009 8. Item Armeni dicunt quod animae puerorum baptizatorum et animae multum perfectorum hominum post generale iudicium intrabunt in regnum caelorum, ubi carebunt omni malo poenali huius vitae.... Non tamen videbunt Dei essentiam, quia nulla creatura eam videre potest; sed videbunt claritatem Dei, quae ab eius essentia emanat, sicut lux solis emanat a sole et tamen non est sol....
- 1010 17. Item quod Armeni communiter tenent, quod in alio saeculo non est purgatorium animarum, quia, ut dicunt, si christianus confiteatur peccata sua, omnia peccata eius et poenae peccatorum ei dimittuntur. Nec etiam ipsi orant pro defunctis, ut eis in alio saeculo peccata dimittantur, sed generaliter orant pro omnibus mortuis, sicut pro beata Maria, Apostolis....
- 1011 18. Item quod Armeni credunt et tenent, quod Christus descendit de caelo et incarnatus fuit propter hominum salutem non pro eo, quod filii propagati ex Adam et Eva post peccatum eorum ex eis contrahant originale peccatum, a quo per Christi incarnationem et mortem salventur, cum nullum tale peccatum dicant esse in filiis Adae: sed dicunt, quod Christus propter salutem hominum est incarnatus et passus, quia per suam passionem filii Adam, qui dictam passionem praecesserunt, fuerunt liberati ab inferno, in quo erant non ratione originalis peccati quod in eis esset, sed ratione gravitatis peccati personalis primorum parentum. Credunt etiam, quod Christus propter salutem puerorum, qui nati fuerunt post eius passionem, incarnatus fuit et passus, quia per suam passionem destruxit totaliter infernum....
- 1012 19. ... In tantum dicunt, quod ... concupiscentia carnis est peccatum et malum, quod parentes etiam christiani, quando matrimonialiter concumbunt, committunt peccatum ..., quia actum matrimoniale dicunt esse peccatum et etiam matrimonium....
- 1013 40. ... Alii vero dicunt, quod episcopi et presbyteri Armenorum nihil faciunt ad peccatorum remissionem nec principaliter nec ministerialiter, sed solus Deus peccata remittit: nec episcopi vel presbyteri adhibentur because since a human soul is rational and an angel is of intellectual nature, they are in a way spiritual lights, and from themselves they propagate other spiritual lights....

6. Likewise, the Armenians say that the souls of children who are born from Christian parents after the Passion of Christ, if they die before they are baptized, go to the earthly paradise in which Adam was before sin; but the souls of children who are born after the Passion of Christ from non-Christian parents and who die without baptism go to the place where the souls of their parents are.
8. Likewise, the Armenians say that the souls of baptized children and the souls of many perfect men after the general judgment will enter into the kingdom of heaven, where they will be free of every penal evil of this life ... but will not see God's essence, for no creature can see it; but they will see the brightness of God, which emanates from his essence as the light of the sun emanates from the sun but is not the sun....
17. Likewise, the Armenians commonly believe and hold that in another world there is no purgation of souls, because, as they say, if a Christian confesses his sins, all his sins and the punishments of his sins are forgiven him. They do not even pray for the dead, that their sins may be forgiven them in another world, but in general they pray for all the dead, as for blessed Mary, the apostles....
18. Likewise, the Armenians believe and hold that Christ descended from heaven and became incarnate for the salvation of men, not on account of the fact that the sons propagated from Adam and Eve after their sin contracted from them original sin, from which through the Incarnation and death of Christ they will be saved, since they say that no such sin exists in the sons of Adam; but they say that Christ for the salvation of man became incarnate and suffered, because through his Passion the sons of Adam who preceded the aforesaid Passion have been freed from hell in which they were, not because of original sin which was in them, but because of the gravity of the personal sin of our first parents. They also believe that Christ became incarnate and suffered for the salvation of children who were born after his Passion, because by his Passion he totally destroyed hell....
19. ... Likewise, they (the Armenians) say that ... concupiscence of the flesh is a sin and evil, that even Christian parents when they lie together in marriage commit a sin ..., because they say that the marriage act and even matrimony itself is a sin....
40. ... Some indeed say that bishops and priests of the Armenians do nothing toward the remission of sins either principally or ministerially, but God alone remits sins; neither bishops nor priests are employed to perform the ad faciendam dictam peccatorum remissionem, nisi quia ipsi acceperunt potestatem loquendi a Deo et ideo, cum absolvunt, dicunt: “Deus dimittat tibi peccata tua”; vel: “Ego dimitto tibi peccata tua in terra et Deus dimittat tibi in caelis.”

42. Item Armeni dicunt et tenent, quod sola Christi passio sine omni alio Dei dono, etiam gratificante, sufficit ad peccatorum remissionem: nec dicunt, quod ad peccatorum remissionem faciendam requiratur gratia Dei gratificans, vel iustificans, nec quod in sacramentis novae legis detur gratia gratificans.

49. Item dicunt, quod si aliquis ... accipiat tertiam [uxorem], vel quartam et deinceps, non potest absolvi per eorum ecclesiam, quia dicunt, quod tale matrimonium fornicatio est....

58. Item quod Armeni dicunt et tenent, quod ad hoc, quod sit baptismus verus, ista tria requiruntur, scilicet aqua, chrisma ... et Eucharistia; ita quod, si aliquis baptizaret in aqua aliquem dicendo: “Ego te baptizo in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti, Amen”, et postea non inungeretur dicto chrismate, non esset baptismus. Si etiam non daretur ei Eucharistiae sacramentum, baptizatus non esset....

66. Item omnes Armeni communiter dicunt et tenent, quod per verba posita in eorum canone Missae, quando dicitur per sacerdotem “Accepit panem et gratias agens fregit et dedit suis sanctis electis et recumbentibus discipulis dicens: Accipite et manducate ex hoc omnes, hoc est Corpus meum ... ; similiter et calicem accipiens ... dicens: Accipite et bibite ex hoc omnes, hic est Sanguis meus ... in remissionem peccatorum” non conficitur nec ipsi conficere intendunt Corpus et Sanguinem Christi, sed solum dicunt verba recitative, recitando scilicet quod Dominus fecit, quando sacramentum instituit. Et post dicta verba dicit sacerdos multas orationes positas in eorum canone, et post dictas orationes venit ad locum, ubi sic in eorum canone dicitur: “Adoramus, supplicamus et petimus a te, benigne Deus, mitte in nobis et in hoc propositum donum coessentialem tibi Spiritum Sanctum, per quem panem benedictum Corpus veraciter efficies Domini nostri et Salvatoris Iesu Christi”—et dicta verba dicit sacerdos ter, deinde dicit sacerdos super calicem et vinum benedictum: “Sanguinem veraciter efficies Domini Nostri Salvatoris Iesu Christi”, et per haec verba [sic dictae “Epiclesis”] credunt, quod conficiantur Corpus Christi et Sanguis....

aforesaid remission of sins, except that they have received the power of speaking from God, and so when they absolve they say: “May God forgive you your sins” or, “I forgive you your sins on earth, and God forgives you in heaven.”

42. Likewise, the Armenians teach and hold that only the Passion of Christ, without any other gift of God, even sanctifying (grace), suffices for the remission of sins; they do not say that, to bring about the remission of sins, the sanctifying or justifying grace of God is required or that sanctifying grace is given in the sacraments of the New Law. 1014

49. Likewise, they say that if anyone ... takes a third [wife] or a fourth, and so on, he cannot be absolved by their church, because they say that such a marriage is fornication.... 1015

58. Likewise, the Armenians hold and say that for what is true baptism, these three things are required: namely, water, chrism, ... and the Eucharist, so that if anyone should baptize another in water while saying: “I baptize you in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, Amen”, and if he were not anointed afterward with the chrism mentioned above, he would not be baptized. And likewise, if the Eucharist were not given to him, he would not be baptized.... 1016

66. Likewise, all the Armenians commonly teach and hold that through the words found in their canon of the Mass, when it is said by the priest: “He took bread and gave thanks, broke it and gave it to his chosen holy disciples reclining at table, saying: Take and eat this, all of you, this is my Body ... ; and likewise he took the chalice ... and said: Take this and drink it, all of you, this is my Blood ... in remission of sins”, the Body and Blood are not brought about, and (these words) are not intended to bring them about, but the words are said only as a kind of recitation, that is, reciting what the Lord did when he instituted the sacrament. And after these above-mentioned words, the priest says many other prayers that are found in their canon, and after these prayers, he arrives at the point in their canon where this is said: “We adore you, we beseech you, we ask you, gracious God, to send upon us and upon this gift that is presented the Holy Spirit, co-essential to you, through whom you will make the blessed bread truly the Body of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ”—and the priest says these words three times, and then the priest says over the chalice and blessed wine: “You will make (this) truly the Blood of our Lord and Savior, Jesus Christ”, and they believe that through these words [called the “Epiclesis”] the Body and Blood of Christ are brought about.... 1017

- 1018 67. Item quod Armeni non dicunt, quod post dicta verba consecrationis panis et vini sit facta transsubstantiatio panis et vini in verum corpus Christi et sanguinem, quod natum fuit de Virgine Maria et passum et resurrexit; sed tenent, quod illud sacramentum sit exemplar vel similitudo aut figura veri corporis et sanguinis Domini: ... propter quod ipsi sacramentum Altaris non vocant corpus et sanguinem Domini, sed hostiam vel sacrificium vel communionem....
- 1019 68. Item Armeni dicunt et tenent, quod si presbyter vel episcopus ordinatus committat fornicationem, etiam in secreto, perdit potestatem conficiendi et ministrandi omnia sacramenta....
- 1020 70. Item Armeni non dicunt nec tenent, quod sacramentum Eucharistiae digne susceptum operetur in suscipiente peccatorum remissionem, vel poenarum debarum peccato relaxationem, vel quod per ipsum detur gratia Dei vel eius augmentum: sed solum dicunt, quod ... corpus Christi intrat in eius corpus et in ipsum convertitur, sicut et alia alimenta convertuntur in alimentato....
67. Likewise, the Armenians do not say that, after the aforesaid words of the Consecration of bread and wine are said, the transubstantiation of bread and wine into the true Body and Blood of Christ, which was born of the Virgin Mary, suffered, and arose again, is accomplished; but they hold that this sacrament is an example or likeness or figure of the true Body and Blood of the Lord ..., on account of which they do not call the Sacrament of the Altar the Body and Blood of the Lord, but a victim or sacrifice or communion....
68. Likewise, the Armenians say and hold that if an ordained priest or bishop commits fornication, even in secret, he loses the power of consecrating and of administering all the sacraments....
70. Likewise, the Armenians do not say or hold that the sacrament of the Eucharist worthily received brings about remission of sin in the one who receives or the lessening of punishments due to sin or that through it the grace of God or its increase may be given; but they say only that ... the Body of Christ enters into his body and is changed into him just as other foods are changed in the one who has been fed....

CLEMENT VI: May 7, 1342–December 6, 1352

1025–1027: Jubilee Bull Unigenitus Dei Filius, January 27, 1343

Boniface VIII had introduced the custom of celebrating a jubilee each hundred years, including a plenary indulgence (cf. *868). Clement VI made the celebration of this jubilee every fifty years. With this bull, he announced 1350 as a jubilee year. On this occasion, he presented for the first time the doctrine, developed by theologians since the thirteenth century, of the treasury of merits at the disposition of the Church as a foundation for indulgences.

Ed.: Clement VI, Acta, ed. by A.L. Tăutu (Codex Iuris Canonici Orientalis, Fontes III, 9 [Vatican, 1960]), 246f. / Extravagantes communes, l. V, tit. 9, c. 2 (Frdb 2:1304).

The Treasury of the Merits of Christ Dispensed through the Church

- 1025 Unigenitus Dei Filius ... “factus nobis a Deo sapientia, iustitia, sanctificatio et redemptio” [1 Cor 1:30], “non per sanguinem hircorum aut vitulorum, sed per proprium sanguinem introivit semel in sancta, aeterna redemptione inventa” [Hbr 9:12]. Non enim corruptibilibus auro et argento, sed sui ipsius agni incontaminati et immaculati pretioso sanguine nos redemit [cf. 1 Pt 1:18s], quem in ara crucis innocens immolatus non guttam sanguinis modicam, quae tamen propter unionem ad Verbum pro redemptione totius humani generis suffecisset, sed copiose velut quoddam profluvium noscitur effudisse ita, ut “a planta pedis usque ad verticem capitis nulla sanitas” [Is 1:6] inveniretur in ipso.
- The only begotten Son of God ... “whom God made our wisdom, our righteousness and sanctification and redemption” [1 Cor 1:30], “entered once for all into the Holy Place, taking not the blood of goats and calves but his own blood, thus securing an eternal redemption” [Heb 9:12]. For “you were ransomed ..., not with perishable things such as silver or gold, but with the precious blood of Christ, like that of a lamb without blemish or spot” [1 Pet 1:18f.]. Immolated on the altar of the Cross though he was innocent, he shed not merely a drop of his blood—although this would have sufficed for the redemption of the whole human race because of the union with the Word—but a copious flood, like a stream, so that “from the sole of the foot even to the head, there was no soundness in him” [Is 1:6].
- Quantum ergo exinde, ut nec supervacua, inanis aut superflua tantae effusionis miseratio redderetur, thesaurum militanti Ecclesiae acquisivit, volens suis
- What a great treasure, then, has the good Father acquired for the Church militant, if the merciful shedding of blood is not to be empty, meaningless, and superfluous.

thesaurizare filiis pius Pater, ut sic sit “infinitus thesaurus hominibus, quo qui usi sunt, Dei amicitiae participes sunt effecti” [Sap 7:14].

Quem quidem thesauram ... per beatum Petrum caeli clavigerum, eiusque successores, suos in terris vicarios, commisit fidelibus salubriter dispensandum, et pro piis ac rationabilibus causis, nunc pro totali, nunc pro partiali remissione poenae temporalis pro peccatis debitae, tam generaliter, quam specialiter (prout cum Deo expedire cognoscerent), vere paenitentibus et confessis misericorditer applicandum.

Ad cuius quidem thesauri cumulum beatae Dei Genitricis omniumque electorum a primo iusto usque ad ultimum merita adminiculum praestare noscuntur; de cuius consumptione seu minutione non est aliquatenus formidandum, tam propter infinita Christi (ut praedictum est) merita, quam pro eo, quod quanto plures ex eius applicatione trahuntur ad iustitiam, tanto magis accrescit ipsorum cumulus meritorum.

He wanted to lay it up for his children, so that there might be “an unfailing treasure for men; those who get it obtain friendship with God” [Wis 7:14].

This treasury ... (Christ) committed to the care of St. Peter, who holds the keys of heaven, and to his successors, his own vicars on earth, who are to distribute it to the faithful for their salvation. And they are to apply it with compassion, for pious and good reasons, in order that it may benefit those who are truly contrite and who have confessed, at times for the complete remission of the temporal punishment due to sin, at times for the partial remission, either by general or particular disposition, as before God they judge more expedient. 1026

To the abundance of this treasury the merits of the Blessed Mother of God and of all the elect, from the first just person to the last, also contribute, as we know; nor is it at all to be feared that it could be exhausted or diminished, first on account of the infinite merits of Christ, as already mentioned, and further because the more men are drawn to righteousness by having this treasury applied to them, so much the more does the store of those merits increase. 1027

1028–1049: Retraction of Nicholas of Autrecourt, November 25, 1347

Nicholas of Autrecourt had set forth theses contrary to Scholastic and Aristotelian philosophy. In 1342, the process began at the papal curia in Avignon. The cardinal-legate, William, titular bishop of Quattro Coronati, in 1346, had the books of Nicholas burned as “containing many things false, dangerous, presumptuous, suspect, erroneous, and heretical” (multa falsa, periculosa, praesumptuosa, suspecta et erronea et haeretica continentes) before the assembled university. There are two scripts of revocation, to which are also added the Articuli missi de Parisiis (all published in DenCh 2:576–79, 579–83, 583–87). In 1350, Nicholas became dean of the house of Metz.

Ed.: DenCh 2:580–84 (no. 1124) / DuPIA 1/I (1724): 355a–357a (mutilated text).

Philosophical Errors of Nicholas of Autrecourt

1. ... Quod de rebus per apparentia naturalia quasi nulla certitudo potest haberi; illa tamen modica potest in brevi haberi tempore, si homines convertant intellectum suum ad res, et non ad intellectum Aristotelis et commentatoris.

2. ... Quod non potest evidenter evidentiis praedicta ex una re inferri vel concludi alia res, vel ex non-esse unius non-esse alterius.

3. ... Quod propositiones: “Deus est”, “Deus non est”, penitus idem significant, licet alio modo.

9. ... Quod certitudo evidentiis non habet gradus.

10. ... Quod de substantia materiali alia ab anima nostra non habemus certitudinem evidentiis.

11. ... Quod excepta certitudine fidei non erat alia certitudo nisi certitudo primi principii vel quae in primum principium potest resolvi.

1. ... No certainty, as it were, can be had about things through natural appearances; yet (that certainty) can be had in modest measure in a brief time if men turn their intellect to things and not to the intellect of Aristotle and (his) commentator (Averroes). 1028

2. ... From the above-mentioned evidence, one cannot clearly infer or conclude one thing from another thing or the nonexistence of one thing from the nonexistence of another. 1029

3. ... The propositions “God is” and “God is not” signify entirely the same thing, although in a different way. 1030

9. ... The certainty of evidence does not have degrees. 1031

10. ... We do not have the certitudo of evidence regarding a material substance that is other than our soul. 1032

11. ... Apart from the certitudo of faith, there was no other certitudo except the certitudo of the first principle or what can be reduced to the first principle. 1033

- 1034 14. ... Quod nescimus evidenter, quod alia a Deo possint esse causa alicuius effectus—quod aliqua causa causet efficienter, quae non sit Deus—quod aliqua causa efficiens naturalis sit vel esse possit.
14. ... We do not know clearly that something other than God can be the cause of some effect—that some cause which is not God causes in an efficient manner—that there is or can be some efficient natural cause.
- 1035 15. ... Quod nescimus evidenter, utrum aliquis effectus sit vel esse possit naturaliter productus.
15. ... We do not know clearly whether any effect is or can be produced naturally.
- 1036 17. ... Quod nescimus evidenter, quod in aliqua productione concurrat subiectum.
17. ... We do not know clearly that in any production the subject concurs.
- 1037 21. ... Quod quacumque re demonstrata nullus scit evidenter, quin excedat nobilitate omnes alias.
21. ... With respect to any demonstrated thing, no one knows clearly whether it exceeds all others in nobility.
- 1038 22. ... Quod quacumque re demonstrata nullus scit evidenter, quin ipsa sit Deus, si per Deum intelligamus ens nobilissimum.
22. ... With respect to any demonstrated thing, no one knows clearly whether it is not God, if by God we understand the noblest being.
- 1039 25. ... Quod aliquis nescit evidenter, quin ista possit rationabiliter concedi: “Si aliqua res est producta, Deus est productus.”
25. ... No one knows clearly that this cannot be reasonably admitted: “If anything is produced, God is produced.”
- 1040 26. ... Quod non potest evidenter ostendi, quin quaelibet res sit aeterna.
26. ... It cannot be shown clearly whether any given thing is not eternal.
- 1041 30. ... Quod istae consequentiae non sunt evidentes: “Actus intelligendi est; ergo intellectus est. Actus volendi est; igitur voluntas est.”
30. ... These consequences are not clear: “An act of understanding exists; therefore intelligence exists. An act of will exists, therefore a will exists.”
- 1042 31. ... Quod non potest evidenter ostendi, quin omnia, quae apparent, sint vera.
31. ... It cannot be shown clearly that all things that are apparent are true.
- 1043 32. ... Quod Deus et creatura non sunt aliquid.
32. ... God and the creature are not something.
- 1044 39. ... Quod universum est perfectissimum secundum se et secundum omnes partes suas, et quod nulla imperfectio potest esse in toto nec in partibus, et propter hoc oportet tam totum quam partes esse aeterna nec transire de non-esse in esse, nec e converso, quia ad istud sequitur necessario in universo vel in partibus eius imperfectio.
39. ... The universe is absolutely perfect in itself and in all its parts, and there cannot be any imperfection in it as a whole or in its parts, and this is why it must be eternal both as a whole and in its parts; and these cannot pass from nonbeing into being or vice-versa because, from this, imperfection would necessarily follow in the universe or in its parts.
- 1045 40. ... Quod quidquid est in universo, est melius ipsum quam non ipsum.
40. ... Whatever is in the universe, it is better itself than not itself.
- 1046 42. ... Quod praemiatio bonorum et punitio malorum per hoc fit, quia quando corpora atomalia segregantur, remanet quidam spiritus, qui dicitur intellectus, et alius, qui dicitur sensus, et isti spiritus, sicut in bono se habebant in optima dispositione, sic se habebunt infinities secundum quod illa individua infinities congregabuntur, et sic in hoc bonus praemiabitur, malus autem punietur, quia infinities, quando iterabitur congregatio suorum atomalium, habebit semper suam malam dispositionem. Vel potest, dicit [Nicolaus de U.], aliter poni, quia illi duo spiritus bonorum, quando dicitur corrumpi suppositum eorum, fiunt praesentes alteri supposito constituto ex atomis perfectioribus. Et tunc, cum tale suppositum sit 42. ... The reward of the good and the punishment of the evil may happen in this way: when the bodies composed of atoms are separated, a certain spirit remains, called intellect, and another, called feeling, and just as these spirits are found in the best disposition in the good, so also will they be found an infinity of times in accordance with the fact that these atoms will be assembled together an infinity of times, and so in this (way) the good will be rewarded; but the evil will be punished, because, an infinity of times, when the assembling of his atoms is repeated, an evil one will always have his evil disposition. Or one could suppose, he [Nicholas of Autrecourt] says, in another manner, maioris flexionis et perfectionis, idcirco intelligibilia magis quam prius veniunt ad eos.

43. ... Quod esse corruptibile includit repugnantiam et contradictionem.

53. ... Quod hoc est primum principium et non aliud: "Si aliquid est, aliquid est."

58. ... Quod Deus potest praecipere rationali creaturae quod habeat ipsum odio, et ipsa oboediens plus meretur quam si ipsum diligeret ex praecepto, quoniam hoc faceret cum maiori conatu et magis contra propriam inclinationem.

that these two spirits of the good, when one says that their ⟨substantial⟩ support is destroyed, become present by another ⟨substantial⟩ support constituted by more perfect atoms. And then, since such a ⟨substantial⟩ support is of greater flexibility and perfection, what is intelligible, therefore, comes to them more than before.

43. ... To be corruptible includes repugnance and contradiction. 1047

53. ... This is the first principle and no other: "If something is, it is something." 1048

58. ... God can command a rational creature to hate him, and if it obeys, it merits more than if he loved him because of a precept, since it would do this with greater effort and more against its own inclination. 1049

1050–1085: Letter Super quibusdam to the Mekhithar (= Consolator), Catholicos of the Armenians, September 29, 1351

Before granting to the Armenians their requested aid against the Sultan, Clement VI wanted to examine the purity of their faith, and he had a profession of faith sent to them to accept. Since the response of the Armenian hierarchy did not completely satisfy him, the pope, with this letter, demanded other affirmations of faith.

Ed.: Clement VI, Acta, ed. by A. L. Täutu (Codex Iuris Canonici Orientalis, Fontes III, 9 [Vatican, 1960]), 302–15/ BarAE, at year 1351, nos. 3, 8, 12, 15 (Theiner 25:502f., 505–8).

The Primacy of the Roman See

In primo igitur capitulo responsionis tuae ... quaerimus: 1., si creditis tu et ecclesia Armenorum, quae tibi obedit, omnes illos, qui in baptismo eandem fidem catholicam receperunt, et postmodum a communione fidei eiusdem Ecclesiae Romanae, quae una sola catholica est, recesserunt vel recedent in futurum, esse schismaticos et haereticos, si pertinaciter divisi a fide ipsius Romanae Ecclesiae perseverent.

2. petimus, si creditis tu et Armeni tibi obedientes, quod nullus homo viatorum extra fidem ipsius Ecclesiae et obedientiam Pontificum Romanorum poterit finaliter salvus esse.

In secundo vero capitulo ... quaerimus: 1., si credidisti, credis vel credere es paratus cum ecclesia Armenorum, quae tibi obedit, quod beatus Petrus plenissimam potestatem iurisdictionis acceperit super omnes fideles Christianos a Domino Iesu Christo: et quod omnis potestas iurisdictionis, quam in certis terris et provinciis et diversis partibus orbis specialiter et particulariter habuerunt Iudas Thaddaeus et ceteri Apostoli, subiecta fuerit plenissime auctoritati et potestati, quam super quoscumque in Christum credentes in omnibus partibus orbis beatus Petrus ab ipso Domino Iesu Christo accepit: et quod nullus Apostolus vel quicumque alius super omnes Christianos nisi solus Petrus plenissimam potestatem accepit.

In the first chapter, therefore, of your response, ... We ask: 1. whether you and the Church of the Armenians that is obedient to you believe that all those who in baptism have received the same Catholic faith and afterward have withdrawn and will withdraw in the future from the communion of this same Roman Church, which one is the one, sole Catholic, are schismatic and heretical if they remain obstinately separated from the faith of this Roman Church. 1050

2. We ask whether you, together with the Armenians obedient to you, believe that no man in the wayfaring state outside the faith of this Church and obedience to the Roman pontiffs can finally be saved. 1051

But in the second chapter ... we ask: 1. whether you, together with the Church of the Armenians obedient to you, have believed, believe, or are prepared to believe that blessed Peter received from the Lord Jesus Christ the fullest power of jurisdiction over all faithful Christians: and that every power of jurisdiction that Jude Thaddeus and the other apostles had in a special and particular way, in specific countries and provinces and different parts of the world, was fully subject to the authority and power that blessed Peter received from the Lord Jesus Christ himself over all those believing in Christ in all parts of the world; and that no apostle or anyone else received the fullest power over all Christians except Peter alone. 1052

- 1053 2., si credidisti, tenuisti vel credere ac tenere paratus es cum Armenis tibi subiectis, quod omnes Romani Pontifices, qui beato Petro succedentes canonice intraverunt et canonice intrabunt, ipsi beato Petro Romano Pontifici successerint et succedent in eadem plenitudine, iurisdictione potestatis, quam ipse beatus Petrus accepit a Domino Iesu Christo super totum et universum corpus Ecclesiae militantis.
2. whether you, together with the Armenians subject to you, have believed and held, or are prepared to believe and hold, that all the Roman pontiffs who, succeeding blessed Peter, have canonically assumed or will canonically assume (their office) have succeeded and will succeed to the same fullness and power of jurisdiction that blessed Peter himself received from the Lord Jesus Christ over the entire and universal body of the Church militant.
- 1054 3., si credidistis et creditis tu et Armeni tibi subiecti, Romanos Pontifices qui fuerunt, et Nos qui sumus Pontifex Romanus, ac illos qui in posterum successive erunt, tamquam legitimos et potestate plenissimos Christi vicarios, omnem potestativam iurisdictionem, quam Christus ut caput conforme in humana vita habuit, immediate ab ipso Christo super totum ac universum corpus militantis Ecclesiae accepisse.
3. whether you, together with the Church of the Armenians obedient to you, have believed and do believe that those who have been Roman pontiffs, We who are the Roman pontiff, and those who will be successively so in the future, as legitimate vicars of Christ and most complete in power, have received directly from Christ himself all the juridical power over the complete and universal body of the Church militant that Christ as head, in a similar manner, had in (his) human life.
- 1055 4., si credidisti et credis, quod omnes Romani Pontifices qui fuerunt, Nos qui sumus, et alii qui erunt in posterum, ex plenitudine potestatis et auctoritatis praemissae potuerunt, possumus et poterunt immediate per Nos et eos de omnibus tamquam de iurisdictione Nostra ac eorum subditis iudicare et ad iudicandum quoscumque voluerimus ecclesiasticos iudices constituere et delegare.
4. whether you have believed and do believe that all the Roman pontiffs who have been and We who are and others who will be in the future from the plenitude of past power and authority have been able, are able, and will be able directly by Our own power and theirs both to judge all those subject to Our jurisdiction and theirs and to establish and delegate ecclesiastical judges to judge whomsoever We wish.
- 1056 5., si credidisti et credis, quod in tantum fuerit, sit et erit suprema et praeeminens auctoritas et iuridica potestas Romanorum Pontificum qui fuerunt, Nostri qui sumus, et illorum qui in posterum erunt, ut a nemine iudicari potuerint, potuerimus neque in posterum poterunt; sed soli Deo iudicandi servati fuerint, servemur et servabuntur: et quod a sententiis et iudiciis Nostris non potuerint neque possit nec poterit ad aliquem iudicem alium appellari.
5. whether you have believed and do believe that the supreme and preeminent authority and juridical power of those who were the Roman pontiffs, We who are so, and those who will be so in the future have been, are, and will be such that they and We were not, are not, and in the future will not be able to be judged by anyone; but that they and We have been, are, and will be reserved to judgment by God alone; and that it was not possible, is not possible, and will not be possible for Our decisions and judgments to be appealed to any other judge.
- 1057 6., si credidisti et adhuc credis, plenitudinem potestatis Romani Pontificis se extendere in tantum, quod patriarchas, catholicos, archiepiscopos, episcopos, abbates et quoscumque praelatos alios de dignitatibus, in quibus fuerint constituti, possit ad alias dignitates maioris vel minoris iurisdictionis transferre, vel exigentibus eorum criminibus ipsos degradare et deponere, excommunicare et Satanae tradere [cf. 1 Cor 5:5].
6. whether you have believed and still believe that the plenitude of the power of the Roman pontiff extends so far that it is possible to transfer patriarchs, the Catholicos, the archbishops, bishops, abbots, and whatsoever other prelates from the offices in which they have been established to other offices of greater or lesser jurisdiction, or, as their sins demand, to demote, to depose, excommunicate, or to surrender them to Satan [cf. 1 Cor 5:5].
- 1058 7., si credidisti et adhuc credis, pontificalem auctoritatem non posse nec debere subici cuicumque imperiali et regali aut alteri saeculari potestati, quantum ad institutionem iudicalem, correctionem vel destitutionem.
7. whether you have believed and still believe that pontifical authority cannot or ought not be subject to any secular authority—imperial, regal, or other—with respect to juridical institution, correction, or deprivation.

8., si credidisti et credis, Romanum Pontificem solum posse sacros generales canones condere, plenissimam indulgentiam dare visitantibus limina Apostolorum Petri et Pauli vel ad Terram Sanctam accedentibus, aut quibuscumque fidelibus vere et plene paenitentibus et confessis.

9., si credidisti et credis, omnes, qui se contra fidem Romanae Ecclesiae erexerunt et in finali impaenitentia mortui fuerunt, damnatos fuisse et ad perpetua infernorum supplicia descendisse.

10., si credidisti et adhuc credis, Romanum Pontificem circa administrationem sacramentorum Ecclesiae, salvis semper illis, quae sunt de integritate et necessitate sacramentorum, posse diversos ritus ecclesiarum Christi tolerare, et etiam concedere, ut serventur.

11., si credidisti et credis, Armenos, qui Romano Pontifici in diversis partibus orbis obediunt et formas et ritus Romanae Ecclesiae in administratione sacramentorum et in ecclesiasticis officiis, ieiuniis et aliis caerimoniis studiose et cum devotione observant, bene agere et illa agendo vitam aeternam mereri.

12., si credidisti et credis, neminem de dignitate episcopali ad archiepiscopalem, patriarchalem vel catholicon posse transferri auctoritate propria, nec etiam auctoritate cuiuscumque principis saecularis, sive rex fuerit sive imperator, vel quicumque alius fultus qualicumque potestate et dignitate terrena.

13., si credidisti et adhuc credis, solum Romanum Pontificem, dubiis emergentibus circa fidem catholicam, posse per determinationem authenticam, cui sit inviolabiliter adhaerendum, finem imponere, et esse verum et catholicum quidquid ipse auctoritate clavium sibi traditarum a Christo determinat esse verum, et quod determinat esse falsum et haereticum, sit censendum.

14., si credidisti et credis, Novum et Vetus Testamentum in omnibus libris, quos Romanae Ecclesiae nobis tradidit auctoritas, veritatem indubiam per omnia continere. . . .

8. whether you have believed and do believe that the Roman pontiff alone is able to establish sacred general canons, to grant plenary indulgences to those who visit the thresholds of the apostles Peter and Paul or to those who go to the Holy Land or to any of the faithful who are truly and fully repentant and have confessed. 1059

9. whether you have believed and do believe that all who have raised themselves against the faith of the Roman Church and have died in final impenitence have been damned and have descended to the eternal punishments of hell. 1060

10. whether you have believed and still believe that, with respect to the administration of the Church's sacraments, the Roman pontiff, while always preserving those matters that pertain to the integrity and necessity of the sacraments, can tolerate diverse rites of the churches of Christ and even grant that they be maintained. 1061

11. whether you have believed and do believe that the Armenians, who are obedient to the Roman pontiff in different parts of the world and who observe studiously and with devotion the forms and rites of the Roman Church in the administration of the sacraments and in ecclesiastical duties, fasts, and other ceremonies do well and, by doing this, merit eternal life. 1062

12. whether you have believed and do believe that no one can be transferred from episcopal offices to those of an archbishop, patriarch, or a Catholicos by his own authority, or even by the authority of any secular leader whomsoever, whether he be king or emperor or anyone also distinguished by any such power or earthly office. 1063

13. Whether you have believed and still believe that, when doubts arise concerning the Catholic faith, the Roman pontiff alone is able to put an end (to them) by an authentic decision that must be adhered to inviolably; and what he himself determines to be true, by virtue of the authority of the keys handed over to him by Christ, is true and catholic, and what he determines to be false and heretical must be considered as such. 1064

14. whether you have believed and do believe that the New and Old Testaments in all their books, which the authority of the Roman Church has given to us, contain undoubted truth in all things. . . . 1065

Purgatory

. . . Quærimus, si credidisti et credis, purgatorium esse, ad quod descendunt animae decedentium in gratia, quae nondum per completam paenitentiam de suis satisfecerunt peccatis.

. . . We ask whether you have believed and do believe that a purgatory exists to which the souls of those who die in the state of grace descend who have not yet made satisfaction for their sins by a complete penance. 1066

1067 Item si credidisti et credis, quod igne crucientur ad tempus, et quod mox purgatae, etiam citra diem iudicii, ad veram et aeternam beatitudinem perveniant, quae in faciali Dei visione et dilectione consistit.

Also, whether you have believed and do believe that they will be tormented by fire for a time and that as soon as they are cleansed, even before the Day of Judgment, they may come to the true and eternal beatitude that consists in the vision of God face to face and in love.

The Matter and Minister of Confirmation

1068 ... Responsiones dedisti, quae Nos inducunt, ut a te sequentia requiramus:

... You have given responses that lead Us to ask you the following:

1. de consecratione chrismatis, si credis, quod per nullum sacerdotem, qui non est episcopus, chrisma potest rite et debite consecrari.

1. concerning the consecration of chrism, whether you believe that the chrism can rightly and deservedly be consecrated by no priest who is not a bishop.

1069 2., si credis, quod sacramentum confirmationis per alium quam per episcopum non potest ex officio ordinarie ministrari.

2. whether you believe that the sacrament of confirmation cannot ordinarily be administered by any other than by the bishop by virtue of his office.

1070 3., si credis, quod solum per Romanum Pontificem, plenitudinem potestatis habentem, possit dispensatio sacramenti confirmationis presbyteris, qui non sunt episcopi, committi.

3. whether you believe that by the Roman pontiff alone, having a plenitude of power, the administration of the sacrament of confirmation can be granted to priests who are not bishops.

1071 4., si credis, quod chrismati per quoscumque sacerdotes, qui non sunt episcopi neque a Romano Pontifice super hoc commissionem seu concessionem aliquam receperunt, iterum per episcopum vel episcopos sint chrismandi.

4. whether you believe that those confirmed by any priests whatsoever who are not bishops and who have not received from the Roman pontiff any commission or concession regarding this must be chrismated again by a bishop or bishops.

Doctrines Opposed to Particular Errors of the Armenians

1072 Post praedicta omnia, mirari cogimur vehementer, quod in quadam epistola, quae incipit "Honorabilibus in Christo Patribus", subtrahis de LIII primis capitulis capitula XIV:

After all that is said above, We are led to wonder very much that in a certain letter that begins "Honorabilibus in Christo Patribus", you leave out (the following) fourteen chapters from the first fifty-three:

1. Quod Spiritus Sanctus procedit a Patre et Filio.

1. The Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father and the Son.

1073 3. Quod parvuli ex primis parentibus contrahunt originale peccatum.

3. Children contract original sin from their first parents.

1074 6. Quod animae ex toto purgatae separatae a suis corporibus manifeste Deum vident.

6. Souls separated from their bodies, when entirely cleansed, clearly see God.

1075 9. Quod animae decedentium in mortali peccato in infernum descendant.

9. The souls of those departing in mortal sin descend into hell.

1076 12. Quod baptismus deleat originale et actuale peccatum.

12. Baptism removes original and actual sins.

1077 13. Quod Christus non destruxit descendendo ad inferos inferiorem infernum.

13. By descending into hell, Christ did not destroy the lower hell (of the damned).

1078 15. Quod angeli a Deo fuerunt creati boni.

15. The angels were created good by God.

1079 30. Quod effusio sanguinis animalium nullam operatur remissionem peccatorum.

30. The pouring out of the blood of animals works no remission of sins.

1080 32. Quod non iudicent comestores piscium et olei in diebus ieiuniorum.

32. One should not judge those who consume fish and oil on the days of fasting.

39. Quod in Ecclesia catholica baptizati, si efficiantur infideles et postmodum convertantur, non sunt iterum baptizandi. 39. Those who were baptized in the Catholic Church, if they become unfaithful and afterward convert, are not to be baptized again. 1081
40. Quod parvuli ante octavum diem possunt baptizari, et quod baptismus non potest esse in liquore alio quam in vera aqua. 40. Children can be baptized before the eighth day, and baptism cannot be by any liquid other than true water. 1082
42. Quod corpus Christi post verba consecrationis sit idem numero quod corpus natum de Virgine et immolatum in cruce. 42. The body of Christ after the words of consecration is numerically the same as the body born of the Virgin and immolated on the Cross. 1083
45. Quod nullus, etiam sanctus, corpus Christi potest conficere, nisi sit sacerdos. 45. Unless he is a priest, no one, not even a saint, can bring about the body of Christ. 1084
46. Quod est de necessitate salutis, confiteri proprio sacerdoti vel de licentia eius, omnia peccata mortalia perfecte et distincte. 46. It is necessary for salvation to confess all mortal sins completely and distinctly to one's own priest or with his permission (to another). 1085

INNOCENT VI: December 18, 1352–September 12, 1362

URBAN V: September 28, 1362–December 19, 1370

1087–1097: Retraction Imposed on Denis Foulechat by the Constitution Ex supernae clementiae, December 23, 1368

Denis Foulechat (or Soulechat), O.F.M., in his commentary on the Book of the Sentences, had supported theses on gospel perfection and poverty that contradicted the decrees of John XXII. When the University of Paris in 1363 demanded a retraction from him, he appealed to the pope. The pope twice compelled him to retract his errors: at Avignon on January 31, 1365, and at Paris on April 12, 1369. The second retraction was ordered because of new declarations made by Denis and came about at the instigation of Cardinal John, the former bishop of Beauvais (see the text in DenCh 3 [1894], 183f. [no. 1350]).

Ed.: DenCh 3:117–19 (no. 1298); 185 (no. 1352) / an inaccurate text is provided in DuPIA 1/I (1724): 384b–386a / BarAE, at year 1368, no. 17 (Theiner 26:159f.).

Errors on the State of Perfection and on Poverty

a. First retraction (January 31, 1365)

- (Art. 4, conclusio 3) Quod haec benedicta, immo superbenedicta lex et dulcissima, videlicet lex amoris ... omnem aufert proprietatem et dominium ... (Art. 4, conclusion 3) That this blessed, indeed, 1087 superblessed and most sweet law that is the law of love ... removes all property and ownership ...
—revoco tamquam falsam, erroneam et haeticam, quia Christus et Apostoli illam legem perfectissime tenuerunt, et multi alii statuum diversorum legem hanc ... tenuerunt ..., qui proprietatem et dominium habuerunt.... —I retract as false, erroneous, and heretical, since Christ and the apostles observed that law perfectly, and many others of different states (of life) have observed ... that law ... who had property and ownership....
- (Correlarium 1) Quod haec lex desponsat duo pronomina possessiva, videlicet “meum” et “tuum”.... (Corollary 1) That this law (of love) marries the two possessive pronouns, that is, “mine” and “yours”.... 1088
- (Corr. 2) Quod non minus facit omnia communia perfecta caritas quam extrema necessitas.... (Corollary 2) That perfect charity makes all things common no less than does extreme necessity....
—Dico nunc, quod ista duo correlaria, ut sequuntur ex praedicta conclusione, sunt falsa.... —I now say that these two corollaries, since they follow from the aforesaid conclusion, are false....
- (Corr. 4) Quod hanc legem dedit Christus discipulis suis principaliter ad actualiter exsequendum, non solum habitualiter.... (Corollary 4) That Christ gave this law (of love) to his disciples principally as something to be followed in action, not only in disposition.... 1089

—Istud correlarium intelligendo hanc legem amoris ut auferentem omnem proprietatem et dominium, sicut conclusio dicit, sic intellectum reputo falsum, erroneum et haeticum et contra determinationem Ecclesiae...

- 1090 (Concl. 4) Quod actualis abdicatio cordialis voluntatis et temporalis potestatis, domini seu auctoritatis, statum perfectissimum ostendit et efficit...

—Istam universaliter intellectam reputo falsam, erroneam et haeticam...

- 1091 (Corr. 1) Quod Christus non abdicasse huiusmodi possessionem et ius in temporalibus, non habetur ex nova lege, immo potius oppositum ... [cf. Mt 8:20].

(Corr. 2) Quod hanc legem pro regula perfectionis Christus docuit et exemplo firmavit...

—Ista duo correlaria revoco tamquam falsa, erronea et haetica, et contra determinationem decretalis domini Ioannis papae [XXII], quae incipit: “Quia quorundam”.¹

- 1092 (Corr. 4) Quod abdicatio rerum temporalium secundum animi praeparationem nullam aut valde imperfectam et fragilem ostendit et efficit perfectionem...

—Istum articulum revoco tamquam falsum et scandalosum.

- 1093 Respondendo ad quemdam baccalaureum [dicentem] ... quod Christus talia non abdicavit, illud negavi, et dixi, quod Christus nihil sibi retinuit.

—Ista duo dicta revoco tamquam falsa et haetica, quia Christus loculos habuit propter infirmos, a fidelibus oblata conservans...

- 1094 (Correl. ultimum) Quod non plus curavit Christus de temporalibus quam faciunt divites de pauperibus...

—Nunc dico quod Christus de temporalibus curavit, quia non omnia abdicavit...

b. Propositions Added to the Second Retraction (April 12, 1369)

- 1095 Quod Christus in morte sua omnia simpliciter abdicavit.

—Istam reputo tamquam falsam, erroneam et haeticam.

- 1096 Quod quando corpus [Christi] in sepulcro mansit, ibi caritas abstulit ab eo omnem proprietatem et dominium.

—Istam revoco tamquam falsam, erroneam et haeticam.

- 1097 Quod tunc vacavit sedes generalis Domini usque ad diem istam ...

—revoco tamquam falsam et erroneam.

—I consider this corollary, understanding the law of love as removing all property and ownership as the conclusion says, to be, when thus understood, false, erroneous, and heretical, and contrary to the judgment of the Church...

(Conclusion 4) That the actual renunciation of the will of the heart and of temporal power, ownership, or authority manifests and creates the most perfect state (of life)...

—I consider this, when understood universally, to be false, erroneous, and heretical...

(Corollary 1) That Christ did not renounce this kind of possession and right over temporal goods is not contained in the new law, in fact, rather the opposite ... [cf. Mt 8:20].

(Corollary 2) That Christ taught this law as the rule of perfection and confirmed it by his example...

—I retract these two corollaries as false, erroneous, and heretical, and contrary to the decretal judgment of the lord Pope John [XXII] that begins “Quia quorundam”.¹

(Corollary 4) That the renunciation of temporal goods that relates to the preparation of the spirit represents and achieves no perfection or a very imperfect and fragile perfection...

—I retract this article as false and scandalous.

Replying to a certain (academic) bachelor [who said] ... that Christ did not renounce such things, I denied it and said that Christ retained nothing as his own.

—I retract these two assertions as false and heretical, since Christ had a purse for the sick and kept offerings made to him by the faithful...

(Final corollary) That Christ cared no more about temporal goods than the rich do about the poor...

—I now say that Christ did care for temporal goods, since he did not renounce everything...

That Christ gave up all things absolutely in his death.

—I consider this false, erroneous, and heretical.

That when the body [of Christ] remained in the tomb, there charity took from him all property and ownership.

—I retract this as false, erroneous, and heretical.

That from that time to this day the general seat of the Lord has been vacant ...

—I retract as false and erroneous.

¹*1091 Constitution Qui quorundam mentes, November 10, 1324; John XXII. Extravagantes communes, tit. 14, c. 5 (Frdb 2:1230–36).

GREGORY XI: December 30, 1370–March 26/27, 1378

1101–1103: Letter of the Cardinals of the Inquisition to the Archbishops of Tarragona and Saragossa, August 8, 1371

The following theological assertions were upheld by (among others) Peter Lombard (Sententiae, I. IV, dist. 13), Innocent III (De mysterio Missae III, 11), and Bonaventure (Sententiae, I. IV, dist. 13, a. 2, q. 1), but later, they were almost completely abandoned. When Peter of Bonageta and John of Lato revived them, they were denounced by the Inquisition. Under Gregory XI, it was decided that the public teaching of these propositions would be subject to the penalty of excommunication.

Ed.: DuPIA 1/I (1724): 390b.

Errors of Peter of Bonageta and John of Lato about the Eucharist

- | | |
|---|--|
| 1. Quod si hostia consecrata cadat seu proiciatur in cloacam, lutum seu aliquem turpem locum, quod, speciebus remanentibus, sub eis esse desinit corpus Christi et redit substantia panis. | 1. If a consecrated host falls or is cast into a sewer, into mud, or some disgraceful place, while the species remain, the body of Christ ceases to be under them and the substance of bread returns. 1101 |
| 2. Quod si hostia consecrata a mure corrodatum seu a bruto sumatur, quod, remanentibus dictis speciebus, sub eis desinit esse corpus Christi et redit substantia panis. | 2. If the consecrated host is gnawed by a mouse or is consumed by an animal, while the so-called species remains, the body of Christ ceases to be under them and the substance of bread returns. 1102 |
| 3. Quod si hostia consecrata a iusto vel a peccatore sumatur, quod, dum species dentibus teritur, Christus ad caelum rapitur et in ventrem hominis non traicitur. | 3. If the consecrated host is consumed by a just man or by a sinner, while the species is being crushed by the teeth, Christ is snatched up to heaven and he is not cast into the stomach of man. 1103 |

1110–1116: Bull Salvator humani generis to the Archbishop of Riga and His Suffragan Bishops, April 8, 1374

The Speculum Saxonicum (in German, Sachsenspiegel) by Eike von Reggow, first composed in Latin (after 1221, lost), then translated into Low German (between July 1224 and the year 1228; cf. K. A. Eckhardt, Lehnrecht [1956], 127–29), is considered the most important juridical collection of the German Middle Ages. It exerted a great influence especially in Southern Germany (Schwabenspiegel). Since some of its principles stood in opposition to Christian doctrine, John Klenkok, an Augustinian Eremit, urged the pope to condemn fourteen articles; this Gregory XI did, by this bull sent to the Archbishop of Riga and his suffragan bishops of Livonia and Prussia. In the same matter he also sent Emperor Charles IV a letter dated October 15, 1374 (MaC 23:157–62).

Ed.: BullTau 4:575a–576a / BullCocq 3/II, 360b–361a / MaC 23:160 (wrongly listed under Gregory IX).

The places where the following propositions are found are given according to K. A. Eckhardt, Sachsenspiegel, vol. 1: Landrecht; vol. 2: Lehnrecht, Germanenrechte, n.s., Land- und Lehnrechtsbücher (Göttingen, Berlin, and Frankfurt am Main, 1955; 1956) [= GR]; and according to Eckhardt, Land- und Lehnrecht, Fontes iuris Germanici antiqui, new series 1/I and 1/II, published separately by MGH (Hannover, 1933) [= MGH].

Erroneous Legal Principles Contained in the Speculum Saxonicum

- | | |
|---|--|
| Universis Christi fidelibus per Apostolica scripta mandamus, quod ipsi scriptis seu legibus reprobatis de cetero non utantur . . . : (Art. 1) Quidquid homo fecerit extra iudicium, quantumcumque hoc sit notorium, se liberare poterit per suum iuramentum, nec contra talem valet aliquod testimonium.¹ (6) Quod si quis fuerit interfectus in spolio vel furto, pro quo consanguineus interfecti se praebeat ad duellum, talis per duellum repellit omne testimonium, nec talis mortuus tunc sine duello poterit convinci.¹ | Through this apostolic writing We decree to all Christ's faithful that they should henceforth not use these condemned writings or laws . . . : (Art. 1) Whatever a man has done outside the legal forum, no matter how well known it may be, he may free himself by his oath (of innocence), and no testimony prevails against this.¹ (6) If anyone has been killed in taking spoil or in robbery, and a relative of his presents himself to fight a duel, the relative repudiates all testimony by the duel, and the dead man in such circumstances cannot be convicted without a duel.¹ |
|---|--|

*1110¹ Landrecht I, 18, § 2 (= art. 10, GR 1:83 / = art. 9, MGH 30).

*1111¹ Ibid., I, 64 (= art. 44, GR 1:125f. / = art. 45, MGH 56).

- 1112 (7) Quod si duo dictant in iudicio simul contrarias sententias, tunc quicumque talium habuerit maiorem sequelam, talis sententiam obtinebit.¹ (7) If two persons in a legal forum make contrary affirmations, whichever of them has the larger following shall have his affirmation prevail.¹
- 1113 (8) Quod quicumque fuerit appellatus ad duellum secundum istius libri formam, talis non potest negare duellum, nisi sic appellans minus bene natus fuerit quam appellatus.¹ (8) Whoever is challenged to a duel in accordance with the provisions of this book cannot decline the duel, unless the challenger is less well born than the one challenged.¹
- 1114 (9) Quod quicumque perdidit ius suum ratione furti vel spoli, talis incusatus secundo de furto vel spolio non potest se liberare iuramento, sed electionem habet ad ferrum ignitum aut aquam bullientem vel ad duellum. Huius quidem articuli pars ultima, quae ad ferrum ignitum etc. electionem concedit, est erronea.¹ (9) Whoever has lost his legal rights by reason of theft or the taking of spoil cannot free himself by an oath (of innocence) when accused a second time of theft or the taking of spoil but has the choice of hot iron or boiling water or a duel. The last part of this article, however, which grants the choice of hot iron, etc., is mistaken.¹
- 1115 (12) Quod heres non tenetur de furto vel spolio perpetrato per illum, cui succedit in hereditate, respondere: quod erroneum est saltem in foro conscientiae.¹ (12) An heir is not answerable for robbery or the taking of spoil by the person to whom he has succeeded in inheritance: which is mistaken at least in the forum of conscience.¹
- 1116 [Censura: Scripta damnantur tamquam] falsa, temeraria, iniqua et iniusta et in quibusdam haeretica et schismatica et contra bonos mores existentia periculosaque animabus. [Censure: The writings are condemned as] false, temerarious, wicked, and unjust and in some respects heretical and schismatical and against good morals and dangerous to souls.

1121–1139: Errors of John Wycliffe, Condemned in the Letter Super periculosus to the Bishops of Canterbury and London, May 22, 1377

John Wycliffe (also Wyclif, Wiclif, Wiclef) was accused in February 1377 by William Courtenay, Bishop of London, of various errors relating to ecclesiastical authority. Since the hearing was without result, nineteen propositions drawn from his lectures (at the University of Oxford) and writings (particularly his De civili dominio) were sent to the pope, who rejected them as erroneous. Wycliffe defended them in his work called the Protestatio or Declarationes (ed. by R. Vaughan, The Life and Opinions of John de Wycliffe, 2nd ed., vol. 1 [London, 1831], 432–37 / T. Walsingham, Historia Anglicana, ed. by H. T. Riley, vol. 1 [London, 1863], 357–62).

Ed.: MaC 26:565E–566D / HaC 7:1870E–1871C / DuPIA 1/II, 3ab / R. Vaughan, The Life and Opinions of John de Wycliffe, 2nd ed., vol. 1 (London, 1831), 432–37 / T. Walsingham, Historia Anglicana, ed. by H. T. Riley, vol. 1 (London, 1863), 357–62.

The places where the propositions are found in the De civili dominio (written around 1376) are given according to the Wyclif Society's edition; vol. 1 = book 1, ed. by R. L. Poole (London, 1885); vol. 2 = book 2, and vols. 3–4 = book 3, ed. by John Loserth (London, 1900–1904).

Errors of John Wycliffe concerning Temporal Dominion

- 1121 1. Totum genus humanum concurrentium, citra Christum, non habet potestatem simpliciter ordinandi, ut Petrus et omne genus suum dominetur politice in perpetuum super mundum.¹ 1. The whole human race together, excepting Christ, does not have the power to establish in an absolute manner that Peter and all his kind should rule over the world politically.¹
- 1122 2. Deus non potest dare homini pro se et heredibus suis in perpetuum civile dominium.¹ 2. God cannot give perpetual civil dominion to a man for himself and his heirs.¹
- 1123 3. Chartae humanitatis adinventae de hereditate civili perpetua sunt impossibiles.¹ 3. Grants of favor made in view of perpetual civil inheritance are impossible.¹

*1112¹ Cf. ibid., I, 18, § 3; II, 12, § 8a; III, 21, § 1 (= art. 10, 55, 128, GR 1:83f., 138f., 207 / = art. 9, 58, 123, MGH 30, 67, 118); cf. Lehnrecht, art. 40, § 1 (= art. 246, GR 2:61).

*1113¹ Cf. Landrecht I, 63, § 3 (= art. 43, GR 1:122 / = art. 45, MGH 54f.).

*1114¹ Ibid., I, 39 (= art. 25, GR 1:102 / = art. 23, MGH 41).

*1115¹ Cf. ibid., I, 6, § 2; II, 17, § 1 (= art. 6, 62, GR 1:78, 148, and 149, apparatus / = art. 7, 66, MGH 25, 73).

*1121¹ I, 35 (1:251₁₉₋₂₁).

*1122¹ I, 35 (1:252_{17f.}).

*1123¹ I, 35 (1:252₂₄₋₂₆).

4. Quilibet existens in gratia gratifice et fideliter, nedum habet ius, sed in re habet omnia dona Dei.¹ 1124
4. Whoever lives in (a state of) grace gratefully and faithfully not only has rights, but in fact possesses all the gifts of God.¹
5. Homo potest solum ministratorie dare tam naturali filio quam imitationis in schola Christi, tam temporale dominium quam aeternum.¹ 1125
5. A man can only give ministerially, whether to a natural son or to one who imitates him in the school of Christ, whether in the case of a temporal or an eternal dominion.¹
6. Si Deus est, domini temporales possunt legitime ac meritorie auferre bona fortunae ab Ecclesia delinquente.¹ 1126
6. If God exists, then temporal lords may legitimately and deservedly take the goods of fortune from a delinquent Church.¹
7. Numquid Ecclesia est in tali statu vel non, non est meum discutere, sed dominorum temporalium examinare et, posito casu, confidenter agere et sub poena damnationis aeternae eius temporalia auferre.¹ 1127
7. Whether the Church is in such a state or not is not mine to discuss but should be examined by temporal lords, and if the case be such, they should act confidently and take away her temporal (goods) on pain of eternal damnation.¹
8. Scimus quod non est possibile, quod vicarius Christi pure ex bullis suis vel ex illis cum voluntate et consensu suo et sui collegii quemquam habilitet vel inhabilitet.¹ 1128
8. We know that it is not possible for the vicar of Christ, merely by his bulls or by means of these with his will and consent and that of his college, to render someone capable or incapable of holding (dominion).¹
9. Non est possibile hominem excommunicari, nisi prius et principaliter excommunicetur a se ipso.¹ 1129
9. It is not possible for a man to be excommunicated unless, firstly and primarily, he excommunicates himself.¹
10. Nemo ad sui deteriorationem excommunicatur, suspenditur vel aliis censuris cruciatur nisi in causa Dei.¹ 1130
10. Nobody is excommunicated, suspended, or punished by other censures in a way harmful to himself except in a cause of God.¹
11. Maledictio vel excommunicatio non ligat simpliciter, nisi quantum fertur in adversarium legis Christi.¹ 1131
11. A curse or excommunication does not bind absolutely except when it is given against an opponent of the law of Christ.¹
12. Non est exemplificata potestas a Christo suis discipulis excommunicandi subditos, praecipue propter negationem temporalium, sed e contra.¹ 1132
12. There is no example of a power given by Christ to his disciples to excommunicate subjects, especially (not) for failure to provide temporal (goods), in fact, the reverse.¹
13. Discipuli Christi non habent potestatem coacte exigere temporalia per censuras.¹ 1133
13. The disciples of Christ do not have the power of compulsorily demanding temporal (goods) by censures.¹
14. Non est possibile de potentia Dei absoluta, quod si papa vel alius praetendat se quovis modo solvere vel ligare, eo ipso solvit et ligat.¹ 1134
14. It is not possible, by God's absolute power, that if the pope or someone else claims in some way to loose and bind, he thereby looses and binds.¹
15. Credere debemus quod solum tunc solvit vel ligat, quando se conformat legi Christi.¹ 1135
15. We ought to believe that he looses or binds only when he conforms to the law of Christ.¹

*1124¹ I, 1 (1:16–18).

*1125¹ I, 35 (1:253_{3–5}).

*1126¹ I, 37 (1:267_{12–14}); at the same time for prop. 17 (*1137), cf. II, 1 (2:14–6, 213–18); 2 (2:13); 3 (2:23–26); 4 (2:33_{19f}); 5 (2:42); 8 (2:76–80); 10 (2:97–101, 112f.); III, 2 (3:27f.); 14 (3:259, 263); 17 (3:346); 20 (4:404). Cf. also prop. 16 of Constance (*1166).

*1127¹ Cf. I, 37 (1:269_{12–17}, n.).

*1128¹ I, 35 (1:255_{24–27}); cf. 44 (1:410).

*1129¹ I, 38 (1:274_{15f}).

*1130¹ I, 38 (1:276_{7–9}).

*1131¹ I, 38 (1:275_{22–24}).

*1132¹ I, 38 (1:277_{29–278₂}).

*1133¹ I, 38 (1:279_{4f}). Cf. I, 40 and 42 (1:309, 336).

*1134¹ Cf. I, 38 (1:283₂, n.).

*1135¹ I, 38 (1:284_{19–21}). Cf. III, 19 (4:389_{29–31}).

- 1136 16. Hoc debet catholice credi: quilibet sacerdos rite ordinatus habet potestatem sufficienter sacramenta quaelibet conferendi, et per consequens quemlibet contritum a peccato quolibet absolvendi.¹
16. This ought to be believed in a Catholic way: any duly ordained priest has a sufficient power of conferring any sacraments and, consequently, of absolving anyone who is contrite for any sin.¹
- 1137 17. Licet regibus, auferre temporalia a viris ecclesiasticis, ipsis abutentibus habitualiter.¹
17. It is licit for kings to take away temporal (goods) from ecclesiastics if the latter habitually misuse them.¹
- 1138 18. Sive domini temporales sive sancti papae sive Caput Ecclesiae, qui est Christus, dotaverint Ecclesiam bonis fortunae vel gratiae, et excommunicaverint eius temporalia auferentes, licet tamen propter condicionem implicitam delicto proportionabili eam temporalibus spoliare.¹
18. Whether or not temporal lords or holy popes or the Head of the Church, who is Christ, have endowed the Church with the goods of fortune or grace and have excommunicated those who take away her temporal (goods), it is nonetheless licit, by an implicit condition, to despoil her of her temporal (goods) for a proportionate offense.¹
- 1139 19. Ecclesiasticus, immo Romanus Pontifex, potest legitime a subditis et laicis corripi, etiam accusari.¹
19. An ecclesiastic, even the Roman pontiff, can legitimately be corrected, and even accused, by subjects and lay persons.¹

URBAN VI: April 8, 1378–October 15, 1389

BONIFACE IX: November 2, 1389–October 1, 1404

1145–1146: Papal Bulls concerning the Privilege of the Monastery of St. Osyth in Essex to Confer Major Orders, 1400 and 1403

There are two bulls, by the first of which a certain abbot is given the privilege, unheard of up to that point, of conferring major orders, including the priesthood; by the second bull, this privilege is revoked three years later at the instigation of Robert Braybrook, Bishop of London. On the basis of these bulls, the question has arisen of whether a priest can act as an extraordinary bestower of priestly ordination, as is generally established with the sacrament of confirmation. Roman practice seems to confirm this (cf. *1290, 1435). It should be remembered that the sacramentality of episcopal consecration was long disputed. The Second Vatican Council teaches that the consecration of a bishop bestows the fullness of the sacrament of orders (LG 21;*4145); but the question at issue here is not clarified. Note the Tridentine anathema, sess. 23, can. 7 (*1777).

The genuineness of these bulls can hardly be called into doubt, since their registration is recorded in the Vatican Archives, Registrum Latinum 81, fol. 264 (*1145), and Vatican Archives, Registrum Latinum 108, fol. 132 (*1146).

Ed.: E. Beck, "Two Bulls of Boniface IX for the Abbot of St. Osyth", EngHR 26 (1911): 125–27 / PerRMor 12 (1924): 18f. / NvRTh 76 (1954): 364f. —Reg.: Calendar of Entries in the Papal Registers relating to Great Britain and Ireland: Papal Letters 5 (years 1396–1404), ed. by W. H. Bliss and J. A. Twemlow (London, 1904), 334, 534f.

On the Power of Ordination in a Priest

a. Bull Sacrae religionis, February 1, 1400

- 1145 Sacrae religionis, sub qua dilecti filii abbas et Conventus monasterii Apostolorum Petri et Pauli ac sanctae Osithae Virginis et Martyris in Essexia Ordinis sancti Augustini Londoniensis dioecesis devotum et sedulum exhibent Altissimo famulatum, promeretur honestas, ut votis eorum . . . , quantum cum Deo possumus, favorabiliter annuamus. Hinc est quod Nos, ipsorum
- The religious worthiness with which the beloved sons, the abbot and community of the monastery of the Apostles Peter and Paul and of the holy Virgin and Martyr Osyth in Essex, of the Order of St. Augustine, in the diocese of London, render a devout and assiduous service to the Most High merits that We should favorably accede to their wishes . . . as far as We are able with God.

*1136¹ I, 38 (1:284₂₃–285₂).

*1137¹ I, 39 (1:289₃₀–290₁). Cf. the passages indicated for prop. 6 (*1126).

*1138¹ II, 4 (2:26_{27–32}). Cf. I, 39 (1:285–88).

*1139¹ II, 9 (2:94_{34–36}); suggested in I, 39 (1:291); cf. III, 2 (3:28_{23–27}).

abbatis et Conventus in hac parte supplicationibus inclinati, ut idem abbas et successores sui in perpetuum abbates eiusdem monasterii pro tempore existentes omnibus et singulis Canonicis praesentibus et futuris professis eiusdem monasterii omnes minores necnon subdiaconatus, diaconatus et presbyteratus ordines statutis a iure temporibus conferre libere et licite valeant et quod dicti Canonici sic per dictos abbates promoti in sic susceptis ordinibus libere et licite ministrare possint, quibuscumque constitutionibus Apostolicis et aliis contrariis in contrarium editis quibuscumque quacumque firmitate roboratis nequaquam obstantibus, eisdem abbati et successoribus suis ac eorum Canonicis auctoritate Apostolica tenore praesentium indulgemus.

Ipsis abbati et Conventui de uberioris dono gratiae concedentes et eadem auctoritate decernentes, quod si forsitan imposterum gratias aut indulgentias seu privilegia vel alias quascumque concessionem seu Litteras Apostolicas de huiusmodi ordinibus conferendis vel suscipiendis aut de alia quacumque materia seu re per Sedem Apostolicam vel praedicta auctoritate imperpetuum vel ad certum tempus praedictis abbati et Conventui vel aliis quibuscumque in partibus Angliae vel alibi concessa per eandem Sedem in genere vel in specie revocari, restringi aut minui contigerit, per hoc praesens indulgentia nullatenus revocetur, restringatur aut in aliquo quomodolibet minuatur. Sed praesentes Litterae, nisi de ipsis plena et expressa de verbo ad verbum mentio habeatur, in omni sui permaneant roboris firmitate, constitutionibus ... concessis et contrariis non obstantibus quibuscumque.

b. Bull Apostolicae Sedis, February 6, 1403

Apostolicae Sedis providentia circumspecta nonnumquam concessa seu ordinata per eam cassat, revocat et annullat, prout ... praesertim cathedralium ac praelatorum illis praesidentium statui id conspicit utiliter expedire. Dudum siquidem Nos ad dilectorum filiorum abbatis et Conventus monasterii sanctae Osithae Ordinis sanctae Augustini Londoniensis dioecesis petitionis instantiam,

[1] ut ipse abbas et successores sui abbates dicti monasterii, qui essent pro tempore mitra, anulo

Hence it is that, inclining in this matter to the requests of the abbot and community, We grant with apostolic authority by the tenor of these present (writings), to the same abbot and his successors and to their canons:

that the same abbot and his successors in perpetuity, for the duration of their tenure as abbots of the same monastery, shall be able freely and licitly to confer, at the times provided by law, all the minor (orders) and likewise the orders of subdiaconate, diaconate, and presbyterate on all and singular, present and future, professed canons of the same monastery and that the said canons thus promoted by the said abbots shall be able to minister freely and licitly in the orders thus received, notwithstanding any contrary apostolic or other constitution published to the contrary, endowed with authority by whomever and with whatever force.

We concede a richer grant of favor to the same abbot and community and decree by the same authority that if perchance in the future, favors or indulgences or privileges or other concessions of any kind, or apostolic letters concerning the conferring or receiving of these kinds of orders or any other matter or thing, granted in perpetuity or for a certain time by the Apostolic See, or by the aforesaid authority, to the aforesaid abbot and community, or to any others whatever in England or elsewhere, should happen to be revoked, restricted, or lessened by the same See, in general or in particular, the present indulgence shall in no wise be thereby revoked, restricted, or in any way at all lessened. But the present writing shall remain in all the force of its validity, unless full and express mention is made of it word for word, any constitutions whatever ... conceded to the contrary notwithstanding.

The circumspect providence of the Apostolic See 1146 sometimes cancels, revokes, and annuls things that have been conceded or ordained by it ... as it sees it to be of useful advantage to the state of cathedrals in particular and of the prelates who preside over them. Recently, in fact, at the urgent petition of the beloved sons, the abbot and community of the monastery of St. Osyth of the Order of St. Augustine in the diocese of London, We thought good, through another letter of Ours (*1145), to concede, by apostolic authority, to the same abbot and his successors, as a special favor, as is contained more fully in the aforesaid letter:

(1) first, that the abbot himself and his successors as abbots of the said monastery, during their tenure, et omnibus aliis pontificalibus insigniis libere uti, quodque in dicto monasterio et prioratibus eidem monasterio subiectis ac parochialibus et aliis ecclesiis ad ipsos ... pertinentibus, quamvis ipsis pleno iure non subessent, benedictionem sollemnem post Missarum, Vesperorum et Matutinorum sollemnia, dummodo in benedictione huiusmodi aliquis antistes vel Sedis Apostolicae legatus praesens non esset, elargiri possent per quasdam primo,

[2] et deinde, ut abbas et successores praefati omnibus et singulis Canonicis praesentibus et futuris Professis eiusdem monasterii omnes minores necnon subdiaconatus, diaconatus et presbyteratus ordines statutis a iure temporibus conferre libere et licite valerent, felicitis recordationis Alexandri papae IV praedecessoris Nostri quae incipit “Abbatēs”¹ et aliis quibuscumque constitutionibus Apostolicis contrariis nequaquam obstantibus, eisdem abbati et successoribus auctoritate Apostolica de speciali gratia per quasdam alias Litteras Nostras [*1145] duximus indulgendum, prout in praedictis Litteris plenius continetur.

Cum autem, sicut exhibita Nobis nuper pro parte venerabilis Fratris Nostri Roberti episcopi Londoniensis petitio continebat, monasterium praefatum, in quo idem episcopus ius obtinet patronatus, per quosdam ipsius episcopi praedecessores ... fundatum exstiterit ac Litterae et indulta huiusmodi in gravem ipsius episcopi et iurisdictionis suae ordinariae ac Ecclesiae Londoniensis laesionem vergere dignoscantur, pro parte eiusdem episcopi Nobis fuit humiliter supplicatum, ut suae et eiusdem Ecclesiae indemnitati consulere in praemissis de benignitate Apostolica dignaremur. Nos super his ... providere volentes, huiusmodi supplicationibus inclinati Litteras et indulta huiusmodi auctoritate Apostolica ex certa scientia tenore praesentium revocamus, cassamus et irritamus ac nullius esse volumus roboris vel momenti.

should be able freely to use the miter, ring, and all other pontifical insignia and that they should be able to give a solemn blessing after the celebration of Mass, Vespers, and Matins in the said monastery and in priories subject to the same monastery and in parochial and other churches to them pertaining, even if not fully subject to them in law, provided that at blessings of this sort no bishop or legate of the Apostolic See were present;

(2) and next, that the abbot and successors aforesaid should be able freely and licitly to confer, at the times provided by law, all the minor (orders) and likewise the orders of the subdiaconate, diaconate, and presbyterate on all and singular, present and future, professed canons of the same monastery, (the constitution) of Our predecessor Pope Alexander IV of happy memory, which begins “Abbatēs”,¹ and any other apostolic constitutions to the contrary notwithstanding.

Since, however, as the petition recently presented to Us on behalf of Our Venerable Brother, Robert, Bishop of London, set forth, the aforesaid monastery, in which the same bishop has the right of patronage, was founded by certain predecessors of that bishop ... and letters and indults of this sort are known to tend to the grave detriment of that bishop and of the ordinary jurisdiction belonging to him and to the Church of London, it was humbly requested of Us on behalf of the same bishop that We should deign in apostolic benignity to provide in the foregoing matters for the protection of his rights and those of the same Church. We, wishing to make provision in these matters ... and inclining to this request, by apostolic authority and with certain knowledge, by the tenor of these present (writings), revoke, cancel, and invalidate this letter and these concessions and will them to be of no validity or weight.

INNOCENT VII: October 17, 1404–November 6, 1406

GREGORY XII: November 30, 1406–July 4, 1415

Council of CONSTANCE (Sixteenth Ecumenical): December 5, 1414–April 22, 1418

Emperor Sigismund had endeavored with John XXIII [anti-pope from 1410–1415] to assemble an ecumenical council at Constance (bull of convocation: BullTau 4:462–64). The greatest service of this council was the ending of the schism of the three popes: Gregory XII was persuaded to resign of his own accord (July 4, 1415); John XXIII and Benedict XIII were deposed (May 29, 1415, and June 26, 1417). On November 11, 1417, Pope Martin V was elected in their place.

*1146¹ Boniface VIII, Decretales (Liber Sextus), l. V, tit. 7, c. 3 (Frdb 2:1084); PoR 18116.

The participants of the synod had claimed an ecumenical character for the council from the beginning, supported by the principle of the supremacy of the council established in sessions 4 and 5: “This Synod, legitimately assembled in the Holy Spirit, constituting a general council and representing the Catholic Church militant, has immediate power from Christ, and, thus, anyone of whatever status or dignity, even if it be that of the pope, is obliged to obey whatever pertains to the faith or the eradication of the above-mentioned schism . . .” (ipsa Synodus in Spiritu Sancto congregata legitime, generale concilium faciens, Ecclesiam catholicam militantem repraesentans, potestatem a Christo immediate habet, cui quilibet cuiuscumque status vel dignitatis, etiam si papalis existat, oboedire tenetur in his quae pertinent ad fidem et exstirpationem dicti schismatis . . .; MaC 27:585B, 590D / COeD, 3rd ed., 408_{10–14}, 409_{22–26}).

Martin V made the recognition of the council as general [or ecumenical] obligatory for the faithful (*1247–1248). It is disputed as to what extent he confirmed its decrees. In the final session (45) of April 22, 1418, the pope declared as valid “all in the council that was carried out in a conciliar manner with respect to the matter of the faith” (omnia gesta in Concilio conciliariter circa materiam fidei; MaC 27:1199B / COeD, 3rd ed., 450f., n. 4). In addition to the decrees named in the bull In eminentis apostolica, of September 1, 1425 (cf. *1247^o), the constitution Frequens generalium conciliorum, of session 39 of October 9, 1417 (MaC 27:1159B–E / COeD, 3rd ed., 438–43), also was explicitly confirmed, as is clear from the letter of Eugene IV Ad ea ex debito, of February 5, 1447 (1446 in the dating of the curia) to the Roman emperor, Frederick III (ed. by G. Hofmann, Concilium Florentinum I/III [Rome, 1946], 111f. / A. Mercati, Raccolta di concordati, 2nd ed., vol. 1 [Rome, 1954], 168f.); this constitution decided, among others, the common procedure for suppressing schisms: since only the authority of a general council can decide the question of legitimacy, when a schism of popes has developed, each of them must appear before the council.

1151–1195: Session 8, May 4, 1415: Decree Confirmed by Pope Martin V, February 22, 1418

The propositions of John Wycliffe condemned in session 8 of the Council of Constance and repeated in the bull Inter cunctas of February 22, 1418, had already been condemned in part at two London synods (MaC 26:695E–697B; 817A–819A): the London synod of 1382 (the “Earthquake Synod”) condemned twenty-four propositions, which correspond almost word for word to propositions 1–24 of Constance; in addition, in 1396 a London synod condemned another eighteen propositions drawn from the Trialogus (written in 1383). Then a Roman synod held toward the end of 1412 proscribed the works of John Wycliffe, expressly naming the Dialogus and Trialogus, following an examination of its own (BullTau 4:661f. / MaC 27:505–8; cf. 1217–20 / HaC 8:203f.; cf. 920–23). From the theologians at the Council of Constance there is also handed down a brief censure along with a detailed condemnation of forty-five articles of Wycliffe (ed. by H. von der Hardt, Magnum oecumenicum Constantiense Concilium 3 [Frankfurt am Main and Leipzig, 1699], 3:168–211, 212–335).

Ed.: MaC 27:632C–634B [= text of the session]; 1207E–1209B [= text of the bull] / HaC 8:299E–301C; 909E–911D / H. von der Hardt, Magnum oecumenicum Constantiense Concilium 4 [Frankfurt am Main and Leipzig, 1699], 153–55, 1523–25 / BullTau 4:669b–671a / BullLux 1:290b–291a / DuPIA 1/II, 49a–50b / COeD, 3rd ed., 411–13.

The condemned propositions only rarely quote Wycliffe’s exact words. In general, they give a harsher meaning than they have in Wycliffe’s text. The sources where they are found are cited below according to the Wyclif Society edition:

De civili dominio, written ca. 1376; cf. *1121^o;

Dialogus sive Speculum ecclesiae militantis (1379); ed. by A. W. Pollard (London, 1886);

De eucharistia tractatus maior (1379); ed. by J. Loserth (London, 1892);

Tractatus de potestate papae (1379); ed. by J. Loserth (London, 1907);

De ordine christiano (ca. 1380); in: Opera minora, ed. by J. Loserth (London, 1913);

Tractatus de blasphemia (1381); ed. by M. H. Dziewicki (London, 1893);

De mendaciis Fratrum (1382); in John Wyclif’s Polemical Works in Latin, ed. by R. Buddensieg, vol. 2 (London, 1883); Trialogus, cum Supplemento Trialogi (1383); ed. by G. Lechler (Oxford, 1869).

Errors of John Wycliffe

- | | | |
|---|---|-------------|
| 1. Substantia panis materialis et similiter substantia vini materialis remanent in sacramento altaris. ¹ | 1. The material substance of the bread and likewise the material substance of the wine remain in the sacrament of the altar. ¹ | 1151 |
| 2. Accidentia panis non manent sine subiecto in eodem sacramento. | 2. The accidents of bread do not remain without a subject in the same sacrament. | 1152 |
| 3. Christus non est in eodem sacramento identice et realiter in propria praesentia corporali. ¹ | 3. Christ is not in the same sacrament identically and really in his own bodily presence. ¹ | 1153 |

*1151¹ Many passages in De eucharistia have equal importance for prop. 2 (*1152) and indirectly for prop. 5 (*1155) (to the extent that the priest’s power of transubstantiation is denied), in particular chaps. 2–5, 9; Trialogus IV, 2–6, 27, 36.

*1153¹ Trialogus IV, 7 (Le. 266); cf. ibid., chap. 8 (Le. 269f.); cf. De eucharistia, chaps. 2, 4, 7, 9 (Los. 53; 100, 112; 190–92, 227f.; 291–93).

- 1154 4. Si episcopus vel sacerdos existat in peccato mortali, non ordinat, non consecrat, non conficit, non baptizat.¹ 4. If a bishop or priest is in mortal sin, he does not ordain, he does not consecrate, he does not confect, he does not baptize.¹
- 1155 5. Non est fundatum in Evangelio, quod Christus Missam ordinaverit. 5. It is not established in the Gospel that Christ ordained the Mass.
- 1156 6. Deus debet oboedire diabolo.¹ 6. God ought to obey the devil.¹
- 1157 7. Si homo fuerit debite contritus, omnis confessio exterior est sibi superflua et inutilis.¹ 7. If a man is duly contrite, all exterior confession is for him superfluous and useless.¹
- 1158 8. Si Papa sit praescitus et malus, et per consequens membrum diaboli, non habet potestatem super fideles sibi ab aliquo datam, nisi forte a Caesare.¹ 8. If the pope is foreknown (by God as doomed) and evil and, in consequence, a member of the devil, he does not have power over the faithful given to him by anyone, unless perhaps by the emperor.¹
- 1159 9. Post Urbanum VI non est aliquis recipiendus in Papam, sed vivendum est more Graecorum sub legibus propriis.¹ 9. After Urban VI no one should be recognized as pope, but we should live like the Greeks under our own laws.¹
- 1160 10. Contra Scripturam sacram est, quod viri ecclesiastici habeant possessiones.¹ 10. It is against Sacred Scripture for ecclesiastics to have possessions.¹
- 1161 11. Nullus praelatus debet aliquem excommunicare, nisi prius sciat eum excommunicatum a Deo: et qui sic excommunicat, fit ex hoc haereticus vel excommunicatus.¹ 11. No prelate should excommunicate anyone unless he already knows him to be excommunicated by God: and he who does so excommunicate thereby becomes a heretic or an excommunicate.¹
- 1162 12. Praelatus excommunicans clericum, qui appellavit ad regem vel ad concilium regni, eo ipso traditor est regis et regni.¹ 12. A prelate who excommunicates a cleric who has appealed to the king or to the council of the kingdom thereby becomes a traitor to the king and the kingdom.¹
- 1163 13. Illi, qui dimittunt praedicare sive audire verbum Dei propter excommunicationem hominum, sunt excommunicati, et in Dei iudicio traditores Christi habebuntur.¹ 13. Those who cease preaching or hearing the word of God because of excommunication by men are excommunicate and will be regarded as traitors to Christ in God's judgment.¹
- 1164 14. Licet alicui diacono vel presbytero praedicare verbum Dei absque auctoritate Sedis Apostolicae sive episcopi catholici.¹ 14. It is licit for any deacon or priest to preach the word of God without the authority of the Apostolic See or of a Catholic bishop.¹
- 1165 15. Nullus est dominus civilis, nullus est praelatus, nullus est episcopus, dum est in peccato mortali [cf. *1230].¹ 15. No one is a civil lord, no one is a prelate, no one is a bishop while he is in mortal sin [cf. *1230].¹

*1154¹ Like prop. 15 (cf. the passages indicated for *1165), this is derived from the theory according to which the right of dominion is subordinate to grace, so that a sinner does not have the right to possess goods but only the right to make use of them.

*1156¹ The proposition in this form is totally foreign to Wycliffe; it is an ironical conclusion: an unworthy pope is for Wycliffe the devil and Antichrist; if God, following Mt 16:19, should declare valid what the pope binds or loosens, he would be obeying the devil.

*1157¹ Alluded to in De potestate papae, chap. 11 (Los. 314).

*1158¹ Alluded to in Trialogus IV, 32 (Le. 358f.).

*1159¹ Supplementum Trialogi, chap. 8 (Le. 446).

*1160¹ Cf. Dialogus, chaps. 3–7 (Poll. 5–14); cf. Trialogus IV, 15, 17 (Le. 298f.; 303ff.).

*1161¹ Following from De civili dominio I, 38 (Poole 1:274–85).

*1162¹ Cf. De blasphemia, chap. 7 (Dzw. 109–10).

*1163¹ Cf. De civili dominio I, 38 (Poole 1:275).

*1164¹ Cf. De mendaciis Fratrum (Buddensieg 405_{6–7}).

*1165¹ See prop. 4 (*1154); cf. De civili dominio I, 3 (Poole 1:16–25); II, 10, 12, 16 (Los. 2:105_{32–34}; 139_{10f.}; 210–13, 217); III, 2 (Los. 3:25_{12–33}).

16. Domini temporales possunt ad arbitrium suum auferre bona temporalia ab Ecclesia, possessionatis habitualiter delinquentibus, id est ex habitu, non solum actu delinquentibus.¹ 1166
17. Populares possunt ad suum arbitrium dominos delinquentes corrigere.¹ 1167
18. Decimae sunt purae eleemosynae, et possunt parochiani propter peccata suorum praelatorum ad libitum suum eas auferre.¹ 1168
19. Speciales orationes, applicatae uni personae per praelatos vel religiosos, non plus prosunt eidem, quam generales, ceteris paribus.¹ 1169
20. Conferens eleemosynam Fratribus est excommunicatus eo facto.¹ 1170
21. Si aliquis ingreditur religionem privatam qualemcumque, tam possessionatorum quam mendicantium, redditur ineptior et inhabilior ad observationem mandatorum Dei.¹ 1171
22. Sancti, instituentes religiones privatas, sic instituendo peccaverunt.¹ 1172
23. Religiosi viventes in religionibus privatis non sunt de religione christiana.¹ 1173
24. Fratres tenentur per laborem manuum victum acquirere, et non per mendicitatem.¹—[Censura in utroque textu ibi addita:] Prima pars est scandalosa et praesumptuosa, pro quanto sic generaliter et indistincte loquitur; et secunda erronea, pro quanto asserit mendicitatem fratribus non licere. 1174
25. Omnes sunt simoniaci, qui se obligant orare pro aliis, eis in temporalibus subvenientibus.¹ 1175
26. Oratio praesciti nulli valet.¹ 1176
27. Omnia de necessitate absoluta eveniunt.¹ 1177
28. Confirmatio iuvenum, clericorum ordinatio, locorum consecratio reservantur Papae et episcopis propter cupiditatem lucri temporalis et honoris.¹ 1178
16. Temporal lords can at their discretion take away the temporal goods of the Church when those who possess them are habitually delinquent, that is, from habit, and not only delinquent in some act.¹ 1166
17. The people can at their discretion correct delinquent lords.¹ 1167
18. Tithes are mere alms, and parishoners can take them away at their will because of the sins of their prelates.¹ 1168
19. Special prayers applied to one person by prelates or religious are of no more advantage to them than general prayers, all things being equal.¹ 1169
20. He who gives alms to friars is thereby excommunicated.¹ 1170
21. If anyone enters a religious order of any sort, whether of those who have possessions or of mendicants, he becomes less suited and less able to obey the commandments of God.¹ 1171
22. Saints who founded religious orders sinned by founding them.¹ 1172
23. Religious living in religious orders do not belong to the Christian religion.¹ 1173
24. Friars are obliged to gain sustenance by the labor of their hands, and not by begging.¹ [Censure is added here in both texts:] The first part is scandalous and presumptuous, in that it speaks so universally and without making distinctions; and the second (is) erroneous, in that it asserts that begging is not licit for the friars. 1174
25. All those are simoniacs who bind themselves to pray for others who help them in temporal things.¹ 1175
26. The prayer of one foreknown (as lost) is of no use.¹ 1176
27. All things happen by an absolute necessity.¹ 1177
28. The confirmation of youths, the ordination of clerics, and the consecration of places are reserved to the pope and bishops through desire of temporal gain and honor.¹ 1178

*1166¹ Triologus IV, 37 (Le. 377); cf. De potestate papae, chap. 8 (Los. 181₃₀), and the passages indicated for *1126.

*1167¹ Triologus IV, 37 (Le. 377); cf. De civili dominio II, 2 (Los. 2:11).

*1168¹ Cf. De civili dominio I, 37 (Poole 1:265–74); III, 22 (Los. 4:454f.); Supplementum Trialogi, chap. 3 (Le. 420).

*1169¹ Cf. De civili dominio III, 22 (Los. 4:478_{15–29}); Dialogus, chaps. 22, 23 (Poll. 44; 46f.); Triologus IV, 38 (Le. 380f.).

*1170¹ See prop. 34 (*1184).

*1171¹ Cf. De civili dominio III, 2 (Los. 3:15_{23–25}; 16_{17–19}); see also prop. 35 (*1185).

*1172¹ Cf. Triologus IV, 35 (Le. 361f.); De blasphemia, chap. 15 (Dzw. 229_{19–21}).

*1173¹ Cf. Triologus IV, 33 (Le. 362f.).

*1174¹ Cf. Triologus IV, 28, 29 (Le. 341–44; 348).

*1175¹ Cf. Triologus IV, 30 (Le. 349ff.); Dialogus, chap. 22 (Poll. 43–45; 44₃₁).

*1176¹ Cf. Dialogus, chaps. 22, 23 (Poll. 45_{9–11}; 47_{6–9}); Triologus IV, 30 (Le. 350).

*1177¹ Triologus III, 8 (Le. 154); cf. chaps. 12, 13 (Le. 286; 289f.); cf. Dialogus, chap. 23 (Poll. 46_{6f.}); see also De blasphemia, chap. 11 (Dzw. 166n).

*1178¹ Dialogus, chap. 24 (Poll. 50_{19–23}); for confirmation, cf. also Triologus IV, 14 (Le. 294f.).

- 1179 29. Universitates, studia, collegia, graduationes, et magisteria in iisdem sunt vana gentilitate introducta; tantum prosunt Ecclesiae, sicut diabolus.¹ 29. Universities, studia, colleges, graduations, and teaching offices in them are vain things brought in by the pagans; they are of as much use to the Church as is the devil.¹
- 1180 30. Excommunicatio Papae vel cuiuscumque praelati non est timenda, quia est censura antichristi.¹ 30. Excommunication by the pope or by any prelate is not to be feared, because it is the censure of the Antichrist.¹
- 1181 31. Peccant fundantes claustra, et ingredientes sunt viri diabolici.¹ 31. Those who found monasteries sin, and those who enter them are diabolical men.¹
- 1182 32. Ditare clericum est contra regulam Christi.¹ 32. To enrich the clergy is against the rule of Christ.¹
- 1183 33. Silvester papa et Constantinus imperator errarunt Ecclesiam dotando.¹ 33. Pope Sylvester and Emperor Constantine erred in endowing the Church.¹
- 1184 34. Omnes de ordine mendicantium sunt haeretici, et dantes eis eleemosynas sunt excommunicati.¹ 34. All belonging to the order of mendicants are heretics, and those who give them alms are excommunicated.¹
- 1185 35. Ingredientes religionem aut aliquem ordinem eo ipso inhabiles sunt ad observanda divina praecepta [cf. *1171], et per consequens ad perveniendum ad regnum caelorum, nisi apostataverint ab iisdem.¹ 35. Those who enter religious orders, or any order, thereby become unable to observe the divine precepts [cf. *1171] and consequently (unable) to come to the kingdom of heaven, unless they apostatize from them.¹
- 1186 36. Papa cum omnibus clericis suis possessionem habentibus sunt haeretici, eo quod possessiones habent, et consentientes eis, omnes videlicet domini saeculares et ceteri laici.¹ 36. The pope with all his clerics who own possessions are heretics by the fact that they have possessions, and (so are) those who go along with them, namely, all secular lords and other laymen.¹
- 1187 37. Ecclesia Romana est synagoga satanae [cf. Apc 2:9], nec Papa est proximus et immediatus vicarius Christi et Apostolorum.¹ 37. The Church of Rome is the synagogue of Satan [cf. Rev 2:9], and the pope is not the proximate and immediate representative of Christ and the apostles.¹
- 1188 38. Decretales epistolae sunt apocryphae, et seducunt a fide Christi, et clerici sunt stulti, qui student eis.¹ 38. The decretal letters are apocryphal and seduce people from the faith of Christ, and the clerics who study them are fools.¹
- 1189 39. Imperator et domini saeculares sunt seducti a diabolo, ut Ecclesiam ditarent bonis temporalibus.¹ 39. The emperor and secular lords are seduced by the devil, that they should enrich the Church with temporal goods.¹
- 1190 40. Electio Papae a cardinalibus a diabolo est introducta.¹ 40. The election of the pope by the cardinals was introduced by the devil.¹

*1179¹ Dialogus, chap. 26 (Poll. 53₂₅₋₂₈).

*1180¹ Cf. Dialogus, chap. 27 (Poll. 56₁₅₋₂₃); De potestate papae, chaps. 10, 12 (Los. 239f.; 355).

*1181¹ Cf. Dialogus, chap. 28 (Poll. 59_{1-4,17-26}); Supplementum Trialogi, chap. 7 (Le. 439ff.); De civili dominio III, 22 (Los. 4:473f.).

*1182¹ Cf. Trialogus III, 17 (Le. 186f.); Supplementum Trialogi, chap. 2 (Le. 412ff.); Dialogus, chaps. 29, 36 (Poll. 62_{20f}; 84₁₂, 85₂₁).

*1183¹ Cf. Trialogus III, 20; IV, 17, 18 (Le. 196; 306; 310); Supplementum Trialogi, chaps. 1, 2 (Le. 407f.; 413); Dialogus, chaps. 4, 30 (Poll. 7₂₂₋₈₃; 63₁₇₋₂₁); De civili dominio III, 21, 22 (Los. 4:445; 473₁₄₋₁₇).

*1184¹ Cf. Trialogus IV, 34 (Le. 365); also, in a general sense, his polemical writings against “the sects”.

*1185¹ Cf. Trialogus IV, 39 (Le. 385f.); alluded to in Dialogus, chap. 26 (Poll. 55).

*1186¹ Cf. Trialogus IV, 18 (Le. 307–11); Dialogus, chaps. 3, 4, 7, 17, 35 (Poll. 6f.; 8₁₂₋₁₅; 14₅₋₈; 34₁₇₋₁₉; 82f.); De civili dominio III, 14, 23 (Los. 3:261; 4:498).

*1187¹ Cf. Trialogus III, 17 (Le. 186); IV, 22 (Le. 325); Dialogus, chaps. 4, 20 (Poll. 8_{15f}; 41₁₂); De potestate papae, chap. 8 (Los. 165_{3f}.); De ordine christiano, chap. 3 (Los. 133₂₅).

*1188¹ Cf. Trialogus IV, 6 (Le. 262f.); Dialogus, chaps. 7, 13 (Poll. 14₁₇₋₂₁; 26₆).

*1189¹ Trialogus IV, 18 (Le. 310); De potestate papae, chap. 12 (Los. 317) and throughout; see also props. 32 and 33 (*1182f.).

*1190¹ Cf. Supplementum Trialogi, chaps. 4, 9 (Le. 426; 450f.); Dialogus, chap. 11 (Poll. 22₁₅₋₂₃).

41. Non est de necessitate salutis credere, Romanam Ecclesiam esse supremam inter alias ecclesias.— [Censura:] Error est, si per Romanam Ecclesiam intelligatur universalis Ecclesia aut concilium generale, aut pro quanto negaret primatum Summi Pontificis super alias Ecclesias particulares.

42. Fatuum est credere indulgentiis Papae et episcoporum.¹

43. Iuramenta illicita sunt, quae fiunt ad corroborandum humanos contractus et commercia civilia.¹

44. Augustinus, Benedictus et Bernardus damnati sunt, nisi paenituerint de hoc, quod habuerunt possessiones et instituerunt et intraverunt religiones: et sic, a Papa usque ad ultimum religiosum, omnes sunt haeretici.¹

45. Omnes religiones indifferenter introductae sunt a diabolo.¹

41. It is not necessary to salvation to believe that the Roman Church is supreme among the other churches. — [Censure:] It is an error if by the Roman Church is meant the universal Church or a general council, or insofar as it denies the primacy of the supreme pontiff over other particular Churches.

42. It is fatuous to believe in the indulgences of the pope and the bishops.¹

43. Oaths that are made to corroborate human contracts and civil trading are illicit.¹

44. Augustine, Benedict, and Bernard are damned, unless they have repented of the fact that they had possessions and instituted and entered religious orders: and thus, from the pope down to the last religious, all are heretics.¹

45. All religious orders, without distinction, were introduced by the devil.¹

[Censure of all forty-five articles given summarily: see *1251: cf. also *1225]

1198–1200: Session 13, June 15, 1415: Decree Cum in nonnullis, Confirmed by Martin V, September 1, 1425

This decree is repeated in the constitutions In eminentis of September 1, 1425 (BarAE, at year 1425, no. 18 / Theiner 28:27) and Apostolicae sedis praecellens of January 25, 1426 (BullTau 4:726f.).

Ed.: MaC 27:727C–728A / HaC 8:381B–E / H. von der Hardt, Magnum oecumenicum Constantiense Concilium 4 [Frankfurt am Main and Leipzig, 1699], 333f. / COeD, 3rd ed., 418₂₇–419₂₂.

Decree on Communion Only under the Species of Bread

Cum in nonnullis mundi partibus quidam temerarie asserere praesumant, populum christianum debere sacrum Eucharistiae sacramentum sub utraque panis et vini specie suscipere, et non solum sub specie panis, sed etiam sub specie vini populum laicum passim communicent, etiam post coenam vel alias non ieiunium, et communicandum esse pertinaciter asserant contra laudabilem Ecclesiae consuetudinem rationabiliter approbatam, quam tamquam sacrilegam damnabiliter reprobare conantur:

hinc est, quod hoc praesens Concilium ... declarat, decernit et diffinit, quod licet Christus post coenam instituerit et suis discipulis administraverit sub utraque specie panis et vini hoc venerabile sacramentum, tamen hoc non obstante sacrorum canonum auctoritas laudabilis et approbata consuetudo Ecclesiae servavit et servat, quod huiusmodi sacramentum non debet confici post coenam, neque a fidelibus recipi non ieiunis, nisi in casu

Certain people, in some parts of the world, have rashly dared to assert that the Christian people ought to receive the holy sacrament of the Eucharist under the species of both bread and wine. They communicate the laity everywhere not only under the species of bread but also under that of wine, and they stubbornly assert that they should communicate even after a meal, or else without the need of a fast, contrary to the laudable custom of the Church, which has been sensibly approved, from the Church's head downward, but which they damnably try to repudiate as sacrilegious:

Therefore this present council (of Constance) ... declares, decrees, and defines that, although Christ instituted this venerable sacrament after a meal and ministered it to his apostles under the species of both bread and wine, nevertheless and notwithstanding this, the praiseworthy authority of the sacred canons and the approved custom of the Church have and do retain that this sacrament ought not to be celebrated after a meal or *1192 ¹ Cf. Trialogus IV, 32 (Le. 359); Dialogus, chap. 13 (Poll. 25_{13–16}).

*1193 ¹ Cf. Dialogus, chap. 13 (Poll. 26_{11–13}).

*1194 ¹ Cf. Dialogus, chaps. 15, 32 (Poll. 31_{8–9}; 76₄); Supplementum Trialogi, chap. 1 (Le. 409); De potestate papae, chap. 10 (Los. 240); De blasphemia, chap. 15 (Dzw. 229₂₉).

*1195 ¹ Cf. Dialogus, chap. 21 (Poll. 42₈); Trialogus IV, 32, 34 (Le. 360; 366f.); Supplementum Trialogi, chap. 7 (Le. 440).

infirmittatis aut alterius necessitatis a iure vel Ecclesia concessio vel admissio.

1199 Et sicut haec consuetudo ad evitandum aliqua pericula et scandala rationabiliter introducta est, sic potuit simili aut maiori ratione introduci aut rationabiliter observari, quod, licet in primitiva Ecclesia huiusmodi sacramentum reciperetur a fidelibus sub utraque specie, tamen postea a conficientibus sub utraque specie et a laicis tantummodo sub specie panis suscipiatur, cum firmissime credendum sit et nullatenus dubitandum, integrum Christi corpus et sanguinem tam sub specie panis quam sub specie vini veraciter contineri. Unde, cum huiusmodi consuetudo ab Ecclesia et sanctis Patribus rationabiliter introducta et diutissime observata sit, habenda est pro lege, quam non licet reprobare aut sine Ecclesiae auctoritate pro libito mutare.

1200 Quapropter dicere, quod hanc consuetudinem aut legem observare sit sacrilegum aut illicitum, censeri debet erroneum, et pertinaciter asserentes oppositum praemissorum tamquam haeretici arcendi sunt . . .

received by the faithful without fasting, except in cases of sickness or some other necessity as permitted by law or by the Church.

Moreover, just as this custom was sensibly introduced in order to avoid various dangers and scandals, so with similar or even greater reason was it possible to introduce and sensibly observe the custom that, although this sacrament was received by the faithful under both species in the early Church, nevertheless later it was received under both species only by those confecting it, and by the laity only under the species of bread. For it should be very firmly believed, and in no way doubted, that the whole Body and Blood of Christ are truly contained under both the species of bread and the species of wine. Therefore, since this custom was introduced for good reasons by the Church and holy Fathers and has been observed for a very long time, it should be held as a law that nobody may repudiate or alter at will without the Church's permission.

To say that the observance of this custom or law is sacrilegious or illicit must be regarded as erroneous. Those who stubbornly assert the opposite of the aforesaid are to be confined as heretics.

1201–1230: Session 15, July 6, 1415: Decree Confirmed by Pope Martin V, February 22, 1418

Jan Hus adopted a large number of the positions of John Wycliffe, and he defended him (cf. *1225). Many of his propositions, therefore, have a great similarity with the affirmations of Wycliffe: for proposition 7, cf. De ordine christiano, chap. 2 (see *1151^o; Loserth 132); cf. ibid. for propositions 28–29, chap. 3 toward the end (Loserth 135); proposition 2 comes literally from De fide catholica, chap. 5 (in John Wycliffe, Opera minora, ed. by J. Loserth [London, 1913], 114_{31–33}); propositions 3, 5, 6, and 21 have the same meaning as ibid., chap. 5 (Loserth 111–14); for proposition 11, cf. ibid., chap. 6 (Loserth 118f.). Hus, however, never upheld Wycliffe's error on the Eucharist that has sometimes been ascribed to him.

At the council, twenty-six propositions were submitted from Jan Hus' book De Ecclesia (written in 1413), seven from his book against Stefan Palecz, and six from his book against Stanislaus of Znojma (Znaim); their number was subsequently reduced so that in the acts of the council and in the bull Inter cunctas (February 22, 1418), articles 1–19 are from De Ecclesia, articles 20–25 and 30 from his text against Palecz, and articles 26–29 from his text against Stanislaus of Znojma (in part literally). The texts read in context often allow for a more positive interpretation. On the same day in which this session was held, Hus was burned at the stake.

The text of the session follows. The text of the bull does not differ greatly from this.

Ed.: MaC 27:754A–755D [= session]; 1209C–1211A [= bull] / HaC 8:410C–412C; 911D–913D / COeD, 3rd ed., 429–31 / H. von der Hardt, Magnum oecumenicum Constantiense Concilium 4 [Frankfurt am Main and Leipzig, 1699], 407–12; 1525–27. Cf. also the slightly different articles that were submitted for revocation to Jerome of Prague in sess. 19 of September 23, 1415 (cf. Hardt, Magnum oecumenicum 4:509–14).

Errors of Jan Hus

1201 1. Unica est sancta universalis Ecclesia, quae est praedestinatorum universitas. Et infra sequitur: Universalis sancta Ecclesia tantum est una, sicut tantum unus est numerus omnium praedestinatorum.¹

1202 2. Paulus numquam fuit membrum diaboli, licet fecit quosdam actus actibus ecclesiae malignantium consimiles.¹

1. There is only one holy universal Church, which is the total number of those predestined to salvation. It therefore follows that the universal holy Church is only one, inasmuch as there is only one number of all those who are predestined to salvation.¹

2. Paul was never a member of the devil, even though he did certain acts that are similar to the acts of the Church's enemies.¹

*1201¹ De ecclesia, chap. 1, C (S. Harrison Thomson, Magistri Johannis Hus Tractatus de Ecclesia [Cambridge, 1956], 3); cf. ibid., chap. 2, A and D (Thomson 8, 10), and elsewhere.

*1202¹ Ibid., chap. 3, H (Thomson 18); cf. chap. 4, H (Th. 27f.).

3. Praesciti non sunt partes Ecclesiae, cum nulla pars eius finaliter excidat ab ea, eo quod praedestinationis caritas, quae ipsam ligat, non excidit [cf. 1 Cor 13:8].¹ 1203
3. Those foreknown as damned are not parts of the Church, for no part of the Church can finally fall away from her, since the predestinating love that binds the Church together does not fail [cf. 1 Cor 13:8].¹
4. Duae naturae, divinitas et humanitas, sunt unus Christus.¹ 1204
4. The two natures, the divinity and the humanity, are one Christ.¹
5. Praescitus, etsi aliquando est in gratia secundum praesentem iustitiam, tamen numquam est pars sanctae Ecclesiae; et praedestinatus semper manet membrum Ecclesiae, licet aliquando excidat a gratia adventitia, sed non a gratia praedestinationis.¹ 1205
5. One foreknown (to damnation) is never part of the holy Church, even if he is sometimes in the (state of) grace according to present justice; and one predestined (to salvation) always remains a member of the Church, even if sometimes he may fall away from adventitious grace, but not from the grace of predestination.¹
6. Sumendo Ecclesiam pro convocazione praedestinatorum, sive fuerint in gratia, sive non secundum praesentem iustitiam, isto modo Ecclesia est articulus fidei.¹ 1206
6. The Church is an article of faith in the following sense: to regard her as the convocation of those predestined to salvation, whether or not she be in a state of grace according to present justice.¹
7. Petrus non est nec fuit caput Ecclesiae sanctae catholicae.¹ 1207
7. Peter neither was nor is the head of the holy Catholic Church.¹
8. Sacerdotes quomodolibet criminoso viventes, sacerdotii polluunt potestatem, et sicut filii infideles sentiunt infideliter de septem sacramentis Ecclesiae, de clavibus, officiis, censuris, moribus, caeremoniis, et sacris rebus Ecclesiae, veneratione reliquiarum, indulgentiis et ordinibus.¹ 1208
8. Priests who live in vice in any way pollute the power of the priesthood and like unfaithful sons are untrustworthy in their thinking about the Church's seven sacraments, about the keys, offices, censures, customs, ceremonies, and sacred things of the Church, about the veneration of relics, and about indulgences and orders.¹
9. Papalis dignitas a Caesare inolevit, et Papae praefectio et institutio a Caesaris potentia emanavit.¹ 1209
9. Papal dignity originated with the emperor, and the primacy and institution of the pope emanated from imperial power.¹
10. Nullus sine revelatione assereret rationabiliter de se vel alio, quod esset caput ecclesiae particularis, nec Romanus Pontifex est caput Romanae Ecclesiae.¹ 1210
10. Nobody would reasonably assert of himself or of another, without revelation, that he was the head of a particular holy church; nor is the Roman pontiff the head of the Roman Church.¹
11. Non oportet credere, quod iste, quicumque est Romanus Pontifex, sit caput cuiuscumque particularis ecclesiae sanctae, nisi Deus eum praedestinaverit.¹ 1211
11. It is not necessary to believe that any particular Roman pontiff is the head of any particular holy church, unless God has predestined him to salvation.¹

*1203¹ Ibid., chap. 3, F (Th. 15); cf. also chap. 4, D (Th. 23). Hus distinguishes between the predestined in the Church and the predestinated outside the Church; he concedes the first, but he denies the second.

*1204¹ Ibid., chap. 4, B (Th. 21): a truncated article in which the point of objection is not clearly seen; after the words "... sunt unus Christus" (... are one Christ), one must add: "qui est caput unicum sponsae suae universalis Ecclesiae, quae est praedestinatorum universitas" (who is the one head of his spouse, the universal Church, which is the assembly of the predestined). Hus replaces the customary notion of the "universal Church" (Ecclesia universalis) of which the pope is the head with another notion that includes as well the Church triumphant and the Church "sleeping" (= in the state of purgative suffering); hence, only Christ is the head of the universal Church, the extrinsic head as God and the intrinsic head as man; the pope, therefore, is practically excluded.

*1205¹ Ibid., chap. 4, H (Th. 28) [for the first part of the prop.]; cf., for the rest, chap. 4, D, H; chap. 5, D (Th. 23, 27, 34).

*1206¹ Ibid., chap. 7, C (Th. 45); cf. chap. 5, F, G (Th. 35–37).

*1207¹ Ibid., chap. 9, G (Th. 65); cf. chaps. 7, G; 9, B (Th. 51f.; 58).

*1208¹ Ibid., chap. 11, D (Th. 93).

*1209¹ Ibid., chap. 15, E (Th. 122); cf. chaps. 13, C; 15, D (Th. 104, 122).

*1210¹ Ibid., chap. 13, G (Th. 107).

*1211¹ Ibid., chap. 13, G (Th. 107); cf. chap. 13, H (Th. 108).

- 1212 12. Nemo gerit vicem Christi vel Petri, nisi sequatur eum in moribus: cum nulla alia sequela sit pertinentior, nec aliter recipiat a Deo procuratoriam potestatem; quia ad illud officium vicariatus requiritur et morum conformitas et instituentis auctoritas.¹
- 1213 13. Papa non est verus et manifestus successor Apostolorum principis Petri, si vivit moribus contrariis Petro: et si quaerit avaritiam, tunc est vicarius Iudae Iscarioth. Et pari evidentia Cardinales non sunt veri et manifesti successores collegii aliorum Apostolorum Christi, nisi vixerint more Apostolorum, servantes mandata et consilia Domini nostri Iesu Christi.¹
- 1214 14. Doctores ponentes, quod aliquis per censuram ecclesiasticam emendandus, si corrigi noluerit, saeculari iudicio est tradendus, pro certo sequuntur in hoc pontifices, scribas et pharisaeos, qui Christum non volentem eis oboedire in omnibus, dicentes: “Nobis non licet interficere quemquam” [Jn 18:31], ipsum saeculari iudicio tradiderunt; et tales sunt homicidae graviore quam Pilatus.¹
- 1215 15. Oboedientia ecclesiastica est oboedientia secundum adinventionem sacerdotum Ecclesiae praeter expressam auctoritatem Scripturae.¹
- 1216 16. Divisio immediata humanorum operum est: quod sunt vel virtuosa vel vitiosa, quia si homo est vitiosus et agit quidquam, tunc agit vitiose; et si est virtuosus et agit quidquam, tunc agit virtuose; quia sicut vitium, quod crimen dicitur seu mortale peccatum, inficit universaliter actus hominis vitiosi, sic virtus vivificat omnes actus hominis virtuosi.¹
- 1217 17. Sacerdotes Christi viventes secundum legem eius, et habentes Scripturae notitiam et affectum ad aedificandum populum, debent praedicare non obstante praetensa excommunicatione. Et infra: Quod si Papa vel aliquis praelatus mandat sacerdoti sic disposito non praedicare, non debet subditus oboedire.¹
- 1218 18. Quilibet praedicantis officium de mandato accipit, qui ad sacerdotium accedit; et illud mandatum debet exsequi, praetensa excommunicatione non obstante.¹
12. Nobody holds the place of Christ or of Peter unless he follows his way of life, since there is no other discipleship that is more appropriate nor is there another way to receive delegated power from God, since there is required for this office of vicar a similar way of life as well as the authority of the one instituting.¹
13. The pope is not the manifest and true successor of the prince of the apostles, Peter, if he lives in a way contrary to Peter’s. If he seeks avarice, he is the vicar of Judas Iscariot. Likewise, cardinals are not the manifest and true successors of the college of Christ’s other apostles unless they live after the manner of the apostles, keeping the commandments and counsels of our Lord Jesus Christ.¹
14. Doctors who state that anybody subjected to ecclesiastical censure, if he refuses to be corrected, should be handed over to the judgment of the secular authority are undoubtedly following in this the chief priests, the scribes, and the Pharisees who handed over to the secular authority Christ himself, since he was unwilling to obey them in all things, saying, “It is not lawful for us to put any man to death” [Jn 18:31]; these gave him to the civil judge, so that such men are even greater murderers than Pilate.¹
15. Ecclesiastical obedience is an obedience invented by the priests of the Church, beyond the express authority of Scripture.¹
16. The immediate division of human actions is between those that are virtuous and those that are wicked. Therefore, if a man is wicked and does something, he acts wickedly; if he is virtuous and does something, he acts virtuously. For just as wickedness, which is called crime or mortal sin, infects all the acts of a wicked man, so virtue gives life to all the acts of a virtuous man.¹
17. A priest of Christ who lives according to his law, knows Scripture, and has a desire to edify the people ought to preach, notwithstanding an alleged excommunication. And farther on: if the pope or any superior orders a priest so disposed not to preach, the subordinate ought not to obey.¹
18. Whoever enters the priesthood receives a binding duty to preach; and this mandate ought to be carried out, notwithstanding an alleged excommunication.¹

*1212 ¹ Ibid., chap. 14, C (Th. 112).*1213 ¹ Ibid., chap. 14, G (Th. 115).*1214 ¹ Ibid., chap. 16, H (Th. 139).*1215 ¹ Ibid., chap. 17, H (Th. 156); cf. chap. 16, B–G (Th. 132–38).*1216 ¹ Ibid., chap. 19, D (Th. 176).*1217 ¹ Ibid., chap. 20, H (Th. 190f.); cf. chap. 18, K, L (Th. 164–66).*1218 ¹ Ibid., chap. 20, H (Th. 191).

19. Per censuras ecclesiasticas excommunicationis, suspensionis et interdicti ad sui exaltationem clerus populum laicalem sibi suppeditat, avaritiam multiplicat, malitiam protegit, et viam praeparat antichristo. Signum autem evidens est, quod ab antichristo tales procedunt censurae, quas vocant in suis processibus fulminationes, quibus clerus principalissime procedit contra illos, qui denudant nequitiam antichristi, quam clerus pro se maxime usurpavit.¹

20. Si Papa est malus et praesertim, si est praescitus, tunc ut Iudas Apostolus est diabolus, fur, et filius perditionis, et non est caput sanctae militantis Ecclesiae, cum nec sit membrum eius.¹

21. Gratia praedestinationis est vinculum, quo corpus Ecclesiae et quodlibet eius membrum iungitur Christo capiti insolubiliter.¹

22. Papa vel praelatus malus et praescitus est aequivoce pastor, et vere fur et latro.¹

23. Papa non debet dici ‘Sanctissimus’, etiam secundum officium; quia alias rex deberet etiam dici sanctissimus secundum officium, et tortores et praecones dicerentur sancti, immo etiam diabolus deberet dici sanctus, cum sit officarius Dei.¹

24. Si Papa vivat Christo contrarie, etiamsi ascenderet per ritam et legitimam electionem secundum constitutionem humanam vulgatam, tamen aliunde ascenderet quam per Christum, dato etiam quod intraret per electionem a Deo principaliter factam; nam Iudas Iscariotes rite et legitime est electus a Deo Christo Iesu ad episcopatum, et tamen ascendit aliunde in ovile ovium.¹

25. Condemnatio 45 articulorum Iohannis Wicleff, per doctores facta, est irrationabilis et iniqua et male facta: ficta est causa per eos allegata, videlicet ex eo quod ‘nullus eorum sit catholicus, sed quilibet eorum aut est haereticus, aut erroneus, aut scandalosus’.¹

19. By the Church’s censures of excommunication, suspension, and interdict, the clergy subdue the laity, for the sake of their own exaltation, multiply avarice, protect wickedness, and prepare the way for the Antichrist. The clear sign of this is the fact that these censures come from the Antichrist. In the legal proceedings of the clergy they are called fulminations, which are the principal means whereby the clergy proceed against those who uncover the Antichrist’s wickedness, which the clergy has for the most part usurped for itself.¹

20. If the pope is wicked, and especially if he is foreknown to damnation, then he is a devil like Judas the apostle, a thief, and a son of perdition and is not the head of the holy Church militant since he is not even a member of her.¹

21. The grace of predestination is the bond whereby the body of the Church and each of her members is indissolubly joined with the head.¹

22. The pope or a prelate who is wicked and foreknown to damnation is a pastor only in an equivocal sense and truly is a thief and a robber.¹

23. The pope ought not to be called “most holy” even by reason of his office, for otherwise even a king ought to be called “most holy” by reason of his office and executioners and heralds ought to be called “holy”; indeed, even the devil would be called “holy” since he is an official of God.¹

24. If a pope lives contrary to Christ, even if he has risen through a right and legitimate election according to the established human constitution, he would have risen by a way other than through Christ, even granted that he entered upon office by an election that had been made principally by God. For, Judas Iscariot was rightly and legitimately elected to be an apostle by Jesus Christ who is God, yet he climbed into the sheepfold by another way.¹

25. The condemnation of the forty-five articles of John Wycliffe, decreed by the doctors, is irrational and unjust and badly done, and the reason alleged by them is feigned, namely, “that none of them is Catholic, but each one is either heretical or erroneous or scandalous”.¹

*1219¹ Ibid., chap. 23, G (Th. 225); cf. chaps. 22–23 (Th. 209–37).

*1220¹ Responsio ad scripta magistri Stephani Palecz (in Iohannis Hus et Hieronymi Pragensis Confessorum Christi Historia et Monumenta [Nürnberg, 1558; abbreviated in the following as: Nbg.] 1, fols. 225vff).

*1221¹ Ibid. (Nbg. 1, fol. 257r).

*1222¹ Ibid. (Nbg. 1, fol. 258r).

*1223¹ Ibid. (Nbg. 1, fol. 258v).

*1224¹ Ibid. (Nbg. 1, fol. 259r); cf. De ecclesia, chap. 5, F, G; 14, G (Th. 35–37, 115).

*1225¹ Responsio ad scripta Stephani Palecz (Nbg. 1, fol. 260r); cf. De ecclesia, chap. 23, [letter] O (Th. 236); Defensio quorundam articulorum Iohannis Wicleff (written in A.D. 1412), Nbg. 1, fols. 111r–117r; Responsio ad scripta Stanislai de Znojma (Nbg. 1, fol. 265v); here Hus explicitly defends only propositions 4, 13, 15, 16, 18, 32, and 33 of Wycliffe that were enumerated at Constance.

- 1226 26. Non eo ipso, quod electores, vel maior pars eorum consenserint viva voce secundum ritum hominum in personam aliquam, eo ipso illa persona est legitime electa, vel eo ipso est verus et manifestus successor vel vicarius Petri Apostoli, vel alterius Apostoli in officio ecclesiastico: unde, sive electores bene vel male elegerint, operibus electi debemus credere: nam eo ipso, quo quis copiosius operatur meritorie ad profectum Ecclesiae, habet a Deo ad hoc copiosius facultatem.¹
- 1227 27. Non est scintilla apparentiae, quod oporteat esse unum caput in spiritualibus regens Ecclesiam, quod semper cum Ecclesia ipsa militante conversetur et conservetur.¹
- 1228 28. Christus sine talibus monstruosis capitibus per suos veraces discipulos sparsos per orbem terrarum melius suam Ecclesiam regulet.¹
- 1229 29. Apostoli et fideles sacerdotes Domini strenue in necessariis ad salutem regularunt Ecclesiam, antequam Papae officium foret introductum: sic facerent, deficiente per summe possibile Papa, usque ad diem iudicii.¹
- 1230 30. Nullus est dominus civilis, nullus est praelatus, nullus est episcopus, dum est in peccato mortali [*cf. 1165].¹
26. The viva voce agreement upon some person, made according to human custom by the electors or by the greater part of them, does not mean by itself that the person has been legitimately elected or that by this very fact he is the true and manifest successor or vicar of the apostle Peter or of another apostle in an ecclesiastical office. For, it is to the works of the one elected that we should look, irrespective of whether the manner of the election was good or bad. For, the more plentifully a person acts meritoriously toward building up the Church, the more copiously does he thereby have power from God for this.¹
27. There is not the smallest sign of evidence that there should be one head ruling the Church in spiritual matters, (a head) who always abides and is preserved with the Church militant herself.¹
28. Christ would govern his Church better by his true disciples scattered throughout the world without these monstrous heads.¹
29. The apostles and faithful priests of the Lord strenuously governed the Church in matters necessary for salvation before the office of pope was introduced, and they would continue to do this until the Day of Judgment if—which is very possible—there were no pope.¹
30. Nobody is a civil lord, a prelate, or a bishop while he is in mortal sin [*cf. 1165].¹

1235: Session 15, July 6, 1415: Decree Quilibet tyrannus

On November 23, 1407, by the order of Duke John of Burgundy, Duke Louis of Orleans was executed. Jean Petit, professor at the University of Paris, on March 8, 1408, had solemnly defended this act as legitimate tyrannicide. When, after the death of Petit, the Orleans party came to power in Paris in 1413, a synod in Paris condemned nine theses of Petit's Iustificatio ducis Burgundiae. Since the followers of Petit had appealed to Rome, the matter was brought before the Council of Constance (MaC 28:757–60; text of the theses). The council abolished the decision of the synod of Paris and presented a milder resolution. An express confirmation on the part of Martin V is lacking. However, a condemnation of tyrannicide is found in the constitution Cura dominici grecis of Paul V of January 24, 1615 (BullTau 12:296).

Ed.: MaC 27:765E–766A / COeD, 3rd ed., 432_{8–19} / H. von der Hardt, Magnum oecumenicum Constantiense Concilium 4 [Frankfurt am Main and Leipzig, 1699], 439f.

Erroneous Proposition on Tyrannicide

- 1235 “Quilibet tyrannus potest et debet licite et meritorie occidi per quemcumque vasallum suum vel subditum, etiam per clanculares insidias, et subtiles blanditias et adulationes, non obstante quocumque praestito iuramento seu confoederatione facta cum eo, non exspectata sententia vel mandato iudicis cuiuscumque” . . . erroneam esse in fide et in moribus, ipsamque tamquam
- ⟨The proposition:⟩ “Any tyrant can and ought to be killed, licitly and meritoriously, by any of his vassals or subjects, even by means of plots and blandishments or flattery, notwithstanding any oath taken or treaty made with the tyrant and without waiting for a sentence or a command from any judge” . . . is erroneous in the faith and with regard to morals, and ⟨the council⟩ rejects and *1226¹ Responsio ad scripta Stanislai de Znojma, chap. 2 (Nbg. 1, fol. 271rv).

*1227¹ Ibid., chap. 5 (Nbg. 1, fol. 277r).

*1228¹ Ibid., chap. 5 (Nbg. 1, fol. 277v); cf. De ecclesia, chap. 15, A (Thomson, 119).

*1229¹ Responsio ad scripta Stanislai de Znojma, chap. 8 (Nbg. 1, fol. 283v); cf. De ecclesia, chap. 15, A, C, D, H (Th. 119, 121, 127).

*1230¹ De decimis (Nbg. 1, fol. 128r), in defense of prop. 15 of Wycliffe at Constance (*1165); cf. the Responsio ad scripta Stephani Palecz (Nbg. 1, fol. 256r).

haereticam, scandalosam, et ad fraudes, deceptiones, mendacia, proditones, periuria viam dantem reprobatur et condemnat. Declarat insuper, decernit et diffinit, quod pertinaciter doctrinam hanc perniciosissimam asserentes sunt haeretici.

condemns the doctrine as heretical, scandalous, and seditious and as leading the way through perjury to frauds, deceptions, lies, and betrayals. It declares, decrees, and defines, moreover, that those who stubbornly assert this very pernicious doctrine are heretics and are to be punished as such according to canonical and legitimate sanctions.

Continuation of the Council of CONSTANCE under MARTIN V

MARTIN V: November 11, 1417–February 20, 1431

1247–1279: Bull Inter cunctas, February 22, 1418

The bull, directed to all the hierarchy and inquisitors, contains: (1) the forty-five articles of John Wycliffe; (2) the thirty articles of Jan Hus; (3) a series of questions posed to the followers of Wycliffe and Hus, which are joined to the preceding articles with the following words: “Any person, however, who is suspected of (upholding) the aforementioned articles or caught doing so is to be interrogated in accordance with the manner written below” (Super praemissis autem articulis quilibet de eis suspectus seu in eorum assertione deprehensus iuxta modum interrogetur infra scriptum). The same decrees were repeated, along with others (e.g., the decree on communion under one species), in Martin V’s bull In eminentis apostolicae of September 1, 1425 (cf. MaC 27:1215–20).

Ed.: MaC 27:1211B–1213B / HaC 8:914A–916C / H. von der Hardt, Magnum oecumenicum Constantiense Concilium 4 [Frankfurt am Main and Leipzig, 1699], 1527–29 / BullTau 4:673a–675a / BullCocq 3/II, 424a–425b.

Questions Posed to the Followers of Wycliffe and Hus

5. Item, utrum credat, teneat et asserat, quod quodlibet Concilium generale, et etiam Constantiense, universalem Ecclesiam repraesentet.¹

5. Likewise, whether he believes, holds, and declares that every general council, including that of Constance, represents the universal Church.¹ 1247

6. Item, utrum credat, quod illud, quod sacrum Concilium Constantiense, universalem Ecclesiam repraesentans, approbavit et approbat in favorem fidei, et ad salutem animarum, quod hoc est ab universis Christi fidelibus approbandum et tenendum: et quod condemnavit et condemnat esse fidei vel bonis moribus contrarium, hoc ab iisdem esse tenendum pro condemnato, credendum et asserendum.

6. Likewise, whether he believes that what the sacred Council of Constance, which represents the Catholic Church, has approved and does approve in favor of faith and for the salvation of souls must be approved and maintained by all the faithful of Christ; and that what (the council) has condemned and does condemn to be contrary to faith and good morals, this must be believed and proclaimed by the same as considered worthy of condemnation. 1248

7. Item, utrum credat, quod condemnationes Iohannis Wicleff, Iohannis Hus et Hieronymi de Praga, factae de personis eorum, libris et documentis per sacrum generale Constantiense Concilium, fuerint rite et iuste factae, et a quolibet catholico pro talibus tenendae et firmiter asserendae.

7. Likewise, whether he believes that the condemnations of John Wycliffe, Jan Hus, and Jerome of Prague made by the sacred general Council of Constance concerning their persons, books, and documents have been duly and justly made and that they must be considered and firmly declared as such by every Catholic whatsoever. 1249

8. Item, utrum credat, teneat, asserat, Iohannem Wicleff de Anglia, Iohannem Hus de Bohemia et Hieronymum de Praga fuisse haereticos et pro haereticis nominandos ac deputandos, et libros et doctrinas eorum fuisse et esse perversos, propter quos et quas, et eorum pertinacias, per sacrum Concilium Constantiense pro haereticis sunt condemnati.

8. Likewise, whether he believes, holds, and declares that John Wycliffe of England, Jan Hus of Bohemia, and Jerome of Prague have been heretics and are to be considered and classed as heretics and that their books and doctrines have been and are perverse; and because of these books and these doctrines and their obstinacy, they have been condemned as heretics by the sacred Council of Constance. 1250

*1247¹ Cf. the preliminary remarks concerning the validity of the decrees of this council: *1151^{oo}.

- 1251 11. Item, specialiter litteratus interrogetur, utrum credat, sententiam sacri Constantiensis Concilii super quadraginta quinque Iohannis Wicleff, et Iohannis Hus triginta articulis superius descriptis latam, fore veram et catholicam: scilicet, quod supradicti quadraginta quinque articuli Ioannis Wicleff et Iohannis Hus triginta non sunt catholici, sed quidam ex eis sunt notorie haeretici, quidam erronei, alii temerarii et seditiosi, alii piarum aurium offensivi.
- 1252 12. Item, utrum credat et asserat, quod in nullo casu sit licitum iurare.
- 1253 13. Item, utrum credat, quod ad mandatum iudicis iuramentum de veritate dicenda, vel quodlibet aliud ad causam opportunum, etiam pro purificatione infamiae faciendum, sit licitum.
- 1254 14. Item, utrum credat, quod periurium scienter commissum, ex quacumque causa vel occasione, pro conservatione vitae corporalis propriae vel alterius, etiam in favorem fidei, sit mortale peccatum.
- 1255 15. Item, utrum credat, quod deliberato animo contemnens ritum Ecclesiae, caeremonias exorcismi et catechismi, aquae baptismatis consecratae, peccet mortaliter.
- 1256 16. Item, utrum credat, quod post consecrationem sacerdotis in sacramento altaris sub velamento panis et vini non sit panis materialis et vinum materiale, sed idem per omnia Christus, qui fuit in cruce passus et sedet ad dexteram Patris.
- 1257 17. Item, utrum credat et asserat, quod facta consecratione per sacerdotem, sub sola specie panis tantum, et praeter speciem vini, sit vera caro Christi et sanguis et anima et deitas et totus Christus, ac idem corpus absolute et sub unaqualibet illarum specierum singulariter.
- 1258 18. Item, utrum credat, quod consuetudo communicandi personas laicales sub specie panis tantum, ab Ecclesia universali observata, et per sacrum Concilium Constantiae approbata, sit servanda sic, quod non liceat eam reprobare aut sine Ecclesiae auctoritate pro libito immutare. Et quod dicentes pertinaciter oppositum praemissorum, tamquam haeretici vel sapientes haeresim, sint arcendi et puniendi.
- 1259 19. Item, utrum credat, quod christianus contemnens susceptionem sacramentorum confirmationis, vel extremae unctionis, aut solemnizationis matrimonii, peccet mortaliter.
11. Likewise, let the especially learned person be asked whether he believes that the judgment of the sacred Council of Constance passed concerning the forty-five articles of John Wycliffe and the thirty of Jan Hus described above is true and Catholic: in other words, that the above-mentioned forty-five articles of John Wycliffe and the thirty of Jan Hus are not Catholic, but some of them are manifestly heretical, some erroneous, others audacious and seditious, others offensive to the ears of the pious.
12. Likewise, whether he believes and maintains that in no case one may take an oath.
13. Likewise, whether he believes it is licit to take an oath to speak the truth by the order of a judge or to take one for any other suitable cause, even to clear oneself from slander.
14. Likewise, whether he believes that perjury knowingly committed, for whatever cause or occasion, for the conservation of one's own bodily life or that of another, even in favor of faith, is a mortal sin.
15. Likewise, whether he believes that anyone deliberately despising the rite of the Church, the ceremonies of exorcism, catechism, and of the consecration of baptismal water sins mortally.
16. Likewise, whether he believes that in the Sacrament of the Altar, after the consecration by the priest, there is under the veil of bread and wine no material bread and wine, but the very same Christ who suffered on the Cross and sits at the right hand of the Father.
17. Likewise, whether he believes and affirms that after the priest has consecrated, the true flesh and blood of Christ, his soul and divinity, the whole Christ, are present under the species of bread alone, even apart from the species of wine, and that the same body is present absolutely and under each of these species taken separately.
18. Likewise, whether he believes that the custom of giving communion to lay persons under the species of bread only, which is observed by the universal Church and approved by the sacred Council of Constance, must be preserved, so that it be not allowed to condemn this or to change it at pleasure without the authority of the Church, and that those who obstinately pronounce the opposite of the aforesaid should be arrested and punished as heretics or as suspected of heresy.
19. Likewise, whether he believes that a Christian who rejects the reception of the sacraments of confirmation or extreme unction or the solemnization of marriage sins mortally.

20. Item, utrum credat, quod christianus ultra contritionem cordis, habita copia sacerdotis idonei, soli sacerdoti de necessitate salutis confiteri teneatur, et non laico seu laicis quantumcumque bonis et devotis. 1260
20. Whether he believes that, apart from heartfelt contrition, if a qualified priest is available, a Christian is bound by a necessity of salvation to confess only to him and not to one or (more) laymen, however good and devout they may be.
21. Item, utrum credat, quod sacerdos in casibus sibi permissis possit peccatorem confessum et contritum a peccatis absolvere, et sibi paenitentiam iniungere. 1261
21. Whether he believes that a priest, in the cases permitted to him, can absolve from sin a sinner who has confessed and is contrite and impose a penance on him.
22. Item, utrum credat, quod malus sacerdos cum debita materia et forma et cum intentione faciendi, quod facit Ecclesia, vere conficiat, vere absolvat, vere baptizet, vere conferat alia sacramenta. 1262
22. Likewise, whether he believes that a bad priest, making use of the proper matter and form, who has the intention of doing what the Church does, truly confects (the Eucharist), truly absolves, truly baptizes, (and) truly confers the other sacraments.
23. Item, utrum credat, quod beatus Petrus fuerit vicarius Christi, habens potestatem ligandi et solvendi super terram. 1263
23. Likewise, whether he believes that blessed Peter was the vicar of Christ, possessing the power of binding and loosing on earth.
24. Item, utrum credat, quod Papa canonice electus, qui pro tempore fuerit, eius nomine proprio expresso, sit successor beati Petri, habens supremam auctoritatem in Ecclesia Dei. 1264
24. Likewise, whether he believes that the canonically elected pope at the time in question, after the proclamation of his own name, is the successor of the blessed Peter, having supreme authority in the Church of God.
25. Item, utrum credat, auctoritatem iurisdictionis Papae, archiepiscopi et episcopi in solvendo et ligando esse maiorem auctoritate simplicis sacerdotis, etiam si curam animarum habeat. 1265
25. Whether he believes that the jurisdictional authority of the pope, of an archbishop, and bishop in loosing and binding is greater than the authority of a simple priest, even if he has the care of souls.
26. Item, utrum credat, quod Papa omnibus Christianis vere contritis et confessis ex causa pia et iusta possit concedere indulgentias in remissionem peccatorum, maxime pia loca visitantibus et ipsis manus suas porrigentibus adiutrices. 1266
26. Whether he believes that for a pious and just cause the pope can grant indulgences for the remission of sins to all Christians who are truly contrite and have confessed, especially to the pilgrims to the holy places and those who offer them a helping hand.
27. Et utrum credat, quod ex tali concessione visitantes ecclesias ipsas et manus adiutrices eis porrigentes huiusmodi indulgentias consequi possint. 1267
27. Whether he believes that through this grant those who visit the churches and those who offer them a helping hand can obtain such indulgences.
28. Item, utrum credat, quod singuli episcopi suis subditis secundum limitationem sacrorum canonum huiusmodi indulgentias concedere possint. 1268
28. Likewise, whether he believes that individual bishops can grant indulgences of this kind to their subjects according to the limitation of the sacred canons.
29. Item, utrum credat et asserat, licitum esse Sanctorum reliquias et imagines a Christi fidelibus venerari. 1269
29. Likewise, whether he believes or maintains that it is lawful for the relics and images of the saints to be venerated by the faithful of Christ.
30. Item, utrum credat, religiones ab Ecclesia approbatas, a sanctis Patribus rite et rationabiliter introductas. 1270
30. Likewise, whether he believes that religious orders approved by the Church were legitimately and reasonably introduced by the holy Fathers.
31. Item, utrum credat, quod Papa vel alius praelatus, propriis nominibus Papae pro tempore expressis, vel ipsorum vicarii, possint suum subditum ecclesiasticum sive saecularem propter inoboedientiam sive contumaciam excommunicare, ita quod talis pro excommunicato sit habendus. 1271
31. Likewise, whether he believes that the pope or another prelate (after expressing the proper authorizations of the current pope) or their representatives can excommunicate their ecclesiastical or secular subject because of disobedience or obstinacy, so that such a one should be considered excommunicated.

- 1272 32. Item, utrum credat, quod inoboedientia sive contumacia excommunicatorum crescente, praelati vel eorum vicarii in spiritualibus habeant potestatem aggravandi et reaggravandi, interdictum ponendi et brachium saeculare invocandi; et quod illis censuris per inferiores sit oboediendum.
- 1273 33. Item, utrum credat, quod Papa vel alii praelati et eorum vicarii in spiritualibus habeant potestatem sacerdotes et laicos inoboedientes et contumaces excommunicandi, ab officio, beneficio, ingressu ecclesiae et administratione ecclesiasticorum sacramentorum suspendendi.
- 1274 34. Item, utrum credat, quod liceat personis ecclesiasticis absque peccato huius mundi habere possessiones et bona temporalia.
- 1275 35. Item, utrum credat, quod laicis ipsa ab eis auferre potestate propria non liceat; immo quod sic auferentes, tollentes et invadentes bona ipsa ecclesiastica sint tamquam sacrilegi puniendi, etiam si male viverent personae ecclesiasticae bona huiusmodi possidentes.
- 1276 36. Item, utrum credat, quod huiusmodi ablatio et invasio, cuicumque sacerdoti, etiam male viventi, temere vel violenter facta vel illata, inducat sacrilegium.
- 1277 37. Item, utrum credat, quod liceat laicis utriusque sexus, viris scilicet et mulieribus, libere praedicare verbum Dei.
- 1278 38. Item, utrum credat, quod singulis sacerdotibus libere liceat praedicare verbum Dei, ubicumque, quandocumque et quibuscumque placuerit, etiam si non sint missi.
- 1279 39. Item, utrum credat, quod omnia peccata mortalia, et specialiter manifesta, sint publice corrigenda et exstirpanda.
32. Likewise, whether he believes that if the disobedience or obstinacy of those excommunicated grows, the prelates or their representatives in spiritual matters have the power to increase the burden and to increase it again, to impose an interdict, and to invoke the secular arm, and that these censures must be obeyed by subordinates.
33. Likewise, whether he believes that the pope and other prelates and their vicars in spiritual matters have the power of excommunicating priests and disobedient and contumacious laymen and of suspending them from office, benefaction, entrance to a church, and the administration of the sacraments of the Church.
34. Likewise, whether he believes that it is permissible for ecclesiastical personages to hold possessions and temporal goods of this world without sin.
35. Likewise, whether he believes that it is not permissible for the laity to take away these temporal goods by their own power; that on the contrary, if they do take them away, seize, and lay hold on these ecclesiastical goods, they are to be punished as sacrilegious persons, even if the ecclesiastical personages possessing goods of this kind were living bad lives.
36. Likewise, whether he believes that a seizure and an attack of this kind thoughtlessly or violently committed or wrought against any priest whatsoever, even though living an evil life, entails sacrilege.
37. Likewise, whether he believes that it is permissible for the laity of both sexes, namely, men and women, freely to preach the word of God.
38. Likewise, whether he believes that it be freely permitted to individual priests to preach the word of God, wheresoever and whenever and to whomsoever it may be pleasing, even though they are not sent.
39. Likewise, whether he believes that all mortal sins, and in particular those that are manifest, should be publicly corrected and eradicated.

1290: Bull Gerentes ad vos to the Abbot of the Cistercian Monastery of Altzelle in Saxony, November 16, 1427

The original of this bull is at Dresden (Staatsarkiv von Sachsen, no. 6043), and a transcription in the Vatican Archives, Registrum Latinum 271, fol. 203r. The privilege accorded in this bull is similar to that in documents *1145–1146 and *1435.

Ed.: K. A. Fink. "Zur Spendung der höheren Weihen durch den Priester". ZSavStKan 63 (Kan. Abt. 32: 1949): 506–8 / repeated in NvRTh 76 (1954): 366.

The Power of Ordaining Priests

- 1290 Gerentes ad vos et monasterium vestrum paternae dilectionis affectum, ad commoda vestra libenter intendimus ac petitionibus vestris illis praesertim, quibus dispendiis vestris occurritur, facilem impertimur assensum. Hinc est quod Nos volentes vos et monasterium ipsum praerogativa gratiae prosequi et honoris tibi fili
- Bearing toward you and your monastery a feeling of paternal love, We willingly concern Ourselves with your welfare and readily give assent to your petitions, especially to those by which your losses are remedied. Hence it is that, wishing to adorn you and your monastery itself with a prerogative of grace and abbas, quotiens hoc hinc ad quinquennium opportunum fuerit, singulas ecclesias ad tuam et tuorum Conventus collationem, provisionem, praesentationem seu quamvis aliam dispositionem communiter et divisim pertinentes ac membra dicti monasterii in dioecesi Misnensi consistentia eorumque cimeteria, sanguine vel semine polluta reconciliandi necnon singulis monachis eiusdem monasterii ac personis tibi abbati subiectis omnes etiam sacros ordines conferendi, dioecesani loci licentia super hoc minime requisita, constitutionibus et ordinationibus Apostolicis ceterisque contrariis nequaquam obstantibus, auctoritate Apostolica tenore praesentium licentiam concedimus et etiam facultatem.

honor, by apostolic authority and by the tenor of these present (writings), We concede the license and faculty to you, my son the abbot, of reconciling as often as is opportune within the next five years individual churches pertaining by collation, provision, presentation, or any other arrangement to yourself and to your community, communally or individually, and (of reconciling) the members of the said monastery in the diocese of Meißen and their cemeteries, when polluted by blood or seed, and likewise of conferring all the sacred orders on individual monks of the same monastery and on persons subject to you as abbot, without the license of the diocesan bishop of the place being in any way required, apostolic and other constitutions and ordinances to the contrary notwithstanding.

EUGENE IV: March 3, 1431–February 23, 1447

Council of FLORENCE (Seventeenth Ecumenical): February 26, 1439–August (?), 1445

This council held at Florence, together with those of Basel and Ferrara, of which it is but the continuation, is counted as the seventeenth ecumenical council. On July 23, 1431, the council was begun in Basel, but very soon, on December 18, 1431, Eugene IV, by the bull Quoniam alto, moved it to Bologna. The majority of the synodal members remained in Basel, raising doubts about the resolve of the pope for reform and repeating, in session 2 of February 15, 1432, the decree Frequens of Constance on the supremacy of the council over the pope (cf. introduction before *1151⁹⁰). Constrained by the opposition of the ecclesiastical princes assembled at Basel, Eugene IV, in his bull Dudum sacrum of December 15, 1433, retracted his decrees against the Council of Basel and recognized its legitimacy (MaC 29:78C–79D). The first twenty-five sessions of this council, therefore, have ecumenical value.

In the dispute regarding where negotiations for reunion with the Greeks should take place, Eugene IV, on September 18, 1437, moved the council to Ferrara with the constitution Doctoris gentium (ed. by G. Hofmann, Epistolae pontificiae ad Concilium Florentinum spectantes [see below], no. 88). However, the majority of the synodal members proceeded with the council in Basel until 1448. On June 24, 1439, they deposed Eugene IV, and on November 5 of the same year, they elected Amadeus VIII of Savoy as head of the Church. By the election of an antipope, the schism was completed.

The council met in Ferrara beginning on January 8, 1438. After sixteen sessions, it was moved to Florence, where, on February 26, 1439, the first general session took place. After difficult negotiations, the decree on union with the Greeks was drafted on June 28, 1439, signed on July 5, and published the next day. On November 22, 1439, union with the Armenians followed. The decree for the Jacobites (the bull speaks oddly of the Jacobins), which sealed the union with the Copts, was issued on February 4, 1442. On April 26, 1443, the council was transferred to the Lateran in Rome, and, in two sessions (September 30, 1444, and August 7, 1445), it decided the union with other Orientals: the Syrians of Mesopotamia, the Chaldeans, and the Maronites of Cyprus.

1300–1308: Bull of Union with the Greeks Laetentur caeli, July 6, 1439

The decree for the Greeks is repeated with some small additions and omissions by Benedict XIV in the constitution Etsi pastoralis for the Italo-Greeks of May 26, 1742 (§ 1).

Ed.: G. Hofmann, Concilium Florentinum: Documenta et scriptores, series A, vol. 1: Epistolae pontificiae ad Concilium Florentinum spectantes II (Rome, 1944), 71–73 (no. 176) / G. Hofmann, Documenta Concilii Florentini de unione Orientalum: 1. De unione Graecorum, TD ser. theol. 18 (Rome, 1935), 14–17 / MaC 31A:1030D–1034A, cf. 31B:1696D–1698A / HaC 9:422B–423B, cf. 9:986B–987B / Bull/Tau 5:41ab / Bull/Cocq 3/III, 25b–26b / COeD, 3rd ed., 526₃₁–528₄₂.

Decree for the Greeks

[De processione Spiritus Sancti.] In nomine igitur Sanctae Trinitatis, Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti, hoc sacro universali approbante Florentino Concilio, diffinimus, ut haec fidei veritas ab omnibus Christianis credatur et suscipiatur, sicque omnes profiteantur, quod Spiritus Sanctus ex Patre et Filio aeternaliter est, et essentiam suam suumque esse subsistens habet ex Patre simul et Filio, et ex utroque aeternaliter tamquam ab uno principio et unica spiratione procedit [cf. Concilium Lugdunense II: *850];

[The procession of the Holy Spirit.] Therefore, in the name of the Holy Trinity, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, with the approval of this sacred universal Council of Florence, we define that this truth of faith must be believed and received by all Christians, and so all must profess that the Holy Spirit is eternally from the Father and the Son, and he has his essence and his subsistent being at once from the Father and the Son, and he proceeds eternally from both as from one principle and one spiration [cf. Council of Lyon II: *850].

1301 declarantes, quod id, quod sancti Doctores et Patres dicunt, ex Patre per Filium procedere Spiritum Sanctum, ad hanc intelligentiam tendit, ut per hoc significetur, Filium quoque esse secundum Graecos quidem causam, secundum Latinos vero principium subsistentiae Spiritus Sancti, sicut et Patrem.

Et quoniam omnia, quae Patris sunt, Pater ipse unigenito Filio suo gignendo dedit, praeter esse Patrem, hoc ipsum quod Spiritus Sanctus procedit ex Filio, ipse Filius a Patre aeternaliter habet, a quo etiam aeternaliter genitus est.

1302 Diffinimus insuper, explicationem verborum illorum “Filioque” veritatis declarandae gratia, et inaminente tunc necessitate, licite ac rationabiliter Symbolo fuisse appositam.

1303 Item, in azymo sive fermentato pane triticeo corpus Christi veraciter confici; sacerdotesque in altero ipsum Domini corpus conficere debere, unumquemque scilicet iuxta suae Ecclesiae sive occidentalis sive orientalis consuetudinem.

1304 [De sorte defunctorum.] Item, si vere paenitentes in Dei caritate decesserint, antequam dignis paenitentiae fructibus de commissis satisfecerint et omissis, eorum animas poenis purgatoriis post mortem purgari: et ut a poenis huiusmodi releventur, prodesse eis fidelium vivorum suffragia, Missarum scilicet sacrificia, orationes et eleemosynas, et alia pietatis officia, quae a fidelibus pro aliis fidelibus fieri consueverunt secundum Ecclesiae instituta.

1305 Illorumque animas, qui post baptismum susceptum nullam omnino peccati maculam incurrerunt, illas etiam, quae post contractam peccati maculam, vel in suis corporibus, vel eisdem exutae corporibus, prout superius dictum est, sunt purgatae, in caelum mox recipi et intueri clare ipsum Deum trinum et unum, sicuti est, pro meritorum tamen diversitate alium alio perfectius.

1306 Illorum autem animas, qui in actuali mortali peccato vel solo originali decedunt, mox in infernum descendere, poenis tamen disparibus puniendas [*cf. 856–858].

1307 [Ordo sedium patriarchalium; primatus Romanus] Item diffinimus, sanctam Apostolicam Sedem, et Romanum Pontificem, in universum orbem tenere primatum, et ipsum Pontificem Romanum successorem esse beati Petri principis Apostolorum et verum Christi vicarium, totiusque Ecclesiae caput et omnium Christianorum patrem ac doctorem existere; et ipsi in beato Petro pascendi, regendi ac gubernandi universalem Ecclesiam a Domino nostro Iesu Christo plenam potestatem traditam

We declare that when the holy Doctors and Fathers say that the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Father through the Son, this tends toward that understanding which signifies that the Son, like the Father, is also what the Greeks call “cause” and the Latins “principle” of the subsistence of the Holy Spirit.

And since the Father himself has given to his only begotten Son, in generating him, all that the Father has except being the Father, the Son himself eternally has from the Father, from whom he is eternally generated, precisely this: that the Holy Spirit proceeds from the Son.

Moreover, we define that the explanatory words “Filioque” have been added in the Creed legitimately and with good reason for the sake of clarifying the truth and under the impact of a real need at that time.

Likewise, we define that the body of Christ is truly effected with either unleavened or leavened wheaten bread; and that priests must confect the body of the Lord in one way or the other, namely, each following the custom of their Church, whether Western or Eastern.

[The destiny of the dead.] Likewise, (we define) that if those who are truly penitent die in the love of God before having satisfied by worthy fruits of penance for their sins of commission and omission, their souls are cleansed after death by purgatorial punishments. In order that they be relieved from such punishments, the acts of intercession of the living faithful benefit them, namely, the sacrifices of the Mass, prayers, alms, and other works of piety that the faithful are wont to do for the other faithful according to the Church’s practice.

The souls of those who, after having received baptism, have incurred no stain of sin whatever and those souls who, after having contracted the stain of sin, have been cleansed, either while in their bodies or after having been divested of them as stated above, are received immediately into heaven and see clearly God himself, one and three, as he is, though some more perfectly than others, according to the diversity of merits.

As for the souls of those who die in actual mortal sin or with original sin only, they go down immediately to hell, to be punished, however, with different punishments [*cf. 856–858].

[Order of the patriarchal sees: Roman primacy.] Likewise, we define that the holy Apostolic See and the Roman pontiff have the primacy over the whole world and that the same Roman pontiff is the successor of blessed Peter, the prince of the apostles and the true vicar of Christ, the head of the whole Church, the father and teacher of all Christians; and that to him, in the person of blessed Peter, was given by our Lord Jesus Christ the full power of feeding, ruling, and governing the whole esse, quemadmodum etiam in gestis oecumenicorum Conciliorum et in sacris canonibus continetur.

Renovantes insuper ordinem traditum in canonibus ceterorum venerabilium patriarcharum, ut patriarcha Constantinopolitanus secundus sit post sanctissimum Romanum Pontificem, tertius vero Alexandrinus, quartus autem Antiochenus, et quintus Hierosolymitanus, salvis videlicet privilegiis omnibus et iuribus eorum.

Church, as is also contained in the acts of the ecumenical councils and in the sacred canons.

Furthermore, we renew the order of the other venerable 1308 patriarchs handed down in the canons: that the patriarch of Constantinople should be second after the most holy Roman pontiff, (the patriarch) of Alexandria, third, that of Antioch, fourth, and of Jerusalem, fifth, while clearly preserving all their privileges and rights.

1309: Decree Moses vir Dei against the Council of Basel, September 4, 1439

When those members of the synod who remained in Basel after the transfer of the council to Ferrara realized that Pope Eugene IV was not changing his attitude, in session 33 of May 16, 1439, they established three propositions regarding the supremacy of a general council over the pope (MaC 29:178B–179B / John of Segovia, Historia gestorum generalis Synodi Basiliensis, Concilium Basileense: Scriptores 3/I (Vienna, 1886), XIV, 37, p. 278). In the subsequent session of June 24, 1439, they deposed the pope (MaC 29:179C–181B / John of Segovia, Historia gestorum, XV, 15, pp. 325–27). Eugene IV responded through this decree.

Ed.: G. Hofmann, Concilium Florentinum: Documenta et scriptores, series A, vol. 1: Epistolae pontificiae ad Concilium Florentinum spectantes II (Rome, 1944), 104^{9–19}, 105^{31–38} / MaC 31b:1718D–1719A, 1720BC / HaC 9:1006E–1007A, 1008BC / John of Segovia, Historia gestorum generalis Synodi Basiliensis, Concilium Basileense: Scriptores 3/I (Vienna, 1886), XV, 27, pp. 384–86 / COeD, 3rd ed., 532^{1–12}, 533^{33–42}.

The Dependence of a General Council on the Pope

[Synodales Concilii Basileensis] ... tres propositiones quas fidei veritates vocant, quasi Nos et omnes principes ac praelatos et alios fideles et devotos Apostolicae Sedis haereticos facerent, protulerunt, quarum tenor sequitur in haec verba:

“Veritas de potestate concilii generalis universam Ecclesiam repraesentantis supra papam et quemlibet alterum declarata per Constanciense et hoc Basiliense generalia concilia, est veritas fidei catholicae.

Veritas haec, quod papa concilium generale universalem Ecclesiam repraesentans actu legitime congregatum super declaratis in praefata veritate, aut aliquo sine eius consensu nullatenus auctoritate potest dissolvere, aut ad aliud tempus prorogare, aut de loco ad locum transferre, est veritas catholica.

Veritatibus praedictis pertinaciter repugnans est censendus haereticus.”

[Reprobatio:] ... ipsasque propositiones superius descriptas iuxta pravum ipsorum Basiliensium intellectum quem facto demonstrant, veluti sano sacrae Scripturae et sanctorum Patrum et ipsius Constanciensis Concilii sensui contrarium necnon praefatam assertam declarationis seu privationis sententiam cum omnibus inde secutis et quae in futurum sequi possent, tamquam impias et scandalosas necnon in manifestam Dei Ecclesiae scissuram ac omnis ecclesiastici ordinis et christiani principatus confusionem tendentes, ipso sacro approbante Concilio damnamus et reprobamus, ac damnatas et reprobatas nuntiamus.

[The members of the Council of Basel] ... have put forth three propositions that they call truths of faith, as if they would make heretics of us and of all the princes and prelates and others who are faithful and devoted to the Apostolic See; the tenor of which (propositions) follows in these words: 1309

“The truth concerning the power of a general council representing the whole Church over the pope and anyone else, declared by the General Council of Constance and by this General Council of Basel, is a truth of the Catholic faith.

“This truth, that the pope cannot in any way by his own authority dissolve a universal general council representing the whole Church that has duly met regarding the matters declared in the aforesaid truth, or any other matter, without its consent or defer it to another time or move it from one place to another, is a Catholic truth.

“Anyone pertinaciously rejecting the aforesaid truths is to be deemed a heretic.”

[Condemnation:] ... these propositions described above, understood in the perverse sense of those gathered at Basel, which they display by their actions, We, with the sacred council approving, condemn and reject and declare to be condemned and rejected, as contrary to the true meaning of Sacred Scripture and of the holy Fathers and of the Council of Constance itself, (condemning) also the aforesaid alleged decision about the declaration and privation (of authority), with all that follows from it and that may follow in the future, as being impious and scandalous and also tending toward the manifest schism of the Church of God and the confusion of all ecclesiastical order and Christian government.

1310–1328: Bull of Union with the Armenians Exsultate Deo, November 22, 1439

In addition to the ancient documents of faith indicated below, this bull contains an instruction on the sacraments; to a large extent, it is a question of an extract from Thomas Aquinas, De articulis fidei et Ecclesiae sacramentis (P. Mandonnet, Sancti Thomae Aquinatis Opuscula omnia 3 [Paris, 1927], 11–18 / Parma ed. 16 [1865], 119–22). The validity of this instruction has been disputed for a long time, especially because of its assertion that the handing on of instruments is the matter of the sacrament of orders (cf. *1326), while the historical facts show that up to the ninth century, both in the Western Church and in the Eastern Church, only the imposition of hands was customary. This was undeniably the practice at all times for certain Orientals, as a number of popes acknowledge: cf., e.g., Clement VIII, instruction Presbyteri graeci, August 31, 1595 (BullTau 10:213); Urban VIII, letter Universalis Ecclesiae, November 23, 1624 (BullLux 4:172ab); Benedict XIV, constitution Etsi pastoralis, May 26, 1742 (BullLux 16:98b–100b); Leo XIII, bull Orientalium dignitas, November 30, 1894 (ASS 27 [1894/1895]: 257–64). Pius XII, without getting involved in the historical dispute, in his constitution Sacramentum ordinis of November 30, 1947 (*3857–3861), established that the imposition of hands is the only necessary matter for the validity of orders.

Ed.: G. Hofmann, Concilium Florentinum: Documenta et scriptores, series A, vol. 1: Epistolae pontificiae ad Concilium Florentinum spectantes II (Rome, 1944), 128–31, 134 (no. 224) / Hofmann, Documenta Concilii Florentini de unione Orientalum: II: De unione Armeniorum, TD ser. theol. 19 (Rome, 1935), 30–42 / A. Balgy, Historia doctrinae catholicae inter Armenios unionisque eorum cum Ecclesia Romana in Concilio Florentino (Vienna, 1878), 110–17, 124 (the Armenian text, ibid., 132–55) / MaC 31A:1054B–1060C / HaC 9:437D–442B / BullTau 5:48a–51b / BullCocq 3/III, 30b–33a / COeD, 3rd ed., 540–55.

Decree for the Armenians

[The following are recorded: (1) The creed of Constantinople with the insertion of the “Filioque” (*150); (2) the definition of the Council of Chalcedon on the two natures in Christ (*301–303); (3) the definition of the Third Council of Constantinople on the two wills of Christ (*557f.); (4) the decree on the authority of the Council of Chalcedon and of Leo the Great.]

1310 Quinto, ecclesiarum sacramentorum veritatem pro ipsorum Armenorum tam praesentium quam futurorum faciliore doctrina sub hac brevissima redigimus formula. Novae Legis septem sunt sacramenta: videlicet baptismus, confirmatio, Eucharistia, paenitentia, extrema unctio, ordo et matrimonium, quae multum a sacramentis differunt Antiquae Legis. Illa enim non causabant gratiam, sed eam solum per passionem Christi dandam esse figurabant: haec vero nostra et continent gratiam, et ipsam digne suscipientibus conferunt.

1311 Horum quinque prima ad spiritualem uniuscuiusque hominis in seipso perfectionem, duo ultima ad totius Ecclesiae regimen multiplicationemque ordinata sunt. Per baptismum enim spiritualiter renascimur; per confirmationem augemur in gratia, et roboramur in fide; renati autem et roborati nutrimur divina Eucharistiae alimonia. Quod si per peccatum aegritudinem incurrimus animae, per paenitentiam spiritualiter sanamur: spiritualiter etiam et corporaliter, prout animae expedit, per extremam unctionem; per ordinem vero Ecclesiae gubernatur et multiplicatur spiritualiter, per matrimonium corporaliter augetur.

1312 Haec omnia sacramenta tribus perficiuntur, videlicet rebus tamquam materia, verbis tamquam forma, et persona ministri conferentis sacramentum cum intentione faciendi, quod facit Ecclesia: quorum si aliquod desit, non perficitur sacramentum.

In the fifth place, in order to facilitate the instruction of the Armenians of today and in the future, we reduce the truth about the sacraments of the Church to the following very brief formula. There are seven sacraments of the New Law: namely, baptism, confirmation, Eucharist, penance, extreme unction, orders, and matrimony, which differ greatly from the sacraments of the Old Law. The latter, in fact, did not cause grace, but they only prefigured the grace to be given through the Passion of Christ. These sacraments of ours, however, both contain grace and communicate it to those who worthily receive them.

Of these, the first five are ordered to the spiritual perfection of each person in himself, and the last two (are directed) to the governance and the increase of the whole Church. Through baptism, in fact, we are reborn spiritually; by confirmation we grow in grace and are strengthened in faith. Once reborn and strengthened, we are nourished by the food of the divine Eucharist. If through sin we incur an illness of the soul, we are spiritually healed through penance (and healed) spiritually and bodily as well through extreme unction, insofar as it befits the soul. By the sacrament of orders, however, the Church is governed and multiplied spiritually; through matrimony, she grows bodily.

All these sacraments are accomplished by three elements: namely, by things as the matter, by words as the form, and by the person of the minister who confers the sacrament with the intention of doing what the Church does. If any of these is absent, the sacrament is not accomplished.

Inter haec sacramenta tria sunt: baptismus, confirmatio et ordo, quae characterem, id est, spirituale quoddam signum a ceteris distinctivum, imprimunt in anima indelebile. Unde in eadem persona non reiterantur. Reliqua vero quattuor characterem non imprimunt, et reiterationem admittunt.

Primum omnium sacramentorum locum tenet sanctum baptisma, quod vitae spiritualis ianua est: per ipsum enim membra Christi ac de corpore efficimur Ecclesiae. Et cum per primum hominem mors introierit in universos [cf. Rm 5:12], nisi ex aqua et Spiritu renascamur, non possumus ut inquit Veritas, in regnum caelorum introire [cf. Io 3:5].

Materia huius sacramenti est aqua vera et naturalis: nec refert, frigida sit an calida.

Forma autem est: “Ego te baptizo in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti.” Non tamen negamus, quin et per illa verba: “Baptizetur talis servus Christi in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti”, vel “Baptizatur manibus meis talis in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti”, verum perficiatur baptisma; quoniam cum principalis causa, ex qua baptisma virtutem habet, sit sancta Trinitas, instrumentalis autem sit minister, qui tradit exterius sacramentum, si exprimitur actus, qui per ipsum exercetur ministrum, cum sanctae Trinitatis invocatione, perficitur sacramentum.

Minister huius sacramenti est sacerdos, cui ex officio competit baptizare. In causa autem necessitatis non solum sacerdos vel diaconus, sed etiam laicus vel mulier, immo etiam paganus et haereticus baptizare potest, dummodo formam servet Ecclesiae et facere intendat, quod facit Ecclesia.

Huius sacramenti effectus est remissio omnis culpae originalis et actualis, omnis quoque poenae, quae pro ipsa culpa debetur. Propterea baptizatis nulla pro peccatis praeteritis iniungenda est satisfactio: sed morientes, antequam culpam aliquam committant, statim ad regnum caelorum et Dei visionem perveniunt.

Secundum sacramentum est confirmatio; cuius materia est chrisma confectum ex oleo, quod nitorem significat conscientiae, et balsamo, quod odorem significat bonae famae, per episcopum benedicto.

Forma autem est: “Signo te signo crucis, et confirmo te chrismate salutis, in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti.”

Ordinarius minister est episcopus. Et cum ceteras unctiones simplex sacerdos valeat exhibere, hanc non nisi episcopus debet conferre, quia de solis Apostolis legitur, quorum vicem tenent episcopi, quod per manus

Among these sacraments, there are three, namely, baptism, confirmation, and orders, that imprint an indelible character on the soul, which is a type of spiritual sign that is distinct from the rest. As a consequence, they may not be repeated in the same person. The other four, however, do not imprint a character and allow for repetition. 1313

Among all the sacraments, holy baptism holds the first place because it is the gateway to the spiritual life; by it we are made members of Christ and belong to his body, the Church. And since through the first man death has entered into all [cf. Rom 5:12], unless we are born again of water and the Spirit we cannot, as the Truth said, enter into the kingdom of heaven [cf. Jn 3:5]. 1314

The matter of this sacrament is true natural water; it does not matter whether it is cold or warm.

The form is: “I baptize you in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit.” We do not deny, however, that true baptism is also effected by these words: “May the servant of Christ, N., be baptized in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit”, or: “By my hands N. is baptized in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit.” For as the principal cause from which baptism derives its virtue is the Holy Trinity, while the instrumental cause is the minister who confers the sacrament externally, the sacrament is accomplished whenever the act carried out by the minister is expressed along with the invocation of the Holy Trinity.

The minister of this sacrament is the priest, to whom by reason of his office it belongs to baptize. But in case of necessity not only priests or deacons, but also laymen or laywomen or even pagans and heretics may baptize, provided they observe the Church’s form and intend to do what the Church does. 1315

The effect of this sacrament is the remission of all guilt, original and actual, and also of all punishment due to the guilt itself. For this reason, no satisfaction is to be enjoined on the baptized for their past sins; and if they die before committing any fault, they immediately gain access to the kingdom of heaven and the beatific vision. 1316

The second sacrament is confirmation. Its matter is chrism made from oil, signifying purity of conscience, and balsam, signifying the fragrance of a good reputation; it is blessed by the bishop. 1317

The form is: “I sign you with the sign of the cross, and I confirm you with the chrism of salvation, in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit.”

The ordinary minister is the bishop. Whereas other anointings may be performed by a simple priest, this one must only be conferred by the bishop. For we read that only the apostles, whose place the bishops hold, imparted 1318 impositionem Spiritum Sanctum dabant, quemadmodum Actuum Apostolorum lectio manifestat. “Cum enim audissent”, inquit, “Apostoli, qui erant Hierosolymis, quia receperat Samaria verbum Dei, miserunt ad eos Petrum et Ioannem. Qui cum venissent, oraverunt pro eis, ut acciperent Spiritum Sanctum; nondum enim in quemquam illorum venerat, sed baptizati tantum erant in nomine Domini Iesu. Tunc imponebant manus super illos, et accipiebant Spiritum Sanctum” [Act 8:14–17]. Loco autem illius manus impositionis in Ecclesia datur confirmatio. Legitur tamen aliquando per Apostolicae Sedis dispensationem ex rationabili et urgente admodum causa simplicem sacerdotem chrismate per episcopum confecto hoc administrasse confirmationis sacramentum.

1319 Effectus autem huius sacramenti est, quia in eo datur Spiritus Sanctus ad robur, sicut datus est Apostolis in die Pentecostes, ut videlicet Christianus audacter Christi confiteatur nomen. Ideoque in fronte, ubi verecundiae sedes est, confirmandus inungitur, ne Christi nomen confiteri erubescat et praecipue crucem eius, quae Iudaeis quidem est scandalum, gentibus autem stultitia [cf. 1 Cor 1:23] secundum Apostolum; propter quod signo crucis signatur.

1320 Tertium est Eucharistiae sacramentum, cuius materia est panis triticeus, et vinum de vite, cui ante consecrationem aqua modicissima admisceri debet. Aqua autem ideo admiscetur, quoniam iuxta testimonia sanctorum Patrum ac Doctorum Ecclesiae pridem in disputatione exhibita creditur, ipsum Dominum in vino aqua permixto hoc instituisse sacramentum.

Deinde, quia hoc convenit dominicae passionis repraesentationi. Inquit enim beatus Alexander¹ Papa, quintus [successor] a beato Petro: “In sacramentorum oblationibus, quae intra Missarum solemnias Domino offeruntur, panis tantum et vinum aqua permixtum in sacrificium offerantur. Non enim debet in calice Domini aut vinum solum aut aqua sola offerri, sed utrumque permixtum, quia utrumque, id est, sanguis et aqua, ex latere Christi profluxisse legitur [cf. Io 19:34].”

Tum etiam, quod convenit ad significandum huius sacramenti effectum, qui est unio populi christiani ad Christum. Aqua enim populum significat, secundum illud Apocalypsis: Aquae multae, populi multi [cf. Apc 17:15]. Et Iulius² Papa, secundus [successor] post beatum Silvestrum, ait: “Calix dominicus iuxta canonum the Holy Spirit by the laying on of the hand. Reading the Acts of the Apostles makes this clear, for it is said: “Now when the apostles at Jerusalem heard that Samaria had received the word of God, they sent to them Peter and John, who came down and prayed for them that they might receive the Holy Spirit; for the Spirit had not yet fallen on any of them, but they had only been baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus. Then they laid their hands on them and they received the Holy Spirit” [Acts 8:14–17]. Confirmation given by the Church takes the place of that imposition of hand. Nevertheless, we read that sometimes through a dispensation of the Apostolic See for a reasonable and very urgent cause a simple priest has administered the sacrament of confirmation with chrism prepared by the bishop.

The effect of this sacrament is that in it the Holy Spirit is given for strength, as he was given to the apostles on the day of Pentecost, in order that Christians may courageously confess the name of Christ. And, therefore, those to be confirmed are anointed on the forehead, which is the seat of shame, so that they may not be ashamed to confess the name of Christ and chiefly his Cross, which, according to the apostle, is a stumbling block for the Jews and foolishness for the Gentiles [cf. 1 Cor 1:23]. This is why they are signed with the sign of the cross.

The third sacrament is the Eucharist. The matter of this sacrament is wheat-bread and grape-wine with a small amount of water to be mixed in before the consecration. Water is mixed in because, according to the testimony of the holy Fathers and Doctors of the Church mentioned in the preceding discussions, it is believed that our Lord himself instituted this sacrament with wine mixed with water.

Furthermore, this is a fitting representation of our Lord’s Passion. For, as Blessed Alexander,¹ the fifth pope after St. Peter, says: “In the oblation of the mysteries that are offered to the Lord during the solemnities of the Mass, let only bread and wine mixed with water be offered in sacrifice. Not wine only or water only should be offered in the chalice of the Lord, but a mixture of both. For we read that both, that is, blood and water, flowed from the side of Christ [cf. Jn 19:34].”

Finally, this is a fitting way to signify the effect of this sacrament, that is, the union of the Christian people with Christ. For, water represents the people, as the Apocalypse says: “Many waters . . . many peoples” [cf. Rev 17:15]. And Julius,² the second [successor] after Blessed Sylvester, says: “According to the prescription *1320¹ Pseudo-Alexander I, Letter to All the Orthodox, chap. 9, in Gratian, Decretum, p. III, dist. 2, c. 1 (Frdb 1:1314), from Pseudo-Isidore (P. Hinschius, Decretales Pseudo-Isidorianae . . . [Leipzig, 1863], 99).

² Pseudo-Julius I, Letter to the Bishops of Egypt, in Gratian, Decretum, p. III, dist. 2, c. 7 (Frdb 1:1316); cf. the Fourth Synod of Braga of A.D. 675, chap. 2 (MaC 11:155E).

praeceptum vino et aqua permixtus debet offerri, quia videmus in aqua populum intelligi, in vino vero ostendi sanguinem Christi. Ergo cum in calice vinum et aqua miscetur, Christo populus adunatur, et fidelium plebs ei, in quem credit, copulatur et iungitur.”

Cum ergo tam sancta Romana Ecclesia a beatissimis Apostolis Petro et Paulo edocta, quam reliquae omnes Latinorum Graecorumque ecclesiae, in quibus omnis sanctitatis et doctrinae lumina claruerunt, ab initio nascentis Ecclesiae sic servaverint et modo servant, inconveniens admodum videtur, ut alia quaevis regio ab hac universalis et rationabili discrepet observantia. Decernimus igitur, ut etiam ipsi Armeni se cum universo orbe christiano conforment, eorumque sacerdotes in calicis oblatione paululum aquae, prout dictum est, vino admisceant.

Forma huius sacramenti sunt verba Salvatoris, quibus hoc confecit sacramentum; sacerdos enim in persona Christi loquens hoc conficit sacramentum. Nam ipsorum verborum virtute substantia panis in corpus Christi, et substantia vini in sanguinem convertuntur, ita tamen, quod totus Christus continetur sub specie panis et totus sub specie vini. Sub qualibet quoque parte hostiae consecratae et vini consecrati, separatione facta, totus est Christus.

Huius sacramenti effectus, quem in anima operatur digne sumentis, est adunatio hominis ad Christum. Et quia per gratiam homo Christo incorporatur et membris eius unitur, consequens est, quod per hoc sacramentum in sumentibus digne gratia augeatur; omnemque effectum, quem materialis cibus et potus quoad vitam agunt corporalem, sustentando, augendo, reparando et delectando, sacramentum hoc quoad vitam operatur spiritualement, in quo, ut inquit Urbanus [IV] Papa [*846] gratam Salvatoris nostri recensemur memoriam, a malo retrahimur, confortamur in bono, et ad virtutum et gratiarum proficimus incrementum.

Quartum sacramentum est poenitentia, cuius quasi materia sunt actus poenitentis, qui in tres distinguuntur partes. Quarum prima est cordis contritio; ad quam pertinet, ut doleat de peccato commisso, cum proposito non peccandi de cetero. Secunda est oris confessio; ad quam pertinet, ut peccator omnia peccata, quorum memoriam habet, suo sacerdoti confiteatur integraliter. Tertia est satisfactio pro peccatis secundum arbitrium sacerdotis; quae quidem praecipue fit per orationem, ieiunium et elemosinam.

of the canons, the Lord’s chalice should be offered with wine mixed with water. For we see that the water represents the people, and the wine manifests the blood of Christ. Thus, when wine and water are mixed in the chalice, the people are united with Christ, and the faithful people are closely joined to him in whom they believe.”

Therefore, since the holy Roman Church, which was instructed by the blessed apostles Peter and Paul, and all the other Churches of Latins and Greeks, in which have shone luminaries of sanctity and learning, have followed this custom from the beginning of the early Church and still follow it, it seems entirely improper for any region whatsoever not to follow this reasonable and universal practice. We therefore decree that the Armenians must conform to the whole Christian world and that their priests must mix a small amount of water with the wine, as has been said, in the offering of the chalice.

The form of this sacrament is the words of the Savior 1321 with which he effected this sacrament; for the priest effects the sacrament by speaking in the person of Christ. It is by the power of these words that the substance of bread is changed into the body of Christ, and the substance of wine into his blood; in such a way, however, that the whole Christ is contained under the species of bread and the whole Christ under the species of wine. Further, the whole Christ is present under any part of the consecrated host or the consecrated wine when separated from the rest.

The effect that this sacrament produces in the souls 1322 of persons who receive it worthily is to unite them with Christ. For, since it is by grace that persons are incorporated into Christ and united to his members, it follows that those who receive this sacrament worthily receive an increase of grace. And all the effects that material food and drink have on the life of the body—maintaining and increasing life, restoring health, and giving joy—all these effects this sacrament produces for the spiritual life. As Pope Urban [IV] says [cf. *846], in this sacrament we celebrate in thanksgiving the memory of our Savior, we are drawn away from evil, we are strengthened in what is good, and we advance and increase in virtue and in grace.

The fourth sacrament is penance. Its quasi-matter 1323 consists in the actions of the penitent, which are divided into three parts. The first of these is contrition of the heart, which requires that one be sorry for the sin committed with the resolve not to sin in the future. The second is oral confession, which requires that the sinner confess to his priest in their integrity all the sins he remembers. The third is satisfaction for the sins according to the judgment of the priest, which is mainly achieved by prayer, fasting, and almsgiving.

Forma huius sacramenti sunt verba absolutionis, quae sacerdos profert, cum dicit: “Ego te absolvo.” Minister huius sacramenti est sacerdos habens auctoritatem absolvendi vel ordinariam vel ex commissione superioris. Effectus huius sacramenti est absolutio a peccatis.

- 1324 Quintum sacramentum est extrema unctio, cuius materia est oleum olivae per episcopum benedictum. Hoc sacramentum nisi infirmo, de cuius morte timetur, dari non debet; qui in his locis unguendus est: in oculis propter visum, in auribus propter auditum, in naribus propter odoratum, in ore propter gustum vel locutionem, in manibus propter tactum, in pedibus propter gressum, in renibus propter delectationem ibidem vigentem.

Forma huius sacramenti est haec: “Per istam sanctam unctionem et suam piissimam misericordiam indulgeat tibi Dominus, quicquid deliquisti per visum”, et similiter in aliis membris.

- 1325 Minister huius sacramenti est sacerdos. Effectus vero est mentis sanatio et, in quantum animae expedit, ipsius etiam corporis. De hoc sacramento inquit beatus Iacobus Apostolus: “Infirmatur quis in vobis? Inducat presbyteros Ecclesiae, ut orent super eum, ungentes eum oleo in nomine Domini; et oratio fidei salvabit infirmum, et alleviabit eum Dominus, et si in peccatis sit, dimittentur ei” [Iac 5:14s].

- 1326 Sextum est sacramentum ordinis, cuius materia est illud, per cuius traditionem confertur ordo: sicut presbyteratus traditur per calicis cum vino et patenae cum pane porrectionem; diaconatus vero per libri Evangeliorum dationem; subdiaconatus vero per calicis vacui cum patena vacua superposita traditionem; et similiter de aliis per rerum ad ministeria sua pertinentium assignationem.

Forma sacerdotii talis est: “Accipe potestatem offerendi sacrificium in Ecclesia pro vivis et mortuis, in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti.” Et sic de aliorum ordinum formis, prout in Pontificali Romano late continetur. Ordinarius minister huius sacramenti est episcopus. Effectus augmentum gratiae, ut quis sit idoneus Christi minister.

- 1327 Septimum est sacramentum matrimonii, quod est signum coniunctionis Christi et Ecclesiae secundum Apostolum dicentem: “Sacramentum hoc magnum est: ego autem dico in Christo et in Ecclesia” [Eph 5:32]. Causa efficiens matrimonii regulariter est mutuus consensus per verba de praesenti expressus.

Assignatur autem triplex bonum matrimonii. Primum est proles suscipienda et educanda ad cultum Dei.

The form of this sacrament is the words of absolution, which the priest pronounces when he says: “I absolve you.” The minister of this sacrament is the priest who has either ordinary authority to absolve or that commissioned by a superior. The effect of this sacrament is absolution from sins.

The fifth sacrament is extreme unction. Its matter is olive oil blessed by the bishop. This sacrament may not be given except to a sick person whose life is feared for. He is to be anointed on these parts: on the eyes on account of sight, on the ears on account of hearing, on the nostrils on account of smelling, on the mouth on account of taste and speech, on the hands on account of touch, on the feet on account of movement, on the loins on account of the pleasure seated there.

The form of this sacrament is: “Through this holy anointing and his most pious mercy, may the Lord pardon you for whatever offenses you have committed by sight”, and similarly in (the anointing of) the other members.

The minister of this sacrament is the priest. The effect is the healing of the mind and, as far as it is good for the soul, of the body as well. Blessed James the apostle said of this sacrament: “Is any among you sick? Let him call for the elders [presbyteros] of the Church, and let them pray over him, anointing him with oil in the name of the Lord; and the prayer of faith will save the sick man, and the Lord will raise him up; and if he has committed sins, he will be forgiven” [Jas 5:14–15].

The sixth sacrament is that of order. Its matter is that by the handing over of which the order is conferred: thus the priesthood is conferred by handing over the chalice with wine and the paten with the bread; the diaconate by giving the book of the Gospels; the subdiaconate by handing over the empty chalice covered with an empty paten: and similarly the other orders by assigning the things pertaining to their office.

The form of the priesthood is this: “Receive the power of offering the Sacrifice in the Church for the living and the dead, in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit.” And similarly for the forms of the other orders, as is contained in detail in the Roman Pontifical. The ordinary minister of this sacrament is the bishop. The effect is an increase of grace so that one may be a suitable minister of Christ.

The seventh is the sacrament of matrimony, which is the sign of the union of Christ and the Church, according to the saying of the apostle: “This is a great mystery, and I mean in reference to Christ and the Church” [Eph 5:32]. The efficient cause of matrimony is the mutual consent duly expressed in words relating to the present.

A triple good is found in matrimony. The first is the begetting of children and their education to the worship of God. The second is the faithfulness that each spouse owes to the other. Third is the indissolubility of marriage, inasmuch as it represents the indissoluble union of Christ and the Church. But, although it is permitted to separate on account of fornication, nevertheless it is not permitted to contract another marriage since the bond of a marriage legitimately contracted is perpetual.

Secundum est fides, quam unus coniugum alteri servare debet. Tertium indivisibilitas matrimonii, propter hoc quod significat indivisibilem coniunctionem Christi et Ecclesiae. Quamvis autem ex causa fornicationis liceat tori separationem facere, non tamen aliud matrimonium contrahere fas est, cum matrimonii vinculum legitime contracti perpetuum sit.

[There then follow: (6) the Pseudo-Athanasian Creed (*75–76); (7) the Decree of Union with the Greeks (*1300–1308); (8) a decree on certain feasts to celebrate in common with the Roman Church; then the whole is concluded with these words:]

His omnibus explicatis praedicti Armenorum oratores nomine suo et sui patriarchae et omnium Armenorum, hoc saluberrimum synodale decretum cum omnibus suis capitulis, declarationibus, diffinitionibus, traditionibus, praeceptis et statutis omnemque doctrinam in ipso descriptam necnon quicquid tenet et docet sancta Sedes Apostolica et Romana Ecclesia, cum omni devotione et obedientia acceptant, suscipiunt et amplectuntur. Illos quoque Doctores et sanctos Patres, quos Ecclesia Romana approbat, ipsi reverenter suscipiunt. Quascunque vero personas et quicquid ipsa Ecclesia Romana reprobatur et damnatur, ipsi pro reprobatis et damnatis habent.

After all this was expounded, the aforesaid spokesmen 1328 for the Armenians in their own name and in the name of their patriarch and of all Armenians, with all devotion and obedience accept, admit, and embrace this very salutary conciliar decree with all its chapters, declarations, definitions, traditions, precepts, and statutes and all the doctrine recorded in it as all that the holy Apostolic See and the Roman Church hold and teach. They also accept with reverence all Doctors and holy Fathers approved by the Roman Church. And all persons and things the Roman Church rejects and condemns, they also hold to be rejected and condemned.

1330–1353: Bull of Union with the Copts and the Ethiopians Cantate Domino, February 4, 1442 (1441, according to the Florentine dating)

Ed.: G. Hofmann, Concilium Florentinum: Documenta et scriptores, series A, vol. 1: Epistolae pontificiae ad Concilium Florentinum spectantes III (Rome, 1944), 47–51, 62 (no. 258) / G. Hofmann, Documenta Concilii Florentini de unione Orientalum: III. De unione Coptorum, Syrorum, Chaldaeorum Maronitarumque Cypri, TD ser. theol. 22, 2nd ed. (Rome, 1951), 32–38, 40 / MaC 31B:1735D–1741E / HaC 9:1023A–1028D / BullTau 5:59b–64b / BullCocq 3/III, 37bff. / COeD, 3rd ed., 570₂₀–582₇.

Decree for the Jacobites

Sacrosancta Romana Ecclesia, Domini et Salvatoris nostri voce fundata, firmiter credit, profitetur et praedicat, unum verum Deum omnipotentem, incommutabilem et aeternum, Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum, unum in essentia, trinum in personis: Patrem ingenitum, Filium ex Patre genitum, Spiritum Sanctum ex Patre et Filio procedentem. Patrem non esse filium aut Spiritum Sanctum; Filium non esse Patrem aut Spiritum Sanctum; Spiritum Sanctum non esse Patrem aut Filium: sed Pater tantum Pater est, Filius tantum Filius est, Spiritus Sanctus tantum Spiritus Sanctus est. Solus Pater de substantia sua genuit Filium, solus Filius de solo Patre est genitus, solus Spiritus Sanctus simul de Patre procedit et Filio. Hae tres personae sunt unus Deus, et non tres dii: quia trium est una substantia, una essentia, una natura, una divinitas, una immensitas, una aeternitas, omniaque sunt unum, ubi non obviat relationis oppositio.¹

First, then, the holy Roman Church, founded on the words of our Lord and Savior, firmly believes, professes, and preaches one true God, almighty, immutable, and eternal, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit; one in essence, three in Persons; unbegotten Father, Son begotten from the Father, Holy Spirit proceeding from the Father and the Son; the Father is not the Son or the Holy Spirit, the Son is not the Father or the Holy Spirit, the Holy Spirit is not the Father or the Son; the Father is only the Father, the Son is only the Son, the Holy Spirit is only the Holy Spirit. The Father alone from his substance begot the Son; the Son alone is begotten of the Father alone; the Holy Spirit alone proceeds at once from the Father and the Son. These three Persons are one God, not three gods, because there is one substance of the three, one essence, one nature, one Godhead, one immensity, one eternity, and everything (in them) is one where there is no opposition of relationship.¹ 1330

*1330 ¹ This fundamental principle of trinitarian theology was formulated for the first time by Anselm of Canterbury, De processione Spiritus Sancti 1 (F. S. Schmitt, Sancti Anselmi Cantuariensis Opera Omnia 2 [Edinburgh, 1946], 180₂₄–181₄, 181₂₋₄) = chap. 2 (PL 158:288C).

1331 “Propter hanc unitatem Pater est totus in Filio, totus in Spiritu Sancto; Filius totus est in Patre, totus in Spiritu Sancto; Spiritus Sanctus totus est in Patre, totus in Filio. Nullus alium aut praecedit aeternitate, aut excedit magnitudine, aut superat potestate. Aeternum quippe et sine initio est, quod Filius de Patre existit; et aeternum ac sine initio est, quod Spiritus Sanctus de Patre Filioque procedit.”¹ Pater quidquid est aut habet, non habet ab alio, sed ex se, et est principium sine principio. Filius quidquid est aut habet, habet a Patre, et est principium de principio: Spiritus Sanctus quidquid est aut habet, habet a Patre simul et Filio. Sed Pater et Filius non duo principia Spiritus Sancti, sed unum principium, sicut Pater et Filius et Spiritus Sanctus non tria principia creaturae, sed unum principium.

1332 Quoscumque ergo adversa et contraria sentientes damnat, reprobatur et anathematizatur et a Christi corpore, quod est Ecclesia, alienos esse denuntiat. Hinc damnat Sabellium personas confundentem et ipsarum distinctionem realem penitus auferentem. Damnatur Arianos, Eunomianos, Macedonianos solum Patrem Deum verum esse dicentes, Filium autem et Spiritum Sanctum in creaturarum ordine collocantes. Damnatur et quoscumque alios, gradus seu inaequalitatem in Trinitate facientes.

1333 Firmissime credit, profitetur et praedicat, unum verum Deum Patrem et Filium et Spiritum Sanctum, esse omnium visibilium et invisibilium creatorem, qui quando voluit, bonitate sua universas, tam spirituales quam corporales, condidit creaturas, bonas quidem, quia a summo bono factae sunt, sed mutabiles, quia de nihilo factae sunt, nullamque mali asserit esse naturam, quia omnis natura, in quantum natura est, bona est.

1334 Unum atque eundem Deum Veteris et Novi Testamenti, hoc est, Legis et Prophetarum atque Evangelii profitetur auctorem, quoniam eodem Spiritu Sancto inspirante utriusque Testamenti Sancti locuti sunt, quorum libros suscipit et veneratur, qui titulis sequentibus continentur:

1335 Quinque Moysi id est Genesi, Exodo, Levitico, Numeris, Deuteronomio; Iosue, Iudicum, Ruth, Quatuor Regum, Duobus Paralipomenon, Esdra, Neemia, Tobia, Iudith, Hester, Iob, Psalmis David, Parabolis, Ecclesiaste, Canticis Canticorum, Sapientia, Ecclesiastico, Isaya, Ieremia, Baruch, Ezechiele, Daniele, Duodecim Prophetis Minoribus id est Osee, Iohel, Amos, Abdia, Iona, Michea, Naum, Abachuc, Sophonia, Ageo, Zacharia, Malachia;

“Because of this unity the Father is entirely in the Son, entirely in the Holy Spirit; the Son is entirely in the Father, entirely in the Holy Spirit; the Holy Spirit is entirely in the Father, entirely in the Son. No one of them precedes another in eternity or excels in greatness or surpasses in power. The existence of the Son from the Father is certainly eternal and without beginning; and the procession of the Holy Spirit from the Father and the Son is eternal and without beginning.”¹ Whatever the Father is or has, he has not from another but from himself and is principle without principle. Whatever the Son is or has, he has from the Father and is principle from principle. Whatever the Holy Spirit is or has, he has from the Father together with the Son. But the Father and the Son are not two principles of the Holy Spirit, but one principle, just as the Father and the Son and the Holy Spirit are not three principles of creation, but one principle.

Therefore she condemns, reproveth, anathematizes, and declares to be outside the body of Christ, which is the Church, whoever holds opposing or contrary views. Hence she condemns Sabellius, who confused the Persons and altogether removed their real distinction. She condemns the Arians, the Eunomians, and the Macedonians, who say that only the Father is true God and place the Son and the Holy Spirit in the order of creatures. She also condemns any others who make degrees or inequalities in the Trinity.

⟨The Holy Roman Church⟩ most firmly believes, professes, and preaches that the one true God, Father, Son, and Holy Spirit, is the creator of all things, visible and invisible, who when he so willed, out of his bounty, made all creatures, spiritual as well as corporeal. They are good since they were made by him who is the highest good, but they are mutable because they were made out of nothing. She asserts that there is no such thing as a nature of evil, because all nature, as nature, is good.

She professes that one and the same God is the author of the Old and the New Testament, that is, of the law and the prophets and of the Gospel; since the saints of both Testaments spoke under the inspiration of the same Holy Spirit, she accepts and venerates their books, whose titles are as follows:

Five ⟨books⟩ of Moses, namely, Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy; Joshua, Judges, Ruth, four ⟨books⟩ of Kings (= two books of Samuel, two books of Kings), two of Paralipomenon (= Chronicles), Ezra, Nehemiah, Tobit, Judith, Esther, Job, Psalms of David, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, Song of Songs, Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus (= Sirach), Isaiah, Jeremiah, Baruch, Ezekiel, Daniel; the twelve minor prophets, namely, *1331 ¹ Cf. Fulgentius of Ruspe, De fide seu de regula fidei ad Petrum 1, no. 4 (J. Fraipont: CpChL 91A [1968]: 714 / PL 65:674AB).

Duobus Machabaeorum, Quatuor Evangeliiis, Mathaei, Marci, Lucae, Iohannis; Quatuordecim Epistolis Pauli, Ad Romanos, Duabus ad Corinthios, Ad Galatas, Ad Ephesios, Ad Philipenses, Duabus ad Thesalonicenses, Ad Colocenses, Duabus ad Timotheum, Ad Titum, Ad Philemonem, Ad Hebraeos; Petri duabus; Tribus Iohannis; Una Iacobi; Una Iudae; Actibus Apostolorum et Apocalypsi Iohannis.

Propterea Manichaeorum anathematizat insaniam, qui duo prima principia posuerunt, unum visibilium, aliud invisibilium; et alium Novi Testamenti Deum, alium Veteris esse dixerunt.

Firmiter credit, profitetur et praedicat, unam ex Trinitate personam, verum Deum, Dei Filium ex Patre genitum, Patri consubstantialem et coaeternum, in plenitudine temporis, quam divini consilii inscrutabilis altitudo disposuit, propter salutem humani generis veram hominis integramque naturam ex immaculato utero Mariae Virginis assumpsisse et sibi in unitatem personae copulasse tanta unitate, ut quidquid ibi Dei est, non sit ab homine separatum, et quidquid est hominis, non sit a deitate divisum, sitque unus et idem indivisus, utraque natura in suis proprietatibus permanente, Deus et homo, Dei Filius et hominis filius, “aequalis Patri secundum divinitatem, minor Patre secundum humanitatem” [*Symbolum pseudo-Athanasium: 76], immortalis et aeternus ex natura divinitatis, passibilis et temporalis ex condicione assumptae humanitatis.

Firmiter credit, profitetur et praedicat, Dei Filium in assumpta humanitate ex Virgine vere natum, vere passum, vere mortuum et sepultum, vere ex mortuis resurrexisse, in caelum ascendisse, sedereque ad dexteram Patris, et venturum in fine saeculorum ad vivos mortuosque iudicandos.

Anathematizat autem, execratur et damnat omnem haeresim contraria sapientem. Et primo damnat Ebionem, Cerinthum, Marcionem, Paulum Samosatenum, Photinum omnesque similiter blasphemantes, qui percipere non valentes unionem personalem humanitatis ad Verbum, Iesum Christum Dominum nostrum verum Deum esse negaverunt, ipsum purum hominem confitentes, qui divinae gratiae participatione maiore, quam sanctoris vitae merito suscepisset, divinus homo diceretur.

Anathematizat etiam Manichaeum cum sectatoribus suis, qui Dei Filium non verum corpus, sed phantasticum sumpsisse somniantes, humanitatis in Christo veritatem penitus sustulerunt.

Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zechariah, Malachi; two books of the Maccabees; the four Gospels of Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John; fourteen letters of Paul, to the Romans, two to the Corinthians, to the Galatians, to the Ephesians, to the Philippians, two to the Thessalonians, to the Colossians, two to Timothy, to Titus, to Philemon, to the Hebrews; two (letters) of Peter, three of John, one of James, one of Jude; Acts of the Apostles; Apocalypse of John.

Hence she anathematizes the madness of the Manichees, who posited two first principles, one of visible things, the other of invisible things, and said that one was the God of the New Testament, the other of the Old Testament. 1336

She firmly believes, professes, and preaches that one Person of the Trinity, true God, Son of God begotten by the Father, consubstantial and coeternal with the Father, in the fullness of time that the inscrutable depth of divine counsel determined, for the salvation of the human race, took a real and complete human nature from the immaculate womb of the Virgin Mary and joined it to himself in a unity of person so profound in unity that whatever is of God there is not separated from man, and whatever is human is not divided from the Godhead, and he is one and the same undivided, each nature perduring in its properties, God and man, Son of God and son of man, “equal to the Father according to his divinity, less than the Father according to his humanity” [*Pseudo-Athanasian Creed: 76], immortal and eternal through the nature of the Godhead, passible and temporal from the condition of assumed humanity. 1337

She firmly believes, professes, and preaches that the Son of God was truly born of the Virgin in his assumed humanity, truly suffered, truly died and was buried, truly rose from the dead, ascended into heaven and sits at the right hand of the Father and will come at the end of time to judge the living and the dead. 1338

She anathematizes, execrates, and condemns every heresy that is tainted with the contrary. First she condemns Ebion, Cerinthus, Marcion, Paul of Samosata, Photinus, and all similar blasphemers who, failing to see the personal union of the humanity with the Word, denied that our Lord Jesus Christ was true God and professed him to be simply a man who by a greater participation in divine grace, which he had received through the merit of his holier life, should be called a divine man. 1339

She anathematizes also Mani and his followers, who, imagining that the Son of God took to himself not a real body but a phantasmal one, completely rejected the truth of the humanity in Christ. 1340

- 1341 Nec non Valentinum asserentem, Dei Filium nihil de Virgine Matre cepisse, sed corpus caeleste sumpsisse, atque ita transisse per uterum Virginis, sicut per aquaeductum defluens aqua transcurrit.
- Furthermore, Valentinus, who declared that the Son of God took nothing from his Virgin Mother but that he assumed a heavenly body and passed through the Virgin's womb like water flowing down an aqueduct.
- 1342 Arium etiam, qui asserens, corpus ex Virgine assumptum anima caruisse, voluit loco animae fuisse deitatem.
- And also Arius, who by his assertion that the body taken from the Virgin had no soul, wanted the Deity to take the place of the soul.
- 1343 Apollinarem quoque, qui intelligens, si anima corpus informans negetur in Christo, humanitatem veram ibidem non fuisse, solam posuit animam sensitivam, sed deitatem Verbi vicem rationalis animae tenuisse.
- And Apollinarius, who, realizing that if the soul informing the body were denied there would be no true humanity in Christ, posited only a sensitive soul and indeed held that the deity of the Word took the place of the rational soul.
- 1344 Anathematizat etiam Theodorum Mopsuestenum atque Nestorium asserentes, humanitatem Dei Filio unitam esse per gratiam et ob id duas in Christo esse personas, sicut duas fatentur esse naturas, cum intelligere non valerent, unionem humanitatis ad Verbum hypostaticam existisse, et propterea negarent Verbi subsistentiam accepisse. Nam secundum hanc blasphemiam non Verbum caro factum est, sed Verbum per gratiam habitavit in carne, hoc est, non Dei Filius homo factus est, sed magis Dei Filius habitavit in homine.
- She anathematizes also Theodore of Mopsuestia and Nestorius, who asserted that the humanity was united to the Son of God through grace and, hence, that there are two persons in Christ just as they profess there are two natures, since they could not understand that the union of the humanity to the Word was hypostatic, and therefore they denied that he had received the subsistence of the Word. For according to this blasphemy the Word was not made flesh, but the Word dwelt in flesh through grace, that is, the Son of God did not become man, but rather the Son of God dwelt in a man.
- 1345 Anathematizat etiam, execratur et damnat Eutychem archimandritam, qui cum intelligeret, iuxta Nestorii blasphemiam veritatem incarnationis excludi, et propterea oportere, quod ita Dei Verbo unita esset humanitas, ut deitatis et humanitatis una esset eademque persona, ac etiam capere non posset, stante pluralitate naturarum, unitatem personae, sicut deitatis et humanitatis in Christo unam posuit esse personam, ita unam asseruit esse naturam, volens ante unionem dualitatem fuisse naturarum, sed in unam naturam in assumptione transiisse, maxima blasphemiam et impietate concedens aut humanitatem in deitatem, aut deitatem in humanitatem esse conversam.
- She also anathematizes, execrates, and condemns the archimandrite Eutyches, who, when he understood that the blasphemy of Nestorius excluded the truth of the Incarnation and that it was therefore necessary for the humanity to be so united to the Word of God that there should be one and the same person of the divinity and the humanity; and also because, granted the plurality of natures, he could not grasp the unity of the person, since he posited one person in Christ of divinity and humanity; so he affirmed that there was one nature, suggesting that before the union there was a duality of natures that passed into a single nature in the act of assumption, thereby conceding a great blasphemy and impiety that either the humanity was converted into the divinity or the divinity into the humanity.
- 1346 Anathematizat etiam, execratur et damnat Macarium Antiochenum omnesque similia sapientes, qui, licet vere de naturarum dualitate et personae unitate sentiret, tamen circa Christi operationes enormiter oberravit dicens, in Christo utriusque naturae unam fuisse operationem unamque voluntatem. Hos omnes cum haeresibus suis anathematizat sacrosancta Romana Ecclesia, affirmans in Christo duas esse voluntates duasque operationes.
- She also anathematizes, execrates, and condemns Macarius of Antioch and all others of similar views who, although they are orthodox on the duality of natures and the unity of person, yet have gone enormously wrong on Christ's principles of action by declaring that of the two natures in Christ, there was only one principle of action and one will. The holy Roman Church anathematizes all of these and their heresies and affirms that in Christ there are two wills and two principles of action.
- 1347 Firmiter credit, profitetur et docet, neminem umquam ex viro feminaque conceptum a diaboli dominatu fuisse
- She firmly believes, professes, and teaches that never was anyone conceived by a man and a woman liberated

liberatum, nisi per fidem¹ mediatoris Dei et hominum Iesu Christi [cf. 1 Tim 2:5] Domini nostri, qui sine peccato conceptus, natus et mortuus, humani generis hostem, peccata nostra delendo, solus sua morte prostravit, et regni caelestis introitum, quem primus homo peccato proprio cum omni successione perdidit, reseravit, quem aliquando venturum omnia Veteris Testamenti sacra sacrificia, sacramenta, caeremoniae praesignarunt.

Firmiter credit, profitetur et docet, legalia Veteris Testamenti, seu Mosaicae legis, quae dividuntur in caeremonias, sacra sacrificia, sacramenta, quia significandi alicuius futuri gratia fuerant instituta, licet divino cultui illa aetate congruerent, significato per illa Domino nostro Iesu Christo adveniente cessasse, et Novi Testamenti sacramenta coepisse. Quicumque etiam post passionem in legalibus spem ponentem et illis velut ad salutem necessariis se subdentem, quasi Christi fides sine illis salvare non posset, peccasse mortaliter. Non tamen negat a Christi passione usque ad promulgatum Evangelium illa potuisse servari, dum tamen minime ad salutem necessaria crederentur, sed post promulgatum Evangelium sine interitu salutis aeternae asserit non posse servari.

Omnes ergo post illud tempus circumcisionis et sabbati reliquorumque legalium observatores alienos a Christi fide denuntiat et salutis aeternae minime posse esse participes, nisi aliquando ab iis erroribus resipiscant. Omnibus igitur, qui christiano nomine gloriantur, praecipit omnino, quocumque tempore, vel ante vel post baptismum, a circumcissione cessandum; quoniam sive quis in ea spem ponat, sive non, sine interitu salutis aeternae observari omnino non potest.

Circa pueros vero propter periculum mortis, quod potest saepe contingere, cum ipsis non possit alio remedio subveniri, nisi per sacramentum baptismi, per quod eripiuntur a diaboli dominatu et in Dei filios adoptantur, admonet, non esse per quadraginta aut octoginta dies seu aliud tempus iuxta quorundam observantiam sacrum baptismum differendum, sed quamprimum commode fieri potest, debere conferri, ita tamen, quod mortis imminente periculo mox sine ulla dilatione baptizentur, etiam per laicum vel mulierem, in forma Ecclesiae, si desit sacerdos, quemadmodum in decreto Armenorum plenius continetur [*1315].

from the devil's dominion except by faith¹ in our Lord Jesus Christ, the Mediator between God and man [cf. 1 Tim 2:5], who without sin was conceived, born, and died. He alone by his death overthrew the enemy of the human race, cancelling our sins, and unlocked the entrance to the heavenly kingdom, which the first man by his own sin, together with all his posterity, had lost. All the holy sacrifices, sacraments, and ceremonies of the Old Testament had prefigured that he would come at some time.

She firmly believes, professes, and teaches that the legal prescriptions of the Old Testament or the Mosaic law, which are divided into ceremonies, holy sacrifices, and sacraments, because they were instituted to signify something in the future, although they were adequate for the divine cult of that age, once our Lord Jesus Christ who was signified by them had come, came to an end and the sacraments of the New Testament had their beginning. Whoever, even after the Passion, places his hope in the legal prescriptions and submits himself to them as necessary for salvation, as if faith in Christ without them could not save, sins mortally. She does not deny that from Christ's Passion until the promulgation of the gospel they could have been retained, provided they were in no way believed to be necessary for salvation. But she asserts that after the promulgation of the gospel they cannot be observed without loss of eternal salvation.

Therefore, she denounces all who after that time observe circumcision, the sabbath, and other legal prescriptions as strangers to the faith of Christ and unable to share in eternal salvation, unless they recoil at some time from these errors. Therefore, she strictly orders all who glory in the name of Christian not to practice circumcision either before or after baptism, since whether or not they place their hope in it, it cannot possibly be observed without loss of eternal salvation.

With regard to children, since the danger of death is often present and the only remedy available to them is the sacrament of baptism by which they are snatched away from the dominion of the devil and adopted as children of God, she admonishes that sacred baptism is not to be deferred for forty or eighty days or any other period of time in accordance with the usage of some people, but it should be conferred as soon as it conveniently can; and if there is imminent danger of death, the child should be baptized straightaway without any delay, even by a layman or woman in the form of the Church, if there is no priest, as is contained more fully in the decree on the Armenians [*1315].

1348

1349

*1347¹ Thus also the original bull of Fulgentius of Ruspe, De fide seu de regula fidei ad Petrum 26, no. 69 (J. Fraipont and C. Lambot: CpChL 91A [1968]: 753 / PL 65:701A [= no. 67]), from which these words are taken; others, in place of fidem, propose the term meritum ("through the merit of Christ") in harmony with the Council of Trent (*1513).

1350 Firmiter credit, profitetur et praedicat, omnem creaturam Dei bonam,¹ “nihilque reiciendum, quod cum gratiarum actione percipitur” [1 Tim 4:4], quia, iuxta verbum Domini, “non quod intrat in os, coinquinat hominem” [Mt 15:11], illamque Mosaicae legis ciborum mundorum et immundorum differentiam ad ceremonialia asserit pertinere, quae surgente Evangelio transierunt et efficacia esse desierunt. Illam etiam Apostolorum prohibitionem “ab immolatis simulacrorum et sanguine et suffocato” [Act 15:29] dicit illi tempori congruisse, quo ex Iudaeis atque gentilibus, qui antea diversis ceremoniis moribusque vivebant, una surgebat Ecclesia, ut cum Iudaeis etiam gentiles aliquid communiter observarent, et in unum Dei cultum fidemque conveniendi praeberetur occasio et dissensionis materia tolleretur, cum Iudaeis propter antiquam consuetudinem sanguis et suffocatum abominabilia viderentur et esu immolatiitii poterant arbitrari gentiles ad idololatriam redituros. Ubi autem eo usque propagata est christiana religio, ut nullus in ea Iudaeus carnalis appareat, sed omnes ad Ecclesiam transeuntes in eosdem ritus Evangelii ceremoniasque conveniant, credentes “omnia munda mundis” [Tit 1:15], illius apostolicae prohibitionis causa cessante, etiam cessavit effectus.

Nullam itaque cibi naturam condemnandam esse denuntiat, quem societas admittit humana, nec inter animalia discernendum per quemcumque, sive virum sive mulierem, et quocumque genere mortis intereant, quamvis pro salute corporis, pro virtutis exercitio, pro regulari et ecclesiastica disciplina possint et debeant multa non negata dimitti, quia, iuxta Apostolum, “omnia licent, sed non omnia expediunt” [1 Cor 6:12; 10:23].

1351 Firmiter credit, profitetur et praedicat, “nullos extra catholicam Ecclesiam existentes, non solum paganos”,¹ sed nec Iudaeos aut haereticos atque schismaticos, aeternae vitae fieri posse participes, sed in ignem aeternum ituros, “qui paratus est diabolo et angelis eius” [Mt 25:41], nisi ante finem vitae eidem fuerint aggregati, tantumque valere ecclesiastici corporis unitatem, ut solum in ea manentibus ad salutem ecclesiastica sacramenta proficiant, et ieiunia, eleemosynae ac cetera pietatis officia et exercitia militiae christianae praemia aeterna parturiant. “Neminemque, quantascumque eleemosynas fecerit, etsi pro Christi nomine sanguinem

She firmly believes, professes, and preaches that every creature of God is good¹ “and nothing is to be rejected if it is received with thanksgiving” [1 Tim 4:4], because according to the word of the Lord “not what goes into the mouth defiles a person” [Mt 15:11] and because the difference in the Mosaic law between clean and unclean foods belongs to ceremonial practices that have passed away and lost their efficacy with the coming of the gospel. It also declares that the apostolic prohibition to “abstain from what has been sacrificed to idols and from blood and from what is strangled” [Acts 15:29] was suited to that time when a single Church was rising from Jews and Gentiles, who had previously lived with different ceremonies and customs. This was so that the Gentiles should have some observances in common with Jews and occasion would be offered of coming together in one worship and faith of God and a cause of dissension might be removed, since by ancient custom blood and strangled things seemed abominable to Jews, and Gentiles could be thought to be returning to idolatry if they ate sacrificial food. As soon as the Christian religion was promulgated to the point that no Jew according to the flesh appeared within it, but all who were joining the Church were sharing in the same rites and ceremonies of the gospel, believing that “to the pure all things are pure” [Tit 1:15]: since the cause of this apostolic prohibition ceased, so its effect also ceased.

She therefore declares that no type of food accepted by human society should be condemned, and no one, whether man or woman, should make any distinction between animals and whatever manner they may have died; although for the health of the body, for the practice of virtue, or for the sake of regular and ecclesiastical discipline many things that are not proscribed can and should be omitted, as the apostle says, “all things are lawful, but not all things are helpful” [1 Cor 6:12; 10:23].

She firmly believes, professes, and preaches that “none of those who are outside of the Catholic Church, not only pagans,”¹ but also Jews, heretics, and schismatics, can become sharers of eternal life, but they will go into the eternal fire “that was prepared for the devil and his angels” [Mt 25:41] unless, before the end of their life, they are joined to her. And the unity of the Church’s body is of such great importance that the Church’s sacraments are beneficial toward salvation only for those who remain within her, and (only for them) do fasts, almsgiving, and other acts of piety and exercises of Christian discipline bring forth eternal rewards. “No one *1350¹ Cf. Fulgentius of Ruspe, De fide seu de regula fidei ad Petrum 42, no. 85 (J. Fraipont and C. Lambot; CpChL 91A [1968]: 758 / PL 65:704CD [= no. 83]).

*1351¹ Fulgentius of Ruspe, De fide seu de regula fidei ad Petrum 38, no. 81 (CpChL 91A:757 / PL 65:704A [= no. 79]).

effuderit, posse salvari, nisi in catholicae Ecclesiae gremio et unitate permanserit.”² can be saved, no matter how many alms he has given, and even if he sheds his blood for the name of Christ, unless he remains in the bosom and unity of the Catholic Church.”²

[There follow the decrees for the Greeks and the Armenians]

Verum quia in suprascripto decreto Armenorum non est explicata forma verborum, quibus in consecratione corporis et sanguinis Domini sacrosancta Romana Ecclesia, Apostolorum Petri et Pauli doctrina et auctoritate firmata, semper uti consuevit, illam praesentibus duximus inserendam. In consecratione corporis Domini hac utitur forma verborum: “Hoc est enim corpus meum”; sanguinis vero: “Hic est enim calix sanguinis mei, novi et aeterni testamenti, mysterium fidei, qui pro vobis et pro multis effundetur in remissionem peccatorum.”

Panis vero triticeus, in quo sacramentum conficitur, an eo die, an antea decoctus sit, nihil omnino refert; dummodo enim panis substantia maneat, nullatenus dubitandum est, quin post praedicta verba consecrationis corporis a sacerdote cum intentione conficiendi prolata, mox in verum Christi corpus transsubstantietur.

Quoniam nonnullos asseritur quartas nuptias tamquam condemnatas respuere, ne peccatum, ubi non est, esse putetur, cum secundum Apostolum mortuo viro mulier sit ab eius lege soluta, et nubendi, cui vult, in Domino habeat facultatem [cf. Rom 7:2; 1 Cor 7:39], nec distinguat, mortuo primo, secundo vel tertio, declaramus non solum secundas ac tertias, sed et quartas atque posteriores, si aliquod canonicum impedimentum non obstat, licite contrahi posse. Commendatiores tamen dicimus, si ulterius a coniugio abstinentes in castitate permanserint, quia, sicut virginitatem viduitati, ita nuptiis castam viduitatem laude ac merito praefendam esse censemus.

But since in the aforesaid decree of the Armenians, the form of the words was not made explicit that the holy Roman Church, confirmed by the teaching and the authority of the apostles Peter and Paul, has always been wont to use in the consecration of the Lord’s Body and Blood, we decided it should be inserted in the present text: In the consecration of body of the Lord, she uses this form of the words: “For this is my body”; and of the blood: “For this is the chalice of my blood, of the new and everlasting covenant, the mystery of faith, which will be shed for you and for many in remission of sins.”

Whether the wheat bread, in which the sacrament is confected, has been baked on the same day or earlier is of absolutely no importance; for as long as the substance of the bread remains, there should be no doubt whatsoever that it is immediately transubstantiated into the true body of Christ after the above-mentioned words of consecration of the body have been pronounced by the priest with the intention of confecting it.

Some are said to reject fourth marriages as condemned, so, lest sin be thought to exist where it does not, since according to the apostle when a husband is dead the wife is free from the law and has the right to marry whom she will in the Lord [cf. Rom 7:2; 1 Cor 7:39], and since he does not distinguish the dead husband as the first, second, or third, we declare that not only second and third, but fourth and further marriages may licitly be contracted if no canonical impediment stands in the way. But we say they are more commendable if they remain in chastity, abstaining from further marriage, for, as virginity is to widowhood, so we deem chaste widowhood to be preferable in praise and merit to marriage.

NICHOLAS V: March 6, 1447–March 24/25, 1455

CALLISTUS III: April 8, 1455–August 6, 1458

1355–1357: Constitution Regimini universalis to the Bishop of Magdeburg, Naumburg, and Halberstadt, May 6, 1455

This constitution is the confirmation of the bull Regimini universalis of July 2, 1425, issued by Martin V in reference to the same question to the bishops of Trier, Lübeck, and Olmutz (Extravagantes communes, 1. III, tit. 5, c. 1 (Frdb 2:1269–71).

Ed.: Extravagantes communes, 1. III, tit. 5, c. 2 (Frdb 2:1271f.).

*1351² Ibid., 39, no. 82 (CpChL 91A:757 / PL 65:704B [= no. 80]).

Usury and Contracts

1355 ... Nobis nuper exhibita petitio continebat, quod licet a tanto tempore, cuius contrarii memoria non exsistit, in diversis Alemanniae partibus, pro communi hominum utilitate, inter habitatores et incolas partium earundem talis inoleverit hactenusque observata fuerit ... consuetudo, quod ipsi habitatores et incolae, sive illi ex eis, quibus id pro suis statu et indemnitatibus expedire visum fuerit, super eorum bonis, domibus, agris, praediis, possessionibus et hereditatibus annuus marcarum, florenorum, seu grossorum monetae in partibus illis currentis reditus seu census vendentes, pro singulis ex marcis florenis sive grossis huiusmodi ab eis, qui illas vel illos, sive reditus sive census ipsos emerint, certum competens pretium in numerata pecunia secundum temporis qualitatem, prout ipsi vendentes et ementes in contractibus super his inter se firmaverunt, et recipere soliti fuere, illa ex domibus, terris, agris, praediis, possessionibus et hereditatibus praedictis, qui in huiusmodi contractibus expressi fuerunt, praedictorum solutione redituum et censuum efficaciter obligantes, in illorum vendentium favorem, hoc adiecto,

quod ipsi pro rata, qua huiusmodi per eos receptam dictis ementibus restituerent in toto vel in parte pecuniam, a solutione redituum seu censuum huiusmodi restitutam pecuniam contingentium liberi forent penitus et immunes, sed iidem ementes, etiamsi bona, domus, terrae, agri, possessiones et hereditates huiusmodi processu temporis ad omnimodae destructionis sive desolationis reducerentur opprobrium, pecuniam ipsam etiam agendo repetere non valerent.

1356 Apud aliquos tamen haesitationis versatur scrupulus, an huiusmodi contractus liciti sint censendi. Unde nonnulli, illos usurarios fore praetendentes, occasionem quaerunt reditus et census huiusmodi ab eis debitos non solvendi...

1357 Nos igitur ... ad omne super his ambiguitatis tollendum dubium, praefatos contractus licitos iurique conformes et vendentes eosdem ad ipsorum solutionem censuum et redituum iuxta dictorum contractuum tenores, remoto contradictionis obstaculo, efficaciter teneri, auctoritate Apostolica praesentium serie declaramus.

... A petition recently addressed to Us said that for a very long time (and nothing to the contrary is remembered), in various parts of Germany, for the common good of men, among the inhabitants and residents of these same regions, a certain ... custom has taken root that has been observed up to the present time. By this custom, these inhabitants—or, at least, those among them who, in the light of their condition and indemnities, seemed likely to profit from the arrangement—encumber their goods, their houses, their fields, their farms, their possessions, and their inheritances, selling the revenues or annual rents in marks, florins, or groats (according as this or that coin is current in those particular regions), and for each mark, florin, or groat in question, from those who have bought those coins, whether as revenues or as rents, have been in the habit of receiving a certain price appropriately fixed as to size according to the character of the particular circumstances, in conformity with the agreements made in respect of the relevant properties between themselves and the buyers. As guarantee for the payment of the aforesaid revenues and rents, they mortgage those of the aforesaid houses, lands, fields, farms, possessions, and inheritances that have been expressly named in the relevant contracts.

In the favor of the sellers it is added to the contract that in proportion as they have, in whole or in part, returned to the said buyers the money thus received, they are entirely quit and free of the obligation to pay the revenues and rents corresponding to the sum returned.

But the buyers, on the other hand, even though the said goods, houses, lands, fields, possessions, and inheritances might by the passage of time be reduced to utter destruction and desolation, would not be empowered to recover even in respect of the price paid.

Now, by some a certain doubt and hesitation is entertained as to whether contracts of this kind are to be considered licit. Consequently, certain debtors, pretending these contracts would be usurious, seek to find thereby an occasion for the nonpayment of revenues and rents owed by them in this way...

We, therefore, ... in order to remove every doubt springing from these hesitations, by Our apostolic authority, do declare by these present (writings) that the aforesaid contracts are licit and in agreement with law and that the said sellers, yielding all opposition, are effectively bound to the payment of the rents and revenues in conformity with the terms of the said contracts.

PIUS II: August 19, 1458–August 14, 1464

1361–1369: Propositions of Zaninus de Solcia Condemned in the Letter Cum sicut accepimus, November 14, 1459

Zaninus, a canon of Bergamo, advanced views that Pius II described as “most pernicious errors” (perniciosissimos errores), violating “the doctrines of the holy Fathers” (contra sanctorum Patrum dogmata). Although Zaninus de Solcia recanted in the presence of the inquisitor and the papal examining magistrate, at the order of this bull, whose character is largely disciplinary, he was committed to the permanent custody of a monastery.

Ed.: DuPIA 1/II, 254a / BarAE, at year 1459, no. 31 (Theiner 29:192).

Errors of Zaninus de Solcia

- | | | |
|---|---|-------------|
| (1) Mundum naturaliter consumi et finiri debere, humiditatem terrae et aëris calore solis consumente, ita ut elementa accendantur. | (1) The world should be naturally destroyed and ended by the heat of the sun consuming the humidity of the land and the air in such a way that the elements are set on fire. | 1361 |
| (2) Et omnes Christianos salvandos esse. | (2) All Christians are to be saved. | 1362 |
| (3) Deum quoque alium mundum ab isto creasse, et in eius tempore multos alios viros et mulieres exstitisse, et per consequens Adam primum hominem non fuisse. | (3) God created another world than this one, and in its time many other men and women existed, and consequently Adam was not the first man. | 1363 |
| (4) Item Iesum Christum non pro redemptione ob amorem humani generis, sed stellarum necessitate passum et mortuum esse. | (4) Likewise, Jesus Christ suffered and died, not for the redemption out of love for the human race, but by the compelling influence of the stars. | 1364 |
| (5) Item Iesum Christum, Moysen et Mahometem mundum pro suarum libito voluntatum rexisse. | (5) Likewise, Jesus Christ, Moses, and Muhammad ruled the world by the pleasure of their wills. | 1365 |
| (6) Necnon eundem Dominum nostrum Iesum illegitimum, et in hostia consecrata non quoad humanitatem, sed divinitatem dumtaxat exsistere. | (6) And the same Lord our Jesus (is) illegitimate and exists in the consecrated hosts, not with respect to his humanity, but with respect to his divinity only. | 1366 |
| (7) Extra matrimonium luxuriam non esse peccatum, nisi legum positivarum prohibitione, easque propterea minus bene disposuisse, et sola prohibitione ecclesiastica se fraenari, quominus Epicuri opinionem ut veram sectaretur. | (7) Wantonness outside of marriage is only a sin because of its prohibition by positive law, and this is why these (things) have not been well regulated; and it is only because of ecclesiastical prohibition that one is restrained from following the opinion of Epicurus as true. | 1367 |
| (8) Praeterea rem auferre alienam non esse peccatum mortale etiam domino invito. | (8) Moreover, the taking away of another’s property is not a mortal sin, even though against the will of the owner. | 1368 |
| (9) Legem denique Christianam per successionem alterius legis finem habituram, quemadmodum Lex Moysi per Legem Christi terminata fuit. | (9) Finally, the Christian law through the succession of another law is about to have an end, just as the law of Moses has been terminated by the law of Christ. | 1369 |

1375: Bull Exsecrabilis, January 18, 1460 (Florentine style, 1459)

This bull is of importance in the controversy about the “conciliar theory”. Its author, Pius II (Enea Silvio de’ Piccolomini), before becoming a priest, had been an ardent defender of conciliarism and of the (by then schismatic) Council of Basel: cf. his Libellum dialogorum de generalis concilii auctoritate, written in 1440. In this bull as well as in other documents, he expressly retracted his earlier opinion. His plea, made in the bull In minoribus agentes, April 26, 1463, addressed to the University of Cologne (to which he had dedicated his Libellum mentioned above), is particularly famous: “Reject Aeneas, accept Pius!” (Aeneam reicite, Pium recipite! BullTau 5:175a / BullCocq 3/III, 101b / HaC 9:1452C). He had already previously condemned conciliarism in the bull Infructuosas palmites, November 2, 1460 (BarAE, at year 1460, no. 35 / Theiner 29:232f.). This condemnation of an appeal from the pope to a general council was also incorporated in the Codex iuris canonici of 1917: can. 2332, in which those making such an appeal are declared to be “suspect of heresy” (haeresis suspecti).—In giving the date of the promulgation of the bull Exsecrabilis (which happened at Mantua), sources differ; cf. L. von Pastor, Geschichte der Päpste 2 (Freiburg, 1923⁵⁻⁷), 80, n. 2.

Ed.: BullTau 5:149b–150a / BullCocq 3 / III, 97b–98a.

Appeal from the Pope to a General Council

1375 Exsecrabilis et pristinis temporibus inauditus tempestate nostra inolevit abusus, ut a Romano Pontifice, Iesu Christi vicario, cui dictum est in persona beati Petri: “Pascite oves meas” [Io 21:17], et: “Quodcumque ligaveris super terram, erit ligatum et in caelis” [Mt 16:19], nonnulli spiritu rebellionis imbuti, non sanioris cupiditate iudicii, sed commissi evasione peccati ad futurum concilium provocare praesumant.... Volentes igitur hoc pestiferum virus a Christi Ecclesia procul pellere ..., huiusmodi provocationes damnamus et tamquam erroneas ac detestabiles reprobamus.

In our period there has sprung up the execrable abuse, unheard of in primitive times, whereby some, imbued with a spirit of rebellion, not through desire of a better judgment, but to evade the sin they have committed, presume to appeal to a future council away from (a decision of) the Roman pontiff, the vicar of Jesus Christ, to whom it was said in the person of blessed Peter: “Feed my sheep” [Jn 21:17], and “Whatever you bind on earth shall be bound in heaven” [Mt 16:19].... Wishing, therefore, to drive far from the Church of Christ this pestiferous poison ..., we condemn appeals of this sort and reject them as erroneous and detestable.

1385: Bull Ineffabilis summi providentia Patris, August 1, 1464

Because of an Easter sermon given in Brescia in 1462 by St. James of the March, O.F.M., a dispute arose between the Dominicans and the Franciscans over whether the blood poured out by Christ was separated from his divinity until the Resurrection (as St. James, following the common teaching of the Franciscans, held) or was not (according to the general rule of the Dominicans). The Franciscan position was described as heresy by [the Dominican] James of Brescia. The pope did not wish to antagonize either of the two parties and, therefore, imposed silence on both. Cf., however, the censure of *2663!

Ed.: BullTau 5:181ab / BullCocq 3/III, 116ab / BullOP 3 (Rome, 1731), 434.

The Blood of Christ during the Three Days of Death

1385 ... Auctoritate Apostolica tenore praesentium statuimus et ordinamus, quod nulli Fratrum praedictorum [Minorum et Praedicatorum] deinceps liceat de supradicta dubietate disputare, praedicare, vel publice aut private verbum facere, seu aliis suadere, quod videlicet haereticum vel peccatum sit tenere vel credere, sanguinem ipsum sacratissimum (ut praemittitur) triduo passionis eiusdem Domini nostri Iesu Christi ab ipsa divinitate quomodolibet fuisse vel non fuisse divisum vel separatum, donec super dubietatis huiusmodi decisione quid tenendum sit, fuerit per Nos et Sedem Apostolicam definitum.

... In virtue of apostolic authority, We establish and ordain, on the basis of the these present (writings), that none of the aforesaid brothers [of the Friar Minors and Order of Preachers] are permitted henceforth to dispute, to preach, or to speak publicly or privately on the above-mentioned doubt, or to persuade others that it is manifestly a heresy or a sin to hold or believe that the most sacred blood itself (as it is presupposed), in the three days of the Passion of our Lord Jesus Christ, was or was not divided or separated in some manner from the divinity itself, (and this) until, through a decision on this uncertain question, what must be held is defined by Us and the Apostolic See.

PAUL II: August 30, 1464–July 26, 1471

SIXTUS IV: August 9, 1471–August 12, 1484

1391–1396: Propositions of Peter de Rivo Condemned in the Bull Ad Christi vicarii, January 3, 1474: Document of Retraction

Peter de Rivo, a professor at Louvain University, in his Quodlibet of 1465 advanced views in opposition to those of the professors of the same university and of the University of Paris as well as Francesco della Rovere, the future Pope Sixtus IV, who was writing a Tractatus de futuris contingentibus. When Peter de Rivo went to Rome to defend himself, he was forced to retract five propositions. These are recorded in a text of retraction that was demanded of him by the judges on March 19, 1473. When Peter had recourse to new interpretations, the bull of condemnation followed.

Ed.: DuPIA 1/II, 279b.

Errors on the Truth of Future Events

(1) Elisabeth Luc. 1, cum loquitur beatæ Mariæ Virgini dicens: “Beata quæ credidisti, quoniam perficientur in te, quæ dicta sunt tibi a Domino” [Lc 1:45], innuere videtur, illas propositiones, scilicet “Paries filium et vocabis nomen eius Iesum; hic erit magnus” etc. [Lc 1:31s], nondum habere veritatem.

(2) Item Luc. ult. Christus post resurrectionem dicens: “Necesse est impleri omnia, quæ scripta sunt in lege Moysis et Prophetis et Psalmis de me” [Lc 24:44], videtur innuisse, quod tales propositiones vacuæ erant veritatis.

(3) Item ad Hebr. 10, ubi Apostolus inquit: “Umbram habens lex futurorum bonorum” et “non ipsam imaginem rerum” [Hbr 10:1], innuere videtur, quod propositiones Veteris Legis, quæ erant de futuro, nondum habebant determinatam veritatem.

(4) Item, quod non sufficit ad veritatem propositionis de futuro, quod res erit, sed requiritur, quod inimpedibiliter erit.

(5) Item necesse est dicere alterum duorum: aut quod in articulis fidei de futuro non est præsens et actualis veritas, aut quod significatum eorum per potentiam divinam non potuit impediri.

[Censura.:] scandalosæ et a catholicæ fidei semita deviaæ.

(1) When Elizabeth spoke to the Blessed Virgin Mary, saying: “Blessed is she who believed that there would be a fulfillment of what was spoken to her from the Lord” [Lk 1:45], she seemed to intimate that those propositions, namely: “You will conceive in your womb and bear a son, and you shall call his name Jesus. He will be great”, and so on [Lk 1:31–32], do not yet contain truth. 1391

(2) Likewise, when Christ after his Resurrection said: “Everything written about me in the law of Moses and the prophets and the psalms must be fulfilled” [Lk 24:44], he seems to have implied that such propositions were devoid of truth. 1392

(3) Likewise, when the apostle said: “For since the law has but a shadow of the good things to come instead of the true form of these realities” [Hbr 10:1], he seems to imply that the propositions of the Old Law that concerned the future did not yet contain the prescribed truth. 1393

(4) Likewise, that it does not suffice for the truth of the proposition concerning the future that the thing will be, but there is required that it will be without impediment. 1394

(5) Likewise, it is necessary to say one of two things, either that there is no present or actual truth in the articles of faith concerning the future or that what is signified by them could not have been hindered by divine power. 1395

[Censure.:] scandalous and deviating from the path of Catholic faith. 1396

1398: Bull Salvator noster in Support of the Church of St. Peter at Saintes, August 3, 1476

What distinguishes this bull from the other bulls previously issued concerning indulgences is the application of a plenary indulgence to the dead by way of suffrages. Because this concession was the object of an erroneous and abusive interpretation, Sixtus IV, in another bull (*1405–1407), explained its meaning. R. Peraudi, a canon of Saintes and papal commissioner for the granting of these indulgences, wrote a Summaria declaratio for the bull Salvator noster to which later instructions on indulgences refer.

Ed.: Archives historiques de la Saintonge et de l'Aunis 10 (1882), 64 / N. Paulus, in HJb 21 (1900): 649f., n. 4 / N. Paulus, Geschichte des Ablasses im Mittelalter 3 (Paderborn, 1923), 382, n. 3.

Indulgences for the Dead

Et ut animarum salus eo tempore potius procuretur, quo magis aliorum egent suffragiis et quo minus sibi ipsis proficere valent, auctoritate Apostolica de thesauro Ecclesiæ animabus in purgatorio exsistentibus succurrere volentes, quæ per caritatem ab hac luce Christo unitæ decesserunt ac quæ, dum viverent, sibi ut huiusmodi indulgentia suffragaretur, meruerunt, paterno cupientes affectu, quantum cum Deo possumus, de divina misericordia confisi ac de plenitudine potestatis concedimus pariter ac indulgemus, ut si qui parentes, amici aut ceteri Christi fideles pietate commoti pro ipsis animabus purgatorio igni pro expiatione poenarum eisdem secundum divinam iustitiam debitæ expositis,

And in order to procure the welfare of souls especially during the time when they are more (than ever) in need of the suffrages of others and when they are less (than ever) able to help themselves, in virtue of our apostolic authority, we wish, with the treasury of the Church, to come to the assistance of the souls lingering in purgatory who left the light (of this world) united with Christ by charity and who, while they lived, merited that they be favored by such indulgence, and, moved by paternal affection and trusting in the divine mercy and in the fullness of power, we concede and also grant, to the extent we can with God, that if parents, friends, or other faithful of Christ—moved by piety on behalf of 1398

durante dicto decennio pro reparatione ecclesiae Xanctonenensis certam pecuniarum quotam aut valorem iuxta decani et capituli dictae ecclesiae aut nostri collectoris ordinationem dictam ecclesiam visitando dederint aut per nuntios ab eisdem deputandos durante dicto decennio miserint, volumus ipsam plenariam remissionem per modum suffragii [cf. *1405s] ipsis animabus purgatorii, pro quibus dictam quotam pecuniarum aut valorem persolverint, ut praefertur, pro relaxatione poenarum valere ac suffragari.

these souls in purgatory who are exposed to fire in expiation of the punishments due to them according to divine justice—should give during the aforementioned ten-year period a certain sum of money or value for the repair of the church of Saintes, while visiting this church, according to the disposition of the dean or overseer of this church or our collector; or if they send this by a messenger delegated by the same during the aforesaid period of ten years, we wish that the same plenary indulgence by way of suffrage [cf. 1405f.] be effective for the mitigation of sufferings and for the benefit of those souls in purgatory for which—as it is presupposed—they offered the indicated sum of money or value.

1400: Constitution Cum praeexcelsa, February 27, 1477 (1476 in the dating of the curia)

The doctrine of the Immaculate Conception of Mary, upheld in particular by the Scotists, had been supported by the council Fathers who remained at Basel. In session 36 of September 17, 1439, the council Fathers declared: “We define . . . that the doctrine that maintains that the glorious Virgin and Mother of God, Mary, by the power of a singular prevenient grace and the working of the divine will, was never subject to original sin but was always in a state immune from actual and original fault, holy and immaculate, is to be approved by all Catholics as pious and in conformity with ecclesiastical custom, the Catholic faith, right reason, and Sacred Scripture . . . and that henceforth it is not permitted for anyone to preach or teach to the contrary” (Nos doctrinam illam disserentem gloriosam Virginem Dei genitricem Mariam, paeveniente et operante divini numinis gratia singulari, nunquam subiacuisse originali peccato, sed immunem semper fuisse ab originali et actuali culpa sanctamque et immaculatam, tamquam piam et consonam cultui ecclesiastico, fidei catholicae, rectae rationi et s. Scripturae, ab omnibus catholicis approbandam . . . definimus nullique de cetero licitum esse in contrarium praedicare seu docere; MaC 29:183BC).

During the pontificate of Sixtus IV, Nicholas of Pornussio, O.P., and Vincenzo Bandello, O.P., aimed sharp attacks against this doctrine. By approving, through this constitution, the texts of the Mass and Office Sicut liliam in honor of the Immaculate Conception of Mary composed by Leonardo of Nogarola and attaching an indulgence to it, Sixtus IV (of the Order of Friars Minor) likewise expressed his favor of the free acceptance of the Scotist doctrine. He made himself an advocate of this doctrine a second time by the constitution Grave nimis, which exists in two redactions differing slightly from each other: the first—issued in 1482—is directed only against the Dominicans of Lombardy; the second—of September 4, 1483 (cf. *1425f.)—is directed in a general way against the Dominicans who were condemning the advocates of the Immaculate Conception. The doctrine was definitively established only by the constitution of Clement XI Commissi nobis divinitus of December 6, 1708, in which the universal celebration of the feast of the Immaculate Conception of Mary was prescribed (BullTau 21:338ab). The definition took place in 1854 through the initiative of Pius IX (*2800–2804).

Ed.: C. Sericoli, Immaculata B.M.V. Conceptio iuxta Xysti IV Constitutiones, Bibliotheca Mariana Medii Aevi, Textus et Disquisitiones 5 (Sibenici and Rome, 1945), 153f. (critical ed.) / Extravagantes communes, l. III, tit. 12, c. 1 (Frdb 2:1285) / HaC 9:1493E–1494E.

The Immaculate Conception of Mary

Cum praeexcelsa meritorum insignia, quibus regina caelorum, Virgo Dei genitrix gloriosa, sedibus praelata aethereis, sideribus quasi stella matutina praeutilat, devotae considerationis indagine perscrutamur . . . : dignum, quin potius debitum reputamus, universos Christi fideles, ut omnipotenti Deo (cuius providentia eiusdem Virginis humilitatem ab aeterno respiciens, pro reconcilianda suo auctori humana natura lapsu primi hominis aeternae morti obnoxia, eam sui Unigeniti habitaculum Sancti Spiritus praeparatione constituit, ex qua carnem nostrae mortalitatis pro redemptione populi sui assumeret, et immaculata Virgo nihilominus post partum remaneret) de ipsius immaculatae Virginis mira conceptione gratias et laudes referant, et instituta propterea in Dei Ecclesia Missas et alia divina officia dicant, et illis intersint, indulgentiis et peccatorum

When we carefully examine, by exploring with devout contemplation, the surpassing marks of merit with which the Queen of Heaven, the glorious Virgin Mother of God, enthroned in heavenly places, shone like the morning star among the constellations . . . : we judge it proper, or rather a duty, to invite all the faithful of Christ, for the pardon and remission of their sins, to render thanks and praise for the wonderful conception of this immaculate Virgin to almighty God (whose providence, beholding from eternity the humility of this same Virgin, wishing to reconcile with its creator the human nature subjected to eternal death by the fall of the first man, through the preparation of the Holy Spirit, constituted her as the dwelling place of his only begotten Son, from whom he assumed the flesh of our mortal condition for the redemption of his people, and, nevertheless, she remained the immaculate Virgin even after childbirth); and they should celebrate the Mass and the other divine offices instituted for this purpose in the Church of God and attend them, so that, by the merits and intercessions of the same Virgin, they may become more worthy of divine grace.

remissionibus invitare, ut exinde fiant eiusdem Virginis meritis et intercessione divinae gratiae aptiores.

1405–1407: Encyclical Romani Pontificis provida, November 27, 1477

Cf. *1398.

Ed.: E. Amort, De origine, progressu, valore ac fructu indulgentiarum ... 2 (Augsburg, 1735), 292b–293b / partially recorded more accurately in N. Paulus, Geschichte des Ablasses im Mittelalter 3 (Paderborn, 1923), 384 / W. Köhler, Dokumente zum Ablassstreit von 1517, 2nd ed. (Tübingen, 1934), 39f. (no. 25).

The Meaning of the Words “Per Modum Suffragii” (By Way of Suffrage)

Cum itaque superioribus mensibus Nobis relatum esset, in publicatione indulgentiae per Nos alias ecclesiae Xanctonensi concessae [*1398], plura scandala et discrimina fuisse exorta praedicantesque ... occasione dictae indulgentiae, quam animabus in purgatorio existentibus per modum suffragii concessimus, nonnullos scripta Nostra male interpretantes publice asseruisse atque asserere, non esse ultra opus, pro animabus ipsis orare aut pia suffragia facere. Ex quo quam plurimi a bene agendo retrahebantur.

Nos scandalis et erroribus huiusmodi ex pastoralis officio obviare volentes per Brevia Nostra ad diversos illarum partium praelatos scripsimus, ut Christi fidelibus declarent, ipsam plenam indulgentiam pro animabus existentibus in purgatorio per modum suffragii per Nos fuisse concessam, non ut per indulgentiam praedictam Christi fideles ipsi a piis et bonis operibus revocarentur, sed ut illa in modum suffragii animarum saluti prodesset; perindeque ea indulgentia proficeret, acsi devotae orationes piaequae eleemosynae pro earundem animarum salute dicerentur et offerrentur.

Nuper vero non sine gravi animi Nostri displicentia intelleximus, nonnullos minus recte et longe aliter quam intentio Nostra fuerit aut sit, huiusmodi verba interpretatos esse.... Non enim Nos ... ad supradictos praelatos scripsimus et declaravimus, supradictam indulgentiam plenariam animabus in purgatorio existentibus, acsi fierent pro eisdevotae orationes piaequae eleemosynae efficerentur, videre prodesset, non quod intenderemus, prout nec intendimus, neque etiam inferre vellemus, indulgentiam non plus proficere aut valere quam eleemosynae et orationes, aut eleemosynas et orationes tantum proficere tantumque valere quantum indulgentia per modum suffragii, cum sciamus orationes et eleemosynas et indulgentiam per modum suffragii longe distare; sed eam “perinde” valere diximus, id est, per eum modum, “ac si” id est per quem orationes et

Since it has been reported to Us in recent months that upon the publication of the indulgence granted by Us on another occasion [*1398] to the church of Saintes, various scandals and dangers have arisen and that some preachers,... badly interpreting Our writings, have publicly asserted and continue to assert, on the occasion of the said indulgence, which We granted by way of suffrage for the souls in purgatory, that there is no further need to pray or make devout suffrage for such souls. By this, many were drawn away from doing good.

Wishing out of pastoral duty to prevent scandals and errors of this sort, We have written through Our Brief to different prelates in those parts, saying that they should declare to Christ’s faithful that the plenary indulgence was conceded by Us for the souls in purgatory by way of suffrage, not so that the faithful of Christ should be drawn away by the aforesaid indulgence from good and pious works, but so that it should be of advantage for the welfare of souls by way of suffrage; and that the indulgence would be of advantage in just the same way as if devout prayers and pious alms were said and offered for the welfare of the same souls.

Recently, however, We have learned, not without grave displeasure to Our spirit, that some have interpreted these words incorrectly and quite differently from what was, or is, Our intention.... For We ... wrote and declared to the above-mentioned prelates that the above-mentioned plenary indulgence for the souls in purgatory seemed to be of benefit as if devout prayers were made for them or pious alms were given; not because We meant, nor do We now mean, nor do We wish it to be inferred, that the indulgence is no more beneficial or avails no more than alms and prayers or that alms and prayers benefit and avail as much as the indulgence by way of suffrage; for We know prayers and alms and the indulgence by way of suffrage differ greatly; but We have said the indulgence avails “just as if”, that is, in the same way “as if”; that is, in (the way) through which prayers and alms avail.

eleemosynae valent. Et quoniam orationes et eleemosynae valent tamquam suffragia animabus impensa, Nos, quibus plenitudo potestatis ex alto est attributa, de thesauro universalis Ecclesiae, qui ex Christi Sanctorumque eius meritis constat, Nobis commisso, auxilium et suffragium animabus purgatorii afferre cupientes supradictam concessimus indulgentiam, ita tamen, ut fideles ipsi pro eisdem animabus suffragium darent, quod ipsae defunctorum animae per se nequeant adimplere. Haec in scriptis Nostris sensimus et sentimus. . . .

1407 Ut igitur sanctum et laudabile desiderium hoc Nostrum a nullo potest iure damnari, etiam intentio et sana mens, quae non nisi ad apertum bonum intendit, impugnari per ambiguitatis medium non debet, cum secundum theologicae disciplinae rationem quaecumque propositio dubium intellectum in se continens semper in eo sensu sit accipienda, in quo vera redditur locutio.

Quamobrem . . . praesentium tenore motu proprio decernimus et declaramus, in quibuscumque scriptis Nostris semper Nostrae intentionis fuisse et nunc esse: ipsam plenariam indulgentiam per modum suffragii animabus in purgatorio existentibus concessam sic valere et suffragari, quemadmodum communis Doctorum schola eas valere et suffragari concedit.

And since prayers and alms do avail as suffrages offered up for souls, We, to whom the plenitude of power has been attributed from on high, have granted the above-mentioned indulgence, desiring to bring to the souls in purgatory help and suffrage from the treasury of the universal Church, committed to Us, which consists of the merits of Christ and his saints; in such a way, however, that the faithful themselves should make suffrage for those souls that those souls of the dead cannot achieve for themselves. This is what We meant and mean in Our writings. . . .

Therefore, just as this Our holy and laudable desire may not be justly condemned by anyone, so also Our intention and sound mind, which aims only at an obvious good, must not be impugned by recourse to ambiguity; for it is the rule in studying theology that any proposition containing a doubtful meaning should always be taken in that sense which renders the statement true.

Wherefore . . . by the tenor of these present (writings), We decree and declare, of Our own initiative, that Our meaning in all of Our writings always was and now is that the plenary indulgence granted, by way of suffrage, for the souls in purgatory avails and is of suffrage in the way in which the general school of Doctors grants that (such indulgences) avail and are of suffrage.

1411–1419: Propositions of Peter of Osma Condemned in the Bull Licet ea quae de nostro mandato, August 9, 1479

In the lost work De confessione of Peter Martínez of Osma, professor at Salamanca, erroneous theses were advanced regarding confessions, indulgences, and the power of the Roman pontiff. On December 15, 1476, these theses were censured by the capitular vicar of Saragossa and on May 24, 1479, by the theologians assembled under the authority of Archbishop Alfonso Carillo of Toledo in Alcalá de Henares. In his bull, Sixtus IV adopts their judgment as his own. Of the eleven propositions of Alcalá, three are not included (namely, 7, 10, and 11: worth noting is proposition 7: “The Church of the city of Rome is able to err” [Ecclesia urbis Romae errare potest]); the other propositions are recorded with slight differences and in another sequence. See the text of the propositions of Alcalá in M. Menéndez y Pelayo, Historia de los heterodoxos españoles 2, in Obras completas, Edición nacional, vol. 36 (Santander, 1947), 381f., n. Peter of Osma retracted his errors before the bull was issued.

Ed.: BullTau 5:265a / BullCocq 3/III, 171b / DuPIA 1/II, 301b.

Errors concerning Sacramental Confession and Indulgences

- | | | |
|-------------|---|--|
| 1411 | (1) Confessionem peccatorum in specie, ex universalis Ecclesiae realiter statuto, non divino iure compertam fore. | (1) The confession of sins in detail was actually (established) by a decree of the universal Church (and) was not known by divine law. |
| 1412 | (2) Peccata mortalia quoad culpam et poenam alterius saeculi absque confessione, sola cordis contritione, | (2) Mortal sins are taken away, without confession, by contrition of heart alone as regards both guilt and punishment in the next world, |
| 1413 | (3) pravus vero cogitationes sola displicentia deleri. | (3) and bad thoughts simply by displeasure. |
| 1414 | (4) Quod confessio secreta sit, necessario non exigi. | (4) It is not necessarily demanded that confession be secret. |
| 1415 | (5) Non peracta paenitentia, confitentes absolvi non debere. | (5) If the penance has not been completed, those confessing ought not to be absolved. |
| 1416 | (6) Romanum Pontificem purgatorii poenam remittere | (6) The Roman pontiff cannot remit the punishment of purgatory |

(7) et super his, quae universalis Ecclesia statuit, dispensare non posse.

(8) Sacramentum quoque paenitentiae, quantum ad collationem gratiae, naturae, non autem institutionis Novi vel Veteris Testamenti existere.

[Censura:] Pro potioris cautelae suffragio, omnes et singulas propositiones praedictas falsas, sanctae catholicae fidei contrarias, erroneas et scandalosas et ab evangelica veritate penitus alienas, sanctorum quoque Patrum decretis et aliis Apostolicis constitutionibus contrarias fore ac manifestam haeresim continere ... declaramus.

(7) or dispense from things laid down by the universal Church. 1417

(8) The sacrament of penance is, as regards the bestowal of grace, (a sacrament) of nature but not an institution of the New or Old Testament. 1418

[Censure:] For greater safety's sake, We declare ... each and all the foregoing propositions to be false, contrary to the holy Catholic faith, erroneous, scandalous, and altogether removed from evangelical truth, contrary to the decrees of the holy Fathers and other apostolic constitutions, and to contain manifest heresy. 1419

1425–1426: Constitution Grave nimis, September 4, 1483

Cf. *1400.

Ed.: C. Sericoli, Immaculata B.M.V. Conceptio iuxta Xysti IV Constitutiones, Bibliotheca Mariana Medii Aevi, Textus et Disquisitiones 5 (Sibeni and Rome, 1945), 159f. / Extravagantes communes, I. III, tit. 12, c. 2 (Frdb 2:1286) / HaC 9:1495C–1496B.

The Immaculate Conception of Mary

Sane cum sancta Romana Ecclesia de intemeratae semperque Virginis Mariae conceptione publice festum solemniter celebret, et speciale ac proprium super hoc officium ordinaverit, nonnulli, ut accepimus, diversorum ordinum praedicatorum in suis sermonibus ad populum publice per diversas civitates et terras affirmare hactenus non erubuerunt, et quotidie praedicare non cessant, omnes illos, qui tenent aut asserunt, eandem gloriosam et immaculatam Dei genitricem absque originalis peccati macula fuisse conceptam, mortaliter peccare, vel esse haereticos, eiusdem immaculatae conceptionis officium celebrantes, audientesque sermones illorum, qui eam sine huiusmodi macula conceptam esse affirmant, peccare graviter.

... Nos igitur huiusmodi temerariis ausibus ... obviare volentes, motu proprio, non ad alicuius Nobis super hoc oblatae petitionis instantiam, sed de Nostra mera deliberatione et certa scientia, huiusmodi assertiones praedicatorum eorundem et aliorum quorumlibet qui affirmare praesumerent, eos, qui crederent aut tenerent, eandem Dei genitricem ab originalis peccati macula in sua conceptione praeservatam fuisse, propterea alicuius haeresis labe pollutos fore vel mortaliter peccare, aut huiusmodi officium conceptionis celebrantes seu huiusmodi sermones audientes alicuius peccati reatum incurrere, utpote falsas et erroneas et a veritate penitus alienas, editosque desuper libris praedictos, id continentibus, quoad hoc auctoritate Apostolica tenore praesentium reprobamus et damnamus; ... simili poenae ac censurae subiicientes eos, qui ausi fuerint asserere, contrariam opinionem tenentes, videlicet gloriosam Virginem Mariam cum originali peccato fuisse conceptam, haeresis crimen vel peccatum incurrere mortale, cum nondum sit a Romana Ecclesia et Apostolica Sede decisum. ...

Although the holy Roman Church publicly and solemnly celebrates the feast of the conception of the spotless and ever-virgin Mary and has instituted a special and proper office for this (feast), certain preachers of various orders—as We have learned—have not been ashamed up until now to affirm publicly to people of diverse cities and regions, and do not cease to preach every day, that all sin mortally or are heretics who hold or assert that the same glorious and immaculate Mother of God was conceived without the stain of original sin; and that they sin grievously if they celebrate the office of the same immaculate conception and listen to the sermons of those who affirm that (Mary) was conceived without this stain (of original sin). 1425

... We, therefore, wishing to oppose such irresponsible boldness ... by Our own initiative and not by the insistence of anyone's request presented to Us on this subject, but only through our deliberation and certain knowledge, condemn and reprove those types of assertions of preachers and any others who dare to assert that those who believe and hold that the Mother of God was, in her conception, preserved from the stain of original sin are, because of this, polluted by the stain of heresy or sin mortally; or if (they) celebrate this office of (Mary's) conception or listen to such sermons they incur the guilt of some sin; and (likewise) in virtue of apostolic authority, on the basis of these present (writings), (We condemn such affirmations) as false and erroneous and completely contrary to the truth as well as the aforesaid books that have been published with this content; ... and We place a similar penalty and censure on those who dare to assert that people who hold the contrary opinion—namely, that the Virgin Mary was conceived with original sin—incur the crime of heresy or mortal sin, since the matter has not yet been decided by the Roman Church and the Apostolic See.... 1426

INNOCENT VIII: August 29, 1484–July 25, 1492

1435: Bull Exposcit tuae devotionis to Jean de Cirey, Abbot of the Monastery of Cîteaux, Diocese of Chalon-sur-Saône, April 9, 1489

By this bull, the privilege of conferring the subdiaconate and diaconate is given to the abbey of Cîteaux and to its four principal daughterhouses of La Ferté, Pontigny, Clairvaux, and Morimond. This privilege is more modest than the one in the bulls referred to above in *1145–1146 and 1290. An abridged version of this bull is found in the Vatican Archives [armaria 54, t. 8, fol. 295]. Abbot Jean de Cirey published this privilege in Collecta quorundam privilegiorum Ordinis Cisterciensis (Dijon, 1491). The Cistercians made use of this privilege until the late eighteenth century. The Rituale Cisterciense ex libro usuum, definitionibus Ordinis et Caeremoniali episcoporum collectum VIII, 17–18 (most recent edition [Westmalle, 1949], pp. 402–12) contains the ordo for the ordination to the subdiaconate and diaconate.

Ed.: L. Meschet, Privilèges de l'Ordre de Cîteaux (Paris, 1713), 135 / R. Köndig, Elenchus privilegiorum regularium tam mendicantium quam non mendicantium, maxime Cisterciensium (Cologne, 1713; 2nd ed., 1779), 391f. / reproduced in Pio de Langogne, “De Bulla Innocentiana seu de potestate papae commitendi simplici presbytero subdiaconatus collationem”, in ÉtFranc 6 (1901): 131–33; C. Baisi, Il ministro straordinario degli ordini sacramentali (Rome, 1935), 13–15; H. Lennerz, De sacramento Ordinis, 2nd ed. (Rome, 1953), 148f.; J. Beyer, in NvRTh 76 (1954): 361f.

The Extent of the Power of Ordination in a Priest

1435 ... Cum itaque sicut exhibita Nobis nuper pro parte tua petitio continebat, ex privilegiis et indultis Apostolicis tibi et aliorum quatuor monasteriorum praedictorum abbatibus pro tempore existentibus, ut, omnes ordines minores personis Ordinis eiusdem intra monasteria praedicta conferre ac pallas altaris et alia ornamenta ecclesiastica benedicere ac mitra et anulo et aliis pontificalibus insigniis uti, nec non in ipsis et aliis monasteriis et prioratibus illis subiectis, ac in parochialibus et aliis ecclesiis ad eos communiter vel divisim pertinentibus, quamvis eis pleno iure non subessent, benedictionem sollemnem, post Missarum, Vesperarum et Matutinarum sollemnia, dummodo in benedictione huiusmodi aliquis antistes vel Apostolicae Sedis legatus praesens non foret, elargiri, ...

obtenta valerent, ... concessum fuerit ... :

Nos qui Ordinem ipsum prae ceteris in visceribus gerimus charitatis et illum intendimus non minoribus gratis et privilegiis quam praedecessores Nostri fecerunt, decorare, tuis in hac parte supplicationibus inclinati, tibi et successoribus tuis, ac dictis abbatibus aliorum quatuor monasterium praedictorum nunc et pro tempore existentibus, ut de cetero perpetuis futuris temporibus, praedicta et quaecumque alia vestimenta ac ornamenta ecclesiastica ... benedicere, et calices consecrare ... ac altaria ... in quibuslibet locis dicti Ordinis, chrismate sacro prius ab aliquo catholico antistite recepto consecrare, et etiam benedictionem sollemnem post Missarum, Vesperarum et Matutinarum sollemnia ... elargiri, ac, ne monachi dicti Ordinis pro suscipiendis

... Since, therefore, as the petition recently presented to Us on your behalf showed, it has been granted by apostolic privileges and indults to you and to the abbots of the other above-named four monasteries for the duration of their term of office that the authorizations obtained should remain in force to confer all the minor orders on persons belonging to this (religious) order within the monasteries aforesaid and to bless altar cloths and other ecclesiastical ornaments and to use the miter, ring, and other pontifical insignia as well as to bestow a solemn blessing after the solemn celebration of Mass, Vespers, and Matins, in their own and other monasteries and priories subject to them and in parochial and other churches pertaining to them in common or individually even if not fully subject to them in law, provided that at such a blessing, no bishop or legate of the Apostolic See is present ... :

We, who cherish that order above others with tender love and who intend to endow it with no lesser graces and privileges than Our predecessors have done, inclining to your wishes on this point, concede, by apostolic authority, with certain knowledge, by the tenor of these present (writings), as a special favor, that you and your successors and the said abbots of the other four monasteries aforesaid, now and during their term of office as likewise in future times forever, shall be able freely and licitly to bless the aforesaid, and any other vestments and ecclesiastical ornaments ... , to consecrate chalices ... , altars ... in any places belonging to the said order with sacred chrism previously received from any Catholic bishop, and also to bestow a solemn blessing after the solemn celebration of Mass, Vespers, and Matins, and, so that the monks of the said order should not be obliged to go hither

Subdiaconatus et Diaconatus ordinibus extra claustrum hinc inde discurrere cogantur, tibi et successoribus tuis, ut quibuscumque dicti Ordinis monachis, aliis vero quatuor abbatibus praefatis ac eorum successoribus, ut suorum monasteriorum praedictorum religiosi, quos ad id idoneos repereritis, Subdiaconatus et Diaconatus ordines huiusmodi alias rite conferre, . . .

libere et licite possitis et possunt, auctoritate Apostolica et ex certa scientia tenore praesentium de speciali dono gratiae indulgemus.

and thither outside for receiving the orders of subdiaconate and diaconate, (We concede) that you and your successors, in respect of any monks of the said order, and that the other four abbots aforementioned and their successors, in respect of the religious of their monasteries aforesaid, shall be able duly to confer the orders of subdiaconate and diaconate on those whom they find otherwise suitable.

ALEXANDER VI: August 11, 1492–August 18, 1503
PIUS III: September 22–October 18, 1503

JULIUS II: October 31, 1503–February 21, 1513

Fifth LATERAN Council (Eighteenth Ecumenical): May 3, 1512–March 16, 1517

This council principally sought ways to settle the Gallican disputes. After Louis XII, King of France, was reconciled in 1513 with the Apostolic See and, from the eighth session on, his nation was represented at the council, it became possible to substitute a concordat for the Pragmatic Sanction of Bourges (cf. *1445). In addition, the council issued decrees concerning faith and morals (*1440–1444).

Continuation of the Fifth LATERAN Council under Leo X

LEO X: March 11, 1513–December 1, 1521

1440–1441: Session 8, December 19, 1513: Bull Apostolici regiminis

By means of this bull, the doctrine, closely connected with Averroism, is rejected that maintains it is not possible to demonstrate the immortality of the human soul by reason, though it should be believed. This doctrine was upheld chiefly by Pietro Pomponazzi in his treatise (completed in September 1516) De immortalitate animae (ed. by Gianfranco Morra [Bologna, 1954]; Abhandlung über die Unsterblichkeit der Seele: Tractatus de immortalitate animae, ed. by B. Moisisch, Philosophische Bibliothek 434 [Hamburg, 1990]).

Ed.: Mac 32:842A–D / HaC 9:1719C–1720A / BullTau 5:601b–602a / BullCocq 3/III, 393ab / COeD, 3rd ed., 605₁₁–606₂.

The Doctrine of the Human Soul against the Neo-Aristotelians

Cum . . . zizaniae seminator, antiquus humani generis hostis [cf. Mt 13:25], nonnullos perniciosissimos errores, a fidelibus semper expostos, in agro Domini superseminare et augere sit ausus, de natura praesertim animae rationalis, quod videlicet mortalis sit, aut unica in cunctis hominibus, et nonnulli temere philosophantes, secundum saltem philosophiam verum id esse asseverant:

contra huiusmodi pestem opportuna remedia adhibere cupientes, hoc sacro approbante Concilio damnamus et reprobamus omnes asserentes, animam intellectivam mortalem esse, aut unicam in cunctis hominibus, et haec in dubium vertentes, cum illa non solum vere per se et essentialiter humani corporis forma existat, sicut in canone felicis

Since . . . the sower of cockle, the ancient enemy of the human race [cf. Mt 13:25], has dared to sow and make grow in the Lord's field some most pernicious errors that at all times were rejected by the faithful concerning in particular the nature of the rational soul: viz., that it is mortal or one and the same in all men, and some people, rash in their philosophizing, assert that this is true at least philosophically speaking:

We therefore wish to use the appropriate remedy against this error; and with the approval of the council We condemn and reprove all those who assert that the intellectual soul is mortal or that it is one and the same in all men or who raise doubts in this matter.

The intellectual soul is not only truly, of itself and essentially, the form of the human body, as it is stated recordationis Clementis papae V praedecessoris Nostri in Viennensi Concilio edito continetur [*902], verum et immortalis, et pro corporum quibus infunditur multitudine singulariter multiplicabilis, et multiplicata, et multiplicanda sit. . .

- 1441 Cumque verum vero minime contradicat, omnem assertionem veritati illuminatae fidei contrariam omnino falsam esse definimus [cf. *3017]; et, ut aliter dogmatizare non liceat, districtius inhibemus: omnesque huiusmodi erroris assertionibus inhaerentes veluti damnatissimas haereses seminantes per omnia ut detestabiles et abominabiles haereticos et infideles, catholicam fidem labefactantes, vitandos et puniendos fore decernimus.

in the canon of Clement V, Our predecessor of blessed memory, issued by the Council of Vienne [*902], but it is also immortal and, according to the great number of bodies into which it is individually infused, it can be, must be, and is multiplied. . .

And since truth cannot contradict truth in any way, We define every statement contrary to the truth of the enlightened faith to be entirely false [cf. *3017]; and so We strictly forbid that teaching any other doctrine be allowed: and we decree that all those clinging to erroneous assertions of this kind—sowing, as it were, the most condemnable heresies—are to be avoided in every way and punished as detestable and abominable heretics and infidels who are undermining the Catholic faith.

1442–1444: Session 10, May 4, 1515: Bull Inter multiplices

There had already been numerous papal decrees in support of the montes pietatis (credit organizations): H. Holzapfel, Die Anfänge der Montes pietatis (1462–1515), publication of the Kirchenhistorischen Seminar München, ed. by A. Knöpfler, vol. 11 (Munich, 1903), 10–12, enumerates seventeen decrees, the first of which, Cum dilecti (June 3, 1463) of Pius II, favors the endowment of Orvieto. However, there were objections to the manner in which these credit organizations provided indemnity.

Ed.: MaC 32:905E–907A / HaC 9:1773D–1774E / BullTau 5:622a–623b / BullCocq 3/III, 408b–409a / COeD, 3rd ed., 626₁₇–627₃₀. —Reg.: J. Hergenröther, Regesta Leonis X (Freiburg, 1884), no. 15297.

Usury and the Credit Organizations (Montes pietatis)

- 1442 Nonnullis enim magistris et doctoribus dicentibus eos montes non esse licitos, in quibus aliquid ultra sortem pro libra, decurso certo tempore, per ministros huius montis ab ipsis pauperibus, quibus mutuum datur, exigitur, et propterea ab usurarum crimine . . . mundos non evadere, cum Dominus noster, Luca Evangelista testante [Lc 6:34s], aperto nos praecepto obstrinxerit, ne ex dato mutuo quidquam ultra sortem sperare debeamus. Ea enim propria est usurarum interpretatio, quando videlicet ex usu rei, quae non germinat, nullo labore, nullo sumptu nullove periculo lucrum fetusque conquiri studetur. . .

Some of these masters and doctors say that the credit organizations are unlawful. After a fixed period of time has passed, they say, those attached to these organizations demand from the poor to whom they make a loan so much per pound in addition to the capital sum. For this reason they cannot avoid the crime of usury . . . since our Lord, according to Luke the evangelist [Lk 6:34f.], has bound us by a clear command that we ought not to expect any addition to the capital sum when we grant a loan. For, that is the real meaning of usury: when, from its use, a thing that produces nothing is applied to the acquiring of gain and profit without any work, any expense, or any risk. . .

- 1443 Aliis vero pluribus magistris et doctoribus . . . conclamantibus pro tanto bono tamque rei publicae pernecessario, modo ratione mutui nihil petatur neque speretur; pro indemnitate tamen eorumdem montium, impensarum videlicet ministrorum eorumdem ac rerum omnium ad illorum necessariam conservationem pertinentium, absque montium huiusmodi lucro, idque moderatum et necessarium ab his, qui ex huiusmodi mutuo commodum suscipiunt, licite ultra sortem exigi et capi posse nonnihil licere, cum regula iuris habeat, quod qui commodum sentit, onus quoque sentire debeat,¹ praesertim si Apostolica accedat auctoritas. Quam quidem sententiam a felicis recordationis Paulo II, Sixto IV, Innocentio VIII, Alexandro VI et Iulio II Romanis

But many other masters and doctors . . . unite in speaking in defense of so great a benefit and one so necessary to the state on the grounds that nothing is being sought or hoped for from the loan as such. Nevertheless, they argue, for the compensation of the organizations—that is, to defray the expenses of those employed and of all the things necessarily pertaining to the upkeep of the said organizations—they may lawfully ask and receive, in addition to the capital, a moderate and necessary sum from those deriving benefit from the loan, provided that no profit is made therefrom. This is in virtue of the rule of law that the person who experiences benefit ought also to meet the cost,¹ especially when there is added the support of the apostolic authority. They point out that this

*1443 ¹ Regulae iuris, in Boniface VIII, Liber Sextus Decretalium V, appendix, regula 55 (Frdb 2:1123).

Pontificibus praedecessoribus Nostris probatam ... esse ostendunt.

Nos super hoc ... opportune providere volentes, alterius quidem partis, iustitiae zelum, ne vorago aperiretur usurarum, alterius, pietatis et veritatis amorem, ut pauperibus subveniretur, utriusque vero partis studium commendantes, ... sacro approbante Concilio, declaramus et definimus, montes pietatis antedictos per republicas institutos et auctoritate Sedis Apostolicae hactenus probatos et confirmatos, in quibus pro eorum impensis et indemnitate aliquid moderatum ad solas ministrorum impensas et aliarum rerum ad illorum conservationem, ut praefertur, pertinentium, pro eorum indemnitate dumtaxat, ultra sortem absque lucro eorundem montium recipitur, neque speciem mali praeferre nec peccandi incentivum praestare neque ullo pacto improbari, quin immo meritorium esse ac laudari et probari debere tale mutuum et minime usurarium putari. ...

Omnes autem ..., qui contra praesentis declarationis et sanctionis formam de cetero praedicare seu disputare verbo vel scriptis ausi fuerint, excommunicationis latae sententiae poenam ... incurrere volumus. ...

1445: Session 11, December 19, 1516: Bull Pastor aeternus gregem

At the suggestion of King Charles VII of France, the assembly of the clergy of Bourges, gathered in May and June 1438, had drawn up twenty-three articles inspired by the Council of Basel and which, in particular, upheld conciliarism. On June 7, 1438, the king subscribed to this "Pragmatic Sanction of Bourges", which was chiefly in accord with the interests of the Royal Senate and the University of Paris. After the struggle between the popes—who never recognized the sanction—and France was brought to a close under Louis XII, his successor, Francis I, accepted the following bull of Leo X. In this, the "Pragmatic Sanction" is declared invalid and the bull Unam Sanctam of Boniface VIII (*870–875) is confirmed, without prejudice, however, to the declaration Meruit of Clement V ("sine tamen praedictio Declarationis Clementis V Meruit"), which qualifies it.

Ed.: MaC 32:967C–E; HaC 9:1828D–1829A; BullTau 5:661ab; BullCocq 3/III, 431b; COeD, 3rd ed., 642^{10–26}.

The Relation between the Pope and the Council

... Nos a tam nefariae Sanctionis [pragmaticae Bituricensis] et contentorum in ea revocatione retrahi aut desistere salva conscientia ... non posse aut debere censemus.

Nec illud Nos movere debet, quod Sanctio ipsa et in ea contenta in Basileensi Concilio edita et, ipso Concilio instante, a Bituricensi Congregatione recepta et acceptata fuerunt, cum ea omnia post translationem eiusdem Basileensis Concilii per felicis memoriae Eugenium papam IV... [Ferraram 18. Sept. 1437] factam, a Basileensi Conciliabulo ... facta exstiterint ac propterea nullum robur habere potuerint, cum etiam solum opinion was ... approved by Our predecessors of happy memory, the Roman pontiffs Paul II, Sixtus IV, Innocent VIII, Alexander VI, and Julius II.

On this question ..., We wish to make suitable arrangements. We commend the zeal for justice displayed by the former group, which desires to prevent the opening up of the chasm of usury, as well as the love of piety and truth shown by the latter group, which wishes to aid the poor, and, indeed, the earnestness of both sides ... [and] with the approval of the sacred council, We declare and define that the above-mentioned credit organizations, established by states and hitherto approved and confirmed by the authority of the Apostolic See, do not introduce any kind of evil or provide any incentive to sin if they receive, in addition to the capital, a moderate sum for their expenses and by way of compensation, provided it is intended exclusively to defray the expenses of those employed and of other things pertaining (as mentioned) to the upkeep of the organizations and provided that no profit is made therefrom.

They ought not, indeed, to be condemned in any way. Rather, such a type of lending is meritorious and should be praised and approved. It certainly should not be considered as usurious. ...

It is Our will that all ... who henceforth dare to preach or argue otherwise by word or in writing, contrary to the sense of the present declaration and sanction, ... incur the punishment of immediate excommunication. ...

... We judge that we cannot or ought not, with a safe conscience, ... withdraw from or abandon the revocation of such an evil sanction [the Pragmatic Sanction of Bourges] and its contents.

The fact that the sanction and its contents were published at the Council of Basel and, at the instance of the same council, were received and recognized by the assembly at Bourges should not impress Us, since all those things that were carried out after the transfer of the same Council of Basel by Pope Eugene IV, of happy memory, ... [to Ferrara on September 18, 1437] ... became the acts of the unlawful Council of Basel, and, as a result, they could not have any force. For it is clearly established that only the Roman pontiff in office at the time, as holding authority over all councils, has the full right and power to summon, transfer, and dissolve councils, (as is known) not only from the witness of Sacred Scripture, the sayings of the holy Fathers, and indeed other Roman pontiffs, Our predecessors, and the decrees of the sacred canons, but also from the confession of the councils themselves. . . .

Romanum Pontificem pro tempore existentem tamquam auctoritatem super omnia concilia habentem, conciliorum indicendorum, transferendorum ac dissolvendorum plenum ius et potestatem habere, nedum ex sacrae Scripturae testimonio, dictis sanctorum Patrum ac aliorum Romanorum Pontificum etiam, praedecessorum Nostrorum, sacrorumque canonum decretis, sed propria etiam eorundem conciliorum confessione manifeste constat. . . .

1447–1449: Decree Cum postquam to the Papal Legate Cajetan de Vio, November 9, 1518

The manner of using indulgences in Germany, which suffered from serious abuses, had prompted Martin Luther to publish, on October 31, 1517, ninety-five theses on indulgences (Weimar ed., 1 [1883], 229–38). As a response to these, this bull seeks to set forth the doctrine of the Church on indulgences. The authority of the bull is emphasized by Leo X in his accompanying letter, To the Swiss, April 30, 1519 (ed. by L. R. Schmidlin, Bernhardin Sanson: Der Ablassprediger in der Schweiz 1518–1519 [Solothurn, 1898], 30f.): “The power of the Roman pontiff in granting such indulgences, according to the true definition of the Roman Church, which, as We have decreed, must be maintained and proclaimed by all, . . . just as you should take care to understand fully and observe, in conformity to this letter that We are sending you to sign. . . . You should adhere firmly to the true determination of the Holy Roman Church and of this Holy See which permits no errors” (Romani Pontificis potestatem in huiusmodi indulgentiarum concessione iuxta Romanae Ecclesiae veram definitionem, quam ab omnibus teneri et praedicari debere . . . decrevimus, prout ex ipsis litteris, quas vobis consignari mandamus, plene videre et servare curabitis. . . . Vrae determinationi sanctae Romanae Ecclesiae et huius Sanctae Sedis, quae non permittit errores, firmiter adhaerebitis).

Cardinal Cajetan de Vio, to whom this bull was directed, inserted in 1522 the essential part of the text into his commentary on Thomas Aquinas, Summa theologiae III, q. 48, a. 5, Editio Leonina 11 (1903), 469.

Ed.: For Cajetan, see above / J. Le Plat, Monumentorum ad historiam Concilii Tridentini spectantium amplissima collectio 2 (Louvain, 1782), 23f. / repeated in N. Paulus, in ZKTh 37 (1913): 395f. / W. Köhler, Dokumente zum Ablassstreit von 1517 (Tübingen and Leipzig, 1902), 158f. (no. 36).

Indulgences

1447 . . . Ne de cetero quisquam ignorantiam doctrinae Romanae Ecclesiae circa huiusmodi indulgentias et illarum efficaciam allegare aut ignorantiae huiusmodi praetextu se excusare, aut protestatione conficta se iuvare, sed ut ipsi de notorio mendacio ut culpabiles convinci et merito damnari possint, per praesentes tibi significandum duximus, Romanam Ecclesiam, quam reliquae tamquam matrem sequi tenentur, tradidisse:

. . . And lest in the future anyone should allege ignorance of the doctrine of the Roman Church concerning such indulgences and their efficacy or excuse himself under pretext of such ignorance or aid himself by pretended protestations, but that these same persons may be convicted as guilty of notorious lying and be justly condemned, We have decided that you should be informed by these present (writings) that the Roman Church, which the other churches are bound to follow as their mother, has decreed:

1448 Romanum Pontificem, Petri clavigeri successorem et Iesu Christi in terris vicarium, potestate clavium, quarum est aperire regnum caelorum tollendo illius in Christi fidelibus impedimenta (culpam scilicet et poenam pro actualibus peccatis debitam, culpam quidem mediante sacramento poenitentiae, poenam vero temporalem pro actualibus peccatis secundum divinam iustitiam debitam mediante ecclesiastica indulgentia), posse pro rationabilibus causis concedere eisdem Christi fidelibus, qui caritate iungente membra sunt Christi, sive in hac vita sint, sive in purgatorio, indulgentias ex superabundantia meritorum Christi et Sanctorum; ac tam pro vivis quam pro defunctis Apostolica auctoritate indulgentiam concedendo, thesaurum meritorum Iesu Christi et Sanctorum dispensare, per modum absolutionis indulgentiam ipsam conferre, vel per modum suffragii illam transferre consuevisse.

The Roman pontiff, successor of Peter, bearer of the keys and the vicar of Jesus Christ on earth, in virtue of the power of the keys—to which it belongs to open the kingdom of heaven by taking away the obstacles in Christ’s faithful (namely, the guilt and the punishment due to actual sins: the guilt, indeed, through the sacrament of penance, but the temporal punishment due to actual sins according to divine justice by means of ecclesiastical indulgence)—can, for reasonable causes, concede indulgences from the superabundant merits and the saints to the same faithful of Christ, who are members of Christ by the bond of charity, whether in this life or in purgatory; and, by granting an indulgence for both the living and the dead in virtue of apostolic authority, he has been accustomed to dispense the treasury of the merits of Christ and the saints (and) to confer the indulgence itself by way of absolution or to apply it by means of suffrage.

Ac propterea omnes, tam vivos quam defunctos, qui veraciter omnes indulgentias huiusmodi consecuti fuerint, a tanta temporali poena, secundum divinam iustitiam pro peccatis suis actualibus debita liberari, quanta concessae et acquisitae indulgentiae aequivalet.

Et ita ab omnibus teneri et praedicari debere sub excommunicationis latae sententiae poena ... auctoritate Apostolica earumdem tenore praesentium decernimus.

And, therefore, all those, whether living or dead, who have truly obtained all such indulgences are freed from the temporal punishment due to their actual sins according to divine justice in a measure equivalent to the indulgence granted and acquired.

And by the tenor of these present <writings> ... in 1449 in virtue of apostolic authority, we decree that this must be held and preached by all under penalty of latae sententiae <automatic> excommunication.

1451–1492: Bull Exsurge Domine, June 15, 1520

Martin Luther, who had found much sympathy with his ninety-five theses (cf. 1447), had already been accused and summoned to Rome in November 1517. Shortly afterward, Leo X entrusted to Cardinal Cajetan de Vio the mission of inducing Luther to recant. However, neither their meeting of October 1518 in Augsburg nor the disputation held in Leipzig in June–July 1519 between Johannes Eck, the most outstanding defender of the Catholic religion, and the reformers Luther and Karlstadt brought about a reconciliation. After Johannes Eck was called to Rome, the process against Luther was initiated (January–April 1520). Among others, the universities of Cologne and Louvain submitted verdicts (DuPIA 1/II [1728]: 358–61; cf. the Responsio Lutheriana of 1520, Weimar ed., 6 [1888], 170–95). Since Luther did not retract his doctrines and on December 10, 1520, he publicly burned the bull Exsurge Domine, he was excommunicated on January 3, 1521, with the bull Decet Romanum Pontificem (BullTau 5:761a–764a / BullCocq 3/III, 493b–495b).

Ed.: BullTau 5:750a–752a / BullCocq 3/III, 488b–489b / MaC 32:1051C–1053D / HaC 9:1893A–1895A / DuPIA 1/II, 362b–364b.

The propositions of the bull are for the most part the exact words of Luther; the location of their sources was provided principally by H. Roos, “Die Quellen der Bulle Exsurge Domine”, in Theologie in Geschichte und Gegenwart, Festschrift M. Schmaus, ed. J. Auer and H. Volk, 909–26 (Munich, 1957). For the sake of simplicity, the sources of particular propositions are designated with letters; the location in the critical edition, D. Martin Luthers Werke (Weimar, 1883ff.), follows (in parentheses). The letters signify the following:

A': Resolutiones disputationum de indulgentiarum virtute (1518) [for propositions 1, 3, 10, 18, 20–22, 26, 28, 32–35, 39].

B': Disputatio et excusatio F. Martini Luther adversus criminationes D. Johannis Eccii (1519) [2].

C': Disputatio pro declaratione virtutis indulgentiarum (1517) [4, 17, 38].

D': Ein Sermon von Ablass und Gnade (1517–1518) [5, 18].

E': Sermo de poenitentia (1518) [6–9, 11f., 14].

F': Ein Sermon von dem Sakrament der Busse (1519) [13].

G': Instructio pro confessione peccatorum (1519) [15].

H': Ein Sermon vom Sakrament des Leichnams Christi und von den Bruderschaften (1519) [16].

I': Verklärung etlicher Artikel in dem Sermon von dem heiligen Sakrament (1520) [16].

K': Disputatio I. Eccii et M. Lutheri Lipsiae habita (1519) [18, 30, 37, 40].

L': Resolutiones Lutherianae super propositionibus suis Lipsiae disputatis (1519) [19, 27, 29, 31].

M': Sermo de virtute excommunicationis (1518) [23].

N': Ein Sermon von dem Bann (1520) [24].

O': Disputatio Heidelbergae habita (1518) [36].

P': (Grosser) Sermon von dem Wucher (1520) [41].

Q': Contra malignum J. Eccii iudicium (1519) [25].

R': Resolutio super Propositiones XIII de potestate papae (1519) [25].

Errors of Martin Luther

1. Haeretica sententia est, sed usitata, sacramenta Novae Legis iustificantem gratiam illis dare, qui non ponunt obicem.¹

2. In puero post baptismum negare remanens peccatum, est Paulum et Christum simul conculcare.¹

3. Fomes peccati, etiamsi nullum adsit actuale peccatum, moratur exeuntem a corpore animam ab ingressu caeli.¹

1. It is a heretical, though widespread, opinion that the sacraments of the New Law give justifying grace to those who do not place an obstacle in the way.¹

2. To deny that sin remains in a child after baptism is to disregard both Paul and Christ alike.¹

3. The tinder of sin hinders a soul departing from the body from entering into heaven, even though there is no actual sin.¹

*1451¹ A', conclusio VII (1:544_{35–38}).

*1452¹ B' (2:160_{34f}).

*1453¹ A', conclusio XXIV (1:572_{10–14}).

- 1454 4. Imperfecta caritas morituri fert secum necessario magnum timorem, qui se solo satis est facere poenam purgatorii, et impedit introitum regni.¹
- 1455 5. Tres esse partes paenitentiae: contritionem, confessionem et satisfactionem, non est fundatum in sacra Scriptura nec antiquis sanctis christianis doctoribus.¹
- 1456 6. Contritio, quae paratur per discussionem, collationem et detestationem peccatorum, qua quis recogitat annos suos in amaritudine animae suae [cf. Is 38:15], ponderando peccatorum gravitatem, multitudinem, foeditatem, amissionem aeternae beatitudinis, ac aeternae damnationis acquisitionem, haec contritio facit hypocritam, immo magis peccatorem.¹
- 1457 7. Verissimum est proverbium et omnium doctrina de contritionibus huc usque data praestantius: ‘De cetero non facere, summa paenitentia: optima paenitentia, nova vita.’¹
- 1458 8. Nullo modo praesumas confiteri peccata venialia, sed nec omnia mortalia, quia impossibile est, ut omnia mortalia cognoscas. Unde in primitiva Ecclesia solum manifesta mortalia confitebantur.¹
- 1459 9. Dum volumus omnia pure confiteri, nihil aliud facimus, quam quod misericordiae Dei nihil volumus relinquere ignoscendum.¹
- 1460 10. Peccata non sunt ulli remissa, nisi remittente sacerdote credat sibi remitti; immo peccatum maneret, nisi remissum crederet: non enim sufficit remissio peccati et gratiae donatio, sed oportet etiam credere esse remissum.¹
- 1461 11. Nullo modo confidas absolvi propter tuam contritionem, sed propter verbum Christi: “Quodcumque solveris” etc. [Mt 16:19]. Hinc, inquam, confide, si sacerdotis obtineris absolutionem, et crede fortiter te absolutum, et absolutus vere eris, quidquid sit de contritione.¹
- 1462 12. Si per impossibile confessus non esset contritus, aut sacerdos non serio, sed ioco absolveret, si tamen credat se absolutum, verissime est absolutus.¹
4. To one on the point of death, imperfect charity necessarily brings with it great fear, which in itself alone is enough to produce the punishment of purgatory and impedes entrance into the kingdom.¹
5. That there are three parts of penance: contrition, confession, and satisfaction, is not founded on Holy Scripture or on the holy ancient Christian Doctors.¹
6. Contrition that arises from examination, consideration, and detestation of sins, whereby one recounts one’s years in the bitterness of one’s soul [cf. Is 38:15], pondering over the grievousness, number, and ugliness of one’s sins, over the loss of eternal happiness and the fall into eternal damnation, such a contrition makes one a hypocrite and a greater sinner than before.¹
7. Very true and better than all the previous teaching on the kinds of contrition is the maxim: not to do ⟨it⟩ again ⟨is⟩ the height of penance; the best penance ⟨is⟩ a new life.¹
8. Do not on any account presume to confess venial sins or even all mortal sins, for it is impossible for you to recognize all mortal sins. This is why only manifest mortal sins were confessed in the early Church.¹
9. If we wish to confess everything clearly, we desire in reality to leave nothing to the mercy of God to forgive.¹
10. Sins are not remitted to anyone unless, when the priest remits them, one believes that they are remitted; rather the sin would remain if one did not believe that it is remitted. For, the remission of sin and the giving of grace are not sufficient; it is also necessary to believe that sin is remitted.¹
11. Do not believe that you are absolved on account of your contrition, but on account of Christ’s word: “Whatever you loose . . .”, etc. [Mt 16:19]. Hence I say: If you have received the absolution of a priest, have confidence and firmly believe that you are absolved; and absolved you will truly be, whatever your contrition.¹
12. In the impossible supposition that one who confesses would not be sorry, or that the priest would give absolution not seriously but in jest, yet, if one believes that one is absolved, the penitent is in very truth absolved.¹

*1454¹ C' and A', conclusio XXIV (1:234₃₋₆ and 1:572₁₅).

*1455¹ D' (1:243₄₋₁₁).

*1456¹ E' (1:319₁₀₋₁₇).

*1457¹ E' (1:321₂₋₄).

*1458¹ E' (1:322₂₂₋₂₅).

*1459¹ E' (1:323₄₋₆).

*1460¹ A', conclusio VII (1:543_{14f., 22-24}).

*1461¹ E' (1:323₂₃₋₂₈).

*1462¹ E' (1:323₃₂₋₃₄).

13. In sacramento paenitentiae ac remissione culpae non plus facit Papa aut episcopus, quam infimus sacerdos: immo, ubi non est sacerdos, aequè tantum quilibet Christianus, etiamsi mulier aut puer esset.¹ 1463
14. Nullus debet sacerdoti respondere, se esse contritum, nec sacerdos requirere.¹ 1464
15. Magnus est error eorum, qui ad sacramenta Eucharistiae accedunt huic innixi, quod sint confessi, quod non sint sibi conscii alicuius peccati mortalis, quod praemiserint orationes suas et praeparatoria: omnes illi iudicium sibi manducant et bibunt. Sed si credant et confidant, se gratiam ibi consecuturos, haec sola fides facit eos puros et dignos.¹ 1465
16. Consultum videtur, quod Ecclesia in communi Concilio statueret, laicos sub utraque specie communicandos: nec Bohemi communicantes sub utraque specie sunt haeretici, sed schismatici.¹ 1466
17. Thesauri Ecclesiae, unde Papa dat indulgentias, non sunt merita Christi et Sanctorum.¹ 1467
18. Indulgentiae sunt piaes fraudes fidelium, et remissiones bonorum operum; et sunt de numero eorum, quae licent, et non de numero eorum, quae expediunt [cf. 1 Cor 6:12; 10:23].¹ 1468
19. Indulgentiae his, qui veraciter eas consequuntur, non valent ad remissionem poenae pro peccatis actualibus debitae apud divinam iustitiam.¹ 1469
20. Seducuntur credentes indulgentias esse salutes et ad fructum spiritus utiles.¹ 1470
21. Indulgentiae necessariae sunt solum publicis criminibus, et proprie conceduntur duris solummodo et impatientibus.¹ 1471
22. Sex generibus hominum indulgentiae nec sunt necessariae nec utiles: videlicet mortuis seu morituris, infirmis, legitime impeditis, his, qui non commiserunt crimina, his, qui crimina commiserunt, sed non publica, his, qui meliora operantur.¹ 1472

*1463¹ F' (2:716₂₅₋₂₈).*1464¹ E' (1:322_{16f.}).*1465¹ G' (1:264₉₋₁₅).*1466¹ H' and I' (2:742₂₄₋₂₆ and 6:80_{36f.}).*1467¹ C' (1:236_{10f., 14f.}).*1468¹ K' (2:353₁₃; cf. 349_{16f., 356₃₈}) and A', conclusio XX (1:570_{2f.}) and D' (1:246₁₅₋₁₉).*1469¹ L' (2:429₅₋₇).*1470¹ A', conclusio XXXII (1:587₂₄₋₂₆).*1471¹ A', conclusio XIII (1:552_{24f., 553_{30f.}}).*1472¹ A', conclusio XIII (1:552₁₉₋₂₂).

- 1473 23. Excommunicationes sunt tantum externae poenae nec privant hominem communibus spiritualibus Ecclesiae orationibus.¹
- 1474 24. Docendi sunt Christiani plus diligere excommunicationem quam timere.¹
- 1475 25. Romanus Pontifex, Petri successor, non est Christi vicarius super omnes totius mundi ecclesias ab ipso Christo in beato Petro institutus.¹
- 1476 26. Verbum Christi ad Petrum: “Quodcumque solveris super terram” etc. [Mt 16:19] extenditur dumtaxat ad ligata ab ipso Petro.¹
- 1477 27. Certum est, in manu Ecclesiae aut Papae prorsus non esse statuere articulos fidei, immo nec leges morum seu bonorum operum.¹
- 1478 28. Si Papa cum magna parte Ecclesiae sic vel sic sentiret, nec etiam erraret; adhuc non est peccatum aut haeresis, contrarium sentire, praesertim in re non necessaria ad salutem, donec fuerit per Concilium universale alterum reprobatum, alterum approbatum.¹
- 1479 29. Via nobis facta est enervandi auctoritatem Conciliorum, et libere contradicendi eorum gestis, et iudicandi eorum decreta, et confidenter confitendi quidquid verum videtur, sive probatum fuerit, sive reprobatum a quocumque Concilio.¹
- 1480 30. Aliqui articuli Iohannis Hus condemnati in Concilio Constantiensi sunt christianissimi, verissimi et evangelici, quos nec universalis Ecclesia posset damnare.¹
- 1481 31. In omni opere bono iustus peccat.¹
- 1482 32. Opus bonum optime factum est veniale peccatum.¹
- 1483 33. Haereticos comburi est contra voluntatem Spiritus.¹
- 1484 34. Proeliari adversus Turcas est repugnare Deo visitanti iniquitates nostras per illos.¹
- 1485 35. Nemo est certus, se non semper peccare mortaliter, propter occultissimum superbiae vitium.¹
23. Excommunications are only external penalties, and they do not deprive man of the common spiritual prayers of the Church.¹
24. Christians must be taught to cherish excommunications rather than to fear them.¹
25. The Roman pontiff, the successor of Peter, is not the vicar of Christ over all the churches of the entire world, instituted by Christ himself in blessed Peter.¹
26. The word of Christ to Peter: “Whatever you loose on earth . . .” [Mt 16:19] is extended merely to those things bound by Peter himself.¹
27. It is certain that it is not in the power of the Church or the pope to decide upon the articles of faith, and much less concerning the laws for morals or for good works.¹
28. If the pope with a great part of the Church thought so and so, he would not err; still it is not a sin or heresy to think the contrary, especially in a matter not necessary for salvation, until one alternative is condemned and another approved by a universal council.¹
29. The way has been opened for us to weaken the authority of the councils, to contradict freely their acts, to judge their decrees, and to confess with confidence whatever seems to be true, whether it was approved or disapproved by any council whatsoever.¹
30. Some articles of John Hus, condemned in the Council of Constance, are most Christian, wholly true, and evangelical; these the universal Church could not condemn.¹
31. In every good work the just man sins.¹
32. A good work perfectly performed is a venial sin.¹
33. That heretics be burned is against the will of the Spirit.¹
34. To go to war against the Turks is to resist God, who punishes our iniquities through them.¹
35. No one is certain that he is not always sinning mortally because of the most hidden vice of pride.¹

*1473 ¹ M' (1:639_{19f.}, 33f.).*1474 ¹ N' (6:70_{29f.}).*1475 ¹ Cf. Q' (2:628₅) and R' (2:225_{35f.}) as an approximation.*1476 ¹ A', conclusio V (1:536₂₀₋₂₂).*1477 ¹ L' (2:427₈₋₁₀).*1478 ¹ A', conclusio XXVI (1:583₅₋₈).*1479 ¹ L' (2:406_{1f.}, 404₁₅₋₁₇).*1480 ¹ K' (2:279₁₁₋₁₃).*1481 ¹ L' (2:416_{35f.}).*1482 ¹ A', conclusio LVIII (1:608_{10f.}).*1483 ¹ A', conclusio LXXX (1:625₄, 624₃₅₋₃₈).*1484 ¹ A', conclusio V (1:535₃₅₋₃₉).*1485 ¹ A', conclusio XIII (1:553_{13f.}).

36. Liberum arbitrium post peccatum est res de solo titulo; et dum facit, quod in se est, peccat mortaliter.¹

37. Purgatorium non potest probari ex sacra Scriptura, quae sit in canone.¹

38. Animae in purgatorio non sunt securae de earum salute, saltem omnes: nec probatum est ullis aut rationibus aut Scripturis, ipsas esse extra statum merendi vel augendae caritatis.¹

39. Animae in purgatorio peccant sine intermissione, quamdiu quaerunt requiem et horrent poenas.¹

40. Animae ex purgatorio liberatae suffragiis viventium minus beantur, quam si per se satisfecissent.¹

41. Praelati ecclesiastici et principes saeculares non male facerent, si omnes saccos mendicitatis delerent.¹

[Censura:] Praefatos omnes et singulos articulos seu errores tamquam, ut praemittitur, respective haereticos, aut scandalosos, aut falsos, aut piarum aurium offensivos, vel simplicium mentium seductivos, et veritati catholicae obviantes, damnamus, reprobamus, atque omnino reicimus.

36. After sin, free will is a reality in name only; and when it does what is in its power, it sins mortally.¹ 1486

37. Purgatory cannot be proved from any Sacred Scripture that is in the canon.¹ 1487

38. The souls in purgatory are not sure of their salvation, at least (not) all; nor is it proved by any arguments or by the Scriptures that they are beyond the state of meriting or of increasing in charity.¹ 1488

39. The souls in purgatory sin without intermission as long as they seek rest and abhor punishments.¹ 1489

40. The souls freed from purgatory by the suffrages of the living are less happy than if they had made satisfaction by themselves.¹ 1490

41. Ecclesiastical prelates and secular princes would not act badly if they destroyed all of the money-bags of beggary.¹ 1491

[Censure:] All and each of the above-mentioned articles or errors, as set before you, We condemn, disapprove, and entirely reject as respectively heretical or scandalous or false or offensive to pious ears or seductive of simple minds and in opposition to Catholic truth. 1492

ADRIAN VI: January 9, 1522–September 14, 1523
CLEMENT VII: November 19, 1523–September 25, 1534

PAUL III: October 13, 1534–November 10, 1549

1495: Brief Pastorale officium to the Archbishop of Toledo, May 29, 1537

A delegation of Dominicans had complained to Rome that the Spanish colonists were making slaves of the indigenous people of Central America. They induced the pope to defend their fundamental rights. Paul III published the brief Pastorale officium on the right to liberty and property, addressed to Cardinal Juan de Tavera, Archbishop of Toledo, and a second brief (Veritas ipsa of June 2, 1537), in which he threatened excommunication. It is true that on June 19, 1538, he withdrew the threat of this sanction under pressure from the Spanish government. Nevertheless, with the position he took, he prepared the way for new legislation signed by Emperor Charles V on November 20, 1542, through which the rights of the indigenous people had to be considered in a way more appropriate to the Christian spirit.

Ed.: J. Margraf, Kirche und Sklaverei seit der Entdeckung Amerikas (Tübingen, 1865), 218f. (for the brief Veritas ipsa: ibid., 219f.); Colección de documentos inéditos relativos al descubrimiento, conquista y organización de las antiguas posesiones españolas de América y Oceanía 7 (Madrid, 1867), 414 (for the brief Veritas ipsa: ibid.).

The Right of Man to Freedom and Property

Ad Nostrum siquidem pervenit auditum, quod ... Carolus [V] Romanorum imperator ... ad reprimendos eos, qui cupiditate aestuantes contra humanum genus

It has come to Our hearing that ... in order to restrain those who, stirred by greed, bear an inhuman spirit against the human race, Charles [V] the emperor of the Romans, 1495

*1486¹ O' (1:354_{5f.}).

*1487¹ K' (2:324_{10–12}).

*1488¹ C' (1:234_{13f., 11f.}).

*1489¹ A', conclusio XVIII (1:562_{15f.}).

*1490¹ K' (2:340_{39–341}₁).

*1491¹ P' (6:42_{12f.}).

inhumanum gerunt animum, publico edicto omnibus sibi subiectis prohibuit, ut quisquam Occidentales aut Meridionales Indos in servitutem redigere aut eos bonis suis privare praesumat.

Hos igitur attendentes Indos ipsos, licet extra gremium Ecclesiae existant, non tamen sua libertate aut rerum suarum dominio privatos vel privandos esse, cum homines ideoque fidei et salutis capaces sint, non servitute delendos, sed praedicationibus et exemplis ad vitam invitandos fore, ac praeterea Nos talium impiorum tam nefarios ausus reprimere et ne iniuriis et damnis exasperati ad Christi fidem amplectendam duriores efficiantur providere cupientes circumspectioni tuae . . . mandamus, quatenus . . . universis et singulis uniuscuiusque dignitatis . . . existentibus sub excommunicationis latae sententiae poena . . . districtius inhi-beas, ne praefatos Indos quomodolibet in servitutem redigere aut eos bonis suis spoliare quoquomodo praesumant.

1497: Constitution Altitudo divini consilii, June 1, 1537

This decree was directed to the “territories of the West Indies”; on July 2, 1524, an assembly of Franciscan missionaries (the “Primera Junta de México”) had already treated this question.

Ed.: CdICF 9:140 (no. 81) / CollPF, 2nd ed., 1:30 (n. 1 to no. 114).

Privilegium fidei

1497 Super eorum [Indorum Occidentalium] vero matrimonium hoc observandum decernimus, ut, qui ante conversionem plures iuxta eorum mores habebant uxores, et non recordantur quam primo acceperint, conversi ad fidem, unam ex illis accipiant, quam voluerint, et cum ea matrimonium contrahant per verba de praesenti, ut moris est; qui vero recordantur, quam primo acceperint, aliis dimissis, eam retineant.

has prohibited, by public edict, any of his subjects from presuming to reduce the Western or Southern Indians to slavery or to deprive them of their goods.

Since We, therefore, are vigilant that these Indians, even if outside the bosom of the Church, are not deprived, nor are they to be deprived, of their freedom or the ownership of their goods, for they are men and, therefore, capable of faith and salvation, and, thus, they are not to be destroyed by enslavement but rather invited to life through preaching and example, and since We, moreover, desire to repress the nefarious undertakings of such impious (men) and to insure that the Indians do not become hardened against embracing the faith of Christ, made bitter by bad treatment and losses,

. . . We demand that . . . under your watchful attention you prevent with great severity . . . under pain of excommunication . . . each and every one of whatever rank from presuming in any way to reduce the aforementioned Indians to slavery or in any way to despoil them of their goods.

Concerning their [the Western Indians] marriage, We decree that this is to be observed, that those who before conversion had several wives, in accordance with their customs, and do not remember which one they took first should, when converted to the faith, take one from among them, whichever they will, and should contract a marriage with her using words related to the present in the usual way; but those who remember whom they took first should retain that one and send away the others.

Council of TRENT (Nineteenth Ecumenical): December 13, 1545–December 4, 1563

The reformation movement in Germany insisted upon a reform council of the Church. Clement VII, however, was opposed to the convocation of a general council, which, since 1529, had been requested also by Emperor Charles V. With the failure to reach an agreement at the Diet of Augsburg (1530), Paul III, on June 2, 1536, under pressure from the emperor, convoked a general council at Mantua. However, the war between Charles V and Francis I of France prevented the opening that was set for May 23, 1537. On October 8, 1537, the pope ordered the transfer of the council to Vicenza. The enterprise failed because of the small number of participants. After the end of the war, because of the failure of the religious discussions at Regensburg in 1541, the pope, on May 22, 1542, convoked the council at Trent. But another war between Charles V and Francis I forced the suspension of the council. After the Peace of Crépy (September 1544), the way was open for a new convocation on November 30, 1544, by means of the bull Laetare Ierusalem. The council was opened only on December 13, 1545. Only Catholics were present. With the approach of the Schmalkald War (begun in July 1546), the council, on March 11, 1547, was transferred to Bologna. On November 14, 1550, with the bull Cum ad tollenda, Pope Julius III decreed the return of the council to Trent, where, on May 1, 1551, the second period of Tridentine sessions began. The negotiations for union with the Protestants, present at Trent since January 1552, were disrupted when the council, on April 28, 1552, was suspended once again because of the insurrection of the Prince-Elector Maurice of Saxony. After much political confusion, Pius IV, on November 29, 1560, by the bull Ad ecclesiae regimen, ordered the continuation of the council, whose third period of Tridentine sessions was inaugurated on January 18, 1562. The consultations had their solemn conclusion at Trent on December 4, 1563. The interpretation and execution of the decisions of the council, confirmed by Pius IV on January 26, 1564, with the bull Benedictus Deus (*1847–1850), were entrusted to a congregation of cardinals on August 2, 1564. Their decrees and statutes formed the basis of canon law until 1917. The conciliar decrees concerning the Catechism published by Pius V (1566), the Roman Breviary (1568), and the Roman Missal (1572) had far-reaching effects. The works of the individual periods are as follows:

First Tridentine Period: Sessions 1–8, December 1545–March 1547

Worth special mention are: session 4 (April 8, 1546), with the decree on Sacred Scripture and traditions; session 5 (June 17, 1546), with the decree on original sin; session 6 (January 13, 1547), with the decree on justification; session 7 (March 3, 1547), with the decree on the sacraments in general, baptism, and confirmation; session 8 (March 11, 1547), with the resolution to transfer the council to Bologna.

Bologna Period: Sessions 9–10, March 1547–(February 1548) September 1549

Discussion of the sacraments of penance, extreme unction, orders, and matrimony with no decisive decree. The council was suspended provisionally in February 1548 and formally and definitively on September 13, 1549.

Second Tridentine Period: Sessions 11–16, May 1551–April 1552

Julius III assembled the synodal members again at Trent on May 1, 1551. Worth special mention are: session 13 (October 11, 1551), with the decree on the Eucharist; session 14 (November 25, 1551), with the decrees on confession and extreme unction. On April 28, 1552, the council was suspended once again.

Third Tridentine Period: Sessions 17–25, January 1562–December 1563

The council was called together for the third time at Trent by Pius IV on November 29, 1560, for Easter of 1561 (April 16); the first solemn session (namely, sess. 17) took place only on January 18, 1562. Worthy of mention are: session 21 (July 16, 1562), with the decree on the reception of eucharistic communion; session 22 (September 17, 1562), with the decree on the Holy Sacrifice of the Mass; session 23 (July 15, 1563), with the decree on the sacrament of orders; session 24 (November 11, 1563), with the decree on matrimony; session 25 (December 3–4, 1563), with the decrees on purgatory, the veneration of the saints, holy images, and indulgences. With this session the council was concluded.

1500: Session 3, February 4, 1546: Decree on the Profession of Faith

Ed.: SGTr 4:579f. / RiTr 10 / MaC 33:19B–D / HaC 10:19E–20B / COeD, 3rd ed., 662.

Haec sacrosancta oecumenica et generalis Tridentina Synodus, in Spiritu Sancto legitime congregata, in ea praesentibus eisdem tribus Apostolicae Sedis legatis, magnitudinem rerum tractandarum considerans, praesertim earum, quae duobus illis capitibus de extirpandis haeresibus et moribus reformandis continentur, quorum causa praecipue est congregata,

... Symbolum fidei, quo sancta Romana Ecclesia utitur, tamquam principium illud, in quo omnes, qui fidem Christi profitentur, necessario conveniunt, ac fundamentum firmum et unicum, contra quod portae inferi numquam praevalerent [cf. Mt 16:18], totidem verbis, quibus in omnibus ecclesiis legitur, exprimentum esse censuit.

[*There follows the Nicene-Constantinopolitan Creed: 150.]

This holy ecumenical and general Council of Trent, 1500 legitimately assembled in the Holy Spirit, under the presidency of the same three legates of the Apostolic See, considering the magnitude of the matters to be treated, especially those included in the two principal objectives, the eradication of heresies and the reform of morals, for which it was primarily assembled,

... has resolved that the profession of faith that is used by the holy Roman Church as the principle on which all who profess the faith of Christ necessarily agree and (as that) firm and only foundation against which the gates of hell will never prevail [cf. Mt 16:18] should be expressed in the same words in which it is read in all the churches.

1501–1508: Session 4, April 8, 1546

a. Decree on the Reception of the Sacred Books and Traditions

At the time of the council, the canonicity of the following books of Sacred Scripture had frequently been placed in doubt: Tobit, Judith, Wisdom, Sirach, 1–2 Maccabees, Hebrews, 2 Peter, James, 2–3 John, Jude, Revelation, and certain parts of Daniel.

Ed.: SGTr 5:91 / RiTr 11f. / MaC 33:22A–E / HaC 10:22C–23B / COeD, 3rd ed., 663f. / EnchB nos. 57–60. —Cf. the preliminary draft of the decree: SGTr 5:31f. / TheiTr 1:66.

1501 Sacrosancta oecumenica et generalis Tridentina Synodus, in Spiritu Sancto legitime congregata, . . . hoc sibi perpetuo ante oculos proponens, ut sublatis erroribus puritas ipsa Evangelii in Ecclesia conservetur, quod promissum ante per Prophetas in Scripturis sanctis Dominus noster Iesus Christus Dei Filius proprio ore primum promulgavit, deinde per suos Apostolos tamquam fontem omnium et salutaris veritatis et morum disciplinae omni creaturae praedicari iussit [cf. Mc 16:15]; perspiciensque, hanc veritatem et disciplinam contineri in libris scriptis et sine scripto traditionibus, quae ab ipsius Christi ore ab Apostolis acceptae, aut ab ipsis Apostolis Spiritu Sancto dictante quasi per manus traditae ad nos usque pervenerunt, orthodoxorum Patrum exempla secuta, omnes libros tam Veteris quam Novi Testamenti, cum utriusque unus Deus sit auctor, nec non traditiones ipsas, tum ad fidem, tum ad mores pertinentes, tamquam vel ore tenentis a Christo, vel a Spiritu Sancto dictatas et continua successione in Ecclesia catholica conservatas, pari pietatis affectu ac reverentia suscipit et veneratur.

Sacrorum vero librorum indicem huic decreto adscribendum censuit, ne cui dubitatio suboriri possit, quinam sint, qui ab ipsa Synodo suscipiuntur. Sunt vero infra scripti.

1502 Testamenti Veteris: Quinque Moisis, id est Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numeri, Deuteronomium; Iosue, Iudicum, Ruth, quatuor Regum, duo Paralipomenon, Esdrae primus et secundus, qui dicitur Nehemias, Tobias, Iudith, Esther, Iob, Psalterium Davidicum centum quinquaginta psalmodum, Parabola, Ecclesiastes, Canticum Canticorum, Sapientia, Ecclesiasticus, Isaias, Ieremias cum Baruch, Ezechiel, Daniel, duodecim Prophetarum minores, id est Osea, Ioel, Amos, Abdias, Ionas, Michaeas, Nahum, Habacuc, Sophonias, Aggaeus, Zacharias, Malachias; duo Machabaeorum primus et secundus.

1503 Testamenti Novi: Quatuor Evangelia, secundum Matthaeum, Marcum, Lucam, Ioannem; Actus Apostolorum a Luca Evangelista conscripti, quatuordecim epistolae Pauli Apostoli, ad Romanos, duae ad Corinthios, ad Galatas, ad Ephesios, ad Philippenses, ad Colossenses, duae ad Thessalonicenses, duae ad Timotheum, ad Titum, ad Philemonem, ad Hebraeos; Petri Apostoli duae, Ioannis Apostoli tres, Iacobi Apostoli una, Iudae Apostoli una, et Apocalypsis Ioannis Apostoli.

The holy, ecumenical, and general Council of Trent, lawfully assembled in the Holy Spirit, . . .

has always this purpose in mind that in the Church errors be removed and the purity of the gospel be preserved. This gospel was promised of old through the prophets in the Sacred Scriptures; our Lord Jesus Christ, Son of God, first promulgated it from his own lips; he in turn ordered that it be preached through the apostles to all creatures [cf. Mk 16:15] as the source of all saving truth and norms of conduct. The council clearly perceives that this truth and rule are contained in the written books and unwritten traditions that have come down to us, having been received by the apostles from the mouth of Christ himself or from the apostles by the dictation of the Holy Spirit, and have been transmitted, as it were, from hand to hand.

Following, then, the example of the orthodox Fathers, it receives and venerates with the same sense of loyalty and reverence all the books of the Old and New Testament—for the one God is the author of both—together with all the traditions concerning faith and practice, as coming from the mouth of Christ or being inspired by the Holy Spirit and preserved in continuous succession in the Catholic Church.

The council has thought it proper to insert in this decree a list of the sacred books, so that no doubt may remain as to which books are recognized by the council. They are the following:

Old Testament: The five (books) of Moses, that is, Genesis, Exodus, Leviticus, Numbers, Deuteronomy; Joshua, Judges, Ruth, four (books) of Kings (= two books of Samuel, two books of Kings), two of Chronicles, the first (book) of Ezra, the second (book) of Ezra called Nehemiah, Tobit, Judith, Esther, Job, the Psalter of David containing 150 psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes, the Song of Songs, Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus (= Sirach), Isaiah, Jeremiah with Baruch, Ezekiel, Daniel, the twelve minor prophets, that is, Hosea, Joel, Amos, Obadiah, Jonah, Micah, Nahum, Habakkuk, Zephaniah, Haggai, Zachariah, and Malachi; two (books) of Maccabees, that is, the first and the second.

New Testament: The four Gospels according to Matthew, Mark, Luke, and John; the Acts of the Apostles written by Luke the evangelist; fourteen Epistles of the apostle Paul, that is, to the Romans, two to the Corinthians, to the Galatians, Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians, two to the Thessalonians, two to Timothy, to Titus, Philemon, and the Hebrews; two (Epistles) of the apostle Peter, three of the apostle John, one of the apostle James, one of the apostle Jude, and the Revelation of the apostle John.

Si quis autem libros ipsos integros cum omnibus suis partibus, prout in Ecclesia catholica legi consueverunt et in veteri vulgata latina editione habentur, pro sacris et canonicis non susceperit, et traditiones praedictas sciens et prudens contempserit: anathema sit.

Omnes itaque intelligant, quo ordine et via ipsa Synodus post iactum fidei confessionis fundamentum sit progressura, et quibus potissimum testimoniis ac praesidiis in confirmandis dogmatibus et instaurandis in Ecclesia moribus sit usura.

b. Decree on the Vulgate Edition of the Bible and on the Manner of Interpreting Sacred Scripture

Ed.: SGTr 5:91f. / RiTr 12 / MaC 33:22E–23C / HaC 10:23B–E / COeD, 3rd ed., 664f. / EnchB nos. 61–63.

Insuper eadem sacrosancta Synodus considerans, non parum utilitatis accedere posse Ecclesiae Dei, si ex omnibus latinis editionibus, quae circumferuntur sacrorum librorum, quanam pro authentica habenda sit, innotescat:

statuit et declarat, ut haec ipsa vetus et vulgata editio, quae longo tot saeculorum usu in ipsa Ecclesia probata est, in publicis lectionibus, disputationibus, praedicationibus et expositionibus pro authentica habeatur, et quod nemo illam reicere quovis praetextu audeat vel praesumat [cf. *3825].

Praeterea ad coercenda petulantia ingenia decernit, ut nemo, suae prudentiae innixus, in rebus fidei et morum, ad aedificationem doctrinae christianae pertinentium, sacram Scripturam ad suos sensus contorquens, contra eum sensum, quem tenuit et tenet sancta mater Ecclesia, cuius est iudicare de vero sensu et interpretatione Scripturarum sanctarum, aut etiam contra unanimem consensum Patrum ipsam Scripturam sacram interpretari audeat, etiamsi huiusmodi interpretationes nullo umquam tempore in lucem edendae forent. . . .

Sed et impressoribus modum in hac parte, ut par est, imponere volens . . . statuit, ut posthac sacra Scriptura, potissimum vero haec ipsa vetus et Vulgata editio quam emendatissime imprimatur, nullique liceat imprimere vel imprimi facere quosvis libros de rebus sacris sine nomine auctoris, neque illos in futurum vendere aut etiam apud se retinere, nisi primum examinati probatique fuerint ab Ordinario. . . .

If anyone does not accept all these books in their entirety, with all their parts, as they are being read in the Catholic Church and are contained in the ancient Latin Vulgate editions, as sacred and canonical and knowingly and deliberately rejects the aforesaid traditions, let him be anathema. 1504

Hence, let all understand the order and manner by which the council will proceed after laying down the foundation of the profession of faith and what witnesses and supports it will especially use in strengthening its teachings and renewing morals in the Church. 1505

Moreover, because the same holy council thought it very useful to the Church if it were known which of all the Latin editions of the sacred books now in circulation is to be regarded as the authentic version, 1506

it declares and decrees: This same ancient Vulgate version which has been preserved by the Church for so many centuries is to be regarded as authentic in public readings, disputations, sermons, and expositions, and let no one dare or presume to reject it on any grounds [cf. *3825].

Furthermore, to restrain irresponsible minds, it decrees that no one, relying on his own prudence, may twist Holy Scripture in matters of faith and practice that pertain to the building up of Christian doctrine, according to his own mind, contrary to the meaning that Holy Mother the Church has held and holds—since it belongs to her to judge the true meaning and interpretation of Holy Scripture—and that no one may dare to interpret the Scripture in a way contrary to the unanimous consensus of the Fathers, even if such interpretations are not intended for publication. . . . 1507

In this regard, as is right, the council wishes to impose a restriction also on printers . . . (and) determines that hereafter Sacred Scripture, particularly this ancient Vulgate edition, shall be printed in the most correct manner possible; that no one may print or have printed any books on sacred subjects without the name of the author or in future sell them or even keep them in his possession unless they have first been examined and approved by the Ordinary. . . . 1508

1510–1516: Session 5, June 17, 1546: Decree on Original Sin

The deliberation on original sin began on May 24, 1546. On the same day, Cardinal Pedro Pacheco of Jaen proposed defining the Immaculate Conception of Mary (cf. SGTr 5:166_{31–33}; 5:199₁₀). The reason for the decree was furnished especially by Luther's concept of the link between original sin and concupiscence as well as by the practice of the Anabaptists. It is worthwhile to compare the definitive decree with the preparatory draft presented on June 5 (SGTr 5:196f. / TheiTr 1:130a–131a).

Ed.: SGTr 5:238–40 / RiTr 13–15 / MaC 33:27A–29B / HaC 10:27C–29C / COeD, 3rd ed., 665–67.

1510 Ut fides nostra catholica, “sine qua impossibile est placere Deo” [Hbr 11:6], purgatis erroribus in sua sinceritate integra et illibata permaneat, et ne populus christianus “omni vento doctrinae circumferatur” [Eph 4:14], cum serpens ille antiquus [cf. Apc 12:9; 20:2], humani generis perpetuus hostis, inter plurima mala, quibus Ecclesia Dei his nostris temporibus perturbatur, etiam de peccato originali eiusque remedio non solum nova, sed etiam vetera dissidia excitaverit: sacrosancta oecumenica et generalis Tridentina Synodus...

iam ad revocandos errantes et nutantes confirmandos accedere volens, sacrarum Scripturarum et sanctorum Patrum ac probatissimorum conciliorum testimonia et ipsius Ecclesiae iudicium et consensum secuta, haec de ipso peccato originali statuit, fatetur ac declarat:

1511 1. Si quis non confitetur, primum hominem Adam, cum mandatum Dei in paradiso fuisset transgressus, statim sanctitatem et iustitiam, in qua constitutus fuerat, amisisse incurrisseque per offensam praevaricationis huiusmodi iram et indignationem Dei atque ideo mortem, quam antea illi comminatus fuerat Deus, et cum morte captivitatem sub eius potestate, “qui mortis” deinde “habuit imperium, hoc est diaboli” [Hbr 2:14], totumque Adam per illam praevaricationis offensam secundum corpus et animam in deterius commutatum fuisse [*cf. 371]: anathema sit.

1512 2. “Si quis Adae praevaricationem sibi soli et non eius propagini asserit nocuisse”, acceptam a Deo sanctitatem et iustitiam, quam perdidit, sibi soli et non nobis etiam eum perdidisse; aut inquinatum illum per inoboedientiae peccatum “mortem” et poenas “corporis tantum in omne genus humanum transfudisse, non autem et peccatum, quod mors est animae”: anathema sit, “cum contradicat Apostolo dicenti: ‘Per unum hominem peccatum intravit in mundum, et per peccatum mors, et ita in omnes homines mors pertransiit, in quo omnes peccaverunt’ [Rm 5:12]” [372*].

1513 3. Si quis hoc Adae peccatum, quod origine unum est et propagatione, non imitatione transfusum omnibus inest unicuique proprium, vel per humanae naturae vires, vel per aliud remedium asserit tolli, quam per meritum unius mediatoris Domini nostri Iesu Christi [*cf. 1347], qui nos Deo reconciliavit in sanguine suo [cf. Rm 5:9s], “factus nobis iustitia, sanctificatio et redemptio” [I Cor 1:30]; aut negat, ipsum Christi Iesu meritum per baptismi sacramentum, in forma Ecclesiae rite collatum, tam adultis quam parvulis applicari: anathema sit.

Our Catholic faith “without which it is impossible to please God” [Heb 11:6] must be kept free from errors, pure and unstained; Christian people should not be “carried about with every wind of doctrine” [Eph 4:14], while the ancient serpent [cf. Rev 12:9, 20:2], the perpetual enemy of mankind, has stirred up among the many evils that beset the Church of God in this time of ours both new and old controversies about original sin and its remedy.

For these reasons the holy, ecumenical, and general Council of Trent...

in order to call back the erring and to strengthen the wavering, following the witness of Holy Scripture, of the holy Fathers, and of the approved councils, and the judgment and consensus of the Church herself, states, professes, and declares the following concerning original sin:

1. If anyone does not profess that Adam, the first man, by transgressing God’s commandment in paradise, at once lost the holiness and justice in which he had been constituted; and that, through the offense of this sin, he drew upon himself the wrath and indignation of God and consequently death with which God had threatened him and, together with death, captivity in the power of him who henceforth “has the power of death” [Heb 2:14], that is, the devil; and that “the whole Adam, body and soul, was changed for the worse through the offense of his sin” [*cf. 371], let him be anathema.

2. “If anyone asserts that Adam’s sin harmed only him and not his descendants” and that the holiness and justice received from God that he lost was lost only for him and not for us also; or that, stained by the sin of disobedience, he transmitted to all mankind “only death” and the sufferings “of the body but not sin as well, which is the death of the soul”, let him be anathema. “For he contradicts the words of the apostle: ‘Sin came into the world through one man and death through sin, and so death spread to all men as all sinned in him’ [Rom 5:12, Vulg.]” [372*].

3. If anyone asserts that this sin of Adam, which is one in origin and is transmitted by propagation, not by imitation, and which is in all men, proper to each, can be taken away by the powers of human nature or by any remedy other than the merits of the one mediator our Lord Jesus Christ [*cf. 1347], who reconciled us with God by his blood [cf. Rom 5:9f.], being “made our righteousness and sanctification and redemption” [I Cor 1:30]; or if anyone denies that the same merit of Christ Jesus is applied to adults and children alike through the sacrament of baptism duly administered in the form given by the Church, let him be anathema.

Quia “non est aliud nomen sub caelo datum hominibus, in quo oporteat nos salvos fieri” [Act 4:12]. Unde illa vox: “Ecce agnus Dei, ecce qui tollit peccata mundi” [Io 1:29]. Et illa: “Quicumque baptizati estis, Christum induistis” [Gal 3:27].

“Si quis parvulos recentes ab uteris matrum baptizandos negat”, etiam si fuerint a baptizatis parentibus orti, “aut dicit, in remissionem quidem peccatorum eos baptizari, sed nihil ex Adam trahere originalis peccati, quod regenerationis lavacro necesse sit expiari” ad vitam aeternam consequendam, “unde fit consequens, ut in eis forma baptismatis in remissionem peccatorum non vera, sed falsa intelligatur: anathema sit.

Quoniam non aliter intelligendum est id, quod dicit Apostolus: ‘Per unum hominem peccatum intravit in mundum, et per peccatum mors, et ita in omnes homines mors pertransiit, in quo omnes peccaverunt’ [Rm 5:12], nisi quemadmodum Ecclesia catholica ubique diffusa semper intellexit. Propter hanc enim regulam fidei”, ex traditione Apostolorum, “etiam parvuli, qui nihil peccatorum in semetipsis adhuc committere potuerunt, ideo in remissionem peccatorum veraciter baptizantur, ut in eis regeneratione mundetur, quod generatione contraxerunt” [*223]. “Nisi enim quis renatus fuerit ex aqua et Spiritu Sancto, non potest introire in regnum Dei” [Io 3:5].

5. Si quis per Iesu Christi Domini nostri gratiam, quae in baptisate confertur, reatum originalis peccati remitti negat, aut etiam asserit, non tolli totum id, quod veram et propriam peccati rationem habet, sed illud dicit tantum radi¹ aut non imputari: anathema sit.

In renatis enim nihil odit Deus, quia “nihil est damnationis iis” [Rm 8:1], qui vere “consepulti sunt cum Christo per baptismum in mortem” [Rm 6:4], qui “non secundum carnem ambulant” [Rm 8:1], sed veterem hominem exuentes et novum, qui secundum Deum creatus est, induentes [cf. Eph 4:22–24; Col 3:9s], innocentes, immaculati, puri, innoxii ac Deo dilecti filii effecti sunt, “heredes quidem Dei, coheredes autem Christi” [Rm 8:17], ita ut nihil prorsus eos ab ingressu caeli remoretur.

Manere autem in baptizatis concupiscentiam vel fomitem, haec sancta Synodus fatetur et sentit; quae cum ad agonem relicta sit, nocere non consentientibus et viriliter per Christi Iesu gratiam repugnantibus non valet. Quin immo “qui legitime certaverit, coronabitur” [2 Tim 2:5]. Hanc concupiscentiam, quam aliquando Apostolus “peccatum” [cf. Rm 6:12–15; 7:7, 14–20]

“For there is no other name under heaven given among men by which we must be saved” [Acts 4:12]. Hence the words: “Behold, the Lamb of God, who takes away the sins of the world” [Jn 1:29]; and: “as many of you as were baptized into Christ have put on Christ” [Gal 3:27].

4. “If anyone denies that infants newly born from their mother’s womb are to be baptized”, even when born from baptized parents; “or says that, though they are baptized for the remission of sins, yet they do not contract from Adam any trace of original sin that must be expiated by the bath of regeneration” that leads to eternal life, “so that in their case the formula of baptism ‘for the forgiveness of sins’ would no longer be true but would be false, let him be anathema. 1514

“For, what the apostle says: ‘Sin came into the world through one man and death through sin, and so death spread to all men as all sinned in him’ [Rom 5:12, Vulg.], should only be understood in the sense in which the Catholic Church spread over the whole world has understood it at all times. For, because of this rule of faith”, in accordance with apostolic tradition, “even children who of themselves cannot have yet committed any sin are truly baptized for the remission of sins, so that by regeneration they may be cleansed from what they contracted through generation” [*223]. For “unless one is reborn of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God” [Jn 3:5].

5. If anyone denies that the guilt of original sin is remitted by the grace of our Lord Jesus Christ given in baptism or asserts that all that is sin in the true and proper sense is not taken away but only brushed over¹ or not imputed, let him be anathema. 1515

For, in those who are reborn God hates nothing, because “there is no condemnation” [Rom 8:1] for those who were “buried with Christ by baptism into death” [Rom 6:4], “who do not walk according to the flesh” [Rom 8:1], but who, putting off the old man and putting on the new man, created in accordance with God [cf. Eph 4:22–24; Col 3:9f.], innocent, unstained, pure, and guiltless, have become the beloved sons of God, “heirs of God and fellow heirs with Christ” [Rom 8:17], so that nothing henceforth holds them back from entering into heaven.

The holy council, however, professes and thinks that concupiscentia or the tinder of sin remains in the baptized. Since it is left for us to wrestle with, it cannot harm those who do not consent but manfully resist it by the grace of Jesus Christ. Rather, “one who strives lawfully will be crowned” [cf. 2 Tim 2:5]. Of this concupiscentia, which the apostle occasionally calls “sin” [cf. Rom 6:12–15; appellat, sancta Synodus declarat, Ecclesiam catholicam numquam intellexisse, peccatum appellari, quod vere et proprie in renatis peccatum sit, sed quia ex peccato est et ad peccatum inclinat. Si quis autem contrarium senserit: anathema sit.

*1515 ¹ Cf. Augustine, Contra duas epistulas Pelagianorum I, 13, no. 26 (CSEL 60:445 / PL 44:562).

- 1516 6. Declarat tamen haec ipsa sancta Synodus, non esse suae intentionis, comprehendere in hoc decreto, ubi de peccato originali agitur, beatam et immaculatam Virginem Mariam Dei genitricem, sed observandas esse constitutiones felicitis recordationis Sixti Papae IV, sub poenis in eis constitutionibus contentis, quas innovat [*1400, 1425s].

7:7, 14–20], the holy council declares: The Catholic Church has never understood that it is called sin because it would be sin in the true and proper sense in those who have been reborn, but because it comes from sin and inclines to sin. If anyone thinks the contrary, let him be anathema.

6. This same holy council declares that it is not its intention to include in this decree dealing with original sin the Blessed and Immaculate Virgin Mary, Mother of God, but that the constitutions of Pope Sixtus IV of blessed memory are to be observed under the penalties contained in those constitutions, which it renews [*1400, 1425f].

1520–1583: Session 6, January 13, 1547: Decree on Justification

The discussion on justification began on June 22, 1546 (SGTr 5:261 / TheiTr 1:159). On July 24, September 23, and November 5, respectively, a preliminary draft of the decree was presented (SGTr 5:384, 420, 634–41 / TheiTr 1:203–9, 220–25, 280–85). Further modifications were later added. In the decree, the doctrines of Luther on justification and the cooperation of man with grace are in particular rejected, along with concepts of John Calvin on predestination (cf. cann. 6 and 17). However, the opposite errors of Jovinian and Pelagius, which deny the necessity of grace to obtain and conserve justification, are likewise repudiated (cf. cann. 1–3, 22f.).

Ed.: SGTr 5:791–99 / RiTr 23–33 / MaC 33:32D–43E / COeD, 3rd ed., 671–81.

Foreword

- 1520 Cum hoc tempore, non sine multarum animarum iactura et gravi ecclesiasticae unitatis detrimento, erronea quaedam disseminata sit de iustificatione doctrina: ad laudem et gloriam omnipotentis Dei, Ecclesiae tranquillitatem et animarum salutem sacrosancta oecumenica et generalis Tridentina synodus ... exponere intendit omnibus Christifidelibus veram sanamque doctrinam ipsius iustificationis, quam “sol iustitiae” [Mal 4:2] Christus Iesus, “fidei nostrae auctor et consummator” [Hbr 12:2], docuit, Apostoli tradiderunt et catholica Ecclesia, Spiritu Sancto suggerente, perpetuo retinuit; districtius inhibendo, ne deinceps audeat quisquam aliter credere, praedicare aut docere, quam praesenti decreto statuitur ac declaratur.

Since at this time a certain erroneous doctrine about justification is being disseminated, not without the loss of many souls and serious damage to Church unity, this holy, ecumenical, and general Council of Trent, ... for the praise and glory of almighty God, for the tranquility of the Church, and for the salvation of souls, ... intends to set forth for all the faithful of Christ the true and sound doctrine of justification which the “sun of justice” [Mal 4:2], Jesus Christ, “the author and perfecter of our faith” [Heb 12:2], has taught, which the apostles have handed down, and which the Catholic Church, under the prompting of the Holy Spirit, has always preserved. The council strictly forbids that henceforth anyone dare to believe, preach, or teach anything contrary to what is determined and declared in this present decree.

Cap. 1. De naturae et legis ad iustificandos homines imbecillitate

Chapter 1. The Inability of Nature and the Law to Justify Man

- 1521 Primum declarat sancta Synodus, ad iustificationis doctrinam probe et sincere intelligendam oportere, ut unusquisque agnoscat et fateatur, quod, cum omnes homines in praevaricatione Adae innocentiam perdidissent [cf. *Rm 5:12; 1 Cor 15:22; 239], “facti immundi” [Is 64:6] et (ut Apostolus inquit) “natura filii irae” [Eph 2:3], quemadmodum in decreto de peccato originali exposuit, usque adeo servi erant peccati [cf. Rm 6:20] et sub potestate diaboli ac mortis, ut non modo gentes per vim naturae [can. 1], sed ne Iudaei quidem per ipsam etiam litteram Legis Moysi inde liberari aut

First the holy council declares that for a correct and clear understanding of the doctrine of justification it is necessary that each one admits and confesses that all men, having lost innocence through the sin of Adam [cf. *Rom 5:12; 1 Cor 15:22; 239], “became unclean” [Is 64:6] and, according to the apostle, were “by nature children of wrath” [Eph 2:3], as the council taught in its decree on original sin. So completely were they the slaves of sin [cf. Rom 6:20] and under the power of the devil and of death that not only the Gentiles by means of the power of nature [can. 1] but even the Jews by means surgere possent, tametsi in eis liberum arbitrium minime exstinctum [can. 5] esset, viribus licet attenuatum et inclinatum [cf. *378].

Cap. 2. De dispensatione et mysterio adventus Christi

Quo factum est, ut caelestis Pater, “Pater misericordiarum et Deus totius consolationis” [2 Cor 1:3], Christum Iesum [can. 1] Filium suum, et ante Legem et Legis tempore multis sanctis Patribus declaratum ac promissum [cf. Gn 49:10, 18], cum venit beata illa “plenitudo temporis” [Eph 1:10; Gal 4:4], ad homines miserit, ut et Iudaeos, “qui sub Lege erant, redimeret” [Gal 4:5], et “gentes, quae non sectabantur iustitiam, iustitiam apprehenderent” [Rm 9:30], atque omnes “adoptionem filiorum reciperent” [Gal 4:5]. Hunc, “proposuit Deus propitiatorem per fidem in sanguine ipsius” [Rm 3:25], “pro peccatis nostris, non solum autem pro nostris, sed etiam pro totius mundi” [1 Io 2:2].

Cap. 3. Qui per Christum iustificantur

Verum etsi ille “pro omnibus mortuus est” [2 Cor 5:15], non omnes tamen mortis eius beneficium recipiunt, sed ii dumtaxat, quibus meritum passionis eius communicatur. Nam sicut revera homines, nisi ex semine Adae propagati nascerentur, non nascerentur iniusti, cum ea propagatione per ipsum, dum concipiuntur, propriam iniustitiam contrahant: ita nisi in Christo renascerentur, numquam iustificarentur [cann. 2 et 10], cum ea renascentia per meritum passionis eius gratia, qua iusti fiunt, illis tribuatur. Pro hoc beneficio Apostolus gratias nos semper agere hortatur Patri, “qui dignos nos fecit in partem sortis sanctorum in lumine, et eripuit de potestate tenebrarum, transtulitque in regnum Filii dilectionis suae, in quo habemus redemptionem et remissionem peccatorum” [Col 1:12–14].

Cap. 4. Insinuatur descriptio iustificationis impii, et modus eius in statu gratiae

Quibus verbis iustificationis impii descriptio insinuatur, ut sit translatio ab eo statu, in quo homo nascitur filius primi Adae, in statum gratiae et “adoptionis filiorum” [Rm 8:15] Dei, per secundum Adam Iesum Christum Salvatorem nostrum; quae quidem translatio post Evangelium promulgatum sine lavacro regenerationis [can. 5 de baptismo] aut eius voto fieri non potest, sicut scriptum est: “Nisi quis renatus of the letter of the law of Moses were unable to liberate themselves and to rise from that state, even though their free will, weakened and distorted as it was, was in no way extinct [can. 5; cf. *378].

Chapter 2. The Divine Dispensation and the Mystery of Christ's Coming

And so it came to pass that, when the blessed “fullness of time” [Eph 1:10; Gal 4:4] had come, the heavenly Father, “the Father of mercies and God of all comfort” [2 Cor 1:3], sent to men his own Son Jesus Christ [can. 1], who had been announced and promised to many holy Fathers before the law and during the time of the law [cf. Gen 49:10, 18]. He was sent that the Jews, who were under the law, might be redeemed and that the Gentiles “who were not pursuing righteousness” [Rom 9:30] might attain it and that all “might receive adoption as sons” [Gal 4:5]. God has “put him forward as an expiation by his blood, to be received by faith” [Rom 3:25], for our sins and “not for our sins only, but also for the sins of the whole world” [1 Jn 2:2].

Chapter 3. On Those Who Are Justified through Christ

But even though “Christ died for all” [2 Cor 5:15], still not all receive the benefit of his death, but only those to whom the merit of his Passion is imparted. For, as truly as men would not be born unrighteous if they were not born children of Adam’s seed, since it is because of their descent from him that in their conception they contract unrighteousness as their own, likewise they would never be justified if they were not reborn in Christ [cann. 2 and 10], for it is this rebirth that bestows on them, through the merit of his Passion, the grace by which they become just. It is for this favor that the apostle exhorts us always to give thanks to the Father, “who has qualified us to share in the inheritance of the saints in light” and “has delivered us from the dominion of darkness and transferred us to the kingdom of his beloved Son in whom we have redemption, the forgiveness of sins” [Col 1:12–14].

Chapter 4. A Brief Description of the Sinner's Justification: Its Manner under the Dispensation of Grace

In these words a description is outlined of the justification of the sinner as being a transition from the state in which man is born a son of the first Adam to the state of grace and adoption as sons of God [Rom: 8:15] through the second Adam, Jesus Christ our Savior. After the promulgation of the gospel, this transition cannot take place without the bath of regeneration [can. 5, on baptism] or the desire for it, as it is written: “Unless one fuerit ex aqua et Spiritu Sancto, non potest introire in regnum Dei” [Jo 3:5].

1522

1523

1524

Cap. 5. De necessitate praeparationis ad iustificationem in adultis, et unde sit 1525 Declarat praeterea, ipsius iustificationis exordium in adultis a Dei per Christum Iesum praeueniente gratia [can. 3] sumendum esse, hoc est, ab eius vocatione, qua nullis eorum existentibus meritis vocantur, ut qui per peccata a Deo aversi erant, per eius excitantem atque adiuvantem gratiam ad convertendum se ad suam ipsorum iustificationem, eidem gratiae libere [cann. 4 et 5] assentiendo et cooperando, disponantur, ita ut, tangente Deo cor hominis per Spiritus Sancti illuminationem, neque homo ipse nihil omnino agat, inspirationem illam recipiens, quippe qui illam et abicere potest, neque tamen sine gratia Dei movere se ad iustitiam coram illo libera sua voluntate possit [can. 3]. Unde in sacris Litteris cum dicitur: “Convertimini ad me, et ego convertar ad vos” [Za 1:3], libertatis nostrae admonemur; cum respondemus: “Converte nos, Domine, ad te, et convertemur” [Lam 5:21], Dei nos gratia praeveniri confitemur.

Cap. 6. Modus praeparationis

1526 Disponuntur autem ad ipsam iustitiam [cann. 7 et 9], dum excitati divina gratia et adiuti, fidem ex auditu [cf. Rm 10:17] concipientes, libere moventur in Deum, credentes, vera esse, quae divinitus revelata et promissa sunt [cann. 12–14], atque illud in primis, a Deo iustificari impium per gratiam eius, “per redemptionem, quae est in Christo Iesu” [Rm 3:24], et dum, peccatores se esse intelligentes, a divinae iustitiae timore, quo utiliter concutiuntur [can. 8], ad considerandam Dei misericordiam se convertendo, in spem eriguntur, fidentes, Deum sibi propter Christum propitium fore, illumque tamquam omnis iustitiae fontem diligere incipiunt ac propterea moventur adversus peccata per odium aliquod et detestationem [can. 9], hoc est, per eam paenitentiam, quam ante baptismum agi oportet [cf. Act 2:38]; denique dum proponunt suscipere baptismum, inchoare novam vitam et servare divina mandata.

1527 De hac dispositione scriptum est: “Accedentem ad Deum oportet credere, quia est et quod inquireribus se remunerator sit” [Hbr 11:6], et: “Confide, fili, remittuntur tibi peccata tua” [Mt 9:2; Mc 2:5], et: “Timor Domini expellit peccatum” [Sir 1:27], et: “Paenitentiam agite, et baptizetur unusquisque vestrum in nomine Iesu Christi in remissionem peccatorum vestrorum, et accipietis donum Spiritus Sancti” [Act 2:38], et: “Euntes ergo docete is reborn of water and the Spirit, he cannot enter the kingdom of God” [Jn 3:5].

Chapter 5. The Necessity for Adults to Prepare Themselves for Justification and the Origin of This Justification

The council, moreover, declares that in adults the beginning of justification must be attributed to God’s prevenient grace through Jesus Christ [can. 3], that is, to his call addressed to them without any previous merits of theirs. Thus, those who through their sins were turned away from God, awakened and assisted by his grace, are disposed to turn to their own justification by freely assenting to and cooperating with that grace [cann. 4 and 5]. In this way, God touches the heart of man with the illumination of the Holy Spirit, but man himself is not entirely inactive while receiving that inspiration, since he can reject it; and yet, without God’s grace, he cannot by his own free will move toward justice in God’s sight [can. 3]. Hence, when it is said in Sacred Scripture: “Return to me and I will return to you” [Zech 1:3], we are reminded of our freedom; but when we reply: “Restore us to yourself, O Lord, that we may be restored” [Lam 5:21], we acknowledge that God’s grace precedes us.

Chapter 6. The Manner of Preparation

Adults are disposed for that justice [cann. 7 and 9] when, awakened and assisted by divine grace, they conceive faith from hearing [cf. Rom 10:17] and are freely led to God, believing to be true what has been divinely revealed and promised [cann. 12–14], especially that the sinner is justified by God’s grace “through the redemption which is in Christ Jesus” [Rom 3:24]; when, understanding that they are sinners and turning from the fear of divine justice—which gives them a salutary shock [can. 8]—to the consideration of God’s mercy, they are raised up in hope, confident that God will be merciful to them because of Christ; and they begin to love God as the source of all justice and are thereby moved by a certain hatred and detestation for sin [can. 9], that is, by that repentance which must be practiced before baptism [cf. Acts 2:38] when, finally, they determine to receive baptism, to begin a new life, and to keep the divine commandments.

Scripture says about this disposition: “Whoever would draw near to God must believe that he exists and that he rewards those who seek him” [Heb 11:6]; and: “Take heart, my son; your sins are forgiven” [Mt 9:2; cf. Mk 2:5]; and: “The fear of the Lord drives out sin” [Sir 1:27, Vulg.]; and: “Do penance, and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the forgiveness of your sins; and you shall receive the gift of the Holy omnes gentes, baptizantes eos in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti, docentes eos servare quaecumque mandavi vobis” [Mt 28:19s], denique: “Praeparate corda vestra Domino” [1 Sm 7:3].

Cap. 7. Quid sit iustificatio impii, et quae eius causae

Hanc dispositionem seu praeparationem iustificatio ipsa consequitur, quae non est sola peccatorum remissio [can. 11], sed et sanctificatio et renovatio interioris hominis per voluntariam susceptionem gratiae et donorum, unde homo ex iniusto fit iustus et ex inimico amicus, ut sit “heres secundum spem vitae aeternae” [Tit 3:7].

Huius iustificationis causae sunt: finalis quidem gloria Dei et Christi ac vita aeterna; efficiens vero misericors Deus, qui gratuito abluit et sanctificat [cf. 1 Cor 6:11] signans et ungens [cf. 2 Cor 1:21s] “Spiritu promissionis Sancto, qui est pignus hereditatis nostrae” [Eph 1:13s]; meritoria autem dilectissimus Unigenitus suus, Dominus noster Iesus Christus, qui “cum essemus inimici” [Rm 5:10], “propter nimiam caritatem, qua dilexit nos” [Eph 2:4], sua sanctissima passione in ligno crucis nobis iustificationem meruit [can. 10], et pro nobis Deo Patri satisfecit; instrumentalis item sacramentum baptismi, quod est “sacramentum fidei”,¹ sine qua nulli umquam contigit iustificatio.

Demum unica formalis causa est iustitia Dei, non qua ipse iustus est, sed qua nos iustos facit² [cann. 10 et 11], qua videlicet ab eo donati renovamur spiritu mentis nostrae [cf. Eph 4:23], et non modo reputamur, sed vere iusti nominamur et sumus [cf. 1 Io 3:1], iustitiam in nobis recipientes unusquisque suam, secundum mensuram, quam Spiritus Sanctus partitur singulis prout vult [cf. 1 Cor 12:11], et secundum propriam cuiusque dispositionem et cooperationem.

Quamquam enim nemo possit esse iustus, nisi cui merita passionis Domini nostri Iesu Christi communicantur, id tamen in hac impii iustificatione fit, dum eiusdem sanctissimae passionis merito per Spiritum Sanctum caritas Dei diffunditur in cordibus [cf. Rm 5:5] eorum, qui iustificantur, atque ipsis inhaeret [can. 11]. Unde in ipsa iustificatione cum remissione peccatorum Spirit” (Acts 2:38); and: “Go therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, teaching them to observe all that I have commanded you” [Mt 28:19–20]; <and> finally: “Direct your heart to the Lord” [1 Sam 7:3].

Chapter 7. The Nature and the Causes of the Sinner’s Justification

This disposition or preparation is followed by justification itself, which is not only the remission of sins [can. 11] but the sanctification and renewal of the interior man through the voluntary reception of grace and of the gifts, whereby from unjust man becomes just, and from enemy a friend, that he may be “an heir in hope of eternal life” [Tit 3:7].

The causes of this justification are the following: the final cause is the glory of God and of Christ and life everlasting. The efficient cause is the merciful God who gratuitously washes and sanctifies [cf. 1 Cor 6:11], sealing and anointing [cf. 2 Cor 1:21f.] “with the promised Holy Spirit, who is the guarantee of our inheritance” [Eph 1:13f.]. The meritorious cause is the most beloved only begotten Son of God, our Lord Jesus Christ, who, “while we were enemies” [Rom 5:10], “out of the great love with which he loved us” [Eph 2:4], merited for us justification by his most holy Passion on the wood of the Cross [can. 10] and made satisfaction for us to God the Father. The instrumental cause (is) the sacrament of baptism, which is the “sacrament of faith”,¹ without which <faith> no one has ever been justified.

Finally, the single formal cause is “the justice of God, not <that> by which he himself is just, but <that> by which he makes us just” [cann. 10 and 11],² namely, the justice that we have as a gift from him and by which we are spiritually renewed [cf. Eph 4:23]. Thus, not only are we considered just, but we are truly called just and we are just [cf. 1 Jn 3:1], each one receiving within himself his own justice, according to the measure that “the Holy Spirit apportions to each one individually as he wills” [cf. 1 Cor 12:11] and according to each one’s personal disposition and cooperation.

For although no one can be just unless the merits of the Passion of our Lord Jesus Christ are imparted to him, still this communication takes place in the justification of the sinner, when by the merit of the same most holy Passion, “God’s love is poured through the Holy Spirit into the hearts” [Rom 5:5] of those who are being justified and inheres in them [can. 11]. Hence, in the *1529¹ Ambrose of Milan, De Spiritu Sancto I, 3, no. 42 (PL 16 [1866]: 743A); Augustine, Letter 98 to Bishop Boniface, chaps. 9f. (CSEL 34/II:351₉, 12, 20, 532₁₂ / PL 33:364); Innocent III, cf. *769; 788.

² Cf. Augustine, De Trinitate XIV, 12, no. 15 (W.J. Mountain and F. Glorie: CpChL 50A [1968]: 442f. / PL 42:1048).

haec omnia simul infusa accipit homo per Iesum Christum, cui inseritur: fidem, spem et caritatem.

1531 Nam fides, nisi ad eam spes accedat et caritas, neque unit perfecte cum Christo, neque corporis eius vivum membrum efficit. Qua ratione verissime dicitur, fidem sine operibus mortuam et otiosam esse [cf. Iac 2:17, 20; can. 19], et “in Christo Iesu neque circumcisionem aliquid valere, neque praeputium, sed fidem, quae per caritatem operator” [Gal 5:6; cf. 6:15].

Hanc fidem ante baptismi sacramentum ex Apostolorum traditione catechumeni ab Ecclesia petunt, cum petunt “fidem vitam aeternam praestantem”,¹ quam sine spe et caritate fides praestare non potest. Unde et statim verbum Christi audiunt: “Si vis ad vitam ingredi, serva mandata”² [Mt 19:17; cann. 18–20]. Itaque veram et christianam iustitiam accipientes, eam ceu primam stolam [cf. Lc 15:22] pro illa, quam Adam sua inobedientia sibi et nobis perdidit, per Christum Iesum illis donatam, candidam et immaculatam iubentur statim renati conservare, ut eam perferant ante tribunal Domini nostri Iesu Christi et habeant vitam aeternam.³

Cap. 8. Quo modo intelligatur, impium per fidem et gratis iustificari 1532 Cum vero Apostolus dicit, iustificari hominem “per fidem” [can. 9], et “gratis” [Rm 3:22, 24], ea verba in eo sensu intelligenda sunt, quem perpetuus Ecclesiae catholicae consensus tenuit et expressit, ut scilicet per fidem ideo iustificari dicamur, quia “fides est humanae salutis initium”,¹ fundamentum et radix omnis iustificationis, “sine qua impossibile est placere Deo” [Hbr 11:6] et ad filiorum eius consortium pervenire; gratis autem iustificari ideo dicamur, quia nihil eorum, quae iustificationem praecedunt, sive fides, sive opera, ipsam iustificationis gratiam promeretur; “si enim gratia est, iam non ex operibus; alioquin (ut idem Apostolus inquit) gratia iam non est gratia” [Rm 11:6].

very act of justification, together with the remission of sins, man receives through Jesus Christ, into whom he is inserted, the gifts of faith, hope, and charity, all infused at the same time.

For faith without hope and charity neither unites a man perfectly with Christ nor makes him a living member of his body. Therefore it is rightly said that faith by itself, if it has no works, is dead and unprofitable [cf. Jas 2:17, 20; can. 19] and that “in Christ Jesus neither circumcision nor uncircumcision is of any avail, but faith working through love” [Gal 5:6, cf. 6:15].

This is the faith that, in keeping with apostolic tradition, the catechumens ask of the Church before the reception of baptism when they ask for “the faith that gives eternal life”,¹ a life that faith without hope and charity cannot give. Hence they immediately hear Christ’s words: “If you would enter life, keep the commandments” [Mt 19:17; cann. 18–20].² Accordingly, while they receive the true Christian justice, as soon as they have been reborn, they are commanded to keep it resplendent and spotless, like their “best robe” [Lk 15:22] given to them through Jesus Christ in place of the one Adam lost for himself and for us by his disobedience, so that they may wear it before the tribunal of our Lord Jesus Christ and have eternal life.³

Chapter 8. The Correct Understanding of the Sinner’s Gratuitous Justification through Faith

When the apostle says that man is justified “through faith” [can. 9] and “gratuitously” [Rom 3:22, 24], those words are to be understood in the sense in which the Catholic Church has held and declared them with uninterrupted unanimity, namely, that we are said to be justified through faith because “faith is the beginning of man’s salvation”,¹ the foundation and root of all justification, “without which it is impossible to please God” [Heb 11:6] and to come into the fellowship of his sons. And we are said to be justified gratuitously because nothing that precedes justification, neither faith nor works, merits the grace of justification; for “if it is by grace, it is no longer on the basis of works; otherwise (as the same apostle says) grace would no longer be grace” [Rom 11:6].

*1531¹ Rituale Romanum, Order of Baptism, no. 1.

² Ibid., no. 2.

³ Ibid., no. 24.

*1532¹ Fulgentius of Ruspe, De fide liber ad Petrum, prologus, no. 1 (J. Fraipont and C. Lambot; CpChL 91A [1968]: 711_{9f} / PL 65:671 / PL 40:753 [Pseudo-Augustine]).

Cap. 9. Contra inanem haereticorum fiduciam

Quamvis autem necessarium sit credere, neque remitti, neque remissa umquam fuisse peccata, nisi gratis divina misericordia propter Christum: nemini tamen fiduciam et certitudinem remissionis peccatorum suorum iactanti et in ea sola quiescenti peccata dimitti vel dimissa esse dicendum est, cum apud haereticos et schismaticos possit esse, immo nostra tempestate sit et magna contra Ecclesiam catholicam contentione praedicetur vana haec et ab omni pietate remota fiducia [can. 12].

Sed neque illud asserendum est, oportere eos, qui vere iustificati sunt, absque ulla omnino dubitatione apud semetipsos statuere, se esse iustificatos, neminemque a peccatis absolvi ac iustificari, nisi eum, qui certo credat, se absolutum et iustificatum esse, atque hac sola fide absolutionem et iustificationem perfici [can. 14], quasi qui hoc non credit, de Dei promissis deque mortis et resurrectionis Christi efficacia dubitet. Nam sicut nemo pius de Dei misericordia, de Christi merito deque sacramentorum virtute et efficacia dubitare debet: sic quilibet, dum seipsum suamque propriam infirmitatem et indispositionem respicit, de sua gratia formidare et timere potest [can. 13], cum nullus scire valeat certitudine fidei, cui non potest subesse falsum, se gratiam Dei esse consecutum.

Cap. 10. De acceptae iustificationis incremento

Sic ergo iustificati et “amici Dei” ac “domestici” [Io 15:15; Eph 2:19] facti, “euntes de virtute in virtutem” [Ps 83:8], “renovantur (ut Apostolus inquit) de die in diem” [2 Cor 4:16], hoc est, mortificando membra carnis suae [cf. Col 3:5] et exhibendo ea arma iustitiae in sanctificationem [cf. Rm 6:13, 19] per observationem mandatorum Dei et Ecclesiae: in ipsa iustitia per Christi gratiam accepta, cooperante fide bonis operibus [cf. Iac 2:22], crescunt atque magis iustificantur [cann. 24 et 32], sicut scriptum est: “Qui iustus est, iustificetur adhuc” [Apc 22:11], et iterum: “Ne verearis usque ad mortem iustificari” [Sir 18:22], et rursus: “Videtes, quoniam ex operibus iustificatur homo et non ex fide tantum” [Iac 2:24]. Hoc vero iustitiae incrementum petit sancta Ecclesia, cum orat: “Da nobis, Domine, fidei, spei et caritatis augmentum.”¹

Chapter 9. Against the Vain Confidence of Heretics

Even though it is necessary to believe that sins are not forgiven and have never been forgiven except gratuitously by the divine mercy on account of Christ, nevertheless, it must not be said that sins are forgiven or have been forgiven to anyone who boasts of the confidence and certainty that his sins are forgiven and who rests on that alone; for this confidence, vain and foreign to all piety, may exist among heretics and schismatics, and indeed in our turbulent times it does exist and is preached with great contention against the Catholic Church [can. 12].

Moreover, it must not be asserted that those who are truly justified should unhesitatingly determine within themselves that they are justified and that no one is absolved from his sins and justified unless he believes with certainty that he is absolved and justified and that absolution and justification are brought about by this faith alone [can. 14], as if whoever lacks this faith were doubting God’s promises and the efficacy of Christ’s death and Resurrection. For just as no devout man should doubt God’s mercy, Christ’s merit, and the power and efficacy of the sacraments; so also, whoever considers himself, his personal weakness, and his lack of disposition may fear and tremble about his own grace [can. 13], since no one can know with a certitude of faith that cannot be subject to error that he has obtained God’s grace.

Chapter 10. The Increase of Justification in the Justified

In this way, therefore, the justified become both “friends of God” and “members of his household” [Jn 15:15; Eph 2:19]; “they go from strength to strength” [Ps 84:7], “renewed (as the apostle says) every day” [2 Cor 4:16], that is, “by putting to death the members of their flesh” [cf. Col 3:5, Vulg.] and using them “as instruments of righteousness” [cf. Rom 6:13, 19] unto sanctification by observing the commandments of God and of the Church. When “faith is active along with works” [cf. Jas 2:22], they increase in the very justice they have received through the grace of Christ and are further justified [cann. 24 and 32], as it is written: “Let he who is just be still more justified” [Rev 22:11]; and again: “Fear not to be justified until you die” [Sir 18:22, Vulg.]; and again: “You see that a man is justified by works and not by faith alone” [Jas 2:24]. It is for this increase in faith that the holy Church asks when she prays: “Give us, O Lord, an increase of faith, hope, and charity.”¹

*1535 ¹ Missale Romanum (1962), Oration of the Thirteenth Sunday after Pentecost.

Cap. 11. De observatione mandatorum, deque illius necessitate et possibilitate

1536 Nemo autem, quantumvis iustificatus, liberum se esse ab observatione mandatorum [can. 20] putare debet; nemo temeraria illa et a Patribus sub anathemate prohibita voce uti, Dei praecepta homini iustificato ad observandum esse impossibilia [*cann. 18 et 22; cf. 397]. “Nam Deus impossibilia non iubet, sed iubendo monet, et facere quod possis, et petere quod non possis”,¹ et adiuvat ut possis; “cuius mandata gravia non sunt” [1 Io 5:3], cuius “iugum suave est et onus leve” [Mt 11:30]. Qui enim sunt filii Dei, Christum diligunt: qui autem diligunt eum, (ut ipsemet testatur) servant sermones eius [cf. Io 14:23], quod utique cum divino auxilio praestare possunt.

1537 Licet enim hac mortali vita quantumvis sancti et iusti in levia saltem et quotidiana, quae etiam venialia [can. 23] dicuntur, peccata quandoque cadant, non propterea desinunt esse iusti. Nam iustorum illa vox est et humilis et verax: “Dimitte nobis debita nostra” [*Mt 6:12; cf. 229s].

Quo fit, ut iusti ipsi eo magis se obligatos ad ambulandum in via iustitiae sentire debeant, quo “liberati iam a peccato, servi autem facti Deo” [Rm 6:22], “sobrie et iuste et pie viventes” [Tit 2:12], proficere possunt per Christum Iesum, per quem accessum habuerunt in gratiam istam [cf. Rm 5:2]. Deus namque sua gratia semel iustificatos “non deserit, nisi ab eis prius deseratur”.¹

1538 Itaque nemo sibi in sola fide [cann. 9, 19, 20] blandiri debet, putans fide sola se heredem esse constitutum hereditatemque consecuturum, etiamsi Christo non compatiatur, ut et glorificetur [cf. Rm 8:17]. Nam et Christus ipse (ut inquit Apostolus), “cum esset Filius Dei, didicit ex his, quae passus est, oboedientiam, et consummatus factus est omnibus obtemperantibus sibi causa salutis aeternae” [Hbr 5:8s].

Propterea Apostolus ipse monet iustificatos dicens: “Nescitis, quod ii, qui in stadio currunt, omnes quidem currunt, sed unus accipit bravium? Sic currite, ut comprehendatis. Ego igitur sic curro, non quasi in incertum, sic pugno, non quasi aërem verberans, sed castigo corpus meum et in servitutum redigo, ne forte, cum aliis praedicaverim, ipse reprobos efficiar” [1 Cor 9:24–27]. Item princeps Apostolorum Petrus: “Satagite, ut per bona opera certam vestram vocationem et electionem faciatis; haec enim facientes non peccabitis aliquando” [2 Pt 1:10].

*Chapter 11. The Observance of the Commandments;
Its Necessity and Possibility*

No one, however much he be justified, should consider himself exempt from the observance of the commandments [can. 20]; and no one should say that the observance of God’s commandments is impossible for the man justified—a rash statement censured by the Fathers with anathema [*cann. 18 and 22; cf. 397]. “For God does not command the impossible, but when he commands he admonishes you to do what you can and to pray for what you cannot do”,¹ and he helps you to be able to do it. “His commandments are not burdensome” [1 Jn 5:3]; his “yoke is easy and (his) burden light” [Mt 11:30]. For those who are sons of God love Christ, and those who love him keep his words, as he himself testifies [cf. Jn 14:23], and this they certainly can do with God’s help.

For although in this mortal life men, however just and holy they may be, fall, sometimes at least, into those slight and daily sins that are also called venial [can. 23], they do not on that account cease to be just. For the petition of the just: “Forgive us our trespasses” [*Mt 6:12; cf. 229f.] is both humble and true.

Hence the just themselves should feel all the more obliged to walk in the way of justice because, having been “set free from sin and become the slaves of God” [Rom 6:22], they can, by living “sober, upright, and godly lives” [Tit 2:12], progress through Jesus Christ, through whom “they have obtained access to this grace” [cf. Rom 5:2]. For God “does not desert” those who have been once justified by his grace “unless they desert him first”.¹

Therefore, nobody should flatter himself with faith alone [cann. 9, 19, 20], thinking that by faith alone he is made an heir and will obtain the inheritance, even if he does not “suffer with Christ in order that he may also be glorified with him” [cf. Rom 8:17]. For even Christ himself, as the apostle says, “although he was a Son, learned obedience through what he suffered, and, being made perfect, he became the source of eternal salvation to all who obey him” [Heb 5:8f.].

That is why the apostle himself admonishes the justified, saying: “Do you not know that in a race all the runners compete, but only one receives the prize? So run that you may obtain it. . . . Well, I do not run aimlessly, I do not box as one beating the air; but I pommel my body and subdue it, lest after preaching to others I myself should be disqualified” [1 Cor 9:24–27]. Similarly Peter, the prince of the apostles, says: “Be the more zealous to confirm your call and election through good works; for if you do this you will never sin” [2 Pet 1:10, Vulg.].

*1536¹ Augustine, De natura et gratia 43, no. 50 (CSEL 60:270_{20–22} / PL 44:271).

*1537¹ Cf. ibid., 26, no. 29 (CSEL 60:255, / PL 44:261).

Unde constat, eos orthodoxae religionis doctrinae adversari, qui dicunt, iustum in omni bono opere saltem venialiter peccare [*can. 25; cf. 1481s], aut (quod intolerabilis est) poenas aeternas mereri; atque etiam eos, qui statuunt, in omnibus operibus iustos peccare, si in illis, suam ipsorum socordiam excitando et sese ad currendum in stadio cohortando, cum hoc, ut in primis glorificetur Deus, mercedem quoque intuentur aeternam [cann. 26, 31], cum scriptum sit: “Inclinavi cor meum ad faciendas iustificationes tuas propter retributionem” [Ps 118:112], et de Moyse dicat Apostolus, quod “aspiciebat in remuneratione” [Hbr 11:26].

Cap. 12. Praedestinationis temerariam praesumptionem cavendam esse

Nemo quoque, quamdiu in hac mortalitate vivitur, de arcano divinae praedestinationis mysterio usque adeo praesumere debet, ut certo statuatur, se omnino esse in numero praedestinatorum¹ [can. 15], quasi verum esset, quod iustificatus aut amplius peccare non possit [can. 23], aut, si peccaverit, certam sibi resipiscentiam promittere debeat. Nam, nisi ex speciali revelatione, sciri non potest, quos Deus sibi elegerit [can. 16].

Cap. 13. De perseverantiae munere

Similiter de perseverantiae munere [can. 16], de quo scriptum est: “Qui perseveraverit usque in finem, hic salvus erit” [Mt 10:22; 24:13] (quod quidem aliunde haberi non potest, nisi ab eo, qui potens est eum, qui stat, statuere [cf. Rm 14:4], ut perseveranter stet, et eum, qui cadit, restituere), nemo sibi certi aliquid absoluta certitudine polliceatur, tametsi in Dei auxilio firmissimam spem collocare et reponere omnes debent. Deus enim, nisi ipsi illius gratiae defuerint, sicut coepit opus bonum, ita perficiet [cf. Phil 1:6], operans velle et perficere [cf. Phil 2:13; can. 22].

Verumtamen qui se existimant stare, videant, ne cadant [cf. 1 Cor 10:12], et cum timore ac tremore salutem suam operentur [cf. Phil 2:12], in laboribus, in vigiliis, in elemosynis, in orationibus et oblationibus, in ieiuniis et castitate [cf. 2 Cor 6:5s]. Formidare enim debent, scientes, quod in spem [cf. 1 Pt 1:3] gloriae et nondum in gloriam renati sunt, de pugna, quae superest cum carne, cum mundo, cum diabolo, in qua victores esse non possunt, nisi cum Dei gratia Apostolo obtemperent dicenti: “Debitores sumus non carni, ut secundum

Hence it is clear that those are opposed to the orthodox doctrine of religion who maintain that the just man sins at least venially in every good work [*can. 25; cf. 1481f.], or (what is even more intolerable) that he merits eternal punishment. They, too, are opposed to it who assert that the just sin in all their works if in those works, while overcoming their sloth and encouraging themselves to run the race, they look for an eternal reward in addition to their primary intention of glorifying God [cann. 26, 31]. For it is written: “I have disposed my heart to perform your statutes for the sake of the reward” [Ps 118(118):112, Vulg.]; and speaking of Moses, the apostle says that “he looked to the reward” [Heb 11:26].

Chapter 12. Rash Presumption of One's Own Predestination Must Be Avoided

Furthermore, no one, so long as he lives in this mortal condition, ought to be so presumptuous about the hidden mystery of divine predestination as to determine with certainty that he is definitely among the number of the predestined¹ [can. 15], as if it were true either that the one justified cannot sin anymore [can. 23] or that, if he sins, he should promise himself an assured repentance. For without special revelation it is impossible to know whom God has chosen for himself [can. 16].

Chapter 13. The Gift of Perseverance

The same is to be said of the gift of perseverance [can. 16], about which it is written: “He who endures to the end will be saved” [Mt 10:22; 24:13]. This gift can be had only from him who has the power to uphold him who stands that he may stand with perseverance [cf. Rom 14:4] and who can lift him who falls. Let no one promise himself any security about this gift with absolute certitude, although all should place their firmest hope in God's help. For, unless they themselves are unfaithful to his grace, God, who began the good work [cf. Phil 1:6], will bring it to completion, effecting both the will and the execution [cf. Phil 2:13; can. 22].

Yet, let anyone who thinks that he stands take heed lest he fall [cf. 1 Cor 10:12], and let him work out his salvation with fear and trembling [cf. Phil 2:12] in labors, in vigils, in almsgiving, in prayers and offerings, in fastings and chastity [cf. 2 Cor 6:5f.]. Knowing that they are reborn unto the hope of glory [cf. 1 Pet 1:3] and not yet unto glory, they should be in dread about the battle they still have to wage with the flesh, the world, and the devil, in which they cannot be the victors unless with God's grace they obey the apostle who says: “We carnem vivamus. Si enim secundum carnem vixeritis, moriemini. Si autem spiritu facta carnis mortificaveritis, vivetis” [Rm 8:12s].

*1540¹ Cf. Augustine, De correptione et gratia 15, no. 46 (PL 44:944).

Cap. 14. De lapsis et eorum reparatione

1542 Qui vero ab accepta iustificationis gratia per peccatum exciderunt, rursus iustificari poterunt [can. 29], cum excitante Deo per paenitentiae sacramentum merito Christi amissam gratiam recuperare procuraverint. Hic enim iustificationis modus est lapsi reparatio, quam “secundam post naufragium deperditae gratiae tabulam”¹ sancti Patres apte nuncuparunt. Etenim pro iis, qui post baptismum in peccata labuntur, Christus Iesus sacramentum instituit paenitentiae, cum dixit: “Accipite Spiritum Sanctum; quorum remisieritis peccata, remittuntur eis, et quorum retinueritis, retenta sunt” [Io 20:22s], 1543 Unde docendum est, christiani hominis paenitentiam post lapsum multo aliam esse a baptismali, eaque contineri non modo cessationem a peccatis, et eorum detestationem, aut “cor contritum et humiliatum” [Ps 50:19], verum etiam et eorundem sacramentalem confessionem, saltem in voto et suo tempore faciendam, et sacerdotalem absolutionem, itemque satisfactionem per ieiunium, elemosynas, orationes et alia pia spiritualis vitae exercitia, non quidem pro poena aeterna, quae vel sacramento vel sacramenti voto una cum culpa remittitur, sed pro poena temporalis [can. 30], quae (ut sacrae Litterae docent) non tota semper, ut in baptismo fit, dimittitur illis, qui gratiae Dei, quam acceperunt, ingrati Spiritum Sanctum contristaverunt [cf. Eph 4:30] et templum Dei violare [cf. 1 Cor 3:17] non sunt veriti.

De qua paenitentia scriptum est: “Memor esto, unde excideris, age paenitentiam, et prima opera fac” [Apc 2:5], et iterum: “Quae secundum Deum tristitia est, paenitentiam in salutem stabilem operator” [2 Cor 7:10], et rursus: “Paenitentiam agite” [Mt 3:2; 4:17], et: “Facite fructus dignos paenitentiae” [Mt 3:8; Lc 3:8].

Cap. 15. Quolibet mortali peccato amitti gratiam, sed non fidem

1544 Adversus etiam hominum quorundam callida ingenia, qui “per dulces sermones et benedictiones seducunt corda are debtors, not to the flesh to live according to the flesh—for if you live according to the flesh you will die, but if by the Spirit you put to death the deeds of the flesh you will live” [Rom 8:12–13].

Chapter 14. Those Who Sin after Justification and Their Restoration to Grace

Those who through sin have forfeited the grace of justification they had received can be justified again [can. 29] when, awakened by God, they make the effort to regain through the sacrament of penance and by the merits of Christ the grace they have lost. This manner of justification is the restoration of the sinner that the holy Fathers aptly called “the second plank (of salvation) after the shipwreck of lost grace”.¹ For Christ Jesus instituted the sacrament of penance for those who fall into sin after baptism, when he said: “Receive the Holy Spirit; whose sins you shall forgive, they are forgiven, and whose sins you shall retain, they are retained” [Jn 20:22f.].

Hence it must be taught that the repentance of a Christian after his fall into sin differs vastly from repentance at the time of baptism. It includes not only giving up sins and detesting them, or “a broken and contrite heart” [Ps 51:17], but also their sacramental confession or at least the desire to confess them when a suitable occasion will be found and the absolution of a priest; it also includes satisfaction by fasts, almsgiving, prayer, and other pious exercises of the spiritual life, not indeed for the eternal punishment that, together with the guilt, is remitted by the reception or the desire of the sacrament, but for the temporal punishment [can. 30], which, as Sacred Scripture teaches, is not always entirely remitted, as is done in baptism, to those who, ungrateful to the grace of God they have received, have grieved the Holy Spirit [cf. Eph 4:30] and have not feared to violate the temple of God [cf. 1 Cor 3:17].

Of this form of repentance it is written: “Remember from what you have fallen; do penance, and perform the works you did at first” [Rev 2:5]; and again: “Godly grief produces a repentance that leads to salvation” [2 Cor 7:10]; and again: “Do penance” [Mt 3:2; 4:17]; and: “Bring forth fruit that befits repentance” [Mt 3:8; Lk 3:8].

Chapter 15. By Every Mortal Sin Grace Is Lost, but Not Faith

It must also be asserted against the cunning wits of some who “by fair and flattering words deceive the ¹1542 Tertullian, De paenitentia 4, 2; cf. 12, 9: “De duabus humanae salutis plancis” (On the Two Planks of Human Salvation: CpChL 1 [1954]: 326₁₀; 340_{35f} / FIP 10:14, 28 / PL 1:1343B, 1360A); Jerome of Stridon, Letter 84 to Pamphilius and Oceanus, chap. 6 (CSEL 55:128_{5f} / PL 22:748); Letter 130 to Demetriades, chap. 9 (CSEL 56:189_{4f} / PL 22:1115), cited again in Gratian, Decretum, p. II, cs. 33, q. 3, c. 72 (Frdb 1:1179) and in Peter Lombard, Sententiae, 1. IV, dist. 14, c. 1–2 (Specilegium Bonaventur. 5 [Grottaferrata, 1981], 315–18); Jerome of Stridon, Commentarii in Isaiam [3:8–9] II (M. Adriaen: CpChL 73 [1963]: 51_{21f} / PL 24 [1865]: 66C); Pacianus of Barcelona, Letter 1 to Sempronianus (or Sympromannus), chap. 5 (PL 13:1056A); Pseudo-Ambrose (= Nicetas of Remesiana?), De lapsu virginis consecratae 8, no. 38 (PL 16 [1866]: 395B).

innocentium” [Rm 16:18], asserendum est, non modo infidelitate [can. 27], per quam et ipsa fides amittitur, sed etiam quocumque alio mortali peccato, quamvis non amittatur fides [can. 28], acceptam iustificationis gratiam amitti: divinae legis doctrinam defendendo, quae a regno Dei non solum infideles excludit, sed et fideles quoque fornicarios, adulteros, molles, masculorum concubitores, fures, avaros, ebriosos, maledicos, rapaces [cf. 1 Cor 6:9s], ceterosque omnes, qui letalia committunt peccata, a quibus cum divinae gratiae adiumento abstinere possunt et pro quibus a Christi gratia separantur [can. 27].

Cap. 16. De fructu iustificationis, hoc est, de merito bonorum operum, deque ipsius meriti ratione

Hac igitur ratione iustificatis hominibus, sive acceptam gratiam perpetuo conservaverint, sive amissam recuperaverint, proponenda sunt Apostoli verba: Abundate in omni opere bono, “scientes, quod labor vester non est inanis in Domino” [1 Cor 15:58]; “non enim iniustus est Deus, ut obliviscatur operis vestri et dilectionis, quam ostenditis in nomine ipsius” [Hbr 6:10], et: “Nolite amittere confidentiam vestram, quae magnam habet remunerationem” [Hbr 10:35]. Atque ideo bene operantibus “usque in finem” [Mt 10:22; 24:13] et in Deo sperantibus proponenda est vita aeterna, et tamquam gratia filiis Dei per Christum Iesum misericorditer promissa, et “tamquam merces”¹ ex ipsius Dei promissione bonis ipsorum operibus et meritis fideliter reddenda [cann. 26 et 32]. Haec est enim illa corona iustitiae, quam post suum certamen et cursum repositam sibi esse aiebat Apostolus, a iusto iudice sibi reddendam, non solum autem sibi, sed et omnibus, qui diligunt adventum eius [2 Tim 4:7s].

Cum enim ille ipse Christus Iesus tamquam caput in membra [cf. Eph 4:15] et tamquam vitis in palmites [cf. Io 15:5] in ipsos iustificatos iugiter virtutem influat, quae virtus bona eorum opera semper antecedit, comitatur et subsequitur, et sine qua nullo pacto Deo grata et meritoria esse possent [can. 2]: nihil ipsis iustificatis amplius deesse credendum est, quominus plene illis quidem operibus, quae in Deo sunt facta, divinae legi pro huius vitae statu satisfecisse, et vitam aeternam suo etiam tempore (si tamen in gratia decesserint [cf. Apc 14:13]) consequendam vere promeruisse censeantur [can. 32], cum Christus Salvator noster dicat: “Si quis biberit ex aqua, quam ego dabo ei, non sitiet in aeternum, sed fiet in eo fons aquae salientis in vitam aeternam” [Io 4:14], hearts of the simple-minded” [Rom 16:18] that the grace of justification, once received, is lost not only by unbelief [can. 27], which causes the loss of faith itself, but also by any other mortal sin, even though faith is not lost [can. 28]. Thus is defended the teaching of divine law that excludes from the kingdom of God not only unbelievers, but also the faithful who are immoral, adulterers, sodomites, thieves, greedy, drunkards, revilers, robbers [cf. 1 Cor 6:9f.], and all others who commit mortal sins that they can avoid with the help of divine grace and that separate them from the grace of Christ [can. 27].

Chapter 16. On the Fruit of Justification, That Is, on the Merit of Good Works and on the Nature of That Merit

Therefore, it is with this in mind that the men justified, whether they have continuously kept the grace they have once received or have lost it and recovered it, should be asked to consider the words of the apostle: Abound in the good work of the Lord, “knowing that in the Lord your labor is not in vain” [1 Cor 15:58]; “God is not so unjust as to overlook your work and the love which you showed for his sake” [Hbr 6:10]; and: “Do not throw away your confidence, which has a great reward” [Hbr 10:35]. And eternal life should therefore be set before those who persevere in good works “to the end” [Mt 10:22; 24:13] and who hope in God, both as a grace mercifully promised to the sons of God through Jesus Christ and “as a reward”¹ that, according to the promise of God himself, will faithfully be given them for their good works and merits [cann. 26 and 32]. For this is the crown of justice that the apostle says is laid up for him after the fight and the race; the crown that will be given him by the just Judge, and not to him alone, but to all who love his coming [cf. 2 Tim 4:7f.].

For Jesus Christ himself continuously infuses strength into the justified, as the head into the members [cf. Eph 4:15] and the vine into the branches [cf. Jn 15:5]; this strength always precedes, accompanies, and follows their good works, which, without it, could in no way be pleasing to God and meritorious [can. 2]. Therefore, we must believe that nothing further is wanting to the justified for them to be regarded as having entirely fulfilled the divine law in their present condition by the works they have done in the sight of God; they can also be regarded as having truly merited eternal life, which they will obtain in due time, provided they die in the state of grace [cf. Rev 14:13; can. 32], since Christ our Savior says: “Whoever drinks of the water that I shall give him will never thirst; the water that I shall give him will become in him a spring of water welling up to eternal life” [Jn 4:14].

*1545¹ Cf. Augustine, De gratia et libero arbitrio 8, no. 20 (PL 44:893).

1547 Ita neque propria nostra iustitia tamquam ex nobis [cf. 2 Cor 3:5] propria statuitur, neque ignoratur aut repudiatur iustitia Dei [cf. Rm 10:3]; quae enim iustitia nostra dicitur, quia per eam nobis inhaerentem iustificamur [can. 10 et 11], illa eadem Dei est, quia a Deo nobis infunditur per Christi meritum.

1548 Neque vero illud omittendum est, quod, licet bonis operibus in sacris Litteris usque adeo tribuatur, ut etiam qui uni ex minimis suis potum aquae frigidae dederit, promittat Christus, eum non esse sua mercede caritum [cf. Mt 10:42; Mc 9:41], et Apostolus testetur, “id quod in praesenti est momentaneum et leve tribulationis nostrae, supra modum in sublimitate aeternum gloriae pondus operari in nobis” [2 Cor 4:17]: absit tamen, ut christianus homo in se ipso vel confidat vel gloriatur et non in Domino [cf. 1 Cor 1:31; 2 Cor 10:17], cuius tanta est erga omnes homines bonitas, ut eorum velit esse merita [can. 32], quae sunt ipsius dona [cf. *248].

1549 Et quia “in multis offendimus omnes” [Iac 3:2; can. 23], unusquisque sicut misericordiam et bonitatem, ita severitatem et iudicium ante oculos habere debet, neque se ipsum aliquis, etiam si nihil sibi conscius fuerit, iudicare, quoniam omnis hominum vita non humano iudicio examinanda et iudicanda est, sed Dei, qui “illuminabit abscondita tenebrarum, et manifestabit consilia cordium, et tunc laus erit unicuique a Deo” [1 Cor 4:4s], “qui”, ut scriptum est, “reddet unicuique secundum opera sua” [Rm 2:6].

1550 Post hanc catholicam de iustificatione doctrinam [can. 33], quam nisi quisque fideliter firmiterque receperit; iustificari non poterit, placuit sanctae Synodo hos canones subiungere, ut omnes sciant, non solum quid tenere et sequi, sed etiam quid vitare et fugere debeant.

Canons on Justification

1551 Can. 1. Si quis dixerit, hominem suis operibus, quae vel per humanae naturae vires, vel per Legis doctrinam fiant, absque divina per Christum Iesum gratia posse iustificari coram Deo: anathema sit [cf. *1521].

1552 Can. 2. Si quis dixerit, ad hoc solum divinam gratiam per Christum Iesum dari, ut facilius homo iuste vivere ac vitam aeternam promereri possit, quasi per liberum arbitrium sine gratia utrumque, sed aegre tamen et difficulter possit: anathema sit [cf. *1524s].

1553 Can. 3. Si quis dixerit, sine praeveniente Spiritu Sancti inspiratione atque eius adiutorio hominem credere, Thus, neither is our justice considered as coming from us [cf. 2 Cor 3:5], nor is God’s justice disregarded or denied [cf. Rom 10:3]; for the justice that is said to be ours because we become just by its inherence in us [can. 10 and 11] is that of God himself, since it is infused in us by God through the merit of Christ.

Nor should this be overlooked: although in Holy Scripture such a high value is placed on good works that Christ promises that the person who gives to one of his little ones even a cup of cold water shall not lose his reward [cf. Mt 10:42; Mk 9:41], and the apostle testifies that “this slight momentary affliction is preparing for us an eternal weight of glory beyond all comparison” [2 Cor 4:17], nevertheless, a Christian should never rely on himself or glory in himself instead of in the Lord [cf. 1 Cor 1:31; 2 Cor 10:17], whose goodness toward all men is such that he wants his own gifts to be their merits [can. 32; cf. *248].

And since “we all offend in many things” [Jas 3:2, Vulg.; can. 23], everyone ought to keep in mind not only God’s mercy and goodness but also his severity and judgment. Neither should anyone pass judgment on himself, even if he is conscious of no wrong, because the entire life of man should be examined and judged, not by human judgment, but by the judgment of God, “who will bring to light the things now hidden in darkness and will disclose the purposes of the heart. Then every man will receive his commendation from God” [1 Cor 4:4–5], who, as it is written, “will render to every man according to his works” [Rom 2:6].

No one can be justified unless he faithfully and firmly accepts this Catholic doctrine on justification [can. 33], to which the holy council has decided to add the following canons, so that all may know, not only what they should hold and follow, but also what they should shun and avoid.

Can. 1. If anyone says that, without divine grace through Jesus Christ, man can be justified before God by his own works, whether they be done by his own natural powers or through the teaching of the law, let him be anathema [cf. *1521].

Can. 2. If anyone says that divine grace is given through Jesus Christ only in order that man may more easily live justly and merit eternal life, as if by his free will without grace he could do both, although with great difficulty, let him be anathema [cf. *1524f.].

Can. 3. If anyone says that without the preventient inspiration of the Holy Spirit and without his help, man sperare et diligere aut paenitere posse, sicut oportet, ut ei iustificationis gratia conferatur: anathema sit [cf. *1525].

Can. 4. Si quis dixerit, liberum hominis arbitrium a Deo motum et excitatum nihil cooperari assentiendo Deo excitanti atque vocanti, quo ad obtinendam iustificationis gratiam se disponat ac praeparet, neque posse dissentire, si velit, sed velut inanime quoddam nihil omnino agere mereque passive se habere: anathema sit [cf. *1525].

Can. 5. Si quis liberum hominis arbitrium post Adae peccatum amissum et extinctum esse dixerit, aut rem esse de solo titulo, immo titulum sine re, figmentum denique a satana inventum in Ecclesiam: anathema sit [cf. *1521, 1525, 1486].

Can. 6. Si quis dixerit, non esse in potestate hominis vias suas malas facere, sed mala opera ita ut bona Deum operari, non permissive solum, sed etiam proprie et per se, adeo ut sit proprium eius opus non minus proditio Iudae quam vocatio Pauli: anathema sit.

Can. 7. Si quis dixerit, opera omnia, quae ante iustificationem fiunt, quacumque ratione facta sint, vere esse peccata vel odium Dei mereri, aut quanto vehementius quis nititur se disponere ad gratiam, tanto eum gravius peccare: anathema sit [cf. *1526].

Can. 8. Si quis dixerit, gehennae metum, per quem ad misericordiam Dei de peccatis dolendo confugimus vel a peccando abstinemus, peccatum esse aut peccatores peiores facere: anathema sit [cf. *1526, 1456].

Can. 9. Si quis dixerit, sola fide impium iustificari, ita ut intelligat, nihil aliud requiri, quo ad iustificationis gratiam consequendam cooperetur, et nulla ex parte necesse esse, eum suae voluntatis motu praeparari atque disponi: anathema sit [cf. *1532, 1538, 1465, 1460s].

Can. 10. Si quis dixerit, homines sine Christi iustitia, per quam nobis meruit, iustificari, aut per eam ipsam formaliter iustos esse: anathema sit [cf. *1523, 1529].

Can. 11. Si quis dixerit, homines iustificari vel sola imputatione iustitiae Christi, vel sola peccatorum remissione, exclusa gratia et caritate, quae in cordibus eorum per Spiritum Sanctum diffundatur [cf. Rm 5:5] atque illis inhaereat, aut etiam gratiam, qua iustificamur, esse tantum favorem Dei: anathema sit [cf. *1528–1531, 1545s].

can believe, hope, and love or be repentant, as is required, so that the grace of justification be bestowed upon him, let him be anathema [cf. *1525].

Can. 4. If anyone says that the free will of man, moved and awakened by God, in no way cooperates by an assent to God's awakening call, through which he disposes and prepares himself to obtain the grace of justification; and that man cannot refuse his assent if he wishes, but that like a lifeless object he does nothing at all and is merely passive, let him be anathema [cf. *1525]. 1554

Can. 5. If anyone says that after Adam's sin the free will of man is lost and extinct or that it is an empty concept, a term without real foundation, indeed, a fiction introduced by Satan into the Church, let him be anathema [cf. *1521, 1525, 1486]. 1555

Can. 6. If anyone says that it is not in man's power to make his ways evil, but that God performs the evil works just as he performs the good, not only by allowing them, but properly and directly, so that Judas' betrayal no less than Paul's vocation was God's own work, let him be anathema. 1556

Can. 7. If anyone says that all works performed before justification, no matter how they were performed, are truly sins or deserve God's hatred; or that the more earnestly one tries to dispose himself for grace, the more grievously he sins, let him be anathema [cf. *1526]. 1557

Can. 8. If anyone says that the fear of hell, which makes us turn to the mercy of God in sorrow for our sins or which makes us avoid sin, is a sin or that it makes sinners worse, let him be anathema [cf. *1526, 1456]. 1558

Can. 9. If anyone says that the sinner is justified by faith alone in the sense that nothing else is required by way of cooperation in order to obtain the grace of justification and that it is not at all necessary that he should be prepared and disposed by the movement of his will, let him be anathema [cf. *1532, 1538, 1465, 1460f.]. 1559

Can. 10. If anyone says that men are justified without the justice of Christ, by which he gained merit for us, or that they are formally just by his justice itself, let him be anathema [cf. *1523, 1529]. 1560

Can. 11. If anyone says that men are justified either by the imputation of Christ's justice alone or by the remission of sins alone, excluding grace and charity that is poured into their hearts by the Holy Spirit [cf. Rom 5:5] and inheres in them, or also that the grace that justifies us is only the favor of God, let him be anathema [cf. *1528–1531, 1545f.]. 1561

- 1562 Can. 12. Si quis dixerit, fidem iustificantem nihil aliud esse quam fiduciam divinae misericordiae peccata remittentis propter Christum, vel eam fiduciam solam esse, qua iustificamur: anathema sit [*cf. 1533s].
- Can. 12. If anyone says that justifying faith is nothing else than confidence in the divine mercy that remits sins on account of Christ or that it is this confidence alone that justifies us, let him be anathema [*cf. 1533f].
- 1563 Can. 13. Si quis dixerit, omni homini ad remissionem peccatorum assequendam necessarium esse, ut credat certo et absque ulla haesitatione propriae infirmitatis et indispositionis, peccata sibi esse remissa: anathema sit [*cf. 1533s, 1460–1464].
- Can. 13. If anyone says that, to attain the remission of sins, everyone must believe with certainty and without any hesitation based on his own weakness and lack of disposition that his sins are forgiven, let him be anathema [*cf. 1533f, 1460–1464].
- 1564 Can. 14. Si quis dixerit, hominem a peccatis absolvi ac iustificari ex eo, quod se absolvi ac iustificari certo credat, aut neminem vere esse iustificatum, nisi qui credit se esse iustificatum, et hac sola fide absolutionem et iustificationem perfici: anathema sit [cf. ut supra].
- Can. 14. If anyone says that man is absolved from his sins and justified because he believes with certainty that he is absolved and justified; or that no one is truly justified except he who believes he is justified and that absolution and justification are effected by this faith alone, let him be anathema [cf. as above].
- 1565 Can. 15. Si quis dixerit, hominem renatum et iustificatum teneri ex fide ad credendum, se certo esse in numero praedestinatorum: anathema sit [*cf. 1540].
- Can. 15. If anyone says that a man who has been reborn and justified is bound by faith to believe that he is certainly among the number of the predestined, let him be anathema [*cf. 1540].
- 1566 Can. 16. Si quis magnum illud usque in finem perseverantiae donum [cf. Mt 10:22; 24:13] se certo habiturum absoluta et infallibili certitudine dixerit, nisi hoc ex speciali revelatione didicerit: anathema sit [*cf. 1540s].
- Can. 16. If anyone says that he has absolute and infallible certitude that he will surely have the great gift of perseverance to the end [cf. Mt 10:22; 24:13], unless he has learned this by a special revelation, let him be anathema [*cf. 1540f].
- 1567 Can. 17. Si quis iustificationis gratiam non nisi praedestinati ad vitam contingere dixerit, reliquos vero omnes, qui vocantur, vocari quidem, sed gratiam non accipere, utpote divina potestate praedestinos ad malum: anathema sit.
- Can. 17. If anyone says that the grace of justification is given only to those who are predestined to life and that all the others who are called are called indeed but do not receive grace, as they are predestined to evil by the divine power, let him be anathema.
- 1568 Can. 18. Si quis dixerit, Dei praecepta homini etiam iustificato et sub gratia constituto esse ad observandum impossibilia: anathema sit [*cf. 1536].
- Can. 18. If anyone says that the commandments of God are impossible to observe even for a man who is justified and established in grace, let him be anathema [*cf. 1536].
- 1569 Can. 19. Si quis dixerit, nihil praeceptum esse in Evangelio praeter fidem, cetera esse indifferentia, neque praecepta, neque prohibita, sed libera, aut decem praecepta nihil pertinere ad Christianos: anathema sit [*cf. 1536s].
- Can. 19. If anyone says that nothing is commanded in the Gospels except faith and that everything else is indifferent, neither prescribed nor prohibited, but free; or that the Ten Commandments in no way concern Christians, let him be anathema [*cf. 1536f].
- 1570 Can. 20. Si quis hominem iustificatum et quantumlibet perfectum dixerit non teneri ad observantiam mandatorum Dei et Ecclesiae, sed tantum ad credendum, quasi vero Evangelium sit nuda et absoluta promissio vitae aeternae, sine condicione observationis mandatorum: anathema sit [*cf. 1536s].
- Can. 20. If anyone says that a justified man, however perfect he may be, is not bound to observe the commandments of God and of the Church but is bound only to believe, as if the Gospel were merely an absolute promise of eternal life without the condition that the commandments be observed, let him be anathema [*cf. 1536f].
- 1571 Can. 21. Si quis dixerit, Christum Iesum a Deo hominibus datum fuisse ut redemptorem, cui fidant, non etiam ut legislatorem, cui obediant: anathema sit.
- Can. 21. If anyone says that Jesus Christ was given by God to men as a redeemer in whom they are to trust but not also as a lawgiver whom they are to obey, let him be anathema.

Can. 22. Si quis dixerit, iustificatum vel sine speciali auxilio Dei in accepta iustitia perseverare posse, vel cum eo non posse: anathema sit [cf. *1541].

Can. 23. Si quis hominem semel iustificatum dixerit amplius peccare non posse,¹ neque gratiam amittere, atque ideo eum, qui labitur et peccat, numquam vere fuisse iustificatum; aut contra, posse in tota vita peccata omnia etiam venialia vitare, nisi ex speciali Dei privilegio, quemadmodum de beata Virgine tenet Ecclesia: anathema sit [cf. *1537, 1549].

Can. 24. Si quis dixerit, iustitiam acceptam non conservari atque etiam non augeri coram Deo per bona opera, sed opera ipsa fructus solummodo et signa esse iustificationis adeptae, non etiam ipsius augendae causam: anathema sit [cf. *1535].

Can. 25. Si quis in quolibet bono opere iustum saltem venialiter peccare dixerit, aut (quod intolerabilius est) mortaliter, atque ideo poenas aeternas mereri, tantumque ob id non damnari, quia Deus ea opera non imputet ad damnationem: anathema sit. [cf. *1539, 1481s].

Can. 26. Si quis dixerit, iustos non debere pro bonis operibus, quae in Deo fuerint facta [cf. Io 3:21], exspectare et sperare aeternam retributionem a Deo per eius misericordiam et Iesu Christi meritum, si bene agendo et divina mandata custodiendo usque in finem perseveraverint [cf. Mt 10:22; 24:13]: anathema sit [cf. *1538s].

Can. 27. Si quis dixerit, nullum esse mortale peccatum nisi infidelitatis, aut nullo alio quantumvis gravi et enormi praeterquam infidelitatis peccato semel acceptam gratiam amitti: anathema sit [cf. *1544].

Can. 28. Si quis dixerit, amissa per peccatum gratia simul et fidem semper amitti, aut fidem, quae remanet, non esse veram fidem, licet non sit viva [cf. Iac 2:26], aut eum, qui fidem sine caritate habet, non esse Christianum: anathema sit [cf. ut supra].

Can. 29. Si quis dixerit, eum, qui post baptismum lapsus est, non posse per Dei gratiam resurgere; aut posse quidem, sed sola fide, amissam iustitiam recuperare sine sacramento poenitentiae, prout sancta Romana et universalis Ecclesia, a Christo Domino et eius Apostolis edocta, hucusque professa est, servavit et docuit: anathema sit [cf. *1542s].

Can. 22. If anyone says that without God's special help a justified man can persevere in the justice he has received or that with it he cannot persevere, let him be anathema [cf. *1541]. 1572

Can. 23. If anyone says that a man once justified cannot sin again¹ and cannot lose grace and that therefore the man who falls and sins was never truly justified; or, on the contrary, says that a man once justified can avoid all sins, even venial ones, throughout his entire life, unless it be by a special privilege of God as the Church holds of the Blessed Virgin, let him be anathema [cf. *1537, 1549]. 1573

Can. 24. If anyone says that the justice received is not preserved and even increased before God through good works, but that such works are merely the fruits and the signs of the justification obtained and not also the cause of its increase, let him be anathema [cf. *1535]. 1574

Can. 25. If anyone says that the just man sins at least venially in every good work or (what is even more intolerable) that he sins mortally and therefore merits eternal punishment and that the only reason why he is not damned is that God does not impute those works unto damnation, let him be anathema [cf. *1539, 1481f.]. 1575

Can. 26. If anyone says that for the good works performed in God [cf. Jn 3:21] the just ought not to expect and hope for an eternal reward from God through his mercy and the merits of Jesus Christ, if they persevere to the end in doing good and in keeping the divine commandments [cf. Mt 10:22; 24:13], let him be anathema [cf. *1538f.]. 1576

Can. 27. If anyone says that there is no mortal sin except that of unbelief or that grace, once received, cannot be lost by any other sin, no matter how grievous and great, except that of unbelief, let him be anathema [cf. *1544]. 1577

Can. 28. If anyone says that with the loss of grace through sin faith is also always lost or that the faith that remains is not true faith, granted that it is not a living faith [cf. Jas 2:26], or that the man who has faith without charity is not a Christian, let him be anathema [cf. as above]. 1578

Can. 29. If anyone says that the man who has fallen after baptism cannot rise again through God's grace; or that he can indeed recover the justice lost, but by faith alone without the sacrament of penance, instead of what the holy Roman and universal Church, instructed by Christ the Lord and his apostles, has always professed, observed, and taught, let him be anathema [cf. *1542f.]. 1579

*1573 ¹ An allusion to the error of Jovinian, the Beghards, and the Beguines; cf. SGT 5:449₂₆.

- 1580 Can. 30. Si quis post acceptam iustificationis gratiam cuilibet peccatori paenitenti ita culpam remitti et reatum aeternae poenae deleri dixerit, ut nullus remaneat reatus poenae temporalis, exsolvendae vel in hoc saeculo vel in futuro in purgatorio, antequam ad regna caelorum aditus patere possit: anathema sit [cf. *1543].
- 1581 Can. 31. Si quis dixerit, iustificatum peccare, dum intuitu aeternae mercedis bene operatur: anathema sit [cf. *1539].
- 1582 Can. 32. Si quis dixerit, hominis iustificati bona opera ita esse dona Dei, ut non sint etiam bona ipsius iustificati merita, aut ipsum iustificatum bonis operibus, quae ab eo per Dei gratiam et Iesu Christi meritum (cuius vivum membrum est) fiunt, non vere mereri augmentum gratiae, vitam aeternam et ipsius vitae aeternae (si tamen in gratia decesserit) consecutionem, atque etiam gloriae augmentum: anathema sit [cf. *1548, 1545–1550].
- 1583 Can. 33. Si quis dixerit, per hanc doctrinam catholicam de iustificatione, a sancta Synodo hoc praesenti decreto expressam, aliqua ex parte gloriae Dei vel meritis Iesu Christi Domini nostri derogari, et non potius veritatem fidei nostrae, Dei denique ac Christi Iesu gloriam illustrari: anathema sit.

Can. 30. If anyone says that after the grace of justification has been received the guilt is so remitted and the debt of eternal punishment so blotted out for any repentant sinner that no debt of temporal punishment remains to be discharged, either in this world or in the future one, in purgatory, before access can be opened to the kingdom of heaven, let him be anathema [cf. *1543].

Can. 31. If anyone says that the justified man sins when he performs good works with a view to an eternal reward, let him be anathema [cf. *1539].

Can. 32. If anyone says that the good works of the justified man are the gifts of God in such a way that they are not also the good merits of the justified man himself; or that by the good works he performs through the grace of God and the merits of Jesus Christ (of whom he is a living member), the justified man does not truly merit an increase of grace, eternal life, and (provided he dies in the state of grace) the attainment of this eternal life, as well as an increase of glory, let him be anathema [cf. *1548, 1545–1550].

Can. 33. If anyone says that this Catholic doctrine of justification, expounded by the holy council in the present decree, is in any way derogatory to the glory of God or to the merits of Jesus Christ our Lord and does not rather manifest the truth of our faith and ultimately the glory of God and of Jesus Christ, let him be anathema.

1600–1630: Session 7, March 3, 1547: Decree on the Sacraments

The work on this decree began on January 17, 1547. The draft was ready on February 26 (SGTr 5:835–39, 984 / TheiTr 1:383–85, 456). The errors on the sacraments condemned in the decrees of this session and those that follow were taken chiefly from Martin Luther's De captivitate Babylonica ecclesiae praeludium of 1520 (Weimar ed. 6:497–573); also from the Confessio Augustana, redacted by a commission of Lutheran theologians and delivered to the emperor at the Diet of Augsburg in 1530 (BekSchELK 44–137 / CpRef 26:263–336), articles 9–13, 22–25; and finally from the Apologia Confessionis Augustanae, written by Philipp Melancthon in 1530 and whose expanded edition of 1531 acquired a particular significance (BekSchELK 141–404 / CpRef 27:419–646); cf. ibid., the same articles.

Ed.: SGTr 5:994–96 / RiTr 40–42, 47 / MaC 33:51E–55B / HaC 10:51D–55A / COeD, 3rd ed., 684–86.

Foreword

- 1600 Ad consummationem salutaris de iustificatione doctrinae, quae in praecedenti proxima sessione uno omnium patrum consensu promulgata fuit, consentaneum visum est, de sanctissimis Ecclesiae sacramentis agere, per quae omnis vera iustitia vel incipit, vel coepta augetur, vel amissa reparatur.

Propterea sacrosancta oecumenica et generalis Tridentina Synodus . . .

ad errores eliminandos, et extirpandas haereses, quae circa ipsa sanctissima sacramenta hac nostra tempestate, tum de damnatis olim a Patribus nostris haeresibus suscitatae, tum etiam de novo adinventae sunt, quae catholicae Ecclesiae puritatis et animarum saluti magnopere officiant:

In order to bring to completion the salutary doctrine of justification promulgated with the unanimous consent of the Fathers in the session immediately preceding, it seemed fitting to deal with the holy sacraments of the Church. For all true justification either begins through the sacraments or, once begun, increases through them or, when lost, is regained through them.

Therefore, the most holy, ecumenical, and general Council of Trent . . .

in order to do away with errors and to root out heresies that in our turbulent age are directed against the most holy sacraments—partly inspired by heresies already condemned in the past by our Fathers and partly newly devised—and which are doing great harm to the purity of the Catholic Church and to the salvation of souls:

sanctarum Scripturarum doctrinae, apostolicis traditionibus atque aliorum conciliorum et Patrum consensui inhaerendo, hos praesentes canones statuendos et decernendos censuit, reliquos, qui supersunt ad coepti operis perfectionem, deinceps (divino Spiritu adjuvante) editura.

adhering to the teaching of the Holy Scriptures, to the apostolic traditions, and to the consensus of the Fathers and of the other councils, has decided that the present canons should be drawn up and decreed. The canons that remain for the completion of the work begun will (with the help of the Holy Spirit) be published subsequently.

Canons on the Sacraments in General

Can. 1. Si quis dixerit, sacramenta novae Legis non fuisse omnia a Iesu Christo Domino nostro instituta, aut esse plura vel pauciora, quam septem, videlicet baptismum, confirmationem, Eucharistiam, poenitentiam, extremam unctionem, ordinem et matrimonium, aut etiam aliquod horum septem non esse vere et proprie sacramentum: anathema sit.

Can. 2. Si quis dixerit, ea ipsa novae Legis sacramenta a sacramentis antiquae Legis non differre, nisi quia caeremoniae sunt aliae et alii ritus externi: anathema sit.

Can. 3. Si quis dixerit, haec septem sacramenta ita esse inter se paria, ut nulla ratione aliud sit alio dignius: anathema sit.

Can. 4. Si quis dixerit, sacramenta novae Legis non esse ad salutem necessaria, sed superflua, et sine eis aut eorum voto per solam fidem homines a Deo gratiam iustificationis adipisci [cf. *1559], licet omnia singulis necessaria non sint: anathema sit.

Can. 5. Si quis dixerit, haec sacramenta propter solam fidem nutriendam instituta fuisse: anathema sit.

Can. 6. Si quis dixerit, sacramenta novae Legis non continere gratiam, quam significant, aut gratiam ipsam non ponentibus obicem non conferre [cf. *1451], quasi signa tantum externa sint acceptae per fidem gratiae vel iustitiae, et notae quaedam christianae professionis, quibus apud homines discernuntur fideles ab infidelibus: anathema sit.

Can. 7. Si quis dixerit, non dari gratiam per huiusmodi sacramenta semper et omnibus, quantum est ex parte Dei, etiamsi rite ea suscipiant, sed aliquando et aliquibus: anathema sit.

Can. 8. Si quis dixerit, per ipsa novae Legis sacramenta ex opere operato non conferri gratiam, sed solam fidem divinae promissionis ad gratiam consequendam sufficere: anathema sit.

Can. 1. If anyone says that the sacraments of the New Law were not all instituted by Jesus Christ our Lord; or that there are more or fewer than seven, that is: baptism, confirmation, the Eucharist, penance, extreme unction, orders, and matrimony; or that any one of these seven is not truly and properly a sacrament, let him be anathema. 1601

Can. 2. If anyone says that these same sacraments of the New Law do not differ from the sacraments of the Old Law, except that the ceremonies and external rites are different, let him be anathema. 1602

Can. 3. If anyone says that these seven sacraments are so equal to one another that one is not in any way of greater worth than another, let him be anathema. 1603

Can. 4. If anyone says that the sacraments of the New Law are not necessary for salvation, but that they are superfluous; and that without the sacraments or the desire for them men obtain from God the grace of justification through faith alone [cf. *1559] (although it is true that not all the sacraments are necessary for each person), let him be anathema. 1604

Can. 5. If anyone says that these sacraments are instituted only for the sake of nourishing the faith, let him be anathema. 1605

Can. 6. If anyone says that the sacraments of the New Law do not contain the grace they signify or that they do not confer that grace on those who do not place an obstacle in the way [cf. *1451], as if they were only external signs of the grace or justice received through faith and marks of the Christian profession by which among men the faithful are distinguished from the unbelievers, let him be anathema. 1606

Can. 7. If anyone says that, as far as God's part is concerned, grace is not given through these sacraments always and to all, even if they receive them rightly, but only sometimes and to some, let him be anathema. 1607

Can. 8. If anyone says that through the sacraments of the New Law grace is not conferred by the performance of the rite itself but that faith alone in the divine promise is sufficient to obtain grace, let him be anathema. 1608

- 1609 Can. 9. Si quis dixerit, in tribus sacramentis, baptismo scilicet, confirmatione et ordine, non imprimi characterem in anima, hoc est signum quoddam spirituale et indelebile, unde ea iterari non possunt: anathema sit.
- 1610 Can. 10. Si quis dixerit, Christianos omnes in verbo et omnibus sacramentis administrandis habere potestatem: anathema sit.
- 1611 Can. 11. Si quis dixerit, in ministris, dum sacramenta conficiunt et conferunt, non requiri intentionem, saltem faciendi quod facit Ecclesia: anathema sit [cf. *1262].
- 1612 Can. 12. Si quis dixerit, ministrum in peccato mortali existentem, modo omnia essentialia, quae ad sacramentum conficiendum aut conferendum pertinent, servaverit, non conficere aut conferre sacramentum: anathema sit [cf. *1154].
- 1613 Can. 13. Si quis dixerit, receptos et approbatos Ecclesiae catholicae ritus in sollemni sacramentorum administratione adhiberi consuetos aut contemni, aut sine peccato a ministris pro libito omitti, aut in novos alios per quemcumque ecclesiarum pastorem mutari posse: anathema sit.
- Can. 9. If anyone says that in three sacraments, namely, baptism, confirmation, and orders, a character is not imprinted on the soul, that is, a kind of indelible spiritual sign by reason of which these sacraments cannot be repeated, let him be anathema.
- Can. 10. If anyone says that all Christians have the power (to preach) the word and to administer all the sacraments, let him be anathema.
- Can. 11. If anyone says that the intention at least of doing what the Church does is not required in the ministers when they are effecting and conferring the sacraments, let him be anathema [cf. *1262].
- Can. 12. If anyone says that a minister in the state of mortal sin, though he observes all the essentials that belong to the effecting and conferring of the sacrament, does not effect or confer the sacrament, let him be anathema [cf. *1154].
- Can. 13. If anyone says that the accepted and approved rites of the Catholic Church that are customarily used in the solemn administration of the sacraments may be despised or omitted without sin by the ministers as they please or that they may be changed to other new rites by any pastor of the churches, let him be anathema.

Canons on the Sacrament of Baptism

- 1614 Can. 1. Si quis dixerit, baptismum Ioannis habuisse eandem vim cum baptismo Christi: anathema sit.
- 1615 Can. 2. Si quis dixerit, aquam veram et naturalem non esse de necessitate baptismi, atque ideo verba illa Domini nostri Iesu Christi: “Nisi quis renatus fuerit ex aqua et Spiritu Sancto” [Io 3:5] ad metaphoram aliquam detorserit: anathema sit.
- 1616 Can. 3. Si quis dixerit, in Ecclesia Romana (quae omnium ecclesiarum mater est et magistra) non esse veram de baptismi sacramento doctrinam: anathema sit.
- 1617 Can. 4. Si quis dixerit, baptismum, qui etiam datur ab haereticis in nomine Patris et Filii et Spiritus Sancti, cum intentione faciendi quod facit Ecclesia, non esse verum baptismum: anathema sit.
- 1618 Can. 5. Si quis dixerit, baptismum liberum esse, hoc est non necessarium ad salutem: anathema sit [cf. *1524].
- 1619 Can. 6. Si quis dixerit, baptizatum non posse, etiamsi velit, gratiam amittere, quantumcumque peccet, nisi nolit credere: anathema sit [cf. *1544].
- 1620 Can. 7. Si quis dixerit, baptizatos per baptismum ipsum solius tantum fidei debitores fieri, non autem universae legis Christi servandae: anathema sit.
- Can. 1. If anyone says that the baptism of John had the same force as the baptism of Christ, let him be anathema.
- Can. 2. If anyone says that true and natural water is not necessary for baptism and therefore reduces to some sort of metaphor the words of our Lord Jesus Christ: “Unless one is reborn of water and the Spirit” [Jn 3:5], let him be anathema.
- Can. 3. If anyone says that the Roman Church (the mother and teacher of all churches) does not have the true doctrine concerning the sacrament of baptism, let him be anathema.
- Can. 4. If anyone says that baptism, even that given by heretics in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit, with the intention of doing what the Church does, is not true baptism, let him be anathema.
- Can. 5. If anyone says that baptism is optional, that is, not necessary for salvation, let him be anathema [cf. *1524].
- Can. 6. If anyone says that one baptized cannot lose grace, even if he wishes to, no matter how much he sins, unless he is unwilling to believe, let him be anathema [cf. *1544].
- Can. 7. If anyone says that those baptized are by the fact of their baptism obliged merely to faith alone but not to the observance of the whole law of Christ, let him be anathema.

Can. 8. Si quis dixerit, baptizatos liberos esse ab omnibus sanctae Ecclesiae praeceptis, quae vel scripta vel tradita sunt, ita ut ea observare non teneantur, nisi se sua sponte illis summittere voluerint: anathema sit.

Can. 8. If anyone says that those baptized are free from all the precepts of holy Church, whether written or handed down, so that they are not bound to observe them unless, of their own accord, they wish to submit to them, let him be anathema. 1621

Can. 9. Si quis dixerit, ita revocandos esse homines ad baptismi suscepti memoriam, ut vota omnia, quae post baptismum fiunt, vi promissionis in baptismo ipso iam factae irrita esse intelligant, quasi per ea et fidei, quam professi sunt, detrahatur, et ipsi baptismo: anathema sit.

Can. 9. If anyone says that the remembrance of the baptism that they have received ought to be so impressed on men that they be brought to understand that all vows taken after baptism are void in virtue of the promise already made in baptism itself, as if those vows detracted from the faith they have professed and from baptism itself, let him be anathema. 1622

Can. 10. Si quis dixerit, peccata omnia, quae post baptismum fiunt, sola recordatione et fide suscepti baptismi vel dimitti vel venialia fieri: anathema sit.

Can. 10. If anyone says that all sins committed after baptism are either remitted or made venial by the mere remembrance of, and faith in, the baptism once received, let him be anathema. 1623

Can. 11. Si quis dixerit, verum et rite collatum baptismum iterandum esse illi, qui apud infideles fidem Christi negaverit, cum ad paenitentiam convertitur: anathema sit.

Can. 11. If anyone says that for those who have denied the faith of Christ before infidels, baptism truly and rightly conferred must be repeated when they are converted to repentance, let him be anathema. 1624

Can. 12. Si quis dixerit, neminem esse baptizandum nisi ea aetate, qua Christus baptizatus est, vel in ipso mortis articulo: anathema sit.

Can. 12. If anyone says that no one is to be baptized except at the age at which Christ was baptized, or on the point of death, let him be anathema. 1625

Can. 13. Si quis dixerit, parvulos eo, quod actum credendi non habent, suscepto baptismo inter fideles computandos non esse, ac propterea, cum ad annos discretionis pervenerint, esse rebaptizandos, aut praestare omitti eorum baptismum, quam eos non actu proprio credentes baptizari in sola fide Ecclesiae: anathema sit.

Can. 13. If anyone says that little children, because they do not have an act of faith, are not to be numbered among the faithful after receiving baptism and that, therefore, when they have reached the age of discretion, they are to be rebaptized; or that it is better to omit their baptism, [if] they do not believe by an act of faith of their own, rather than to baptize them solely in the faith of the Church, let him be anathema. 1626

Can. 14. Si quis dixerit, huiusmodi parvulus baptizatus, cum adoleverint, interrogandos esse, an ratum habere velint, quod patrini eorum nomine, dum baptizarentur, polliciti sunt, et ubi se nolle responderint, suo esse arbitrio relinquendos nec alia interim poena ad christianam vitam cogendos, nisi ut ab Eucharistiae aliorumque sacramentorum perceptione arceantur, donec respiscant: anathema sit.

Can. 14. If anyone says that when the little children thus baptized have grown up, they are to be asked whether they wish to ratify what their sponsors promised in their name when they were baptized; and if they answer that they are unwilling, they are to be left to their own judgment and are not, in the meantime, to be compelled to a Christian life by any penalty other than the exclusion from receiving the Eucharist and the other sacraments until they repent, let him be anathema. 1627

Canons on the Sacrament of Confirmation

Can. 1. Si quis dixerit, confirmationem baptizatorum otiosam caeremoniam esse et non potius verum et proprium sacramentum, aut olim nihil aliud fuisse, quam catechesim quandam, qua adolescentiae proximi fidei suae rationem coram Ecclesia exponebant: anathema sit.

Can. 1. If anyone says that the confirmation of those baptized is a useless ceremony and not a true and proper sacrament; or that of old, it was nothing more than a sort of catechesis in which those nearing adolescence gave an account of their faith before the Church, let him be anathema. 1628

Can. 2. Si quis dixerit, iniurios esse Spiritui Sancto eos, qui sacro confirmationis chrismati virtutem aliquam tribuunt: anathema sit.

Can. 2. If anyone says that those who ascribe any power to the sacred chrism of confirmation are offending the Holy Spirit, let him be anathema. 1629

- 1630 Can. 3. Si quis dixerit, sanctae confirmationis ordinarium ministrum non esse solum episcopum, sed quemvis simplicem sacerdotem: anathema sit [cf. *1318].
- Can. 3. If anyone says that the ordinary minister of holy confirmation is not the bishop but any simple priest, let him be anathema [cf. *1318].

Continuation of the Council of TRENT under JULIUS III

JULIUS III: February 7, 1550–March 23, 1555

1635–1661: Session 13, October 11, 1551: Decree on the Sacrament of the Eucharist

In March 1547, the examination of propositions on the Eucharist suspected of heresy was begun. These were for the most part taken from the works cited in *1600^o; other works considered were Johann Oecolampadius' De genuina verborum Domini "Hoc est corpus meum" iuxta vetustissimos auctores expositione liber (Basel, 1525) [particularly in cann. 1 and 8] and Ulrich Zwingli's De vera et falsa religione (1525; CpRef 90:773–820); Subsidium sive Coronis de eucharistia (1525; CpRef 91:462–504); and Eine klare Unterrichtung vom Nachmahl Christi (1526; CpRef 91:789–862).

After the transfer of the council to Bologna, from May 9 to 31, various drafts of the canons were discussed (SGTr 5:1007–12; 6:123ff. / TheiTr 1:466ff.; the Bologna period is omitted). At Trent, in September 1551, the synodal Fathers resumed the discussion on the chapters (SGTr 7:111ff. / TheiTr 1:488ff.); on October 2 and 9, drafts of the canons were presented (SGTr 7:178f., 187 / TheiTr 1:520, 525).

Ed.: SGTr 7:200–204 / RiTr 62–67 / MaC 33:80C–84B / HaC 10:79A–84C / COeD, 3rd ed., 693–98.

Foreword

- 1635 Sacrosancta oecumenica et generalis Tridentina Synodus ..., etsi in eum finem non absque peculiari Spiritus Sancti ductu et gubernatione convenerit, ut veram et antiquam de fide et sacramentis doctrinam exponeret, et ut haeresibus omnibus et aliis gravissimis incommodis, quibus Dei Ecclesia misere nunc exagitatur et in multas ac varias partes scinditur, remedium afferret, hoc praesertim iam inde a principio in votis habuit, ut stirpitus, convelleret zizania execrabilium errorum et schismatum, quae inimicus homo his nostris calamitosis temporibus in doctrina fidei, usu et cultu sacrosanctae Eucharistiae supereminavit [cf. Mt 13:25], quam alioqui Salvator noster in Ecclesia sua tamquam symbolum reliquit eius unitatis et caritatis, qua Christianos omnes inter se coniunctos et copulatos esse voluit.
- The most holy, ecumenical, and general Council of Trent ..., although it is assembled under the special guidance and direction of the Holy Spirit for the purpose of setting forth the true and ancient doctrine of the faith and sacraments and supplying a remedy for all the heresies and other most grave injuries by which the Church of God is now deeply afflicted and divided into many and diverse parts; nevertheless, from the beginning, it has had, in particular, the desire to uproot completely the cockle of damnable errors and schisms that, in these turbulent times of ours, the enemy has sown [cf. Mt 13:25] in the doctrine of the faith, use, and worship of the most Holy Eucharist: that very Eucharist which our Savior left in his Church precisely as a symbol of the unity and charity with which he wished all Christians to be joined together and united with each other.

Itaque eadem sacrosancta Synodus, sanam et sinceram illam de venerabili hoc et divino Eucharistiae sacramento doctrinam tradens, quam semper catholica Ecclesia ab ipso Iesu Christo Domino nostro et eius Apostolis erudita, atque a Spiritu Sancto illi omnem veritatem in dies suggerente [cf. Io 14:26] edocta retinuit et ad finem usque saeculi conservabit, omnibus Christi fidelibus interdicit, ne posthac de sanctissima Eucharistia aliter credere, docere aut praedicare audeant, quam ut est hoc praesenti decreto explicatum atque definitum.

Cap. 1. De reali praesentia Domini nostri Iesu Christi in sanctissimo Eucharistiae sacramento

- 1636 Principio docet sancta Synodus et aperte ac simpliciter profitetur, in almo sanctae Eucharistiae sacramento post

And so this most holy Council, handing on the sound and genuine doctrine regarding this venerable and divine sacrament of the Eucharist, which the Catholic Church—instructed by our Lord Jesus Christ himself and his apostles and by the Holy Spirit, who continually reminds her of all truth [cf. Jn 14:26]—has always held and will preserve until the end of the world, forbids all the faithful of Christ henceforth from daring to believe, teach, or preach anything about the most Holy Eucharist that is different from what is explained and defined in this present decree.

Chapter 1. The Real Presence of Our Lord Jesus Christ in the Most Holy Sacrament of the Eucharist

To begin with, the holy council teaches and openly and straightforwardly professes that in the Blessed panis et vini consecrationem Dominum nostrum Iesum Christum verum Deum atque hominem vere, realiter ac substantialiter [can. 1] sub specie illarum rerum sensibilium contineri. Neque enim haec inter se pugnant, ut ipse Salvator noster semper ad dextram Patris in caelis assideat iuxta modum existendi naturalem, et ut multis nihilominus aliis in locis sacramentaliter praesens sua substantia nobis adsit, ea existendi ratione, quam etsi verbis exprimere vix possumus, possibilem tamen esse Deo [cf. Mt 19:26; Lc 18:27], cogitatione per fidem illustrata assequi possumus et constantissime credere debemus.

Ita enim maiores nostri omnes, quotquot in vera Christi Ecclesia fuerunt, qui de sanctissimo hoc sacramento disseruerunt, apertissime professi sunt, hoc tam admirabile sacramentum in ultima Coena Redemptorem nostrum instituisse, cum post panis vini que benedictionem se suum ipsius corpus illis praebere ac suum sanguinem disertis ac perspicuis verbis testatus est; quae verba a sanctis Evangelistis commemorata [cf. Mt 26:26–29; Mc 14:22–25; Lc 22:19s], et a divo Paulo postea repetita [1 Cor 11:24s], cum propriam illam et apertissimam significationem prae se ferant, secundum quam a Patribus intellecta sunt, indignissimum sane flagitium est, ea a quibusdam contentiosis et pravis hominibus ad fictitios et imaginarios tropos, quibus veritas carnis et sanguinis Christi negatur, contra universum Ecclesiae sensum detorqueri, quae, tamquam “columna et firmamentum veritatis” [1 Tim 3:15], haec ab impiis hominibus excogitata commenta velut satanica detestata est, grato semper et memori animo praestantissimum hoc Christi beneficium agnoscens.

Cap. 2. De ratione institutionis sanctissimi huius sacramenti

Ergo Salvator noster, discessurus ex hoc mundo ad Patrem, sacramentum hoc instituit, in quo divitias divini sui erga homines amoris velut effudit, “memoriam faciens mirabilium suorum” [Ps 110:4], et in illius sumptione colere nos sui memoriam [cf. Lc 22:19; 1 Cor 11:24] praecepit suamque annuntiare mortem, donec ipse ad iudicandum mundum veniat [cf. 1 Cor 11:26].

Sumi autem voluit sacramentum hoc tamquam spiritualem animarum cibum [cf. Mt 26:26], quo alantur et confortentur [can. 5] viventes vita illius, qui dixit: “Qui manducat me, et ipse vivet propter me” [Io 6:57], et tamquam antidotum, quo liberemur a culpis quotidianis et a peccatis mortalibus praeservemur.

Sacramentum of the Holy Eucharist, after the consecration of the bread and wine, our Lord Jesus Christ, true God and man, is truly, really, and substantially contained under the appearances of those perceptible realities [can. 1]. For, there is no contradiction in the fact that our Savior always sits at the right hand of the Father in heaven according to his natural way of existing and that, nevertheless, in his substance he is sacramentally present to us in many other places. We can hardly find words to express this way of existing; but our reason, enlightened through faith, can nevertheless recognize it as possible for God [cf. Mt 19:26; Lc 18:27], and we must always believe it unhesitatingly.

For all our predecessors in the true Church of Christ who treated of this most holy sacrament very clearly 1637 professed that our Redeemer instituted this wonderful sacrament at the Last Supper, when, after he had blessed bread and wine, he declared in plain, unmistakable words that he was giving to them his own body and his own blood. These words, recorded by the evangelists [cf. Mt 26:26–29; Mk 14:22–25; Lc 22:19f.] and afterward repeated by St. Paul [cf. 1 Cor 11:24f.], have this proper and most obvious meaning and were so understood by the Fathers. Consequently, it is indeed the greatest infamy that some contentious, evil men distort these words into fanciful, imaginary figures of speech where the truth about the Body and Blood of Christ is denied, contrary to the universal understanding of the Church. The Church, which is “the pillar and bulwark of the truth” [1 Tim 3:15], has detested as satanical these interpretations invented by impious men, and she acknowledges in a spirit of unflinching gratitude this most precious gift of Christ.

Chapter 2. The Reason for the Institution of This Most Holy Sacrament

Our Savior, therefore, instituted this sacrament before 1638 leaving this world to go to the Father. He poured out, as it were, in this sacrament the riches of his divine love for human beings, “causing his wonderful works to be remembered” [cf. Ps 111:4], and he wanted us when receiving it to celebrate his memory [cf. Lc 22:19; 1 Cor 11:24] and to proclaim his death until he comes to judge the world [cf. 1 Cor 11:26].

He wished, however, that this sacrament be received as the soul’s spiritual food [cf. Mt 26:26], which would nourish and strengthen [can. 5] those who live by the life of him who said: “He who eats me will live because of me” [Jn 6:57]; and that it be also a remedy to free us from our daily faults and to preserve us from mortal sin.

Pignus praeterea id esse voluit futurae nostrae gloriae et perpetuae felicitatis, adeoque symbolum unius illius corporis, cuius ipse caput [cf. 1 Cor 11:3; Eph 5:23] existit, cuique nos, tamquam membra, arctissima fidei, spei et caritatis conexione adstrictos esse voluit, ut id ipsum omnes diceremus, nec essent in nobis schismata [cf. 1 Cor 1:10].

Cap. 3. De excellentia sanctissimae Eucharistiae super reliqua sacramenta 1639 Commune hoc quidem est sanctissimae Eucharistiae cum ceteris sacramentis, “symbolum esse rei sacrae et invisibilis gratiae formam visibilem”;¹ verum illud in ea excellens et singulare reperitur, quod reliqua sacramenta tunc primum sanctificandi vim habent, cum quis illis utitur: at in Eucharistia ipse sanctitatis auctor ante usum est [can. 4].

1640 Nondum enim Eucharistiam de manu Domini Apostoli susceperant [cf. Mt 26:26; Mc 14:22], cum vere tamen ipse affirmaret corpus suum esse, quod praebebat; et semper haec fides in Ecclesia Dei fuit, statim post consecrationem verum Domini nostri corpus verumque eius sanguinem sub panis et vini specie una cum ipsius anima et divinitate exsistere: sed corpus quidem sub specie panis et sanguinem sub vini specie ex vi verborum, ipsum autem corpus sub specie vini et sanguinem sub specie panis animamque sub utraque, vi naturalis illius conexione et concomitantiae, qua partes Christi Domini, qui iam ex mortuis resurrexit non amplius moriturus [cf. Rm 6:9], inter se copulantur, divinitatem porro propter admirabilem illam eius cum corpore et anima hypostaticam unionem [cann. 1 et 3].

1641 Quapropter verissimum est, tantundem sub alterutra specie atque sub utraque contineri. Totus enim et integer Christus sub panis specie et sub quavis ipsius speciei parte, totus item sub vini specie et sub eius partibus existit [can. 3].

Cap. 4. De Transsubstantiatione

1642 Quoniam autem Christus redemptor noster corpus suum id, quod sub specie panis offerebat [cf. Mt 26:26–29; Mc 14:22–25; Lc 22:19s; 1 Cor 11:24–26], vere esse dixit, ideo persuasum semper in Ecclesia Dei fuit, Christ willed, moreover, that this sacrament be a pledge of our future glory and our everlasting happiness and, likewise, a symbol of that one “body” of which he himself is “the head” [cf. 1 Cor 11:3; Eph 5:23] and to which he willed that we, as members, should be linked by the closest bonds of faith, hope, and love, so that we might all say the same thing and that there might be no dissensions among us [cf. 1 Cor 1:10].

Chapter 3. The Preeminence of the Most Holy Eucharist over the Other Sacraments

In common with the other sacraments, the most Holy Eucharist is “a symbol of a sacred thing and a visible form of invisible grace”.¹ But the Eucharist also has this unique mark of distinction that, whereas the other sacraments have the power of sanctifying only when someone makes use of them, in the Eucharist the Author of sanctity himself is present before the sacrament is used [can. 4].

For the apostles had not yet received the Eucharist from the hands of the Lord [cf. Mt 26:26; Mk 14:22] when he himself told them that it was truly his body that he was giving them. This has always been the belief of the Church of God that immediately after the consecration the true body and blood of our Lord, together with his soul and divinity, exist under the species of bread and wine. The body exists under the species of bread and the blood under the species of wine by virtue of the words. But the body, too, exists under the species of wine, the blood under the species of bread, and the soul under both species in virtue of the natural connection and concomitance by which the parts of Christ the Lord, who has already risen from the dead to die no more [cf. Rom 6:9], are united together. Moreover, the divinity is present because of its admirable hypostatic union with the body and the soul [cann. 1 and 3].

It is, therefore, perfectly true that just as much is present under either of the two species as is present under both. For Christ, whole and entire, exists under the species of bread and under any part of that species, and similarly the whole Christ exists under the species of wine and under its parts [can. 3].

Chapter 4. Transubstantiation

Because Christ our Redeemer said that it was truly his body that he was offering under the species of bread [cf. Mt 26:26–29; Mk 14:22–25; Lk 22:19f.; 1 Cor 11:24–26], it has always been the conviction of the Church

¹ 1639 Cf. Gratian, Decretum, p. III, dist. 2, c. 32 (Frdb 1:1324); cf. Augustine, Quaestiones in Heptateuchum III, 84 [on Lev 21] (J. Fraipont: CpChL 33 [1958]: 228 / CSEL 28/II:305 / PL 34:712); likewise in De civitate Dei X, 5 (B. Dombart and A. Kalb: CpChL 47 [1955]: 277 / CSEL 40/I:452_{18f} / PL 41:282).

idque nunc denuo sancta haec Synodus declarat: per consecrationem panis et vini conversionem fieri totius substantiae panis in substantiam corporis Christi Domini nostri, et totius substantiae vini in substantiam sanguinis eius. Quae conversio convenienter et proprie a sancta catholica Ecclesia transsubstantiatio est appellata [can. 2].

Cap. 5. De cultu et veneratione huic sanctissimo sacramento exhibenda

Nullus itaque dubitandi locus relinquitur, quin omnes Christi fideles pro more in catholica Ecclesia semper recepto latria cultum, qui vero Deo debetur, huic sanctissimo sacramento in veneratione exhibeant [can. 6]. Neque enim ideo minus est adorandum, quod fuerit a Christo Domino, ut sumatur [cf. Mt 26:26–29], institutum. Nam illum eundem Deum praesentem in eo adesse credimus, quem Pater aeternus introducens in orbem terrarum dicit: “Et adorent eum omnes Angeli Dei” [Hbr 1:6; ex Ps 96:7], quem Magi procidentibus adoraverunt [cf. Mt 2:11], quem denique in Galilaea ab Apostolis adoratum fuisse Scriptura testatur [cf. Mt 28:17; Lc 24:52].

Declarat praeterea sancta Synodus, pie et religiose admodum in Dei Ecclesiam inductum fuisse hunc morem, ut singulis annis peculiari quodam et festo die praecelsum hoc et venerabile sacramentum singulari veneratione ac solemnitate celebraretur, utque in processionibus reverenter et honorifice illud per vias et loca publica circumferretur.¹

Aequissimum est enim, sacros aliquos statutos esse dies, cum Christiani omnes singulari ac rara quadam significatione gratos et memores testentur animos erga communem Dominum et Redemptorem pro tam ineffabili et plane divino beneficio, quo mortis eius victoria et triumphus repraesentatur. Atque sic quidem oportuit victricem veritatem de mendacio et haeresi triumphum agere, ut eius adversarii, in conspectu tanti splendoris et in tanta universae Ecclesiae laetitia positi, vel debilitati et fracti tabescant, vel pudore affecti et confusi aliquando resipiscant.

Cap. 6. De asservando sacrae Eucharistiae sacramento et ad infirmos deferendo Consuetudo asservandi in sacrario sanctam Eucharistiam adeo antiqua est, ut eam saeculum etiam Nicaeni Concilii agnoverit. Porro deferri ipsam sacram Eucharistiam ad infirmos, et in hunc usum diligenter in ecclesiis conservari, praeterquam quod of God, and this holy council now again declares, that, by the consecration of the bread and wine, there takes place a change of the whole substance of bread into the substance of the body of Christ our Lord and of the whole substance of wine into the substance of his blood. This change the holy Catholic Church has fittingly and properly named transubstantiation [can. 2].

Chapter 5. The Worship and Veneration to Be Shown to This Most Holy Sacrament

There remains, therefore, no room for doubting that all the faithful of Christ, in accordance with the perpetual custom of the Catholic Church, must venerate this most holy Sacrament with the worship of latria that is due to the true God [can. 6]. Nor is it to be less adored because it was instituted by Christ the Lord to be received [cf. Mt 26:26–29]. For in it we believe that the same God is present whom the eternal Father brought into the world, saying: “Let all God’s angels worship him” [Heb 1:6; from Ps 97:7], whom the Magi fell down to worship [cf. Mt 2:11], and whom, finally, the apostles adored in Galilee, as Scripture testifies [cf. Mt 28:17; Lk 24:52].

The holy council further declares that it was with true religious devotion that the custom was introduced into the Church of God whereby every year, on a special fixed day of festival, this sublime and venerable Sacrament should be hailed with particular veneration and solemnity and carried with reverence and honor in processions through streets and public places.¹

For it is most reasonable that some days have been set aside on which all Christians may manifest, with some noteworthy and unusual tokens, their thoughts of gratitude and remembrance toward the Lord and Redeemer they share for a favor so much beyond words and clearly divine by which his victory and triumph over death are represented. And thus indeed must truth, the victor, celebrate a triumph over falsehood and heresy so that, confronted with so much splendor and such great joy of the universal Church, her enemies weakened and broken may fall into decline or, touched by shame and confounded, may in time come to their senses.

Chapter 6. The Reservation of the Sacrament of the Holy Eucharist and Taking It to the Sick

The custom of reserving the Holy Eucharist in a sacred place is so ancient that it was recognized already in the century of the Council of Nicaea. That the Holy Eucharist should be taken to the sick and that it should be carefully kept in the churches for this purpose is right and 1643

1644

1645

*1644 ¹ The feast of Corpus Christi was introduced in A.D. 1264; cf. *846°.

cum summa aequitate et ratione coniunctum est, tum multis in conciliis praeceptum invenitur, et vetustissimo catholicae Ecclesiae more est observatum. Quare sancta haec Synodus retinendum omnino salutarem hunc et necessarium morem statuit [can. 7].

Cap. 7. De praeparatione, quae adhibenda est, ut digne quis sacram Eucharistiam percipiat 1646 Si non decet ad sacras ulla functiones quempiam accedere nisi sancte, certe, quo magis sanctitas et divinitas caelestis huius sacramenti viro christiano comperta est, eo diligentius cavere ille debet, ne absque magna reverentia et sanctitate [can. 11] ad id percipiendum accedat, praesertim cum illa plena formidinis verba apud Apostolum legamus: “Qui manducat et bibit indigne, iudicium sibi manducat et bibit, non diudicans corpus Domini” [1 Cor 11:29]. Quare communicare volenti revocandum est in memoriam eius praeceptum: “Probet autem seipsum homo” [1 Cor 11:28].

1647 Ecclesiastica autem consuetudo declarat, eam probationem necessariam esse, ut nullus sibi conscius peccati mortalis, quantumvis sibi contritus videatur, absque praemissa sacramentali confessione ad sacram Eucharistiam accedere debeat.

Quod a Christianis omnibus, etiam ab iis sacerdotibus, quibus ex officio incubuerit celebrare, haec sancta Synodus perpetuo servandum esse decrevit, modo non desit illis copia confessoris. Quod si necessitate urgente sacerdos absque praevia confessione celebraverit, quam primum [*cf. 2058] confiteatur.

Cap. 8. De usu admirabilis huius sacramenti

1648 Quoad usum autem recte et sapienter Patres nostri tres rationes hoc sanctum sacramentum accipiendi distinxerunt. Quosdam enim docuerunt sacramentaliter dumtaxat id sumere, ut peccatores; alios tantum spiritualiter, illos nimirum, qui voto propositum illum caelestem panem edentes, fide viva, “quae per dilectionem operatur” [Gal 5:6], fructum eius et utilitatem sentiunt; tertios porro sacramentaliter simul et spiritualiter [can. 8]; ii autem sunt, qui ita se prius probant et instruunt, ut vestem nuptialem induti ad divinam hanc mensam accedant [cf. Mt 22:11s].

In sacramentali autem sumptione semper in Ecclesia Dei mos fuit, ut laici a sacerdotibus communionem acciperent, sacerdotes autem celebrantes se ipsos communicarent [can. 10]; qui mos tamquam ex traditione apostolica descendens iure ac merito retineri debet.

very reasonable. Moreover, this is prescribed by many councils and goes back to the most ancient custom in the Catholic Church. Consequently, this holy council has decreed that this most salutary and necessary custom be entirely retained [can. 7].

Chapter 7. The Preparation to Be Made to Receive the Holy Eucharist Worthily

It is not right that anyone should participate in any sacred functions except in a holy manner. Certainly, then, the more a Christian is aware of the holiness and the divinity of this heavenly Sacrament, the more careful he should be not to receive it without great reverence and sanctity [can. 11], especially since we read in the apostle the fearful words: “Anyone who eats and drinks unworthily, without discerning the body of the Lord, eats and drinks judgment upon himself” [1 Cor 11:29, Vulg.]. Therefore, whoever desires to communicate must be reminded of the precept “Let a man examine himself” [1 Cor 11:28].

The practice of the Church declares that examination necessary, so that no one who is aware of personal mortal sin, however contrite he may feel, should approach the Holy Eucharist without first having made a sacramental confession.

The holy council has decreed that this practice should always be retained by all Christians, even by those priests who may have the obligation to celebrate Mass, so long as they do not lack an available confessor. But if a priest should celebrate in urgent need without previous confession, let him confess at the first opportunity [*cf. 2058].

Chapter 8. The Use of This Wonderful Sacrament

As regards the use, our Fathers have correctly and appropriately distinguished three ways of receiving this holy Sacrament. They teach that some receive it only sacramentally because they are sinners. Others receive it only spiritually; they are the ones who, receiving in desire the heavenly bread put before them, with a living faith “working through love” [Gal 5:6], experience its fruit and benefit from it. The third group receive it both sacramentally and spiritually [can. 8]; they are the ones who examine and prepare themselves beforehand to approach this divine table, clothed in the wedding garment [cf. Mt 22:11f.].

In the reception of the Sacrament, there has always been a custom in the Church of God that the laity receive communion from priests, but that priests, when celebrating, administer communion to themselves [can. 10]. This custom, as coming from apostolic tradition, should rightly and deservedly be retained.

Demum autem paterno affectu admonet sancta Synodus, hortatur, rogat et obsecrat “per viscera misericordiae Dei nostri” [Lc 1:78], ut omnes et singuli, qui christiano nomine censentur, in hoc “unitatis signo”, in hoc “vinculo caritatis”,¹ in hoc concordiae symbolo iam tandem aliquando conveniant et concordent, memoresque tantae maiestatis et tam eximii amoris Iesu Christi Domini nostri, qui dilectam animam suam in nostrae salutis pretium, et carnem suam nobis dedit ad manducandum [cf. Io 6:48–58], haec sacra mysteria corporis et sanguinis eius ea fidei constantia et firmitate, ea animi devotione, ea pietate et cultu credant et venerentur, ut panem illum supersubstantialiorem [cf. Mt 6:11] frequenter suscipere possint, et is vere eis sit animae vita et perpetua sanitas mentis, cuius vigore confortati [cf. 3 Rg 19:8] ex huius miserae peregrinationis itinere ad caelestem patriam pervenire valeant, eundem “panem Angelorum” [Ps 77:25], quem modo sub sacris velaminibus edunt, absque ullo velamine manducaturi.

Quoniam autem non est satis veritatem dicere, nisi detegantur et refellantur errores: placuit sanctae Synodo hos canones subiungere, ut omnes, iam agnita doctrina catholica, intelligant quoque, quae ab illis haereses caveri vitarique debeant.

Canons on the Most Holy Sacrament of the Eucharist

Can. 1. Si quis negaverit, in sanctissimae Eucharistiae sacramento contineri vere, realiter et substantialiter, corpus et sanguinem una cum anima et divinitate Domini nostri Iesu Christi ac proinde totum Christum; sed dixerit, tantummodo esse in eo ut in signo vel figura, aut virtute: anathema sit [cf. *1636, 1640].

Can. 2. Si quis dixerit, in sacrosancto Eucharistiae sacramento remanere substantiam panis et vini una cum corpore et sanguine Domini nostri Iesu Christi, negaveritque mirabilem illam et singularem conversionem totius substantiae panis in corpus et totius substantiae vini in sanguinem, manentibus dumtaxat speciebus panis et vini, quam quidem conversionem catholica Ecclesia aptissime transsubstantiationem appellat: anathema sit [cf. *1642].

Can. 3. Si quis negaverit, in venerabili sacramento Eucharistiae sub unaquaque specie et sub singulis cuiusque speciei partibus separatione facta totum Christum contineri: anathema sit [cf. *1641].

Can. 4. Si quis dixerit, peracta consecratione in admirabili Eucharistiae sacramento non esse corpus et Finally, with fatherly affection the holy council 1649 warns, exhorts, asks, and pleads, “through the tender mercy of our God” [Lc 1:78], that each and all who bear the name of Christians meet at last in this “sign of unity”, in this “bond of charity”,¹ in this symbol of concord, to be finally of one heart. Keeping in mind the great majesty and the most excellent love of our Lord Jesus Christ, who laid down his precious life as the price of our salvation and who gave us his flesh to eat [cf. Jn 6:48–58], may all Christians have so firm and strong a faith in the sacred mystery of his Body and Blood, may they worship it with such devotion and pious veneration, that they will be able to receive frequently their super-substantial bread [cf. Mt 6:11, Vulg.]. May it truly be the life of their souls and continual health for their minds; strengthened by its power [cf. 1 Kings 19:8], may they, after journeying through this sorrowful pilgrimage, reach their home in heaven, where they will eat without any veil the same “bread of the angels” [Ps 78:25] that they eat now under sacred veils.

But, since it is not enough to state the truth without 1650 pointing out and refuting errors, it has pleased the holy council to add the following canons so that all, already knowing the Catholic doctrine, may also realize what are the heresies that they must beware of and avoid.

Can. 1. If anyone denies that in the sacrament of 1651 the most Holy Eucharist the body and blood, together with the soul and divinity, of our Lord Jesus Christ and, therefore, the whole Christ is truly, really, and substantially contained, but says that he is in it only as in a sign or figure or by his power, let him be anathema [cf. *1636, 1640].

Can. 2. If anyone says that in the most holy sacrament 1652 of the Eucharist the substance of bread and wine remains together with the body and blood of our Lord Jesus Christ and denies that wonderful and unique change of the whole substance of the bread into his body and of the whole substance of the wine into his blood while only the species of bread and wine remain, a change which the Catholic Church very fittingly calls transsubstantiation, let him be anathema [cf. *1642].

Can. 3. If anyone denies that in the venerable 1653 sacrament of the Eucharist the whole Christ is contained under each species and under each part of either species when separated, let him be anathema [cf. *1641].

Can. 4. If anyone says that after the consecration 1654 the body and blood of our Lord Jesus Christ are not in sanguinem Domini nostri Iesu Christi, sed tantum in usu, dum sumitur, non autem ante vel post, et in hostiis seu particulis consecratis, quae post communionem reservantur vel supersunt, non remanere verum corpus Domini: anathema sit [cf. *1639s].

*1649 ¹ Cf. Augustine, In Evangelium Iohannis, tract. 26, 13 (R. Willems: CpChL 36 [1954]: 266₂₇ / PL 35:1613).

1655 Can. 5. Si quis dixerit, vel praecipuum fructum sanctissimae Eucharistiae esse remissionem peccatorum, vel ex ea non alios effectus provenire: anathema sit [cf. *1638].

1656 Can. 6. Si quis dixerit, in sancto Eucharistiae sacramento Christum unigenitum Dei Filium non esse cultu latriae etiam externo adorandum, atque ideo nec festiva peculiari celebritate venerandum, neque in processionibus secundum laudabilem et universalem Ecclesiae sanctae ritum et consuetudinem solemniter circumgestandum, vel non publice, ut adoretur, populo proponendum, et eius adoratores esse idololatrias: anathema sit [cf. *1643s].

1657 Can. 7. Si quis dixerit, non licere sacram Eucharistiam in sacrario reservari, sed statim post consecrationem adstantibus necessario distribuendam; aut non licere, ut illa ad infirmos honorifice deferatur: anathema sit [cf. *1645].

1658 Can. 8. Si quis dixerit, Christum in Eucharistia exhibitum spiritualiter tantum manducari, et non etiam sacramentaliter ac realiter: anathema sit [cf. *1648].

1659 Can. 9. Si quis negaverit, omnes et singulos Christi fideles utriusque sexus, cum ad annos discretionis pervenerint, teneri singulis annis saltem in Paschate ad communicandum iuxta praeceptum sanctae matris Ecclesiae: anathema sit [cf. *812].

1660 Can. 10. Si quis dixerit, non licere sacerdoti celebranti se ipsum communicare: anathema sit [cf. *1648].

1661 Can. 11. Si quis dixerit, solam fidem esse sufficientem praeparationem ad sumendum sanctissimae Eucharistiae sacramentum [cf. *1646]: anathema sit.

Et, ne tantum Sacramentum indigne atque ideo in mortem et condemnationem sumatur, statuit atque declarat ipsa sancta Synodus, illis, quos conscientia peccati mortalis gravat, quantumcumque etiam se contritos existiment, habita copia confessoris necessario praemittendam esse confessionem sacramentalem.

Si quis autem contrarium docere, praedicare vel pertinaciter asserere, seu etiam publice disputando defendere praesumpserit, eo ipso excommunicatus existat [cf. *1647].

the marvelous sacrament of the Eucharist but that they are there only in the use of the sacrament, while it is being received, and not before or after, and that in the consecrated hosts or particles that are preserved or are left over after communion the true body of the Lord does not remain, let him be anathema [cf. *1639f.].

Can. 5. If anyone says that the principal fruit of the most Holy Eucharist is the forgiveness of sins or that no other effects come from it, let him be anathema [cf. *1638].

Can. 6. If anyone says that Christ, the only begotten Son of God, is not to be adored in the holy sacrament of the Eucharist with the worship of latria, including external worship, and that the Sacrament therefore is not to be honored with special festive celebrations or solemnly carried in processions according to the praiseworthy universal rite and custom of the holy Church; or that it is not to be publicly exposed for the people's adoration and that those who adore it are idolaters, let him be anathema [cf. *1643f.].

Can. 7. If anyone says that it is not lawful to keep the sacred Eucharist in a sacred place but that it must necessarily be distributed immediately after the consecration to those who are present; or that it is not lawful to carry it with honor to the sick, let him be anathema [cf. *1645].

Can. 8. If anyone says that Christ presented in the Eucharist is only spiritually eaten and not sacramentally and really as well, let him be anathema [cf. *1648].

Can. 9. If anyone denies that each and all of Christ's faithful of both sexes are bound, when they reach the age of reason, to receive communion every year, at least during the Paschal Season, according to the precept of Holy Mother Church, let him be anathema [cf. *812].

Can. 10. If anyone says that it is not lawful for the celebrating priest to communicate himself, let him be anathema [cf. *1648].

Can. 11. If anyone says that faith alone is a sufficient preparation for receiving the sacrament of the most Holy Eucharist, let him be anathema [cf. *1646].

And, lest so great a sacrament be received unworthily and hence unto death and condemnation, this holy council determines and decrees that those whose conscience is burdened with mortal sin, no matter how contrite they may think they are, first must necessarily make a sacramental confession if a confessor is available.

If anyone presumes to teach or preach or obstinately maintain or defend in public disputation the opposite of this, he shall by the very fact be excommunicated [cf. *1647].

1667–1719: Session 14, November 25, 1551

At Bologna, the synodal Fathers had already prepared numerous drafts for decrees on the sacraments of penance and extreme unction (SGTr 6:7–90, 192–288, 307–21). At Trent on October 15, 1551, they resumed the discussion about this (SGTr 7:233–87 / TheiTr 1:531–81), and in mid-November, they drew up a draft of the doctrine and the canons (SGTr 7:324–27 / TheiTr 1:582–90), which several days later was put in the form of the definitive decree.

Ed.: SGTr 7:343–57 [= doctrine]; 357–59 [= canons] / RiTr 75–87 / MaC 33:91C–99B; 99C–102C / HaC 10:89D–97D; 97D–100D / COeD, 3rd ed., 703–11; 711–13.

a. Doctrine on the Sacrament of Penance*Foreword*

Sacrosancta oecumenica et generalis Tridentina Synodus . . . , quamvis in decreto de iustificatione [*cf. 1542s, 1579] multus fuerit de paenitentiae sacramento propter locorum cognitionem necessaria quadam ratione sermo interpositus: tanta nihilominus circa illud nostra hac aetate diversorum errorum est multitudo, ut non parum publicae utilitatis retulerit, de eo exactiorem et plenior definitionem tradidisse, inqua, demonstratis et convulsis Spiritus Sancti praesidio universis erroribus, catholica veritas perspicua et illustris fieret; quam nunc sancta haec synodus Christianis omnibus perpetuo servandam proponit.

The holy, ecumenical, and general Council of Trent 1667 . . . realizes that in the decree on justification [*cf. 1542f, 1579] a good deal about the sacrament of penance was introduced for a reason that seemed necessary, namely, the close connection between the two subjects. Nevertheless, so great is the accumulation of errors about that sacrament during our time that no small public advantage will come from giving a more detailed and full definition concerning this sacrament in which, once the widespread errors have been disclosed and uprooted with the assistance of the Holy Spirit, the Catholic truth will become more clear and distinct. This holy council now lays before all Christians this truth to be forever observed.

Cap. 1. De necessitate et institutione sacramenti paenitentiae

Si ea in regeneratis omnibus gratitudo erga Deum esset, ut iustitiam in baptismo ipsius beneficio et gratia susceptam constanter tuerentur, non fuisset opus, aliud ab ipso baptismo sacramentum ad peccatorum remissionem esse institutum [can. 2]. Quoniam autem “Deus, dives in misericordia” [Eph 2:4], “cognovit figmentum nostrum” [Ps 102:14], illis etiam vitae remedium contulit, qui sese postea in peccati servitute et daemonis potestatem tradidissent, sacramentum videlicet paenitentiae [can. 1], quo lapsis post baptismum beneficium mortis Christi applicatur.

Chapter 1. The Necessity and the Institution of the Sacrament of Penance

If in all those who are regenerated there were such 1668 gratitude toward God that through his bounty and grace they constantly preserved the justice they had received in baptism, there would have been no need to institute another sacrament for the forgiveness of sins besides baptism itself [can. 2]. But since God, who is “rich in mercy” [Eph 2:4], “knows our frame” [Ps 103:14], he has given a remedy of life also to those who after baptism have delivered themselves up to the bondage of sin and the devil’s power, namely, the sacrament of penance [can. 1], whereby the benefit of Christ’s death is applied to those who have fallen after baptism.

Fuit quidem paenitentia universis hominibus, qui se mortali aliquo peccato inquinassent, quovis tempore ad gratiam et iustitiam assequendam necessaria, illis etiam, qui baptismi sacramento ablui petivissent, ut perversitate abiecta et emendata tantam Dei offensionem cum peccati odio et pio animi dolore detestarentur. Unde Propheta ait: “Convertimini et agite paenitentiam ab omnibus iniquitatibus vestris; et non erit vobis in ruinam iniquitas” [Ez 18:30]. Dominus etiam dixit: “Nisi paenitentiam egeritis, omnes similiter peribitis” [Lc 13:3]. Et princeps Apostolorum Petrus peccatoribus baptismo initiandis paenitentiam commendans dicebat: “Paenitentiam agite, et baptizetur unusquisque vestrum” [Act 2:38].

Penance was indeed at all times necessary for all men 1669 who had stained themselves by any mortal sin in order to obtain grace and justice—not excepting those who desired to be cleansed by the sacrament of baptism—so that they might turn from their perversion, make amendment, and detest so great an offense of God with hatred of sin and a sincere and heartfelt sorrow. Therefore the prophet says: “Be converted and do penance for all your iniquities, and iniquity shall not be your ruin” [Ezek 18:30, Vulg.]. The Lord also said: “Unless you do penance, you will all likewise perish” [Lk 13:3]. And Peter, prince of the apostles, recommended penance to sinners who were about to receive baptism with the words: “Repent, and be baptized every one of you” [Acts 2:38f.].

1670 Porro nec ante adventum Christi paenitentia erat sacramentum, nec est post adventum illius cuiquam ante baptismum. Dominus autem sacramentum paenitentiae tunc praecipue instituit, cum a mortuis excitatus insufflavit in discipulos suos, dicens: “Accipite Spiritum Sanctum; quorum remiseritis peccata, remittuntur eis, et quorum retinueritis, retenta sunt” [Io 20:22s].

Quo tam insigni facto et verbis tam perspicuis potestatem remittendi et retinendi peccata, ad reconciliandos fideles post baptismum lapsos, Apostolis et eorum legitimis successoribus fuisse communicatam, universorum Patrum consensus semper intellexit [can. 3], et Novatianos remittendi potestatem olim pertinaciter negantes, magna ratione Ecclesia catholica tamquam haereticos explosit atque condemnavit.

Quare verissimum hunc illorum verborum Domini sensum sancta haec Synodus probans et recipiens, damnat eorum commentitias interpretationes, qui verba illa ad potestatem praedicandi verbum Dei et Christi Evangelium annuntiandi contra huiusmodi sacramenti institutionem falso detorqueant.

Cap. 2. De differentia sacramenti paenitentiae et baptismi 1671 Ceterum hoc sacramentum multis rationibus a baptismo differre dignoscitur [can. 2]. Nam praeterquam quod materia et forma, quibus sacramenti essentia perficitur, longissime dissidet: constat certe, baptismi ministrum iudicem esse non oportere, cum Ecclesia in neminem iudicium exerceat, qui non prius in ipsam per baptismi ianuam fuerit ingressus. “Quid enim mihi”, inquit Apostolus, “de iis, qui foris sunt, iudicare?” [1 Cor 5:12].

Secus est de domesticis fidei [cf. Gal 6:10], quos Christus Dominus lavacro baptismi sui corporis membra [cf. 1 Cor 12:13] semel effecit. Nam hos, si se postea crimine aliquo contaminaverint, non iam repetito baptismo ablui, cum id in Ecclesia catholica nulla ratione liceat, sed ante hoc tribunal tamquam reos sisti voluit, ut per sacerdotum sententiam non semel, sed quoties ab admissis peccatis ad ipsum paenitentes confugerint, possent liberari.

1672 Alius praeterea est baptismi, et alius paenitentiae fructus. Per baptismum enim Christum induentes [cf. Gal 3:27] nova prorsus in illo efficimur creatura, plenam et integram peccatorum omnium remissionem consequentes; ad quam tamen novitatem et integritatem per sacramentum paenitentiae, sine magnis nostris fletibus et laboribus, divina id exigente iustitia,

Yet, before the coming of Christ, penance was not a sacrament; nor is it one after his coming for anyone who has not been baptized. But the Lord instituted the sacrament of penance, principally when after his Resurrection he breathed upon his disciples and said: “Receive the Holy Spirit. If you forgive the sins of any, they are forgiven; if you retain the sins of any, they are retained” [Jn 20:22f].

The universal consensus of the Fathers has always acknowledged that by so sublime an action and such clear words the power of forgiving and retaining sins was given to the apostles and their lawful successors for reconciling the faithful who have fallen after baptism [can. 3], and with good reason the Catholic Church denounced and condemned as heretics the Novatianists, who in the past stubbornly denied the power of forgiveness.

Therefore this holy council approves and accepts the words of the Lord in their full and true meaning and condemns the fictitious interpretations of those who, in contradiction with the institution of this sacrament, distort these words to make them refer to the power of preaching the word of God and of proclaiming the Gospel of Christ.

Chapter 2. The Difference between the Sacraments of Penance and Baptism

Besides, it is clear that this sacrament differs in many ways from baptism [can. 2]. Apart from the fact that it differs very widely in matter and form, which constitute the essence of a sacrament, it is beyond question that the minister of baptism need not be a judge since the Church does not exercise judgment on anyone who has not first entered her through the gate of baptism. “For what have I to do”, the apostle asks, “with judging outsiders?” [1 Cor 5:12].

It is otherwise with those who are of the household of the faith [cf. Gal 6:10], whom Christ the Lord has once made members of his body by the bath of baptism [cf. 1 Cor 12:13]. For, it was his will that, if afterward they should defile themselves by some crime, they would not be cleansed by receiving baptism again—this is not allowed under any condition in the Catholic Church—but that they would present themselves before this tribunal in order that they might be set free through the sentence of the priest; and this not once only, but as often as, repentant of the sins committed, they turn to that tribunal.

Moreover, the effect of baptism is different from that of penance. For by baptism we “put on Christ” [Gal 3:27] and are made an entirely new creature in him, receiving full and integral remission of all sins. To this newness and integrity, however, we are by no means able to arrive by the sacrament of penance without many tears and labors on our part, as divine justice demands. Hence pervenire nequaquam possumus, ut merito paenitentia “laboriosus quidam baptismus” a sanctis Patribus dictus fuerit.¹ Est autem hoc sacramentum paenitentiae lapsis post baptismum ad salutem necessarium, ut nondum regeneratis ipse baptismus [can. 6].

Cap. 3. De partibus et fructu huius paenitentiae

Docet praeterea sancta Synodus, sacramenti paenitentiae formam, in qua praecipue ipsius vis sita est, in illis ministri verbis positam esse: Ego te absolvo, etc.; quibus quidem de Ecclesiae sanctae more preces quaedam laudabiliter adiunguntur, ad ipsius tamen formae essentiam nequaquam spectant, neque ad ipsius sacramenti administrationem sunt necessariae.

Sunt autem quasi materia huius sacramenti ipsius paenitentis actus, nempe contritio, confessio et satisfactio [can. 4]. Qui quatenus in paenitente ad integritatem sacramenti, ad plenamque et perfectam peccatorum remissionem ex Dei institutione requiruntur, hac ratione paenitentiae partes dicuntur.

Sane vero res et effectus huius sacramenti, quantum ad eius vim et efficaciam pertinet, reconciliatio est cum Deo, quam interdum in viris piis et cum devotione hoc sacramentum percipientibus conscientiae pax ac serenitas cum vehementi spiritus consolatione consequi solet.

Haec de partibus et effectu huius sacramenti sancta Synodus tradens simul eorum sententias damnat, qui paenitentiae partes incussos conscientiae terrores et fidem esse contendunt [can. 4].

Cap. 4. De contritione

Contritio, quae primum locum inter dictos paenitentis actus habet, animi dolor ac detestatio est de peccato commisso, cum proposito non peccandi de cetero. Fuit autem quovis tempore ad impetrandam veniam peccatorum hic contritionis motus necessarius, et in homine post baptismum lapsus ita demum praeparat ad remissionem peccatorum, si cum fiducia divinae misericordiae et voto praestandi reliqua coniunctus sit, quae ad rite suscipiendum hoc sacramentum requiruntur.

Declarat igitur sancta Synodus, hanc contritionem non solum cessationem a peccato et vitae novae propositum et inchoationem, sed veteris etiam odium continere, iuxta illud: “Proicite a vobis omnes iniquitates vestras, penance has rightly been called by the holy Fathers “a laborious kind of baptism”.¹ This sacrament of penance is necessary for salvation for those who have fallen after baptism, just as baptism itself is for those who have not yet been regenerated [can. 6].

Chapter 3. The Parts of Penance and Its Effect

The holy council teaches, moreover, that the form of the sacrament of penance, in which its power principally resides, consists in these words of the minister: I absolve you, etc. In accordance with a custom of the holy Church, certain prayers are laudably added to these (words); they do not, however, in any way belong to the essence of the form, nor are they necessary for the administration of the sacrament. 1673

The “quasi-matter” of this sacrament is the acts of the penitent himself, viz., contrition, confession, and satisfaction [can. 4]. Inasmuch as these acts are by divine institution required in the penitent for the integrity of the sacrament and for the full and complete forgiveness of sins, they are called parts of penance.

As to the reality and the effect of this sacrament, so far as concerns its power and efficacy, it consists in reconciliation with God. In persons who are pious and receive this sacrament with devotion, it is likely to be followed at times by peace and serenity of conscience with an overwhelming consolation of spirit. 1674

In declaring this doctrine on the parts and the effect of this sacrament, the holy council at the same time condemns the view of those who maintain that the parts of penance consist in the terrors of a stricken conscience and in faith [can. 4]. 1675

Chapter 4. Contrition

Contrition holds the first place among the acts of the penitent mentioned above. It consists in the sorrow of the soul and the detestation of the sin committed, together with the resolve not to sin any more. This disposition of contrition was necessary at all times for the attainment of the remission of sins. In a person who has fallen after baptism, it prepares for the forgiveness of sins if it is joined with trust in the divine mercy and the intention to fulfill whatever else is required for the right reception of this sacrament. 1676

Therefore the holy council declares that this contrition implies not only cessation from sin and the resolve and beginning of a new life, but also the hatred of the old according to the word: “Cast away from you all the in quibus praevaricati estis, et facite vobis cor novum et spiritum novum” [Ez 18:31].

¹ *1672 Gregory Nazianzen, Oratio 39, 17 (PG 36:356A); John Damascene, De fide orthodoxa IV, 9 (PG 94:1124C / B. Kotter: PTS 12 (Schriften 2), 185), chap. 82_{90f}. (in the edition of E. M. Buytaert, S. John Damascene: De fide orthodoxa, Versions of Burgundio and Cerbanus [New York, 1955]).

Et certe, qui illos Sanctorum clamores consideraverit: “Tibi soli peccavi, et malum coram te feci” [Ps 50:6]; “Laboravi in gemitu meo; lavabo per singulas noctes lectum meum” [Ps 6:7]; “Recogitabo tibi omnes annos meos in amaritudine animae meae” [Is 38:15], et alios huius generis, facile intelliget, eos ex vehementi quodam anteactae vitae odio et ingenti peccatorum detestatione manasse.

1677 Docet praeterea, etsi contritionem hanc aliquando caritate perfectam esse contingat hominemque Deo reconciliare, priusquam hoc sacramentum actu suscipiatur, ipsam nihilominus reconciliationem ipsi contritioni sine sacramenti voto, quod in illa includitur, non esse adscribendam.

1678 Illam vero contritionem imperfectam [can. 5], quae attritio dicitur, quoniam vel ex turpitudinis peccati consideratione vel ex gehennae et poenarum metu communiter concipitur, si voluntatem peccandi excludat cum spe veniae, declarat non solum non facere hominem hypocritam et magis peccatorem [*cf. 1456], verum etiam donum Dei esse et Spiritus Sancti impulsum, non adhuc quidem inhabitantis, sed tantum moventis, quo paenitens adiutus viam sibi ad iustitiam parat. Et quamvis sine sacramento paenitentiae per se ad iustificationem perducere peccatorem nequeat, tamen eum ad Dei gratiam in sacramento paenitentiae impetrandam disponit. Hoc enim timore utiliter concussi Ninivitae ad Ionae praedicationem plenam terroribus paenitentiam egerunt et misericordiam a Domino impetrarunt [cf. Ion 3].

Quamobrem falso quidam calumniantur catholicos scriptores, quasi tradiderint, sacramentum paenitentiae absque bono motu suscipientium gratiam conferre, quod numquam Ecclesia Dei docuit nec sensit. Sed et falso docent contritionem esse extortam et coactam, non liberam et voluntariam [can. 5].

Cap. 5. De confessione

1679 Ex institutione sacramenti paenitentiae iam explicata universa Ecclesia semper intellexit, institutam etiam esse a Domino integram peccatorum confessionem [cf. Iac 5:16; 1 Io 1:9; Lc 5:14; 17:14], et omnibus post baptismum lapsis iure divino necessariam existere [can. 7], quia Dominus noster Iesus Christus, e terris ascensus ad caelos, sacerdotes sui ipsius vicarios reliquit [cf. Mt 16:19; 18:18; Io 20:23], tamquam praesides et iudices, ad quos omnia mortalia crimina deferantur, in quae Christi fideles ceciderint, quo pro potestate clavium remissionis aut retentionis peccatorum sententiam pronuntiant.

transgressions which you have committed against me, and get yourselves a new heart and a new spirit” [Ezek 18:31].

And certainly one who has pondered those exclamations of the saints, “Against you only have I sinned and done what is evil in your sight” [Ps 51:4]; “I am weary with my moaning; every night I flood my bed with tears” [Ps 6:6]; “in my bitterness of soul I recall all my years before you” [Is 38:15]; and others like them, will easily understand that they have sprung from an intense hatred of the past life and a very deep hatred of sins.

Moreover, the council teaches that, although it sometimes happens that this contrition is perfect through charity and reconciles man to God before this sacrament is actually received, this reconciliation, nevertheless, is not to be ascribed to contrition itself without the desire of the sacrament, a desire that is included in it.

As to imperfect contrition [can. 5], which is called attrition, since it commonly arises either from the consideration of the heinousness of sin or from the fear of hell and of punishment, the council declares: If it excludes the will to sin and implies the hope for pardon, it not only does not make one a hypocrite and a greater sinner [*cf. 1456] but is a gift of God and a prompting of the Holy Spirit, not indeed as already dwelling in the penitent, but only moving him—an impulse by which the penitent is helped to prepare for himself a way unto justice. Though without the sacrament of penance it cannot of itself lead the sinner to justification, it nevertheless disposes him to obtain the grace of God in the sacrament of penance. For, it is thanks to this salutary fear that the Ninevites, after the terrifying preaching of Jonah, did penance and obtained mercy from the Lord [cf. Jon 3].

Falsely, therefore, do some accuse Catholic writers as if they maintained that the sacrament of penance confers grace without any good disposition on the part of those receiving it; this is something that the Church of God never taught or accepted. Falsely also do they assert that contrition is extorted or forced, not free and voluntary [can. 5].

Chapter 5. Confession

From the institution of the sacrament of penance as already explained, the whole Church has always understood that the complete confession of sins was also instituted by the Lord [cf. Jas 5:16; 1 Jn 1:9; Lk 5:14; 17:14] and is by divine law necessary for all who have fallen after baptism [can. 7]. For, when he was about to ascend from earth to heaven, our Lord Jesus Christ left priests to represent him [cf. Mt 16:19; 18:18; Jn 20:23] as presiding judges to whom all mortal sins into which the faithful of Christ would have fallen should be brought that they, in virtue of the power of the keys, might Constat enim, sacerdotes iudicium hoc incognita causa exercere non potuisse, neque aequitatem quidem illos in poenis iniungendis servare potuisse, si in genere dumtaxat, et non potius in specie ac singillatim sua ipsi peccata declarassent.

Ex his colligitur, oportere a paenitentibus omnia peccata mortalia, quorum post diligentem sui discussionem conscientiam habent, in confessione recenseri, etiamsi occultissima illa sint et tantum adversus duo ultima decalogi praecepta commissa [cf. Ex 20:17; Dt 5:21; Mt 5:28], quae nonnumquam animum gravius sauciant, et periculosiora sunt iis, quae in manifesto admittuntur. Nam venialia, quibus a gratia Dei non excludimur et in quae frequentius labimur, quamquam recte et utiliter citraque omnem praesumptionem in confessione dicantur [can. 7], quod piorum hominum usus demonstrat: taceri tamen citra culpam multisque aliis remediis expiari possunt. Verum, cum universa mortalia peccata, etiam cogitationis, homines “irae filios” [Eph 2:3] et Dei inimicos reddant, necessum est omnium etiam veniam cum aperta et verecunda confessione a Deo quaerere.

Itaque dum omnia, quae memoriae occurrunt, peccata Christi fideles confiteri student, procul dubio omnia divinae misericordiae ignoscenda exponunt [can. 7]. Qui vero secus faciunt et scienter aliqua retinent, nihil divinae bonitati per sacerdotem remittendum proponunt. “Si enim erubescat aegrotus vulnus medico detegere, quod ignorat medicina non curat.”¹

Colligitur praeterea, etiam eas circumstantias in confessione explicandas esse, quae speciem peccati mutant [can. 7], quod sine illis peccata ipsa nec a paenitentibus integre exponantur, nec iudicibus innotescant, et fieri nequeat, ut de gravitate criminum recte censere possint et poenam, quam oportet, pro illis paenitentibus imponere. Unde alienum a ratione est docere, circumstantias has ab hominibus otiosis excogitatas fuisse, aut unam tantum circumstantiam confitendam esse, nempe peccasse in fratrem.¹

Sed et impium est, confessionem, quae hac ratione fieri praecipitur, impossibilem dicere [can. 8], aut carnificinam illam conscientiarum appellare;¹ constat enim, nihil aliud in Ecclesia a paenitentibus exigi, pronounce the sentence of remission or retention of sins. For it is clear that without knowledge of the case priests could not exercise this judgment, nor could they observe equity in the imposition of penances if (the penitents) declared their sins only in general and not specifically and in particular.

Thus it follows that all mortal sins of which penitents after a diligent self-examination are conscious must be recounted by them in confession, though they may be most secret and may have been committed only against the last two precepts of the Decalogue [cf. Ex 20:17; Deut 5:21; Mt 5:28]; for these sins sometimes wound the soul more grievously and are more dangerous than those that are committed openly. As regards venial sins by which we are not excluded from the grace of God and into which we fall more frequently, it is right and profitable and implies no presumption whatever to declare them in confession [can. 7], as can be seen from the practice of devout people; yet, they may be omitted without guilt and can be expiated by many other remedies. But since all mortal sins, even those of thought, make of men “children of wrath” [Eph 2:3] and enemies of God, there is need to seek God’s pardon equally for them all through an open and humble confession.

Hence when Christ’s faithful strive to confess all sins that occur to their memory, they undoubtedly place all of them before the divine mercy for pardon [can. 7]. But those who fail to do so and knowingly withhold some, place nothing before the divine goodness for remission, “for if the sick is ashamed to lay open his wound before the physician, the medicine does not heal what it does not know.”¹

It further follows that the circumstances that change the sin’s nature [can. 7] must also be explained in confession because, without them, the sins themselves are not being completely revealed by the penitents or made known to the judges, and it is impossible for the latter rightly to estimate the gravity of the faults and to impose on the penitents the penance appropriate to them. Hence it is completely unreasonable to teach that these circumstances have been thought out by idle minds or that only one circumstance need be confessed, namely, a sin against a brother.¹

And it is impious to say that confession according to these rules is impossible [can. 8]; or to call it a tormentor of consciences;¹ for it is clear that the Church requires nothing more of penitents than that, after each has *1680¹ Jerome of Stridon, Commentarii in Ecclesiasten [on chap. 10:11] (M. Adriaen: CpChL 72 [1959]: 338^{195f.} / PL 23 [1865]: 1152A).

*1681¹ Cf. M. Luther, De captivitate Babylonica Ecclesiae: De sacramento paenitentia (Weimar ed. 6:548¹⁰).

*1682¹ Cf. M. Luther, Sermon for Palm Sunday, 1524 (Weimar ed. 15:484¹⁰–485²). P. Melancthon, Apologia Confessionis Augustanae (1531), art. 11, no. 7 (BekSchELK 25^{118, 51f.} / CpRef 27:536); Melancthon, Loci communes theologici, aetas II^a (CpRef 21:493); J. Calvin, Institutio Christianae religionis (1536), chap. 5 (CpRef 29:158).

quam ut, postquam quisque diligentius se excusserit et conscientiae suae sinus omnes et latebras exploraverit, ea peccata confiteatur, quibus se Dominum et Deum suum mortaliter offendisse meminerit; reliqua autem peccata, quae diligenter cogitanti non occurrunt, in universum eadem confessione inclusa esse intelliguntur; pro quibus fideliter cum Propheta dicimus: “Ab occultis meis munda me, Domine” [Ps 18:13]. Ipsa vero huiusmodi confessionis difficultas ac peccata detegendi verecundia gravis quidem videri posset, nisi tot tantisque commodis et consolationibus levaretur, quae omnibus digne ad hoc sacramentum accedentibus per absolutionem certissime conferuntur.

1683 Ceterum, quoad modum confitendi secreto apud solum sacerdotem, etsi Christus non vetuerit, quin aliquis in vindictam suorum scelerum et sui humiliationem, cum ob aliorum exemplum tum ob Ecclesiae offensae aedificationem, delicta sua publice confiteri possit: non est tamen hoc divino praecepto mandatum, nec satis consulte humana aliqua lege praeciperetur, ut delicta, praesertim secreta, publica essent confessione aperienda [can. 6].

