

THE
Ecclesiastical Review

A MONTHLY PUBLICATION FOR THE CLERGY
Cum Approbatione Superiorum

Vol. CIII

JULY—DECEMBER, 1940

■ Ui Ecclesia aedificationem accipiat."

I Cor. 14: 5.

y H U . A D E L P K I A

Hmerican Ecclesiastical "Review

"J40

The Canon Law on Sermon Preaching. A University, Rome. By the Faculty of Canon Law of the Pontifical Gregoriana, 1940. Pp. vii + 150. Price, $1.00.

Men at Work at Worship. America Joins the Liturgical Moment. By Reverend Gerald Ellard, S.J., Ph.D. Preface by the Most Reverend Murray, D.D., Archbishop of Saint Paul. Longmans, Green & Company, New York City. 1940. Pp. xvi + 307. Price, $2-50.

Le Lieutenant Psichau. Par Aime Lauziere. Maison de la Bonne Presse, Pam, France. 1940. Pp. 95. Prix, 3 francs.

Sociology. By Walter L. Willigan and John J. O'Connor. Longmans, Green & Company, New York City. 1940. Pp. xi + 357. Price, $2.00.

Dictionary of the American Hierarchy. By the Reverend Joseph B. Coos. Introduction by the Most Reverend Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, D.D., Apostolic Delegate to the United States. Longmans, Green & Company, New York City. 1940. Pp. xxi + 425. Price, $3.75.

St. Bonaventure Seminary Year Book, 1940. Volume 24. St. Bonaventure, N. Y. 1940. Pp. 112.

Maritain. Translated by Bernard Wall. Pp. xi + 241. Price, $5.00.

An Historical Synopsis and Commentary. By John J. Reilly, LCD. The Catholic University of America. Pp. xiv + 150. Price, $2.00.

The Woman's Presence. By Alelaide Tague Case. The Woman's Presence. Pp. xiv + 150. Price, $2.00.

THE Ecclesiastical Review

Volume 10.—August, 1940.—No. 2.

THE PREACHING OF CHRIST.

WAS Jesus Christ an orator? It was not necessary for Him to be one. He came to die for man and secondly to teach him. He could have done both these things without oratory. But all available evidence indicates that He was a great orator.

In fact, if there is anywhere loveliness in this world, it is found in the character of Jesus Christ; and if any power in words, it is His Gospel. The priest must turn first to Him for instruction in preaching. It requires no apostolic love, nor devotion of a disciple to appreciate His mastery of thought and diction. A none too willing world acclaims them. Why? Because He said great things well; said them clearly, briefly, convincingly; said them powerfully and often beautifully. Not that He made oratory His goal, or surrendered to mere showy ornaments or to meretricious ornaments of rhetoric. His eloquence was homely yet majestic, cogent yet reserved, simple as well as sublime. That the pitifully incomplete record of His sayings rings with power and charm alone proves that.

From the beginning of His public life, when in the synagogue at Nazareth, He said, "Today is fulfilled the Scripture in your ears," to His last dying word on the Cross, we find He never uttered a trivial word, expressed no dull platitude. We may justly infer, too, that Jesus possessed a charm of voice and grace consonant with the perfect Man He was. and with the dignity, simplicity and courtesy inherent in the Divine Personality. "No man spoke like this man." To have heard Him speak has been the dream of every Christian preacher since the Apostles.

But what more definitely are the qualities and traits of our Lord's preaching?

We must remember, as I have said, that the record is pitifully incomplete. Many divine lessons lingered in the Evangelism minds only in larger outline, their details blurred by time and the rigors of apostolic life. In telling the story, they overlooked a hundred details we would have rejoiced to know:— the tone of voice, the telling glance or gesture, that illumined an obscure thought. The greater part of what He said was never written, and what was recorded suffered, as all oratory does, by being consigned to cold print, and by translation into foreign tongues.

The first prominent trait we observe is that when teaching He employed the simplest terms, spoke of ordinary occupations and events of daily life, and gathered analogies and comparisons from the world of nature and common experience. He talked to fishermen of their nets, to husbandmen of their fields and the fruits thereof, to townsmen of their houses and [^]re@ts. His allusions were always well known to His listeners, dealing with things they saw, handled or dealt with frequently, as the weather, wine-skins, taxes and salt. His language was figurative but clear, colored, but precise; homely, in the original sense of the word, but beautiful. He drew simple pictures using the objects:

R'Wl :	House»	Men
Tree»
i er,
In:r	Garment»	Clouds
	'-a.iJies	Rain
		Lightning

£v<ry stX ~*i'C 'W TM  wrought, and ij.jted. *' Lher- 'i' n:Ti nu.: .

With a command.of the <La .

! ' I ?' ; ' I I ; ..■' " *...><. -nd aii n -

a. ' * „r I jn, .Av, .

ne» ,,J

f3 h" ' l Mi ; ;

l ..* »u Jea.n

King and kingdom	Light and darkness
Fishermen and the sea	Health and sickness
Masters and servants	Hunger and thirst
Army and soldiers	Harvest and reapers.

For example, see how clearly and yet artfully He worked out the figure of the vine in John 25: 1-8:

I am the true vine; and my Father is the husbandman. Every branch in me that beareth fruit, he will purge it that it may bear more fruit. Now you are clean by reason of the word I have spoken to you. Abide in me, and I in you. As the branch cannot bear fruit of itself, unless it abide in the vine, so neither can you unless you abide in me. I am the vine: You the branches; he that abideth in me and I in him, the same beareth much fruit; for without me you can do nothing. If anyone abide not in me, he shall be cast forth as a branch, and shall wither, and they shall gather him up, and cast him into the fire, and he burneth. If you abide in me, and my words abide in you, you shall ask whatever you will, and it shall be done unto you. In this is my Father glorified; that you bring forth very' much fruit, and become my disciples.

A remarkable feature of His preaching was His constant use of figures of speech. Not that it was strange for Him to use the metaphor and the parable among imaginative, figure-loving orientals. St. Jerome, who lived amongst them said: "It is t'namon among Syrians, and especially Palestinians, to add parables to their every lesson; so that what cannot be comprehended by the listeners through simple instruction, may be gnsped through comparison and examples." 1

Christ was speaking to the world. It might therefore surprise us to find many of His most solemn commands and revelations expressed in figures. Probably the depths and magnificence of mystical truths can only be adequately reached by figurative language. Explaining the necessity of Baptism, for example. He said: "Unless a man be born again of water and the Holy Ghost he cannot enter into the kingdom of Heaven." Announcing His impending Passion: "Amen, amen, I say to you, unless the grain of wheat falling in the ground die, it t^maiaeth alone. But if it die it bringeth forth much fruit." -John 12: 24, 25.

O -*3

* Ciwimm. Matt. XVHI, IA. J.

THE ECCLESIASTICAL REVIEW.

The momentous choice of Peter as chief of the Apostles was made known in these words: "Thou art Peter and upon this rock I will build my Church, and the gates of Hell shall not prevail against it."—"Feed my lambs; feed my sheep." This is all imagery of the brightest sort, yet clear and profoundly expressive.

A favorite type of sermon was the parable. The parable is a story and a comparison, a similitude, which stimulates the mind to search for a hidden meaning or application. It is a lesson whose truth is embodied in a tale. The Good Shepherd, The Prodigal Son, The Sower and the Seed are the titles from the world's greatest set of sermons, our Lord's parables.

The parables of the Gospel number about seventy. Our Lord propounded them not according to any system that we can see, except that they are a description of the Kingdom of Heaven, its members and their obligations. Here is a list of them:

The Sower
The Seed
The Tares or Cockle
The Mustard Seed
The Leaven
The Hidden Treasure
The Pearl of Great Price
The Fishing-net
The Harvest and Laborers
The Bridegroom and Wedding Guests
The Old Garment and Wine-bottles
The Old and New Wine
'Wayward Children
Keel Defilement
Uprooted Plants, Blind Leaders
The Children and the Dogs
J* ^ S ^ .O < Christ, Kingdom of Satan
1 ne Laborers m the Vineyard

The Wicked Husbandman
The Marriage of the King's Son
The Great Supper
Signs of the End
The Body and the Eagles

The Barren Fig Tree
The Good Tree and the Bad
The Pharisee and the Tubber
The Last Puce at the Crucifixion
Poor Guests
The Rich Fool
The Vigilant Servants
The Thief in the Night
The Faithful Steward
The Ten Virgins
The Closed Doors
Unprofitable Servants
The Good Samaritan
The Five Talents
The Pounds
The Unjust Steward
The Rich Man and Lazarus
Serving Two Masters
The Unmerciful Servant
The Mote and the Beam
Pearls Before Swine
The Son Who Asked for Bread
The Friend Coming at Night
The Unjust Judge
The Two Debtors
The Salt of the Earth
The Lamp on its Stand
The City on the Mountain
The Builder
The King at War
The Disciples, Servants. Household
The Prudent Householdier
The House Built on a Rock, on Sand
The Light of the World
The Grain of Wheat
The Vine
The King's Son and the Tribute
The Physician
The Good Shepherd
The Lost Sheep
The Lost Coin
The Prodigal Son

It is an interesting list and reveals how extensively our Lord used the story in His teachings. We are aware, of course, that He used this form of lesson, not only to teach His disciples, but sometimes also to teach only His disciples. Their veiled meaning, which He disclosed later to His friends, confused His enemies, allowing Him time to organize His Church, and pursue His course of instruction without violent interruption until the end.

Three parables, taken almost at random, reveal His style of preaching. First, the Good Shepherd. It is the Baptist, the most austere of the Prophets, who describes Jesus and His mission in the loveliest imagery. John calls Him the Lamb of God, and the Bridegroom of the race, two figures capable of most consoling development. Jesus Himself gives us a third, the Good Shepherd.

Of all the parables, probably the most universally appealing are the Good Shepherd and the Lost Sheep. The reasons for this are not hard to find. Any reference to sheep is likely to be understood in nearly every part of the world. Sheep are raised in nine-tenths of its countries. There is no State, for example, in these United States, which has not its grazing because the hour itself is engaging. The world, from the day Christ uttered it, seized upon it as its favorite characterization of our Saviour. There were one hundred and fourteen pictures of the Good Shepherd in the catacombs. Ancient Christian art represented Christ, the Good Shepherd, in one hundred and fifty various ways. There is no telling how many modern concepts have been added to these. Wherever Christianity has penetrated, the allusion is classic.

The Jewish inhabitants of Palestine to whom Christ preached the parables understood Him perfectly. Sheep-raising, together with cultivation of vineyards and olive groves and fishing, formed their chief occupation. It was so even in the time of the Patriarchs. The herdsmen of Abraham and Lot quarreled

■ their great flocks, which this same land was not able to

■ Joseph's Brethren told Pharaoh, "We thy servants are shepherds;" and David tended sheep in the very field where a thousand years later shepherds were keeping the night

■ -er their flocks, on the first Christmas night.

The image was venerable with age and hallowed by use long before Christ identified Himself as the Good Shepherd. The Prophets Lzechiel and Micheas used the figure, and David in the Psalms. In fact God had already announced the coming of the Messiah under the beautiful image of the Shepherd.

furthermore, the figure was much more expressive to these Syrian followers of Judaism than it might be to us. Their lives were simpler, and their few possessions, as sheep, of greater concern. Usually the farthest horizon of their lives were the neighboring hills, the desert of the adjacent sea; and their interests centered around their homes, their sheep, the olive groves and vineyards, fields of wheat, and their synagogue. Their idea of magnificence was the Temple in Jerusalem, and their dream of luxury was a piece of cloth twice-dyed in Tyrian purple. They had few worldly contacts other than these, no complex civilization, and assuredly no scientific diversions which amuse our day. In the simplicity of their existence, sheep were sometimes their companions, with whom association was almost unbelievably close. It was a Palestinian shepherd whom the Prophet Nathan described in his parable preached to King David;

but the poor man had nothing at all but one little ewe lamb, which he had bought and nourished up, and which had grown up in his house together with his children, eating of his bread and drinking of his cup, and sleeping in his bosom, and it was unto him as a daughter.—II Kings 12: 3.

With these facts in mind we can comprehend the eloquence of these two parables.

THE GOOD SHEPHERD

Armen. amen I say to you: He that entereth not by the door into the sheepfold, but climbeth up another way, the same is a thief and a robber. But he that entereth by the door is the shepherd of the sheep. To him the porter openeth and the sheep hear his voice: and he calleth his own sheep by name, and he leadeth them out. And when he hath let out his own sheep, he goeth before them; and the sheep follow him because they know his voice. But a stranger they follow not, but fly from him, because they know not the voice of the stranger.

This proverb Jesus spoke to them. But they understood not what he spoke to them. Jesus therefore said to them again:

Amen, amen I say to you: I am the door of the sheep. Al- others as many as have come are thieves and robbers: and t-t sheep heard them not. I am the door. By me if any man shni enter in, he shall be saved: and he shall go in, and go out. ana

The hireling seeth not but for to steal, and to kill, and to destroy. I am come that they may have life and have it more abundantly. I am the good shepherd. The good shepherd giveth his life for his sheep. But the hireling, and he that is not the shepherd, who* own the sheep are not, seeth the wolf coming, and lea'eth the sheep, and fiieth because he is a hireling: and he hath no are for the sheep. I am the good shepherd: and I know mine and mine know roe. As the Father knoweth roe and I know the Father: and I lay down my life for my sheep. And other sheep I have, that are not of this fold: them also must I bring, and they shall hear my voice and there shall be one fold and one shepherd.—John 10: 1-16.

The Lost Sheep

And He spoke to them this parable, saying:
|jsT^5|<' y°u that bath an hundred sheep: and if he shall and I he not leave the ninety-nine in the desert, he ^'«h was lost, until he find it? And when.
in» horn» rtn /*» BP°n kis shoulders rejoicing: and corc-
* Rciofce sri-F °Se<'Sr k'f and neighbors, saying to them:
I Say to w.>/ because I have found my sheep that was lost/
I -i.... 10 there shall be py in heaven iffoa one
' f*a°nce, more than upon ninety-nine that need

l. - -Λ. P«WiC«». 0" ≠ S i
It is a N» «"
accentuates the iatesse feeling -TM«1η* .»
mis its «athing'tebuke' to compile*®l gown», ®°f its magnihee-t •'Wfhr.i.'. H pr>de :s l'-* v.Ī.Λ
- = - ikd tn -hat -he exaltation of the humble n ., <■ :: talc. Hero ->cfx: d.ranu, 'kir.
;..... -V :; .: " ;) r.f '... M--.Λ.- ■ -

THE PHARISEE AND THE PUBLICAN

And to some who trusted in themselves as just, and despised others, he spoke also this parable:

Two men went up into the temple to pray: the one a Pharisee, the other a Publican. The Pharisee standing, prayed thus within himself: "O God, I give thee thanks that I am not as the rest of men, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, as also is this Publican. Hast twice in a week: I give tithes of all that I possess."

And the Publican, standing afar off, would not so much as lift up his eyes towards heaven: but struck his breast, saying: "O God, be merciful to me a sinner."

I say to you, this man went down into his house justified rather than the other, because everyone that exalteth himself shall be humbled: and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.— —Luke 18: 9-14.

The parable of the Rich Man and Lazarus, devoid of figures, is likewise straight narrative, unadorned. As Christ draws the picture, we sense the drama aroused by associated ideas. Dives feasted every day. (The average Syrian of that day rarely feasted, and occasionally did not dine at all.) He was clothed in purple and fine linen. The Tyrian purple is a deep crimson dye, a gorgeous color, expensive as it was famous. A pound of wool dyed in it was worth, in those days, the equivalent of two hundred dollars. Lazarus, in contrast, is in rags; an object of contempt even to the dogs, who lick his sores.

DIVES AND LAZARUS

There was a certain rich man, who was clothed in purple and fine linen: and feasted sumptuously every day. And there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, who lay at his gate full of sores, desiring to be filled with the crumbs that fell from the rich man's table, and no man gave to him; moreover the dogs came and licked his sores. And it came to pass that the beggar died, and was carried by angels into Abraham's bosom. And the rich man also died: and he was buried in hell.

And in hell, lifting up his eyes when he was in torments, he saw Abraham afar off and Lazarus in his bosom: and he cried, and said: "Father Abraham, have mercy on me, and send Lazarus, that he may dip the tip of his finger in water, and cool my tongue: for I am tormented in this flame."

And Abraham said to him: "Son, remember that thou didst receive good things in thy lifetime, and likewise Lazarus evil things, but now he is comforted, and thou art tormented. And besides all this, between us and you, there is fixed a great chaos: so that they who would pass from hence to you cannot, nor from thence, come hither."

And he said: "Then, Father, I beseech thee, that thou wouldst send him to my father's house, for I have five brethren, that he may testify unto them, lest they also come into this place of torments."

And Abraham said to him: "They have Moses and the Prophets; let them listen to them." But he said: "No, Father Abritant, but if one will go to them from the dead, they will do penance." And he said to him: "If they listen not to Moses and the Prophets, neither will they believe if one rise again from the dead."—Luke 16: 19-51.

Thus our Lord taught, varying His illustrations. An observation of His style reveals that His method of teaching was not the philosophical process of ordered reasoning; much less was it the critical dissection of the Law, practised by the rabbis of His day, the swallowing a camel and straining out a gnat: nor was it oratorical. Christ's style of preaching, in general, was homiletic, that is, simple, informal, expository. He repeated the lessons again and again, under different guises, changing the figures. The Kingdom of God becomes the Mtaven in the loaf", the "pear! of great price", which the merchant sold all to possess. The Apostles were the " salt of the earth", the " light of the world" the Church, " a city stoT of the Sower and îhe Seed soul of mar yFC of ,^,vire g«ce for recognition in the ot fn-in· The narahlM nf W*:,« ■gsrener!grees of thorns or figs of thistles?.. By.. their fruits you Fail un-).* then'./ <i: ... ;l Γ. ap;ly as His words

· " ' ') !F is there among you, of whom, it his " ..» ' - A l . « ,vμ. j, , ,ia;n , -..I . v>- sha'j -lf tf.b .l

b ' tL " f .“ oi -o-!

aphorism. These epigrams were always trenchant and often spiced with paradox; for example:

For whosoever shall do the will of my Father that is in heaven, he is my brother and my sister and my mother.—Matt. 12.

Lay up to yourselves treasure in heaven: where neither the moth nor the rust consumes, and where thieves do not break through and steal. For where thy treasure is, there is thy heart also.—Matt. 6: 20, 21.

He that findeth his life shall lose it; he that shall lose his life for me shall find it.—Matt. 10: 39.

So shall the last be first, and the first last.—Matt. 20: 16.

He had the ability to state a whole case in a few words: ■ What doth it profit a man if he gain the whole world, and suffer the loss of his soul? ”

He spoke with confidence and “with authority,” His hearers noted. Sometimes His language was strangely arresting, provoking wonder and curiosity; for example, His conversation with Nicodemus:

■ I

Amen, amen I say to thee, unless a man be born again, he cannot see the kingdom of God.

How can a man be born again when he is old? . . .

Amen, amen I say to thee, unless a man be born again of water and the Holy Ghost, he cannot enter into the kingdom of God.—John 3:3-5.

Without courage and shrewdness the world would hardly <<put Him, no matter how good He proved to be. Our "cur's teaching was usually an exposition of doctrine, but when disputes were forced upon Him, as occasionally happened, "e results, from the standpoint of dialectics, "were interesting. St. Luke's Gospel we read:

And it came to pass that on one of these days, as He was teaching the people in the temple, and preaching the gospel, the thief priests and scribes, with the ancients met together, and spoke io Itm saying: "Tell us by what authority thou dost these things?" Or,  Who is He that hath given thee this authority? " And Jesus answering, said to them: " I also will ask you one thing. Answer me: The baptism of John, was it from heaven, or of fan?" But they thought within themselves, saying: " If we shall say, From heaven; he will say: Why then did you not believe him? But if we say, Of men, the whole people will stone us: for they are persuaded that John was a prophet," And they answered that they knew not whence it was.

And Jesus said to them: "Neither do I tell you by what authority I do these things,"—Luke 20: 1-8.

Shortly after this these same Jewish leaders sent spies that they might trap Him in His words:

And they asked him, saying: "Master, we know that thou speakest and teachest rightly: and that thou dost not respect any person, but teachest the way of God in truth. Is it lawful to give tribute to Caesar or no?" But he considering their guile, said to them: "Why tempt you me? Show me a penny. Whose image and inscription hath it?" They answering, said to him, Caesar's. And he said to them: "Render therefore to Caesar ^Scall not resigned to their failure in debate with Him, some or the Sadducee came to Him with an astute question, about a woman who f-3j >esen husbands, one after the other:

wife shall she be? And Jesus said to ria 'l k , " " ct y*)» world marry, and are given in mar-rn'.  accounted worthy of that word.
!. take w v i: v? frOni th@ de3<i' sLu'i neith«r be married,
v .,! die any more: for they are
-hrAc 20; 55.5g.

▯ yield the field, they began to withdraw,

----- Y

',tk ,SJdy r° dr3~ << argument. He said to them:

Ho- M, v

„,IH

:k, j ...

.■"■ ! ti

another shall come in his own name, him you will receive and again in John 8, where He concludes a sublime vindication of His Divinity with, " Which of you shall convince me of

For simple minds He had simple words and figures. For example, see how patiently, and skilfully He drew out the Samaritan woman at Jacob's well, confounding, yet saving her. For the Doctors of the Law He wrapt the grand theology of His Divinity in apt and illuminating phrases. For the poor unlettered throng He revealed the truth in homely phrases. The Pharisees' conceit He punctured with subtle argument. The humbled sinners He consoled in gentle parables.

His sharp logic, and prompt rising to the challenge of debate delighted His humble followers, while His gentle reasonableness reassured them. His words, at times, disarmed even His bitterest enemies. " Why have you not brought Him? ", the Pharisees asked them who were sent to take Him prisoner. They could only reply, " Never man spake like this man."

There was no weakness in Christ's oratorical armor. He was kind to the kind, innocent to the innocent, and perverse to the perverse. He was consoling or majestic as occasion demanded; calm and subdued, or caustic and indignant as necessity prescribed.

No traveler leaving home was ever more consoling than Jesus in His last discourse to His Apostles:

Let not your heart be troubled. You believe in God, believe in me. In my Father's house there are many mansions. If not I would have told you: because I go to prepare a place for you, I will come again and will take you to myself: that where I am you also may be.

When you ask me anything in my name that I will do. If you love me, keep my commandments. And I will ask the Father, he will give you another Paraclete, that he may abide with you forever. The Spirit of Truth, whom the world cannot receive because it seeth him not, nor knoweth him: but you shall know him because he shall abide with you, and shall be in you.

"I will not leave you orphans, I will come to you. Yet a little while the world seeth me no more. But you see me: because I live. In that day you shall know, I am in the Father, and you in me, and I in you.

tar

! :

If any one love me he will keep my word, and my Father wdl love him, and we will come to him, and make our abode with him. . . . Peace I leave with you, my peace I give unto you: not as the world giveth, do I give unto you. Let not your heart be troubled, nor let it be afraid.—John 14.

The tender and affectionate discourse continues through John 15 and 16.

Nor is there in all literature a passage more transcendently majestic than Jesus' description, in prophetic language, of the tragic end of the world, and the ensuing pageantry of Judgment Day. No Christian reads it without trembling.

When therefore you shall see the abomination of desolation, which was spoken of by Daniel the prophet, standing in the holy place: he that readeth let him understand. Then they that art in Judea, let them flee to the mountains: and he that is on the housetop, kt him not come down to take anything out of his house: and he that is in the field, let him not go back to take his coat. And woe to them chat are with child and that give suck in those days. But pray that your flight be not in the winter or on the sabbath. For there shall be great tribulation, such as hath days had been shortened, no fk«h sake of the elect, those days shall do not believe him. For there shall arise false Christs and prophets, and shall show great signs and wonders, insomuch as to deceive (if possible) even the elect. Behold I have told it to you, beforehand. If therefore they shall say to you: Behold he is in the desert, go you not out: Behold he is in the closets, believe it not. For as lightning cometh out of the east, and appeireth also the i.CGwdngi:ûf: the Son of man be. Wheresoever the body shall be, there shall the eagles also be Bttaadieghiiay; »:s aaa*— s“.....

tier

r . . . « 18 . . . 'nw K and of heaven

And he shall send his angels with a trumpet, and a great voice: and they shall gather together his elect from the four winds, and from the farthest parts of the heavens, to the utmost bounds of them. And from a fig tree learn a parable: when the branch thereof is now tender, and the leaves come forth, you know that summer is nigh, even at the doors. Amen, I say to you, that this generation shall not pass, till all these things be done. Heaven and earth shall pass but my word shall not pass.—Matt. 24: 11-3T.

Christ's indignation, though rare, could be devastating, as when He began to upbraid the cities wherein were done the most of his miracles, for that they had not done penance. " Woe to thee, Corozain, woe to thee, Bethsaida: for if in Tyre and Sidon had been wrought the miracles that have been wrought in you, they had long ago done penance in sackcloth and ashes. But I say to you, it shall be more tolerable for Tyre and Sidon in the day of judgment, than for you. And thou Capharnaum, shalt thou be exalted up to heaven? Thou shalt go down, even unto hell. For if in Sodom had been wrought the miracles that have been wrought in thee, perhaps it had remained to this day.—Matt. 11: 20-23.

Or, when He beheld seated in the chair of Moses fawning apocrites, devouring the houses of widows, the while praying long prayers:

Vce to you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, because you make clean the outside of the cup and of the dish, but within you are full of rapine and uncleanness. Thou blind Pharisee, first make clean the inside of the cup and of the dish, that the outside may become clean.

Toe to you scribes and Pharisees, hypocrites, because you are like whited sepulchres, which outwardly appear to men beautiful, but within are full of dead men's bones, and of all filthiness. So outwardly appear to men just; but inwardly you are full of hypocrisy and iniquity.

Fdl ye up the measure of your fathers. Ye serpents, *gener-
Wn* of vipers, how will you flee from the judgment of hell?—

r- being forced to cauterize an infected wound:

But he that shall scandalize one of these little ones that believe in me, it were better for him that a millstone should be hanged about his neck, and that he should be drowned in the depths of the sea.

Woe to the world because of scandals. For it must needs be that scandals come; but nevertheless woe to that man by whoa the scandal cometh.

And if thy hand or thy foot scandalize thee, cut it off anil cast it from thee. It is better for thee to go into life maimed or lame, than having two hands or two feet, to be cast into everlasting fire.

And if thy eye scandalize thee, pluck it out and cast it from thee. It is better for thee, having one eye to enter into life, this having two eyes to be cast into hell fire.—Matt. 17.

H:
Hi

K3, at the table of die rich Pharisee, at the bedside of the sick poor on the Temple porch, sometimes in the synagogues, t-ough their rulers were usually His enemies. He would gather

Or a snip ana spea.il use txuww rung t;e ,fore .tjo-jt gfeaf nec of Judgment Day: or hah and Pf/™*101” for 3 funeral service, to speak of eternal lite, dead to life, co illustrate His text.

Christ*” “““«^pnraneoas. if we can apply that term w

rhe surr.n.r j .,3 'e:7:n.S 'f this opportunity of the moment.

Hsrruct ,P'l. iS'J 'niPir;i-on scene) to reach and

In opportune and convincing,

-cu >»>χΓη3{ - - .

■'■...tions nf rhc ?

'v r>.açu3 r:

d of unearthly beauty, all in the lives.

Asi<!; f,, ,n.

of enc.'uragement (Luke 10), and an

Christ apparently gave the Ji.arv < r bom.'eric tra.rJng. except, m must r.,r,rt.;n.ty or [gening < Him, a «unerb

' rhe the ion^z single

f

' H.;

?he Senn

.r .. *
Mat

'to.. I "

“ ?” K '-Wr....-

i . in .nc.'med to 4“AV U*« -?rc'V M>β ω a ^.-nir.arv of ik.-u' af -x-h^h differed ηχη? .

j1.
a..

mentally from this one; and that this was chosen as a more complete expression of the moral code of the Gospel. Its Circk transitions of thought, the undeveloped parables, the closely strewn maxims, make it appear a résumé rather than a complete report of Christ's teaching that day.

Nevertheless, it is the most comprehensive sermon we have, and is a kind of orchestral prelude to the Gospel as a whole, containing a hint of its entire message. Incomplete though be, it is the world's greatest sermon. We may well imagine the breathless interest with which the Israelites listened to those subversive words beginning:

Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are the meek: for they shall possess the land. Blessed are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted. Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after justice: for they shall have their fill. Blessed are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy. Blessed are the clean of heart: for they shall see God. Blessed are they that suffer persecution for justice sake: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven. Blessed are ye when they shall revile you, & persecute you, and speak all that is evil against you, untruly, for my sake. Be glad and rejoice for your reward is very great in heaven.—Matt. 5: 3-12.

Here is a tone, a spiritual quality, far above any worldly wisdom: "Ye are the salt of the earth. But if the salt lose its savor, wherewith shall it be salted?"—"Lay not up to yourselves treasure on earth: where the rust and the moth con-

WT
 ., dy nor -sryle, nor by the use of contemporary subjects,
 Confine His teaching to any one age. Marvelously Q-r paSe^ doctrine so that no word or expression in His u °Ar^as to one generation. He is not only of Galilee, w°rfd; not only of time, but of eternity. " Con—e Lhe$ of the field, how they grow: they labor not,
 5° spin. But I say unto you that not even Solomon l-\ j? glory was arrayed as one of these. And of the grass vt ' l · · God doth so clothe: how much more you, O
 ,:t - :--:h. Love your enemies: do good to them that
 ".« --U. .^nc| on

And when He had ended, a great multitude followed Him down from the mountain, and "many were in admiration of His doctrine". "How came this man by all these things," they said, "and what wisdom is this that is given to Him." They saw in Him a Leader conscious of His supreme command, delivering His message with gracious ease and power, putting in His words some of the majesty of their mountains and the depths of their starry heavens. For ail the world, He had succeeded in expressing in the crude medium of our language, some of the qualities of infinite Love and Loveliness. After ail He is the Word of God.

But with all the transcendent beauty of the Sermon on the Mount, we are aware that only a hint or suggestum of Christ's teaching can be conveyed by printed quotations. There are few words which have so freely sounded. However, there is much to be learned from the student of preaching in what we may call the common

There are: His excellent simplicity and brevity, His touch, the use of ordinary terms, the packed phraseology, the maxim. There is the use of colorful imagery of story incomparable, together with a considerable amount of metaphor. He chose the expeditious moment to reveal a truth, to bring a charge. He built up a setting, or at least chose one for announcements. He aroused interest, wonder, fear, surprise and charmed people. He had the habit of exhibiting an idea under various guises, holding it up, turning it over for all to see. Above all we see in His preaching the gentle and patient repetition of spiritual lessons day after day.

And in that last respect, it is important to realize that Christ's power over men did not consist merely in the excellence or rhetorical quality of His voice. It consisted in that few words of light. Sheer eloquence alone could never save the world. Without the spirit of Christ the greyest and

MEDITATION. SOUL ACTION.

I.

THE ROOT of Catholic Action in the community is immanent supernatural action in the individual soul. It is preeminently Christ-life vivifying each separate member of His Mystical Body, and all the members collectively, united as they are to one another and to their Head with the corporate unity of a single organism. Those who have been thinking according to the mind of the Church on this subject are in agreement that we have approached or deviated from the ideal of Catholic Action in proportion as we have approached or deviated from this supernatural concept of God acting in the soul. Moreover it is generally conceded that to foster this permanent supernatural action in the soul, mental prayer has an important and unique place. God's gift of grace to us is mysterious, yet always incomprehensible and mysterious.

Mental prayer, while it can never exhaust the knowledge of supernatural life in God, can and should seek after the love of God in the inexhaustible treasure house of His Divine Life.

It is farces that seem reliable the accusation that many diocesan priests do not meditate; for if they are not engaging in some form of mental prayer, then they are not in condition to lead their people into the fertile and promising land of supernatural Catholic Action. Of course there is no other Catholic Action.

I have no intention of commenting on the present state of mental prayer among priests. I hope that I would be the last to consider myself presumptuous and rash to do so. It is the purpose of this article to present certain phases of mental prayer in an attractive and helpful light. It is the hope that there may be some who will find in these few suggestions encouragement to continue their habit of mental prayer or to find renewed interest, if perchance mental prayer in their diocesan program has fallen into desuetude.

Difficulties; frequently experienced by young priests in connection with meditation at the time of their first assignment in the world. These difficulties are quite common to their fellow diocesan priests and quite different from conditions

Γ.